"The usual way people set about stopping worry is a wrong one," writes Mary Bowman Page in The Ladies' Home Journal. "That is why it is so unsuccessful. If a doctor tells a patient he could cure him of worrying he would likely to say impatiently: 'Oh, doctor don't I wish that I could! But I can't. If I could have stopped worrying years ago, I would not be ill now!' All of which is probably perfectly true. And the doctor does not always know how to help him, because both doctor and patient have in mind that it is possible to repress worry through an effort of the will. This is a mistake. It is not possible even to repress worry. You have got to replace it with something else.

"Let me illustrate this by a figure. Suppose you want to go into a completely dark room, wishing it to be light. How would you set about the matter? Would you try to scoop the darkness up in buckets and carry it out at the door? Not at all. You would just open the windows and doors wide and let in the blessed sunlight. You would replace the darkness with light. So it is with worry. The only possible way to get rid of it is to replace the worrying attitude and title can always be done when the person is sincere and has the desire to bring it about. All he has to do is to be passive and let nature have her own perfect way with him."

Britons Unable to Speak English.

It is not generally realized what a large number of Britons, born and bred at home, have never succeeded in mastering the national language. In Wales, according to the last census taken, there are no fewer than 808,026 people who cannot speak English. Welsh being their only tongue. In Scotland there are 43,738 persons who can speak nothing but Gaelic. And in Ireland there are 82,146 who can express themselves only in the Irish tongue. Of course, these are mostly old people, and English is gradually displacing the native languages of Ireland and Wales.

It is a curious circumstance that while in Wales fewer people speak both English and Welsh than Welsh only, in Scotland nearly five times as many use both languages as those speaking Gaelic alone, while in Ireland 20 times as many speak English and Irish as those who speak Irish only Pretty Poor Pickings.

The following story must be true, since it was told by one of Cleveland's clever school principals, who claimed to have witnessed the incident. She was in the basement of a big department store when she observed a rural looking party passing before some cheap prints of colored paintings. There was a middle aged man, plain, but evidently with a thirst for information, who was "examining" the pictures to three sized looking children.

"Here's a picture called 'Millet,' he was saying as they gazed open mouthed at "L'Angelus." "That's what it says at the bottom. Millet's a kind of grain. See em lookin at the ground? They ain't plantin, but I guess they're just pickin up the seed. Mighty poor farmin there. Come along."

After all, what does fame amount to?—Cleveland Plain Dealer

SWIFTLY RETREAT

FILIPINOS DISAPPEAR ON THE ADVANCE OF AMERICANS.

General Lawton and Several Hundred Men Disperse a Force of Insurgents Near Bocaue—Over Lines Which Have Been Thrown Around Them—Rebels Were Found Dead in the Trenches.

IMUS, Luzon, Oct. 4.—General Lawton has dispersed the insurgents, driving them to the westward. The purpose of the rebels was to cut the communication maintained between Bacoor and Imus by means of the road from those points on the east bank of the river. Fourteen hundred insurgents attacked Imus and 600 proceeded to Bacoor, with detachments along the road. During the morning Captain Stargeet's force spread along the road from Bacoor toward Imus and four companies of the Fourth regiment under Captain Hollis were thrown out from Imus, the two commands forming a junction. The entire line crossed the river and drove the Filipinos from their trenches to the westward through rice fields and thickets.

Before the forward movement was begun the American artillery shelled the enemy's position. The only American casualty was the wounding of a lieutenant of artillery. General Lawton while riding up the road to Imus was the target for many shots.

Usual Policy of Fighting.

The fight was practically ended at 2 o'clock. Another illustration of the insurgent policy of evading the American force was illustrated by the fact that when our troops crept across several miles of open space, firing by volley and cheering, the Filipinos melted away and only occasional glimpses of the enemy could be obtained as they ran from the trenches and dodged through the bushes like rabbits. One body of the enemy, under a former mayor of Imus, retreated toward Perez das Merinas, and another in the direction of San Francisco de la Malahon.

Captain Poore and the Sixth infantry attacked the insurgents Sunday on a new trench which they had constructed near Tuhuan, island of Negros, and sent them.

Lieutenant Knabenshue, with a party of scouts, crossed the river and found 23 dead Filipinos in the trenches, 10 of whom had been killed by one shell.

ADMINISTRATION'S POLICY.

President States His Position Regarding the Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—After the Dewey dinner at the White House Secretary Hitchcock, Attorney General Griggs, Senator Hanna, Postmaster Boutelle of the house committee on naval affairs, ex-Secretary Bliss and Myron Herrick of Cleveland and the president up stairs and there was an informal talk on the Philippine situation during which the president in a few words stated his position. Mr. Boutelle, on leaving the White House, stated, from what the president said, that the keynote of the administrations policy is to establish in the Philippines a proper government and leave it entirely in the hands of congress. Mr. Boutelle summed up the president's informal statement as follows:

"The administration's policy is to carry out the manifest will of the American people in furnishing troops to go to the Philippine islands to sustain the Fruits of Admiral Dewey's Victory.

"And the government upon this government is to maintain our sovereignty over the islands, sustain our soldiers against any flames of law and order, and everything being for the purpose of establishing a rightful government for the people of the islands in such a manner as the American government through congress shall determine. The campaign must be pushed actively and vigorously and the opposition to our army must be ended as rapidly as possible. Peace must be established by this government and maintained thereby until congress shall determine what shall be done with the islands. From what the president said it is supposed to mean evidently as to the stamping out of all opposition to our authority, the settlement of the war and the establishment and maintainance of peace."

A HEARTY WELCOME.

North Dakota Yells Itself Hoarse Over the Return of Volunteers.

FARGO, N. D., Oct. 5.—Fargo is in a blaze of patriotic enthusiasm over the arrival of Company B, North Dakota volunteers, after an absence of 17 months, one year of which was in the Philippines. The regiment embarked at San Francisco on a two separate trains, coming from Portland on the Northern Pacific. It reached Dickinson, the home of Company A, about 3 a. m., and from there to Fargo every town along the line yelled itself hoarse in honor of the troops. The regiment disembarked at Dickinson and marched to the opera house where breakfast was served. The next stop was at Mandan where the two trains were consolidated.

Jamestown Gives Boys a Boy.

Great crowds welcomed the Bismarck, Jamestown and Valley City companies, and the regimental companies stopped and dined at Jamestown at 9 p. m. Fargo was reached at 8 o'clock and 10,000 people and dozens of steam whistles and bells, and a battery of artillery made the occasion unparalleled in North Dakota. Companies C and I were held here until 11 o'clock and were fed at the armory in company with the local organization. They reached their respective homes at Grafton and Wheaton early in the morning. The Devils Lake company was out east of Jamestown and sent north to Leeds, where it will take the Great Northern to-ne.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

(Copyright, 1898, by S. S. McClure Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

Chapter I.—Tom Scott, a New England farmhand, decides to go to Klondike to search for gold. In Boston he rescues a Mr. Avery from footpads, and, as his new acquaintance is also going to Klondike, he asks Tom to accompany him, and the invitation is accepted. They take passage on the Seabird, a sailing vessel bound for 'Frisco.

Chapter II.—They board the vesset and a new mate, Obed Rider, whom the captain had just secured, proves to be an old enemy of Tom's, who had accused his father of deserting the ship of which he was captain and taking with him several thousand dollars of the owner's gold. Tom's father had not been home since the accusation had been made, but Tom, then a boy, did not believe it, and attempted to whip Rider. In the fight he broke the mate's nose. When the mate finds Tom aboard the vessel he vows to be avenged for the broken nose.

Chapter III.—During the passage Mr. Avery is knocked overboard accidentally and Tom again saves his life by jumping into the ocean after him. The man is injured internally and about to die. He calls Tom to him and wills him all his money, $5,000, and also his share in a rich gold region which his partners have discovered and where he was going to join them. He gives Tom a letter from one of them which gives direction for finding the territory, the possession of which and Avery's will will serve as an identification when he gets there.

Chapter IV.—Rider hears the man's conversation with Tom and determines to get the papers and the gold which they entitle the holder to. In San Francisco Tom is waylaid and robbed by Rider of the paper and what money he had with him, but the majority of his cash was on board the Seabird. Tom is found by the second mate of the Seabird, Green, who has left the sea to search for gold, and taken to his lodgings. Rider escapes and starts for Dyea.

Chapter V.—At Dyea Rider meets Tom's father, who has been in the gold fields and is returning home with a fortune. He asks for his son and his brother, and is told that both are dead, saying that Tom died in 'Frisco and was buried by the captain of the Seabird. After giving Rider gold enough to help him reach the gold fields, Tom's father starts for 'Frisco to find the sea captain, and from him learns that his son is not dead, but had started for the gold fields ten days before.

Chapter VI.—Green believes Rider has stolen Tom's paper and money, and they try to find him.

Chapter VII.—In Dyea Rider has formed a partnership with a tough named Bowers. They leave Dyea to search for the hidden gold the day after Tom and Green reach there and without them being aware of their presence. Tom rescues a woman from the hands of a tough and finds that she is the daughter of a brother of the man who befriended him by giving him the papers which had been stolen. She and her father were on their way to the mines for which his brother had started. Tom tells his story and also of his brother's death.

Chapter VIII.—In the meantime Rider and Bowers are on their way up the Dalton trail. They meet one of the partners of Avery on the way to Dyea for provisions and secure what information they can from him after showing him the paper from Avery and telling their story, which he does not believe.

Chapter IX.—Tom and his party meet the same man a day or two later and Tom has no trouble in convincing him of the fraud of Rider and Bowers and of his own claims. As Tom's party have an abundance of provisions for all, the miner turns back instead of going on to Dyea. They reach the mine and give him the agreed-upon signal.

Chapter X.—The partner who remained at the mine meets in Avery an old California partner whom he had sent for to share the new fortunes of the Klondike strike. They move their goods through a concealed hole in the rocks to the spot where their diggings are and cover up the hole. Rider and Bowers have in the meantime lost their way. Bowers discovers the other party by the fire which they had built, and after sending Rider back to Dyea with their horses, he attempts to get into the rich territory. The first-comers roll a heavy bowlder into the small entrance in an effort to block the passage just as Bowers reaches it.

Chapter XI.—Recounts the experience of Rider and Bowers in their efforts to reach the hidden wealth.

Chapter XII.—Bowers succeeds in climbing over the obstruction by use of a rope and announces to the partners that he had found Rider had stolen the papers which he had and had sent him back to Dyea and asks permission to stay, which is granted by force of circumstances. In another section of the hidden district from that which they had been working the partners find immense gold deposits and soon all are wealthy.

Chapter XIII.—Rider returns with horses from Dyea, as requested, and Bowers attempts to rob the partners of their gold. They allow him to escape and he finds after he gets out that he has carried away bags of gravel and clay instead of gold. In one bag he finds a note warning him not to return.

Chapter XIV.—After a few weeks more they conclude that they have enough, and Taylor, one of the partners, starts for Dyea to sell their claims. While he has gone they find more wealth on the claims they had staked out.

CHAPTER XV.

AN UNHOLY COMPACT.

When Hank Bowers read the derisive message which he had found in one of the dummy bags of gold his rage was frightful. Dashing his clenched fist against his head like a madman, he fairly screamed:

"Too smart for me! We'll see! I'll have my revenge if I live! Your gold isn't safe in Dyea yet, my beauties, an' you needn't crow."

Then he relapsed into sullen silence and scarcely spoke to Rider again that night. In the morning he made no reference to the events of the night before, but led the way toward Dyea as rapidly as his horse could carry him, his head dropped, while Rider was inwardly vowing to part company with him as soon as they reached the mining camp.

They met no one on the way, and without accident reached Dyea late one evening. Then Rider remembered that he had no funds. He could not leave his companion on that account, and while he was hesitating how to extricate himself from the dilemma Bowers invited him to drink at the first bar.

That settled it. The strong liquor wrought a marvelous change in his cowardly heart, and soon both he and his companion were oblivious to everything but the fact that they had money and liquor was to be had for the price.

Knowing his own weakness, however, Bowers had taken care to place his dust in safe keeping, retaining only enough for the enjoyment of his favorite dissipation.

From one resort to another they made their way, drinking, fighting, maudlin and quarrelsome by turns, until they both were unceremoniously shoved in a bare room back of one of the bars, utterly unconscious of their surroundings.

The next day they continued their debauch, but Bowers was careful to carry only enough dust to pay his way from day to day. After the first night he kept his head marvelously, considering the amount of fiery liquor he absorbed, while Rider was no sooner sober than he overdrank again.

Their days were a repetition of each other, and several times they narrowly escaped arrest by the vigilance committee. Then something happened which might have been expected among such a collection of adventurers.

A reckless character, who had been at the camp long enough to spend his last dollar and dispose of his outfit for drink, had taken notice of our two rascals as they lounged about in the drinking places, paying their way with gold dust. As they were apparently drunk most of the time, he determined to relieve them of some of the wealth they were spending so recklessly.

A few inquiries informed him where Bowers had deposited his source of supplies, and he watched until the miner went for a fresh portion one evening. Rider was helplessly intoxicated, and Bowers had been indulging freely himself. He placed a little pouch containing about $300 in dust in his pocket, and reeled out in the darkness without the faintest thought of danger.

A heavy blow behind the ear suddenly sent him to his knees, and a pair of strong hands grasped his throat at the same moment, but the owner had no easy task to accomplish his object. The realization of his danger fully sobered Bowers, and with a stifled curse he tore the grip from his throat and gained his feet by main strength.

It was too dark to see his assailant, but Hank Bowers was no coward, and instead of attempting to flee or call for help, he grappled silently with the would-be robber.

It did not last long. Once his arms were about his enemy, Bowers was master of the situation. Inch by inch he bent the other back until human endurance could bear no more, and with a groan the man's muscles relaxed and he fell heavily with Bowers on top of him.

"Struck a snag that time, didn't yer?" he demanded, grimly, seating himself on the other's breast and holding his wrists so that he could not draw a weapon.

"Let me up, blast yer!" was the sullen reply as the man tried in vain to move.

"Want ter get up? All right, pard. Jest remember I've got a gun agin yer ribs, though, an' if yer don't go all quiet I'll let a hole through yer!"

As he spoke he arose and allowed the man to do likewise, keeping a stout grip on his collar. Then he said, sternly:

"Go on where I push yer. I want ter see yer face."

A short walk brought them to the tent where Rider and Bowers slept, and into this the latter conducted his prisoner and lit a candle.

The light showed the face of a man about 30 years, with an expression of ferocity which was revolting, but Bowers surveyed it with satisfaction as he asked:

"Well, Mr. Man, what made yer tackle me? Hard up?"

"Yes."

The fellow gazed at him unflinchingly as he spoke.

"I s'pose yer know I could come pretty near hevin' yer hung fer this job?"

"Do it, d—— yer, an' don't talk about it," was the prompt reply.

Bowers released his grip, produced a bottle of liquor from his pocket and held it toward his companion, saying:

"Take a drink. You're a man after my own heart, you be. You an' I kin do business, I guess. How would yer like ter lay yer paws on a couple o' hundred thou. all in dust an' nuggets?"

"What's that yer saying?" replied the man, wiping his mouth on his coat sleeve as he lowered the bottle. "Are yer makin' game of me or what the—"

"Do I look like a chap that fooled?" snarled Bowers, angrily. "I ain't that kind. I know some chaps as has got a few hundred pounds o' the yaller stuff all dug, an' if I had two or three good men they'd whack up the swag with me."

"I'm yer man!" exclaimed the other, looking him full in the eye. "I ain't scared of a little blood. I'm desperate and I'll join yer!"

"Know another good man we could trust?" asked Bowers. "I've got a white-livered cuss with me as I'm goin' to cut loose from pretty quick. Three will be plenty ter do the job."

"Plenty ter divide with, too. Why can't we manage it between us?"

"Course we kin," said Bowers, "an' the fewer in it the better. Two good men is better'n twenty fer such a job. Will yer stick ter me, no matter what happens?"

"I never went back on a chum yet," was the prompt reply.

"All right. Now, what's yer name, pard?"

"My name's Turner."

"Wall, Turner, let's finish this licker the fust thing."

It did not take long to accomplish this, and then Bowers said:

"I'll furnish the outfit an' take yer where the game is ter be played. You

"Well, what made yer tackle me?"

git one-third of ther swag an' I git two-thirds. That's fair, ain't it?"

"I can't kick on that."

"All right. Now we'll git some sleep an' to-morrer we'll see if thar's any hosses ter be got. If I hadn't been a chump I'd held on ter what I brought in with me when I come."

On the following day, however, he took a different view of the matter. It would be impossible to start off on the trip without arousing the suspicions of Obed Rider, and Bowers decided that he must be of the party.

"He's just the chap ter split on us if we happened ter have a scrimmage an' thar was any fuss here over it. I dassent leave him behind. We'll take him an' then he'll hev ter keep his mouth shut when he's in the same boat with us."

But after two days' search he was unable to procure a single horse, so great was the demand. His gold was running low besides, and at last he dared not wait any longer. Each man took as much provisions as he could carry on his back, and, early one morning, they started over the trail, armed with rifles and revolvers.

When they had proceeded a few miles on their way, Bowers said:

"Now, pards, we're out fer big game an' we've got ter be mighty smart if we want ter come out all right. We're likely ter meet some o' the party we're after any time. They can't tote all their dust in on their backs an' then thar's that girl. They must hev 'bout enuff by this time an' they'll like enuff send one o' the men ter Dyea after hosses fer the gang. See?"

"That's hoss sense," replied Turner.

"Wall," continued Bowers, "we must keep our eyes peeled that we don't let ourselves be seen by any sech man. It'll spile everything if we do."

It was well for his plans that he did keep a sharp lookout, for before night he saw a speck far ahead on the trail which he knew at once to be a man. He was standing on the edge of a piece of woods, and his companions were behind him at the time. Stepping in the shadow of the trees, he explained:

"Thar's a man comin', an' I'll bet it's one o' them we're after. He may hev seen me, an' it won't do fer us all ter hide. He won't know you, Turner. You keep on an' pass ther time o' day with him. Yer bound fer the fort, yer know. Keep right on, an' we'll hide till he's out o' sight, then we'll overtake yer."

Turner at once walked ahead, while his two companions secreted themselves in the underbrush. They saw Turner stop and converse with the stranger a few moments, when the latter drew near them, and Bowers whispered:

"It's the man they call Taylor! He's goin' after hosses sure!"

All unconscious of the proximity of the two men, Taylor tramped sturdily on, and was soon out of hearing in the woods. Then the two left their ambush and hurried after Turner, who awaited them far out on the plain.

"What did he say?" inquired Bowers, eagerly.

"Asked me where I was bound an' whether there was any hosses ter be got in Dyea," said Turner, who never seemed to waste a word.

"I knew it!" declared Bowers. "Now all we've got ter do is find a snug place this side whar the trail splits an' take it easy till the dust is under our eyes. He'll be back pretty quick if he gits any hosses an' then we won't hev much longer ter wait."

Several days later saw them securely hidden in a piece of dense woods, but each day was divided into watches, when they took turns standing on sentinel duty. From a knoll a short distance from the hut they had built the trail was visible for fully a mile, and from daylight to dark they watched it closely.

Their patience was rewarded when, late one afternoon, they saw Dick Taylor riding along to the north, leading a string of horses behind him.

"Our time is most up now," said Bowers, grimly. "He'll fetch the mine by to-morrer. Them two chaps with him I've seen round Dyea. They're rich chaps, I've heard. He's picked 'em up an' is goin' ter sell out."

"How many will there be of them?" asked Turner, "an' how's the trick ter be done when they git here? D'yer reckon a regular holdup, or what?"

"We might do it in thet way," said Bowers, "an' stan' the risk o' gittin' wiped out, but it won't do ter risk it. There'll be too many of 'em. I've got a scheme I'm goin' ter spring on 'em. Let's git back under cover an' I'll tell yer what it is."

When they reached their rude shelter and lighted their pipes he outlined his plan as follows:

Upon sighting the party Rider was to conceal himself in the woods near the hut. Bowers himself was to remain in the hut on the boughs which served him for a bed, while Turner's part was to meet the travelers and play the role of a decoy.

"They all know my phiz," said Bowers, "an' some o' them knows Rider. You are the only one they don't know. Of course, Taylor will remember meetin' yer the other day when he was goin' in, an' yer can tell him you've met a chap as is shot himself by mistake, an' is almost dead. Ask one of 'em ter come an' see if there's any chance fer him, or sumthin' like that. One of 'em is sure ter come, an' when he gits inside the shanty we kin hold him up darned quick."

"But what about the rest of them?" asked Rider.

"Why, yer chump, when this one don't come back it's ten ter one thet another feller'll come lookin' arter him, an' we'll fix him too. Then if the rest don't come we'll go out with our guns all of a sudden an' hold 'em up. We'll take all thar guns an' horses an' light out lively fer Dawson City. They'll be sure we've gone ter Dyea an' we'll git off clean with the gold. It's nigher ter Dawson anyhow, then it is ter Dyea. We kin git down by water an' then take ther steamer fer Seattle, while they're lookin' fer us round Dyea or Skaguay. See?"

"Great head," said Turner, sententiously, while even Rider began to be impressed with the clever scheme. It was also a great relief to know that there was to be no bloodshed, for, had as he was, he had not the heart for such deeds when he was sober.

After carefully discussing every phase of their villainous plot and arranging the details the trio stretched themselves on their rude beds and were soon sleeping as soundly as though no guilt rested on their minds.

CHAPTER XVI.

ROBBED.

All unconscious of the snare ahead of them, the successful gold hunters rode cheerfully along over the trail, their gold secured on their animals and their hearts filled with natural thanksgiving at their success. They were rich—rich beyond their wildest hopes, and it had all been done in a few short weeks.

They had registered their claims in Dyea, but there was considerable doubt whether they were located in American or British territory, as the boundary line was not exactly known. This, however, had been fairly explained to the purchasers, who declared their willingness to take the risk. This they could well afford to do, for they had bought the claims for about one-quarter their actual value, and were well aware of the fact. They had only to register them in Dawson also to make themselves safe.

Their progress was necessarily slow, for each horse carried not only a rider, but a large amount of gold as well. Where the trail was very rough the men were forced to dismount at times, so that it was nearly night on the second day when the party drew near the piece of woods where Hank Bowers and his rascally confederates were hidden.

Taylor was leading the way as they reached the first trees, where already the lengthening shadows were stretching across the trail. The others were straggling along behind him, while Tom and Clara Avery rode side by side in the rear.

In fact this had already become his usual place, and his devotion was so apparent that the others had come to regard it as a foregone conclusion that the young couple had met their fate in each other.

Taylor was some ten yards ahead of his party when suddenly a man hurried out of the woods at his left and came directly toward him, shouting:

"Stranger! Hold on!"

Checking in his horse, Taylor allowed the man to reach his horse's side and then exclaimed:

"Who are you and what do you want?"

By this time the rest of the party had reached the spot and halted.

"There's a man back in the woods a little way here that is hurt bad," replied the newcomer. "Won't one o' yer come an' see if sumthin' can't be did fer him? He's in a bad way."

Taylor looked hard at the stranger. He was apparently about 40 years old, rather tall, a scar across his thin nose, which made his eyes seem close together. It was not a face to inspire confidence, but Dick Taylor had not the slightest suspicion of danger as he asked:

"Who is the man and where did he come from? What's the matter with him?"

"He's a sailor sort of a chap an' his horse throwed him, he says. Then his pardner skipped off an' left him ter kick ther bucket alone."

As the man spoke Taylor suddenly remembered his face.

"Didn't I meet you not long ago on this trail?" he demanded.

With a well-assumed air of surprise the man drew nearer and stared at him a moment, then exclaimed:

"Right yer are, stranger! Yer was boun' fer Dyea afoot an' I was comin' this way. Didn't know yer at first. Yes. I got 'long here an' found this feller most dead. I knocked up a sort of a shanty in the bush an' got him into it, but he's dyin' sure's yer born."

"What's his name?" asked Avery, "and who is he?"

"Says his name's Rider. Obed—"

"Obed Rider!" cried Tom and the second mate, simultaneously.

"That's it! D'yer know him?" asked the stranger, looking at them with well-feigned surprise.

"The scoundrel!" cried Tom, jumping from his horse. "Come, Green, let's go and see if it is really him!"

But Avery spoke up at this point and said:

"Hold on, boys! Don't go rushing off like that! I don't take much stock in this story. Suppose it is some sort of a trap? Remember what we are taking with us."

"It's all right, boss," urged the newcomer. "You needn't be scared o' one man. This Rider begged me ter stay with him an' I hadn't ther heart ter leave him. I wouldn't leave a dog ter die in the bush alone. If yer don't want ter come, all right, but I hoped yer was men enuff fer that. I'm goin' back fer him. He may be dead by this time."

"Where does your man say he's from?" demanded Tom, his anger melting away as he thought of his enemy dying miserably by himself in this wilderness.

"He says he's from Dyea. He had a pardner named Butters or some such name. He's out of his head sometimes an' goes on 'bout a lot o' gold an' how some one's goin' ter git held up an' sech nonsense. Then he's got some papers an' all he thinks about when he sees 'em is some gold mine an' a chap named Scott."

"That settles it!" cried Tom. "Come on, Green, we'll go."

Without waiting to hear another word the man turned on his heel and led the way among the stunted pines from whence he had emerged. Tom and Green followed him and the rest dismounted to await their return.

A short walk through the scattering trees brought the three men to the close columns of the main forest, and soon Tom saw what appeared to be a confirmation of the man's story, for in a little opening toward which they were directing their steps he could distinguish the outlines of a hut.

"This is the place," said the guide, as they reached the entrance. "Come in."

Tom was right at his heels and followed him without hesitation. It was now growing dark, and at first he could not distinguish objects distinctly, but gradually he became accustomed to the semi-light and saw a man's form stretched on the ground in one corner of the interior, while a deep groan came from the spot.

Hank Bowers had altered his plans somewhat since first outlining them, for a faint voice said:

"Who is it, Turner?"

There was no mistaking the voice. Both Tom and the second mate recognized it instantly as belonging to the mate of the Seabird. Tom stepped quickly to his side and bent over him, saying:

"It's Tom Scott, the man you robbed and nearly killed."

"Tom Scott!"

Rider seemed to raise himself on his elbow by a great effort and whispered:

"Thank heaven! Here! Take the papers I stole! I didn't hit you! It was some one else. I did rob you, though. Here, take them an' say yer forgive me!"

Without any suspicion of danger Tom bent compassionately over the form of the recumbent man to take the papers, when he felt his pistol slip from his belt. A hand had withdrawn it from behind. It was the hand of the guide.

Tom straightened up and turned sharply to find the muzzle of a revolver within an inch of his face, while at the same instant Hank Bowers appeared in the doorway and covered the second mate with a weapon, saying sharply:

"Hands up! If yer move, yer dead men!"

It is needless to say that both Tom and Green did as they were bid. It was madness to attempt resistance, for not only was there something in the man's tone that showed he was in earnest, but a third reason presented itself in the shape of a weapon in the hand of Rider, whose face wore an expression of devilish triumph at seeing Tom's pale face.

"What do you want of us?" demanded Green, who was the first to find his tongue.

"We want you," was the prompt reply. "Then we want the rest of the party, an' we may as well take in their dust while we're about it. Turner, take them guns away from 'em, an' see they hain't got none out er sight."

This was done, and he added:

"Here, Rider, tie 'em up, hand an' foot. You ought ter be handy at makin' knots that won't slip, seein' as yer a sailor."

A rope which had evidently been prepared for the occasion was produced and cut into requisite lengths, after which Rider bound both prisoners securely and rolled them helpless into the corner of the hut, completing his work by tying pieces of blanket over their mouths in such a way that while they could breathe they could not give an alarm if so disposed.

All this was accomplished much quicker than it takes to tell it, and in less than five minutes from the time Tom and his friend crossed the threshold of the hut they were bound and helpless prisoners, while Hank Bowers and his two partners were congratulating themselves on the outside at the complete success of their scheme.

It was now so dark that they knew the party must camp for the night where it was. That search would be made soon for the missing men was more than probable, and, after a short consultation, they concealed themselves near the hut and waited.

Deeper and deeper fell the shadows, until at length they were forced to the conclusion that the miners had taken the alarm.

"I'll try again," said Turner, at last. "It won't do to hev them suspectin' anythin' has happened ter them chaps. I'll go out ter where they are an' say the two young fellows know ther sick man an' is goin' ter stay by him ternight. Then I'll allow it's too dark ter fin' my way back ter the hut, or ther ain't room fer so many in it. Jest as it gets light enuff ter see you an' Rider kin come down on us an' hold the gang up with yer guns. I'll git behind 'em, an' we've got 'em then."

"Good!" whispered Bowers, admiringly. "That's a great scheme!"

And it was. When Turner appeared at the camp and told his story no one had any suspicion that it was false. The men were all familiar with Tom's story, and it did not seem unnatural that he should be charitable enough to remain by a dying man, even though it was an enemy. The tents had been pitched, a cheerful fire built near by, and Clara Avery was tripping lightly about to prepare the evening meal, while the men attended to the horses and their precious burdens.

[CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.]

Eureka Harness Oil is the best preservative of new leather and the best renovator of old leather. It oils, softens, blackens and protects. Use on your best harness, your old harness, and your carriage top, and they will not only look better but wear longer. Sold everywhere in cans—all sizes from half pints to five gallons. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

Eureka Harness Oil

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture AND Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a house. CROOKSTON, MINN.

BATH ROOM BARBER SHOP

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

On the Buffet = Smoking = Library Cars

Between

St. Paul, Minneapolis and Seattle.

All the Comforts of Home.

United States Map. 15c.

A copy of our handsome map, 48x34 inches, printed in four colors and mounted on a roller, will be sent to any address on receipt of 15 cents in coin, postal or express money order. We cannot well use postage stamps. GEO. P. LYMAN, General Passenger Agent C., B. & N. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

Burlington Route

Finest Train on Earth from

ST. PAUL -AND- Minneapolis -TO- CHICAGO

Electric Lighted and Steam Heated.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain, free, whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents in America. We have a Washington office. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,

beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal, weekly, terms $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK ON PATENTS sent free. Address

MUNN & CO., 361 Broadway, New York.

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal Corps of News Gatherers.

GENTILLY.

Charles Martel began threshing Tuesday.

Rev. Fr. Theilhon was a Crookston visitor Tuesday.

A. Benson was in town today for a load of lumber.

Mrs. E. Littleand son A. H. Little, are back from Lambert, where they spent Friday and Saturday doing business.

Attorney Brown, of Red Lake Falls, met with an accident last Monday. Mr. Brown's horse got frightened and turned to the side of the road. The man jumped out of the buggy, and in trying to check his horse was struck, cutting his hip severely.

(Too late for last week.)

A. Laframbuise is repairing his shop for winter.

W. H. Verity, our cheese maker, received 9,300 lbs. of milk yesterday.

Gentilly Fall Cream cheese is still above par. Demands exceed supply.

Shock threshing is about over in this vicinity. The wheat crop averages 15 bushels to the acre.

H. T. Gendron has just received his supply of winter and fall foot wear, coats, mitts, etc. Call and see him.

FELTON.

H. M. Brasseh spent Sunday over at Halstad.

Frank Smith was in town the first of the week.

Miss Zugger spent Sunday with her folks at Moorhead.

Knute Steenerson of Pelican Rapids spent Friday and Saturday here.

N. T. Broadlet's dox yielded between four and five bushels to the acre.

H. Jorgenson, of Mankato, returned home Friday evening, having completed threshing on his farm here.

M. Steenerson, of Pelican Rapids, and I. Steenerson, of this place, took the train Sunday morning for Erskine.

W. H. Case, deputy head counsel of the Modern Woodmen of America, is here in the interest of his society.

On Friday Specht & Windseth sold their livery barn to W. Scott, and Specht & Windseth in return bought the Mill's store.

A part of the land Mr. Cramer bought of F. W. Mills last week, has been platted into town lots and quite a number has been sold already.

CLIFAX.

L. T. Steenseth took in the Carnival at Crookston Friday.

Mrs. C. F. Getchell visited at Polk's Metropolis Tuesday.

J. L. Iverson returned from St. Paul on Saturday morning.

There is some talk of organizing a band here in the near future.

O. E. Moe drove to his home near Grand Forks on Sunday.

H. T. Stjern drove to Grand Forks on Saturday afternoon and returned Monday.

Mrs. E. J. Eide and Mrs. G. W. Schrampf, were visiting friends in Crookston on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Tollipson are the happy parents of a baby girl which arrived Friday morning.

Miss Nellie Hopkins came up from Moorhead on Saturday morning train and opened the fall term of school here Monday.

LENGBY.

Ed. Welte went to Ebro Sunday.

Ole Lommen left for Fosston Sunday.

Snow covered the ground here Friday.

Ole Ringstad was in Fosston Tuesday.

Albert Lillo came home from Sherlin Friday.

Andrew Opheim, of Fertile, was in town Saturday.

C. J. Lillo shipped a carload of wood Thursday.

Albert Lillo and Nels Olson were in Fosston Saturday.

W. B. Sheffield, of Crookston, was a visitor here Sunday.

Chas. Olson, was in Crookston Thursday and Friday attending the Fair.

Geo. Lillo, Chas. Campsted and Nels Stenberg transacted business at Fosston on Tuesday.

WARREN.

C. M. Spannuth, of Argyle, was a city visitor Monday.

Mrs. W. F. Powell visited Crookston friends last week.

P. Sinclair spent Sunday over in the land of the Deerlake.

Eugene Doty has been appointed deputy sheriff by Sheriff Green.

Oscar Simenson got back Monday from his trip to Fargo and vicinity.

C. J. Brackett of Fergus Falls, arrived Monday to do a little work here for the K. O. T. M.

R. Glavin returned from St. Paul last Saturday, the state board of equalization having concluded its labors after a lengthy session.

T. W. Shaughnessy, of the Register force, wheeled up from Crookston, covering the distance, thirty-one miles, in two hours and five minutes.

A couple of heavy-weight lifters and wrestlers arrived from Crookston last Saturday and remained in town till Monday. They gave a little exhibition of dumb bell lifting, but failed decidedly to do a land office business.

The excursion train Thursday morning took its departure from here more than an hour late. The train was not wellfilled, owing no doubt to the disagreeable change in the weather that had taken place the day before. It, however, had on board about forty Warrenites who were bent upon taking in all the day's sights at Crookston's Street Fair and Carnival. Some who ylshed to see the whole went down earlier in the week, while others waited and took it in Friday.

MAPLE BAY.

We are having cold weather.

Mr. Grunswold is building a new barn.

O. M. Olson has gone to Grand Forks on business.

Mr. S. Hauge took a blower to Red Lake Falls Saturday.

Mr. C. Nelson from Mentor has been spending a few days here.

Threshing has been on the standstill for a few days on the account of rain and snow.

Mr. Holgrau has left for his home in Brunhead. He has been working here part of the summer.

As late in the threshing season as it is Mr. Blower Compson has sold three blowers this last week.

Mr. Ed. and Willie Klinger were down to Crookston and took in the Fair. They report a good time.

Diphtheria has again broken out at Maple Bay. Arthur Anderson has been down with it but is rapidly recovering.

Messrs. Nels Peterson, Severt Hauge and Ole E. Olson have returned from North Dakota, where they have been working for the Blower Company this fall.

South Crookston.

C. A. Myers was one of the special police during the Fair.

The Carman Big Store is going to move to Crookston soon.

John Stewart, the cattle buyer, is here as the guest of Wm. Arnold.

Carman was dead during the Street Fair as every body was over to see the sights.

Mrs. T. C. Stewart is quite poorly. She does not seem to improve very fast, but we hope she may soon be among the well and strong.

T. S. Antchens is thinking of going into business here. Tom thinks he will run all other business men out of the Fifth ward if he opens up.

James Phillips and brother, Harry, are putting the new seats in the school house here which means a big improvement in the school of the Fifth ward.

What do you think? A man looking all over Carman for a saloon the other day, but thanks to E. D. Childs none can be found on this side of the river.

Mr. Bates is putting the last coat of paint on his house. James Phillips, our Carman painter, is doing the job and it looks very nice too. Jim is all right.

Wm. Brown, the restaurant man, near the round house, is doing a nice business now. Mr. Brown is a very nice and accommodating young man and is bound to succeed in business.

The time has come when the hobo season is over here and the people of the Fifth ward feel they have no use for a policeman over here. They do not believe in paying out $45 a month when it is not needed.

DUGDALE.

Dugdale now has both a day and night operator.

W. C. Hartig has gone to his claim in the Black Duck country.

We had four inches of snow here last week and the sleighing was good.

The Great Northern Railway Company are building a light house at the crossing at Tilden.

The Great Northern is laying out lots on the south side of the railroad and will boom that part of town.

The Northwestern Telephone Company are going to have their office in Camp & Oehler's store. O. H. Camp will be their agent here.

F. Wolfgand had a quarter of veal stolen out of his well the other night by some tramps who are getting quite thick around here. Half of Mr. Wolfgand's chickens also have disappeared. He is now in search of a bull dog.

While Herman Camp was painting Oehler's large house the other day the scaffolding gave way. Camp managed to catch hold of the shingles and lying flat on the roof dragged himself to the top where he had the pleasure of picking out about fifty slivers from his fingers.

KITTSON.

Mrs. Erwin, wife of our section foreman, arrived from Argyle last week.

Mrs. R. E. Smith and daughter Louise, were calling in Kittson Monday afternoon.

Mr. Sheffield passed through here Tuesday looking after the interest of the elevator company.

Mr. DeLance, master mechanic, was here Tuesday measuring out a location for the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Company.

Mr. Newhouse, who has been looking after his farming interests here was called by telegram last Friday to his home in the southern part of the state.

Mr. Calahan, teacher in the Bong district, has accepted a more lucrative position in another district. Hence the children are enjoying a vacation at present.

SHELLY.

A. O. Anderson is on his farm near Beltrami threshing.

There were quite a number of Shellyites at the Crookston Carnival.

Dunk Cameron, of Hillsboro transacted business in town last Tuesday.

Jens Petersen is building a large barn on his property bought from K. J. Osthy.

C. A. Hawkins, C. A. Yernson and L. E. Olsen drove to Halstad, Sunday evening.

Oliver Johnson and Sam Little, of Caledonia, went to Fargo Monday evening to meet the North Dakota soldiers boys.

Mr. and Mrs Palen, of Euclid came down to visit with Mr. and Mrs. Meyes Saturday and returned Monday morning.

Dr. Cleveland took Monday evening's train for Fargo to see the North Dakota Soldiers on their return from the Phillippines.

L. H. Larson, of Hillsboro, came over last Saturday to look over his business interests here. He returned to Hillsboro Sunday afternoon.

Prof. Reinstad, of Minneapolis, and Rev. Haugen, of Fergus Falls, stopped off on their way to Halstad last Saturday to shake hands with old acquaintances.

Rev. B. B. Haugen, of Fergus Falls, and Prof. Reinstad of Minneapolis lectured here last Sunday to a crowded house. Prof. Reinstad rendered some fine vocal solos which were received with great enthusiasm, and Rev. Haugan always pleases the audience with his lectures.

ERSKINE.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. S. Jorgenson a boy.

A brand new girl at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Mason.

Chester Nass died Tuesday morning of consumption. He was 20 years old.

I. I. Steenerson and brother Knut were here Sunday and returned to Felton Monday.

Four car loads of stock were shipped from here Saturday by Oppegaard of Fosston.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

Weddings.

WHEATLEY-SIMONSEN.

John Wheatley and Miss Walborg Constance Simonsen, of Sarnia, Ontario, were married at the Norwegian Methodist church in this city last night about 8:30 o'clock by Rev. Mr. Hanson in the presence of a few friends. After the ceremony the bridal couple and friends repaired to the Palace Hotel, where Landlord McKinnon had prepared for them a wedding feast. The bride and groom left this morning on a wedding trip.

Births.

MELBY.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. S. Melby on Sunday, Sept. 30, a boy.

Deaths.

TUFF

At Minneapolis on Thursday Sept. 29, F. P. Tuff, of Fertile. The cause of death was tuberculosis.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

A PART OF HIS STORY

ONE CHAPTER IN THE LIFE OF A YOUNG ADVENTURER.

A Dramatic Incident In a Career Which May Have Ended Behind Prison Bars or Which May Now Be Brimful of Happiness and Hope.

"These little detached passages in other people's stories that we are continually running into by pure chance," said an old reporter off duty, "are the most fascinating and tantalizing things in life. Sometimes we get a whole chapter, sometimes we get nothing more than a scrap of dialogue, and as often as not it's only a glance of the eye or a gesture of the hand, but we realize all the same that we have accidentally intruded upon some poignant human document of which we are never to know either the beginning or the end. I have often amused myself by taking such fragmentary morsels and attempting to reconstruct around them a logical sequence of events, just as naturalists build up fossil monstrosities from small sections of their big bones, and I may add that the invariable result of my efforts has shattered my faith in comparative zoology. I am forced to believe that the naturalists are faking us. However, when—Oh, well," said somebody in the office, "go ahead and tell the story and have done with it!"

"The incident I had in mind," continued the old reporter, looking some what injured, "was narrated to me by a gentleman of this city who is now manager of an extensive orange grove with offices in New Orleans. Eight or nine years ago, before he assumed his present position, he had charge of a large sugar plantation up the river, and one day during the grinding season a young Englishman came to his office and applied to him for work.

"The young fellow said his name was John Mason, and his shabby clothes and shaggy look in his eye confirmed the statement that he was badly in need of a job. The manager liked his frank manners and put him at light work with a gang at the cane carriers. Mason proved a very good hand. He was steady and sober, but he attracted no special attention, had no intimates and never let drop a word about his history. At the end of the season he drew his money and went away.

"About a month later the manager received a letter from a lady in England inquiring about her son, John Mason, whom she understood was working on that plantation. The letter went on to say that he had left home believing he had killed a young woman to whom he was engaged. He had struck her with something in a fit of insane jealousy. The woman was not dead, and the trouble had been fixed up. Meanwhile the young man had come in for a legacy of £5,000, and his mother wanted him to return at once.

"The letter was evidently written by a person of culture and refinement and seemed sincere, but, having no idea of Mason's whereabouts, all the manager could do was to reply to that effect. That closed the correspondence.

"One rainy, windy, grinding season a very ragged, trampish looking man came to the office window and asked for work. Dirt, privation and a heavy beard had changed him considerably, but the manager recognized him as Mason at a glance. 'Didn't you use to work for me?' he asked. 'No,' replied the man. 'I was never south before in my life.' 'Well,' said the manager, 'I have no work for you, but you remind me at first of a fellow I want to see, a fellow named John Mason.'

"The applicant stood for a while irresolute. 'I used to have a partner by that name,' he said finally; 'may be it was him. What was it about?'

"The manager looked him in the eye. 'I wanted to tell him that that woman was not dead,' he replied.

"Mason grabbed hold of the window sill and turned white as a sheet under his dirt. His jaw trembled for a minute, and then he began to blubber like a child. The manager came out, led him in kindly, and as soon as the Englishman saw the letter he admitted the story of his flight was true. The reaction was so great that he became half hysterical, but at last he was persuaded to go to his old quarters for the night, and the manager assured him that he would make arrangements next day for his immediate return to England."

"Well?" asked several listeners.

"That's all there is to the story," said the old reporter. "Next morning John Mason wasn't there. His bed had not been slept in: nobody had seen him; nobody has ever seen him since. Where he came from, what became of him, who he really was, nobody knows. The manager wrote to the mother and got no reply, and the question arises, Was it his mother after all? Might not the letter have been a decoy? How did the writer learn his address? Was the girl actually alive or dead? True, the manager might have settled some of these problems by further inquiries at the English end, but he is a wise man and has learned that it is not well to meddle with detached chapters. It is an excellent rule."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Cold and Chloroform.

It has been found that an apparatus for killing animals with chloroform in England would not work in India, because the high temperature prevented the concentration of the chloroform vapor. That this was the case was proved by the fact that by placing ice in the box the animals were readily killed.

If you think you resemble a great man, say nothing. The resemblance may cease the moment you open your mouth.—Berlin (Md.) Herald.

The opportunity of a lifetime must be seized during the lifetime of the opportunity.—Albany Argus.

Moved...

We are now in our new quarters on Broadway, where we have lots of room to accommodate our rushing trade. We have the largest stock of everything that goes to make up a first-class Grocery to be found in the Northwest. You must give us a chance to figure on your Harvest and Threshing Orders. No one can do better by you than we can.

..Slocum's Grocery..

CHASE BLOCK, BROADWAY.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Shelf and Heavy Hardware

Tinware, Furnaces, Stoves and Ranges, Guns Ammunition, Glass, Paints and Oils.

GORO IRONS and Other Specialties. Crookston, Minnesota.

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laing out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have our architect include electric wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give ou the benefit of our experience in laing ont wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

CARY SAFE CO..

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

.....Manufacturers of.....

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Polk County Journal.

VOL. XXIII. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1899 NO 27

PAVING CONTRACT

Voted to J. H. Killmar, of Iowa, the Cost Being $50,000, by Four Aldermen.

THE MEETING TO RECONSIDER

Avails Nothing—City Attorney Says Present Proceedings are Illegal.

The committee of streets and bridges, to whom was referred the several bids for paving, reported at the meeting of the city council last Tuesday night, recommending that the bid of J. H. Killmar, of Iowa, be accepted as it was the lowest bid. This report was adopted. Aldermen Harris, Anderson, Davis and Thompson, aye, Aldermen Mc-Kinnon and Chesterman, nay, and voting Aldermen Brown, Childs, McGregor and O'Brien. The mayor being assured, as he said to the council, that, if bids were re-advertised for, bids several thousand dollars less than Mr. Killmar's bid would be made and feeling that perhaps the council had not acted with due consideration, called a special meeting of the council for last night, to reconsider the action of the previous evening anent the giving of the paving contract. The council met last night and after somewhat heated discussion adjourned till the evening of Oct. 24, without reconsidering the question.

The discussion last night brought out several interesting questions. It seems that the bids for the paving were not well advertised in and about Crookston the only paper in which the advertisement was put was the Crookston Times (weekly) and that in only one issue. In the state and country at large it was published in few papers. It is now claimed by some Crookston parties that they would have bid had they known that bids had been called for. Still other Crookston citizens, who acted in bid, say that they understood that the first bid were called for chiefly to get information about the probable cost and that it was not intended that any of the first bids would be accepted.

The legal phases are numerous. Recently the council voted that it was the sense of that body that the city ought to go under a certain general statute in order that the paying of the taxes for the paving might be extended over five years. The ordinance bringing the city under the general statute, however, has not yet been passed. It, then, the city is to act, in this matter of raising taxes for paving, in accordance with the city charter as it now stands, the levy cannot be made till next October which precludes the putting in of the paving till the summer of 1901. If the city is to act under the general statute, mentioned above, the ordinance placing the city under that statute must first be passed, and then thereunto must by resolution vote to give the contract. Voting the contract, then, by simply adopting the report of the committee by a vote that was not a majority vote of those present would not be legal. Again, even if the city is to act in this matter under the charter as it now stands, a question of as much moment as the giving of a contract to a thing at least $50,000 ought to be decided by the passing of a resolution and not by simply adopting the report of the committee. Such was the decision of the city attorney as given to the council last night.

A number of the citizens of the city, who will pay heavy taxes in case paving is put in, were present at the meeting last night and expressed themselves as in favor having the work done as cheaply as possible and urged the council, if that body had assurance that lower bids than Killmar's would be made, to re-advertise. It was urged by these citizens and by members of the council that the heavy tax payers were the ones whose opinions should have the most weight in deciding this matter. John McKinnon offered, in case bids were re-advertised for, to put in a bid $4,000 less than Killmar's bid. President O'Brien informed the council that the city comptroller had said to him that he (the city comptroller) would not sign the contract with Killmar, as he considered that he would, if he did so, be acting illegally. Nothing, however, would move any one of the four members, who voted to give the contract to Killmar, to move a reconsideration of the question and no one save one who had voted for that motion could move to reconsider it. Alderman Davis acted as the chief spokesman for this quartet. He said that the committee were acting in good faith after thoroughly investigating the matter, that the council had been considering the paving question for months and knew now as much as they would know several weeks hence, that to reconsider the question meant indefinite delay, that to get the stone from this section the question must be settled at once, and hence he refused to move to reconsider.

Alderman Anderson moved to adjourn till Oct. 24, stating, when he made the motion, that he wished the time between now and Oct. 24, in which to learn the wishes of the taxpayers and that if they wished bids to be re-advertised for he would at the next meeting move a reconsideration of the motion at Tuesday evening giving the contract to Mr. Killmar.

Y. M. C. A. SERVICES

In Four Churches Last Sunday—Plans for the future.

The Young Men's Christian Association conducted services in four of Crookston's churches last Sunday, two secretaries from Minneapolis, one from Fargo and one from Grand Forks being here. The meetings were well attended and the people of the city had an excellent chance to learn about what kind of work this association is doing.

The members of the local Y. M. C. A. talked over, with State Secretary Peck and assistant secretary Hill, what has been done and what is being planned for in future.

The visiting officers approved of the plans, which are to fix up a gymnasium and bath rooms and have a secretary for Crookston. Mr. Peck said he had in mind a young man whom he thought he could get. One hundred and fifty associate members at $5 a piece will pay the running expenses, and the use of the bath rooms for one year for $5 is cheap to say nothing about the gymnasium or reading rooms. From the standpoint of physical culture to say nothing of reasons based on higher grounds, the young men ought to be encouraged and supported in this undertaking.

THE MINNESOTA CLUB.

Young Men Meet Tuesday Night and Organize a Social Club.

It is not intended that affairs in society circles in this city, during the coming winter, shall be entirely quiet, at least the young men propose to do their part to keep things lively. Twenty or more of them met last Tuesday evening in the Rickett block and formed an organization to be known as the Minnesota club. These are the officers elected: Roy Shute, president; Charley Lohn, secretary and Maurice Malone, treasurer. A committee was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws and the club will meet next Tuesday evening to receive the report of this committee.

The new society is a strictly social one. The rooms in the Rickett block formerly used by the Columbia Club will be refitted up in elegant style and occupied by the Minnesota Club. The object of the new organization will be made in the near future and no pains will be spared to make this one of the swellest social functions that ever occurred in the city.

Board of Education.

The school trustees met last Thursday evening and transacted considerable business. The tax levy for next year was increased $1,000. This extra money is to pay for improvements which are being made in the school buildings and for extra teachers. Some time ago the Elgith grades A and B. were combined and placed under Miss Gilpatrick's charge in the old Elgith grade room in the high school building and Miss Smith, made a full assistant in the high school, was given the library room as a recitation room. This left Miss Gilpatrick's room in the central building vacant. This is now being fitted up and as soon as a primary teacher can be secured this room will be used either by the new teacher or by one of the other grade teachers. The new teacher will take half of the 90 pupils whom Mrs. Hayes is now trying to take care of.

Strayed.

From the farm of A. H. Taylor in the town of Fanny, one month ago, a Newfoundland dog. Finder will please leave at Collins livery barn in Crookston. Liberal reward.

MUCH MONEY IN MINES

In Alaska—so Says W. J. Hilligoss and he Proposes to Get His Share.

THE FIREMEN'S ANNUAL BALL

At City Hall Tonight—Most Elaborate Preparations—Everybody Going.

W. J. Hilligoss, who two years ago, in company with Frank Bortz and backed by Crookston capitalists, started for the gold fields of the Klondike and Alaska and returned to civilization but a short time ago, was in the city over Sunday, and after spending Monday with his family who are living on a farm near St. Cloud returned to Crookston Tuesday morning.

During the past two years he has made an exhaustive examination of the cold country on the north-western part of this continent. He has not been doing much digging but has been locating claims which he expected to work later. These claims are in different parts of the region and Mr. Hilligoss has been so eager not to select any them that he is satisfied that he will find gold there in great quantities.

Once, during his wanderings, he came across a particularly rich locality, but unfortunately he was unable to stake out any claims at this point as there were not enough men with him to witness the act. That is, had he staked out the claims others might have come in and dug them. He has the place marked in a certain way, however, and is inclined to think that no one else will locate there before he can legally stake out grounds.

But the land which he thinks will pay the best is at Cape Nome, about 125 miles south of St. Michaels on the Yukon. This place he found but a short time before he left, but he is sure that here there are large quantities of the yellow metal. He staked out seven claims right on the coast. At high tide most of this territory is covered with water so that it can be worked only part of the time.

He had with him gold dust and also one piece weighing twenty ounces. He says that he himself actually saw three men at one place wash out $45,000 in three days. He is confident of the future and will return in the early spring fully prepared to do lots of digging. Those interested in the venture will probably incorporate with a view to prospecting the work to better advantage.

FIREMEN'S CELEBRATION

Inspection by Council in Afternoon, Grand Ball in the Evening.

This afternoon at two o'clock will occur the annual review and inspection of the fire department of the city by the city council. The firemen will march through the principal streets, and the council will review them and afterwards inspect the apparatus and quarters in the city hall.

In the evening will take place the annual promenade given by the firemen in the city hall. This grand ball is one of the big social events of the year and no one who can possibly arrange to be there ever misses it. Complete arrangements are made for entertaining in a regal style a large number of the society people of Crookston and elsewhere. The best kind of music will be furnished and most delicious lunches will be served. The money which is made by this dance goes into the firemen's general fund and is used in bettering the equipment of the department in taking care of firemen who have been injured in the service, etc. The fire department of Crookston gives volunteer service and there is nothing better in the state. Crookston, therefore, ought to respond liberally at this time and benefit themselves while they at the same time are assisting the firemen. Let everybody at least buy a ticket even if he won't be there.

Officers of the Firemen.

The firemen met last Thursday evening and elected their officers for the coming year.

Tom Morris was chosen chief, Thos. Johnstone, secretary, J. E. O'Brien treasurer, and Dr. Dunlop surgeon. Chief Morris made the following appointments:

Albert Harris assistant chief, Al. Sargent foreman, George Logunfield assistant foreman, J. E. Montague, A. A. Glenn and Archie Hillard as the executive committee.

Births.

HUTCHINSON.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutchinson, of Keystone, a boy.

BIG FOOT BALL GAME

Saturday Afternoon at Fair Grounds—High School vs. Moorhead.

An exciting game of football will be played at the Fair grounds in Crookston next Saturday afternoon between the Crookston high school team and an eleven from the Normal school at Moorhead. Rugby football is the chief sport in the fall of the year and as Crookston has had only one opportunity in many years to witness the game, the people should be out in full to avail themselves of this opportunity. They will see intense energy in action, both brain and brawn working together for a coveted prize, namely victory. It is a game where team play is everything, hence self must be sacrificed for the good of the whole.

For several weeks the high school boys have been practicing and by next Saturday they will be in shape to put up a good 'still' game. Last Saturday nine players from the team lined up against the high school eleven and the former, soon after play began, learned the value of the training to which the latter have been subjecting themselves. For the time they have been practicing and the rather limited amount of coaching they have received the high school boys played remarkably well. This week they have been getting the speed and the snap into their work that they lacked to a certain extent last Saturday. The people of Crookston may count upon seeing a well-played game next Saturday. The following will be the line up of the team: Byerly, quarter; Lincoln Arnold, left guard; Culpepper, right guard; Louis Barrett, left tackle; Frank Davies, right tackle; Westerberg, left end; Henry Stevenson, right end; D. Rosenthal, quarterback and captain; Fred Simmons, left half back; Ed. Walsh, right half back; Lawrence Miller, full back; Paul Wilkinson, Napoleon Rapin, George Hanson, and Albert Johnson, substitutes.

LAND WITHOUT OWNER

In Polk County—Two Men Contending For Title.

There is a farm in Polk county with buildings on it, that nobody owns, although two men, neither of them having any title to the orphaned land, are fighting over it.

Years ago the first claimant settled upon the government land, built a shack and barn, proved up on it, and found at length that the land he had a patent to as his homestead was the quarter section next to the one he lived on. It was simpler to take the land he had a patent to than to begin the next entry for the land where his buildings were.

Claimant No. 2 came along presently discovered that this was vacant land with the advantage of buildings ready made, and jumped it. He cultivated it and added to the improvements and in time proved up and got a patent.

Now this would be almost incredible except that there are documents to prove it. He got a patent to still a third bit of land adjoining on the other side.

Two men had lived on the farm, and each had done his best to get title, and still nobody owned it.

Meantime the federal government was down as among land, and decided it to the state in 1885. And in 1894 Auditor Bierman included it in his famous deed to the Great Northern, and the railroad company refused to accept the land.

The state insists that it belongs to the railroad, and will not have anything to do with it. The railroad denies ownership and will have nothing to do with it. And nobody else pays taxes or claims to own it.

The two men who came near owning it are outstanding in the courts for the ownership they left them. If the real estate had an owner the buildings would belong to him. But being derelict one of them may be able to establish his claim.

Anybody that wants a nice improved farm may have one by going up there and sitting on the land for fifteen years. But it would probably be cheaper to buy the land elsewhere than to fight through the litigation that is likely to ensue round this farm which nobody owns.

Governor Rosevelt Said

In his Ohio speech: Make no mistake. In the Philippines we are at open war with an enemy who must be put down. It is absolutely impossible to save our honor except through victory, and it is equally impossible to win peace, to restore order in the islands, or to prepare the way for self-government there save through victory.

HOG CHOLERA HERE

Dr. J. G. Annand of State Board of Health Makes Extensive Investigations.

CARELESSNESS CHIEF CAUSE

Of Spread of Disease—If the Law Were Strictly Enforced Cholera Would be Stamped Out.

Hog cholera has been depleting the herds of swine in this section of the state to such an extent that the state board of health deemed it advisable to send a representative up here to investigate thoroughly the existing conditions. Dr. J. G. Annand was the man who came and in an interview with the JOURNAL just before he left for St. Paul he said:

After spending over a week in this vicinity investigating the outbreak of hog cholera I found the disease to have spread over quite an area in Polk and Red Lake counties, in the townships that are the most thickly settled.

In Polk county the township infected with cholera are Lowell, Andover, Hammond, Crookston, Gentilly, and Keystone, in Red Lake county, Louis ville, Red Lake Falls, Lake Pleasant, and Terrebonne. I found that little or nothing had been done to check the spread of the disease and that inquisitiveness, visiting back and forth of neighbors, dogs being allowed to run as they chose to do and negligence on the part of the hog raiser who did not properly care for his dead hogs, are measures able for the spread of this dreadful disease. Upon inquiry I found that cholera has existed in this vicinity for a number of years, last year it was in Louisville township, at Red Lake county, along the Red Lake river—and that some negligent fellow who was too indolent to bury his dead animals threw them into the river. This, with rising the pens year after year where cholera has been, has been the origin of this outbreak.

Now with a knowledge of the disease there is no reason why it cannot be stamped out. If any one should be so unfortunate as to have the cholera break out in his herd of hogs he should report it at once to the town supervisors. The state laws passed by the legislature in 1897, reads as follows:

Sec. 1. "Any person who knows or has reason to suspect the existence of any contagious or infectious diseases in any domestic animal, shall forthwith give notice thereof to the local board of health of the town, village or city, where such animal is kept."

And further, H. F. No. 558, Section 1, it shall be the duty of the owner or any other person having in charge any swine that have died of any disease, or have been killed on account of any disease. No person shall convey upon or along any public highway, or other public ground, or any farm, except his own, any dead diseased swine, or swine that have died of or have been slaughtered on account of any disease. It shall be unlawful for any person negligently or willfully to allow his hogs or those under his control afflicted with any disease to escape his control or run at large.

Sec. 2. Any person convicted of a violation of this act shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred (100) dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed thirty (30) days.

State Agricultural School.

The registration at the state agricultural school which opened last week was much larger than ever before. The result is that the dormitory accommodations of the school are insufficient and several hundred will have to room in private houses at St. Anthony Park and St. Paul.

A noticeable fact in connection with the registration this year is the greater proportion of female students. The school has been co-educational only three years, and while the number of girls the first year was only forty-five, there will probably be twice as many more before the present term closes.

Wanted.

A man with a family of four, boy and girl, to take charge of small dairy farm. Good position and good salary to right man. Enquire at Pontalee & Anglim's store. 26-27

METHODIST PASTORS

In Red River Valley Change—Conference Closed at Minneapolis.

The annual session of the Northern Minnesota Conference held at Minneapolis for one week closed last Monday night, the last act being the reading of the appointments by Bishop Joyce. Methodists in the Red River Valley will be pleased to learn that Dr. Robert Forbes has again been appointed presiding elder of the Duluth district. An attempt was made to have him transferred to the Minneapolis district but the attempt failed. Northern Minnesota has been worked by Dr. Forbes as it never was before and it is indeed fortunate for this part of the state that he still remains here. The following are some of the appointments that will be of interest to JOURNAL readers: C. S. Kuhns, who has been at Viroqua in the iron ore district in Southeastern Minnesota comes to Crookston. He is highly spoken of by his brother ministers and will be welcomed to Crookston. A. E. Rosson, formerly of Crookston, goes to Asbury church, Duluth. Wm. Burks returns to Ada. Argyle will be occupied by H. E. Hoard. Henry Logan, formerly in charge of Thief River Falls and of Hillsboro goes to Ely in the iron ore region, while two ministers take his old circuit, N. J. Youngquist, of St. Hilaire and A. A. Myers, who was at St. Vincent, going to Thief River Falls. Fisher and Mallory, E. H. Cook, Preston to be supplied. Ice-berg, George Wild, Keewatin to be supplied by Justus Parrish, Scenic, Henry Litchkiss, St. Vincent, George Scrimgeton, Warren, W. E. Loomis, Fisher. Also was Mr. Warren goes to Lith Falls and J. T. Smith, formerly of Argyle to Clearwater on the St. Cloud District.

Deaths.

BESSO.

On Monday, Oct. 9, at his home in the town of Fairfax, Otto Besson died of consumption. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon.

JORGENSON.

On Sunday Oct. 8 after a long illness near Fisher Mrs. Stephen Furlong, deceased has lived in Polk county for the past twenty-five years. The funeral was held Tuesday, Father Murphy, of Benidji having charge of of the services.

JORGENSON.

B. C. Jorgenson died at his home in the town of Andover, about six miles southwest of the city last Thursday night. Heart failure was the immediate cause of death though he deceased was at the same time suffering from peritonitis. He was 71 years old at the time of his death. He leaves a wife and two children, Mrs. S. L. Davis and Ed. Jorgenson. Deceased was one of the old settlers having lived near Crookston for 23 years. He was a highly respected citizen and will be greatly missed by the community. The funeral occurred Sunday morning. The services being in charge of Rev. H. P. Fisher.

High School Notes.

Jennie McAskill is playing a cake walk for the classes to march by this week.

The high school now receives the Argus, the state university paper, which is being sent to all high schools of the state free of charge.

The high school boys won their first game of football last Saturday by a score of 16 to 5. Their opponents were a pick up team from the city.

The third year English class have been furnishing amusement for the rest of the school, reading the quarrel between Brutus and Cassius, which they have learned by heart.

It is nearly time for the classes to be organizing. None of them have done so yet except the seniors, who will keep their old organization. What is the matter with the present juniors?

Mr. Newbury called a meeting of the football boys last week and it was decided to get the Moorhead team up here next Saturday for a game of football. The boys and girls are selling tickets and everybody who desires to see a good game of football should not fail to buy at least one ticket.

Choice Farm for Sale.

I offer for sale my farm consisting of 160 acres, located two and a half miles northeast of Fisher. Good warm buildings, artesian well, and well improved. Title perfect. For particulars inquire of

G. E. MERRILL,
Fisher, Minn.

24-28

DEFECTIVE PAGE

BIMI.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

The orang-outang in the big iron cage barked to the sheep pen because the discussion. The night was stiflingly hot, and as Hans Breitmann and I passed him, dozing over our bedding in the fore peak of the steamer, he roused him self and chuttered obscenely. He had been outright scarce of late in the Malayan archipelago and was going to England to be exhibited at a shilling a head.

"It would be well for you, mine friend, if you was a liddle sensick," said Hans Breitmann, sneaking by the cage. "You haf too much ego in your cosmos."

The orang-outang's arm slid out negligently from between the bars. No one would have believed that it would make a sudden snakelike rush at the German's throat. The thin silk of the sleeping suit tore out. Hans stepped back unceremoniously to pluck a banana from a bunch hanging close to one of the boats.

"Too much ego," said he, peeling the fruit and offering it to the caged devil, who was rending the silk to tatters.

"If he was out now, dere would not be much of us left bereaboutsh," said Hans lazily. "He screams good. See now how I shall tame him when he steps himself."

There was a pause in the outcry, and from Hans' mouth came an imitation of a snake's hiss, so perfect that I almost sprang to my feet. The enstained murderous sound ran along the deck, and the wrenching at the bars ceased. The orang-outang was quaking in an ecstasy of pure terror.

"Dot stop him," said Hans. "I learned dot trick in Mogoung Taujong when I was collecting liddle monkeys for some peoples in Berlin. Are you asleep, or will you listen, and I will tell a dale dot you shall not believe?"

"There is no tale in the wide world that I won't believe," I said.

"Good! When I was collecting dose liddle monkeys—it was in 1879 or 1880 —and I was in dot islands of der archipelago, over dere in der dark"—he pointed southward to New Guinea generally—"mein Gott! I would sooner collect life rod devils than liddle monkeys. I was dere for nearly a year, and dere I found a man dot was called Bertran. He was a Frenchman, and he was a good man—naturalist to der bone. Dey said he was an escaped convict, but he was a naturalist, and dot was enough for me. He would call all der life beasts from der forests, and dey would come.

"Und dot man, who was king of beasts tamer men, he had in der house shast each sonder as dot devil animal in der cage—a great orang-outang dot I thought he was a man. He haf found him when he was a child—dot orang-outang—and he was child and brother und open comigne all round to Bertran. He had his room in dot house—not a cage, but a room—mit a bed and sheets, and he would go to bed and get up in der morning und smoke his cigar und eat his dinner mit Bertran und walk mit him hand in hand, which was most horrible. Gott! He was not a beast. He was a man, and he talked to Bertran, and Bertran comprehended. If I haf seen dem. Und he was at ways politeful to me except when I tells too long to Bertran und say nothings at all to him. Den he would pull me away —dis great, dark devil, mit his enormous paws—shast as if I was a child, und Bimi, dis orang-outang, haf understood us both, und his cigar between his big dog teeth und der blue gum.

"I was dere a year—dere und at der oder islands—among wild men und birds und sometimes for butterflies und orchits. One time Bertran says to me dot he will be married because he haf found a girl dot was good. Den he go off courting der girl—she was a half caste French girl—very pretty. Had you got a new light for my cigar? Oof! Very pretty! Only I say 'Hat you thought of Bimi? If he pulls me away when I talk to you, what will he do to your wife? He will pull her to pieces. If I was you, Bertran, I would git you wife for wedding present der stuff figure of Bimi.' By dot time I had learned somedings about der monkey peoples 'Shoot him!' says Bertran. 'He is yor beast.' I said, 'If he was mine he vos he shot now.'

"Den I felt at der back of my neck der fingers of Bimi. Mein Gott! I tell you dot he talked through dose fingers. It was der deaf und dumb alphabet all complete. He side his lairy arm round my neck, und he tilt up my chin und look into my face, shust to see if I understood his talk, so well as he understood mine.

"'See now dere!' says Bertran. 'Dot you would shust him while he is only dling you? Dot is der Teuton ingrate!'

"Shi! I knew dot I haf made Bimi a life's enemy, because his fingers haf laid murder through der back of my neck. Next dimes I see Bimi dere was a pistol in my belt, und he touch it once, und I open der breech to show him it was loaded. He has seen der liddle monkeys be killed in der woods, und he understood.

"So Bertran he was married, und he forget clean about Bimi und me, und I ping along on der bench mit der half of a human soul in his belly. I was see him skip, und he took a big bough und thrash der sand till he haf made a great hole like a grave. So I says to Bertran 'For any sakes, kill Bimi.' He is mad mit der jealousy.'

"Bertran haf said: 'He is not mad at all. He haf obey und love my will, und if she speaks he will get her slippers.' Und he looked at his wife across der room. She was a very pretty girl.

"Den I said to him, 'Shoot him when he comes to der home, for he haf der light in his eyes dot means killing—und killing.' Bimi come to der house, but dere was no light in his eyes. It was all put away, cunning—so cunning—und he fetch der girl her slippers, und Bertran turn to me und say: 'Dot thon know him in nine months more dan I haf known him in 12 years? Shall a child stab his feder?'

"Dot next day Bertran come to my house to help me make some wood cases for der specimens, und he tell me dot he haf left his wife a liddle while mit Bimi in der garden. Den I finish my cases quick, und I say, 'Let us go to your house und get a drink.' He laugh und say, 'Yes, me sleep dry mans.'

"His wife was not in der garden, und Bimi did not come when Bertran called. Und his wife did not come when he called, und he knocked at her bedroom door, und dot was shut tight—locked. Den he look at me, und his face was white. I broke down der door mit my shoulder, and der thatch of der roof was torn into a great hole, und Bimi and me in upon der floor. Haf you ever seen paper in der waterbasket or cards at whist on der table scattered? Dere was no wife dot could no sees. I tell you dere was nothings in dot room dot might be a woman. Dere was stuff on der floor, and dot was all. I looked at dese things und I was very sick, but Bertran looked a liddle longer at what was upon der floor und der walls und der hole in der thatch. Den he began to laugh, soft und low, und I knew und I said Gott dot he was mad. He never cried, he never prayed. He stood still in der doorway und laugh to himself. Den he said: 'She haf locked herself in dis room, und he haf torn up her thatch. Fi donc. Dot is so. We will send for der thatch und wait for Bimi. He will surely come.'

"I tell you we waited ten daye in dot house after der thatch was made into a room again, und once or twice we saw Bimi coming a liddle way from der woods. He was afraid because he had done wrong. Bertran called him when he was come to look on der tenth day, und Bimi come skipping along der beach und making noises mit a long piece of black hair in his hands. Den Bertran laugh und say, 'Ei donc! shust as if it was a glass broken upon der table, und Bimi come nearer, und Bertran was boney sweet in his voice und laughed to himself. For three days he made love to Bimi, because Bimi would not so himself be touched. Den Bimi come to dinner at der same table mit us, und der hair on his hands was all black und thick mit—mit what had dried on his hands. Bertran gave him cigarres till Bimi was drunk und stupid, und den"—

Hans paused to puff his cigar.

"And then?" said I.

"Und den Bertran kill him with his hands und I go for a walk upon der beach. I was Bertran's own guidness. When I come back, der ape he was dead, und Bertran he was dying shofe his head, but still he laughed a liddle und low, und he was quite content. Now you know der formula of der strength of der orang-outang. It was a service to one in relation to man. But Bertran, he had done Bimi unit sooch dings as Gott git him. Dot was der mericle."

The infernal clamor in the cage resumed operations. Then! Dot friend of ours haf still too much ego in his cosmos. Be quiet, then!"

The beast had long and venomously. We could hear the great beast quaking in his cage.

"But why in the world didn't you help Bertran instead of letting him be killed?" I asked.

"My friend," said Hans, composedly stretching himself to slumber, "it was not also even to mineself dot I should lif after I had seen dot mans eat dot hole in der thatch. Und Bertran, he was her husband. Good night, und sleep well."

Brazenose "Where the divil is Lungtungpen?" There was about a minute on a half to wait. The bold a hoold av their rifles an sezus tried to put their belts on. Then marchin wid fixed bayvits, av coorse Thin we knew where Lungtungpen was, for we had hit him in the corner in the dhark, an the whole town blazed wid thim unosin jingles an Sniders like e cat's back on a frosty night. They was as dein all ways at wunst, but over our hids into the shtreme.

"'Have you got your rifles?' sez Brazenose. 'Got 'em!' sez Orth'ris. 'I've got that thief Mulvaney's for all my belt'ses pay, an she'll kick my heart sick wid that blunderin long shtock av hers.' 'Go on!' yells Brazenose, whip pin his sword out. 'Go on an take the town! An the Lord have mercy on our sowls!'

"Thin the bhoys gave wan divastat in howl an pranced into the dhark, feelin for the town, an blindin an stiffin like cavalry ridin mastere when the grass pricked their bare legs. I hampered wid the butt a dozen times or dhings that felt wake, an the rest come an hammered contagious, while the jingles were jinglin, an tryelins from inside was shplittin our ears. W. was too close under the wall for them to hurt us.

"Evenshnally, the thing, whatever nt was, broke, an the six und twinty av us tumbled, wan after the other, naked as we was horrun, into the town av Lungtun. There was a pacific av a sumpshus kind for owholis, but whenever they tuk us all white as wet, for a new breed av devil or some kind or the coot I don't know. Thev ran as though we was both, an we bint into thin bamboo hut, an dhrew us aigh av us. There was torches in the shtreets, an I saw little Orth'ris rushin his shoother wid a shpear, an he tossed it over Martini, an Brazenose walkin into the gang wid his sword, like Diarmid av the Golden Collar. Some wan hadn't a stitch av clothin on him Tvcdeiever, av shepinds wid dacints under their heilles, an what wid wan thing an an other, we was busy till mornin takin possession av the town an Lnngtungpen.

"Thin we halted an formed up, the s'immen howlin in the honeee an Lifenin Brazenose blushin pink in the light av the mornin sun. 'Twas the most ondasnit p'rade I iver tuk a hand in. Folve and twenty privits an a officer av the line in review order, an not as much as wud dnet a fife betune 'em all in thawav av clothin! Elehs av us had their belts an pooches on, but the rest had gone in wid a handful av cartridges an the skin God gave him They was as naiked as Vanus

"'Number off from the right,' sez the lift'nint. 'Odd numbers fall out to dress; even numbers patthrol the town till relieved by the drossin party. Let me tell you, pathrollin a town wid nothin on is an exapyience I patrolled for tin minutes, an begad before 'twas over I blushed. They wasn't laughed so. I niver blushed before or since, but I blushed all over my carkiss thin Orth'ris didn't patthrol. He sez only, 'Portsmith harricks an the 'ard av a Sunday.' Then he lay down an rowled anywuys wid laughin

"When we was all dressed, we counted the dead—twinty-foive ghosts besides wounded. We tuk five elephints, a hundher an sivinty Saidees, two hundher dabs an a lot av other hingcllaneous thruck. Not a man av us was hurt, except maybe the lift'nint, an he from the shock to his dacincy

"The headman av Lungtungpen, who sorrindered himself, asked the interpret't. 'If the English fight like that wid their clo'es off, what in the wurruld do they do wid their clo'es on?' Orth'ris begin rovlin his eyes an crackin his fingers an dance a step dance for to impress the headman. He ran to his house, an we spint the rest av the day carryin the lift'nint on our shoother's round the town an playin wid the Burmese bashles—fit little, brown little divils, as pretty as pictures.

"Whin I was invided for the dyseert'r to India, I see to the lift'nint. 'Sorr,' sez I, 'you've to the makin's in you av a great man; hat, if you'll let an ould sodger spake, you're too fond av the onrisin. He shuk hands wid me an sez 'Hit high, hit low, there's no gr'ain you. Mulvaney You've seen me waltzin through Lungtungpen like a red Injin widout the warpaint, an you say I'm too fond av the onrisin? 'Sorr,' sez I, for I loved the bhoy, 'I wud waltz wid you in that condishin through hell, an so wud the rest av the men. Thin I wint down sthrame in the bot an left him my blessin. May the eimen carry me there at once, for he was a fine upstandin young orficer

"To reshume! Fwhat I've said jist shows the ase av 8-year-olds. Wud 50 sets av sodgers have taken Lungtungpen in the dark that way? No; I'll let you know the risk av fever an chill, let alone the shootin Two hundher might have done it But the 8-year-olds know little an care less, an where there's no fear there's no danger Catch them young, feed them high, an, by the holy ar that great little man Bobs, behind a good orficer tan't a divvle in Asia to smash wid their clo'es off—'tis con-timental-ar-r-r-mies! They tuk Lungtungpen in a canter, an they'll do St. Petersburg in their dhrawers! Begad, they wud!

"Here's your pipe, sorr! Shmoke her tinderly wid honey dew afther lettin the reek av the canteen plug die away! But 'tis no good, thanks to you, all the same, fillin my powch wid your chopped hay! Lettin Darcy's like the stray. Ut shpoils a man's taste for nuddler things.

So saying, Malvaney took up his battcrfly net and returned to barracks.

Economizing Space.

Father—Don't you know that smoking will stop your growth?

Johnny—Sara' that's why I do it. There won't be room for me in the flat if I grow any more.—New York Journal.

DENSE FOG AND NO WIND.

Fourth Attempt at Racing Between Columbia and Shamrock a Fiat One.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—A heavy fog lay over New York and its vicinity all morning and the race was postponed almost as smooth as glass.

The race for the day was declared off a little after 11 and the signal letter "P" being sent up and the committee and tugs turned their prows eity ward. The torpedo boats and revenue cutters were soon moving carefully away through the fog and the small fleet of excursion steamers, yachts and the press boats followed. The line was thick at that time and the wind was not blowing more than two miles an hour.

A CHILD'S FANCY.

Explanation of What Seems Precocleuess in Imaginative Children.

"An active, healthy imagination is one of the happiest gifts a child can possess," is the thought evinced by Florence Hull Winterburn, the well known pedlologist, in The Woman's Companion.

"If we watch an intelligent child, four or five years old, who believes himself unnoticed we will probably be astonished at the richness and fertility of the fancy which can give life and color to dull, commonplace things and events, whole stories and dramas around the simple toy that means nothing more to us than what it plainly stands for. Here we will perceive that even his wildest romances found themselves upon many facts, for free and frolicsome as his imagination may appear, it is subject to its laws. It deals with real things in its playful way. It colorizes, paints, molds, but it must have its material. It has its actual basis.

"What we call creative ability is really nothing but the power to reconstruct, perhaps to combine several separate plans or patterns into a whole from different points of view the original. The child is an artist who dashes on his colors boldly, without any sense of the shamefulness of inconsistency, and so he often produces effects that surprise others as well as himself. Many of the acts that seem so precocious because we suppose them to be the outcome of a well considered plan are really happy accidents, not devoid of the merit of originality, but neither to be overpraised as work of genius. Childhood is one unbroken succession of experimentings."

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes live right past your door, delivering 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Agt. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

The Weekly Inter Ocean

Largest Circulation of all Political Papers in the West

Always American—Always-Republican

THE WEEKLY INTER OCEAN SUPPLIES ALL NEWS AND BEST CURRENT LITERATURE

The Inter Ocean's Telegraphic Service is Exclusive. Every Column is Bright, Clean and Packed with News.

$1

The Literature of its Columns is equal to that of the best magazines. It is interesting to the children as well as the parents.

The Unter Ocean is a Western Newspaper,

And while it brings to the family The News of the World, and gives its readers the best and ablest discussions of all questions of the day, it is in full sympathy with the ideas and aspirations of Western people and discusses literature and politics from the Western standpoint.

$1.00—PRICE, ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR—$1.00

Price of Daily by mail - - $4.00 per year
Price of Sunday by mail - - $2.00 per year
Daily and Sunday by mail - - $5.00 per year

The Sunday and Daily Editions of the Inter Ocean are the Best in the West

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $18,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON.....Pre B. STENERSEON.....Vice-President
S. S. GERVAIS.....2d Vice-President L. ELLINGTON.....Cashier
A. P. HANSON, Asst. Cashier.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. ERSKINE, President. WM. ANGLIN, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

George B. Erskine, A. A. Miller, Wm. Anglin, J. S. Jefferson, E. M. Walsh, L. Fontaine J. P. Foote, W. H. Crosby, J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

THE BEST EQUIPPED PRINTING OFFICE IN NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Polk County Journal

Correspondence from all places in Polk county and adjoining counties, not represented by any of the JOURNAL'S newsgatherers, is respectfully solicited.

Call in and see us when in town.

Order For Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court. Special Term. Sept. 29, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Ivor Johnson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Bimbi Johnson, formerly Bimbi Johnson, of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the 6th day of April A. D. 1896, at the County of Polk aforesaid, and being at the time of his death a resident of this county and state, and late of Crookston within this county, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be granted to Hannibal Anderson granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Saturday the 28th day of October A. D. 1899, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the probate office in Crookston inside county.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston this 29th day of September A. D. 1899. By the Court:
OLE E. HAGEN,
[58-29] Judge of Probate.

Summons.

State of Minnesota County of Polk.—ss.
The State of Minnesota, to O. H. Walker, defendant:

You are hereby summoned to be and appear before the undersigned, one of the Justices of the Peace in and for said county, on the 28th day of October 1899 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at my office in the City of Crookston in said county, to answer unto Wm. Anglin in a civil action, to his damage one hundred and forty-six and 40-100 dollars, which said sum is due and payable to plaintiff from the said defendant on account of

Given under my hand this 5th day of September, 1899.

G. H. HOLT,
[38-38] Justice of the Peace.

Summons

State of Minnesota ss. DISTRICT COURT
County of Polk
Fourteenth Judicial District.

William Lambert, plaintiff, against
The Minneapolis Threshing Machine Company, and Mary Beaver, defendant. Loan

You and each of you are hereby summoned to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which was filed in the office of the Clerk of said court, at the court house in the City of Crookston, said county, within twenty days after the service of this summons upon you, exclusive of the day of such service; and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff in this action will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

REPOGLE & REPOGLE,
Plaintiff's Attorneys.
Crookston, Minn.

State of Minnesota ss. DISTRICT COURT
Polk County.

William A. Lambert, plaintiff, against
The Minneapolis Threshing Machine Company, and Mary Beaver, defendant.

You are hereby summoned to appear in the above entitled action, which is brought in the district court of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, described as follows, to wit: The plaintiff's claim is for the same cause of action set forth in the former suit of same forty-three. That the foreclosure of the mortgage by the plaintiff in that suit be authorized the owner in fee of all of the following described real estate in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: the estate, lien, or interest therein or thereto, if any, of the defendant, Mary Beaver, in and to the following described real estate, situate in the above named county of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The south half of the southeast quarter of section thirty-four (34) in township one hundred forty-seven (147) north of range forty-three (43) west of the fifth principal meridian, and that the same be sold according to law to satisfy the amount due the plaintiff, with interest thereon, and costs and disbursements of this action, and that the defendant, Mary Beaver, and all persons claiming under her, be forever barred and foreclosed of all right, title, interest or claim in or to said premises, and for such other and further relief as may be just and equitable in the premises.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., July 24, 1899.
DeFOREST MCCLELLAN,
[55-91] Plaintiff's Attorney.

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court. Special Term. Sept. 1, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Oscar Strand, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Ingeborg Strand, formerly Ingeborg Caroline Strand, of the county of Red Lake representing among other things that Oscar Strand late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, died on the 15th day of April A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk deed intestate, and leaving goods, chattels and estate within this state to the value of about $1,000, and praying that administration of said estate be to Jens P. Strand granted

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court, on Saturday the 30th day of September A. D. 1899, at two o'clock P. M. at the Probate office in Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston the 7th day of September A. D. 1899. By the Court:
OLE E. HAGEN,
[52-95] Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of fifteen hundred ninety-nine and 87-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Isabella I. Chilbeck and John Chilbeck her husband, mortgagors, to George Q. Erskine mortgagee, bearing date the 7th day of March 1894, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota, on the 9th day of June 1894, at 11 o'clock a. m., in book 6 of mortgages, on page 484 and by virtue of the proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The northeast quarter (1) two (2) three (3) and fourth of fractional section (4) thirty in Jerome's addition to the townsite of Crookston, according to the recorded plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 21st day of October 1899, at ten o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of fifteen hundred ninety-nine and 87-100 dollars and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and the costs, attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage, and the expenses of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated Sept. 7th A. D. 1899.
A. A. MILLER, GEORGE Q. ERSKINE
Attorneys, Mortgagee.
Crookston, Minnesota. [37-36]

PISNER'S Rheumatism and Kidney Cure. A Sure cure for rheumatism and kidney troubles. Stops pain, drives uric acid and poisons from the system, which is nearly all cases of rheumatism and kidney trouble. Ask your neighbor who has used the good quality of this remedy. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail by C. E. MISNER, Crookston, Minn.

COMPLETE SURRENDER

Whole State of Minnesota Capitulates to the Valor of the Thirteenth.

Schools Closed and Business Suspended to Welcome the Heroes.

In the History of the Gopher State No Day Equaled Oct. 12.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE THIRTEENTH

April 29, 1898—Went into camp at state fair grounds, St. Paul.

May 7—Mustered in.

May 16—Left St. Paul for San Francisco.

May 21—Arrived at San Francisco and went into camp at Camp Merritt.

June 26—Went on board City of Para.

June 27—Sailed for Manila.

July 31—Reached Manila bay.

August 7—Went on shore.

Aug. 13—Participated in capture of Manila.

Aug. 10, 1899—Sailed for home.

Sept. 7—Arrived at San Francisco.

Oct. 3—Mustered out.

Oct. 12—Arrived home.

St. Paul has surrendered. Minneapolis has surrendered. St. Cloud, Stillwater and Red Wing are prepared to surrender. Thursday morning the Thirteenth Minnesota regiment, hastening over half the circumference of the globe, arrived at the Twin Cities. They had fought and vanquished Spaniards and Filipinos and they were coming home to recapture Minnesota. Not a gun was fired except the 19 in salute, no blood was shed but the energy suspended in hurrahs and handshakes, concentrated, would have demolished a greater army than Aguinaldo's.

Business houses were closed, city schools were closed. Even the state university regents decreed a holiday to greet the returning heroes.

No Day Like Oct. 12.

In all the history of the Gopher state no day has equaled that of Thursday, Oct. 12. Minnesota's heroes are home, and on the minds of the thousands who witnessed the arrival of the trains bearing the brave volunteers is engraven a picture never to be forgotten. These Minnesota veterans have passed through hardships almost beyond belief. They are called to many things. They are hard learned possibly. It has appeared as nothing for them to kill men and war caused them to grimly and mechanically perform that duty. But when their hands met those of their loved ones, when their lips pressed tender kisses on wet-faced mothers and their strong arms drew sister or sweetheart to their breasts, love and [illegible]

O. T. — W Y BOOK.

ness touched those grim good fellows and tears trickled down their cheeks. But they were tears of joy. Tears which were quickly followed by cheers—cheers for having safely returned to loved ones, cheers for their success in war, cheers in answer to the grand outburst of patriotism of the people of their beloved state. As the trains rolled into the towns, thousands crowded the platforms and roadways and never was there offered to any man a more royal greeting and heartfelt welcome home. Throughout the journey from the coast, and especially after the border of the state was reached people of the towns gathered to show a welcome home. To many a soldier it seemed worth the suffering he had endured in that far-off land. Those sturdy heart those mighty shouts of greeting will never forget the vibration; those who helped make them will be benefactors and women and better patriots for all time to come. An impression has been left on many lives, and the love of country has touched highwater mark.

Greetings on the Way.

All across the continent there were greetings to the famous fighters, and at every station where a stop was made, men and women and children were there to cheer a welcome and offer all sorts of hospitalities. As the trains thundered by the smaller stations cheers were heard, backed by all the force of vigorous Western lungs, hats went into the air, and women waved their handkerchiefs. An answering shout from the men on the train and it was all over until the next town was reached. Ovations as were the soldier boys from the towns outside St. Paul and Minneapolis to reach their individual homes, a large majority desired to first go as a regiment to the Twin Cities, where a grand reception had been planned for them, and then to the homes of the various companies where relatives and friends had arranged for further demonstration and entertainment.

Twin Cities Did Their Best.

The Twin Cities have become justly noted for the fine welcomes with which they entertain, on occasion—for the cordiality of their reception to distinguished guests who have carried within their gates—but no reception, no demonstration, has ever equalled that given the Thirteenth regiment upon its return from its distinguished service in the Philippines. It was spontaneous, it was uproarious, it was joyful, it was everything it should have been and nothing it should not have been. It was a reception of which any body of men might justly be proud. It was such a reception as the Thirteenth deserved. Both cities were in it, though Minneapolis, owing to the nearness of the regiment at St. Paul, claimed the greater portion of the ceremonies. The boys arrived first at St. Paul, where they disembarked and marched to the Auditorium for breakfast, which the good ladies of the city had prepared for them. Breakfast over the regiment boarded cars for Minneapolis, where they were greeted by the president and his cabinet. There was a parade, of course, a reception and a dinner. There was everything which it was believed could in any way promote the happiness of the boys who had offered consecrated service to their country, even to the extent of its itself, if need be.

RECEPTION AT SAN FRANCISCO.

The only thing possibly lacking in making the day one of supreme happiness to the fighters was the absence of that brave soldier, Major Diggles, laid low by a Filipino bullet while leading a detachment of Oregonians on a reconnoitering expedition.

THE MINNEAPOLIS PARADE.

The formation and order of parade at Minneapolis follows:

Platoon of Mounted Police.

A. M. Shuey, Chief Marshal.

Fred E. Wheaton, Chief of Staff.

Frunc R. E. Woodward, Adjutant.

Iron Military Band.

President McKinley and party in carriages.

Governor Lind and staff in carriages.

First Division.

D. M. Gilmore, Marshal.

Hennepin Band.

Battalion Eighth U. S. Regular Infantry, Captain N. Jones, commanding.

General W. B. Bend and staff.

Svea Band.

Battalion Third Regiment, N. G. S. M., Major Powers commanding.

State Band.

Fourth Regiment, N. G. S. M., Colonel Charles H. Marsh, commanding.

Battery B, N. G. S. M., Captain C. C. Bames, commanding.

Second Division.

R. R. Henderson, Marshal.

University Band.

University Cadets, Major Edward Wibon, commanding.

Sons of Veterans company, Captain W. A. Cole, commanding.

Wesley Battalion, Captain J. G. Rogers, commanding.

Third Congregational Brigade, Captain G. F. Wheaton, commanding.

Marine Band.

Naval Reserves, Captain Porter Tremain, commanding.

Eldrige Zouaves, Captain R. F. Eldrige, commanding.

Third Division.

George H. Hutchins, Marshal.

Tribune Band.

Minnesota Brigade, Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias, Brigadier General B. G. Philpot, commanding.

First regiment, Colonel E. S. Mead, commanding.

Second regiment, Colonel E. H. Mitchell, commanding.

First Battalion, Colonel John A. Hugunin, commanding.

Second battalion, Major H. D. Powers, commanding.

Third battalion, Major O. H. Havil, commanding.

Carter Division, No. 2, Knights of the Maccabees, Captain W. H. Barnes, commanding.

Brainard Band.

Uniform Rank of Foresters, Captain H. Vallhausen, commanding.

Catholics Knights of America, Captain A. F. Bergeron, commanding.

National G. A. R. Drum Corps.

Degree Staff of Lee, No. 1, I. O. O. F.

Naval Corps, Captain Herbert Watson, commanding.

Fourth Division.

G. A. Clawson, Marshal.

Journal Band.

G. A. R. Department Commander D. B. Sacks, department officers, staff and past department commanders, Minnesota.

Morgan Post Drum Corps.

Minneapolis G. A. R. posts.

Minnesota Association Naval Veterans, G. A. R.

St. Paul G. A. R posts.

Stillwater, Red Wing and St. Cloud posts.

Returned members Thirteenth Minnesota regiment.

Thirteenth Regiment Band.

Thirteenth Regiment Volunteer Infantry, Colonel Fred W. Ames, commanding.

WILL LIVE IN HISTORY.

Name of the Thirteenth Minnesota May Now Be Placed Beside That of the Old First Minnesota.

The record of the old First Minnesota, which years ago on the bloody field of Gettysburg, made its famous charge, has always been a source of pride to the people of the state.

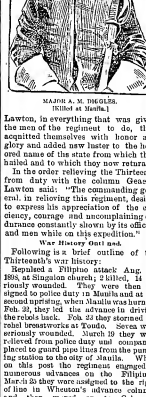
Today the state is doubly proud. for Minnesota's name has again been carried to the front of battle and another regiment bearing the name of the state shares the people's pride.

Beside the name of the First Minnesota on the scroll of fame may be inscribed the name of the Thirteenth Minnesota. The passing of a generation has made little difference in the fighting abilities of the sons of the North Star state, and no braver, better, abler set of men ever donned the army blue than the regiment whose return home the state celebrates.

Has Been Honored Everywhere.

Everywhere has the regiment been received with honors, everywhere have commandants and civilians spoken words of praise for "our boys," everywhere have they upheld the glory of the flag and the honor of the soldiers they are in a manner that gives theastate and the nation cause to be proud of them.

In the fight before Manila and the capture of that city Aug. 13, 1898, in the long months of toilong as police of that city, in the fighting under gallant MacArthur, in the fighting and the protection of the railroad from Manila to Malabon and [illegible] Wheaton, in the terrific march across the country under the tireless



MAJOR A. M. DIGGLES.
(Killed at Manila.)

Lawton, is everything that was given the men of the regiment to do, they acquitted themselves with honor and glory and added new lustre to the honored name of the state from which they hailed and to which they now return.

In the order relieving the Thirteenth from duty with the column General Lawton said: "The commanding general, in relieving this regiment, desires to express his appreciation of the efficiency, courage and unremitting endurance constantly shown by its officers and men while on this expedition."

Its History Out and In.

Following is a brief outline of the Thirteenth's war history:

Repulsed a Filipino attack Aug. 13, 1898, at Singalon church; 2 killed, 14 as riously wounded. They were then assigned to police duty in Manila and at the second uprising, when Manila was burned, Feb. 23, they led the advance in driving the rebels back. Feb. 25 they stormed the rebel breastworks at Tondo. Seven were seriously wounded. March 19 they were relieved from police duty and companies placed to guard pipe lines from the pumping station at Santa Ana. While doing so this post the regiment engaged in numerous advances on the Filipinos. March 25 they were assigned to the right of line in Wheaton's advance column, and on March 27 went to Caloocan. The regiment was then distributed along the railroad protecting it for 15 miles and repulsed several night attacks at different points. April 10 it made a reconnoissance in force to Malolos and advanced the next day to Santa Maria, taking the town after a brisk engagement, suffering a loss of 10 wounded. They returned to guard duty along the railroad and individual companies were in numerous skirmishes all along the line. April 23 the regiment was relieved under the command of Colonel Summers, and with the Second Oregon became part of Lawton's division, taking part in a two months' campaign, which ended in the capture of San Isidro.

The Insurgent Capital.

In this campaign the regiment engaged in many skirmishes, the most important of which was at Novaliches and the fall of Bulacan. The regiment was in the field 30 days, then returned to railroad guard duty, serving at Caloocan, Polo and from that time until ordered home guarded the roads and bridges near Malabon to Caloocan. This was the extreme outpost duty and the regiment was constantly out acting to prevent surprises and the destruction of bridges.

On the eve of departure for home the members of the Thirteenth, mindful of the fortunes of war, and ever reverting the memory of these comrades who had given their lives to our country, paid a touching tribute to the dead soldiers. At 4 o'clock on the afternoon of Aug. 8 the Minnesota regiments assembled on the street in front of the First reserve hospital. From there the regiment marched out to the Paco cemetery and to the graves of their departed comrades. The ceremonies of the afternoon were conducted by Chaplain Quayle, of the Minnesota band rendered music fitting to the occasion.

Paid Their Last Tribute

The Minnesota men return to their Northern homes leaving 48 of their comrades buried under Philippine sod. Thirty-six of these sleep beneath the mango trees of the Paco cemetery, and the rest are buried out at Battery Knoll. Possibly arrangements will be effected through which the remains of the Minnesota men and all other commands who have contributed their quota to earth's call, can be sent back to the United States in the near future and buried in the cemeteries of the towns from whence they came.

THESE THEIR NAMES

List of Those Who Came, Who Saw, Who Were Seen and Who Conquered.

Also of Those Who Fell in Battle and Those Who Died of Disease.

Muster Roll as Prepared by the Military Authorities at San Francisco.

Following is the muster roll o the Thirteenth Minnesota regiment, compiled from the army records at San Francisco:

Field, Staff and Non-Commissioned Officers.

Col. Frederick V. Ames, Lieut. Col. John H. Fridrich, Maj. Edwin S. Glass, Adjt. Joseph J. Masterman, Maj. Royce C. Robinson, Capt. Charles A. Cressy, quartermaster, Capt. Edward Cuffe, ambulance; Lieut. Milton H. Hart, quartermaster; Lieut. Milton H. Hart, commissary; Lieut. Wilbur F. Sanborn, battalion adjutant; Lieut. Hugo S. Hanft, battalion quartermaster; Maj. Edwin J. Hadley, surgeon; Capt. Arthur S. Law, assistant surgeon; Capt. Harry P. Jones, assistant surgeon; Sergeant Foster L. Stevens, battalion sergeant major; Sergeant Frank Lewis, regimental quartermaster sergeant; Burt Kenyon, commissary sergeant major; John N. Lee, battalion sergeant major; Charles E. French, battalion hospital steward; Arthur G. Gran, hospital steward; Arthur L. Ward, hospital steward; George C. Bland, steward; Charles C. Towers, chief musician; Robert Smith, chief musician; Arthur Bidwen, principal musician.

Officers

Company A—Capt. W. S. McWade, First Lieut. Roy Reaney, Second Lieut. John Donaldson.

Company B—Capt. F. B. Rowley, First Lieut. H. L. Keller, Second Lieut. Dan P. Fitzgerald.

Company C—Capt. Clarence G. Bunker, First Lieut. John P. Snow, Second Lieut. Charles E. Mead.

Company D—Capt. Daniel Cheney, First Lieut. Julius Stuhlmacher, Second Lieut. Edward Cuffe.

Company E—Capt. Charles T. Spear, First Lieut. John A. Clarke.

Company F—Capt. William A. Carlson, First Lieut. Harold Thompson, Second Lieut. Martin O. Teel.

Company G—Capt. Oscar Seebesh, First Lieut. W. Hellquist, Second Lieut. C. J. Anderson.

Company H—Capt. Alfred W. Ilerstatter, First Lieut. Frank C. Sauter, Second Lieut. Edward Kelly.

Company I—Capt. Frank C. Corriston, First Lieut. William J. Dowling, Second Lieut. Harry C. Cassingham.

Company K—Capt. Austin M. Conrad, First Lieut. John Wallis, Second Lieut. George H. Grant.

Company L—Capt. Alfred S. Morgan, First Lieut. Harry D. Lackore, Second Lieut. Thomas Scott.

Company M—Capt. James E. McCrory, First Lieut. Frank A. Boyd, Second Lieut. Henry E. Limpert.

Enlisted Men.

Clarence H. Carleton, Eugene Hanscom, Carroll W. Pierce, Charles D. Thompson, Harry F. Kennedy, Charles L. Thomas, Bert Stetchen, Richard N. Cole, William H. Mahoney, Walter C. Gilmore, Harry Christensen, Frank E. Force, Llewellyn W. Jones, Ralph Gilbert, Hollen B. Gulbert, Harry E. Anderson, Archer S. Hall, Arthur Hanson, Ernest Armstrong, Otelo H. Hemmes, Albert Carl Wilson, Bagley, Otis G. Bates, Howard B. Hall, Frank W. Kennedy, Thomas H. Fredrickson, Joseph A. Duckendorf, Sevar B. Hallenbeck, Jesse C. Cornell, Robert L. H. Crugle, Harrison Dean, William W. Hall, Frank Hoffman, Edwin Bjorn, Edward Wilhelm, Wilbur B. Peterson, William W. Hinman, James Gilbert, Albert Hallenbeck, William H. Lemmon, Albert Milenkecky, Henry Myers, Willard B. Hall, Alvin D. Miller, Jay C. Medlenick, Bertie Nelson, William Olander, Harry Hanson, Fay G. Hussers, Samuel Pickard, Chester H. Simmons, Charles H. Hanson, Frank Hanson, Ole Hanson, Frank Hanson, Ole Williamson, Joseph Hanson, Charles E. Whaite, Alfred G. Hanson, John E. Connolly, Charles G. Hines, Bertram G. Dickinson, Hal Downey, Frank Hanson, Hans Hansen, Harry Herring, Frank O. Holm, James P. Kell, Frank M. Lane, William McGinn, Michael H. Moran, John J. O'Loughlin, Horace W. Rice, Edward Schmidt, Frank Schmidt, Edward Schmidt, Patrick A. D. Runyan.

Allen C. Sheppell, Bruce H. Bauer, Charles H. Law, John H. W. Colvy, Otto Schmidt, Henry M. Adams, George F. Bishop, Lyndon R. Emory, Orrin P. Hamilton, Charles Moses, Andrew Smith, Charles W. Plescher, Emery Hall, Frank Hall, Samuel O. Abrams, John G. Hinz, Samuel O. Abrams, John Schuster, Samuel Abrams, Albert Wernerson, Joseph Bedard, Alfred Bedard, John Bowe, Thomas E. Campbell, Oren L. Cole, Emil Carlson, Alva G. Colburn, Charles E. Dickinson, Edgar Mitchell, James J. Coats, Harry W. Collins, Edward Cole, Frederick E. Idlington, Hamond, Thomas P. Graham, Joseph Hanson, Charles A. Hanson, Charles Hanson, Peter Hanson, Frank Hanson, Hunter, George H. Knowles, Louis P. Lawrence, James G. Lynch, Darwin H. Mead, Frank Mahoney, Alfred Mahoney, Fred C. Mitchell, William Mahoney, Jesse Mahoney, Roy L. Powers, Emel C. Preis, Wilson L. Rowley, Joseph Rogers, Charles Rogers, Frank Schoengy, Jesse S. Smith, Henry C. Seymour, John E. Ugstad, Peter Ugstad, Senaug. Martin Welch, Herbert Wilson, Lewis Williams, Hugh Worden, Herman Weiss, John Wilson, Christian Johnson, William Johnson, Frederick Johnson, Charles Johnson, Emil Johnson, Frank Johnson, Charles Johnson, Frank Johnson, M. Morgan, Frank D. Scott, Albert E. Hanson, George H. Shumway, Adolph Sprague, Frank Spaulding, Augustus Sorenson, Harry J. Thum, Jirk J. Van, George H. Wilcox, William E. Wyman.

Guy H. Thayer, George K. Sheppard, Fred Thompson, Frank Thompson, Frank John L. Phillips, Walter E. De Lamere, Charles E. Mitchell, Frank Burnaugh, Grover Crowford, Walter John E. Sweeney, Joseph S. Groh, Robert J. Shaughnessy, William Frank Cooper, Frederick A. Anderson, Charles M. Barlow, Harry Martin Munson, Herbert E. Rossner, Hubert C. Shannon, George A. Smith, Ira B. Smith, Henry M. Worthy.

Alexander J. Kaibert, Christian A. Ilsaer, John H. Kroh, Lewis H. Lawton, George C. Jackson, John G. Peshley, Albert W. Henschel, Lewis A. Mies, Jacob Mies, Frank Mies, Frank Mies, Frank Crowford, John Burton, John E. Sweeney, Joseph S. Groh, Robert J. Shaughnessy, William Frank Cooper, Frederick A. Anderson, Charles M. Barlow, Harry Martin Munson, Herbert E. Rossner, Hubert C. Shannon, George A. Smith, Ira B. Smith, Henry M. Worthy.

Hans D. Fifield, William C. Fitch, John J. Flynn, Robert O. Glanville, Thomas Hardwell, Robert Hamp, James Hartley, Isaac S. Hull, Royal E. Horton, Arthur E. Jerome, John M. C. Johnson, Wirt R. Kelley, Henry N. Klein, Charles H. Lacey, George S. Landon, Walter W. Lange, Charles J. Lark, Joseph E. Malley, Henry C. Lorkin, Patrick J. McGee, William H. Moe, Alexander L. Mitchell, Ingolf J. Offerdahl, Walter A. Proctor, Fred C. Patterson, Ralph B. Pierce, Henry S. Schooley, Frederick W. Schutte, Carl J. Sjoberg, William J. Thoen, Jacob J. Weber, Harold W. Whitcomb, Frank Wilfinger, Frank J. Bruder, Samuel Cummings, Harry C. Seiler, Adolph Gerhardt, Henry Greenlee, Charles Hall, Clarence Hayes, Edward P. Fitzgerald, Wilson H. Holmes, Herman C. Hillman, Jacob A. Hamm, Otto F. Klein, Walter E. Lacey, Walter Lacey, Henry C. Larkin, Patrick J. McGee, Albert J. Matthews, Chris Nilson, Gabriel Mohr, Abram K. Sleeger, Frank H. Weeckers.

Company C.

Tuswell S. Bunker, Howard E. Goss, Thomas C. Fernald, Jr., Jay C. Price, Elmer C. Hemphrey, William C. Montgomery, Charles B. Meeches, Will am A. Jones, Peter H. Hart, John H. Brandhorst, Harry E. Anderson, Andrew Oleyerg, Karl G. Johnson, Arthur Ellis, Charles H. Baker, Jr., Ralph E. Billings, Frank Bowers, Jr., Frank Bowers, Sr., Ogden, Edward P. Fitzgerald, Oliver Fremell, Myron H. Fuller, George W. Fuller, Frank Gerrish, Fred C. Goss, Alfred G. Haserty, Theodore C. Hessman, Frank E. Hoskely, Thomas Hart, Oscar J. Johnson, William A. Kimball William Earth, Lewis Lamphere, Charles Lewis, Charles H. Finks, Edward D. Lyons, Frank Mahoney, Jr., Frank Mahoney, Sr., John McArthur, Joseph A. Mahoney, Edward Olsen, Oscar E. Pearl, Louis Pearl, Edward Pearl, Jr., Frank Pearl, George P. Smith, John Sweeney, Fred Williams, Simon P. Beech, John D. Cessna, Frank L. Hoskely, Edward Olsen, Clarence Hayes, David H. Kriebelbecker, James P. Nash, Truman C. Moorehouse, Charles Nuces, Maxmus Ops, Frank Prendergast, Wallace A. Rosie, Otto H. Swanson, Herbert F. Sperry, Charles J. Wren, Frank Wilson, Arthur W. Bidwen, John Cain, Charles M. Woodworth, Allan T. Williams.

Company D.

James B. Stalford, Murrelle, E. Gates, James G. Peterson, Julius J. Swanson, Gustav A. Prinsell, August Conrad, Ivar Anderson, Frank S. Bonine, George A. Bryson, Gustav A. Bruns, Wesley Beedle, Carl H. Bjorkquist, Daniel Boyer, Benjamin F. Chilson, Charles Dahl, Henry Dreesing, Malcolm Gale, Dan Hoey, Henry Hoeting, Adolph Hoeting, Frank Hoeting, Edward Kuhn, Gustav Kuhn, Gus Juhne Goebes, Frank A. Green, Frank Gregory, Wilford Hoff, Albert B. Hanson, Milton W. Hingsley, James Hanson, Frank Hanson, Henry Hanson, Lawrence J. Landry, Harry Lake, Victor Ringgenberg, Dirt Jabbey, Walter W. Hatch, Harry J. Moore, George Anderson, Fred Hubberty, Frederick Hubbard, Richard Gehm, Julius L. Hoeschscheidt, Andrew Hoeschscheidt, Frank Hoeschscheidt, Fred Hasting, Jr., Paul Hubberty, Frederick Hubbard, Johnny Gehm, Frank Hoeting, August J. Ahrns, Eugene Loraney, Mark Lemke, Frank Lemke, Edward Lemke, John L. Lemke, Fred W. Louis, Edward Lemke, Jr., Fred Lemke, Edward Lemke, Frederick Ibert W. Rose, Frank Nuemberg, William C. Osgood, John P. Olson, Nels Olson, William Nelson, Phil Powell, George W. Peterson, Frank Pratt, Frank W. Patterson, Frank Mather, Richard Hubbard, Richard Gehm, E. Redmann, Martin Rieder, George H. Rieder, Frederick Rieder, Jr., Frank Rieder, Frank Prendergast, Fred Pratt, Sigel Pratt, Henry Stellos, Gustav Stellos, Frank Stellos, Gustave Stellos, John Torke, Henry Trevisonte, James P. Walsh, John Walsh, William H. S. Wood, Frank Wood, Frank D. Whiting, Fred W. Zertler, Otto Zertler, Martin Zertler, Jr., Martin Zertler, Carl Casper, Andrew Benzel, Hanns Fiuck, George Fiuck, Frederick Fiuck, Jr., Frank Fiuck, Frank Lemke, Frank Lemke, Edward Lemke, Edward P. Mithke, James O'Hara, Frank Mather, Philip Wilhelm, Harry Schmidt, Ramer, Dayone Robbins, Peter H. Schoumacher, Charles Schoumacher, Everett Wells.

DEAD AND WOUNDED.

Killed in Action.

Private Maurice P. Beaty, company C, Manila, Aug. 13, 1898.

Jesse C. Cole, company F, April 10, 1899, Manila.

Frederick W. Beckendorf, May 4, 1899.

Died.

Maj. Arthur M. Diggles, May 26, 1899.

Sergeant Frank Lewis, company G, Sept. 15, 1899.

Archibald B. Patterson, musician, company [illegible].

Died.

Sergeant Marion M. Chisholm, company E, gunshot, Dec. 18, 1898.

Jesse B. Cole, company F, Manila, Dec. 3, drowned Aug. 2, 1899.

Timothy Sullivan, private company B, electric shock, August 11, 1899.

Died.

Company A.

Private Sidney Perst, Aug. 24, 1898.

Harvey L. Carrier, Sept. 10, 1898.

Corporal Clayton Corry, Jan. 3, 1899.

Company B.

Private Albert W. Olson, Jan. 25, 1899, Caloocan.

Private Joseph O. Daley, Oct. 3, 1898.

Private Frank Bowers, Jr., Feb. 8, 1899.

Harry G. Wallis, Aug. 25, 1898.

Harry Wallis, Aug. 25, 1898.

John E. Ryan, July 14, 1899.

Company C.

Private Lewis B. Pudden, Aug. 6, 1898.

Jay C. Price, Feb. 23, 1899.

Fred C. Prinson, June 24, 1898.

Company D.

Private Sidney L. Garrett, Nov. 4, 1898.

Verne E. Taggart, Aug., 1899.

Company E.

First Lieutenant Frank A. Morley, Aug. 30, 1898.

Company F.

Sergeant Robert L. Van Emar, Feb. 20, 1899.

Company G.

Corporal William W. Ray, May 30, 1899.

Private Frank Lewis, Sept. 15, 1899.

Verne A. Barker, Feb. 23, 1899.

Company H.

Private Paul D. Rhode, June 3, 1899.

Company I.

Private Willam Sullivan, July 12, 1898.

Harry F. Wright, Aug. 6, 1899.

Frank F. Weirauch, Oct. 3, 1898.

Frank Wright, Aug. 6, 1899.

Company K.

Corporal Charles H. Cooper, Aug. 10, 1899.

Private Frank Hoffman, Aug. 10, 1899.

Bandmaster Charles H. Watson.

Company L.

Joseph Walsh, private Company L.

William J. Worthington, private Company L.

Capt. Sabbouh.

Lieut. Burnhart.

Lieut. Bunker.

Sergeant-Sergeant Eugene Hanscom, Corporal Hollen P. Jones, Corporal Carroll W. Pierce, Corporal Charles D. Thompson, Harry Anderson, Nicholas Hansen, Sergeant Albert Erickson.

Sergeant-Sergeant Albert Erickson, Sergeant George F. Stoppenel, Private Frederick Thomas, Leonard A. Porter, Edward P. Thomas, Paul Irwin, Private Wagner, Sergeant Dugan, Harvey Charles [illegible].

Company K—[illegible] Corporal Harry M. Smith, Sergeant William H. Burlingham, Private Louis Ulmer, George Kral, William J. Jones, Benjamin Charles Bey, Arthur Harvey, Charles Hewett.

Company L—Private Charles Ahlen, Gen, Robert L. C. Gelb.

Company M—Privates E. J. Fehr, Oscar Frykman.

James A. Hughes, William M. Hustine, James H. Keene, Gilbert Kerney, Homer C. Kimpon, [illegible], Nathan N. Lewis, Charles A. Scott, John Lumman, [illegible], Charles F. Andrews, Charles Bowman, Joseph Bowman, Asel Olson, [illegible], Frank Olson, Peter C. Parmer, Charles W. Parmer, Russell, Clibert W., Brookender, Ray A. Smith, Albert Spaulding, Charles Stevens, Joseph Shoquin, William [illegible], Charles Stokes, Joseph Stevens, [illegible], Frank Sampson, Benjamin [illegible], Frank Wilson, Walter Wadsworth, [illegible], Fred Washburn, Grace A. Rutherford, Otto A. Hanson, Arnut, William George Lowenbrook, Albert Strong, Arthur L. Chambers, Clark E. Conners, Harvey C. Downs, [illegible], Frank Downs, William R. Fuller, Oscar Kurst, Stephen Lavergren, [illegible], Charles Stokes, Joseph Stevens, [illegible], Frank Land, Edward F. Mcculllin, Thomas A. Lamm, Lafon Preston, Thomas [illegible], Spindler, Ernest Thompson.

Company M.

Arthur R. Neyhart, Harry B. Shaw, Frank Lamson, Charles A. Scott, John E. Dennison, Jacob Gerhardt, Norman [illegible], Cavan, Oliver Cowan, Frank Cowan, Fred Cowan, Jr., Fred Cowan, Sr., Frank Cowan, Gust Anderson, [illegible], Albert Anderson, Ingman, Joseph, Charles Calhan, Haworth Christensen, [illegible], Vinney, Harry C. Downs, [illegible], Frank Davis, Henry Endewardt, Ernest Eggen, [illegible], Frank Fuller, Arthur H. Gerrish, William Handley, Charlie Hanson, [illegible], Thomas Hanson, [illegible], Frank A. Nesbitt, Henry S. Sewall, Jerry T. Sullivan, Frank Sullivan, Edward Smith, John Sullivan, Arthur S. Smith, John [illegible], Bullock, Reverend S. Stevens, Thomas [illegible].

Company [illegible].

Iver M. Engebretson, Charles C. Maddison, Herbert W. Getchell, William H. Harrison, Joseph J. Spooner, Edward J. Hayner, Henry M. Fischer, Frederick Hoffman, Frank Hess, Harry C. Mickley, George E. French, Walter H. Hall, Frank Hoffman, Edward Hoffman, Jr., Edward Hoffman, Sr., Frank Hoffman, Jr., Robert Edward Hoffman, Peter Brimmelbarger, James P. Brown, William N. Jones, William Wilson, John Bowl, William J. Cox, Richard Hubberty, Frederick Hubbard, Richard Gehm, John Gehm, Julius L. Hoeschscheidt, Andrew Hoeschscheidt, Frank Hoeschscheidt, Fred Hasting, Jr., Paul Hubberty, Frederick Hubbard, Johnny Gehm, Frank Hoeting, August J. Ahrns, Eugene Loraney, Mark Lemke, Frank Lemke, Edward Lemke, John L. Lemke, Fred W. Louis, Edward Lemke, Jr., Fred Lemke, Edward Lemke, Frederick Ibert W. Rose, Frank Nuemberg, William C. Osgood, John P. Olson, Nels Olson, William Nelson, Phil Powell, George W. Peterson, Frank Pratt, Frank W. Patterson, Frank Mather, Richard Hubbard, Richard Gehm, E. Redmann, Martin Rieder, George H. Rieder, Frederick Rieder, Jr., Frank Rieder, Frank Prendergast, Fred Pratt, Sigel Pratt, Henry Stellos, Gustav Stellos, Frank Stellos, Gustave Stellos, John Torke, Henry Trevisonte, James P. Walsh, John Walsh, William H. S. Wood, Frank Wood, Frank D. Whiting, Fred W. Zertler, Otto Zertler, Martin Zertler, Jr., Martin Zertler, Sr., Carl Casper, Andrew Benzel, Hanns Fiuck, George Fiuck, Frederick Fiuck, Jr., Frank Fiuck, Frank Lemke, Frank Lemke, Edward Lemke, Edward P. Mithke, James O'Hara, Frank Mather, Philip Wilhelm, Harry Schmidt, Ramer, Dayone Robbins, Peter H. Schoumacher, Charles Schoumacher, Everett Wells.

DEAD AND WOUNDED.

Killed in Action.

Private Maurice P. Beaty, company C, Manila, Aug. 13, 1898.

Jesse C. Cole, company F, April 10, 1899, Manila.

Frederick W. Beckendorf, May 4, 1899.

Died.

Maj. Arthur M. Diggles, May 26, 1899.

Sergeant Frank Lewis, company G, Sept. 15, 1899.

Archibald B. Patterson, musician, company [illegible].

Died.

Sergeant Marion M. Chisholm, company E, gunshot, Dec. 18, 1898.

Jesse B. Cole, company F, Manila, Dec. 3, drowned Aug. 2, 1899.

Timothy Sullivan, private company B, electric shock, August 11, 1899.

Died.

Company A.

Private Sidney Perst, Aug. 24, 1898.

Harvey L. Carrier, Sept. 10, 1898.

Corporal Clayton Corry, Jan. 3, 1899.

Company B.

Private Albert W. Olson, Jan. 25, 1899, Caloocan.

Private Joseph O. Daley, Oct. 3, 1898.

Private Frank Bowers, Jr., Feb. 8, 1899.

Harry G. Wallis, Aug. 25, 1898.

Harry Wallis, Aug. 25, 1898.

John E. Ryan, July 14, 1899.

Company C.

Private Lewis B. Pudden, Aug. 6, 1898.

Jay C. Price, Feb. 23, 1899.

Fred C. Prinson, June 24, 1898.

Company D.

Private Sidney L. Garrett, Nov. 4, 1898.

Verne E. Taggart, Aug., 1899.

Company E.

First Lieutenant Frank A. Morley, Aug. 30, 1898.

Company F.

Sergeant Robert L. Van Emar, Feb. 20, 1899.

Company G.

Corporal William W. Ray, May 30, 1899.

Private Frank Lewis, Sept. 15, 1899.

Verne A. Barker, Feb. 23, 1899.

Company H.

Private Paul D. Rhode, June 3, 1899.

Company I.

Private William Sullivan, July 12, 1898.

Harry F. Wright, Aug. 6, 1899.

Frank F. Weirauch, Oct. 3, 1898.

Frank Wright, Aug. 6, 1899.

Company K.

Corporal Charles H. Cooper, Aug. 10, 1899.

Private Frank Hoffman, Aug. 10, 1899.

Bandmaster Charles H. Watson.

Company L.

Joseph Walsh, private Company L.

William J. Worthington, private Company L.

Capt. Sabbouh.

Lieut. Burnhart.

Lieut. Bunker.

Sergeant-Sergeant Eugene Hanscom, Corporal Hollen P. Jones, Corporal Carroll W. Pierce, Corporal Charles D. Thompson, Harry Anderson, Nicholas Hansen, Sergeant Albert Erickson.

Sergeant-Sergeant Albert Erickson, Sergeant George F. Stoppenel, Private Frederick Thomas, Leonard A. Porter, Edward P. Thomas, Paul Irwin, Private Wagner, Sergeant Dugan, Harvey Charles [illegible].

Company K—[illegible] Corporal Harry M. Smith, Sergeant William H. Burlingham, Private Louis Ulmer, George Kral, William J. Jones, Benjamin Charles Bey, Arthur Harvey, Charles Hewett.

Company L—Private Charles Ahlen, Gen, Robert L. C. Gelb.

Company M—Privates E. J. Fehr, Oscar Frykman.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal,

By N. S. GORDON.

2.00 Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston Minnesota, as second-class matter.

THE Red Lake County Courier a paper that we are always pleased to open, as it is a newsy, well edited sheet, has reached its majority, or in other words, it is a year old. We congratulate the Courier upon its progress during the past year, and feel sure that all kinds of success awwit it in the future.

Detroit Record: The Polk County Journal under the management of N. S. Gordon is setting a hot pace for the newspaper boys of northern Minnesota who wish to keep their papers at the head of the list. It is ably edited printed on fine book paper on a new Optimus press, folded, cut and pasted on the latest machinery used for that purpose and in every way is first-class and up to date.

A GREAT many papers are devoting a good deal of space to the law passed by the recent legislature, authorizing school boards to appoint truant officers to see that children are sent to school, but we have yet to hear of any such officers. Some of the laws on which legislatures waste their time ought to be hung up for curiosities.—Fergus Falls Journal. Truant officers would undoubtly benefit many school districts and if the trustees neglect to appoint them that is the fault of the trustees and not of the law.

THE Alexandria Post News has just added to its equipment a new Babcock Reliance Press and has changed the form of the paper to a six column, twelve page paper. The editor says he believes that in a short time he will have a newspaper that will compare favorably with the best Minnesota produces, but we are of the opinion that he has already reached that point. Not one of our exchanges is ahead of the Post News, which is particularly strong in its editorials.

MINNESOTA is forging ahead in matters agricultural. Nothing indicates this more than the increased attendance at the state agricultural school this fall, not merely of the young men, but particularly of the young women. Minnesota farmers are determined to do their work scientifically and to this end are sending their sons and daughters where they may study the latest methods and make experiments under the eye of specialists in all branches of agriculture.

THE Venezuelan arbitration commission have given their decision. Neither Great Britain nor Venezuela get what they claimed, still both sides are satisfied with the decision and are glad that the dispute of long standing is settled. It will be remembered that diplomatic relations between these two countries were severed for years and that at the time of Cleveland's bellicose message war between this country and Great Britain was thought to be imminent. It speaks well for the civilization of the Anglo-Saxons that this contention was peaceably settled.

IN an interview with Dr. Annand, of the State Board of health, published in this issue, we learned the situation with reference to the hog cholera in this part of the state. Unfortunately the disease has obtained quite a strong foothold and that such is the case, carelessness, on the part of some farmers, is the cause. Now, that this destructive disease may be stamped out, the law relating to the matter must be enforced and quarantine established where there is the least suspicion that cholers exists. No chances should be taken. If any one refuses to take necessary precautions his neighbors must forcehim to doso. This is a matter in which all farmers in this section ought to be vitally interested. Hog cholera must be gotten rid of and it can be if everything is done that should be done.

If the money subscribed by citizens for the Carnival were used solely in the interests of the public the financial statement of the secretary and the Carnival itself would show this. The fact, therefore, that the Times, in Saturday evening's issue, attempted to defend the actions of the managers and, in doing so, abused certain citizens who dared to differ from that paper, is anadmission that something was wrong with the management of the carnival. If what was done cannot speak for itself, then no words of theactors can right the matter. It looks very much as if the Times were trying to forestall merited adverse criticism. The flimsy attempt, also, of the Times, at the same time, to berate the Tribune as though the latter were a rival paper, is really farcical. The demand of the Tribune for "the financial statement of the Carnival committee" was a most reasonable one—even though it were a Times-Tribune combined effort—and the Times was merely using the right it has of slashing people over the head of the Tribune.

THE report showing the receipts and disbursements of money in connection with the Carnival and Stock show of 1899 has been published. The receipts were $8,105.50 and there remains in the treasury $270.07. The Times gets $403.45 for printing and advertising, the Tribune $125.50 for the same kind of work the Journal $18 and the People's Press $12.85 for advertising. Transportation, salaries and board for performers, exclusive of high diver, $510.06, the Midway $99.50 and the stock premiums $130.00. Adding the receipts of the Tribune to those of the Times—for that is where they really belong—it will be seen that $539.95, or almost one fifth of all the money spent, went into the pockets of the Times-Tribune publishing company. This bill is just about double what it ought to have been. We know whereof we affirm, for we have had years of experience in printing and in the management of fairs. Entertainment furnished by the "performers" and the Midway cost more than $600.00. Part of this so called entertainment was of a character not calculated particularly to edify or even amuse people, while in place of paying $99.50 to the Midway, this institution ought to have been forcibly ejected from the city as being a public disgrace. For stock premiums $130.00 were paid and this was the part of the Fair in which the farmers were interested. True, the storm prevented more stock from being brought in, still it is quite evident from what was done that this part of the Fair did not receive its due proportion of funds. The best part of the Carnival, in fact the only part that amounted to anything, was the floats the decorated carriages and other parts of the parades, and the expense of these was not borne by the managers. The secretary of the Carnival association may have, as the Times claims, "for every dollar expended a voucher so show for what purpose and to whom the order on the treasurer was drawn" and so far that is all right. But what the people wanted was that the money should have been expended for the public interest, and $600 for almost worthless performers and close to $600 to the Times for printing does not look as if the public had been specially taken care of. The Times says "the secretary was benefited to the extent of receiving the profits on $128 worth of advertising and $277 worth of job printing" and yet his "own business was neglected." There are a good many other business men who would like to neglect their business in the same way, or perhaps we would better say, would like to make as much profit within the same length of time, rather than in the same way.

A QUESTION involving the expenditure of between $80,000 and $90,000 of the people's money should be thoroughly studied and carefully thought over before being decided. It is only a few days over a month ago that the city council voted to put in macadam paving and at that time we know they knew very little about the matter, and since then they have not had time to give the subject an exhaustive study, as they should, for their own business, of necessity, has received most of their attention. It is certainly for the interests of the taxpayers to have this macadam laid as cheaply as possible and if lower bids than that of Mr. Kilmar's can be secured, in case bids are re-advertised for, and the council was assured of that fact last night, then it looks like throwing money away to give the contract to the Iowa man. And it would also appear as if four out of eleven councilmen were too few to decide the question as to who should get such a large city contract.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

—See A. G. Anderson for paints and oils.

—H. E. Ives was down from St. Hilaire Tuesday.

—John Goodsell, of Angus, was in Crookston Tuesday.

—A. G. Anderson is headquarters for pure drugs.

—Andrew Larsen was in from Fosston yesterday.

—Rev. Father Murphy, of Bemidji, was here Monday night.

—Have your prescriptions filled at Anderson's drug store.

—J. D. Sinclair, of Stephen, spent Tuesday night in the Queen city.

—Ira Richardson represented Thief River Falls in Crookston Tuesday.

—J. P. McKenna has opened up New Steam Dye Works at 305 Broadway.

—John Siegberg, of Edson, is the new proprietor of the Fosston House at Fosston.

—Miss Roney received word Sunday of the death of her father at Independence, Iowa.

—Cashier Ellington, of the Scandia Bank, went out on the St. Hilaire line Tuesday morning.

—J. B. Wildeman, of Grand Forks, was in the city yesterday visiting at the home of E. M. Walsh.

—S. C. Bagley and A. J. Lammers went out on the Fosston line yesterday to look after business interests.

—Chief of Police Conyea went to Bemidji yesterday morning where he will spend several days on his claim.

—Miss Maggie McKinnon left Tuesday night for St. Paul where she will attend school in a convent during the winter.

—A new track has been laid east of the old track that had to be torn up to make room for the new Great Northern station.

—Fire on the prairie about a dozen miles north of the city, last Saturday, licked up considerable hay that was in the stack.

—Geo. A. Ralph left for Hallock yesterday morning and expects to return this evening. Some surveying called him north.

—Ole Anderson, on Tuesday, stole from Mrs. Benson's house some clothes belonging to John Johnson. The police arrested the thief.

—The removing of the Great Northern station from the west end of Second street materially changes the appearance of the street.

—The Y. P. S. C. E., of the Presbyterian church will give an art exhibit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Vance tomorrow evening.

—George Johnson, a private in the regular army in the Philippines, arrived in Crookston Monday. Upon request he received his discharge from the army.

—E. M. Walsh in company with Mr. Knuppe of Netherland land company of St. Paul, drove out in the country yesterday to inspect some land.

—The saw mills shut down sawing with the rainy saw yesterday.

—John Ricketson, who has spent the summer in Crookston with his daughter, Mrs. N. S. Gordon, left Monday night for his old home in Penn. New York state.

—Messrs Amuth of Twin Valley, Lee, of Ada, and Daniels, whose home is about six miles east of this city, joined the hootenat the Crookston College this week.

—Fred Rasch, Albert Ganh, Chas. Kiewel, E. Rolsch and Walt. Buzzell, a hunting party that went out Saturday to Goose Lake returned Monday with a large number of birds.

—Miss Fontaine expects to organize dancing classes for children in a short time. While in California recently she learned all the latest dances which she is now prepared to teach.

—Sheriff Lawrence is spending part of his time these days in serving notice on the jurors for the coming session of the district court and in looking up those delinquent in personal taxes.

—There was considerable criticism of the way in which officer Simons, in charge of the Great Northern yards, behaved a man at the station Sunday night because the man refused to buy a ticket.

—In the timber culture land contest case of Otto Braus against Phillias Vary involving land on the Red river, the local land office on Tuesday gave a decision in favor of the defendant.

—Ed. Briggs was brought back from East Grand Forks Tuesday and placed in the county jail where he will serve out a sentence of 20 days for being too free in brandishing fire arms.

—A special train will be run to Fargo on the Morehead line of the Great Northern tomorrow morning, starting at 8 o'clock. The Crookston band will go down and help entertain the president.

—A hearing in probate court will soon be had in the estate of Erastus A. Deming, who died in the state of Connecticut. The land involved is the northwest quarter of section fifteen in the town of Fairfax.

—The Young People's Society of the Baptist church have formed a Christian Culture Class which will meet in the church parlors every Monday night. Biblical and other Sacred Literature will be studied and discussed.

—Tuesday afternoon a west bound passenger train passed through Crookston on its way to Fargo via Grand Forks. This train should have gone to Fargo via Glyndon, but a freight wreck on that line prevented.

—Rev. H. P. Fisher received a letter last Monday informing him that he had been appointed one of the public examiners of Carleton College at Northfield, Minn. His report will be made to the Congregational convocation of the state.

—Paul Sorenson, one of the oldest settlers in Polk county, has sold his farm in the town of Bygland and leaves this week for Oregon, where he will make his future home. He is going West for his health. His many friends in this section regret his departure.

—The manager of a threshing outfit in Norman county has had a lot of Indians working for him and through him or others the Indians received liquor and in their intoxication they became so violent that the people around where they were became frightened. The case will probably come up before Commissioner Mix soon.

—The ladies of South Crookston will give a "moderate of a high order" tomorrow night, at the Big Store," recently vacated. The proceeds will go towards putting in electric lights and purchasing more books. Free lunch will be run from city hall to the entertainment. Refreshments will be served immediately after concert.

—The Modern Brotherhood of America organized a new lodge in Crookston last Saturday night and elected these as officers: John McLean, President, Mrs. Spenzley, vice-president, G. S. Chesterman, secretary, G. A. Amundson, treasurer, Dr. Dampier, physician, Mrs. Strader, chaplain, E. J. Levague, conductor, Peter Huff, watchman, Job Dougherty, sentry.

—This afternoon Rev. Herman P. Fisher gives before the literature class in the high school a fifty minute address on Hawthorne. As Mr. Fisher is familiar with the different homes and haunts of this great writer, he will give the young people many interesting facts which they might not get from their text books. Next Sunday morning at the Congregational church the pastor will preach on "The Superiority of the Christian's Resources." The evening subject will be "Neutrality in Religion."

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the pinter's trade.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Makes the food more delicious and wholesome

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

An old shoe has its place but it is not upon the foot. Throw yours away and secure a pair of the celebrated

Kellogg, Johnson & Co's Shoes

Unequalled in retaining shape and in wear; luster and comfort All the fashionable shapes for street, dress or outing.

KELLOGG, JOHNSON & COLST, PAUL, MINN.

FOR SALE.

Imported Yorkshire Swine and Shropshire Sheep at reasonable prices.

For full particulars address

A. W. EDSON,
Austin, Minn.

S. C. Johnson's

Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale..... 35c
Oats, per bushel..... 28c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs..... 75c
Shorts, 100 lbs..... 65c
Bran, 100 lbs..... 60c
Shelled Corn, per bu..... 40c
Condition Powder, per pkg..... 25c
Shorts, per ton..... $12.00
Bran, per ton..... 10.00

Cedar Posts from 12½ to 15c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

TIME CARD —OF— TRAINS. Crookston

SOUTH BOUND.

No.	To	Leaves	Arr.
5	St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:32 pm	8:37 pm

NORTH BOUND.

No.	To	Leaves	Arr.
6	Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	6:20 a m	6:25 a m

C. A. SHURREY, Agt. Crookston, Minn. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A. St. Paul, Minn

THE GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE | Daily | Except Sunday | LEAVE
6.55 am Grand Forks, Neils and W. ext 7.00 am
9.00 am Mpls., St. Paul and points east 9.05 am
6.30 pm St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls 6.35 pm
4.35 pm Grand Forks, Bemidji, Duluth and Superior 7.20 am
6.45 pm St. Vincent to Fisher..... 8.00 am
9.35 am Fargo to St. Vincent..... 3.15 pm
8.30 am Fargo to St. Vincent..... 8.50 am

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
Homœopathic Physician AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block. Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5 over Farmers' & Merchants'.
Office hours—9 to 12 a. m. 1 to 3 p. m. 7 to 8 p. m.

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block. Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW.
Offices corner Broadway and Robert streets Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. LOANS FOR DESIRABLE FARM, TOWN AND MAIN INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice. Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday. Morning, 10:30, evening, 8:00. Holy Communion the First Sunday of every Month. Reader for the Week
REV. H. S. CHIRES, D. D.
Rector

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irous, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.
Crookston, Minnesota.

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

35 lbs Patent Flour for 1 bu. No. 1 Nor. Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

ED. ERICKSON,

DEALER IN

All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ... Season ...

Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides.

Stall fed Beef..... a Specialty

SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

CITY AND VICINITY.

—Fred Zaiser is the new clerk at L. I. Benoit's store.

—Miss Olive Tiedt was down from Euclid last Thursday.

—Miss Lela Oliver is assisting Dr. Robertson in his dental rooms.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. Walker, of Keystone spent last Friday in Crookston.

—Carl Schultz and daughter, of the town of Tabor, were in the city last Friday.

—These are the days when hundreds of men are starting for the lumber camps.

—L. C. McKnight, of Los Angeles, Cal., is visiting with old friends in this vicinity.

—Deputy Sheriff Losey was out near Beltrami last Friday foreclosing a mortgage.

—Mrs. E. V. McKnight, of Sheldon, N. D., is visiting with her sister, Mrs. L. E. Fontaine.

—Joe Buckman is building a new barn on Fourth street near the Northern Pacific station.

—R. McWalter one of the scientific farmers in the neighborhood of Mallory has a new barn 18x52.

—Dr. Hennult, of Fosston, filed on a claim last Friday at the United State land office in this city.

—C. C. Huch has rented the house on Ash street where Mrs. and Miss Bunnell have lived. The latter take rooms in the Fournet block.

—M. O. Sortedahl, of Red Lake Falls, was at Kenyon in the southern part of the state last week to attend the funeral of his father.

—David D. Geddes, of Keystone, has completed the erection of a new dwelling house on his farm, the main part being 22x24 and the addition 14x14.

—Harry B. Hanna, of Nesbit, leaves this week for York, Benson county, N. D. where he will spend the winter on a homestead, and prove up in the spring.

—Frank McVetchi, one of the prosperous farmers in the town of Hunsville, has recently increased the number of his farm buildings by erecting a large barn.

—A. H. Hill, and her sister, Mrs. W. H. Bradish and the latter's husband, all from Springfield, Ill., are visiting at Mrs. Wheeler's home on Houston Avenue.

—James Lee, of Mallory, has recently erected a new barn on his farm 28x50 with 18 foot posts and a new granary 16x36. This is good evidence of thrift and enterprise.

—D. Bain, engaged in the agricultural business two and one-half miles northwest of Mallory, and who, by the way, is an expert in his line, has a handsome new residence, 16x22.

—E. P. Bement, who spends the summer in the country and the winter in the city, leaves his farm near Mallory this week for St. Paul. Mrs. Bement left about two weeks ago.

—H. Gendron, of Gentilly, was transacting business in the city last Friday. As a consequence his patrons out east will have some new goods from which to select their purchases.

—William Rooney and family from Southern Minnesota reached Crookston last week and have settled in the city for the winter. Next year Mr. Rooney will work a farm in this vicinity.

—Brigadier Wm. Halpin, commander of the Mid-western Division of the Salvation Army, and Ensign Gross, formerly of Crookston, had charge of the Salvation Army services here last Sunday.

—J. R. Jones, of White Earth Reservation, who was passing through Crookston last Friday on his way home from the west had the misfortune to have one of his four horses drop dead on the street.

—Gus Olson, of Huntsville, is one of the farmers of Polk county who is enthusiastic over the question of animal industry. Being within about three miles of Fosston Forks he sells large quantities of milk in that city.

—Edward Clint, of Key West, has lately increased the capacity of his barn by building thereto an addition, size 16x28. He has also re-sided his dwelling house and intends to put under it a new brick foundation.

—Robert Olson and C. Booth have bought Martin Larson's stock of goods from Receiver Lewis Ellington. The groceries they sold to Peterson & Wickstrom, and the confectionery, fruit, etc., part of the business they are carrying on at the old stand.

—David Wills is one of those enterprising soil tillers in Northwestern Polk who believes in keeping right up with the procession. Not long ago in order to keep up with his own prosperity he found it necessary to build a new barn 30x64, with 20 foot posts.

—William Apple, of Keystone, is improving his farm of 240 acres by erecting thereon a good sized house, the main part of which is 16x20 the addition 12x18, with 14 foot posts. P. Johnson is doing the plastering and the house will be ready for occupancy in a short time.

—Joe Purvis, of Euclid, was in the city Monday.

—George Nelson was down from Euclid Monday.

—Hog cholera is prevalent to some extent in Norman county.

—J. B. Roome was in from his well-tilled farm last Saturday.

—Ole Hexom, of East Grand Forks, has been granted a pension.

—Miss Amelia Andrist left Saturday night for a visit with relatives in Ada.

—Mrs. Conger, of Northwood, Iowa, has been the guest of her son J. P. Foote.

—M. R. Brown is again in charge of the Great Northern stock yards at Larimore.

—J. P. McDonald and H. Ambrose, of Climax, were Crookston visitors last Saturday.

—Mrs. H. R. Nolan returned from Fertile Sunday morning after a week's visit with relatives.

—E. K. Green will clerk for S. Bisazza, who opens up his store on Robert street next Monday.

—H. T. Murray and wife have returned from their trip to southern Minnesota and points in Iowa.

—Considerable of the material to be used in putting in the new steam heating plant can be seen in different parts of the city.

—Extra men are employed these days in taking care of the numerous engines stalled in the round house in South Crookston.

—Richard Plumb, who has lived in Fisher for nearly 30 years, has sold out his business and intends going back to England.

—Earnest Rock, of this city, has gone up to St. Hilaire, and for the rest of the season will act as setter in the saw mill there.

—Mail on Sunday is now delivered by the carriers at their respective windows in the post office from 9 to 10:30 in the morning.

—Mrs. H. Wallman, of Red Wing, is visiting at the home of Christ Eikhoff of this city. She leaves in a few weeks for Winnipeg.

—According to what the threshers say the average yield of wheat in the territory tributary to Fisher will be eight bushels to the acre.

—Red Lake Falls will be put on the high school as soon as the new building is completed and other minor requirements complied with.

—Earl Marcum writes from Chicago, where he is studying medicine, that he has lots of work. Every day he witnesses several surgical operations.

—The four-year-old daughter of Ed. T. Torgerson, of the town of Sletten, who was accidently shot two weeks ago, died last week of a hemorrhage.

—Alfred Holt, of McIntosh, recently began work in the railroad shops of the Great Northern in Crookston. His ultimate aim is to be an engineer.

—A. G. Lockman, who for the past six years has been Great Northern yardmaster in Grand Forks has been transferred to Crookston, where he has charge of a train running out of the city.

—Young Bolstad, of the town of Garden, was severely injured one day last week. He was driving a load of grain to Fertile and in some way fell from the wagon one of the wheels striking his head.

—At the United States land office on Tuesday 120 acres of agricultural land was sold at public auction and the Thief River Falls Lumber company at the same time bought $2,400 worth of pine land.

—Captain Robt. Ritleson, of the Steamer Viking on the lake near Thief River Falls, accidentally shot him, last Friday, in the head. He was brought to Bethesda hospital in Crookston Monday night.

—Joseph A. Lobinger Company I Clerk of Co. C., North Dakota Regiment, and one of the three Grand Forks young men, who represented that city at Manila, passed through the city Sunday night on his way to St. Paul. He expects to be in Fargo tomorrow.

—D. N. Sprout, who lives in the town of Huntsville, is one of the large stock farmers of the county. He has a magnificent herd of 40 head of pure bred Jerseys and still he is unable to supply with milk all his Grand Forks patrons. He has recently erected a large stock barn, 32x100 and 35 feet high.

—Rev. J. T. Bursett, who has been pastor of the United Lutheran church in Crookston for four years, resigned his pastorate last Thursday evening to accept a call to a church in Berlin Mills, New Hampshire. The members of his congregation and his many other friends in the city regret his departure.

—Judge Hagen, last Thursday, committed to the hospital at Fergus Falls a boy, Artie Arnold by name, from Tabor. The lad's mind became unbalanced as he was lead to believe that he had been the cause of the death of an insane man in that neighborhood whom he had been in the habit of worrying a good deal.

—H. B. Lanager was up from Climax last Saturday.

—J. Holten, of Fertile spent Saturday last at the county seat.

—W. R. Shields is the new proprietor of the St. James Hotel.

—C. L. Gullikson was in from Beltrami on business last Saturday.

—J. D. McPhee and wife, of Lockhart were in the city last Saturday.

—M. Anderson, of Russia, transacted business in the city last Saturday.

—The Schubert Concert Company at the M. E. church next Tuesday night.

—Bishop Morrison, of Duluth, preached at the Episcopal church last Sunday.

—Miss Lena League, began teaching school near Erskine last Monday morning.

—Mrs. Joe Powers, of Langdon, N. D., has been spending the week at the home of Mrs. A. J. McClinon.

—George L. O'Neale was over from Buxton, North Dakota last Monday looking after his farm north of the city.

—The firm of Hoch & Vanstrum has dissolved and Hoch will continue the business at the old stand next the post office.

—Gus Schmidt, Tom Morris and Mr. Bowen went out to Goose Lake Saturday in search of game but nothing here in sight.

—W. E. Black, of Fosston, has entered the ranks of those who wear the ermine, in other words, he has become justice of the peace.

—Frank Magnan was in from Bemidji last Sunday. Work on the new hotel that he is building out there is progressing rapidly.

—W. J. Dent, of Minneapolis, one of the experts of the Northwestern Telephone exchange Company was in the city Saturday night.

—M. and H. E. Page left Tuesday night for Minneapolis Mr. Page has been, for several months, clerk at the Commercial Hotel.

—George Carpenter, of the firm of Larsen & Carpenter spent Monday at Fosston and McIntosh, looking after his business interests there.

—J. S. Nichols will sell his personal property at his farm near Fertile tomorrow. Mr. Nichols expects to make his future home in Illinois.

—A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Morris pleasantly surprised them last Friday evening and a most enjoyable time was spent by all.

—Before the probate court last Saturday there was a hearing on claims in the estate of John Struka, of the town of Tabor and also in the estate of C. O. Christianson.

—Hugh Robertson, cashier of First National Bank, and W. H. Bradish, of Springfield, Ill., left Monday morning for Cass Lake where they will spend a week fishing and hunting.

—The case of State vs. Chas. Anderson, in which Ed. Thomas, of Fosston, was the complaining witness came up before Judge McLean Monday and Anderson was bound over to the next district court.

—Sparks from an engine last Friday set fire to some barley still standing in the shock in the fields of the Crookston Experiment Station, but fortunately the farm hands put the fire out before much damage was done.

—Miss Ada Packard, stenographer for Finch & Smith, leaves next Saturday evening for her home at Wadena, where she will spend a week in visiting with the home folks and her brother Frank, who was a member of the 13th Minnesotas and has just returned from Manila.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Motz were entertained, last Friday night, at the home of W. G. Lytle, by the members of the Baptist church. During the evening a silver berry spoon was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Motz. The occasion was their departure from Crookston to Rock Island, Ill., where they will make their future home.

—Mrs. E. Ebbinghansen, of Grafton, N. D. and her two sons Chas. and Walter and daughter Myrtle reached the city last Friday for a visit with H. G. Ebbinghausen. Miss Myrtle left for St. Paul Sunday night. Walter Ebbinghausen is just back from Manila. He was a member of Co. C., North Dakota Regiment. He says that the general opinion that the soldiers have of General Otis is that he is too slow. The common name applied to Otis among the rank and file is "the Old Lady."

—Mrs. Frank Green (nee Miss Etta Coulter, of Mallory) has received word that her husband, Captain Frank Green, has been tendered the position of provost marshal of Cavite by General Otis and that he has accepted the same. It pays a salary of $2,000 a year, with house, horse, stationery and other requisites furnished, which makes the compensation equivalent to $2,500 a year. Mrs. Green will resign her position in the Grand Forks schools in a short time and join her husband in the Philippines.

—L. E. Gossman was at Gentilly last Tuesday.

—W. A. Case, of St. Hilaire, was in the city Tuesday.

—Koeppe's new block is almost ready for occupancy.

—Lou Cross from Warren was in the city Monday night.

—Surveyor Will Arnold went back to Hallock Tuesday morning.

—Henry Dudeen and daughter were down from Euclid yesterday.

—Geo. F. Stone went out to Bagley on business last Tuesday.

—Mrs. Dan McKinnon went down to Minneapolis Monday night.

—The Telephone Company received a number of new telephones this week.

—Don't pay too much for your coal. Call and see Vance & Stone and get their prices.

—John O'Grady, custom house officer at St. Vincent, spent Monday night in Crookston.

—Joseph Smith went to St. Paul Monday night to attend a meeting of the Grand Chapter of Masons.

—Mrs. W. E. Rowe and child returned last Monday morning from a month's visit in Minneapolis.

—Victor Magnusson recently back from the Klondike has gone to Akely to work in the saw mills there.

—Miss Minnie LaDue and Mrs. Rose Dow left for St. Paul where they will visit friends and relatives.

—House, 311 Fourth street, for rent or sale. Inquire at once of Mrs. H. E. Cooke, 314 Houston avenue.

—John Moorhead was over from the Forks Tuesday shaking hands with his numerous friends hereabouts.

—See Vance & Stone before you buy your winter's coal supply. They have all kinds of coal at the lowest prices.

—Marcus Johnson, of St. Paul, passed through the city Tuesday morning on his way to Red Lake Falls.

—Attorney F. C. Hilmer, of Thief River Falls, was in the city last Tuesday on legal business before Judge Watts.

—Good coal means solid comfort for these cold winter days and nights. Vance & Stone will give you the right article.

—Prof. W. R. Hoag, of the State University, spent Saturday and Monday in inspecting the ditches in the Red River Valley.

—Mrs. C. R. G. Poole and child are expected home this week from Bradley, N. D., where they have been visiting for the past five weeks.

—Dr. Boles, of Detroit, Mich., a nephew of Judge Watts, is in the city and will probably open up a dentist's office here in the near future.

—Application has been made to the probate court for the appointment of an administrator in the estate of Even Tuff of the town of Garden.

—The dispute as to who is the legal director of a certain school district near Euclid will come up for settlement before the court in East Grand Forks next Saturday.

—Two China men were taken through Crookston the latter part of last week from near the boundary line north of here to St. Paul to be tried for evading the Chinese exclusion law by coming into this country from Canada, and the result of the trial was that they must return to China.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....in the Northwest.

MEN'S SENSIBLE FALL AND WINTER SUITS AND OVERCOATS

When we say SENSIBLE we mean clothing that conform to the reasonable and manly styles of the day; clothing that is made of firm honest, all wool fabrics; clothing sewed together so that it will wear and hold its shape; clothing that is so lined that you would not hesitate to show the inside of it as quickly as you would the outside—splendid garments, each guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction—Make an exchange or take your money back if a garment doesn't fit or look just right.

Men's Guaranteed Suits, $8.00 to $25.00.
Men's Guaranteed Overcoats, $8.00 to $30.0.
Men' Good Suits and Overcoats as good as the other dealers "good Kind" $3.00 to $7.50

We are showing the largest stock of Men's Fur Coats in the State of Minnesota.

C. O. D. CLOTHING STORE

Ice is getting Cheap

Because the supply is more than equal to the demand at this season of the year.

Coal is getting Dear

at all other yards in the city except ours. Let us fill up your bins for you we will treat you right.

VANCE & STONE

CARY SAFE CO..

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

.....Manufacturers of.....

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

We Sell Cheap...

Big Sale on Outing Flannels, 20 to 30 per cent. reduction.

Men's Working Shirts, 75c value, for	.49
Men's Working Shirts 40c value, for	.25
Men's Working Pants, $1.25 value, for	.89
Men's Working Gloves, $1.50 value, for	1.00
Calico, 6c value, for	.04
Outing Flannel, 6c value, for	.04
Blankets, per pair, 75c value, for	.50

Also Special Bargains in Shoes and Underwear

New Store
New Goods
New Prices

The Strawbridge Co.

Opposite Hotel Crookston.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street

CROOKSTON, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

WILL BE REJECTED

ENGLAND'S REPLY TO KRUGER'S ULTIMATUM.

Hours Have Everything to Gain by Quick Action and Hostilities Are Likely to Begin at Any Time—Expected the First Battle Will Occur in the Vicinity of Mafeking.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—It cannot be doubted that England's reply will be a flat rejection of President Kruger's demands and that at the time set for an answer an actual state of war will exist.

Friday's cabinet council will have to deal with the military situation and parliament will have little else to do but to sanction the necessary credits.

Speculations as to the outcome of the crisis have now given way in the newspapers to the discussion of military and strategical matters.

As the British troops are landing in South Africa and are advancing to the front it is quite possible, according to the terms of the Boer ultimatum, that hostilities have already commenced, as Kruger has everything to gain by an instant advance. Until the arrival of the army corps it is probable the British will everywhere remain on the defensive.

Where Fighting Is Probable.

Looking at the complicated nature of matters it is almost useless to speculate at the present stage, but sharp fighting is likely to occur at Mafeking, where Colonel Baden-Powell is pluckily holding his exposed position. As the generals have decided not to attempt to hold the country north of Dundee the Boers will doubtless occupy Laings Nek and advance along the railway towards Glencoe and Dundee. These places, however, are considered quite safe against Boer attack.

The Daily Chronicle editorially says it is compelled to admit that the Boer ultimatum, unlikely worded as it is, makes war unavoidable.

Editorial articles in other papers generally express pity for President Kruger's precipitancy, which places the Transvaal technically in the wrong. The Standard says:

The Transvaal's worst enemies could hardly have supposed that its arrogance would lead it to such an extravagance.

Impossible to Withdraw Now.

The first minister to speak publicly regarding the ultimatum was Lord James of Hereford, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, who, speaking at Aberdeen, said:

"The government has done everything in its power to preserve peace. Apparently, however, diplomacy is ended and the hopes of peace are virtually destroyed, and that not by the action of the queen's government but by the Transvaal government. President Kruger has sent an ultimatum. If we were to withdraw our troops at his bidding we should suffer the greatest humiliation and the government would deserve to be hunted from office as craven cowards."

Lord James said he had intended before receiving the news of the ultimatum to take a different view of the position, but now nothing remains but to commend our cause to the God of battle and arms and implore his blessing upon the engagement about to be entered upon.

TRANSVAAL'S ULTIMATUM.

British Troops Must Be Removed or War Will Begin.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The Transvaal ultimatum, which is signed by W. J. Reitz, secretary of state, concludes with the following four demands:

First—That all points of outstanding difference be regulated by friendly recourse to arbitration or by whatever amicable way may be agreed upon by this government and her majesty's government.

Second—That all troops on the borders of this republic shall be instantly withdrawn.

Third—That all re-enforcements of troops which have arrived in South Africa since June 1, 1899, shall be removed from South Africa within a reasonable time, to be agreed upon with this government, and within the mutual assurance and guarantee on the part of this government that no attacks or hostilities against any portion of the possessions of the British government shall be made by this republic during the further negotiations within a period of time to be subsequently agreed upon between this government and her majesty's government will, on compliance therewith, be prepared to withdraw the armed burghers of this republic from the borders.

Fourth—That her majesty's troops which are now on the high seas shall not be landed in any part of South Africa.

Appended to the demands is a note giving Great Britain 36 hours in which to return an answer and containing:

"It desires further to add that in the unexpected event of an answer unsatisfactory being received by it within the interval, it will, with great regret, be compelled to regard the action of her majesty's government as a formal declaration of war, and will not hold itself responsible for the consequences thereof, and that, in the event of any further movement of troops occurring within the above-mentioned time, in a manner direction to our borders, this government will be compelled to regard that also as a formal declaration of war."

WARNING TO NATAL.

Cable From London Tells of the Proximity of War.

NEWCASTLE, Natal, Oct. 11.—A telegram received from the government says that war with the Transvaal will probably begin immediately. The premier felt it his duty to warn the people. A public meeting was held and it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the corporation.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

The federal court is in session at Duluth this week.

Ex-State Senator Eaton of Buffalo, Minn., editor of the Buffalo Journal, is dead.

The Episcopal church congress of the United States is in session at St. Paul this week.

The Minnesota state agricultural school has opened with the largest number in its history.

The timbers of the Penobscot mine, at Hibbing caved in and Homan Ojo, a workman, was instantly killed.

Governor Lind has set Oct. 29 as the date of execution of George Ferguson, Itasca county, Minn., murderer.

A train carrying a portion of the Thirteenth Minnesota narrowly escaped being thrown down a precipice near Medford, Or.

The difficulty between boss plumbers and employes at St. Paul has been settled, the bosses acceding to the demands of the men.

The contract for the extension of the public building at St. Paul has been awarded to Remington & Cox of St. Paul at their bid of $170,990.

Charles Le Claire, 36 years old and single, leaped from the Robert street bridge at St. Paul into the river and swam ashore. It is said he was intoxicated.

Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul was one of the principal speakers at the Marquette & Joliet banquet, Chicago, President McKinley was the guest of honor.

The Minnesota State Historical society will celebrate its semi-centennial Nov. 15. Bishop Whipple and President Cyrus Northrup will be the principal speakers.

Zebulon S. Skinner, a trusted employe of Eustis Bros., Minneapolis jewelers, is under arrest for systematically robbing the firm. James Brady was taken in as an accomplice.

In Duluth harbor the Bessemer boat John Neilson ran down her tug, the Sarah Thompson, drowning Engineer Harry Ellis, aged 40, a fireman. The rest of the crew took to the life raft and escaped.

Hon. Daniel Cameron, a pioneer of La Crescent and of the state of Minnesota, is dead, aged 79 years. From the time of the territorial days Mr. Cameron has been prominent in the public and private affairs of Minnesota.

August Trueman of Le Sueur, wrecking foreman on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, was fatally injured by a derrick car making repairs. He was about 60 years old and father of Colonel Trueman of the North Dakota regiment, which has just returned from the Philippines.

The Industrial Savings Bank of Minneapolis has been formally organized and will begin business on the morning of Oct. 12. President McKinley will be the first depositor in the bank. Governor Lind the second. Mayor Gray of Minneapolis is one of the organizers of the bank.

An appeal has been taken to the supreme court by the commissioners of the Ramsey county district court on the validity of the St. Paul additional school site of $112,000. The action prays for a speedy hearing and settlement of the case. The supreme court has set the hearing for Oct. 16.

Auditor Dunn is sending notices to the county auditors that the state's levy this year is 14 mills for the general fund. And that is the lowest in 18 years. Last year and several years before that it was 1.5 mills. It has not been as low as that since 1884, when the state abstract of 1885 said: The lowest levy was 1.1 mills in 1881.

Captain A. S. Crossfield, who has been on the retired list on account of an injury received in the battle of Stone River, has been promoted to be major of the Twenty-fourth regiment, which is now at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

At Jackson the grand jury returned an indictment against Albert Jones for murder in the first degree. He is charged with having murdered Andrew Peterson near Lakefield Dec. 21. W. L. Scott and James O'Farrel plead guilty to grand larceny in the second degree and O'Farrell was sentenced to the reformatory at St. Cloud and Scott to the state prison at Stillwater for two years and six months. Gilson pleaded not guilty to grand larceny in the second degree.

A party composed of officers of the National Steel company and others has been visiting the mines on the Mesaba range. The party was composed of L.C. Hanna of the firm of M. A. Hanna & Co. of Cleveland; William Reis, president; Henry Wicke, vice president, and F. H. Gilbert, managing operator of the National Steel company, and James McNaughton, superintendent of the Chapin mines, on the Mesaba range, which has lately been taken over by the National Steel.

WILL BRING A TEST CASE.

Iowa Volunteers Claim the State Owes Them for Their Term of Service.

DES MOINES, Oct. 11.—State officers announce that a test case will likely be brought against the state of Iowa by the four regiments of Iowa troops which entered the Spanish war. The discovery was made some time ago that the state military code provides that when troops are called into service by the governor under call of the president they shall be paid by the state at the same rate as troops of the United States army. The military men insist that under this the state must pay them for their entire term of service, whether or not the federal government does the same. If this position is sustained it would cost the state about $1,000,000 to make the payments.

A NOTABLE EVENT

CHICAGO DAY BANQUET AN ELABORATE AFFAIR.

Toasts Responded to by President McKinley, Premier Laurier of Canada and Vice President Mariscal of Mexico, Speeches of the Foreign Visitors Enthusiastically Received.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Chicago's great Auditorium, which has been the scene of so many notable events, never held a greater gathering than last night when the Chicago day banquet was held within its walls under the auspices of the fall festival committee. The great stage, upon which 1,000 people can easily find standing room, had been enlarged and a great floor built out over the seats of the parquet, quadrupling the floor space of the stage. The presidents, who was the guest of honor, sat at a raised table on the right of Melville E. Stone, the toastmaster.

Other distinguished guests were at the same table, among them being Vice President Don Ignacio Mariscal of Mexico, Premier Wilfrid Laurier of Canada, General John C. Black, Governor John R. Tanner, Mayor Carter H. Harrison, Senor Manuel de Aspiriz, Secretary Hay, Secretary Gage, Attorney General Griggs, Secretary Smith, Secretary Long, Secretary Hitchcock, Secretary Wilson, General David B. Henderson, Senator Penrose, Major General Wesley Merritt, Senator Shelby M. Cullom, Brigadier General Thomas M. Anderson, General Russell A. Alger, Senator W. E. Mason and Captain Joseph B. Coghlan.

The Speeches of the Evening.

After the introductory remarks of the toastmaster speeches of welcome were made by Governor Tanner, Mayor Harrison and Senator Cullom. The guests knew by their programmes who came next on the list of speakers and when the toastmaster rose to introduce the president who responded to the sentiment of "The Nation," he was greeted with cheers that for a time prevented his voice from being heard.

Following the address of the president, which was received with every manifestation of enthusiastic approval, Mr. Stone introduced Sir Wilfrid Laurier of Canada, who spoke on "The Dominion." The greeting which was accorded the premier of Canada as he arose to his feet was hearty in the extreme. A similar welcome was extended to Vice President Mariscal of Mexico, who responded to the toast, "The Republic of Mexico." Other speakers were Secretary of the Navy Long on "The Navy," Colonel E. H. Henderson of Iowa on "The Glories of the Grand Army of the Republic," and General Thomas M. Anderson, commander of the department of the Lakes, on "The Army."

CORNERSTONE LAYING.

Thousands of Spectators Witness the Ceremonies.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Surrounded by men who guide the diplomatic relations of three governments, and in the presence of thousands of spectators, President McKinley formally laid the cornerstone of the magnificent new federal building of Chicago. The event was the crowning feature of the week's celebration, marking the annual observance of Chicago day. Long before the hour set for the ceremonies the street surrounding the block on which the steel skeleton of the new building stands were packed from curb to curb with pushing, jostling people, anxious to get a glimpse of the nation's president and the distinguished visitors from other countries, while every window in the gaily decorated sky-scrapers surrounding the federal building, was a close advantage point. The honored visitors included Vice President Mariscal and party of Mexico, Premier Laurier of Canada and other notables of that country and members of President McKinley's cabinet.

Secretary Gage Presided.

Judge Christian C. Kohlsaat, president of the committee on ceremonies, introduced Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage as presiding officer of the cornerstone exercises. Prayer was offered by Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus and Postmaster General Smith followed with a brief address.

The president then stepped to the side of the uplifted mass of Illinois limestone, and taking a trowelful of mortar from the board, he threw it under the base of the stone. As he did so a band that was stationed in the reviewing stand played "The Star Spangled Banner," and as the notes of the national anthem were heard, the crowd again broke into cheers, the noise almost drowning the music. President McKinley then pronounced the stone set and resumed his seat as the workmen settled the stone in its place.

Senator William R. Mason was next introduced and made a brief address in behalf of the city of Chicago.

The day parade began to form at the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone of the federal building were being concluded. A contingent of the cornerstone ceremonies President McKinley and the presidential party, with other distinguished visitors, were escorted to the Union League club, where they partook of a hurried luncheon. Luncheon concluded, the presidential party were driven to their places in the line.

The spectacular feature of the festival, the parade of all nations, took place during the evening and was viewed by thousands, the streets in the down town district being literally a solid mass of humanity for the entire length of the parade. The parade, in which marched representatives of 14 countries, including Germany, Venezuela, Switzerland, Brazil, The Netherlands, Austria and Hungary, Scotland, Armenia and Assyria, Belgium, China, Italy and the United States, included nearly 40 floats, some of them extremely beautiful and novel.

GOMPERS ON TRUSTS

President of the Federation of Labor Objects to Drastic Legislation.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—A special to The Herald from Washington says:

Following close upon the declarations of labor leaders before the industrial commission in favor of trusts Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has written an editorial for the current number of the official organ of the Federation, which may have an important effect in tending to prevent the trust issue from assuming importance as a political issue.

Mr. Gompers takes strong ground against any anti-trust legislation in any form. He says he is convinced that the government is not capable of promoting the legitimate development and natural concentration of industry and that all the propositions to do so which have come under his observation would be beyond doubt react with greater force and injury upon the working people of the country than the trusts.

GREAT CORN CROP.

United States Ready to Sell All the World Will Buy.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—"This year's corn crop will be the largest in our history," said Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, who is in Chicago with the presidential party, "The total yield, it is estimated will be 2,300,000,000 to 2,400,000,000 bushels. There will be plenty for manufacturing and feeding, and we will have all the corn to sell that anybody wants to buy. To what extent the crop will be shipped abroad will depend largely upon the price. It will bring. The high prices offered for meats will incline the farmers to use their crop for feeding purposes."

TEN REGIMENTS FULL.

White Organizations Last Authorized Are Completed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Ten of the volunteer regiments last called out have been mustered into the full list and will be immediately prepared for transportation to the Philippines. These regiments are numbered from the Thirty-eighth to the Forty-seventh inclusive and embrace all the white regiments last authorized. Recruiting will be continued for the two colored regiments and it is expected that they will be fully organized during the present week.

The Transports Sighted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 10.—The transport Pennsylvania, bearing the Washington volunteers, has been sighted a short distance outside the Golden Gate.

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

DULUTH, Oct. 11.

WHEAT—Cash, No. 1 hard, 70½c; No. 1 Northern, 68¾c; No. 2 Northern, 66½c; No. 3, 65¾c. To Arrive—No. 1 hard, 70½c; No. 1 Northern, 68¾c. December, 69¼c. May, 74¾c.

FLAX—To arrive 71.125; October, $1.12½; December, $1.11½

Minneapolis Grain.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 11.

WHEAT—In store—No. 1 Northern, December, 69¾c; May, 71½c; old Oct., 69¾c. On the Track—No. 1 hard, 70½c; No. 1 Northern, 68¼c. No. 2 Northern, 65½c.

Stock City Live Stock.

STOCK CITY, Oct. 11.

HOGS—Market for best weak; 5@7½c lower. Range of prices $3.75@3.95; No. 1 Northern, 68¼c. No. 2 Northern, 65½c. To Arrive—No. 1 hard, 70½c; No. 1 Northern, 68¼c. December, 69¼c. May, 74¾c.

FLAX—To arrive 71.125; October, $1.12½; December, $1.11½

Minneapolis Grain.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 11.

WHEAT—In Store—No. 1 Northern, December, 69¾c; May, 71½c; old Oct., 69¾c. On the Track—No. 1 hard, 70½c; No. 1 Northern, 68¼c. No. 2 Northern, 65½c.

Stock City Live Stock.

STOCK CITY, Oct. 11.

HOGS—Market for best weak; 5@7½c lower. Range of prices $3.75@3.95; mixed, $3.80@3.90; heavy, $3.85@3.95; rough, $3.75@3.85; pigs, $3.90@4.00; bulk of sales, $3.80@3.90.

CATTLE—Market steady. Native steers, $4.00@5.40; cows and heifers, $2.50@4.50; Texas steers, $3.00@4.25; stockers and feeders, $3.00@4.50; calves, $3.50@6.00.

SHEEP—Market steady. Muttons, $3.50@4.00; lambs, $4.00@5.00; culls and bucks, $3.00@3.50.

Receipts: Hogs, 15,000; cattle, 1,000; sheep, 1,000.

South St. Paul Live Stock.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Oct. 11

HOGS—Market steady. Range of prices $3.90@4.05.

CATTLE—Market steady and good demand.

Sales ranged as follows: $3.25@3.75 for stockers; $3.75@4.00 for feeders; $3.50@4.00 for cows; $4.00@4.75 for mixed and butchers; $4.50@5.40 for steers.

SHEEP—Market steady. Sales ranged at $3.00@3.60 for lambs; $2.50@3.50 for sheep. $4.50 for ewes.

Receipts: Hogs, 4,000; cattle, 2,500; sheep, 3,000; calves, 500.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11

HOGS—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $3.90@4.15 for mixed and butchers' $4.10@4.30 for good heavy; $4.00@4.30 for rough heavy; $4.40@4.75 for lights.

CATTLE—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $3.40@5.60 for heavy steers; $3.75@4.25 for cows and heifers; $3.00@4.25 for feeders; $3.00@4.75 for stockers and feeders.

SHEEP—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $3.00@3.75 for lambs; $2.25@3.50 for sheep. $4.50 for ewes.

Receipts: Hogs, 40,000; cattle, 2,500; sheep, 24,000.

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11

WHEAT—December, 72¾@73½c; May, 75¾@76½c.

CORN—October, 31½c; December, 30¾; January, 30c; May, 31¾@31¾c.

OATS—October, 26½@26¾c; December, 23½c; May, 26½c.

PORK—October, $8.17½@8.20; December, $8.27½; January, $ 0.67½.

FLAX—Cash Northwestern, $.10 Southwestern, $1.10. October, $1.10. December, $1.11.

BUTTER—Creameries, 19@23c; dairy, 14@19c.

POULTRY—Dressed, turkey, 9@10c; chickens, 7½@8½c; ducks, 7½c.

EGGS—Fresh, 18½c.

Cincinnati Market.

The following are the local markets corrected up to time of going to press:

WHEAT—No. 2 Red & No. 1 Northern to No. 2 Northern 56

OATS—30 @ 31c.

RYE—35c.

BARLEY—37 to 39c.

TIMOTHY SEED—$2.

POTATOES—35c

EGGS—16c.

BUTTER—18 to 20c.

ONIONS—35c

BEANS—1.30.

HAY—Baled $8.00, loose $4.00.

HOGS—$3.85.

CATTLE—$3½ to 4½ live weight, 5½ to 6½c dressed beef.

SHEEP—2c.

CHICKENS—10 to 12½c.

TURKEYS—8c

BEEVES—3 to 5c.

WOOL—12@20c.

CHEESE—8½c per cwt.

LARD—$6.50 per 100.

SHORTS—$12 per ton.

ROUTED FILIPINOS

AMERICANS OCCUPY CAVITE VIEJO AND NOVELTA.

Division Under General Schwan Has Several Hot Engagements With Filipinos, Finally Driving Them From Their Strongholds—Navy Assists in the Attack by Shelling Trenches

MANILA, Oct. 9.—The advance upon San Francisco de Taldon is continuing.

General Schwan's advance guard entered Rosario during the morning, meeting with slight resistance.

NOVELTA, Island of Luzon, Oct. 9.—General Schwan's column, consisting of the Thirteenth infantry, a battalion of the Fourteenth, two troops of cavalry, Captain Reilly's battery of the Fifth artillery and Lowe's scouts, advanced from Rosor during the morning and occupied Cavite Viejo and Novelta. The American loss was three officers and nine privates wounded, one of the officers being mortally hurt. The loss of the enemy is unknown, but the bodies of three Filipinos were seen.

There were two sharp fights near Novelta. Lowe's scouts first encountered the enemy near Cavite Viejo and soon put them to flight, continuing on the advance. Captain Enfield's battalion of the Thirteenth regiment, with two companies of the Fourteenth and a number of Tagalo scouts, came upon the enemy in a strongly entrenched position on the road between Cavite Viejo and Novelta. A followed, resulting in the enemy's being driven back. The American forces sustained considerable losses in this engagement, the men being shot from trenches and shacks along the road. The column then passed on to Novelta, where the enemy had deserted. The marines and naval forces co-operated with the troops. The gunboats Wheeling, Petrel and Callao lay off the shore near Novelta and threw shells into that town and Santa Cruz for an hour, preparing the way for the marines to land. Two battalions consisting of 400 marines under Colonel Elliot, effected a landing the peninsula from Cavite to Novelta. The only way was by a narrow road through swamps. A mile beyond the marines' outpost the column was suddenly received with a volley from trenches across the road. A flank movement was executed and the insurgents were driven from the trenches, the marines wading through rice fields in who retreated to the strong sand forts across the creek, dividing the peninsula, destroying the bridge across the creek.

Fight Lasting Half an Hour

Turning the Flank of the Enemy,

The marines waded through more rice fields, forded the river in water to their shoulders and carried the forts, meeting with feeble resistance; the first encounter having disheartened the enemy. Squads were sent to Novelta and burned the town and the huts along the road from which the enemy commenced the firing.

MANILA, Oct. 11.—10:30 p. m.—During the afternoon a body of insurgents was seen near La Loma church, four miles from the heart of Manila. They opened fire, the bullets falling among the tents of the Twenty-fifth infantry. The Americans manned the trenches and the guard relief, assisted by part of the Galata bridge, Constantinople, Sunday, by an Albanian who fired four shots from a revolver. The murderer was arrested.

Tuesday, Oct. 10.

The 21st annual reunion of the Army of the Tennessee is in session at Chicago.

At Chicago Terry McGovern knocked out Billy Rochford in the first minute of the first round.

Three races were started last week but none were finished inside time limit. The race scheduled for Tuesday was declared off for the same reason.

According to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson the present corn crop will be the largest in the history of the country. The total yield will be between 2,300,000,000 and 2,500,000,000 bu. bels.

The remains of George Smith, the pioneer banker of Chicago and the Northwest who died Saturday at the residence of his son-in-law, were interred at Elgin, Engs., where he once resided.

James Monroe Heikel, great grandson of President James Monroe, died at New York Monday, aged 55 years. In 1883 he ran for mayor of Baltimore against Willis Pinckney White, but was defeated.

Wednesday, Oct. 11.

Broomcorn has reached $100 per ton. The Kansas regiment has arrived at San Francisco. General Funston came with it.

The cruiser Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship, has arrived in Boston from New York.

The Sampson fund now amounts to $50,000. Among the last contributions was one of $500 from ex-Senator Wolcott of Minnesota.

At Morgantown, W. Va., Governor Atkinson, on behalf of the citizens of the state presented Naval Captain Chadwick with an elegant award.

Andrew D. White, United States ambassador to Germany, and Mrs. White gave a reception in honor of General Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. Harrison.

Rear Admiral Henry T. Howison has been placed on the retired list of the navy by operation of the law, on account of age. He will make his residence in New York.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Oct. 5.

Right of way is rapidly being secured for an electric line between Milwaukee and Lake Geneva.

Jimmy Lease, the notorious bank robber, died Wednesday in the county almshouse at Philadelphia, aged 62 years.

Negotiations have been opened for the establishment of a telephone system from Paris to Rome and from Paris to Milan.

Governor Edward Scofield of Wisconsin makes the positive declaration that he is not a candidate for renomination and will not be under any circumstances.

All kinds of sensational reports are being received from South Africa, but Boer officials state definitely that they will not fight except in repulsing an invasion.

Mrs. Maxim Martin of Two Creeks Wis., aged 105, is dead. She came from Canada with her husband, who was in the employ of the Hudson Bay company, many years ago.

Friday, Oct. 6.

Edward R. Sewell, aged 38 years, a prominent Chicago lawyer, is dead.

South Dakota volunteers were mustered out at San Francisco Thursday.

The Bank of England has raised the bank's discount from 4½ to 5 per cent.

Harriet Hosmer of Chicago, 5 years old and for two years blind and a paralytic, had her sight and the use of her limbs restored through the agency of the X-rays.

Corporal Wayne S. Larrabee, First South Dakota volunteers, is dead at San Francisco of smallpox. While in the Philippines he acted as stenographer to General MacArthur.

The second meeting between Colombia and Shamrock, like the first, resulted in no race, leaving those interested in doubt as to the respective merits of the boats in a good sailing breeze.

Saturday, Oct. 7.

Indiana has returned the battle flag of Terry's Texas Rangers.

Ex-Secretary and ex-United States Senator James Harlan died at his home in Mount Pleasant, Ia.

W. J. Bryan is suffering from a throat affection which may cause him to abandon campaign speaking for the present.

There is not the slightest foundation for the published report of the retirement of President Nick Young of the National baseball league.

Concerning the claims of a Chicagoan, Herbert E. Gehr, a company has been formed which proposes to build the first railroad to the island of Hawaii.

It is announced at Madrid that the Filipino government has given full powers to Aguinaldo to treat for the release of the Spanish prisoners now held by the insurgents.

Sunday, Oct. 9.

The entire street car system of San Antonio, Tex., continues tied up.

Ex-Postmaster General William L. Wilson is seriously ill.

The South Dakota regiment left San Francisco for home Sunday night.

George Trich, the well known hardware dealer of Denver, is dead, aged 70.

It is stated in London that the Alaska boundary dispute will be settled within four days.

A hot wave struck California Sunday and the thermometer rose to a high point. In the city of San Francisco the maximum temperature was 98. At Sonoma it registered between 108 and 116 in the shade.

Bjari Bey, son of Hali Rifat Pasha, the grand vizier, was assassinated near the Galata bridge, Constantinople, Sunday, by an Albanian who fired four shots from a revolver. The murderer was arrested.

Tuesday, Oct. 10.

The 21st annual reunion of the Army of the Tennessee is in session at Chicago.

At Chicago Terry McGovern knocked out Billy Rochford in the first minute of the first round.

Three races were started last week but none were finished inside time limit. The race scheduled for Tuesday was declared off for the same reason.

According to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson the present corn crop will be the largest in the history of the country. The total yield will be between 2,300,000,000 and 2,500,000,000 bu. bels.

The remains of George Smith, the pioneer banker of Chicago and the Northwest who died Saturday at the residence of his son-in-law, were interred at Elgin, Engs., where he once resided.

James Monroe Heikel, great grandson of President James Monroe, died at New York Monday, aged 55 years. In 1883 he ran for mayor of Baltimore against Willis Pinckney White, but was defeated.

Wednesday, Oct. 11.

Broomcorn has reached $100 per ton. The Kansas regiment has arrived at San Francisco. General Funston came with it.

The cruiser Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship, has arrived in Boston from New York.

The Sampson fund now amounts to $50,000. Among the last contributions was one of $500 from ex-Senator Wolcott of Minnesota.

At Morgantown, W. Va., Governor Atkinson, on behalf of the citizens of the state presented Naval Captain Chadwick with an elegant award.

Andrew D. White, United States ambassador to Germany, and Mrs. White gave a reception in honor of General Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. Harrison.

Rear Admiral Henry T. Howison has been placed on the retired list of the navy by operation of the law, on account of age. He will make his residence in New York.

CONDITIONS ACCEPTED.

Negotiations For Peace Agreed to Between Venezuelan Combatants.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The navy department has received the following cable from Captain Hemphill of the Detroit:

"La Guayara, Oct. 7.—Detroit arrived today. By the request and advice of United States minister I have brought the government peace commissioner from Porto Cabello so as to expedite the pending negotiations for peace before the expiration of the armistice. Castro has accepted terms proposed and if Venezuelan president will hold to them, final settlement will be accomplished at Victoria. Terms of settlement have not been ascertained, but a change of administration is probable."

TRIP THROUGH MONTANA.

Minnesota Boys Are Cordially Greeted Everywhere.

HELENA, Mon., Oct. 11.—The special train carrying the Minnesota troops over the Great Northern Pacific railway arrived at the depot at Helena at 8:30 this morning. The train was in charge of Major Maginnis, the latter a brother of the First Minnesota, who delivered short addresses to the boys.

A telegram from Kalispel says the Hon. W. J. Bryan replied as follows from Webster, Ia., where he is stopping with Hon. Fred White, the Democratic candidate for governor of that state:

"My condition was not serious and I am much better. I expect to be able to resume my tour from."

A RACE FOR GOLD

A NEW ENGLANDER'S ADVENTURES IN ALASKA

BY CAPT. J. H. P. ROBINSON

(Copyright, 1898, by S. S. McClure Co.)

If there had been any uneasiness in the minds of Tom's friends it would have been dispelled when the stranger said, carelessly:

"Say, pards, there ain't room enough in the shanty for four of us, an' if yer don't mind I'll jest stay here with yer ter-night."

"You're welcome," said Tarbox, heartily. "There's room in my tent and a spare blanket, too. Turn in with us now and have some supper."

When the meal was over the men settled down by the fire. Turner produced an old cherry wood pipe and lighted it, while Tarbox threw on as armful of sticks and made a cheerful blaze. They talked of mining, and made no secret of the fact that they had struck a rich spot and were returning with their gold, while Turner professed intense curiosity to know the spot in order that he might hasten there as soon as he was relieved of his present care in the shape of the sick man.

When the pipes were empty he accepted Tarbox's offer and was soon apparently asleep, an example which was followed by all but Taylor, who took the first watch.

He was relieved by Tarbox, who in turn aroused Avery, but the night passed off without incident until dawn. Tarbox and Taylor were sound asleep in the tent with the stranger, who now raised himself quietly on his elbow and listened.

The two men were breathing heavily, and mingled with their respirations came the twittering of a bird outside. Carefully lifting the edge of the tent, he peered outside.

Yes, daylight was coming. First came a little motion of the air which had been still before. Then from a bush near by was heard the chirp of a bird. The outlines of the forest began to be distinguishable where masses had been.

It was time to act. First he rolled up the tent as to provide a retreat, then with stealthy hand he removed the weapons from the belts of the sleepers and stole outside with them.

Just then a thin red streak appeared in the sky, and Avery, who had been leaning against a tree near by, came toward him, saying:

"You are up early?"

"Yes," replied Turner. "I'm goin' ter see how the poor feller is gettin' on."

But Avery caught sight of the weapons in his hands and his suspicions were at once aroused.

"What are you doing with those revolvers?" he demanded, stepping toward the other quickly and laying his hand on the butt of his own weapon.

"Hands up!"

Before Turner had time to reply Hank Bowers and Obed Rider sprang from behind a neighboring tree with a weapon in each hand. The former shouted:

"Hands up!"

Avery obeyed instantly and Rider at once disarmed him.

Turner sprang to the tent occupied by the capitalist and before the latter was fairly awake he was disarmed and helpless.

The first shout had awakened Tarbox and Taylor, but without weapons they could make no resistance, and in less than two minutes from the first sound the four men were seated on the ground, their feet secured with a rope, while Clara Avery was bundled unceremoniously into one of the tents and roughly ordered to stay there.

To attempt to describe the feelings of the prisoners would be a hard task. They were like men stunned. The whole thing had been accomplished so suddenly that they could hardly realize it was not a fantastic dream.

Bowers and Turner wasted no time. After satisfying themselves that the four men were securely fastened they began at once to pack the gold on three of the horses. In response to an order from Bowers, Obed Rider disappeared in the woods, but soon returned with Tom and the second mate, their feet having been released and the gags taken from their faces.

Bidding Rider stand guard over the party, Bowers gave his whole attention to his own work, and in half an hour the gold was strapped on the backs of three horses, three more were saddled for the robbers, while the remaining pair was used to carry a supply of food and a tent.

Recalling the uselessness of words, our friends watched these preparations in dismay. They well knew that the thieves could reach Dyea and take a steamer before their crime was known, for without horses pursuit would be hopeless.

When he had packed all he desired to carry, Hank Bowers walked up to his prisoners and sneered:

"I'er had the fust laff on me, but it's my turn now, an' I rather guess I've got ther best end of it, hey?"

Seeing that they scorned to reply, he went on:

"We're off to Dyea. By ther time yer git thar we'll be some ways off on ther water. I don't need all this grub, an' I'll leave yer plenty ter last yer ter Dyea yerselves. That's fair, ain't it? Yer won't need eny guns. This trail is safe enuff, an' there's no sech thing as holdups here'bouts."

Avery could restrain himself no longer.

"You dirty thief!" he exclaimed. "I wish I had put a bullet into your head the night you sneaked into our cave!"

"I dare say," was the mocking response as Bowers turned away, "but yer were too big a fool! I wish yer all better luck next time yer strike it rich. Come on, boys, let's strike out for Dyea. I'm in a hurry to blow in some o' this dust."

The three men mounted their stolen horses without further delay and hurried away, leading the animals on whose backs were the fortunes of our friends.

Five minutes later they had disappeared in the direction of Dyea, and the despoiled men were being freed by Clara Avery and a sharp knife.

Tarbox's first act was to spring to his feet, exclaiming:

"Stay here until I come back! I won't be long!"

As he spoke he dashed off in the same direction taken by the robbers. Half an hour later he returned with his face worn'dig strangely.

"I thought so!" he cried as the others clustered about him. "It was all a bluff about going to Dyea! I smelt a rat as soon as that cuss told us. It would be too easy to trace them from there, and they know it. They said it to get us to go to Dyea while they made tracks for Dawson and went round the other way to Seattle. I saw them leave the trail and strike off to the right."

"Where will they strike the trail again?" asked Tom, eagerly.

"They'll come right back here as soon as we have had time to get out of the way," was the confident reply. "They may think they can circle round us, but I know this trail too well. They'll find that out after awhile and then they'll come back the way thinking we're gone. It'll take 'em all day to do all this, and I reckon's he afraid to bet that they camp here to-night. At any rate, if they went to Dyea they would stick to the trail. You'll find I am right."

"Suppose we stay right here?" asked Tom.

"Stay here?"

"Yes. Look here, there are only three of them. Clara has got a revolver they didn't know about. There's another in the hut where they caught me. I don't know whether it's loaded or not. I saw it as we were coming out. Why not hide here to-day and if those men come back and camp here to-night, as Tarbox says they will, it's a pity if we can't give them a dose of their own medicine!"

"I'm with you!" cried Tarbox. "It's a famous plan! They will never for a minute suspect such a thing!"

"Count me in, too!" said Green, and the others were equally as eager when they understood the proposition.

Tom made his way at once to the hut and secured the revolver he had seen there. It was not loaded, but he placed it in his belt, hoping to find some cartridges among the kit.

"We might as well have a bite to eat," said the capitalist, whose name was Seymour. "I haven't lost much, and I confess that I am hungry. Miss Avery, do you suppose you could give us a cup of coffee?"

There were plenty of provisions to be had, and, in spite of their misfortunes, they all ate a hearty breakfast, and felt the better for it. When they had finished, Tarbox said:

"Now we must get out of sight and keep a watch on the trail. I have no idea they'll be along before late this afternoon, but we'll take no chances. This piece of woods runs 50 miles in the direction they're taking, and they can't get through it. They'll give it up by noon and start back, thinking we are gone."

CHAPTER XVII.
CONCLUSION.

Joe Tarbox proved a true prophet. Hank Bowers and his companions spent the forenoon trying to pass the wood, and then the leader said:

"It ain't no use goin' any farther this way. We might as well go back ter their trail. Them fools has gone ter Dyea as fast as their feet kin take 'em ter try an' find us. Come on."

He wheeled his horse as he spoke, and the others followed his example. The sun was below the horizon when the tired animals once more entered the track they had left that morning, and Bowers hurried his along, remarking:

"We might as well git along ter ther old but agin an' camp ternight. It'll save ther bother of sticking out on tent an' cuttin' beds. Stir up them critters!"

Half an hour later they had reached the spot where they left their prisoners. It was deserted, and Bowers chuckled with satisfaction as he said:

"Think of 'em trampin' for all they're wuth an' we with all their stuff!"

As he spoke he dismounted, and added:

"We'll her ter tend these critters inter ther bush with us afore we unpack 'em. We must put all ther dust in the hut with us. I don't take no chances. We'll stan' a watch, too."

After some trouble the horses were led to the hut, the gold unloaded and placed within. Then Bowers threw himself on the pile of boughs, saying:

"Come on, Turner, let's warm our eyes. I'm too sleepy ter eat. Rider, you keep watch fer awhile, an' then wake one o' us up."

Almost as he spoke he dropped asleep, an example promptly followed by Turner, while Rider sat by the deer yawning. Neither man had slept the night before and soon his head began to droop.

Finding it impossible to keep awake in this position, he arose and paced slowly up and down in front of the hut, as he had been accustomed to do on shipboard.

He did not see a dark form which drew nearer each time his back was turned.

Closer and closer it crept until it reached a tree at the end of his route. The next time he turned his back to it he was seized by the throat from behind with a grip which completely shut off his breath while a stern whisper sounded in his ear:

"Make a sound and I'll kill you like a dog!"

Obed Rider made no attempt to struggle after the first involuntary start of surprise. The cold rim of steel pressed against his ear was too strong an argument in addition to the throttle grip on his windpipe.

The latter was loosened when he ceased struggling and the voice whispered:

"Come with me quietly, or it'll be the worse for you!"

The speaker pushed him along a few yards until he reached a spot where he could readily distinguish the outlines of several men under a tree. As they approached the group, his captor said:

"Here he is. Now, what shall we do with him?"

It was Tarbox who stood behind the prisoner, and he added:

"One of you take away his weapons."

Tom Scott sprang to the side of his old enemy, and to his delight found two loaded revolvers in his belt, which he secured, giving one to Taylor. Avery had taken the one from his daughter, and Tom found that the cartridges in the weapon just secured fitted the empty revolver he had found in the hut.

To slip three of them into it was the work of a moment. Then our friends found they had four weapons ready for use, and determined to lose no time in recovering their golden treasure.

"Let's surround the hut," said Tom, eagerly, "and call them out. They'll surrender when they find they have no show with us."

But Avery advised caution. "They're desperate men," he said, "and they will fight when cornered. We don't want any bloodshed over this affair if we can help it. When daylight comes they may be glad to give us the gold to save their skins, but if we surprise them in the dark somebody is likely to get killed."

"See here," said Tarbox, suddenly, still gripping Rider's collar with his sinewy hand, "why can't this rascal help us? Send him back, and let him get hold of the guns in the hut and bring them out. If he tries any crooked business I'll put a bullet through him myself at the first sign."

"You hear?" said Taylor. "Now be off, and remember we are six to your three. We already have the drop on you, and if you serve us well you shall go free, although you ought to be hung for what you have done. Go back and get all the weapons you can out of the hut. Hurry up!"

"But Bowers will shoot me in a minute if he wakes," whispered Rider, fearfully.

"Shoot him first, then," was the prompt response. "I'll shoot you if you set the least bit suspicious. No more talk now. Start!"

The muzzle of a revolver poked smartly into the small of his back left the wretched man no alternative and he stole away toward the hut, where his two confederates were sleeping, his heart beating so loudly that it seemed to him it must arouse them the instant he reached the threshold. He drew a deep pause, however, and as he picked his way along through the brush he began to realize that the way of the transgressor is sometimes not so rosy as it is painted.

When he reached the door he could plainly hear the deep snoring of both men, and, summoning all his courage, he stepped lightly inside.

In order to reach the rifles in the corner he was forced to step over the body of Turner, and it seemed to the mate that he lived an hour in the few seconds so employed.

His hand trembled so that it was with the utmost difficulty he managed to secure the three weapons noiselessly, but fortune favored him. With bated breath he stole out of the hut with them in his arms, and when he reached the edge of the clearing he was met by Tarbox, who said, grimly:

"Gobd! You make a capital burglar! Now, how many revolvers have they got in there?"

"They've got two apiece," replied Rider, "but you might as well shoot me as to ask me to try to get them. The men Bowers sleeps with one eye open and he—"

The rest of the sentence was lost by a startling interruption.

While he was speaking he had unwittingly raised his voice above a whisper and aroused the very man of whom he was speaking, and who now stood in the doorway saying:

"What the —, Rider! Who's that you're talking to?"

Even as he spoke the moon's edge appeared over the tops of the trees behind the hut and a bright shaft of light illuminated the spot with startling distinctness.

At the sound of his voice the entire party sprang from the dark shadows, and Tarbox shouted, as he leveled his revolver:

"Surrender peaceably and we will only take our own! If you show fight we'll shoot. We are two to your one!"

"Treachery!" snarled Bowers, as he jerked his revolver from his belt with lightning speed and fired point blank at Rider.

The bullet sped true to the mark and with a groan the unfortunate man sank to the ground, grasping his side convulsively.

Tarbox fired almost at the same instant, his bullet striking Bowers' hand and sending the weapon spinning to the ground.

Although the wound must have caused him exquisite pain, the desperado drew his remaining weapon instantly with his left hand and at the moment Turner appeared and coolly took his place at his side.

"There's too many of 'em," he said, after a comprehensive glance about him. "We'd better light out!"

Bowers' reply was to send a bullet within half an inch of Tom's head, but

He could plainly hear the deep snoring of both.

it was his last shot, for the second mate, who had stolen behind the hut, suddenly sprang at him with a heavy club and stretched him senseless on the ground.

Turner and Turner found himself alone and looking into the muzzles of so many weapons, he dropped his own, held his hands up above his head and said quietly:

"Don't shoot, pards! I gives in!"

"Tie him up!" ordered Tarbox.

It was soon done, and while Tom was assuring his sweetheart that he had not been injured one of the others was started a fire. Obed Rider was evidently mortally wounded, and all that could be done was to make him as comfortable as possible. He was gently lifted and carried inside the hut, while Bowers was secured as soon as he recovered consciousness.

The mate had been shot through the lungs, and after examining his wound Taylor shook his head and said bluntly:

"I might as well tell you the truth. You are a dying man."

Rider did not dispute him. Perhaps with the approach of death came warning. He spoke to him, for he said in feeble tones:

"Tell! Yes, I feel that I've made my last voyage. Call Scott here."

Tom came at once, and as he knelt by the dying man and gazed into his pale face, upon which the shadow of death was already beginning to settle, he forgot his long cherished vengeance and said softly:

"I'm here, Rider. I can guess what you want to say. It's all right now. Don't fret over what you've done to me. It doesn't matter. Can I do anything to make you any easier? Have you any message to send to your folks?"

"Tell 'em anything but the truth," said the dying man. "They mustn't know what a bad end I came to. I must tell you something while I can. It's about your father."

"My father!"

Tom drew closer to Rider and exclaimed:

"Quick! What do you mean?"

"Get me some brandy," whispered the other. "I'm getting faint."

Tom darted off, and soon returned with the stimulant which they had provided in case of sickness. He administered a small portion to the mate, who revived at once and said:

"Don't interrupt me. I must be quick. This wound is burning me up. I've been got, the Alaska fever and left his ship at 'Frisco. He got me all the money that belonged to the others to take to them. I gambled it away. To hide my crime I said he ran away with it. I saw him in 'Frisco—"

"What!"

Tom stared at him as if inclined to think his mind was wandering but the mate went on:

"He's rich. He's struck gold somewhere, and was going home to find you. He was wild when I told him you was dead and started off for 'Frisco to see you was buried in good shape. That's all, and it's enough, too."

As he uttered the last words he fell back exhausted. Tom tried to give him more of the fiery liquor, but he could not swallow it. His lips moved feebly and his eyes were turned on Tom in mute appeal.

"I forgive you! God knows I do!" whispered the young man huskily, and a flash of joy on the dying man's face told him that he was heard and understood. Then a single long-drawn breath followed, and with it Obed Rider's earthly career ended.

There was no desire for sleep in the little party that night. By the light of the camp fire a grave was dug and the body of the unfortunate sailor placed beyond the reach of any wild animals, and by the time this was done the dawn was near.

Avery dressed Bowers' fingers to the best of his ability, the latter grinding his teeth with pain and rage as he realized how he had been outwitted the second time.

His partner, however, took the whole matter as coolly as if he had not been caught in any act that might cost him his life. He spoke but once, and that was to ask one of his captors to accommodate him with a chew of tobacco.

"Wouldn't trouble yer, only yer've tied my hands," he explained.

When it was fairly light a council was held to determine what disposition should be made of the prisoners. This proved a somewhat difficult matter. To take them to Dyea involved a vexatious delay, for there were no horses for them to ride, and to turn two such desperate men loose seemed a dangerous thing to do. Moreover, they would starve without provisions.

After talking the matter over some time without arriving at any conclusion, Taylor exclaimed, impatiently:

"They ought to be hung, but I don't want the job! We'd better give them grub enough for a week or two and turn them loose. We can't be bothered with them!"

His advice was agreed to by the rest and the little outfit was at once prepared. When they were ready to start he walked up to the two desperadoes and said:

"There's your grub. Take it and light out. I shall give a full description of you to the authorities at Dyea and see that it is sent to Dawson. Somebody is sure to hang you both before long."

As he spoke he cut their bonds and then mounted his horse.

Half-an hour later our friends were well on their way, while the hatless robbers were trudging tediously along toward Fort Selkirk in moody silence. Their plots had failed, and here we must leave them to their fate.

It was a happy party that rode into Dyea five days later. The capitalist was eager to close his advantageous bargain, and the business was soon transacted. Taylor received a draft for $100,000 on responsible San Francisco parties, and when the bags of gold dust had been safely deposited on board the steamer all cares were at an end.

It was the first night out from Dyea that Tom Scott found Avery alone on the deck, and in a few manly words declared his love for Clara, asking her father's permission to marry her.

"What does she say?" asked the old miner, soberly.

Tom blushed like a schoolgirl and replied:

"I haven't asked her yet."

"Then do it, my lad. She's been the boss this long time. Strikes me you're pretty sure what she'll say to ask me first, you rascal."

But Tom was already gone, and we cannot follow him. Suffice it to say that the other men saw but little of him for the rest of the voyage.

At Seattle the party decided to remain a day in order to procure more suitable clothing They went at once to a hotel and registered, and half an hour later a stranger accosted Tom, saying:

"Mr. Thomas Scott, I believe?"

Tom admitted his identity, and the man continued:

"I have been hired by Capt. Scott, your father, to find you. He is at the Palace hotel in San Francisco, waiting for news of you. Will you wire to him, or shall I do it?"

For a moment Tom was too astonished to speak; then he bolted for the telegraph office.

Three days later there was a joyful meeting at the latter city where all misunderstandings were explained. The gold was found to be worth nearly $140,000, and after a division had been made the friends separated. Within a week Clara Avery became Mrs. Thomas Scott, the two parents being present at the ceremony.

The wedding trip was to New England, which Tom declared should be his home for the rest of his days, although he had found riches elsewhere.

"And what else did you find?" puts his bride.

Reader, how would you have answered her?

THE END.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by all Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

Halls Family Pills are the best.

Final Proof.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Aug. 19th, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn., on October 9, 1899, viz:

OLE P. DAHL

H. E. 6972 for the nwq sec. 29, Township 147 N., Range 47 W.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Nils J. Hauge, Arne Gunderson, Helge A. Tofsby, Ole Nelson, all of Crookston, Minn.

SYLVESTER PETERSON, Register.

(21-27)

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture

—AND—

Hardware

If everything you need to furnish a home c... CROOKSTON, MINN.

BATH ROOM BARBER SHOP

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

On the Buffet = Smoking= Library Cars

Between

St. Paul, Minneapolis and Seattle.

All the Comforts of Home.

United States Map. 15c

A copy of our handsome map, size 8 inches, printed in four colors and mounted on a roller, will be sent to any address on receipt of 15 cents in coin, postal or express money order. Call at well stocked ticket agents. GEO. P. LYMAN, Gen. Passenger Agent C., B. & N. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

Burlington Route

Finest Train on Earth from ST. PAUL -AND- Minneapolis -TO- CHICAGO

Electric Lights and Steam Heated.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain, free, whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Oldest agency for securing patents in America. We have a Washington office. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN,

beautifully illustrated, largest circulation of any scientific journal, weekly, terms $3.00 a year; $1.50 six months. Specimen copies and HAND BOOK ON PATENTS sent free. Address

MUNN & CO.,
361 Broadway, New York.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal' Corps of News Gatherers.

FELTON.

Eb. Cowey from Parley was in town Sunday.

L. Gilbert and family drove to Clen last Sunday.

I. Stonerson returned here Wednesday evening from a visit to Erskine and vicinity.

G. A. Waters returned from his visit here to Montezuma, Iowa Monday night.

Representative Pew, of Duluth, was doing business at Felton Tuesday and Wednesday.

G. A. Rundlet is putting up a dwelling and barn on the lot he bought from M. Peterson lately.

John Berry says that the elevator men at Borup grades all wheat No. 1 Hard, hence wheat is drawn there from Felton.

FISHER.

Mr. T. Nesbit, of Grand Forks, was in town Tuesday.

James Hansen wheeled over from Crookston Sunday.

Thomas Logan, of Wig, was on our streets Monday.

Mr. F. H. Henry, of St. Paul, was in the city Tuesday.

Mrs. H. Bakke, of Nash, N. D., is visiting with Mrs. G. Hansen this week.

The M. W. A. entertainment given by Mr. J. B. Herbert assisted by the school children and a few of the Woodmen and Royal Neighbors, Monday evening was well attended and everybody enjoyed themselves. The Cake Walks were very fine. The entertainment concluded with the comedy "Outwitted", and was played to Perfection by the Woodmen and Royal Neighbors.

RUSSIA.

Mr. John Byrum and Th. Nephew, who have been very sick are well again.

Mr. Frank Hunter, a railroad bridge carpenter left here last Sunday to go to Duluth.

Mr. P. Wernanger went to Crookston Tuesday to buy lumber, about two carloads, for a new horse and cattle stable, machine and tool buildings.

Mr. S. R. Sylvester, who is doing carpenter work on Felix Rancheichler's new store, was visited by his father from North Dakota this week.

The Great Northern Railway company has built a driveway to facilitate the loading of cars at this station. It is a much needed improvement, as it was always a puzzle to get near enough to a car with a team.

The Russia farm owners bought a new pushgrader. That means some good roads in future for this neighborhood. The house on the farm has been painted light green and it looks very neat.

SHELLY.

A. Haseby is building an addition to his house.

Geo. Afritt hiked to Hillsboro last Sunday.

Julius Ehrcand drove to Ada Saturday afternoon.

Postmaster Moen drove to Nelsville last Thursday.

Mrs. W. P. Cleveland went to Fargo last Tuesday.

Dr. Cleveland spent Sunday at Caledonia with his family.

Jim Larson and Ole Lakke hiked over from Halstad last Sunday.

N. J. N. Olson, the Halstad photographer, was in town last Friday.

Dr. Ongeard, of Halstad, was here on professional business last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Anderson, of Halstad, were in our village last Sunday.

Messrs. C. A. Hawkins and G. A. Varnson hiked to Caledonia Sunday afternoon.

H. L. Trimbell, of Hillsboro, looked after business interests here last Friday.

Misses Helma Olson and Maggie Holmberg, of Halstad, spent Sunday with the Huseby's and Anderson's.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthon Eckern and Mr. and Mrs. K. O. Sletten, of Halstad visited with friends here last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. K. J. Ostby went to Hendrum Saturday evening and returned Monday.

Miss Clara Scheie, of Marsh River, is helping her sister in the millinery parlors during the busy season.

Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Anderson are visiting friends and relatives near Portland and Maryville, N. D., this week.

The basket party at the I. O. G. T. Hall last Saturday was quite a success. There were sold over sixty baskets and they netted about one dollar a piece. After the baskets were sold and refreshments served, the young people indulged in playing games, and they all enjoyed a pleasant time.

CLIMAX.

Miss Julia Anderson visited here last week.

C. T. Stjern is confined to his bed with pneumonia.

S. J. Asdahl was at the county seat last Sunday.

Dr. Johnson is busy vaccinating people nowand ays.

Miss Ida Saterno, of Crookston, came down Saturday evening to spend a few days visiting friends and relatives.

Tollef Tollefson, an old soldier and one of the best settlers in this vicinity, had the misfortune to be kicked in the side last week by a vicious horse. Pneumonia set in from which he died Monday morning.

Elling Ellingson, living four miles southeast of town, was awakened on Friday evening about ten o'clock by an expensive conflagration. His barn, thirteen head of horses, seven cows, about one thousand bushels of grain, and a number of young stock were burned up. The origin of the fire is unknown. The horses and barn were partially covered by insurance.

GRAND FORKS.

The paving is nearly completed.

A. O. Mathee left on an eastern trip.

Ole Hexom has been granted a pension.

Mrs. Judge Fisk is reported to be in better health.

The G. N. dyer was five hours late Tuesday morning.

Pierson & Van Alstine's new livery barn is nearly completed.

Isadore Wedlund is confined to his bed with a slight attack of illness.

W. B. Wood, of the Dacotah, was a business visitor in Crookston last Wednesday.

Mr. Eugene Fretz Jr. and child returned Friday morning from a trip to Winnipeg.

Sheriff Collins returned Tuesday morning from St. Paul where he took a crazy man.

Wm. McManus, of Lakota, has been attending to business matters in the city Tuesday.

Dr. Lockerby left for Fort Berthold for a deer hunt. T. B. Feetham expects to join Mr. Lockerby in a few days.

Mr. L. Olson left Monday evening for Evanston, Ill., for a seven years' theological course in the Norwegian Medical College.

D. E. Sisseon and daughter arrived in the city Friday morning from Fargo, and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Nash.

The Great Northern has made such a kick on the mail contract that the authorities have ordered another weighing test which began last Friday.

"Wing" filled the boards at the Opera House Monday night.

Lieutenant Talley, of Co. C., of Grafton, shook hands with friends here Tuesday.

The N. P. "Flyer" came to Grand Forks Tuesday, because of a wreck at Muskoda. It went to Fargo over the G. N. tracks causing a delay of about 10 hours.

Adolph Hilstad, who for some time has held a desk in the Western Union, left for Minneapolis last Thursday to accept a position with the Chas. E. Lewis grain commission firm.

The funeral of Emil Johnson occurred last Wednesday from the house on North Seventh street, under the auspices of the Woodmen lodge. Geo. Helting had charge of the services.

C. L. Lindstrom has returned from his farm at Obern, where he has been overseeing threshing and doing a little hunting on the side. He reports game very scarce in that vicinity.

Peter Campbell lately released from the Crookston jail was arrested Monday by Officer Doty. The man was half drunk and out up a fight but the officer's club soon took him to the lock up.

MAPLE BAY.

We are having fine weather.

Threshing will soon be done.

Miss Nelson, of Fertile, spent Friday here.

Mr. N. E. Nelson returned from Argyle Monday.

Mrs. Pahlberg returned from Grand Forks last week.

Mr. Mellberg from Ada spent a few days here last week hunting.

It takes Anton Pahlberg to shoot the ducks a mile up in the air.

Peiring, Gustafson & Co. are now manufacturing the Dewey Washing machine.

Nels Peterson has bought six lots and is now busily engaged in building a dwelling house.

E. B. Gustafson from Fertile, has been improving his store here at the Bay by giving it a new coat of paint.

KITTSON.

Mrs. W. H. Price went to Stephen Monday.

A. J. Price received a car load of soft coal.

The St. George machine is threshing near Battrand.

Deputy Sheriff Losey passed through here on Monday.

There was a shower of rain Monday morning which delayed threshing a few hours.

Messdames Heinlich, Richardson and Erwin took luncheon at Mrs. Price's on Thursday.

A party of young people met at R. E. Smith's Saturday evening to celebrate Raymond's birthday.

Charlie Durrel's threshing rig was laid up one day last week by one of the men pitching a neck yoke into the cylinder.

The Great Northern railway carpenters have finished building the loading platform. It is now ready to be filled with earth.

John Stewart, elevator agent of Hixon, Mr. and Mrs. Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Purvis, Rai Tiedt, Mr. and Mrs. Newland, of Crookston and Mrs. Thompson, of Grand Forks, visited with A. J. Price on Sunday.

ERSKINE.

M. Sarvesen visited at Ironedusday.

Casper Hanson is building a barn 18x24.

Sam Berg lost a valuable horse on Friday.

Sheriff Lawrence was in town last Thursday.

George Chase returned from Grand Forks Saturday.

Hans Hanson moved his family into town Monday.

Dr. Olson and wife did business at Mcintosh, Saturday.

Geo. Q. Erskine was transacting business here Tuesday.

Clark Bratton is building an addition to his house 16x16.

Thorine Evenson returned from Grand Forks Saturday.

Ole A. Brandahl returned from Goodhue County Tuesday.

Martin Haugen and Mr. Brandahl did business here Tuesday.

Thurman West and Amund Torgerson did business here Friday.

Noah Sarvesen has moved to Mcintosh to clerk for E. Southmade.

Knute and John Juhson from Fertile were visitors at Holtes Sunday.

The Northwestern Telephone men will move their compliere Saturday.

Casper Hanson did business at the county seat Friday and returned Saturday.

Another lump has been placed on our streets. It is located near the old church.

Tom Torgesen, Tom Thompson and Mrs. E. Ostby left for Oregon Thursday.

Mrs. Odegaard and Miss Jennie Hanson were at McIntosh between trains Thursday.

Miss Lena Legnee passed through here Monday on her way to her Pople River school.

The chimney sweep's song was heard here Saturday and now the chimneys are ready for cold weather.

John Larson arrived in town Saturday from Crookston, and is ready to start in the peddling business again.

Mrs. Halvor Ostby and children returned from Perly Monday after a three weeks visit with Mrs Ostby's parents and friends.

Paul Oppegaard, of Freeborn county, visited with his brothers here. He is expecting to buy a quarter section of land here and will move here if he makes a bargain.

While the two small children of Martha Christiansen were playing with matches in some way they set the barn on fire. The building was completely destroyed and all his hay, and had it not been for the help of some neighbors he would have lost one setting of wheat.

Literary Notes.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

The editor of the American Monthly Review of Reviews (October) analyzes the South African situation, comments on the Dreyfus trial, reviews the work of the Chicago conference on trusts and discusses Mr. Bryan's position on the silver question and the general political issues in the state campaigns now in progress.

An excellent recapitulation of the Dreyfus case is contributed to the Review of Reviews by Mr. W. T. Stead, in the form of a "chronicle." The Review also publishes a series of sketches made by Mr. Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, in the court room at Rennes, with Mr. Davenport's own resume of his impressions at the trial.

The Review of Reviews for October accords to "Dewey Day" its appropriate recognition, publishing an illustrated description of the artistic decorations in New York from the pen of Ernest Knaufft, the well-known writer on art subjects.

Notes From Exchanges.

Roseau Times: Christian Olson, of Judis, brought in two turnips which weighed 21¼ pounds, the larger one weighing 12 pounds.

Cass Lake Times: Just one year ago today, Sept. 15, the first regular schedule went into effect on the Great Northern from Duluth to Crookston. The increase in business over this line since that date has been remarkable, making it the best in the whole Great Northern system. Today the average number of trains in and out of Cass Lake is thirty.

Shelly Signal: Elias Aalgord, who lives about three miles east of town, suffered a severe loss by fire on Monday night—losing his barn, seven horses, machinery, considerable wheat and 200 bushels of flax. The origin of the fire is not known, though it is thought that it was caused by sparks from a threshing engine that passed by the farm in the evening. The loss is a severe one to Mr. Aalgord and much sympathy is expressed for him.

Chicago Inter Ocean: Senator William E. Mason, of Illinois, is nowhere regarded now as a person worthy of serious attention. To dignify him or his conduct by making either of them a subject of discussion within the party that he has disgraced would be a move that could not fail to arouse national derision. The junior senator from Illinois has been as completely removed by his own behavior from all claims upon the consideration of his former party associates as if he had been publicly and officially drummed out of the organization.

Anoka Union: Shoot the newspapers! Working always for some slacker who gives them the dirty shake when there is a call for help for themselves. Making politicians only to have the leeches suck them dry. Giving men reputations, who deserve a good stout kick on the part nature made to kick. Helping build up the place in every way, but in return get kicks and cuffs for their pains. Never appreciated, always criticised, is it, I ask you, any wonderthat some editors become sour as vinegar, bald as a billiard ball, hateful as sin, spiteful as a cat, cunning as an indian, and mean as the old nick? It's a wonder that there is such a thing on earth as a good editor.

Thief River Falls News, T. Milton Fowble, a United States assistant engineer, accompanied by a party of fifteen men, will commence a survey of the Red Lake and the Red Lake river the latter part of this week. The survey is to be made in orderto ascertain the advisability of putting in a large government dam at the outlet of the Red Lake, which would be the means of improving navigation on the Red Lake river between this city and the Lake. If it is found that the putting in of a dam would not cause the water on the east bank of the Lake to overflow the adjoining country, work on the same will probably be begun after this session of congress when an appropriation is made.

Bemidji Pioneer: But an intelligent system of forestry—the cutting of the old groves and the protection of the young timber, would permit the cutting and sawing within the limits of the proposed park of perhaps 100 million feet of saw-logs per year for fifteen years, thus handsomely supporting at least two fair-sized villages within the trade range of Duluth.

Aitkin Age: We have discovered the secret at last. Nobody with a double front name can hope to be elected to office anymore. The middle name is sure to be a hoodoo. Witness the downfall of William Henry Enstis, William Jennings Bryan, Chas. Augustus Towne and Augustus A. Van Wyck. On the other hand note how the fellows with only one name slide into office, for instance, William McKinley, Knute Nelson, John Lind, James Gray, Theodore Roosevelt, Page Morris, and even Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland. It's lucky Adam Diah has so firmly cemented the component parts of his prefatory cognomen, or he wouldn't stand a ghost of a show.

Final Proof.

Department of the Interior. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Sept. 25, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. on November 1, 1899, viz:

EDWARD E. BRAATEN.

H. E. 10626 for the se¼, sw¼ section 10 Township 150 N., Range 46 W.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

John Dimass, Knut Hoffard, Ernest Miller and Hans Clausen, of Crookston, Minn.

SYLVESTER PETTERSON, [25-30] Register.

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota, in bankruptcy. In the matter of John Turcotte, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 16th day of October, A. D. 1899, the said John Turcotte was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned in city of Crookston, in the county of Polk and district aforesaid, on the 26th day of Oct., A. D. 1899, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Oct. 10th, 1899.

OLE J. VAULE, Referee in Bankruptcy. [27-29]

RED RIVER VALLEY LUMBER COMPANY

Lumber, Lath, Shsngles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings.

Building Paper. Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster, Builders' Hardware

A. H. SIVERTSON, Secretary. CROOKSTON, MINN.

Winter Supplies

Farmers who desire to in a supply of Groceries for the Winter and thus provide against running short of supplies during the blizzardy Winter weather, should give us an opportunity to figure on their bills. We have facilities that enable us to give you the closest figures on the best goods (the only kind we handle). And onr stock is complete in every particular.

The highest market price paid for country produce.

.Slocum's Grocery.

CHASE BLOCK, BROADWAY.

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laing out plans for New Buildings do not negleet to have our architect include electrie wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give ou the benefit of our experience in laing out wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Polk County Journal.

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19 1899 No. 28

MASONS TO DEDICATE

Their Magnificent Masonic Temple Oct. 25, Grand Officers to Be Present.

MUCH PROGRESS IN METHODISM

In Red River Valley During Past Conference Year Says Dr. Robert Forbes

The magnificent Masonic Temple on the third floor of the Wallace block will be dedicated next Wednesday evening. M. W. Grand Master A. T. Stebbins, of Rochester, R. W. Deputy Grand Master Alonso A. Braeseburg, of Fergus Falls, and W. Grand Orator H. D. Dickinson, of Minneapolis, will be here and have charge of the exercises. A grand banquet will be held after the dedication.

The Crookston Masonic Temple is a credit to the Masons of the city and an honor to the city. The rooms are richly furnished, artistically freecoed, complete in all equipment. The new temple is, in fact, one of the best in the state. It is owned by the Masons though forming part of the Wallace block.

METHODISM IN NORTH MINNESOTA

Dr. Forbes Reports to Conference—Number of Ministers Doubled.

Dr. Robert Forbes, presiding elder of the Duluth district, in his annual report at the Methodist conference in Minneapolis, on the work in his district, said, among other things:

A new circuit was organized in May, called "St. Vincent, Humboldt and Joe River." A. A. Myers was appointed pastor. Another charge called "Hallock, Northcote and Granville," was established and N. I. Vernon placed in charge. About the same time, a circuit named "Stephen, Donaldson and Kennedy" was organized and Brother Vernon was given charge of this circuit also, with instructions to give each field half of his time. New work was opened at Alaska in April, and early in May, M. Littlejohns was appointed to the field. F. C. Mather has for the last month been at work in Roseau, and the region round about.

We have a new mission among the Indians on the White Earth reservation, where D. F. Porter was appointed pastor early in the year. The government has given us eighty acres of good land, and we have lumber on the ground and are building a church. Our older Indian mission, under the care of John Clark has made some advancement during the year. Our missionary is now comfortably settled in a parsonage at Nett Lake. I collected the money from my friends in different parts of the state and have paid for this building. No small part of the expense was the bill for hauling the material from Tower, a distance of seventy miles.

During the year the services of the Methodist Episcopal church have been established in twenty new places. We began the year with forty-two pastoral charges. We expect to begin this year with fifty-two appointments, and "There is much land yet to be possessed." We took up the work of the year with six preachers stationed on that portion of the St. Paul & Duluth railway that is included in the Duluth district. We expect to go from this conference with ten men appointed to organized charges in that part of our field. We began the year with five men stationed in the Red River Valley. We have now nine men stationed in that territory and expect to enter on the work of the coming year with eleven men. We have not done any building in that part of the district, but have organized our work as thoroughly as possible, and expect to build several churches next year. It is a vast and promising region which the church should have occupied years ago.

The Firemen's Dance.

One of the great annual events of the city, namely the firemen's dance, occurred at the City Hall last Thursday evening. As usual a large number of Crookston's society people were present and so much did they enjoy themselves that morning was almost dawning ere they ceased to glide gracefully over the waxed floors to the most excellent music furnished by the Riggs orchestra. The firemen always entertain their guests in a manner that is pleasing to all and the grand hall of last week was no exception. The public are always glad to patronize Tom Morris' proteges and consequently the firemen's treasury is fuller by $200. and more than it was before the dance came off.

A TIMES LIE NAILED.

No Connection Whatever Between Journal and People's Press.

The Times, Tuesday evening, makes the statement that the People's Press of this city is owned by the editor of the JOURNAL. It is evident that the Times had two objects in view in publishing this story, namely, to draw, if possible, the attention of people away from the mal-administration of public funds in connection with the recent Street Caraival, and also from the fact that the Tribune is owned and controlled by the Times. These facts, however, are too patent to be lost sight of and the fabrication of the Times is too flimsy and foolish to receive more than a passing notice.

The JOURNAL editor does not own the People's Press or any part of it. No copy comes from the People's Press to this office to be blue pencilled, as exchange which frequently occurs between the two other newspaper offices in this city. Had the editor bought the Press—an project that never even occurred to the JOURNAL—the fact would have been made public, for undemand dealing with the people is something that this paper abhors. But the Times is simply charging the JOURNAL with doing what everyone knows the Times has done with the Tribune. The story that the People's Press is owned by this office is wholly false, but the many other items which appear in the Times it suits the fancy of the editor of that sheet and so is published regardless of truth. The people can see from this how much reliance may be placed upon what the Times says.

SAW THE PRESIDENT.

Crookstonites Went to Fargo to see and Hear Wm. McKinley.

A special train on the Great Northern railway last Friday took a large delegation of people from Crookston to Fargo to be present on the occasion of the visit of President McKinley. The band of 22 pieces went along, with Manager Dahl and Band Master Riggs in charge, and while there they covered themselves with glory as they always do. Fargo was not decorated in honor of the visit of the chief executive, but the citizens of Crookston were with special badges presented to them by A. P. George and A. Eikea. As Mr. McKinley and party did not arrive in Fargo till late in the evening the Crookston train did not reach this city on the return trip till after midnight. Among those who made up the party were Mrs. Keating, Mrs. Spendley, Mrs. Riggs, Mrs. Schusseman, Mrs. Marling, Miss Strech, Mr. and Mrs. August George, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Witney, and Messrs. Ed. Gilhertson, Dickman, Charley Hitchcock, J. N. S. Gerrard, E. Lanigan, J. O'Brien, C. R. G. Poole, S. C. Johnson, Lawrence Larsen, Frank Brown, Ole Bjork, Andrew Eiken, O. O. Christianson, Eli Steesarson, Ike Simmons, A. E. Taastrum, N. P. Stone and Ex-Senator B. Samson.

People's Store Opening.

The People's Store, S. Basazza proprietor, which is located on Robert Street between Broadway and Main, was formally opened last Monday and for two days the rush of customers to this large department store was very great. The store was simply packed with intending purchasers, and though there were fourteen clerks it was impossible for them to wait on everybody. A few souvenirs are left which Mr. Basalza wishes to say he will give to any person present on the opening days who was not waited on and who consequently did not get one. The People's Store is bound to be a favorite as there one may find low prices, first class goods and most obligiag clerks.

The Hello Business.

Crookston talked with Fertile by telephone last week for the first time. It was not direct but by way of Fargo. Direct connections, however, will be made within a week with Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire, Fertile, Fosston and St. Paul. The line from Tilden to Crookston is being pushed rapidly, now that they have the 70 foot poles of which they have been in need of for some time.

Fifty Dollars Damages.

An Andover-Hammond ditch case was up before Judge Watts in chambers last Friday. Hugh Galbraith, of Hammond, claimed that by the damming up of a ditch by Anderson and Yates, of Andover water was spread over his land and damaged it considerably. Judge Watts allowed Galbraith $50 damages and issued an injunction restraining Anderson and Yates from damming up the ditch.

OWES POLK $13,250.76

Red Lake County Must Settle With Polk—Martin O'Brien Special Attorney.

DRAINAGE IN GROVE PARK

Discussed but decision postponed—School Districts at Mentor Divide Money and Property.

The board of county commissioners met in special session Oct. 16, at 10 o'clock in the morning with members Forsier, McCarty, Eastman and Bratvold present.

A petition was presented by Joseph Tagley et al, of Grove Park, for the construction of a county drainage ditch through said town. Van R. Brown, of Red Lake county, appeared in behalf of Mary Wegner. Jas. Marlette, O. D. Quiseelle, P. Toupin, and John Remick and objected to consideration of petition, as proposed route and course were not fully shown in the petition and the construction of the ditch would render worthless certain portions of their lands. After considering the matter the board decided to defer action till Nov. 22, and in the meantime to examine the proposed ditch route.

School district No. 249, Mentor district, having been formed out of district 61, the funds and property belonging to the latter district were divided, No. 61 to retain school building and furniture and apparatus and the the money now on hand and all taxes now due to be divided pro rata between the two districts according to the assessed valuation for 1898.

Joseph Jarvis' taxes were abated $132.89.

C. C. Knappen's bill for county printing formerly disallowed was allowed at this meeting, an agreement having been reached between Mr. Knappen and Mr. Sherle, of the Fisher Bulletin, that the latter should get a certain percent. of the bill.

Martin O'Brien was appointed special counsel for Polk county to act with the county attorney in the matter of enforcing settlement between the counties of Polk and Red Lake.

The following financial statement of the case between the two counties was procured at the county auditor's office:

Bonded indebtedness at time of division.....	$88,000 00
Floating indebtedness consisting of seed grain loans in years 1895 and 1896	4,500 00
Outstanding orders.....	1,312 76
Total indebtedness.....	$94,312 76
Appraised value of buildings.....	22,500 00
Balance to be divided between the 2 counties according to assessed valuation of 1896.....	$71,812 76
Red Lake county's share.....	13,245 61
Interest on $11,250 not yet paid by Polk county.....	2,005 14
Total indebtedness of Red Lake to Polk.....	13,250 76

A Business Education

The last issue of the College Journal, published by Malm & Sathre, of the Crookston College, contained an interesting article upon education of the "boys and girls," and the following paragraph therein found is worthy of the careful attention of all young people in this "business" nation we are living in:

"A business education is always useful in all the avenues of active life. It is never an incumbrance; neither isit ornamental. A business education consists in a knowledge of those things which are ever present with us—our business relations one with the other. It matters not how highly educated the young man or woman may be, even to the extent of a liberal university education, a business education will be none the less valuable and useful."—Thirteen Towns.

Lost a Gold Piece

Mr. Hallette came in from Shevlin Sunday, and after he had been in the city a short time he discovered that he was minus a five dollar gold piece and he came to the conclusion that he had given the yellow metal to the porter of the chair car in place of a nickel but when he saw the porter Monday morning the latter had not noticed the mistake so nothing could be done.

Deaths.

KITTLESON.

At Bethesda Hospital on Tuesday at 6 p. m. Captain Robert Kittleson died from injuries received by the accidental discharge of a gun on his steamboat near Thief River Falls. His remains were shipped to Thief River Falls this morning, where they will be buried this afternoon.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

Great Northern Depot, Steam Heating Plant and Water Works.

Crookston is bound to keep up the pace set in the beginning of the year in the way of buildings and improvements, and nothing but several inches of snow, a northwester and 20 below or thereabouts will stop operations.

Just at present work on the new Great Northern depot: the new water works building and the laying of the pipes of the steam heating plant is being pushed rapidly so that the operations will be well under way before genuine winter comes. Considerable of the foundation of the depot is laid and at the north end they are excavating for the heating plant that will be used in place of the coal stoves. The reservoir has been completed by Supt. Peterson, and the foundation for the new waterworks building is being laid. This building will partly cover the reservoir and the north part of the walls of the latter will be built up quite a distance from the ground. The Steam Heating Plant Co. began work excavating Monday at the corner of Main and Second streets. The pipes will be laid in the business portion of the city, and as soon as the new water works building is completed the steam heating will be ready to furnish steam to patrons.

Weddings.

BUSSE-HEIN

At the Congregational church in Crookston yesterday morning John Busse was married to Miss Ida Hein. Rev. H. P. Fisher was the officiating clergyman. The ceremony took place in the presence of Miss Clara Busse, sister of the groom, Ed. Hein, brother of the bride, Valentine Yager and K. Hecker. The bridal party left for Ada on the evening train.

GOOLER-BARRETT.

In Crookston on Tuesday Oct. 17, Mr. I. Gooler to Miss Emily Barrett. The ceremony was performed by Father Laures at St. Ann's church.

WILSON-SWANSON.

At the Salvation Army Barracks Tuesday evening Hugh Wilson to Miss Anna Swanson. The ceremony was performed by Brigadier Wm. Halpin, of Minneapolis.

HOVELAND-KECK.

On Tuesday, Oct. 12, Sam Hoveland to Miss Tonina Keck, both of Whitman county, Washington.

NORQUIST-SKEIN.

On Friday, Oct. 13, Frank Norquist, of Beltrami, county, to Ingohor Skein, of Polk county.

WILLIAMS-CURTISS.

On Wednesday, Oct. 18, C. A. Williams to Miss Winsey J. Curtiss, both of East Grand Forks.

RICHARDS-MARCH.

On Wednesday, Oct. 18, J. A. Richard to Miss Josie March, both of Grand Forks.

KVINAGAARD-HAUGEN.

On Wednesday, Oct. 18, Halvor O. Kvinagaard to Miss Agodt O. Haugen.

At the last five weeddiags Judge Holt officiated.

Prepare for Life's Work.

No young person of average ability, good character, and industry, who possesses knowledge of the commercial branches and facility in the use of that knowledge, can long be out of employment if he desires a place. So also with knowledge of shorthand and typewriting, and facility in its use. It is only a question of the thoroughness of that knowledgé and the degree of facility with which it can be applied. Shorthand and typewriting facility are the all-important qualities. Our school provides both. If the pupil will do his part the school will do the rest, and the outcome will take care of itself.

There is, even in this day of crowded vocations and sharp competition, abundant work and adequate remuneration for every man or woman who can do exceptionally well anything that must be done, and it will always be so. A superior bookkeeper, stenographer, or teacher will always be sure of employment. It is the old, old, question of the "survival of the fittest."—College Journal.

Rambling Crookstonites

These are a few Crookstonites who have been out of town this week: Geo. A. Ralph is in the Zenith Cities; H. C. Misner visited his brother up at Euclid; J. E. Morrisey transacted business in Shevlin; Dr. Rosser is out in the Deer River country; Sheriff Lawrence was out farming.

THEIR ACTION LAWFUL

Council May Vote by Resolution at any Time to Pay for Paving by Annual Installments.

LEVY MADE AFTER WORK DONE

Therefore Comptroller may Lawfully Sign Present Contract Before Assessment is Made.

The city council will meet in adjourned special session next Tuesday evening to consider the question as to whether or not the motion given the paving contract to Mr. Killmar will be reconsidered.

It was urged at the last meeting by those who opposed giving the contract to the Iowa man that the contract could not be legally let till the council, by passing an ordinance, placed the city under the general statute of 1893, in accordance with which the city could, if it so chose, pay the cost of paving in annual installments, that is, the ordinance must be passed and then the contract let, therefore, the said motion must be reconsidered that the city may act legally in the matter. The comptroller also said that he would not sign the contract till either an assessment had been made or provision had been made to defray the cost of the improvement. The JOURNAL, however, has investigated the matter and finds that there is a general law of 1895, which of course supersedes the general law of 1893 and which gives to certain cities specific powers in addition to their charter powers. The law reads:

Section 1. That any city * * having a population of less than 25,000 inhabitants, * * * in addition to any powers that now are or hereafter may be by law conferred upon it relating to the levy and collecting of special assessments upon property abutting upon or benefited by any public improvement made within such city shall have power and authority by a majority vote of the city council of any such city to provide by ordinance, by-law or resolution, that any such assessment or any part thereof may be paid in annual installments of any number, not exceeding ten * *.

Section 2. That when any such improvement shall be FULLY COMPLETED the city council of any such city shall proceed to determine upon the total property the cost of such improvement or any part thereof shall be assessed, and shall make and levy an assessment to defray such cost * * *.

Nothing then has been done in this matter by the council that is not in accordance with law. The report of the committee on streets and bridges has been adopted. The council recently voted that it was the sense of that body that the cost of the paving should be paidby annual installments. If this was a resolution passed by a majority vote of the city council then the council has nothing to do save to sign the contract and wait till the paving is completed and then make and levy the assessment. If it was not a resolution such a resolution may be passed at any time between now and when the paving is completed.

If, then, certain council men desires to have the motion adopting the report of the committee, reconsidered, the only argument they can use in support of such an action is that the contract ought to be let to some other man than Mr. Killman. Legally the action of the council so far is all right.

GRAND GIFT DISTRIBUTION

The Most Remarkable Offer Ever Made by a Reliable Concern.

EDITOR JOURNAL: Please announce that for a limited time we will give absolutely free to every married lady sending name, address and a two cent stamp for postage, an elegant triple-silver-plated Sugar Shell. Such goods sell in jewelry stores at 75 cents each. This is the most expensive advertising we have ever done, but it will make us thousands of friends and permanent customers. There is nothing to pay except, a two cent stamp as a sort of guaranty of good faith. The Home Furnisher, our own monthly publication, showing our line of high grade silverware and furniture, will also be sent free. But one Sugar Shell to a family.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO.
Morgan and Harrison Streets, Chicago. [28-33]

Grand Forks' big filter, through which all the city water passes before going into the distributing mains, is being cleaned out and will be filled with sand from near this place.

Elsewhere.

Fergus Falls proposes to erect a new library building.

The Great Northern station at McIntosh has been enlarged.

A Masonic lodge will probably be formed at Thief River Falls.

Work in the new saw mill at East Grand Forks began one week ago today.

Registration at the Minnesota State University is reported to have reached the 3,000 mark.

Three stage lines will be run between Thief River Falls and the Red Lake this winter.

Fargo has a twentieth century mercantile association. This is a case of rushing the centuries.

According to the new city directory Duluth has a population of 61,000, an increase of more than 4,000 over last year.

T. E. Booker, the defaulting officer of the Grand Forks National bank, is being tried this week before the federal court.

The revenues of the United States during the quarter ending September 30, exceeded the expenditures by $8,390,12.

Bemidji voted against issuing $4,500 worth of bonds. The good people of Bemidji, it seems, prefer to have a tax levied.

The Brainerd Arena has been sold by E. E. Beard to H. D. Slauley, of Minneapolis, the latter to take possession next week.

The St. Paul and Minneapolis papers published souvenir editions of the return of the 13th Regiment from the Philippines.

The Red Lake Indians were recently paid their annuity, which this year amounted to $5.32 for each man, woman and child.

Charley Upsata, 15 years old, of Bemidji, got up early one morning and went out hunting and as a result he laid low a bear and three cubs.

The Chicago Tribune observes thoughfully that the William J. Bryan which has entered the race for the presidential cup is never heralmed on account of a lack of wind.

Hendrum will again have a newspaper. It will be run by a stock company composed of Prof. McGhee, W. D. Bangs, Ben Molenes, A. M. Eckman and Wm. Anderson.

W. N. Neff, who has been assistant superintendent of the Northern division, has been transferred to the Montana division of the Great Northern. J. M. Egan has taken his place as assistant superintendent.

It is reported that the Great Northern and Northern Pacific have entered into a traffic alliance whereby the former gets use of the latter's Washington Junction terminals while the latter gets the use of the former's short cut from Spokane.

Brother Semling, of the Halstad Reporter, last week, worked himself up into a poetic frenzy, and while filled with that fine feeling broke loose in a pyrotechnic piece of poetry which he called "Plunkers Please. He deserved to get them.

Compulsory Education

The last legislature passed a law making it compulsory for parents or guardians to send children between the ages of eight and sixteen years to school during all the time there is school in the district. The law provides that the school board may appoint a truant officer who may apprehend and take to school children not attending. Penalty for failure to comply with the law is a fine not exceeding $50 or imprisonment not exceeding thirty days. With our free schools, free text books, and an able corps of instructors, there is no possible excuse for children growing up in ignorance unless parents and guardians are too indifferent to send them to school.—College Journal.

A Good Reason Why You Should Attend This School.

Since the primary object which most young people have in attending a commercial school is to secure available preparation for business life. it is important that they select a school which has a course of study embodying the largest amount of practical information—crystalized facts, which will bear directly and effectively upon the work which they will have to do, and which can be mastered in the shortest possible time.

Our course of study is constructed in exact harmony with that idea. and, as the greater includes the lesser, if the pupils acquire all-around preparation for business life, they must at the same time secure technical knowledge, which is a key with which ready admission to the business world may be secured.—College Journal.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE BASUTOS REBEL

NATIVES IN ARMS AGAINST THE ORANGE FREE STATE.

If the Report Is True a Worse Fate Than Ever Seems in Store for South Africa—Little News of Importance Regarding the Movements of the British and Boer Forces.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The Morning Post's Ladysmith correspondent telegraphs that the Basutos have risen against the Free State.

According to a dispatch from Pretoria the Transvaal capital received an offer from a wealthy European recently to supply a fleet of completely equipped torpedo boats for the purpose of blowing up the British transports on arriving in South African waters. The offer was curtly rejected, President Kruger refusing even to consider it. The originator of the scheme, who had been in Pretoria only 24 hours, left immediately.

LADYSMITH, Natal, Oct. 18.—The foremost detachment of the enemy's northern column has not advanced beyond Ingagane and no definite movement has been made from the Drakensberg pass.

HEAVY FIGHTING ALLEGED.

Said Three Hundred Boers Were Killed in a Battle at Mafeking.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—A special dispatch from Capetown says that 300 Boers and 18 British have been killed in a battle at Mafeking.

Colonel Baden-Powell made a sortie from Mafeking in force and attacked the Boers, who were investing the town. After fierce fighting, the British carried the day.

ESTCOURT, Oct. 18.—An armored train, while reconnoitering near Spytfontein, engaged the Boers, killing five and wounding seven.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The skirmish near Spytfontein, says a special dispatch from Cape Town, was quite lively. The armored train, with a detachment of the Lancashires, approached unmolested until within range, when the Boers opened fire. The Maxims were instantly set to work, and did great execution among the burghers. The latter also used artillery, but ineffectively. The armored train returned to Kimberley unharmed.

A special dispatch from Pretoria says the Boers occupied the Bechuanaland railway during Friday night from Lebaust to Argal Kop.

The Standard's Dundee correspondent says:

"The Boers have brought artillery from Newcastle and have destroyed the railway at Ingagne to prevent the approach of our armored train."

The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Glencoe says that General Symons says there are only 3,000 Boers in the neighborhood of Ladysmith, but there are large numbers on the way.

Guns and food stuffs found secreted in the mines of the road are confiscated.

NEWS VERY MEAGER.

Dispatches From South Africa Throw Little Light on the Situation.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Belated dispatches from the scene of action in South Africa throw little fresh light upon the situation. The Boers appear to be strengthening their position in Natal and biding their own time for attack.

The Orange Free State burghers are apparently threatening to invade Cape Colony, by way of Norpalpan and Aliwal, both of which are at their mercy if they possess artillery.

So far as is known the only British force stationed at Aliwal north is a detachment of the Royal Berkshire regiment.

BLAME THE BOERS.

British Parliament Meets and Discusses the South African Situation.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The first day's session of parliament was devoted entirely to South African affairs and little opposition to the government's policy was manifest. The lords promptly approved the speech from the throne and the house of commons defeated by an overwhelming vote an amendment to the reply to the speech offered by John Dillon, Nationalist, protesting against the war.

The minority consisted mainly of Irish members and a few Radicals, including Mr. Henry Labouchere.

In the house of lords, after several lengthy speeches in support of the government's policy, the address was agreed to.

BANDITS MADE A BIG HAUL.

Northwestern Train Robbers Secured Probably $25,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—It is estimated that the robbers who held up train No. 3 on the Northwestern railroad near De Kalb, Ills., secured over $25,000. This amount was stated by General Manager Antisdale of the American Express company to have been in the car in cash alone. The amount of jewelry, etc., stolen by the robbers, Mr. Antisdale said, he could not guess at.

When the special train bearing General Superintendent Sanborn and Trainmaster Battisford reached the scene of the robbery they found that not only had the operator of Tower "W" been bound and gagged, but the conductor, engineer and fireman of the train had been tied securely to the express car, the robbers thus preventing immediate pursuit. The trainmen were only able to give the railroad officials the direction the robbers had taken in making their escape. Shortly after the officials arrived, another special train bearing General Manager Antisdale of the American Express company, W. A. Pinkerton and a number of detectives, arrived, and organized pursuit was at once begun. A good description of the robbers was obtained from Operator Whistler of tower "W." Blood was discovered from fast-by where the robbers had struck him. He was almost dead from suffocation, as the towel had been thrust down his throat. Three suspects were arrested at Dayoreak and taken to the South Elmhurst police station. The men were caught in a freight car, but the police were not at all confident that they had the right men.

The Northwestern Railway and American Express company together have offered a reward of $20,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the Maple Park train robbers. A proportionate amount will be paid for the arrest and conviction of each of the robbers.

BRYAN IN KENTUCKY.

The Democratic Leader Speaks in a Number of Towns.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 17.—The first day's trip of the Bryan-Goebel party through Kentucky commenced at Cairo, Ills., the first speech of the day being made at Hickman, Ky., in the presence of a good natured and cool sized crowd. The special train reached the Kentucky town at 8:30 o'clock. In his opening address Mr. Bryan demonstrated his purpose to urge the support of the Democratic state ticket headed by William Goebel for governor. He held that the question of whether or not the next president of the United States was a Democrat depended largely on whether Kentucky was Democratic this fall.

The largest crowd of the day was met at Mayfield and the greeting to the visiting party was the warmest. Stops were also made at Benton, Princeton, Hopkinsville, Norton, Circle City and Litchfield.

CANADA GIVES CONSENT.

Agrees to a Temporary Arrangement of the Alaskan Dispute.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Sir Louis Henry Davies, Canadian minister of marine and fisheries, informs the Associated Press that the privy council of Canada's consent to a temporary arrangement of the Alaskan dispute. This has practically settled the whole matter for the time being as the main features of the arrangement were originally suggested by the United States.

Colonel John Hay, the American secretary of state, will sign the last papers within a few days, and Reginald Tower, British charge d'affaires at Washington, will ratify on the part of Great Britain.

EIGHT PERSONS PERISHED.

Steamer Nutmeg State Burned to the Waters Edge.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The Bridgeport Steamboat company's steamer Nutmeg State, Capt. Bridgeport at 10 o'clock a. m., caught fire two hours later off Execution Rock and was totally destroyed. At 11 o'clock it was known that eight persons had perished. Several persons were injured.

The City of Lawrence came in sight soon after the fire was discovered and assisted in the rescue of passengers and crew. The Nutmeg State's lifeboats were launched as soon as the City of Lawrence got them pulling distance, but several of them capsized and it was feared that some of the passengers were drowned.

ATTACK ON ANGELES.

One American Killed and Seven Others Wounded.

MANILA, Oct. 17.—The insurgents made an attack upon Angeles at 2:30 a. m. One American was killed and seven were wounded. The Filipinos used artillery, a few shells exploding. The Twelfth, Ninth and Thirteenth regiments engaged the enemy, who retired.

An American scouting party near Baliuat captured 11 Filipinos. Another near Mayacayan captured a Filipino major. All were brought to Manila.

GREAT BRITAIN'S FORCE.

Eighteen Thousand Men Will Sail in the Next Few Days.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The calling out of the Cape Colony volunteers is supplemented by a decision to raise 2,000 more volunteers in Cape Colony and 1,000 in Natal. Thus the total strength of the volunteer forces in both places will amount to 12,500 men.

According to the programme of embarkations from Great Britain next Friday and the four following days which has been published there will be shipped a total of 18,000 troops of all ranks and 1,600 horses. Among the newly chartered vessels are the White Star steamer Britannic and the National liner American.

Since the reports of the fighting at Kimberley and the Orange river bridge, people are urging the immediate removal of families from Dane Junction.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

The new Lutheran seminary building at Hamline was formally dedicated on Sunday.

Minneapolis defeated St. Paul for the American White League trophy by one point.

State high schools have won their contention for direct admission to the university.

The National Live Stock exchange, meets in St. Paul Friday and Saturday of this week.

The Medelia-Fairmount branch of the Northwestern has been formally opened for traffic.

The "longshoremen's strike on the Eastern Minnesota docks at the head of the lakes has ended.

The Produce Exchange building, Minneapolis, burned Thursday, causing a loss of over $100,000.

The condition of the national banks of Minnesota is shown to be most favorable by the last report.

The Minnesota Baptists and Presbyterians met Thursday at Mankato and Blue Earth City, respectively.

The Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission is likely to make a further increase in the inspection fee.

It is stated that the old organization of the First regiment, N. G. S. M., will hold when the Thirteenth returns to the state service.

The board of pardons has commuted the sentence of George J. Ferguson of Itasca to life imprisonment. He is considered morally degenerate.

The American Academy of Railway Surgeons elected Dr. Charles A. Wheaton of St. Paul, president. The next session will be held at St. Paul.

At Minneota, Gislason Brothers' hardware store was entered and about $100 worth of cutlery and revolvers stolen. Three hobbos were captured in possession of the booty.

The Woman's Foreign missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church, embracing Minnesota and the Dakotas, opened its 16th annual meeting at the Central Park Methodist church, St. Paul, Sunday.

In his report to the Minnesota Baptist state convention the colored visitor to the Chicago university says that institution does not, in his opinion, ground students sufficiently strong in the Christian faith.

The heaviest real estate transaction of recent years was completed by the transfer by Smith & Taylor to Charles Lockhart of the Manhattan building, corner of Fifth and Robert streets, practically a cash transaction, at a price of $400,000.

The 26th annual session of the Minnesota Advent Christian conference will be held with Minneapolis Advent Christian church, Fremont and Franklin-fourth avenues north, beginning on Thursday evening, Nov. 9, and continuing the remainder of the week.

George N. Morgan post G. A. R. of Minneapolis held a memorial service Sunday. The mortality in the past has been very great. Since the reorganization of the post in 1891 98 comrades have answered the final roll call. Judge John P. Rea delivered the principal eulogy.

At 2:30 p. m. Sunday a cyclone struck the dwelling of P. Handron, four miles southwest of Murdock, demolishing it entirely. Mrs. Handron and five children, when they saw the storm coming, took refuge in the cellar and escaped with but very little injury. The house and contents were swept away entirely.

The Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mill company will build a new mill in Minneapolis as soon as a site can be determined on. The company's present capacity is 28,000 barrels and this is now inadequate. Work will begin this fall. Minneapolis stockholders now have control of the company and are determined to maintain the city's supremacy in flour making.

The United States supreme court has granted the motion made by Senator Davis asking leave to file an original bill in equity in behalf of the State of Minnesota against the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office. The case involves the public school lands of this state. This action by the court insures the hearing of the case.

Flax receipts at Duluth are averaging about 100,000 bushels a day. It is expected that the receipts for October will foot up 3,000,000 bushels, more than were ever taken in at any terminal point in a corresponding period. Reports to grain men are that the crop in the Northwest is not only the record breaker it was supposed to be, but is far larger than is supposed.

The Merrill-Ring Lumber company of Saginaw, Mich., has purchased of Gratwich, Smith & Fryer of Towanda, N. Y., 18,000 acres of pine land in Lake county. The consideration is withheld, but will approximate $400,000. The purchase joins 7,000 acres the Merrill-Ring company recently purchased from Barrows & Rust of Saginaw, and the total purchases gives the buyers 25,000,000 feet of timber with which to stock its mill at Duluth.

Argued the Grindeland Law.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 18.—The Grindeland law cases have been argued by Attorney General Douglas and former Attorney General Childs for the law, and by Senator Wilson and Mr. Vanderlip of Minneapolis and T. R. Palmer of St. Paul, disputing it. The cases are brought nominally against the sheriffs of Ramsey and Hennepin counties to free from their clutches the two commission merchants they arrested for violation of the law requiring licenses and stated reports, one case to test a wholly domestic transaction, and the other in which the interstate supervision of the general government might conflict.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Oct. 12.

The League of Iowa Municipalities is in session at Des Moines.

It is practically settled that the United States will look after the interests of Great Britain in the Transvaal.

Thomas Lord Rimbull, one of the prominent railroad men of the West, died suddenly at his home in Omaha Monday, aged 63.

Miss Beatrix Hoyt, for three years lady golf champion of America, was defeated at Philadelphia by Mrs. Caleb F. Fox of Rydal, Pa.

The Woman's National Industrial League of Washington has taken the initial steps to raise a fund with which to purchase a home in that city for Admiral Schley.

Friday, Oct. 13.

Four thousand people were killed by an earthquake in the Netherland Indies.

Rockefeller is said to have cornered the lake freight market, "doing up" the Carnegie company.

England is now especially glad that she aided with the United States in our war with Spain.

Two German officers and a hundred native officers are reported to have been butchered in Africa.

Colonel Frost of the First South Dakota volunteers has been appointed major of the Thirty-ninth regiment.

There is no doubt that the Boers have invaded Natal. The Orange Free State burghers have invaded Cape Colony and occupied Philipstown.

Great Britain has informed the South African republic that it will not even discuss the demands contained in the Boer ultimatum. The Boers have formally declared war.

Saturday, Oct 14.

An order for 1,000,000 pounds of corned beef for the British army has been received at Chicago.

William B. Smith, well known as the man who first refined petroleum, is dead at Eureka, Miss., aged 72 years.

The International Trade congress, composed of representatives of nearly every nation, is in session at Philadelphia.

The French cabinet has voted to abolish all French colonies under civil authority and to abolish all military administration.

The German foreign office has been officially informed that the bubonic plague has appeared in North China and in Asiatic Island.

A single order of 450,000 pounds of dressed beef, making fourteen carloads, has just been received by a St. Joseph, Mo., packing house from London, Eng. Some of this consignment will be used by the British army and navy.

Monday, Oct. 16.

A movement has been started at Washington to buy a home for Admiral Schley.

The United States has taken charge of British interests at the Transvaal capital.

Admiral Sampson has formally retired from command of the North Atlantic squadron.

The United States hospital ship Missouri, from New York for Manila, has arrived at Gibraltar.

The German foreign office has been officially informed that the bubonic plague has appeared in North China and in Asiatic Island.

Pekin advices state that the Empress dowager has selected Pu Tsuan, the 9-year-old son of Tsai Lan, to succeed Kwang Hsu as Chinese emperor.

New rebellions have broken out in Sechuan and Hunan, China. The Thibeta king at Batchen Lama has abdicated, being practically deposed by Chinese officials.

Tuesday, Oct. 17.

Aguinaldo's brother is to be shot for treason.

The steamer Nutmeg State burned off the Connecticut coast Saturday. Eight persons perished.

William Wallace Thayer, formerly governor and chief justice of Oregon, is dead at Portland, aged 72 years.

The steamer Gaelic, from the Orient, brought 2,000 bales of silk valued at $2,000,000 and 700,000 pounds of tea.

General Shafter goes on the retired list, but will retain command at San Francisco on account of his Spanish war enlistment.

Professor Edward F. Orton, first president of Ohio state university and since occupying the chair of geology, died suddenly at Columbus.

Lawrence Gronlund, the Socialist writer, died suddenly in New York Sunday, aged 53 years. His most celebrated work was the "Co-Operative Commonwealth."

Wednesday, Oct. 18.

Germans are said to be supplying the Boers with rifles and ammunition.

Two more volunteers were mustered out of service at San Francisco Tuesday.

A regiment of Porto Ricans enlisted for the United States for service against the Boers.

At Leadville, Colo., Paddy Purtell knocked out Denny Needham in the fifth round.

The Louisville and Nashville and the Northern Pacific railroads at Pasco are reported on the eve of a rupture, fiercely.

A permanent good roads association for the Grand Forks-Pembina district of Minnesota has been formed at Duluth.

The temporary adjustment of the Alaskan boundary ordinarily will take effect this week and confirm indefinitely.

Two thousand negro oyster shuckers at Norfolk, Va., are on strike. This being the busiest season of the year, the strike threatens to considerably cripple the industry.

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $60,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections, County, Town and School orders bought.

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON.....Pres H. STEENERSON.....Vice-President.
N. S. GERVAIS.....2d Vice-President. L. ELLINGTON.....Cashier
A. P. HANSON, Asst. Cashier.

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

The Weekly Inter Ocean

Largest Circulation of all Political Papers in the West

Always American—Always Republican

THE WEEKLY INTER OCEAN SUPPLIES ALL NEWS AND BEST CURRENT LITERATURE

The Inter Ocean's Telegraphic Service is Exclusive. Every Column is Bright, Clean and Packed with News.

$1

The Literature of its Columns is equal to that of the best magazines. It is interesting to the children as well as the parents.

The Inter Ocean is a Western Newspaper,

And while it belongs to the family The News of the World, and gives its readers the best and ablest discussions of all questions of the day, it is in full sympathy with the ideas and aspirations of Western people and discusses literature and politics from the Western standpoint.

$1.00—PRICE, ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR—$1.00

Price of Daily by mail - - - $4.00 per year
Price of Sunday by mail - - - 2.00 per year
Daily and Sunday by mail - - - 6.00 per year

The Sunday and Daily Editions of the Inter Ocean are the Best in the West

Subscribe Now

And get the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL from now till January 1st, 1901, for $1.50.

This offer includes the handsome Christmas Editions for the two years. The JOURNAL is the best paper in this Congressional district and is improving with each issue.

THE JOURNAL
CROOKSTON, MINN.

ARRIVED AT HOME

THIRTEEN'H MINNESOTA GIVEN A WARM WELCOME.

Breakfast in St. Paul and Later Proceed to Minneapolis Where the Regiment Is Reviewed by the President—Exercises in the Exposition Building Followed by Final Dispersion.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 18.—The Thirteenth Minnesota, in three sections, arrived here about 6 a. m. and despite the early hour were given an enthusiastic reception. As early as 4 o'clock people began to appear on the streets in the vicinity of the point where the boys were to disembark and by the time the trains arrived the crowd had grown to immense size. After half an hour, in which the relatives of the soldiers were allowed to say a few words of welcome, the regiment formed in line and proceeded to the Auditorium where breakfast was served by the ladies of the city. After breakfast speeches were made by Governor Lind, Mayor Kiefer and E. C. Stringer, the last speaker representing the Commercial club. About 9:30 the regiment again formed in line and returned to the trains which conveyed them to Minneapolis.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 14.—The president's visit to the Twin Cities ended at midnight, when he left for Duluth on a special train over the Eastern Minnesota. The last event in his honor was a public reception at the Auditorium, 7,000 people being crowded into the building long before the hour set for the president's arrival. As many more lingered around the entrances in the bare possibility of catching a glimpse of the chief executive of the nation.

THE NATION'S WELCOME.

President McKinley's Remarks to the Thirteenth Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 14.—From a platform in front of the Minneapolis exposition building President McKinley voiced the nation's welcome to the Thirteenth Minnesota volunteers, just returned from the Philippines, and delivered an address to thousands of cheering people.

Mayor Gray spoke words of greeting to the soldiers and the distinguished guests on behalf of the city and Governor Lind on behalf of the state. The governor paid a strong tribute to the returned volunteers.

President McKinley was greeted with cheers that continued for several minutes and throughout the delivery of his address the applause was frequent. In opening he said:

Tribute to the Volunteers.

"I have come from the capital of the nation that I might give the nation's welcome to a regiment of the nation's defenders. I have come to speak the voice of love and gratitude which comes from every American heart today that sees the flag. I have come to bid you welcome because you did your duty, and that is the highest tribute that can be paid to any soldier anywhere. I do not think the members of this regiment, or the regiments constituting the Eighth army corps in the Philippines, realize the importance and heroism of their action after the treaty of peace was signed and ratified.

"I come to bid you welcome and give you the honor of the nation, because you sustained the flag of the nation, because you refused to stack arms, refused to sound the retreat. And you have come back having a high place in the hearts and affections of the American people and gratitude that will continue for all time. You have also by your services added much to the cause of humanity, added much to the advancement of the civilization which has so characterized the century just now falling away."

Reference to the Philippines.

After discussing the acquisition of territory by the United States during the present century and citing at length the riches of our latest possessions, he said:

"The future of these new possessions is in the keeping of congress, and congress is the servant of the people. That they will be retained under the benign sovereignty of the United States I do not permit myself to doubt. That they will prove a rich and invaluable heritage I feel assured. That congress will provide for them a government which will bring them blessings which will promote their material interests as well as advance their people in the path of civilization and intelligence, I confidently believe. They will not be governed as vassals or serfs or slaves—they will be given a government of liberty, regulated by law, honestly administered, without oppressing exactions, taxation without tyranny, plenty without bribe, education without distraction or social condition, freedom of religious worship and protection in life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

AT WISCONSIN'S CAPITAL

Ten Thousand People Listen to the President's Address.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 17.—Nearly 10,000 persons were massed in front of the state capitol here during the afternoon to hear President McKinley speak. He was cheered enthusiastically from the start. Directly in front of the speaker's stand was massed a body of students from the University of Wisconsin. They took occasion to exercise their lungs vigorously throughout the president's address. At 4:40 the party returned to the train and left for Waukesha where a brief stop was made and the president addressed the 5,000 people gathered about the station.

Previous to his arrival at Madison the president made brief speeches at Galena, Ills., Ipswich, Mountfort Junction, Dodgeville, Barneveld and Mount Horeb, Wis.

PRESIDENT'S IOWA TRIP.

President Makes Short Speeches at Various Iowa Towns.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Oct. 17.—President McKinley's special train arrived here after a trip through Iowa, speaking at half a dozen towns between Cedar Falls and this city, each time receiving an enthusiastic welcome. From here the president goes to Milwaukee and thence back to Washington.

WAS AN EASY WINNER.

Columbia Finished Ten Minutes Ahead in the First Race For the Cup.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The cup which the old schooner America so gallantly defended against all comers over the course around the Isle of Wight in 1851 and brought back across the seas will probably remain here another year, a defiance to the world. In a glorious breeze, over a windward and leeward course of 30 miles, Columbia scored against Shamrock in the first race of the 1899 series for the trophy. She bounded across the finish line fully a mile and a half ahead of the challenger, defeating her by 10 mins. 14 secs. actual time, or 10 mins. 8 secs. corrected time, after allowing the six seconds handicap which Columbia must concede to the challenger on account of her longer water line. It was a decisive contest, a magnificent race, magnificently sailed and magnificently won. Opinion as to

The Merits of the Two Boats

had been somewhat divided as a result of the flukes during the last two weeks. Although the preponderance of native feeling never wavered in its loyalty to the wonderful speed and ability of the white flyer, neutral sharks never thought the Shamrock would be so overwhelmingly defeated as she was in this struggle. The Yankee boat beat her handsomely in windward work on the outward leg and beat her 22 seconds on the run home. There was a good, strong 10 to 12-knot breeze, and it held throughout the race.

Sir Thomas Lipton took his defeat with the spirit of a true sportsman. "It was a fair and square race," said he. "We were beaten fairly. No two boats ever sailed a better race and they were equally well handled, as far as I could see."

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Columbia and Shamrock had fairly started on the second race for the America's cup when Shamrock's topmast was carried away. Columbia kept on her course, according to the agreement made before the race started.

Nearly All Have Reported.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Tuesday was the last day for the reserves to report and the latest information from the quarters shows that nearly all the reserves have reported themselves.

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

DULUTH, Oct. 18.

WHEAT—Cash, No. 1 hard, 68½c, No. 1 Northern, 67½c, No. 2 Northern, 64½c. To Arrive—No. 1 hard, 68½c; No. 1 Northern, 67½c December 67½c; May, 69½c.

FLAX—To arrive, $1.22; October, $1.22; December, $1.21¼.

Minneapolis Grain.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 18

WHEAT—In Store—No. 1 Northern October, 67¾; December, 67½c; May, 70¾c. On Track—No. 1 hard, 69½c; No. 1 Northern, 67c; No. 2 Northern, 65½c.

Sioux City Live Stock.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Oct. 18

HOGS—Market 5c lower. Range of prices, $3.60@3.75.

CATTLE—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $4.00@5.00 for beeves, $2.00@3.15 for cows, bulls and mixed; $3.60@4.10 for stockers and feeders; $3.50@4.00 for calves and yearlings.

St. Paul Union Stock Yards.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Oct. 18

HOGS—Market 5c lower. Range of prices, $3.45@3.60.

CATTLE—Market steady on butcher cattle. Common stockers unsalable.

Sales ranged at $2.85@4.90 for bulls, $2.00@3.15 for cows, $3.60@4.10 for heifers, $3.00@4.25 for steers.

SHEEP—Market dull. Stockers and lambs easier.

Sales ranged at 4.00 for stock lambs, $3.40@4.30 for culls.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18

HOGS—Market dull.

Sales ranged at $3.45@3.60 for mixed and butchers, $3.40@3.60 for good heavy, $3.50@3.60 for rough heavy, $3.45@3.60 for light.

CATTLE—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $4.00@5.80 for beeves, $3.25@5.40 for cows and heifers, $3.25@4.25 for Texas steers, $3.00@4.60 for stockers and feeders.

SHEEP—Market weak.

Sales ranged at $4.00@5.00, $4.00@5.10 for lambs.

Receipts: Hogs 32,000, cattle, 4,000 sheep, 19,000.

Liverpool Grain Prices.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 18.

WHEAT—Opened steady, unchanged to ¼d higher, closed steady, ¼d higher. No. 1 Northern spring, 6s 2d. No. 1 hard Manitoba, 6s 3d. No. 1 California, 6s 3d. Futures opened steady, unchanged to ¼d higher, closed steady, ¼d higher. December, 5s 6¼d. March, 5s 6¼d.

CORN—Opened steady, unchanged to ¼d higher, closed steady, ¼d higher. American mixed, new, 3s 3¼d. American mixed, old, 3s 3¼d. Futures opened steady, unchanged to ¼d higher, closed steady, ¼d higher. December, 3s 3¼d. January, 3s 3¼d.

Crookston Market.

The following are the local markets corrected up to time of going to press:

WHEAT—No. 1 Hard 68 No. 1 Northern 67 No. 2 Northern 64

OATS—26c.

BARLEY—

FLAX—$1.21 to 30c.

FLAX—$1.21

POTATOES—20c

EGGS—20c

BUTTER—16 to 20c.

CHICKENS—10c

HAY—Loose $4.00, loose $4.00.

HOGS—5½c.

CATTLE—2½ to 3½ live weight, 5½ to 6½c dressed beef.

SHEEP—5c.

CHICKENS—10c.

TURKEYS—7c.

GEESE—5 to 6c.

DUCKS—12c.

FLOUR—$3.50 per cwt.

BRAN—$13 per ton.

SHORTS—$12 per ton.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

HISNER'S Rheumatism and Kidney Cure. A sure cure for rheumatism and kidney troubles. Those who drink water from surface wells, which is nearly always charged with alkali are nearly all more or less afflicted with rheumatism and kidney trouble. Ask your neighbor about the good quality of this remedy. Sold by druggists, or sent by mail by C. E. HISNER, Crookston, Minn.

Final Proof.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Sept. 6, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. on November 1, 1899, viz:

EDWARD E. BRAATEN.

H. E. 10826 for the se¼, sw¼ section 30 Township 148 N., Range 48 W.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

John Ereson, Knut Hodlard, Ernest Miller and Hans Chinsey, all of Reidsdor.

SYLVESTER PEYERSON, Register.

233-39]

Preserves

—fruits, jellies, pickles or catsup are more easily, more quickly, more healthfully, sealed with Refined Paraffine Wax than by any other method. Pieces of other cans will be found for in every household. It is clean, tasteless, odorless, and inexpensive. Get a pound parcel of it with a list of its many uses from your druggist or grocer. Sold everywhere. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

Refined Paraffine Wax

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

"The road that made the Northwest Famous."

Burlington Route

Finest Train on Earth from

ST. PAUL

-AND-

Minneapolis

-TO-

CHICAGO

Electric Lights and Steam Heated.

FRANK BROWN....

is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

5 lbs Patent Flour for 1 bu. No. 1 Nor. Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

THE BEST EQUIPPED PRINTING OFFICE IN NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Polk County Journal

Correspondence from all places in Polk county and adjoining counties, not represented by any of the JOURNAL'S newsgatherers, is respectfully solicited.

Call in and see us when in town.

LION COFFEE

Used in Millions of Homes!

Accept no substitute
Insist on LION COFFEE, in 1 lb. pkgs.

Best Coffee for the Money!

Try LION COFFEE and you will never use any other. It is absolutely pure Coffee and nothing but Coffee.

These articles mailed FREE in exchange for lion heads cut from front of 1 lb. LION COFFEE pkgs.

Gold Collar Button.

Mailed free for 8 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and 2-cent stamp. Made of rolled gold and with enameled pearl back; suitable alike for ladies and gentlemen. This shape is handy and popular.

Daisy Neck-Pin.

Genuine Hard-Enamel and Gold.

For 8 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

The Illustration is only to establish actual size. Color a delicate pink, with jewel setting and gold rim and bar. Best enamel finish, stylish and durable.

"The Lion's Bride."

Mailed free for 12 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and 2-cent stamp. An unusually fine picture, from the brush of the noted German artist, Gabriel Max. It is founded on Chamisso's poem, "The Lion's Bride." The story is interesting, and we send with each picture a handsome folder, containing the story in full and telling all about it. Size, 16x20 inches.

"Dorothy and Her Friends."

A bright, cheery picture.

For 8 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

A bright, cheery picture, representing a little girl playing with her pet rabbit. The prize is exquisite in color and finish. The prize illustrated is a true likeness.

For 16 lion heads and 2-cent stamp we will mail it them, ready for hanging.

Stylish Belt-Buckle.

welcomed for "dressed up" occasions by the ladies when like to wear different colored suites. The gold-finish goes well with any of them. Given for 20 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Ladies' Apron.

Made of good quality lawn, with alternate reveres and tucks; bound home at bottom, and is neatly gathered into belt. Is an improved ruffled article. Size, 32x40 inches.

Given for 20 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Fruit Picture.

Size, 16x24 inches. Given for 8 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

50-Foot Clothes Line.

Given for 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Made of closely braided cotton threads, strong, and will give the best of satisfaction.

Box of Colored Crayons.

Handsomely gold plated, with lithographed design, and red cedar wood colored first in the center. This will be found a superior article. Size, 3½x4½ inches.

Given for 10 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

Five crayons, fifteen different colors, are contained with each box, assorted coloring. Each crayon is wrapped with colored paper, to prevent breaking.

Child's Drawing Book.

A collection of nice outline figures bound in a book with sheets of basic paper between. The figures on these pages the children can trace with carbon beneath, thus affording copies, as well as practice in the head and eye. These drawing books and the box of crayons are very well worth. There are six different kinds, and each drawing book requires 6 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

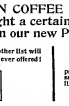
Naval Box Kite.

See it Fly!

The celebrated box kite, now so much talked of. Flies to great heights and long distances, and comes easily folded, but can quickly be spread to its full size. Excellent toy when boys can, and other persons also are interested.

Mailed free for 40 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp.

"India."



Similar to "England," which has been favorably mentioned in previous issues. Shows the dawn of history. The illustration shows part of the game. With a little practice, this game will be found very entertaining. A game which people never tire of playing. Given for 20 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Scissors.

Length, five inches, suitable for cutting, trimming and general household use. Given for 12 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

Razor.

Given for 35 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. A finished razor, made of best English steel, and extra bodies ground.

Rubber Dressing Comb.

For 10 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Length, 7 inches. Fine teeth, with handle of genuine hard rubber, highly finished. Appropriate for a ladies' dressing case or for use in the household.

Alarm Clock.

Sent by express, prepaid, for 150 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

Frame beautifully finished. Height, 6½ inches. Width, 3 inches high. A beauty and good time-keeper.

Mantel Clock.

Sent by express, prepaid, for 200 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

Fine case, with fifteen different colors, and each painted with contrasting coloring. Each clock is warranted without any key, and to prevent losing.

Ladies' Scissors.

Length, five inches, suitable for cutting, trimming and general household use. Given for 12 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

STRENGTH, PURITY AND FLAVOR

Stamp Collection.

Given for 50 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. A finished collection, made of best English stock, and extra bodies ground.

Game "India."

Similar to "England," which has been favorably mentioned in previous issues. Shows the dawn of history. The illustration shows part of the game. With a little practice, this game will be found very entertaining. A game which people never tire of playing. Given for 20 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Every time you buy a pound package of LION COFFEE you have bought something else, too. Don't overlook it! You have bought a certain portion of some article to be selected by you from our new Premium Lists!

THE ABOVE ARE ONLY A FEW OF THE LION COFFEE PREMIUMS. Another list will shortly appear in this paper! Don't miss it! The grandest list of premiums ever offered!

You always know LION COFFEE by the wrapper. It is a sealed package, with the lion's head in front. It is absolutely pure if the package is unbroken. LION COFFEE is roasted the day it leaves the factory.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

When writing for premiums send your letter in the same envelope or package with the lion heads. If more than 15 lion heads are sent, you can save postage by trimming down the margin. Ask your grocer for large illustrated premium list. Address all letters to the

WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal,
BY N. S. GORDON.

Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

THE McIntosh Tribune keeps advocating good sound republican doctrine, and is doing it in an able manner. Continue the work, Brother McRae next year will see Polk county roll up a large republican vote.

BEMIDJI is indeed fortunate in having such a bright, breezy newspaper as is the Beltrami County News. Last week the size was increased to six pages. The News is evidently growing with the times.

GRAND FORKS was in search of sand and they sent a committee over to Crookston to examine the quality of the material which is to be found hereabouts. That's right, neighbors, Crookston has lots of sand, speaking either literally or metaphorically.

THE Women's National Industrial League has decided to dabble a little in politics and patriotism, and are arranging to buy a home in Washington for Admiral Schley. This looks as if it were another attempt to keep alive the Sampson-Schley controversy and as such is to be deplored.

P. McDONNELL paid off his help yesterday, an event which occurs monthly, and which is always welcomed by Grand Forks dealers. Yesterday Mr. McDonald paid out $10,487, and everybody is glad—Grand Forks Herald. — Crookston merchants and other business men will be glad next year while the macadam paving is being laid in this city.

IF, as the democratic and populist papers are chiming, the president's western trip may be properly regarded as the opening gun of the campaign of 1900, it will assuredly prove as destructive to the cause of his opponents as ware Dewey's guns at Manila, for everywhere the president was graciously and enthusiastically received by the people.

THE building of new farm residences, barns, stables, granaries and the making of numerous other improvements on the farms throughout Polk county—which facts the JOURNAL records almost every week—is evidence of the enterprise, industry and prosperity of the farming community, and when the farmer is on the upgrade all other classes are sure to be in a flourishing state. Scientific methods applied to agriculture cannot fail in the long run to pay.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY was at Minneapolis to "give the nation's welcome to a regiment of the nation's defenders" and, as is his wont, he spoke in a simple, straight forward, clear, intelligent manner, that both pleased and persuaded his hearers. Reviewing the history of the territorial expansion of the United States he showed that there were opponents to each acquisition, and in each case these obstructionists were proved to be in the wrong. It is, therefore, a legitimate conclusion to draw that a like fate awaits those who are now opposing McKinley's policy in the Philippines.

THE Thirteenth Regiment, which has done such gallant and efficient service in the Philippines, returned to its home state last Thursday and was welcomed at Minneapolis by city, state and nation. Though the demonstration in honor of the boys in blue was perhaps the most enthusiastic and magnificent the state has ever accorded any body of men, it was deserved. These soldiers, mostly young men, risked life for love of country and humanity, they fought bravely and endured patiently, in a word, they acquitted themselves like men, and for such deeds they have endeared themselves to all. They have given back their arms with no blot upon them and have betaken themselves to the more quiet duties of the civilian's life, richer not merely in experience but in the thought that they have acted well their part.

IF anti-expansion, so called, is made a part of the platform of the democrats next year it will, indeed, be a losing issue for them, and the leaders in the party are beginning to recognize this, as witness this from W. J. Bryan last week: "I do not deem it advisable or possible to state so far ahead what issue will be chief in importance." But the majority of the democratic editors keep hammering away at the administration's Philippine policy. Really, we tremble for the digestive apparatus of some of the brethren when we think of the vast quantities of crow that they will have to eat before many months.

THE TIMES' ARGUMENTS (?).

The reply of the Times in Saturday evening's issue, to the JOURNAL'S editorials anent the recent Street Fair, is further evidence in support of the position we took, namely, that the Fair was not managed for the benefit of the public but that private interests were conserved. This proof may be found not merely in what is said, but in what is not said. And it is further manifest from the Times' leader that that paper will, to serve its own purpose, misuse facts also.

The Times says that the editor of this paper said he knew all about fairs. We made no such claim. When speaking of the question of advertising and printing and the large bill for such work which the Times put in, we said we had had experience in the management of fairs which enabled us to speak intelligently on the subject of advertising for fairs. This is an entirely different matter from claiming that we knew all about fairs. The Times further quotes the JOURNAL as saying, with reference to what the Times editor did during a short period preceding the fair, "and yet his own business was neglected." We never said that, but quoted these words, with the exception of the first three, from a statement in the Times. We cite these two instances merely to show the habit the Times has of distorting the truth. It is done whenever the facts are not in accord with the wishes of the Times.

The Times, in its reply, entirely evades the issue raised by the JOURNAL. We charged that the hill presented by the Times was "just about double what it ought to have been" and the Times rejoins by saying that the proprietor of the Times could have made more money if he had not acted as secretary of the Fair Association. Even if this statement were true, and we very much doubt it, it does not answer at all what the JOURNAL said, and the silence of the Times in regard to the worthless entertainers and the disgraceful Midway goes to show that the JOURNAL'S claim of misused funds in this direction was correct. Possibly it may be funny to say that "the (the JOURNAL editor) wades into the management of the recent Carnival with the impetuosity of a hired girl going through the roof ahead of the kerosene can" but that is no argument against the JOURNAL'S position that the people's money was not only not well spent, but was used to further private interests, that the Times got several hundred dollars more for printing than should have been spent in that way.

We were, as the Times intimates, one of the managers of the State Fair and we invite inspection of our accounts and court criticism of the way in which money was handled in the agricultural department, and we cannot but think that were the Times entirely above suspicion that paper would not resent, as it has, any criticism whatsoever of the management of the Carnival.

But the Times says, "they (the people of Polk county) do not fail to remember how he gave it to them in the neck on their prize exhibit at the recent State Fair." By this statement the Times charges that we were responsible for the failure of the Polk county exhibit to get first prize, and the logical conclusion to draw from this is that we should have used our official position to secure the first prize for Polk county at all hazards. This would have been dishonorable, but we are not surprised at the Times advocating such action, for it is just that kind of thing that we charge the Times did in connection with the Street Fair. Had we used our personal influence with the judge to secure a prize for our own county—it would have been useless to try to do this for Professor Atkinson was an honorable judge—we would have been on a par with the street fair manager using his influence to have an excessively large amount of printing go to his own office. No one would have heeu more pleased than we to have seen Polk county win, but the judge decided otherwise.

But the question of the Polk county exhibit is one upon which the Times would better have been silent, but since that paper has mentioned the matter we will state a few facts that the people may know how much genuine interest the Times has in the welfare of Polk county. As much as we could we aided Mr. Purvis in collecting the large and varied exhibit which was so handsomely arranged at the State Fair, and we freely gave him the use of the columns of the JOURNAL to advertise the prizes he offered for grains, grasses, etc., or for any other purpose in connection with getting up of the exhibit. On the other hand both the Times and the Tribune—which are really under the same management—charged full rates for publishing the notices asking farmers to bring in samples of grains, etc., and the list of premiums offered by Mr. Purvis. How public spirited!

The Street Fair had our loyal support from the start, while the Polk county exhibit did not have the support of the Times till the latter saw that in spite of it the exhibit would be a big success, and then, and not till then, did the Times begin to hoom the matter.

One should administer the affairs of a public position for the benefit and welfare of the public and when a man misuses such an office he deserves pnihle censure.

Michael Fitzpatrick, who was in the Polk county jail two weeks ago, plead guilty, at Fargo last week, to the charge of gambling at Grand Forks, N. D. and paid his fine of $100. But he was no sooner out of the court room than he was rearrested for escaping from an officer. The way of the transgressor is hard.

Some idea of the magnitude of the poultry interests of the northwest may be gathered from the number of entries made in Superintendent Parlin's poultry department at the recent Minnesota State Fair. Total entries, 2325; pigeons 299; ducks 95; geese 40; turkeys 35; Golden Pheasants 16, rabbits 42; balance fowls and chicks. .

After eighteen years of service Conductor James Sturdevant was notified recently by the Great Northern railway company that his services would no longer be needed. Upon inquiring of his superintendent as to the cause of dismissal he was told that a spotter had reported him. As the Cass Lake Times says: This method of the Railroad Co., discharging a conductor of ten to fifteen years' service—judging him unheard—just on the report of a "spotter," is not the most commendable.

Notes From Exchanges.

Warren Sheaf: A monster pumpkin has been raised by John G. Anderson, of Warrenton, and same is now on exhibition in the Sheaf window. It is five feet and one inch in circumference, and weighs 57 lbs. Who says now we can't raise pumpkins in the Red River Valley.

Thief River Falls News: Duluth is to have a good roads convention Oct. 17, and it should be attended by representatives from this section. If all the supervisors of every town in Red Lake and Marshall counties would undoubtedly do more good than attending all the political conventions to be held in the next ten years.

Ada Herald: Iver Thompson brought in some apples last week which he raised. They were of the Siberian crab variety, not good for eating raw, but most excellent for sauce, preserves and such. If that was the only apple we could raise here it would go a good ways in providing healthy food for cooking purposes.

Halstad Reporter: The harvesting syndicate consisting of C. A. Anderson, G. Kvanvig, Andrew Syverson, Amon Peterson and Ole Rundal finished threshing one of their fields last Friday, being 30 acres on B. B. Larson's farm, which yielded 18 bushels per acre. When farmers give away crops yielding 18 bushels in a hail stricken year you might suspect that we have a good country here.

Brainerd Dispatch: Simon Relshus was appointed chief grain inspector "not a single car of wheat has been graded No. 1 hard and less than one-half has been graded No. 1 northern," wails a populist sheet. The pops who expected that everything would be "No. 1 hard" when Lind put one of his own over the grain department are now kicking themselves all over.

Poultry Herald: It is the early hatched pullets, those that are well matured, before cold weather sets in, that make the winter layers. This is especially true of pullets of the Asiatic and American varieties. Pullets of the Leghorn varieties can be hatched later in the season and yet be matured and brought to the laying point by fall and will if given proper care, furnish many eggs during the winter season when eggs bring good prices.

Fergus Falls Journal: A Minneapolis man, who was bitten by a dog, has sued the owner for damages for personal injuries and for time lost in caring for the wound. Here's hoping that he gets all he asks. There are some people who think their dogs have a natural born right on the public highways than have peaceable pedestrians, and people are so used to being chased and reserved by worthless curs that they seldom go so far as to enter even a protest.

Bemidji News: Several violations of the game laws have been reported to the game wardes within the past week and steps will be taken to punish the guilty parties. The commission would find it advantageous to have a paid warden at this point, if they possess any actual desire to protect the game. They need a deputy warden to cover the country over this big territory. A respectable salary would be the proper thing, if efficient service is desired.

Turtle River Plus Tree: A citizen of Bemidji called in his hand a letter signed in some way and by somebody. The signature was submitted to one citizen, who remarked that it resembled a parlor fight: another said it was a case of parrot and monkey: still another was sure it resembled a nominating convention; while a fourththought it was a picture of a log-jam. One was sure it was a boiler-explosion; another a cyclone; another the razzle dazzle; but Attorney Street, arriving on the scene, cleared up the mystery by saying it was thesignature of Tama Bixby.

Bemidji News: The land area of the proposed "national game and forestry reserve" in this section comprises over 1000 sections, the greater part of which can be converted into good agricultural lands. This territory will afford locations for at least 4000 settlers or home seekers, who in a few years would contribute materially to the prosperity and wealth of this upper country. Whether the common people can afford to relinquish such a large district for the purpose outlined by the game and forestry promoters is very questionable.

Ada Index: Last spring Bosworth Bros. bought the E½ NW¼ section 5, Mcdonaldsville—a mile and a half from Ada. They paid $12.50 per acre. There being a fraction over 80 acres, the exact amount paid for the land was $1,000.50. They broke the land in the spring and seeded the same to flax. Last week they threshed and after putting aside as much flax for seed as they used in the spring they sold the crop and received a check for $1010—$5.50 more than they paid for the land in the spring. Thus the land cost them just what the work they put on it is worth.

McIntosh Tribune: It was with profound astonishment that we read the resolution passed by our Honorable Board of County Commissioners, at their last session, reducing the responsibility of Ex-Treasurer Beaudry's bondsmen to 50 cents on the dollar, owing to some of the bondsmen having signified their intention of disputing their responsibility. The commissioners, we believe, have o'erstepped their bounds, and they should be apprised of this fact by a remonstrance from the tax payers of the country as they are the ones who have to foot the bill. A settlement with the bondsmen for 50 cents on the dollar means a loss to the tax payers of Polk county of $2018.70, which is literally given as a present to the several bondsmen.

Literary Notes.

NEW LIPPINCOTT.

Great forces are working for the Jew. Dreyfus the martyr, Herzl the patriot, and Zangwill the author represent these in three of their phases. Zangwill has never spoken so courageously as in his paper called "Zionism" in the October "New Lippincott." It represents his convictions and his nature; depth of feeling garbed in the purist-color of picturesque.

THE OCTOBER ATLANTIC.

President Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard University, opens the October Atlantic with a characteristically original and forcible paper on Recent Changes in Secondary Education. In fiction, Miss Johnston's thrilling and powerful serial, To Have and to Hold, becomes even more breathlessly exciting as it approaches its as yet skillfully concealed climax. In shorter stories, Mrs. Prince's naive and delightfully humorous P'tit Jean, Miss Earle's tender and romantic Through Old Rose Glasses, and the ingenious and brilliant Virginia Correspondence leave little to be desired.

TOM REED ON FRENCH JUSTICE.

During the coming winter the Hon. Thomas B. Reed, ex-speaker of the House of Representatives, will be a frequent contributor to The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia. Mr. Reed's papers will, in the main, deal with national affairs, and will form a most important and interesting contribution to the history of American politics. Mr. Reed's first article, in-like those to follow, crosses the Atlantic for its subject and tells how the procedure of French law courts, and especially those involved in the Dreyfus case, impresses an American lawyer. This paper, entitled Paris and French Justice, will appear in The Saturday Evening Post of October 7.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

That there are five thousand theatres in America and that one million and a half people attend them each week-day night, spending seventy millions of dollars a year on theatre-going, are the surprising facts with which Mr. Franklin Fyles, the dramatic editor of the New York Sun, will open an important series, in the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal.

The author of the famous "Mr. Dooley," Finley P. Dunne, has joined the literary forces of The Ladies' Home Journal, and will create this fall in that magazine a new character, called "Molly Donahue, who lives across the street from Mr. Dooley."

Sir Henry Irving devoted part of his summer holidays to writing an article, which he has given to The Ladies' Home Journal. It is called "Shakespeare's Influence in Small Communities," and tells how the study, reading aloud and acting of Shakespeare's works may be followed in communities away from the larger centres.

THE FORUM.

The articles in the October Forum are of great interest, a number being written by widely known men. Senator J. C. Burrows forecasts the Presidential contest of 1900 with a paper on "This Year's Elections: Their Bearing on the Presidential Election." Comptroller of the Currency, Charles G. Dawes, writes a paper of much importance on "The Present Outlook for Currency Reform." The Dean of Canterbury, F. W. Farrar, speaks with no uncertain sound upon "The Sunday Question;" Oscar P. Austin, Chief of the United States Bureau of Statistics, gives an interesting account of the rapidly growing "Commercial Japan"; Prof. Sohm, of Leipsig, a member of the Code Commission, tells of the true significance of "The civil Code of Germany"; and Charles Howard Shinn considers, in his article on the "Literature of the Pacific Coast," the prominent part that Californian writers have taken in the department of fiction.

Births.

SIVERTSON

Born to Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Sivertson on Thursday Oct. 12, a girl.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE
Makes the food more delicious and wholesome
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

—Take your prescriptions to A. G. Anderson.

—L. Larson was up from Shelly yesterday.

—See A. G. Anderson for your paints and oils.

—Mrs. A. A. Olds left last nigt for a week's visit with relatives in Barnesville.

—Dr. Gendron made a trip on professional business to Benoit yesterday.

FOR SALE—First class restaurant outfit complete in all respects. Apply to W. W. Hoch.

—A. G. Anderson has a most complete stock of drugs and all the popular patent medicines.

—Miss Blanche Emery, of Pine Island, is the new primary teacher in the Crookston schools.

—Mrs. Ed Wilson left for Minneapolis where she will visit other relatives. Miss Hanna Ekhoff accompanied her as far as Grand Forks and spent the day there.

—Dr. Watson, of Red Lake Falls, returned yesterday from an extended trip to Montreal, Canada, and took the first train for his home.

—Mrs. H. Wallman, of Red Wing, who has been the guest of the family of Chris. Ekhoff for some time left last Sunday morning for Winnipeg.

—E. M. Lancaster went to Boston, Mass. last week to see his father and help him celebrate his 100th birthday anniversary which occurred Sunday, Oct. 15.

—The concert given by the Schubert Concert Company at the M. E. church Tuesday night was a musical treat that was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience.

—In the Congregational church next Sunday morning Rev. Herman P. Fisher will preach on "The Great Salvation" and in the evening on "The Great Separation."

—Bert Moore came up Tuesday from Beltrami where he has been working for several months on the farm of Ed. Johnson. He will probably spend the winter in the city.

—Charley Latta the real estate man, sold a house and lot on South Ash street yesterday to A. M. Kleven. Mr. and Mrs Kleven have already gone to housekeeping in their new home.

—Mrs. J. E. Jerome and Mrs. A. D. Stephen's will entertain tomorrow in the old Columbia club rooms in honor of their sisters, Miss Ward and Miss Cameron respectively, who are visiting in the city.

—A musicale will be given at South Crookston tomorrow night, the proceeds to be used in putting in more electric lights in the hall and buying more singing books. Mrs. Hays' "Hallelujah chorus" will be one of the special features.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good they can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by all druggists, price 75c per bottle.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

M. MAGNUSSEN:::
New and Second Hand
Furniture
AND Hardware
Everything you need to furnish a house... CROOKSTON, MINN.

JOHN CARLSON
Headquarters for Staple and Fancy
GROCERIES
Fresh and Canned Fruit
Butter and Eggs
Taken in Exchange
Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block, Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fontaine & Anstine's. Office hours—9 to 12 a. m; 1 to 5 p. m; 7 to 8 p.m

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR RELIABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice, Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday. Morning, 10:30, even ing 7:30. Holy Communion the First Sunday of every Month. Reader you are welcome.
REV. H. B. GREEN, R. D.
Rector

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

Strayed.

From the farm of A. H. Taylor in the town of Fanny, one month ago, a Newfoundland dog. Finder will please leave at Collins livery barn in Crookston. Liberal reward.

FOR SALE.

Imported Yorkshire Swine and Shropshire Sheep at reasonable prices.

For full particulars address

A. W. EDSON,
Austin, Minn.

THIS CARD
OF TRAINS.
Crookston

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep't
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and Mont.	8:37 pm	8:37 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	8.30 a m	8:30 a m

C. A. SHARREY, Agt. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A.
Crookston, Minn. St. Paul, Minn

ARRIVE	LEAVE
6:55 am *Grand Forks, North and West	7:00 am
9:00 pm Night, St. Paul and points east	8:05 pm
6:30 pm †St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls	9.30 am
4.35 pm *Fosston, Bemidji, Duluth and Superior	5:00 am
6.45 pm St. Vincent to Pasco	7.15 am
8:25 am Fargo to St. Vincent	3.30 pm

CITY AND VICINITY.

—F. Wagner was down from Fanny last Saturday.

—A. L. Steele, of Northland, has a new granary 18 x 24.

—A. Paulsberg, of Maple Bay was in the city last Sunday.

—W. E. Black, of Fosston, was a Crookston visitor Sunday.

—W. F. Kelso, of Hallock, spent last Friday in Crookston.

—F. R. Youngren, themusic dealer, went to St. Paul last Friday.

—Mr. and Mrs. Carruth, of Grand Forks, Sundayed in Crookston.

—Mr. and Mrs. R. Michaels, of Fanny, were in the city last Saturday.

—Chris. Wiedenhefer, of Fisher spent last Saturday at the county seat.

—C. D. Billings took in the big demonstration at Minneapolis last Thursday.

—Ole L. Kleven, of Higdem, has erected on his place a new two story house 16 x 20.

—Miss Jane Martin who has been visiting at Red Lake Falls, returned Monday night.

—Will Bloom expects to leave in about a month for Arizona, where he will spend the winter.

—Attorney Van R. Brown, from Red Lake Falls, was in Crookston Monday on legal business.

—T. A. Johnson, of Northcote, has gone down into Wilkin county to organize Woodmen lodges.

Th. Berg, one of McIntosh's merchants, spent Sunday at the county seat, returning home Monday morning.

—Dr. Whetstone and wife, of St. Vincent, Sundayed in Crookston, taking the north bound train Monday morning.

—Conductor Percy Baker, who was on the sick list for several days took charge of his train again the latter part of last week.

—O. Nelson, of Fertile, spent Sunday in Crookston.

—S. C. Johnson left last Friday for a week's visit in Iowa.

—N. McDougal, of Lockhart, was in Crookston Saturday.

—Steve Collins has a new barn on his large farm at Keystone.

—The Sherman House is now in charge of Landlord Gunnon.

—J. M. Palmer, of Argus, was in Crookston a short time last Saturday.

—Crops in the town of Esther this year will average 22 busbels to the acre.

—Ole E. Olson, of Higdem, has built a new barn on his farm, size 24 x 40.

—John Myerchin, of Northland, is the owner of a new spacious barn 30 x 40.

—G. H. Fargo, of Euclid, spent Sunday in the city at the home of his daughter.

—M. Doyle, in the town of Esther, has built a new granary on his 400 acre farm.

—H. Gendron was in from Gendron was in from Gentilly on business last Saturday.

—Mrs. W. E. Kelsey went to Grand Forks on the Northern Pacific last Saturday morning.

—Don't pay too much for your coal. Call and see Vance & Stone and get their prices.

—E. A. Webster took the train for Fisher Tuesday morning to do some collecting in that vicinity.

—House, 311 Fourth street, for rent or sale. Inquire at once of Mrs. H. E. Cooke, 314 Houston avenue.

—Today says the Ada Herald, occurs the wedding of G. L. Alrick, of Perley, to Carrie Lund, of Hendrum.

—Good coal means solid comfort for those cold winter days and nights. Vance & Stone will give you the right article.

—Frank G. Horton, the grain buyer, at Sherack, will soon build a two story residence and store, size of latter 18 x 24.

—W. A. Case, of Warren, state organiser of the Modern Woodmen, organized a lodge of that order at Eldred last Saturday.

—Miss Clara Bruce left last Thursday evening for St. Paul, where she will live with a sister and study shorthand and typewriting.

—George Purvis has bought from Judge Watts 80 acres of land which lies next to his holding in the southeastern part of the city.

—Miss Betsy Olson, who has been residing with her uncle at Key West has gone to Carthage Junction where she will make her future home

—Victor Anderson, one of the Minnesota boys just back from the Philippines, reached Crookston Saturday for a short visit with relatives.

—The ladies of the Congregational church will serve a chicken pie supper at 6 o'clock tomorrow evening in the room above Miller and Foote's office.

—W. H. Bradish and Hugh Robertson have returned from their hunting and fishing trip to Cass Lake and vicinity. They report a good haul of fish.

—Gus Schmidt and force went out to Thief River Falls last Monday to do some work in the line of decoration upon some of the houses in that burg.

—Martin Hillard and Ludwig Larson, prominent farmers living near each other in the town of Esther, have each recently erected a large barn.

—Chas. Teel Sr., of Euclid, has built a large barn on his place that is capable of holding thirty horses. He has also a new ice house and wood shed combined.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—It is just possible that the old school house in South Crookston may be bought by the city and used as a pest house. The poor committee of the council are investigating the advisability of the action.

—Those who took advantage of the sale and paid but half their real estate taxes last spring should remember that the balance should be paid not later than Oct. 31, to avoid the penalty of ten per cent which will be attached if not paid by that date.

—Now is the time to fix up for winter. We have quite an accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—Miss Kittie Robertson, of Fairmont, won the piano in the Minneapolis Times popular stenographer contest. She had promised that in case she won first prize she would give the instrument to the Odd Fellows Home at Northfield, hence Odd Fellows all over the state assisted her.

—J. P. McDonald was up from Climax last Friday.

—John Quist, of Argyle, was in the city Saturday last.

—J. O'Brecht was down from Fanny last Friday on business.

—Alfred Campion, of Angus, spent last Thursday night in Crookston.

—Fix up your cellars and bank the house. It will be only a short time now before winter sets in.

—Charley March, manager of T. B. Walker's mills at Okely, spent Saturday and Sunday in the city.

Rev. Mr. McKenzie, of Angus, was in the city a few hours Tuesday morning. He was on his way north.

—Special sale of dress goods and flannels at the Strawbridge Mercantile Company's store for next ten days.

—For next ten days 15 to 40 per cent. off fancy and plain dress goods at the Strawbridge Mercantile Company's store.

—See Vance & Stone before you buy your winter's coal supply. They have all kinds of coal at the lowest prices.

—Mrs. Wm. Conger went to McIntosh Saturday to visit with her son Mr. Conger, the cashier of the Citizens bank there.

—Thos. A. Wiley started Monday morning for North Red Lake to locate Charley Jacobson on a claim in township 153, range 30.

—Paul Nelson, who tills the soil four miles west of Euclid, reaped a fine crop of wheat which averages 29 bushels to the acre.

—The Strawbridge Mercantile Company, opposite Hotel Crookston, are having a big marked-down sale on dress goods and flannels.

—Engineer J. F. Hawkins, who worked on the new saw mill at East Grand Forks, returned to his home in Crookston last Thursday.

—Sheriff Harding, of Cass county, was in Crookston last Thursday night, proceeding Friday morning to St. Hilaire on a business trip.

—M. H. Brown left Tuesday morning for Gull Lake where he is making preparations for getting out a large supply of ties and poles this winter.

—Mike Saegl, of Tabor, has built a large barn 30 x 40 with lean-to 16 x 40, 16 foot posts and brick foundation, and he is now having the building painted.

—The school house in school district No. 218 in the town of Euclid, which was struck by lightning last August, has had $50 worth of repairs put upon it.

—Miss Laikin, of Warren, who came down to consult Dr. Morley, the eye specialist, was entertained last Friday night by Mrs. H. M. Green.

—W. D. Scott, formerly laudlord of Hotel Crookston, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Breckenridge division of the Great Northern.

—A new overhead bridge on Seventh street is among the possibilities. The city engineer is preparing plans and specifications for such a bridge and is estimating the cost.

—Every day finds the railroad trains going in the direction of the lumber camps filled to overflowing with men on their way to their winter's work in the woods.

—Alex McKinnon, chairman of the State Board of Appeals in the matter of grain grading, has been in the city during the past week looking after his farming interests.

—The Art Exhibit in connection with the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church last Friday evening was a great success and was enjoyed by a large company of people.

—Fred Harris has finished work on the Hallock telephone exchange and is overhauling the system at Crookston here, putting in copper returns in place of the iron returns now in use.

—Albert Marshlx has built and opened up a new store at Sherack, southeast of Tabor, and is now prepared to deal out dry goods and groceries of the best kind to all customers.

—Mrs. O. A. Lee, after visiting in the city for several days with her daughter Mrs. O. K. Berget, left yesterday morning for Akely where she will join her husband who is working in the saw mills.

—Jerry Sweeney, of the Minnesota Type Foundary, gave the JOURNAL a call last Saturday. He was on his way back from Red Lake Falls, where he was negotiating to put in a new newspaper press.

—Ben Strawbridge, editor of the Cass Lake Times, came in Saturday afternoon and that evening took the second degree in Masonary. He spent Sunday in the city visiting friends and relatives.

—Judge Watts left Monday morning for Badger and Roseau, where he will hold short sessions of court for the purpose of of issuing naturalization papers. Two days of the latter part of the week the Judge will spend at Hallock on similar business.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....in the Northwest.

YOU NEED A SUIT AND OVERCOAT

C. O. D. CLOTHING STORE

S. C. Johnson's

Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale	35c
Oats, per bushel	28c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs	75c
Shorts, 100 lbs	65c
Bran, 100 lbs	60c
Shelled Corn, per bu	45c
Condition Powder, per pkg	25c
Shorts, per ton	$25.00
Bran, per ton	10.00

Cedar Posts from 12½c to 15c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

Coal Doesn't hurt by keeping.....

Many other things are perishable, but no sort of weather affects Coal that is stored away

That's one point.

Another is that coal is always cheaper in the summer than in the winter—it is easier to get—easier to transport.

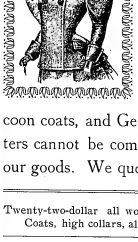
That's another point.

Well, don't you think, or rather don't you know, that you can save considerable on your coal by ordering now?

That's the best point.

VANCE & STONE

The New York Store



WINTER rapidly approaching necessitates the wearing of heavy and extra apparel. To reduce our heavy stock of Cloaks and Furs, and to give each Lady a DECIDED bargain we offer many specials. This year we have made a specialty in heavy Fur Garments, the prices of which are far lower than elsewhere. Ladies' Astrachan, Seal and coon coats, and Gents' dog, Russian calf and goat skin Ulsters cannot be compared in any city in price and quality to our goods. We quote only a few of our many bargains.

Twenty-two-dollar all wool Chinchilla and Nigger Head Storm Coats, high collars, all Silk lined, special at $12.50

Fur Collarettes in Coney, Astrachan, Electric Seal, Mink, Etc., from ..... 1.98 to $20

Ladies' and Gents' heavy fleece lined Shirts and Drawers at, each 49c

REMNANTS --- REMNANTS

After going through our Departments we have found many Remnants of Dry Goods which we have placed upon the Bargain Table at less than cost. Now is the opportunity to get bargains for little money. Ask for a Cloak Catalogue Souvenir—which is issued free.

A. CHABOT, PROP.

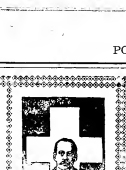
DEFECTIVE PAGE

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By Charles M. Sheldon.

Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.



CHAPTER I.

For hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow his steps.

It was Friday morning, and the Rev. Henry Maxwell was trying to finish his Sunday morning sermon. He had been interrupted several times and was growing nervous as the morning hours were away and the sermon grew very slowly toward a satisfactory finish.

"Mary," he called to his wife as he went up stairs after the last interruption, "if any one comes after this I wish you would say that I am very busy and cannot come down unless it is something very important."

"Yes, Henry. But I am going over to visit the kindergarten, and you will have the house all to yourself."

The minister went up into his study and slant the door. In a few minutes he heard his wife go out.

He settled himself at his desk with a sigh of relief and began to write. His text was from 1 Peter ii. 21.

"For hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow his steps."

He had emphasized in the first part of his sermon the atonement as a personal sacrifice, calling attention to the fact of Jesus' suffering in vicarious way in his life as well as in his death. He had gone on to emphasize the atonement from the side of example, giving illustrations from the life and teaching of Jesus to show how faith in the Christ helped to save men because of the pattern or character he displayed for their imitation. He was now on the third and last point, the necessity of following Jesus in his sacrifice and example.

He had just put down, "(3) Steps—what are they?" and was about to enumerate them in logical order when the bell rang sharply. It was one of those clockwork bells and always went off as a clock might go if it tried to strike 12 all at once.

Henry Maxwell sat at his desk and frowned a little. He made no movement to answer the bell. Very soon it rang again. Then he rose and walked over to one of his windows, which commanded a view of the front door.

A man was standing on the steps. He was a young man very shabbily dressed.

"Looks like a tramp," said the minister. "I suppose I'll have to go down, and—"

He did not finish the sentence, but went down stairs and opened the front door.

There was a moment's pause as the two men studied each other. Then the shabby looking young man said:

"I'm out of a job, sir, and thought maybe you might put me in the way of getting something."

"I don't know of anything. Jobs are scarce," replied the minister, beginning to shut the door slowly.

"I didn't know but you might perhaps be able to give me a line to the city railway or superintendent of the shops or something," continued the young man, shifting his faded hat from one hand to the other nervously.

"I never do," said the minister. "You will have to excuse me. I am very busy this morning. I hope you will find something. I'm sorry I can't give you anything to do here. But I keep only a horse and a cow and do the work myself."

The Rev. Henry Maxwell closed the door and heard the man walk down the steps. As he went up into his study he saw from his hall window that the man was going slowly down the street, still holding his hat between his hands. There was something in the figure so dejected, homeless and forlorn that the minister hesitated a moment as he stood looking at it. Then he turned to his desk and with a sigh began the writing where he had left off.

He had no more interruptions, and when his wife came in two hours later the sermon was finished, and the loose leaves were gathered up and neatly tied together and put on his Bible, all ready for the Sunday morning service.

"A sweet thing happened at the kindergarten this morning, Henry," said his wife while they were eating dinner.

"You know, I went over with Mrs. Brown to visit the school, and just after the games, while the children were at the tables, the door opened, and a young man came in, holding a dirty hat in both hands. He sat down near the door and never said a word, only looked at the children. He was evidently a tramp, and Charles Wynn and his assistant, Miss Kyle, were a little frightened at first, but he sat there very quietly, and after a few minutes he went out."

"Perhaps he was tired and wanted to rest somewhere. The same man called here, I think. Did you say he looked like a tramp?"

"Yes, very dusty, shabby and generally trampike—not more than 30 or 33 years old, I should say."

"The same man," said the Rev. Henry Maxwell thoughtfully.

"Did you finish your sermon, Henry?" his wife asked after a pause.

"Yes, all done. It has been a very busy week with me. The two sermons cost me a good deal of labor."

They will be appreciated by a large audience tomorrow, I hope," replied his wife, smiling. "What are you going to preach about in the morning?"

"Following Christ. I take up the atonement under the heads of sacrifice and example and dwell upon the steps needed to follow his sacrifice and example."

"I am sure it is a good sermon. I hope it won't rain Sunday. We have had so many rainy days lately."

"Yes; the audiences have been quite small for some time. People will not come out to church in a storm." The Rev. Henry Maxwell sighed as he said it. He was thinking of the careful, laborious effort he had made in preparing sermons for large audiences that failed to appear.

But Sunday morning dawned on the town of Raymond one of those perfect days that sometimes come after long periods of wind and rain and mud. The air was clear and bracing, the sky was free from all threatening signs and every one in Henry Maxwell's parish prepared to go to church. When the services opened at 11 o'clock the large building was filled with an audience of the best dressed, most comfortable looking people in Raymond.

The First church of Raymond he loved in having the best music that money could buy, and its quartet choir this morning was a great source of pleasure to the congregation. From them was inspiring. All the music was in keeping with the subject of the sermon. And the anthem was an elaborate adaptation to the most modern music. of the hymn:

I'm going home, I'm going home,
All to leave and follow thee.

Just before the anthem the soprano sang a solo, the well known hymn:

Where he leads me I will follow,
I'll go with him, with him all the way.

Rachel Winslow looked very beautiful that morning as she stood up behind the screen of carved oak which was significantly marked with the emblems of the cross and the crown. Her voice was even more beautiful than her face, and that meanmt a great deal. There was a general rustle of expectancy when she arose as the anthem. Henry Maxwell settled himself contentedly behind the pulpit. Rachel Winslow's singing always helped him. He generally arranged for a song before the sermon. It made possible a certain inspiration of feeling that he knew made his delivery more impressive.

People and audiences they had never heard such singing even in the First church. It is certain that if it had not been a church service her solo would have been vigorously applauded. It even seemed to Henry Maxwell when she sang that something like an attempted clapping of hands or striking of feet on the floor swept through the church. He was startled by it. As he rose, however, and laid his sermon on the desk before him the applause had been deceived. Of course it could not occur. In a few moments he was absorbed in the sermon and nothing else was forgotten in the pleasure of the delivery.

No one had ever accused Henry Maxwell of being a dull preacher. On the contrary, he had often been charged with using sensational, or what he himself said so much as in his way of saying it. But the First church people liked that. It gave their preacher and their parish a pleasant distinction that was agreeable.

It was also true that the pastor of the First church loved to preach. He seldom read a sermon. He was eager to be in his own pulpit when Sunday came. There was an exhilarating half hour for him as he stood facing a church full of people and knew that he had a hearing. He was peculiarly sensitive to variations in the attendance. He never preached well before a small audience. The weather also affected him decidedly. He was at his best before just such an audience as feed him now, on just such a morning as the one of satisfaction as he went on. The church was the first in the city. It had the best choir. It had a large membership made up of the leading people, representatives of the wealth, society and intelligence of Raymond. He was going abroad on a three months' vacation in the summer, and the circumstances of his pastorate, his influence and his position as pastor of the first church in the city—

It is not certain that the Rev. Henry Maxwell knew just how he could carry on all that thought in connection with that sermon, but as he drew near the end of it he knew that he had at some point in his delivery had all those feelings. They had entered into the very substance of his thought. It might have been all in a few seconds of time, but he had been conscious of defining all his position and his emotions as well as if he had had a calliper and his delivery [illegible] of the thrill of deep personal satisfaction.

The sermon was interesting. It was full of striking sentences. They would have commanded attention printed. Spoken with the manner and intense attendance that had the good taste never to offend with a suspicion of mannerism or declamation, they were very effective. If the Rev. Henry Maxwell that morning felt satisfied with the conditions of his pastorate, the parish of First church also had a similar feeling as it congratulated itself on the presence in the pulpit of this scholarly, refined, somewhat striking face and figure, preaching with earnestness and conviction and free from all vulgar, noisy or disagreeable mannerism.

Suddenly, into the midst of this perfect accord and concord between preacher and audience, there came a very remarkable interruption. It would be difficult to indicate the extent of the shock which this interruption occasioned. It was so unexpected, so entirely foreign to any thought of any person present, that it offered no means of argument or, for the time being, of resistance.

The sermon had come to a close. The Rev. Henry Maxwell had turned from the Bible and over upon the manuscripts and was about to sit down as the quartet prepared to rise and sing the closing selection.

All for Jesus, all for Jesus,
All my being's consecrated powers,

when the entire congregation was startled by the sound of a man's voice. It came from the rear of the church, from one of the seats under the gallery. The next moment the figure of a man came out of the shadow there and walked down the middle aisle.

Before the startled congregation recalled what was being done the man had reached the open space in front of the pulpit and had turned about, facing the people.

"I've been wondering since I came in here"—they were the words he used under the gallery, and he repeated them—"if it would be just the thing to say a word at the close of this service. I'm not drunk, and I'm not crazy, and I'm perfectly harmless. But if I die, as there is every likelihood I shall in a few days, I want the satisfaction of thinking that I said my say in a place like this, before just this sort of a crowd."

Henry Maxwell had not taken his seat, and he now remained standing, leaning on his pulpit, looking down at the stranger. It was the man who had come to his house Friday morning, the same dusty, worn, shabby looking young man. He held his faded hat in his two hands. It seemed to be a favorite gesture. He had not been shaved, and his hair was rough and tangled. It was doubtful if any one like this had ever confronted the First church within the sanctuary. It was tolerably familiar with this sort of humanity out on the street, around the railroad shops, wandering up and down the avenues, but it had never dreamed of such an incident as this so near.

There was nothing offensive in the man's manner or tone. He was not excited, and he spoke in a low but distinct voice. Henry Maxwell was conscious, even as he stood there smitten into dumb astonishment at the event, that somehow the man's action reminded him of a person he had once seen walking and talking in his sleep.

No one in the church made any motion to stop the stranger or in any way interrupt him. Perhaps the first effect of his sudden appearance deepened into gentle perplexity concerning what was best to do. However that may be, he went on as if he had no thought of interruption and no thought of it. The usual element he had introduced into the decorum of the First church service, and all the while he was speaking Henry Maxwell leaned over the pulpit, his face growing more white and sad every moment. But he made no movement to stop him, and the people sat smitten into breathless silence. One other face, that of Rachel Winslow, from the choir seats, stared, white and intent, down at the shabby figure with the faded hat. Her face was striking at any time. Under the pressure of the most unheard of incident it was also personally distinct as if it had been framed in fire.

"I'm not an ordinary tramp, though I don't know of any, teaching of Jesus that makes one kind of a tramp less or more entitled to notice. Do you? He put the question as naturally as if the whole congregation had been a small private Bible class. He paused just a moment and coughed painfully. Then he went on.

"I lost my job ten months ago. I am a printer by trade. The new linotype machines are beautiful specimens of invention, but I know six men who have killed themselves inside of the year just on account of those machines. Of course I don't blame the newspapers for getting the machines. Meanwhile what can a man do? I know I never learned but the one trade, and that's all I can do. I've tramped all over the country trying to find something. There are a good many others like me. I'm not complaining of that. Just stating facts. But I was wondering, as I sat there under the gallery, if what you all following Jesus and is the same thing as what he taught.

"What did he mean when he said, 'Follow me?' He walked and talked with the men turned about and looked up at the pulpit—"that it was necessary for the disciple of Jesus to follow his example and he said the steps were obedience, faith, love and imitation. But I do not hear him tell just what he meant that to mean, especially the last step. What do Christians mean by following the steps of Jesus? I've tramped through this city for three days trying to find a job, and all that time I have not had a word of sympathy or comfort except from your minister here, who said he was sorry for me and hoped I would find a job somewhere. I suppose it is because you get so interested in the professional things that you've lost your interest in the other part of it. Blaming anybody, am I? Just stating facts. Of course I understand you can't all go out of your way to pick up Spoken with the same kind of action and attendance that had the good taste never to offend with a suspicion of mannerism or declamation, they were very effective. If the Rev. Henry Maxwell that morning felt satisfied with the conditions of his pastorate, the parish of First church also had a similar feeling as it congratulated itself on the presence in the pulpit of this scholarly, refined, somewhat striking face and figure, preaching with earnestness and conviction and free from all vulgar, noisy or disagreeable mannerism.

find a job. Somehow I get puzzled when I see so many Christians living in luxury and singing, 'Always with cross have taken, all to leave and follow thee,' and remember how my wife died in a tenement in New York—gasping for air and asking God to take the little girl too. Of course I don't expect you people can prevent every one from dying of starvation, lack of proper nourishment and tenement air. But what does following Jesus mean? I understand that Christian people over in England and Germany and Russia are a part of a church was the owner of the one where my wife died, and I have wondered if following Jesus all the way was true in his case. I heard some people singing at a church prayer meeting the other night.

All for Jesus, all for Jesus,
All my being's consecrated powers,
All my thoughts and all my dreams,
All my days and all my hours.

"and I kept wondering, as I sat on the steps outside, just what they meant by it. It seems to me there was a little lot of trouble in the world that somehow wouldn't exist if all the people who sing such words went and lived them out. I suppose I don't understand. But what would Jesus do? Is that what you mean by following his steps? It seems to me sometimes as if the people who have churches and good clothes and nice houses to live in and money to spend for luxuries, and could go away in summer vacations and all that, while the people outside of the churches, thousands of them, I mean, in tenements, and walk the streets for jobs, and never have a piano or a picture in the house, and grow up in misery and drunkenness and sin. The man gave a queer lurch over in the direction of the communion table and laid one grimy hand on it. His hat fell upon the carpet at his feet. A stir went through the congregation. Dr. West half rose from his seat, but as yet the silence was unbroken by any voice or by any movement, save those in the audience. The man passed his other hand across his eyes and then, without any warning, fell heavily forward at his face. full length, up the aisle.

Henry Maxwell and a group of his church members remained some time in the study. The man lay on the couch there and breathed heavily. When the question of what to do with him came up, the minister insisted upon taking him to his own home. He was poor and had an extra room. Rachel Winslow said: "Mother has no company at present. There were some words he said I'll give him a place with us." She looked at the minister as she noticed it particularly. They were all excited over the strange event, the strangest that any church member could remember. But the minister insisted on taking charge of the man, and when a carriage was called the unconscious figure was carried to his house, and with the entrance of that humanity into the minister's quiet new home began the Henry Maxwell's life began, and yet no one, himself least of all, dreamed of the remarkable history that was to make to all his after definition of Christian discipleship.

The event created a great sensation in the First church parish. People talked about it long after the service. It was the general impression that the man had wandered into the church in a drunken fit, and had aroused sympathy by his troubles and that all the time he was talking he was in a strange delirium. He was not responsible for his surroundings. That was the most charitable construction to put upon his action. It was the general conclusion also that there was a singular absence of dignity in the minister's management of what the man had said. He had thrown out spoken in a mild, apologetic tone. But on the whole the next Sunday morning he still lingered, although he was rapidly failed as the week drew near to its close. Sunday morning came before the clock struck I he rallied and was in his study before the bell. The latter had sent for her as soon as he had been able to secure her address from the church record in the office. He had been conscious and able to talk coherently only a few moments since the attack. He was slowly sinking of the strain of the week's work. He had insisted on sitting up nearly every night.

"I shall never see her in this world," the man whispered. Then he uttered a few incoherent words and lay as if he have been good to me. Somehow I feel as if it was what Jesus would do." After a time he turned his head his head slightly, and before Henry Maxwell could realize the fact the doctor was in the room.

The Sunday morning that dawned on the city of Raymond was one exactly like the Sunday of the week before. Henry Maxwell entered his pulpit to face one the Bible and arranged his different ever crowded First church. He was haggard and broken as if he had just risen from a long illness. His wife was at home with the little girl who had come on the morning train an hour after her father died. He lay in that spare room. his troubles over, and Henry Maxwell could see the face as he opened the Bible and arranged his different notices on the side of the desk as he had been in the habit of doing for ten years. The service that morning contained a new element. No one could remember when the minister had preached in the morning without notes. As a matter of fact, he had done so occasionally when he first entered the ministry, but for a long time he had carefully written out every word of his morning sermon; nearly always his evening discourse as well. It cannot be said that his sermon this morning was very striking or impressive. He talked with considerable hesitation. It was evident that some great idea struggled in his thought for utterance, but it was not expressed in the theme he had chosen for his preaching. It was near the close of the morning that he began to gather a certain strength that had been painfully lacking at the beginning. He closed the Bible, and, stepping out at the side of the desk, he faced his people and seemed to talk to them about the remarkable scenes of the week before.

"Our brother"—somehow the words sounded a little strange coming from Henry Maxwell's lips—"passed away this morning. I have not yet had time to learn all his history. He had one either living in Chicago. I have written her and have not yet received an answer. His little girl is with us and will be cared for by the sister."

He paused and looked over the house. He thought he had never seen so many present from every part of the congregation. He was not able yet to tell his people his experiences, the crisis through which he was even now passing, or that, while the people outside of the churches, thousands of them, I mean, in tenements, and walk the streets for jobs, and never have a piano or a picture in the house, and grow up in misery and drunkenness and sin." The man gave a queer lurch over in the direction of the communion table and laid one grimy hand on it. His hat fell upon the carpet at his feet. A stir went through the congregation. Dr. West half rose from his seat, but as yet the silence was unbroken by any voice or by any movement, save those in the audience. The man passed his other hand across his eyes and then, without any warning, fell heavily forward at his face. full length, up the aisle.

Henry Maxwell and a group of his church members remained some time in the study. The man lay on the couch there and breathed heavily. When the question of what to do with him came up, the minister insisted upon taking him to his own home. He was poor and had an extra room. Rachel Winslow said: "Mother has no company at present. There were some words he said I'll give him a place with us." She looked at the minister as she noticed it particularly. They were all excited over the strange event, the strangest that any church member could remember. But the minister insisted on taking charge of the man, and when a carriage was called the unconscious figure was carried to his house, and with the entrance of that humanity into the minister's quiet new home began the Henry Maxwell's life began, and yet no one, himself least of all, dreamed of the remarkable history that was to make to all his after definition of Christian discipleship.

The event created a great sensation in the First church parish. People talked about it long after the service. It was the general impression that the man had wandered into the church in a drunken fit, and had aroused sympathy by his troubles and that all the time he was talking he was in a strange delirium. He was not responsible for his surroundings. That was the most charitable construction to put upon his action. It was the general conclusion also that there was a singular absence of dignity in the minister's management of what the man had said. He had thrown out spoken in a mild, apologetic tone. But on the whole the next Sunday morning he still lingered, although he was rapidly failed as the week drew near to its close. Sunday morning came before the clock struck I he rallied and was in his study before the bell. The latter had sent for her as soon as he had been able to secure her address from the church record in the office. He had been conscious and able to talk coherently only a few moments since the attack. He was slowly sinking of the strain of the week's work. He had insisted on sitting up nearly every night.

"I shall never see her in this world," the man whispered. Then he uttered a few incoherent words and lay as if he have been good to me. Somehow I feel as if it was what Jesus would do." After a time he turned his head his head slightly, and before Henry Maxwell could realize the fact the doctor was in the room.

The Sunday morning that dawned on the city of Raymond was exactly like the Sunday of the week before. Henry Maxwell entered his pulpit to face one the Bible and arranged his different ever crowded First church. He was haggard and broken as if he had just risen from a long illness. His wife was at home with the little girl who had come on the morning train an hour after her father died. He lay in that spare room. his troubles over, and Henry Maxwell could see the face as he opened the Bible and arranged his different notices on the side of the desk as he had been in the habit of doing for ten years. The service that morning contained a new element. No one could remember he ught his disciples to do. And those who volunteer to do this will pledge themselves for an entire year, beginning with today, so to act."

Henry Maxwell paused again and looked over his church. It is not easy to describe the sensation that such a simple proposition apparently need. Men paused at one another in blank astonishment. It was not like Henry Maxwell to define Christian discipleship in this way. There was evident confirmation of thought over his proposition. It was understood well enough, but there was apparently a great difference of opinion as to the application of Jesus' teaching and example.

Henry Maxwell calmly closed the service with a brief prayer. The organ began his postlude with immediately after the benediction, and the people began to go out. There was a great deal of conversation. Animated groups stood all over the church discussing the latter proposition. It was evidently provoking great discussion. After several minutes Henry Maxwell asked all who expected to remain to pass into the lecture room on the side. He himself was detained at the front of the church talking with several persons there, and when he finally turned around the church was empty. He walked over into the lecture room entrance and went in. He was almost startled to see the people who were there. He had not made up his mind about it. He was interested he had hardly expected that so many were ready to enter into even a literal testing of their discipleship as now awaited them. There were perhaps 90 members present. Among them were Rachel Winslow and Virginia Page. Mr. Norman, President Marsh, Alexander Powers, the railroad superintendent; Milton Wright. Dr. West and Jasper Chase.

The pastor closed the door of the lecture room and stood before the little group. His face was pale, and his lips trembled with emotion. He saw in him a genuine crisis in his own life and that of his parish. No man can tell until he is moved by the Divine Spirit what he may do or how he may change the current of a lifetime of habits of thought and speech and action. Henry Maxwell did not, as we have said, yet put himself all that he was into the movement, but he was conscious of a great upheaval in his definitions of Christian discipleship, and he was moved with a depth of feeling he could not measure as he looked into the faces of these men and women on the occasion.

It seemed to him that the most fitting word to be spoken first was that of prayer. He asked them all to pray with him and almost without a word audible he uttered there was a distinct presence of the Spirit felt by them all As the prayer went on the presence grew in power. They all felt it. The room was filled with it as plainly as if it had been visible. When the prayer ended there was a silence that lasted several moments. All the heads were bowed. Henry Maxwell's face was wet with tears.

If an audible voice from heaven has sanctioned their action by the life of the Master's steps, not one person present could have felt more certain of the Divine blessing. The second series of sessions movement ever started in the First church of Raymond was begun.

Henry Maxwell, one of the great men Maxwell, speaking very quietly, "what we have undertaken to do. We pledge ourselves to follow Jesus in the daily lives after asking the question, 'What would Jesus do?' regardless of what may be the result to us. Some time I shall be able to tell you what a marvelous change has come over my life and that in a week's time. I cannot now. But the experience I have been through will be known. When the pledge is identified with my previous definition of discipleship that I have been compelled to make in order to enter this section. I begin it alone. I know that I am being led by the hand of Divine love in all this. The same Divine inspiration must have led you also. Do we understand each other as we have spoken?

"I want to ask a question," said Rachel Winslow.

Every one turned toward her. Her face glowed with a beauty that no loveliness could ever create.

"I am a little in doubt as to the source of our knowledge concerning what Jesus would do. Who is to decide for me just what he would do in my case? It is a different age. There are many perplexing questions in our civilization that are not mentioned in the teaching of Jesus. How am I going to tell what he would do?"

"There is no way that I know of," replied Mr. Maxwell. "except as we study Jesus through the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. You remember what Christ said speaking to his disciples about the Holy Spirit.

"Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of Truth is come, he shall guide you into all the truth: for he shall not speak from himself. But what things soever he shall hear, these shall he speak, and he shall declare unto you the things that are to come. He shall glorify me; for he shall take of mine and shall declare it unto you.'

"There is no other test that I know of. We shall have all here to help. What Jesus would do after going to that source of knowledge."

"What if any of us when we do certain things that Jesus would not do?" spoke the superintendent of railroads.

"We cannot prevent that, but we must be absolutely honest with ourselves. The standard of Christian action cannot vary in most of our acts."

"And yet what one church member thinks Jesus would do another refuses to accept as his possible course of action. Is there to be no one conduct uniformly Christlike? Will it be possible to reach the same conclusions always in all cases?" asked President Marsh.

Henry Maxwell was silent some time. Then he answered.

"No; I don't know that we can expect that. But when it comes to a genuine, honest, enlightened following of Jesus' steps I cannot believe there will be any confusion either in our own minds or in the judgment of others. We must be free from fanaticism on one hand and too much caution on the other. If Jesus' example is the example for the world, it certainly must be possible to follow it. But we need to remember this great fact—after we have asked the Spirit to tell us what Jesus would do and have received an answer to it we are to act regardless of the results to ourselves. Is that understood?"

All the faces in the room were raised toward the minister in solemn assent. There was no misunderstanding the proposition. Henry Maxwell's face quivered again as he noted the presence of the Endeavor society, with several members, seated back of the older men and women.

They remained a little longer, telling of their details and asking questions, and agreed to report to one another every week at a regular meeting the result of their experiences in following Jesus in this way. Henry Maxwell prayed again. And again, as before, the Spirit made himself manifest. Every head remained bowed a long time. They went away finally in silence.

There was a feeling that prevented speech. Henry Maxwell shook hands with them all as they went out. Then he went to his own study room back of the pulpit and kneeled down. He remained there alone nearly half an hour. When he went home, he went into the room where the dead body lay. As he looked at the face he cried in his heart again for strength and wisdom, but not even yet did he realize that a movement had been begun which would lead to the most remarkable series of events that the city of Raymond had ever known.

CHAPTER II.

He that saith he abideth in him ought also to walk even as he walked.

Edward Norman, editor of the Raymond Daily News, sat in his office room Monday morning and faced a new world of action. He had made his pledge in good faith to do everything after asking, "What would Jesus do?" and as he supposed with his eyes open to all the possible results. But as the regular life of the paper started on another week's rush and whirl of activity he confronted it with a degree of hesitation and a feeling nearly akin to fear. He had coffee down to the office very early and for a few minutes was by himself. He sat at his desk in a growing thoughtfulness that finally became a desire which he knew was as great as it was unusual. He had yet to learn with all the others in that little company pledged to do the Christlike thing that the spirit of life was moving in the power through his own life as never before. He rose and shut his door and then did what he had not done for years. He kneeled down by his desk and prayed for the Divine presence and wisdom to direct him.

He rose with the day before him and his promise distinct and clear in his mind. "Now for action," he seemed to say. But he would be led by events as fast as they came on.

He opened his door and began the routine of the office work. The managing editor had just come in and was at his desk in the adjoining room. One of the reporters here was pounding out something on a typewriter.

Edward Norman began an editorial. The Daily News was an evening paper, and Norman usually completed his leading editorial before 8 o'clock.

He had been writing about 15 minutes when the managing editor called out: "Here's this press report of yesterday's prizefight at the Resort. It will make up three columns and a half. I suppose it all goes in?"

Edward Norman was one of those newspaper men who keep an eye on every detail of the paper. The managing editor always consulted his chief in matters of both small and large importance. Sometimes, as in this case, it was merely a nominal inquiry.

"Yes—no. Let me see it."

He took the typewritten matter just as it came from the telegraph editor and ran over it carefully. Then he laid the sheets down on his desk and did some very hard thinking.

"We won't run this in today," he said finally.

The managing editor was standing in the doorway between the two rooms. He was astonished at the editor's remark and thought he had perhaps misunderstood him.

"What did you say?"

"Leave it out. We won't use it."

"But"— The managing editor was simply dumfounded. He stared at Norman as if the editor were out of his mind.

"I think, Clark, that it ought not to be printed, and that's the end of it," said Edward Norman, looking up from his desk.

Clark seldom had any words with the chief. Norman's word had always been law in the office, and he had seldom been known to change his mind. The circumstances now, however, seemed to be so extraordinary that Clark could not help expressing himself.

"Do you mean that the paper is to go to press without a word of the prizefight in it?"

"Yes; that's just what I mean."

"But it's unheard of. All the other papers will print it. What will our subscribers say? Why, it's simply"—

Clark paused, unable to find words to say what he thought.

Edward Norman looked at Clark thoughtfully. The managing editor was a member of a church of a different denomination from that of Norman's. The two men had never talked together on religious matters, although they had been associated on the paper for several years.

"Come in here a minute, Clark, and shut the door," said Norman.

Clark came in, and the two men faced each other alone. Norman did not speak for a minute. Then he said abruptly:

"Clark, if Christ were editing a daily paper, do you honestly think he would print three columns and a half of a prizefight in it?"

Clark gazed in astonishment. Finally he replied: "No; I don't suppose he would."

"Well, that's my only reason for omitting the account out of the News. I have decided not to do a thing in connection with the paper for a whole year that I honestly believe Jesus would not do."

Clark could not have looked more amazed if the chief had suddenly gone crazy. In fact, he did think something was wrong, though Mr. Norman was one of the best men in the world. In his judgment, to lose his mind.

"What effect will that have on the paper?" he finally managed to ask in a faint voice.

"What do you think?" asked Edward Norman, with a keen glance.

"I think it will simply ruin the paper," replied Clark promptly. He was gathering up his bewildered senses and began to remonstrate. "Why, it isn't feasible to run a paper nowadays on any such basis. It's too ideal. The world isn't ready for it. You can't make it pay. Just as sure as you live, if you shut out this prizefight report, you will lose hundreds of subscribers. It doesn't take a prophet to say that. The very best people in town are eager to get it. They know it has taken place, and when they get the paper this evening they will expect half a page at least. Simply you can't afford to disregard the wishes of the public to such an extent. It will be a great mistake if you do, in my opinion."

Edward Norman sat silent a minute. Then he spoke gently, but firmly. "Clark, what is your honest opinion as to the right standard for determining conduct? Is the only right standard for every one the probable action of Jesus? Would you say that the highest, best law for a man to live by was contained in asking the question 'What would Jesus do?' and then doing it regardless of results? In other words, do you think men everywhere ought to follow Jesus' example as close as they can in their daily lives?"

Clark turned red and moved uneasily in his chair before he answered the editor's question.

"Why, yes. I suppose, if you put it on the ground of what they ought to do, there is no other standard of conduct. But the questions are: What is possible? Is it possible to make it pay? To succeed in the newspaper business we have got to conform to the customs and the recognized methods of society. We can't do as we would do in an ideal world."

"Do you mean that we can't run the paper strictly on Christian principles and make it succeed?"

"Yes; that's just what I mean. It can't be done. We'll go bankrupt in 30 days."

Edward Norman did not reply at once. He was very thoughtful.

"We shall have occasion to talk this over again, Clark. Meanwhile I think we ought to understand each other frankly. I have pledged myself for a year to do everything connected with the paper after answering the question, 'What would Jesus do?' as honestly as possible. I shall continue to do this in the belief that not only can we succeed, but that we can succeed better than we ever did."

Clark rose. "Then the report does not go in?"

"It does not. There is plenty of good material to take its place, and you know what it is."

Clark hesitated.

"Are you going to say anything about the absence of the report?"

"No; let the paper go to press as if there had been no such thing as a prizefight yesterday."

Clark walked out of the room to his own desk feeling as if the bottom had dropped out of everything. He was astonished, bewildered, excited and considerably enraged. His great respect for Norman checked his rising indignation and anger, but with it all was a feeling of growing wonder at the sudden change of motive which had entered the office of The Daily News and threatened, as he firmly believed, to destroy it.

Before noon every reporter, pressman and compositor on The Daily News was informed of the remarkable fact that the paper was going to press without a word in it about the famous prizefight of Sunday. The reporters were simply astonished beyond measure at the announcement of the fact. Every one in the stereotyping and composing rooms had something to say about the unheard of omission. Two or three times during the day when Mr. Norman had occasion to visit the composing rooms the men stopped their work or glanced around their cases, looking at him curiously. He knew that he was being observed strangely and said nothing and did not appear to note it.

There had been several changes in the paper suggested by the editor, but nothing marked. He was waiting and thinking deeply. He felt as if he needed time and considerable opportunity for the exercise of his best judgment in several matters before he answered his ever present question in the right way. It was not because there were not a great many things—the life of the paper that were cor- ary to the spirit of Christ—that he did not act at once, but because he was yet greatly in doubt as to what action Jesus would take.

When The Daily News came out that evening, it carried to its subscribers a distinct sensation. The presence of the report of the prizefight could not have produced anything equal to the effect of its omission. Hundreds of men in the hotels and stores down town as well as regular subscribers eagerly opened the paper and searched it through for the account of the great fight. Not finding it, they rushed to the newsstand and bought other papers. Even the newsboys had not all understood the fact of the omission, one of them calling out: "Daily News! Full account of prizefight 't Resort. News, sir?"

A man on the corner of the avenue knew by The News office tonight the paper, looked over its front page hurriedly and then angrily called the boy back.

"Here, boy! what's the matter with your paper? There is no prizefight here! What do you mean by selling old papers?"

"Old papers, nuthin'!" replied the boy indignantly. "That's today's paper. What's de matter wid you?"

"But there's no account of any prizefight here! Look!"

The man handed back the paper, and the boy glanced at it hurriedly. Then he whistled, while a bewildering fear crept over his face. Seeing another boy running by with papers, he called out, "Say, Sam, lemme see your pile!" A hasty examination revealed the remarkable fact that all the copies of The News were silent on the prizefight.

"Here; give me another paper, one with the prizefight account!" demanded the customer. He received it and walked off, while the two boys remained comparing notes and lost in wonder at the event. "Somp'n slipped a cog in de News somewhere," said first boy. he couldn't tell why and rushed over to The News office to find out.

There were several other boys at the delivery room, and they were all excited and disgusted. The amount of change remaining unclaimed at the desk back of the long counter would have driven any one else to despair. He was used to more or less of it all the time and consequently hardened to it.

Mr. Norman was just coming down stairs on his way home, and he paused as he went by the door of the delivery room and looked in.

"What's the matter here, George?" he asked the clerk as he noted the unusual confusion.

"The boys say they can't sell any copies of The News tonight because the prizefight is not in it," replied George, looking curiously at the editor, as so many of the employes had done during the day.

Mr. Norman hesitated a moment. Then walked into the room and confronted the boys.

"How many papers are there here, boys? Count them out, and I'll buy them tonight."

There was a wild stare and a wild counting of papers on the part of the boys.

"Give them their money, George, and if any of the other boys come in with the same complaint buy their unsold copies. Is that fair?" he asked the boys, who were smitten into sudden silence by the unheard of action on the part of the editor.

"Fair! Well, I should— But will you keep dis up? Will dis be a continuous performance for do benefit of de fraternity?"

Mr. Norman smiled slightly, but he did not think it was necessary to answer the question. He walked out of the office and went home. On the way he could not avoid that constant query: "Would Jesus have done it?" It was not so much with reference to this last transaction as to the entire motive that had urged him on since he had made the promise. The newsboys were not essarily sufferers through the action he had taken. Why should they lose money by it? They were not to blame. He was a rich man and could afford to put a little brightness into their lives if he chose to do it. He believed it was more on his way home that Jesus would have done either what he did or something similar in order to free from any possible feeling of injustice. He was not deciding these questions for any one else, but for his own conduct. He was not in a position to dogmatize, and he felt that he could answer only with his own judgment and conscience as to his interpretation of Jesus' probable action. The fact that off in the office a paper he had in a certain measure foreseen, but he was yet to realize the full extent of the loss to the paper if such a policy should be continued.

During the week he was in receipt of numerous letters commenting on the absence from The News of the account of the prizefight. Two or three of these letters may be of interest.

Editor of The News:

Dear Sir—I have been deciding for some time to change my paper. I want a journal that is up to the time in everything and enterprising, supplying the public demand at all points. The recent freak of your paper in refusing to print an account of the famous contest at the Resort has decided me finally to change my paper. Please discontinue it. Very truly yours, ——.

Here followed the name of a business man who had been a subscriber for many years.

Edward Norman, Editor of The Daily News, Raymond:

Dear Ed—What is this sensation you have given the people of your town? Hope you have decided to try the "reverse business" through the avenue of the press. It's dangerous to experiment around along that line. Take my advice and stick to the enterprising modern methods you have made so successful for The News. The public wants what it wants. Give it what it wants and you get some one else do the reforming business. Yours, ——.

Here followed the name of one of Norman's old friends, the editor of a daily in an adjoining town.

My Dear Mr. Norman—I hasten to write you a note of appreciation for the editorial carrying out of your promise. It is a splendid beginning, and to me feels the value of it better than I do, as I know something of what it will cost you, but not all. Your pastor, ——.

Dear Marvina,

One letter which he opened immediately after reading this from Maxwell revealed him something of the loss to his business that possibly awaited him.

Mr. Edward Norman, Editor of The Daily News:

Dear Sir—At the expiration of my advertising limit you will do me the favor not to continue as you have done heretofore. I inclose check for payment to full and shall consider my account with your paper closed after date. Very truly yours, ——.

Here followed the name of one of the largest dealers in tobacco in the city. He had been in the habit of inserting a column of conspicuous advertising and paying for it a very large price.

Edward Norman laid this letter down

TO BE CONTINUED.

Summons.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk, ss. The State of Minnesota, to H. H. Walker, defendant:

You are hereby summoned to be and appear before the undersigned, one of the Justices of the Peace in and for said county, on the 30th day of October 1899 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at my office in the village of said county, in action brought by C. Swanson against you, to answer the complaint of said plaintiff, to his damage one hundred dollars or under. Should you fail to appear at the time and place aforesaid, judgment will be rendered against you upon the evidence adduced by said S. P. Stone for the sum of forty-seven dollars and fifty cents, with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent. and the costs of suit.

Given under my hand this 30th day of September, 1899.

G. H. HOLT,
Justice of the Peace.

[28-30]

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of fifteen hundred twenty-eight and 25-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Isabella L. Chilbach and John Chilbach her husband, mortgagors, to George G. Erskine mortgagee, bearing date the 1st day of June 1896, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 16th day of September 1896, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 61 of mortgages, on page 200, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

Lots numbered one (1) two (2) and three (3) and four (4) of block number eleven (11) in Jerome's addition to the town site of Crookston according to the recorded plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house, in the City of Crookston in said County and State, on the 30th day of December 1899, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt or amount so secured then remaining unpaid and all taxes, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars, attorney's fees, stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated Sept. 7th A. D. 1899.

A. MILLER, GEORGE G ERSKINE,
Attorney. Mortgagee.
Crookston Minnesota. [36-35]

Summons

State of Minnesota, } ss. DISTRICT COURT
County of Polk, }
Fourteenth Judicial District.

William A. Lowrey, plaintiff, against The Minneapolis Trust Company, as Receiver of the North Western Guarantee Loan Company, and Mary Rose Miller, and all other persons or parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

Notice is hereby given, that on above entitled action is brought by the above named plaintiff against the above named defendants to determine adverse claims to that certain parcel of real estate situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to wit: The southwest quarter of section nine in town one hundred and forty-two of range forty-six west, and that the above named plaintiff claims the fee simple title to said premises, and that the defendants have no right, title, estate, lien, or interest therein, or thereto, and that the object of said action is to make plaintiff's title to said premises clear.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., July 24, 1899.
DEFOREST HUXLEY,
Plaintiff's Attorney.

[35-39]

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, Oct. 17, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Hanlon H. Nettleland, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of John O. Sandborg of the County of Polk representing among other things that Hanlon H. Nettleland, late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on or about the 1st day of January, 1899, at the County of Polk died intestate, and leaving at the time of his death, chattels, and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is interested in the purchase of real estate, and praying that administration of said estate be to Andrew P. Hanson granted.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard in probate court, on Friday, the 3rd day of November A. D. 1899, at 10 o'clock A. M. at the Probate Office in Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once each week for the three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the CROOKSTON JOURNAL, a newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston the 17th day of October A. D. 1899. By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[38-35]

A. G. ANDERSON....

Drugg is and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street

CROOKSTON, MINN.

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laing out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have our architect include electric wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give on the benefit of our experience in laing out wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

CARY SAFE CO..

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

.....Manufacturers of.....

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE G. ERSKINE, President. WM. ANGLIN, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS;

GEORGE B. ERSKINE, A. A. MILLER, WM. ANGLIN, J. R. ROBINSON, E. M. WASH, L. FONTAINE
J. P. FOOTE, W. B. CROSBY, J. W. WHEELER.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Crookston, Minnesota.

This is the "West Point"

It is well known that Kellogg Johnson & Co's Shoes are the limit of excellence in style, comfort, material and workmanship. You will be pleased every time you buy a pair.

KELLOGG, JOHNSON & CO., RED WING

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal' Corps of News Gatherers.

CLITAX.

Mrs. G. W. Schrump and Mrs. E. J. Eide were visiting in Fargo Friday last.

W. J. Hilligoss, the Alaskan explorer, registered at Hotel Climax Thursday.

Superintendent Marshall of the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Co., has had a crew of men here this week repairing and lathing and plastering the office.

The new loading platform built by the Great Northern Railway Co. is complete, with the exception of the grading which is well under headway.

While Mr. and Mrs. Turnquist, of Neby were returning home from church last Sunday the horses became frightened and unmanageable resulting in a lively runaway smashing the buggy and severely injuring Mrs. Turnquist. Dr. Johnson, who is attending, says she has suffered a fracture of the collar bone and is also injured internally but thinks she will recover.

FELTON.

We had quite a rain here Sunday.

H. M. Braseth Sundayed at Fargo.

Rain and slush Thursday and Friday.

J. J. Opsahl offers 25c for oats in trade and 23c cash.

J. J. Opsahl has disposed of his blacksmith shop to the Van Valkenbergs.

Miss Opsahl, of Minneapolis arrived Tuesday morning to fill the vacancy in our staff of teachers vice Miss Zuger resigned.

Miss Zuger from Moorhead who was secured to teach the grammar department in our school has resigned, and we understand she will take charge of a school at Two Herbors, Minn.

As Frank Murphy drove from Syres last Friday evening he was accosted by two pedestrians who demanded his money and knocked him down and relieved him of four dollars.

DUGDALE.

Ole Farden was in town on business with Camp & Oehler yesterday.

The farmers around here are lucky to have threshing done as it is raining almost every day now.

Dugdale is in need of a feed mill. The farmers around here would liberally patronize such an institution.

Mrs. W. Farrell has been very ill during the past week. Dr. McKinnon of Fosston has been called here three times.

Herman Camp is collecting for the Camp & Oehler Mercantile company, and is making quite a success of the business.

W. C. Hartin will close out business here and go to the Black Duck country. Mr. Johnson will be the new landlord of the hotel here.

Several strangers hereabouts, working with the threshing crews, are carrying guns. They would better be careful or they may get themselves into trouble. Dugdale citizens don't carry firearms but they may relieve others of their weapons.

FISHER

P. Thorsea, of Neby, was on our streets Tuesday.

Chris Widenhoefer went over to Fargo Friday to get a glimpse at the president.

J. N. Bain shipped three car loads of calves from here to Montana, Wednesday.

John Jorstad returned from Ada Monday, where he has been visiting for a few days.

Joe Hughes left for Bemidji Monday to work in the logging camps this coming winter.

R. H. Plumb sold out his bakery and property to A. C. Knudson last week who is well known around here.

Thursday evening while switching around the yards here Brakeman Exley stepped off the bridge into the ditch just north from the depot, and went down about fourteen feet breaking four ribs and his collar bone. Mr. Bartan, night operator, started to help Exley out of the hole and walked into the hole himself and went down, but did not break any bones.

WYLIE

Pete Duff, our popular operator, is ill this week.

John Dargan and sister Nora, drove over to Red Lake Falls Monday.

Mrs. Powers, daughter of John Powers, is visiting her parents this week.

T. E. Smidesang has completed a neat little store building which he offers for rent.

Mr. McCray, the wholesale grocery man as good natured as ever, did business with our merchants this week.

South Crookston.

Our blacksmith is doing a rushing business here now.

H. R. and Jim Phillip have been helping the Big store move all week.

Wet weather and mud is the prevailing feature in the Fifth Ward now.

Jake Andrist is patrolling our streets now since Stafebrook has been sick.

Wm. Arnold is away at Warren buying cattle. He has been gone for some time.

Frank Stainbrook is in bed with the typhoid fever but we hope it will not prove serious.

The Carman Big Store is a thing of the past, Mr. Bisazza having moved to Crookston. It was too big to last in Carman.

T. S. Hutchens is talking of renting his place for business. He does not know what kind of business will be put in if he rents.

The Hotel Berlin is over-crowded with railroad men and Mr. Kepple the landlord is doing all kinds of business. He keeps open day and night. They all know Con is all right.

G. W. Banks and T. C. Stewart are building a new house for Mr. McGregor in Jerome's addition. Mr. McGregor was in luck to secure the services of as good men as Banks and Stewart to do the work on his new house as they are first class carpenters.

ERSKINE.

There is quite a number of sick horses in this vicinity.

John Roisum is again ready for work, after his sick spell.

Tena Mariuson and Tena Naes visited at Fosston Sunday.

Dr. J. Warninger, of Fosston, was in town Sunday on business.

Dr. Mohn, of Fertile, did business in our neighborhood Sunday.

Mrs. Markus Jorgenson, of McIntosh is visiting with C. Haaeon's family.

St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator men are here to place the engine in its new engine house.

M. H. Holte has leased the Erskine hotel for seven months, and started in his new business Wednesday.

We are to have a newspaper here soon with Arthur Egley as editor. The paper will be called Erskine Echo.

TABOR.

Mr. Stepan is recovering from his sickness of liver trouble.

Miss Emilie Cernousek, of Hutchinson, Minn., is visiting her uncle, Frank Cernousek.

Threshing will be finished this week in our neighborhood. Mr. Sullivan, of East Grand Forks, has taken a share of the threshing from our town threshers.

Postmaster Cernousek is expecting a new cabinet for the postoffice from Milford, N. H. It will be a great improvement for Tabor postoffice and accredit to the postmaster and the postoffice patrons.

Rev. J. Dobias will preach his farewell sermon at the Presbyterian church next Sunday, and Rev. Varrian of Clarkson, Neb., will take his place here. Rev. Dobias will go to Omaha, Neb.

EUCLID.

One car load of young stock for Minot was shipped this week.

Mr. R. Teel went to Moorhead on Friday last for a fortnight visit with friends.

Rev. W. McKenzie and family leave this week for Grand Forks their future home.

The new Catholic church is booming up on the west side, a big addition to the town.

Norman Beebe and wife leave soon for St. Hilaire, where they will make their future home.

Mr. A. P. Simpson, of Illinois, is still with us looking after his extensive farming interests in this vicinity.

T. E. Blever, our fellow townsman, is the smiling, sweet buyer at the Minna Johnson elevator. Give him a call.

Miss Nellie Chapin has been engaged as teacher in the primary depu tment of the Euclid school for the coming year.

Master Sidney Bullon has gone to Red Wing, where he will continue his musical studies and attend school the coming year.

A young man named Louis Bogner died of typhoid fever at the hotel on Friday morning. His father arrived from LaCrosse, Wis., the day before.

The banquet given by the Missionary Society in Woodman hall on Thursday was a very pleasant event. Owing to the rainy evening not many were present from the country.

The ladies of the Home Missionary Society, have been having a contest in getting new members for the society, consequently emiles have been the order of the day. The contest resulted in a tie.

GRAND FORKS.

Dr. McDonald is quite ill.

Postmaster Budge was a Fargo passenger yesterday.

State Attorney Bange went to Churchs Ferry Tuesday night.

Attorney Watson, of Fargo, came up Monday night on legal business.

The "White Ribbon" special with 200 W. C. T. U. delegates went west yesterday.

Max Bess, the immigration agent, of the Great Northern, went west Monday night.

N. H. Hodges, the veteran hotel keeper of Cass Lake, is registered at the Northern.

D. E. Sassean and little daughter, of Fargo, were visiting in the city the fore part of the week.

H. N. Wells and Geo. Derle left Monday morning on a goose hunting trip on White Earth reservation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Coulson and son, of Colorado, are visiting Mrs. Coulson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Nash.

Rev. W. E. Gifford formerly pastor of the M. E. church of Grand Forks, and recently of Fowler M. E. church of Minneapolis, spent Monday in the city. He left on the coast train for Seattle Monday night to do a couple of months work for a mining syndicate. He expects after his return to enter the Congregational ministery.

Robert Hall of Lockhart, N. Y., who has charge of the construction of the central steam heating plant in Crookston, spent Monday in the city looking over the ground preparatory to beginning work here. The new plant will be constructed on a part of the Grand Forks Gas and Electric Company's property.

ANGUS.

Mr. Natvarnish is building a new barn.

Threshing around here is about completed.

Frank Stroble is drilling a well on his farm three and a half miles east of Angus.

J. E. Brush, who lives two miles northwest of town, has built a new large hog house 24 x 32.

The new lumber shed, 50 x 80, of Macalester & Montgomery is a decided improvement to the village.

H. C. Clark has painted an attractive sign for his hotel and it will be put in place shortly. He is also building a house for F. D. Robins at Warren.

W. Eckhouse has built a new blacksmith shop and residence in the village. The size of the residence is 20 x 28. H. C. Clark was the carpenter.

J. E. Brush's son, who is attending Macalester College is a member of the football team and as the latter is expected to play the North Dakota University team at Grand Forks soon he will be at home then for a short time.

S. Clover, who recently moved from Iowa to a farm three miles southeast of Angus, is erecting on this property several new buildings. He expects an Iowa friend of his to come up here soon and invest in farm property.

Gomer Evans has erected on his farm two miles southeast of the village a large building that will be used as a granary and buggy shed combined. He is also rebuilding his residence and his barn and residence on his other farm half a mile west of the village.

MENTOR.

Fred Magnus is our new wheat buyer in the M. & N. elevator here.

Even Olson, of Fisher visited with his daughter, Mrs. Tagley, a few days last week.

F. O. Hedstrom, of the Deering Harvester Company, transacted business here Saturday.

The wheat on Joe Tagley's farm north of Mentor averaged 19 bushels to the acre—not so very bad.

The threshing around here is almost done now, and the average yield is from 14 to 16 bushels of wheat.

Mr. Sheffield, superintendent of the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Company, transacted business here Saturday.

The Great Northern Company is building a platform close to the track so the farmers will have it handy to load their wheat in easy they want to.

The Mentor drainage ditch had a hearing before the county commissioners, and several of the business men of Mentor, and farmers of Grove Park, went down to the county seat, to fight for or against the ditch, as yet nothing definite was done.

The Northwestern Telephone Company's men arrived here Thursday, and pitched their tent in our village. Connections will be made with Erskine and Crookston this week. The hello box will be in Tagley's store.

MAPLE BAY.

Rainy weather.

Threshing will soon be done.

Ole E. Olson returned from Argyle last Tuesday.

Mr. N. E. Nelson returned from Argyle Monday.

Mrs. Paulsberg returned from Grand Forks last week.

Mr. Bakken and family drove out to their farm last Sunday.

It takes Anton Paulsberg to shoot the ducks a mile up in the air.

Mr. Mellerg, from Ada, spent a few days here last week hunting.

The Ladies Aid meets with Mrs. O. M. Olson Thursday afternoon.

The Maple Bay cheese factory shipped their last lot of cheese last week.

Felsing, Gustafson & Co. are now manufacturing the Dewey washing machine.

Nels Peterson has bought six lots and is now busily engaged in building a dwelling house.

Another new dwelling house is going up. Mr. Petterson will soon have the residences ready to occupy.

E. B. Gustafson, from Fertile, has been improving his store here at the Bay by giving it a new coat of paint.

Miss Minnie Watson took a trip to McIntosh to visit with her parents last week. She is teaching here.

Mr. J. E. Johnson, who has been living in Mr. Berg's house, has moved out to the Dengsom farm and Mr. Berg will move into his own house this week.

Miss Nellie Nordlum, who has been staying with Mrs. Wick, has gone home for a while to take care of her sister who is very sick with a relapse of diphtheria.

GENTILLY.

James Flun was in town Monday.

Patrick Kelly was in town Tuesday.

Joseph Corbin left for his home in Choquet Tuesday.

Owing to the wet weather threshing and machines are idle.

A. Luframbaise will soon have the upper story of his shop completed.

Lew Dubac has auctioned off his live stock and farm implements.

Mr. Wm. Millette, who taught school in this vicinity, is now delivering mail in Crookston.

Mr. Dubac purchased the Monsanel House in Red Lake Falls and will soon be a city resident.

Rev. Father Theillon returned from St. Paul Saturday morning, where he spent Thursday and Friday.

Remi Fortier was in town Monday and Tuesday attending the monthly session of the county board.

The officers of school district 105 are having the school house repaired, painting the interior and renewing the exterior.

Rev. Father Theillon is having a new toilet put on the exterior of the Gentilly church. Mr. Schmidt, of Crookston, is the artist.

LENGBY.

Threshing is laid up on account of rain.

Leno Olson came up from Brandsvold Tuesday.

John Stay transacted business in Fosston Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Klibuk were in Fosston Saturday.

Albert Lillo went to Fosston Monday, returning Tuesday.

A. Kaiser, of Fosston, spent a few hours here Thursday.

Andrew Hyman and Adolph Fredrickson left for Fosston Monday.

John Nelson is seen behind the counters at Ringstad & Nelson's store.

Mr. Carlstrom, of Popple Lake, has been here and laid the foundation for A. J. Olson's new residence.

Albert Lillo has been putting shelves and counters into his store building. It is rumored that he intends starting up in business by himself.

KEYWEST.

Mrs. John Love called on Mrs. D. Crabb on Monday.

Threshing has got nicely started around this locality.

Miss Minnie Buchanan called on Mrs. J. S. Brown Saturday evening.

Church service was not held Sunday on account of our minister's absence.

Misses Ethel and May Montgomery transacted business at the elevator for their father today.

Quite a few from around here attended the dance at Euclid Friday night. A good time is reported.

Mr. Brooks, manager of the Keystone farm, came up from St. Paul to attend to business on his farm.

Our station agent went to Grand Forks on his velocipede Saturday evening returning Sunday morning.

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

..Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

Business Change

Following out our well-known policy of looking after the interests of our patrons, we have decided on a plan whereby we can give them a service unequaled in this district. Our plan is to put our business on a cash basis at both ends; that is to buy for cash and sell for cash. By following this plan we can give you goods at a great reduction from the credit system prices. The reasons are obvious.

In addition to our complete stock of Groceries, we also carry the finest line of Chinaware, Glassware and Crockery in Northern Minnesota.

.Slocum's Grocery.

CHASE BLOCK, BROADWAY.

ED. ERICKSON,
DEALER IN
All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...
Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides.
Stall fed Beef.....a Specialty
SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

NORTHLAND.

O. Petterson from Olivia, N. D., is here on a visit.

C. Anderson is just back from a business trip to Melvin.

Dan Queen helped to make Northland better on Saturday.

Miss Sirine Hillurd is now baking pie and dishing out sunshine at O. Hillards.

H. Beegnard is now staying at Dan Johnson's. Talk about a cow in clover.

John Dalen is laying up for repairs, and to recover his health after threshing.

D. Peterson quit threshing on Saturday, after a long and very successful run.

Geo. Baker and S. Eveason are now running things to their own entire satisfaction at Syvertson.

E. Eggeen was on the last Woodmen meeting elected clerk for the local camp here, in place of O. Jerning, who resigned.

G. Thorp proceeded to Enst Grand Forks the other day to have a good time, he was relieved of $20, and he returned a sadder but wiser man.

Thos. Fitzsaskan is kept busy buying wheat at the elevator. Who wishes for a better wheat buyer? It's always No. 1 Hard, with a smile.

KILLED TWO HUNDRED.

Schwan's Campaign Said to Have Been Very Successful.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The following cablegram from General Otis has been received at the war department:

"Schwan's column swung into Imus from Das Marinas yesterday, camped last night, scattered insurgents who probably retiring by detachments on Indanco. Condition of roads prevented further pursuit; 125 men Thirty-seventh volunteers, Major Cheetham, drove insurgents from vicinity of Lukstown from Mustilopina, pursuing several miles and retired to Becoor last night by Zapote river roads. Loss, three men killed, two wounded, one missing. Schwan's movement very successful; inflicted heavy loss on men and property of southern insurgent army; he reports their casualties at 200 killed and 400 wounded; their stores and supplies destroyed. Young, moving from Arayat north and westward yesterday, scattered insurgents who retired northwest; his casualties three slightly wounded, considerable store of grain captured."

D. Freeman, of St. Cloud, expects 10,000,000 feet of pine near Turtle River lake. S. A. Grey, formerly associated with Mr. Freeman, has contracted to bank 10,000,000 feet on Lake Beanaffi for T. B. Walker and H. C. Blakely, of Minneapolis.

Local examining boards in independent school districts are abolished under the new law. Hereafter teachers engaged to teach in independent districts will have to hold regular certificates or Normal diplomas. Examining boards in special districts are not affected by the new law.

Thomas Kiely, of Stillwater, through the land office at St. Cloud, recently received the patent for a quarter section of land which he bought from the government in 1892. Still the Washington authorities requested that the receipt of the pateat be acknowledged "without delay."

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota. In bankruptcy. In the matter of John Turnquist, bankrupt.

To the creditors of John Turnquist, of the City of Red Lake Falls in the County of Red Lake and District aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 25th day of October, A. D. 1899, the said John Turnquist was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned in city of Crookston, in the county of Polk in said district on the 23rd day of October, A. D. 1899, at 2 o'clock p. m., at which time the said bankrupt and creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Oct. 19th, 1899.

OLE J. YALLE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

[27-29]

Order For Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, Sept. 29, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Iver Johnson, deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of Ragnhild Anderson, formerly Ragnhild Johnson of the county of Polk representing, among other things, that Iver Johnson, late of the county of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the 6th day of August, A. D. 1899, in the County of Polk died intestate, and owning property of the value of $600 or less at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels, and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased and praying that administration of said estate be to Ragnhild Anderson granted:

It is ordered that said petition be heard before said court, on Saturday the 28th day of October A. D. 1899, at two o'clock p. m., at the probate office in Crookston in said county.

Ordered further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order in the Polk County Journal for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 29th day of September A. D. 1899.

By the Court:
ULE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[28-30]

Polk County Journal.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Historical Society

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26 1899 No. 29

THE PAVING QUESTION

Council Meets Tuesday Evening—No Action Taken—Mayor Stephens Speaks.

WILL VOTE ON GENERAL LAW

At Next Regular Meeting—Under That Law Assessment not Made Till Work is Completed.

Pursuant to adjournment the city council met last Tuesday evening, Aldermen O'Brien, McGregor, Thompson, Chesterman, Davis, McKinnon, Anderson, Harris and Ellington being present. Eloquent silence rather than eloquent speech characterized the meeting.

City Attorney, De Forest Buckien, being called upon by President O'Brien to give his opinion of the legal status of the situation, said that no contract could be made till the finances were in such a condition as to comply with the provisions of the charter, that the city finances were not now in such a condition, as no levy whatever had been made upon the tax payers, and, therefore, the city had not legally made any contract with any one for paving. With reference to the point made that an appropriation had been actually made for the paving when the report of roads and bridges' committee was adopted, he said that, according to the charter, "no appropriation shall be made without a vote of the majority of all the members of the city council in its favor" and that as only four voted to adopt the report of the committee no appropriation had been made. No contract had been made, no money appropriated, nor could such a contract be let under the present conditions.

Mr. O'Brien told the council that before the bids were opened two business men in town advised him that the council would do well not to let the contract to any one bidding higher than from $1.30 to $1.35 a square yard, as they would bid at that price. Three of the bidders called upon him and he assured them that he did not think the council would accept any bids above $1.35. He urged that the motion under discussion be reconsidered as several thousand dollars of the people's money would thus be saved.

Mayor Stephens appeared and addressed the council urging them to reconsider their previous action and go again advertise for bids, and denying rumour that he and others were now working in the interests of cedar block paving.

On the other hand, it was held by Aldermen Anderson, Harris and Davis that the contract was already let, and that anyway the council had no positive assurance that they would get a lower bid than Mr. Kilmar's if they did again advertise for bids.

A motion to adjourn made by Alderman Harris was carried, all voting aye save Aldermen Chesterman, McKinnon and O'Brien.

At the next regular meeting the question of placing the city under the general law of 1895 will come up and if the council votes by ordinance, by-law or resolution to act under this law then the requirements of the city charter need not be complied with for the provisions of this general law gives the city power in addition its charter powers.

Must Patent School Lands.

The United States supreme court has granted the state of Minnesota, says the Minneapolis Journal, permission to enter a suit in equity against the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office to compel those officials to patent school lands in the Chippewa Indian reservation to the state. No particular time is set for the filing of the bill and it can be done at any time during this term of court, which extends to next May. When the bill is filed copies must be served on the defendants, who will then be allowed to file their answers. There are preliminary steps to getting the case before the court for argument, and they will probably occupy some time. It is probable, therefore, that the actual argument will not be made until late in the term, or possibly not until the next term of court.

Funston Goes Back

A dispatch from San Francisco says General Frederick Funston today received a telegram from the war department offering him a brigadier's command if he would return to the Philippines after his former regiment, the 20th Kansas, is mustered out. General Funston accepted the offer.

FUNSTON ON FILIPINOES

Blames the Friars for the Continuance of Rebellion.

Gen. Frederick Funston, of Kansas, lectured to the student body at Stanford University, California, last Friday night, on the Philippines. He blames the friars as being at the bottom of the insurrection. The general numerically attacked the church, not, as he insisted, because it was the Catholic denomination, but for the influence it maintained upon that class of people.

"If congress would drive out the friars," he said, "and confiscate every inch of church property, the bottom would drop out of the insurrection within a week.

"Some people returning have spoken of the brutality of our soldiers in the Philippines. I say to them they are unmitigated liars. Our soldiers never touched the wounded enemy except to drag them out of the fire into the shelter."

THE MINNESOTA CLUB.

Society Young Men Make Their Debut as an Organization.

One of the swellest society functions ever held in the city will occur at the rooms of the Minnesota Club in the Rickert block tomorrow evening. The club is composed of the swellest society young men of the city and other pains nor money have been spared, either in the renovating of the rooms or in the special arrangements for Friday evening, to make the affair a great social success. Dancing will be the chief feature though other entertainment will be provided. Members of the Pioneer Club, of Grand Forks, have been invited.

MOORHEAD HOTEL BURNED.

The Loss Will be About Thirteen Thousand Dollars.

The Central house at Moorhead was destroyed by fire Thursday night and the total loss will aggregate over $13,000 The wind was blowing a gale while the building was burning, but the firemen, with the assistence of the Fargo department, confined the flames to the building. After the fire had been extinguished a barn in the rear of the hotel was discovered to be in flames and two horses were burned. The fire in the barn was incendiary, for there was not a spark left when the flames took up the hose.

Crookston's Sash Factory.

J. F. Hawkins has secured the planing mill formerly owned by Mr. Walker in the northeast part of town. It is his intention to turn it into a sash and door factory. There is no doubt as to there being a field for an institution of this kind in Crookston, and we know of no one more capable of handling such a business than Mr. Hawkins. His wide experience in all branches of the lumbering and milling business giving him exceptional facilities, and no point can be more favorably located for the business than Crookston. Being favored with such railroad accommodations as we are giving a manufacturing industry of this kind great advantages: not to mention the close proximity to the raw material required to carry on the business. Mr. Hawkins has a crew at work overhauling the old machinery and installing new. The mill has a large amount of work now on the order book and starts out with splendid prospects.

Elsewhere.

Gen. Otis has notified the war department of the arrival at Manilla of the transports Sherman and Elder. The former carried the 30th volunteers and some recruits, and the latter had on board 19 officers and 488 enlisted men. There were no casualties on their ship.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland has been officially announced as one of the lecturers at Princeton University for the coming year.

Thomas B. Reed has become officially as he has already been unofficially, the head of the law firm with which he recently associated himself. Reed, Simpson, Thacher & Barnum—that is the way the firm's cards read now.

Dewey Gets Work.

Secretary Long Friday made an order assigning Admiral Dewey to special duty at the navy department. This was done because since his arrival in Washington the admiral has been on waiting orders only, but now with the prospect of the reconvening of the Philippine commission requiring his attendance, it is proper to put him in active service with all of the emoluments pertaining thereto.

OUR IRON INDUSTRY.

American Competition Becomes Alarming to Germany.

Consular reports received by the department of state have long ago shown that the iron and steel makers of Germany have become alarmed over American competition in their own markets, which they were at first inclined to make jokes about. A report just received from Düsseldorf, Germany, encloses extracts from the annual report of the Chamber of the Chamber of Commerce of Bochum, which is the center of one of Germany's most prominent iron and steel districts. It shows an increase of 16 per cent. in the importation of American pig iron during the past year, fine cast and wrought iron 28 per cent., common ironware 75 per cent, and bicycles and parts 106 per cent., and says: "The value of these American articles imported into Germany in 1877 amounted to $2,380,000; in 1898 to $3,570,000. This extraordinary increase in so short a time gives cause for very serious concern, especially when it is considered that the demand in the United States has advanced enormously, so that no large stocks were available for foreign export. Consequently, we have to reckon with certainty that the import of American iron and steel will continue to increase."

BIG FOOTBALL GAME.

Crookston vs. Grand Forks at the Fair Grounds Saturday Afternoon.

The Crookston high school football team and the second eleven from the North Dakota State University at Grand Forks will meet on the gridiron in Crookston Saturday afternoon and a lively game is expected. The playing will take place at the Fair grounds as that is the only place here that is level and large enough.

Football is undoubtedly one of the most exciting of games as in it quick thinking and acting are necessary, and though team work is what tells still one never knows when a single player may break away from his interference, elude all players in his way and dash down the field for a touch down. It is altogether likely that the best game of football ever played in Crookston will be the one of Saturday. Every body ought to be out and encourage our boys. The line up for Crookston will be Bjorge, c.; Arnold, l. g.; Carpenter, r. g.; Davis, l. t.; Wilkinson, r. t.; Westerberg, l. e.; Steenerson, r. e.; Simmons, l. h.; Barnes, r. h.; Rosendahl, q.; and Captain: Miller, f. b.; Hanson, Rapin, and Gans substitutes. The game will probably begin at 2 o'clock.

LOCKHART FARM SOLD

To Smith and Taylor for $150.000—J. D. McPhee Still Manager.

The Lockhart Farm of 4,710 acres, situated south of Crookston, together with the stock on the farm, about 600 head, the machinery, seed grain for next year, etc., was sold last week by the Lockhart Brothers to Chester R. Smith and Oscar R. Taylor, of St. Paul, the consideration being $150,000. In turn the Lockhart Brothers bought from Messrs. Smith and Taylor the Manhattan block on the corner of Fifth street and Robert, St. Paul, paying for this property $600,000. J. D. McPhee, who for several years has successfully managed the Lockhart Farm, will be kept at his old post by the new owners. They could not afford to lose so able an overseer. Already Messrs. Smith and Taylor have begun to add new stock to the farm—a car load of hogs and some cattle were shipped in last Thursday. This Lockhart Farm is a valuable piece of property and the new proprietors expect to improve it greatly.

Charles Hoyt Coming.

To "A Stranger in New York" belongs the distinction of playing to larger and more enthusiastic audiences last season than any of the other Hoyt attractions. Of all the plays that Mr. Charles Hoyt has contributed to the stage in the past, none has proven a greater drawing card than this, his masterpiece. So far as humor is concerned it has never been equalled on the stage. It' affords the widest scope for versatility and is replete with bright ideas, clever people and up-to-date features. "A Stranger in New York" comes to Crookston on Thursday evening Nov. 2, at the Grand Opera House, and that Mr. Hoyt's latest and best comedy success will call out an immense audience on this evening, goes without saying. The company is said to be the best and strongest that Mr. Hoyt has yet sent upon the road to present this play.

THE MASONIC TEMPLE

Was Formally Dedicated Last Night by Grand Officers—Big Banquet Followed.

THE CHILDREN'S DEWEY FUND

One Cent Subscriptions By Children Will be Received by the Polk County Journal.

☐ A long cherished idea of the Masons of Crookston and vicinity was realized last night when, in the presence of a large concourse of Masons, a new temple was formally dedicated, with the impressive Masonic ceremonies, by Most Worshipful Grand Master A. T. Stebbins, of Rochester, and Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, Alonzo A. Brandenburg, of Fergus Falls. After the dedication the third degree was conferred, after which the company repaired to the banquet hall to feast upon the delicious and sumptuous banquet there prepared for them by the ladies of the Eastern Star. Having supplied the wants of the physical man, they returned to the main lodge room to partake of the intellectual pabulum served up in a most entertaining manner by Grand Master Stebbins, Deputy Grand Master Brandenburg, Rev. H. M. Green, Mr. Spriggs, of Grand Forks, Lawyer Bennet, of Fosston, A. D. Stephens and others.

This Masonic Temple, occupying the entire third floor of the Wallace block, is 50x100 feet,- with 14 foot ceilings. Besides the main lodge room and the banquet hall, there is a kitchen, pantry, armory, reception room, anteroom and halls, folding doors being between the armory and the reception room. All the rooms are appropriately and completely furnished with everything needed, the main lodge room presenting an unusually handsome appearance. This last room is artistically frescoed. In the centre of the ceiling, which is studded with brilliant electric lights, is a dome on which, at equal distances from one another, are painted the figures, of Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence and Justice, the four cardinal virtues of the order. Beneath these, one under each, are representations of the three, five and seven steps, the most ancient temple, and the temple at Jerusalem both in the finished and unfinished state. All around the walls are emblems of the three Masonic orders, the blue lodge, the chapter and the commandery.☐The Temple is, indeed, both from the standpoint of art and utility, a model.

CENT APIECE FOR DEWEY.

This Paper Will Co-operate With the Children in Raising the Dewey Watch Fund.

The POLK COUNTY JOURNAL has entered into an arrangement with The Minneapolis Journal whereby the children of this and surrounding country may more conveniently contribute to the Dewey Watch Fund.

The Minneapolis paper, in response to a request from the children, has agreed to receive one-cent subscriptions toward a fund to buy Admiral Dewey a watch. The expected visit of the admiral to the northwest next month will afford an opportunity for the presentation.

The scope of the plan are the restriction of the contribution to one cent in each case, and the fact that only children are expected to give. It is hoped to have at least 50,000 children represented in the gift, and as Dewey has evinced the greatest pleasure in the tributes of children, the significance of the gift to him can readily be appreciated.

The giving is not restricted along school line: no child is too young to give. And no child will find the contribution of one cent a burden.

The POLK COUNTY JOURNAL heartily indorses the plan and has agreed to receive subscriptions for this piece and to forward them to The Minneapolis Journal. Next week more will be furnished and we will be prepared to give one to each child contributing a penny. Every child in the place and surrounding country should have one of these certificates and contributions should come in at once.

The plan commends the entire northwest, and the children of this vicinity surely do not want to be without representation in a gift which will mean so much to the children's hero.

Dewey does not need a watch. That's not the idea at all. The idea is that in contributing equally to such a gift the children will honor themselves and render to the hero of Manilla bay a tribute which will be more acceptable to him than any other that he has received. Each child will have a certificate of contribution, which will ever be cherished with pride and satisfaction.

BROKE HIS ARM.

A Thresher Meets With a Painful Accident Last Week.

While the threshing season already has been somewhat scarce in this vicinity this season, one escaped occasionally. The latest is the breaking of Gus Hoffman's arm on the Wilder farm last week. He was attending to the lowering of the straw carrier, when the handle of the crank slipped from his hand and in making an attempt to recapture it his arm came in contact with the swiftly revolving iron, breaking one of the bones of the forearm.

A Stanger in New York.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 2, comedy of the highest order will reign at the Grand Opera House, when Hoyt's amusing farce comedy "A Stranger in New York" will be presented. When many of Hoyt's comedies have been forgotten this laughable satire on a stranger's life in New York City, which comes to Crookston for one night only, will continue to delight theatre-goers. It is one of the best efforts of this popular playright, and those who see "A Stranger in New York" once always want to see it again. "A Stranger in New York" will be presented here with all the elaborate scenery and stage accessories that contributed so largely to its success at Hoyt's Theatre in New York, where it enjoyed its long run of over 200 nights. The company this season is the best Mr. Hoyt has yet sent upon the road in his merriest hit and includes Paul T. Nicholson, Jr., Tom Martin, George Tallman, Henry Rogers, Sydney Grant, Charles Booker, Grace Norton, Martha Shepherd, Sadie Kirby, Belle Darling, Laurine Murray, and a host of other handsome women.

Brooker on Trial.

The trial of L. E. Brooker, ex-president of the defunct Grand Forks national bank on the indictment charging him with falsifying reports to the comptroller of the currency is still before the United States court at Fargo. It will be remembered that Booker was arrested some two years ago for the above charge and also one of embezzlement, when his case was called he was not to be found and his bonds were forfeited. He returned some time during the past year voluntarily and is now standing trial on the first count and if he is acquitted he will be tried for embezzlement.

Got the Worst of it.

A prominent farmer living near Key West went to Grand Forks one day last week to sell some hay butter and he received 20 cents a pound for it. On the same day in Crookston 22 and 24 cents were being paid. This incident is cited to show that farmers tributary to Crookston need not go elsewhere to market their produce for Crookston merchants pay at least as high prices as are paid at other places.

Cot Their Man.

Saturday afternoon the police received a message from the sheriff of Marshall county to arrest a man named Tom Myers who would arrive on the St. Vincent train. The man was apprehended when the train arrived and held till the sheriff arrived. The man was wanted for robbing a saloonkeeper at Hallock of about forty dollars, while in his saloon drinking. He was taken back to Marshall county to stand his trial.

We Live in Expectation.

Frank Hall, Carl Fairbanks, H. Severson and Manley Ashley, a jolly crowd of sportsmen left on Austin, Minn, were in the city a few hours Tuesday morning. They were on their way to the woods out east of here in search of moose and deer. They promised to remember the JOURNAL when they divided the spoils and the extent of their luck will be judged by the size of the piece of venison that comes to this office.

The Cause Unknown.

A local in our issue of the 12th inst, stated that a boy by name of Artie Arnold, from Tabor, had been sent to the hospital at Fergus Falls, and gave as the cause of his insanity the fact that he was led to believe he was the cause of the insanity and death of an old neighbor who had died in the hospital and who he had been in the habit of worrying. While evidence to that effect was given before the probate court, the jury gave a verdict that the cause of insanity was unknown.

Notes From Exchanges.

Jordon Independent: Prosperity must have struck Northfield with both barrels. A jeweler over there advertises that he does not want any more business (in the repair line) for thirty days as he has more on hand than he can do during that time. This is a novel occurrence when we find a business man advertising that he wants people to stop trading with him for a certain period. Northfield must have a lot of old time-pieces that were not repaired since the crime of '73, and all must be coming in now, or is the old town booming on time.

New York Mail: Money is so plentiful among the Nebraska farmers that it is likely to do a little campaign talking of its own in opposition to the rhetorical monopoly of William Jennings Bryan. A conversational contest between the 100-cent dollar and the press agent of the 50-cent dollar would be an amusement attraction well worth the price of admission.

Aitkin Age: The great obstacle that Mr. Bryan has to overcome in his campaign is that in 1892 he predicted that we would become paupers if we did not have free trade, in 1896 he predicted that the country would be ruined if we did not have free silver. Though he has fanned the air twice, he wants another strike at the ball.

Minneapolis Journal: John C. Hayes of Chicago went to the Klondike with a party of seventy-two other men. He has returned with $35,000. The other men, if they get back, will have to walk, as they haven't a cent to show for their three years' work. The interesting thing about this story is that out of a party of seventy-three men only one was successful. Nobody hears of their struggles and suffering, while Mr. Hayes gets big black headlines in the Chicago papers. The story will probably hurry seventy-three more men off Klondike-ward, and if one seventy-third of the party strikes anything better than a grind stone mine, it will be a surprise all around.

Owatonna Chronicle: Street fairs are becoming quite the fad and are in many places superseding the old style fairs. We will have to hear better reports of them, however, before we can decide that they are of as much genuine and lasting benefit to the whole community, county and town alike, as the good old-fashioned county fair.

Thief River Falls News: Well. Dewey is here and Funston is here and the volunteers have returned from the Philippines. Now how about that anti-imperialist sentiment which was to sweep the country "when the boys get back?" There is no press censor holding them now.

LeSueur News: The Thirteenth is home, the Presidio came and went and the crowds visited the cities. The reception held in honor of the regiment was a grand one but the part played by the boys told the best story.

They came back as gentlemen after fighting in a foreign land for a flag they love, and all through the noise and din at home they remain gentlemen. The boys of the Thirteenth deserve credit for their conduct.

Thief River Falls Press: Tom Wiley, of Crookston, boarded the Ethel yesterday accompanied by Mr. Jacobson, of the same place, for the purpose of delivering to the latter gentleman a claim located for him by Mr. Wiley.

Minneapolis Tribune: When Admiral Dewey was at Providence, Rhode Island, some one in the crowd asked: "What are we going to do with the Philippines?" to which the admiral tersely replied: "We are going to keep them." Hence Dewey must be written down as an expansionist certainly, and consequently as an "imperialist," from the standpoint of our "anti" friends. He would hardly do for a democratic candidate for the presidency.

GRAND GIFT DISTRIBUTION

The Most Remarkable Offer Ever Made by a Reliable Concern.

EDITOR JOURNAL: Please announce that for a limited time we will give absolutely free to every married lady sending name, address and a two cent stamp for postage, an elegant triple-silver-plated Sugar Shell. Such goods sell in jewelry stores at 75 cents each. This is the most expensive advertising we have ever done, but it will make us thousands of friends and permanent customers. There is nothing to pay except, a two cent stamp as a sort of guaranty of good faith. The Home Furnisher, our own monthly publication, showing our line of high grade silverware and furniture, will also be sent free. But one Sugar Shell to a family.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO.
Morgan and Harrison Streets, Chicago. [28-31]

DEFECTIVE PAGE

FORCES ARE UNITED

TROOPS OF GENERALS WHITE AND YALE GET TOGETHER

Former Emerges From Ladysmith and Covers the Retreat of the Latter From Dundee and Glencoe—Brief Encounment With the Boers in Which Neither Side Gains Any Advantage.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"General Yule has executed a brilliant strategical movement. By a swift march to the south, leaving Glencoe empty, he has effected a junction of his forces with those of Sir George Stewart White, slightly to the north of Ladysmith. The two are now in a position to offer battle. I believe that the first attack will be made on the large Free State force which entered Natal by way of Tintyna pass and which has been harrassing Ladysmith. The military authorities believe that by joining their forces the two generals would be better able to cope with one large force at a time than by having two detachments operate against large forces.

Opposed to Big Boer Forces.

Accordingly, after defeating the Free State troops, they will offer battle to Commandant General Joubert. Only 10 miles now separate the two Boer forces. Hence the need for swift and telling action.

"The two sections of the Boer army together outnumber the entire British force by three to one. Hard fighting is certain at a very early date. Our men are confident and there is much enthusiasm.

"The fighting outside Ladysmith was a mere brush. The losses on neither side were significant. It was merely an artillery duel in which the Boers came off decidedly the worse."

ANNEXED BY STEYN.

President of Orange Free State "Grabs" Cape Colony.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The colonial office has received a cablegram stating that President Steyn of the Orange Free State has issued a proclamation annexing the part of Cape Colony which is north of the Vaal river. This means Griqualand West and Bechuanaland and is apparently in consequence of the Free State forces having seized the railway and all stations north of Kimberley except Mafeking, unless Mafeking has fallen since the last news from there, which is not likely.

Commandant Cronje, who has been twice repulsed at Mafeking, is said to be advancing on Kimberley and to be impressing men and seizing stores and munitions in British territory. He left a small force investing Mafeking. The Free State Boers are moving westward, in order to join him for an attack on Kimberley.

BETTER ABLE TO RESIST.

Joining of British Forces Considered Sound Judgment.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Although there is no reason to doubt the accuracy of the dispatch from Cape Town to The Daily Mail regarding General Yule's movements, it is serious that General White's telegram to the war office is also dated at Cape Town, but makes no mention of a joining of forces.

General Yule's withdrawal was actuated by sound judgment as he would soon have been surrounded and in a desperate position. The combined forces of Ladysmith, now amounting to some 12,000 men, will be amply sufficient to act on the defensive. A few more victories like Glencoe or Elandslaagte, however, would [illegible] British troops without effort.

Victories Count for Much.

While the Boers have [illegible] to take advantage of their strategic position, owing to the incompetence or [illegible] of their leaders, the British have no cause for congratulations over the result of the Natal operations. They have suffered heavy losses and their efforts have practically come to naught, they being practically surrounded by Boers. It might have been better to concentrate on Ladysmith in the first instance, but General White and General Symons had to yield to political exigencies and had instructions not to abandon an inch of territory more than was necessary. The news of the retirement from Dundee is received with anxiety.

TO ASSIST YULE'S FORCE.

General White Leaves Ladysmith and Has a Brush With the Boers.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The following dispatch from General Sir George Stewart White to the Marquis of Lansdowne, secretary of state for war, has been posted at the war office:

"Ladysmith, Oct. 24.—Information received yesterday showed that the Boers had established themselves in a strong position in considerable numbers 15 miles west of Dundee. I also received information that the force commanded by General Symons, and since his wounding by General Yule, was falling back on Ladysmith by the Helpmaaker road, Beith and the valleys of the Waschbank and Sunday rivers, and was expected to reach Sunday river valley today. I therefore to cover the movement of Yule's column. The enemy was discovered about seven miles out of Ladysmith in a position of great natural strength west of the road. When he saw preparations were being made he opened fire with one gun with great accuracy.

Moved Out With a Strong Force

"Our artillery soon got into position and the gun was silenced. Our troops were ordered to occupy a strong ridge, parallel to the enemy's position, but nearer to the road.

"I confined my efforts to occupying him and hitting him hard enough to prevent his taking action against Yule's column. Numbers of the enemy fled to the westward and the firing had practically ceased at 2 o'clock."

ENGLISH LOSSES HEAVY.

Victory at Glencoe on Friday Was a Costly One.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The war office announces in the fighting Friday between Glencoe and Dundee, in Natal, 31 non-commissioned officers and men were killed and 151 wounded.

A later dispatch from Sir George Stewart-White says that Sir William Penn Symons is brighter, but that the doctor can give no further opinion.

The list of officers killed and wounded strikingly shows that, although the British victory was complete, it was brought at a heavy price. In addition to Sir William Penn Symons, who is mortally wounded, two colonels, three captains and five lieutenants were killed, and a colonel, three majors, six captains and ten lieutenants were wounded.

This heavy loss among the officers was due, as the latest dispatches from the front show, to their valiant but injudicious conduct in leading to the trenches of the British army and refusing to use the cover of which the men availed themselves in the storming of the Boer position on the summit of the Kopje.

Among the rank and file the Russers had 7 wounded; the artillery 1 killed and 2 wounded, the Leicestershire regiment 1 wounded; the King's Rifles 11 killed and 28 wounded; the Irish Fusiliers 14 killed and 30 wounded; the Dublin Fusiliers 4 killed and 41 wounded, and the Natal police 2 wounded.

BOER OFFICERS KILLED.

Villjoen and Koch Both on the British Official List.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—An official dispatch from Ladysmith, the British headquarters in Natal, dated 10 p. m. Sunday, gives the following list of casualties among the prominent Boers at the battle of Elandslaagte:

General Viljoen, killed; General Koch, wounded and captured (since died); General Koch's son, killed; Colonel Schiel, (German officer commanding the artillery) wounded and a prisoner; Commander Preotrius, wounded, prisoner.

Several Boer standards captured.

An analyzed list of the British casualties at the battle of Elandslaagte places the number of officers killed at 9 and wounded 30, and the number of non-commissioned officers and men killed at 37, and wounded at 175; the total number of casualties being 247. Ten men are missing.

FAMINE ALMOST CERTAIN.

Scarcity of Supplies in Bechuanaland and Griqualand.

KOOFMANSFONTEIN, Oct. 24.—Parties of Kaffirs returning home from Jagersfontein to Kimberley are unable to obtain food. Already there is a scarcity of supplies throughout Bechuanaland and Griqualand West, owing to the total stoppage of the transport service. Famine is almost certain.

Dispatches All From British Sources.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 24.—Dr. Leyds, the diplomatic representative of the Transvaal in Europe, is quoted in an interview as saying it is difficult to give an opinion on the battles fought at Glencoe and Elandslaagte as news of dispatches all emanate from British sources.

SAILED IN A GALE.

No Lack of Wind in the Last Race of the Series for the America Cup.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The last race of the series for the America cup was sailed in wild and heavy seas in a breeze that approached the dignity of a gale and the gallant sloop Columbia again vanquished the British challenger Shamrock by 6 mins. 18 secs. actual time and 6 mins. 34 secs. corrected time. For the fifth time the attempt of a foreigner to wrest from America the yachting supremacy of the world has failed. The trophy won by the old schooner America 48 years ago is still a monument to the skill and prowess of American seamanship and American architecture and a standing challenge to the pioneer boat of any age, they be Thomas Lipton, whose name is now added to the list of defeated aspirants for the honor of carrying the cup back across the Atlantic, failure was a crushing one.

VERDICT OF GUILTY.

Former Government Officers Convicted of Conspiracy.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—Ellery P. Ingham, ex-United States district attorney, and Harvey K. Newitt, his late partner and former assistant district attorney, have been found guilty of conspiracy and bribery in connection with the revenue stamp counterfeiting plot, headed by William L. Jacobs and William Keadig, the Lancaster cigar manufacturer. The case was given to the jury at 9 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and the verdict was returned at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

ASSIGNED TO SPECIAL DUTY

Secretary Long Finds a Place for Admiral Dewey.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23. — Secretary Long has issued an order assigning Admiral Dewey to special duty at the naval department. This was done because since his arrival in Washington the admiral has been on waiting orders only, but now with the prospect of the reconvening of the Philippine commission, requiring his attendance, it is proper to put him on active service, with all of the emoluments pertaining thereto.

Colonel Schneider Dead.

VIENNA, Oct. 23.—Colonel Schneider, the former Austrian military attache at Paris, whose name has been prominently connected with the alleged treason of former Captain Alfred Dreyfus of the French army and who, it is generally understood, fought a duel about Oct. 12, with Captain Cuignet of the French army, as a result of statements made by the captain at the Rennes courtmartial, is dead.

ROUNDLY WHIPPED

FILIPINOS AT CALAMBO DRIVEN FROM THEIR TRENCHES.

Had Been Bothering the American's a Good Deal of Late So It Was Decided Get Them a Good Licking—Lieutenant Ferguson's Death Kill Six Filipinos and Capture Others.

MANILA, Oct. 24.—The insurgents around Calambo and Angeles have bothered the Americans lately with their repeated attacks. Major Cheatham's battalion of the Thirty-seventh infantry, three companies of the Twenty-first infantry, a battery of artillery and a Gatling gun sallied out during the morning from Calumpit, drove them for three miles, inflicting heavy loss on them. One American was killed and three wounded. Lieutenant Ferguson with 20 scouts of the Thirty-sixth regiment reconnoitered near Lubo, encountered a party of mounted Filipinos, killed six of them and captured eight with twenty-five.

Four men from the gunboat Yorktown were hurt ashore, 18 miles south of Iloilo, by a flag of truce and the insurgents killed one of them, wounded one and captured a third.

REPORTED BY OTIS.

Death of General Howard's Son Officially Confirmed—Some Skirmishes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—The following telegram, confirming the report of the death of Captain Guy Howard, was received at the war department from General Otis:

"Captain Guy Howard, assistant quartermaster, and quartermaster of volunteers, killed yesterday at Arayat, while on launch Rio Grande river, by concealed insurgents. His clerk, a civilian employe, and native wounded. Scouting detachment, Thirty-sixth volunteers, encountered insurgents southwest Santa Rita, scattering them, killing six, capturing eight and one rifle. No casualties. General Lawton operating at San Isidro.

"The forwarding of supplies to that point continues, attended with some difficulty, on account of lack of transportation, which will be supplied soon. Insurgents Southern Luzon attacked Calamba. Those were driven off. No casualties.

"Kline, commanding at Calumba, vigorously attacked insurgent forces concentrating on his front, routed them from trenches and pursued three miles. His casualties, one private killed, one corporal and three privates wounded. Enemy's loss unknown."

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Lawton, Bates and Funston Receive Rewards for Gallant Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A special to The Herald from Washington says:

These important military appointments have been decided upon: Brigadier General John C. Bates, U. S. V., and colonel of the Second infantry, regular army, to be major general of volunteers, to fill the original vacancy caused by the increase in the enlisted force.

Major General Henry W. Lawton, U. S. V., and colonel in the inspector general's department, regular army, to be brigadier general of the regular army, vice Burke, retired.

Brigadier General Funston, U. S. V., to be retained as brigadier general of volunteers, to fill the original vacancy caused by the increase in the enlisted force.

General Funston has already received notification of his intended reappointment, and has accepted. He will receive orders directing him to report to Major General Otis for assignment to a brigade command.

IOWA BOYS GO ASHORE.

Heartily Cheered All Along the March to the Depot.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—The transport Senator, with the Fifty-first Iowa regiment, was docked at the government wharf. The soldiers were landed from the Senator later in the day and marched to the Ferry depot where an elaborate breakfast was served in their honor. Governor Shaw and many other prominent Iowans were present and speeches appropriate to the occasion were delivered. After breakfast the men were lined up for the march to the Presidio. During the march the troops were cheered all along the line. Each man was decorated with flowers and flags. The companies and regiment occupied by the Montana regiment will serve to shelter the Iowans until they are mustered out.

NO MEETING AT PRESENT.

Joint High Commission Will Postpone Action on Questions at Issue.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—It is learned that owing to the temporary absence of the settlement of the Alaska boundary question, there will be no meeting of the Canadian joint high commission in the immediate future. The commission adjourned last spring, because of the statement by the Canadian contingent that they could not undertake to adjust any of the other important questions before the commission until the Alaskan boundary issue was satisfactorily settled. With the boundary issue still open, it is regarded as useless to attempt further meetings.

GIVEN TO THE GRAND JURY

Cases Against Wardner Miners Submitted for Indictment.

MOSCOW, Ida., Oct. 24.—The cases of Edward Boyle, Emil Fosberg and others were submitted to the United States grand jury here. The defendants are charged with interfering with the running of a United States train and conspiracy at Wardner on April 29 last, when the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill was blown up with dynamite by a mob. The indictment is against 45 persons whose names are given and 400 whose names are unknown. It is expected the trials will begin Thursday before United States District Judge Beatty.

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

DULUTH, Oct. 25.

WHEAT—Cash, No. 1 hard, 69c. No. 1 Northern, 68c. No. 2 Northern, 66c. No. 3, 61¾c. To Arrive—No. 1 hard 69c. No. 1 Northern, 68c. December, 69¾c; May, 71¾c.

FLAX—To arrive, 41 22¾; October, $1.23; December, $1.21.

Minneapolis Wheat.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 25.

WHEAT—In Store—No. 1 Northern, December, 67¾c; May, 71¾c. On Track—No 1 hard, 69¾c. No. 1 Northern, 68c. No. 2 Northern, 65½c.

Stock City Live Stock.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Oct. 25.

HOGS—Market 5@10 lower. Range of prices, $3 75@4 25.

CATTLE—Butcher cattle steady and active. Stockers and feeders firm. Common slow but steady.

Sales ranged at $2 60@3 85 for cows; $2 00@3 75 for steers, bulls and mixed; $4 00@5 25 for stockers and feeders; $4 00@4 00 for calves and yearlings.

Sales—Head, 1,200.

St. Paul Union Stock Yards.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Oct. 25.

HOGS—Market 5@10c lower. Range of prices, $3 75@4 25.

CATTLE—Butcher cattle steady and active. Stockers and feeders firm. Common slow but steady.

Sales ranged at $2 60@3 85 for cows; $2 00@3 75 for steers; $4 00@5 25 for stockers; $2 00@3 65 for bulls, and $4 00@4 00 for calves.

SHEEP—Market strong and active.

Sales ranged at $4 40@4 60 for lambs; $3 00@4 00 for sheep.

Receipts—Cattle, 1000; calves, 600; hogs 1500; sheep, 1,400.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.

HOGS—Market 5@10c lower, and very slow.

Sales ranged at $4 10@4 40 for mixed and butchers; $4 30@4 45 for good heavy; $4 00@4 25 for rough heavy; $4 00@4 25 for light.

CATTLE—Market steady

Sales ranged at $4 40@6 40 for beeves; $3 25@5 00 for cows and heifers; $4 60@4 60 for Texas steers; $4 00@4 50 for stockers and feeders.

SHEEP—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $3 75@4 15 for sheep; $4 40@4 75 for lambs.

Receipts—Hogs, 31,000; cattle, 4,000; sheep, 16,000.

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.

WHEAT—Decreased [illegible] May, 65¾ @65¾c; December, 65@65¼c; cash, 67¼@67½c; January, [illegible]; May, [illegible].

CORN—Decreased [illegible] cash, 36½@36¾c; May, 45¾.

OATS—Decreased [illegible] December, 27@27½c; January, [illegible]; May, 29½.

FLAX—Cash, Northwestern, $1 27¾; Southwestern, $1 26; October, $1 26¾; December, 1 30¾; May, 1 38½.

PORK—Decreased [illegible] January, 10c; cash, [illegible]; [illegible] ducks, 8c.

EGGS—Fresh, 19½@21c.

ODD ADVICE TO EXPORTERS.

Paraguay Likes Goods With Reliable Names and Trademarks.

Consul John N. Ruffin, at Asuncion, who has been urging Americans to take advantage of the great trade openings in Paraguay, has followed up his former communications to Washington by one in which he gives some hints as to how cotton exporters can best build up a trade.

"It is very much in earnest, but there is a somewhat humorous side to the glimpse he gives of Paraguayan business methods, says the New York Times. For instance, he suggests that the grocer put his trademark, if one is exporting bleached corn, on a good thing. "Trademarks which seem to be unknown here," he says, "are the Star of Bethlehem," he says, "take very well here."

Other hints as to the peculiarities and prejudices of the Paraguayans are: "While our goods show their superiority in texture, etc., after they are washed, their quality does not influence the people. They want something that looks well at the time they are bought. Cheap, well—a smooth, compact surface. They do not care if it is nearly as sturdy after it has been worn or washed out if they buy a new piece because it is cheaper."

Finally Consul Ruffin gives this insight into the Paraguayan preferences: "The grocery should have on hand a book fold, with the trademark covering the whole front, if possible. It should be in glaring colors, and the goods should have ribbon around them."

Yankee Chicken Looking Up.

England sends to London for 250,000 pounds of dressed poultry, making about 14 carloads, part of it for the use of the Queen, etc., and part for the New York Tribune. The American chicken always important in our domestic markets, is looking up in those abroad and assuming a consequence which it has every reason to crow over.

A Crop of Cabbages.

An Indiana man planted 20 acres of former marsh land in cabbage, and at present market rates he will receive $3,000 for his crop.

Crookston Market.

Corrected Thursday morning, Oct. 26.

WHEAT—No. 1 hard 68 No. 1 Northern 67 No. 2 Northern 64.

OATS—26 to 28c.

BARLEY—32 to 35c.

FLAX—$1.06.

POTATOES—20 to 25c.

BUTTER—

EGGS—18 to 20c.

ONIONS—30c.

HAY—Baled $5.00, loose $4.00.

HIDES—6c.

CATTLE—2½ to 3½, live weight, 3½ to 4c.

SHEEP—

CHICKENS—6@8c.

TURKEYS—10c.

HIDES—3 to 6c.

TALLOW—3½c.

FLOUR—$3.00 per cwt.

BRAN—80c per cwt.

SHORTS—80 per cwt.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 cts.

PISO'S CURE FOR Rheumatism and Kidney Cure. A sure cure for rheumatism and kidney troubles. Those who drink water from surface wells, which is nearly always charged with alkali are nearly all more or less afflicted with rheumatism and kidney troubles. Cure for both 50 cents. For sale by druggists or sent by mail by C. J. HISNER, Crookston, Minn.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Minneapolis telephone girls will form a union.

Several cases of scarlet fever have occurred at Buffalo.

The Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs will meet next at Duluth.

St. Paul's annual Charity Ball will be given Nov. 21 at the Masonic temple.

Minnesota university defeated Ames (Ia.) college 6 to 0 in Saturday's football game.

G. H. Christian of Minneapolis, who sold out his holdings to the flour trust, will re-enter the business and put up a new mill.

J. C. McBride, a Stillwater convict, has made confession to four murders and a large number of burglaries in other states.

The Anderson law taxing railroad lands has been affirmed by the supreme court as applied to the Duluth and Iron Range grant.

Thursday to Sunday of this week the Christian Endeavor societies of Minnesota will hold their annual convention at St. Cloud.

The National Live Stock Exchange which held a two days meeting in St. Paul, has disbanded. Indianapolis was chosen as the next convention city.

Congressman Eddy is indignant because the county of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of April, A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk duly elected assessor, and being an inhabitant of the county at the time of his election, and duly qualified, and retains within the county and resides said petitioner is the widow of said deceased, that administration of said estate to Reginhild Anderson granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Saturday the 28th day of October, A. D. 1899, at two o'clock p. m. at the probate office in Crookston in said county.

Ordered further, That notice of hearing be given to the heirs of said deceased and all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston, this 23d day of October, A. D., 1899.

By the Court,

OLE E. HAGEN,

[29-31] Judge of Probate.

Order For Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, Sept. 26, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Iver Johnson Strand, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Rachilde Strand, praying that Rachilde Johnson of the county of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of April, A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk duly elected assessor, and being an inhabitant of the county at the time of his election, and duly qualified, and retains within the county and resides said petitioner is the widow of said deceased, that administration of said estate to Reginhild Anderson granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Saturday the 28th day of October, A. D. 1899, at two o'clock p. m. at the probate office in Crookston in said county.

Ordered further, That notice of hearing be given to the heirs of said deceased and all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 26th day of September A. D. 1899.

By the Court,

OLE E. HAGEN,

[30-32] Judge of Probate.

Burlington Route

Finest Train on Earth from ST. PAUL -AND- Minneapolis -TO- ST. LOUIS AND ALL SOUTHERN CITIES

Electric Lighted and Steam Heated.

MICA AXLE GREASE lightens the load, shortens the road. helps the team. Saves wear and tear. Sold everywhere. MADE BY STANDARD OIL CO.

Buffet-Smoking-Library Cars.

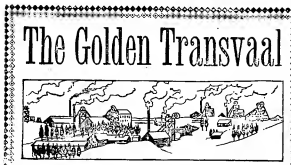
GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

Club Life on Wheels

Attached to Great Northern Flyer Daily from St. Paul and Minneapolis to the Pacific Coast.

PATENTS SECURED AND COUNTERSIGNED. TRADE-MARKS OBTAINED. DESIGNS REGISTERED. COPYRIGHTS OBTAINED. Opinion furnished free whether an invention is patentable or not. We have had thirty-five years' experience. Our Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free. Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address, MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY. BRANCH OFFICE, 625 F ST., WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Golden Transvaal



Thousands of Tons of Pure Gold Still Untouched In the Reefs of the Rand—British Shareholders Get Each Year $24,450,000 In Dividends.

BY CYRUS SYLVESTER.

Sir Alfred Milner is British high commissioner of South Africa. He is a shrewd statesman. Sometimes he is a maker of epigrams. Here is one to which he recently gave utterance. It has a most timely flavor. He was speaking of the Transvaal when he said:

"If you saw a solid pile of gold worth five hundred millions sterling with 20,000 Boers armed to the teeth sitting on it, what would you do?"

Probably this is the most concise official statement of England's attitude toward the Transvaal that has ever been made.

An industrious swarm of hornets built their nest in a cherry tree. They did not select the cherry tree because they liked cherries, but because it stood in a field remote from houses. Besides, the branches were convenient for architectural purposes.

The hornets went about the business of life in a quiet, unobtrusive manner. They molested nobody and wanted no one to molest them. They were for peace and in wholesale chunks.

But one day a band of farmers' boys came that way. They discovered that the tree was loaded with fine, ripe cherries; also they discovered the hornets' nest; likewise the hornets discovered the boys. In plain hornet language they told the boys to go away, but the boys hung around. Their mouths watered.

It is not necessary to tell the rest of the story. No swarm of hornets that ever buzzed could keep a crowd of boys out of a cherry tree.

The foregoing is a fable. Here are some facts which bear a faulty resemblance to the fable:

Nearly half a century ago a little band of Boers trekked northward from

CHLORINATION WORKS, ROBINSON MINE.

Cape Colony into the southern heart of the dark continent. They trekked because they were tired of quarreling with their British neighbors. They were looking for some place in their savage infested wilderness where they could pasture their flocks and herds, build their rude homes and live the lives they thought it was right for them to live.

One day after they had traversed about 1,000 miles of level country they came to the foot of a range of green hills which barred their progress. The creaking wagons came to a standstill. The tired oxen were outspanned, and a scouting party was sent to climb the hills and see what was on the other side.

SORTING HOUSE, WHERE THE QUARTZ AND WASTE ROCK ARE SEPARATED.

After a day or two the scouts came back. They said they had found the promised land. From the top of those green hills, they told their companions, that stretched away to the north for an unknown distance a fertile tableland on which grew juicy grasses that would fatten cattle and sheep. It was traversed here and there by streams of white water.

The weary Boers asked for nothing better. Here was a land which the grasping English, who were neither herders nor farmers, surely would not covet. They would settle there undisturbed. They would raise their families and their flocks, establish an independent government and praise the Lord after their own manner.

Never did a people make a greater mistake. Seldom has the value of any land been so grossly underestimated. Under the green veld over which they trod with careless heel were streaks of rock which almost groaned with the weight of gold. Hidden by the cunning hand of Nature in this then trackless wilderness was a mass of precious metal big enough to have made each individual Boer to that pioneer band a veritable Prince of Monte-Christo.

But the Boers did not know it. They would not have cared if they had known it. We who believe that gold can command every known aid to happiness can hardly realize the state of mind of men who could take such an attitude.

However, this was exactly the attitude which the Boers did take when the gold was discovered, for of course it was discovered, just as the boys found the cherries.

And what a find it has been! Little by little the enormous wealth of the Transvaal has been unfolded to the amazed eyes of the earth digging Englishmen who have been lured from the far corners of the earth by the glitter of the yellow metal.

During the last two years there have been extracted from the crushings of the Rand fully 1,040 tons of pure gold. It is estimated that there remain in the ground more than 8,300 tons of gold which has as yet been untouched.

It is easier to speak of the riches of the Transvaal in this way, although it is unusual to measure gold by the ton. But when you come to give the value of the gold in figures the numbers are so great as to be beyond human comprehension. For instance, it is estimated that $500,000,000 worth of gold has been mined and that there is yet $3,500,000,000 to be dug out. None but the trained mind of a skilled mathematician can realize the true significance of millions and billions of dollars, yet we speak the words trippingly enough.

The annual production of gold from these mines which the Boers wish had never been opened has been increasing at the rate of $9,000,000 a year since 1890. In 1898 it was more than $42,000,000. During the last few years such great strides have been made in perfecting mining machinery that the product for the present year was expected to have reached 4,280,000 ounces, worth $100,000,000.

Of course it must be remembered that this is not all clear profit to the English mine owners. The ores of the Witwatersrand district are of low grade. A ton of rock must be crushed and chemically treated in order to extract from $10 to $20 worth of gold. Think of that—in a whole ton of rock only one ounce of gold!

But there are profits enormous enough. The reports from the London Stock Exchange Year Book show that in 1898 the mines of the Rand paid to English shareholders the enormous sum of $24,450,000 in dividends.

Where does the rest of it go? Well, some of it goes for labor (the Kaffir miners get 50 cents a day), some of it comes to the United States in exchange for mining machinery, some of it is added to the reserve funds of the big mining corporations, and a little slice, about $5,000,000 annually, is paid to the Boers in taxes.

There are about 60 leading mining companies in the Transvaal. The lowest dividend paid is 15 per cent. The highest, paid by the rich Johannesburg Pioneer mine, is 675 per cent.

A steady stream of gold flows from Johannesburg and Pretoria across the ocean to England. That $24,450,000 in each year distributed among the big and little shareholders scattered all over the United Kingdom. Every mail steamer leaving South African ports for England carries on an average $500,000 worth of Transvaal gold, most of which is coined into shining guineas.

The wonderful gold bearing deposits of the Rand form a single reef about 30 miles in length, a narrow strip only a few feet wide, but running down into the earth almost like for miles apparently. On the very edge of this reef is situated the city of Johannesburg, and along it are scattered more than 60 mines, owned by different companies, representing British capital chiefly.

Naturally the choicest locations for the mines are directly above the outcropping edge of the great reef. Other properties are located at short distances from the reef's edge, but in the direction of its slant, so that vertical pits may strike the ore body farther along after passing through the outer surface strata.

MAP OF THE TRANSVAAL, SHOWING GOLDFIELDS.

A MAMMOTH GOLD WASHER.

The reef goes down at a tilt, you see, like one side of the peak roof of a house. Some of the holes thus extracted in pursuit of yellow wealth are among the deepest ever dug in the crust of this old planet, and one of them, the Simmer and Jack, penetrated over half a mile into the bowels of the earth.

The Witwatersrand is a veritable field of gold, or, more exactly, a basin whose two sides are furnished with a series of beds of gold. Imagine a basin with leaves very broad, but comparatively thin, ranging from 8 inches to 13 feet. Bury those leaves, formed of auriferous conglomerate, in the ground so that their upper edge may be at the level of the soil. Suppose that, after penetrating the earth at a varying angle to a depth of about 6,500 feet, some of the leaves curve up so that the edge buried first reappears at the surface.

You would thus create a series of basin with both sides very uneven, but continuous, and you have the gold bearing beds of Witwatersrand. In place of isolated rocks, of alluvial deposits sown with grains of gold—discovered by chance and leaving, when exhausted, to the gold hunters nothing but the hope of another lucky find—in the Rand there is a series of concentric beds more or less near to the surface according to the part of the basin where the miner works, and without "faults" or breaks.

The mines of the Witwatersrand employ today somewhat more than 60,000 laborers. Enormous sums of money have been expended in the purchase and installation of costly machinery, which includes about 6,000 stamps for crushing the ore, or "banket," as it is called.

Banket is the Dutch word for put cake, and the ore is thus termed because of its resemblance to that favorite product of the Boer housewife's kitchen. Geologists call it a conglomerate, which signifies that it is a hardened mixture of sand and pebbles. They say that the reef was once a sea-bench, millions of years ago, and the sand of the bench contained the specks of gold brought down from the land by streams.

Today, solidified into rock, it still holds the precious metal, though the ore is of such low grade that all the deposits of the Rand would not be worth a cent if it were not for the cyanide process, which makes it possible to extract the yellow stuff at a cost of only $8 per ton of conglomerate handled.

But the available supply of banket is unlimited. It is of an even richness throughout, no matter from what part of the reef it is taken. About 10,000,000 tons were crushed in 1898.

The ore is mined by drilling and blasting and is then raised to the surface in steel elevators, when it is put through the crushers, which reduce it to the size of bens' eggs. It is then put through the stamps and with water constantly running over it, is reduced to a powder about as fine as cornmeal.

This powder is then run over copper plates covered with mercury, which has a strong affinity for gold, causing it to adhere to its surface, from which it is removed from time to time.

The waste matter is then treated with cyanide of potassium in large vats, and much of the gold that would otherwise be wasted is recovered in this manner.

But the newer process is called chlorination. While the cyanide process is undoubtedly useful, every one connected with it will admit that it is extremely unsatisfactory.

Gradually these various mining problems are being solved, and nowadays there is very little gold left in the ore after the tailings are dumped out of the back doors of the big mills.

A view of the Transvaal mining district is impressive. In all directions and in apparently the greatest confusion one sees nothing but the same scene repeated—the tall, black stack, with its own arrangement of colored bands like the funnel of a Cunarder; the headgear, with its scaffolding, wheels and wires; the corrugated iron engine houses and machine shops; the white walls of the compound; the huge, regular heap of gray waste rock and the enormous vats where the tailings are cyanided.

SHAFT BATTERY, WHERE ORE IS CRUSHED.

It looks jumbled throughout, but if one could obtain a birdseye view of the Witwatersrand one could trace the course of the outcrop by the chimneys—stacks of the mines as regularly and as easily as it can be followed by the red line on the maps hanging on the walls in the offices of the Consolidated Goldfields company.

The conditions of mining in the Transvaal are strikingly different from those which obtain in California. Roughly speaking, the Witwatersrand reef is a vast plane of gold bearing rock, dipping to the southward at an average angle of 45 degrees.

According to the mining laws of the Transvaal, the claim holder has not the right of the lateral pursuit of his reef in depth. He has only the right of extracting such gold as can be found directly beneath the boundaries of his claims. "Vertical rights" is the technical expression. For instance, the prospector has discovered the outcrop of the reef—understand it is reef, not a vein—and pegs out his claim, a parallelogram of 150 cape feet in the direction of the strike by 400 in the direction of the dip. If he wishes to follow the reef beyond these limits, he must peg out further claims.

A single claim is of course too small to be profitably worked, so what are known as "outcrop companies" are formed to exploit a block of contiguous claims. As a consequence of this system there are few small mines. The mine owners are companies, not individuals, everything being done on a colossal scale.

The great feature of the Rand mines is the deep level properties—that is, claims located at considerable distance often a quarter of a mile, from the original outcrop and where the reef, by reason of the angle of the dip, is reached at a much greater depth. So regular is the gold distributed throughout the reef and so uniform is the course of the reef itself that even a second row of deep levels has been opened up in many of the mines, where the reef will not be struck until a depth of sometimes 3,000 and 4,000 feet is reached.

But still the reef continues beyond even the second row of deep levels, plunging deeper into the earth, just as rich, just as uniform, as at the outcrop.

All this enormous business of gold producing concentrated in such a small area, almost one town, gives facilities for the perfection of processes for production never before enjoyed in the history of mining.

One cannot help remarking the thorough businesslike principles upon which the leading English concerns have undertaken their mining operations. They go into them on a scale which is simply magnificent, and once in there is then no stint of money.

Every preparation is carefully made, every accessory appliance procured. All preliminaries are arranged with the same care and on the same methods as would be adopted by a careful manufacturer in starting his mills.

The gold bearing district is spoken of throughout Africa as the land, the fortune-portion of the mine being commonly omitted. Gold was known to exist there as long ago as the beginning of this century. Herr Lauch, the German explorer, wandered through the country and returned to Berlin with eyes wide open and mouth agape.

"The country is full of gold," he declared.

"Full of gold!" repeated the Germans in wonder.

"Yes, from river to river," he replied, meaning from the Vaal to the Limpopo. But the traveler had not been heeded when he suddenly fell ill and died. So the matter dropped, and talk of gold in the Rand was not heard again until 1886.

In this year a Dutchman, hunting for gold in the republic, unearthed a rich patch of the "yellow." The Boers, who up to that time were unaware of the presence of gold in the neighborhood, gave the fortunate man a large sum for his discovery and sent him back to the colony.

The Transvaal sons are essentially an agricultural people and, like all such, resent the intrusion of civilization. Theirs is an indolent, sluggish nature, impassive and unassertive, accepting on one subject. They hate the foreigner—the uitlander, as they call him.

So it happened that nothing more was heard of gold in the Rand until the end of 1884. In that year Mr. Wemmer and others discovered portions of the reef which today enjoys widespread renown. Then followed a rush of prospectors, and for a time the field was overun by enthusiastic, determined gold hunters.

Startled and angered at this inrush of hated uitlanders, the burghers hastily issued an order forbidding prospecting and imposing a heavy punishment on any person found hunting for gold within the borders of the Transvaal.

But after a few months it was seen that it would be impossible to enforce this decree. Gradually the Boers, owning farms all along the Rand, yielded to the persistent clamors, entreaties and threats of the invaders and granted claims. It was then that the Boer government agreed to recognize the claims allotted by the owners of farms, stipulating, however, that those who worked them said the prescribed tax and observed the rules and regulations framed by them. This proclamation attracted large crowds to the field, and soon a big camp sprang into existence.

It was then that the adage that "all roads lead to Rome" should have been changed to "all roads lead to Johannesburg," for from every district in the south and even from every other land and clime an interminable stream flocked into the golden city.

Englishmen, Boers, Dutchmen, Americans, Kaffirs, Zulus and Hottentots jostled one another in the rude streets of the camp. Some of them built reed and dash huts, others put up tin shanties, the materials being more than English kerosene tins flattened out, and others crawled under wagons until some better place of rest could be obtained. All had come to stay.

The air was filled with the shouts of bustling men, the cracking of the long hide whips—in the hands of Kaffirs and Boers driving their oxen teams through the streets—the sudden yell of a cab driver, enveloped in a cloud of dust, on finding his plunging horse about to ride you down, and the rumbling of heavy wagons and the sounds of hammer and ax.

The camp was the scene of constant turmoil. Every man was filled with feverish excitement and animated by the wildest hopes. Scenes of violence were hardly noticed. Indeed there was no time for such. The excitement of a murder died away in an hour. All sentiment, all order, all decency was lost in the wild, tumultuous, all absorbing race for gold.

But soon the tumult of camp life subsided, the wild scramble settled into steady, organized persistence, and a change came over the scene, and the cause of the change was gold—more gold. Capitalists from England, from Paris and even from Australia flocked to Johannesburg, bought up claims, organized companies, hired labor and leased stock. Some were successful and made fortunes. Others failed and lost their all. Still the number of companies increased with bewildering rapidity till at length, in 1890, there were 420 gold companies with a capital of $55,000,000. In time the mining properties were consolidated as they are today.

Johannesburg is, for all practical purposes, an English settlement. The first to flock thither when the gold fields were proclaimed were Englishmen, mostly from Klimberley, Natal and Cape Colony. English is the general language of the place. The Boers have learned it and many of the Kaffirs too.

NOT INFERIOR, ONLY A GOLD MINE.

America is represented by about 2,000 of Uncle Sam's citizens. Most of them come from the mining camps of Colorado. They took with them to the Transvaal a practical knowledge of the mining of low grade ores, and it proved invaluable to them. Many American mining engineers have made big fortunes there. John Hays Hammond is an example.

The Johannesburg of today is a splendid, substantial city of brick and stone which has been built there on the veldt practically by Englishmen. It is the counting room of the mines. The Boers take no pride in it.

But gold mines are not the only riches in the Transvaal. There are vast coal deposits, stretching from Pretoria clear to Delagoa bay. There are also deposits of silver, copper and lead. A seal of attractive iron ore, from 20 to 40 feet wide and yielding 70 per cent of metal, extends for several miles alongside of the coal seams.

None of these mines has the Boers developed. When the English work them the Boers discourage the industry by imposing heavy taxes.

So you see that the barren plateau which the Boers settled upon half a century ago has turned out to be a veritable Golconda. The riches of their land have brought them much trouble, as they shrewdly foresaw years ago. They have been brought face to face with a difficult problem. Should they suffer the hated uitlander to remain and obtain control of their government, should they abandon their homes and trek again, or should they fight the great empire which has cheated them from pillar to post in South Africa?

A TRANSVAAL MINE.

With a stubborn courage which compels our admiration the Boers have determined to fight, not for the possession of the gold mines, but for their republic and their independence.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal,

By N. S. GORDON.

Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

THERE should be no deviation from the rule of making the vote on governor at the last election the basis of representation to the next state convention.

IF the flag furlers are right in their present theory regarding the Philippines, most of the territory now constituting the United States was acquired unjustly.

THE Anoka Union claims to have heard a rumor that a quiet canvass of the state was being made in the interest of Albert Berg for governor. Pease will be bearing all sorts of strange things for several months to come.

THE Hallock News is printing a series of views showing farm scenes in Kittson county. The cuts are all well printed and give a better idea of the country and its improvements than could possibly be told in any other way.

THE remarks of Chairman Jones, of the Democratic National Committee, are so sadly out of tune with those of other Democratic leaders that it would be well for them to get together and agree upon a code of signals that will keep them more in tune.

THE hearty reception accorded to the presidental party on it western tour, shows unmistakably that the people are in hearty sympathy with the administration, and do not favor withdrawing from the Philippines in in the face of the enemy.

IT is evident that the mind of the editor of the Times is wandering and we would therefore suggest to him that he stick to the text, convince the people that their money was spent in their best interests and that high class performances were secured to entertain them and all will go well.

MCKENZIE says "there are two general classes of people that make up a community. "Those who do things and those who do not". He might also add a third class—those who "do" everybody they get a chance at, of which latter class he seems to be an accomplished member.

THE speeches of the president in the West have clearly indicated his intention to recommend to congress that the Philippine Islands become the property of the United States for all time to come. He will probably not recommend any form of government, but leave that matter to congress.

THE St. Paul Globe tells about the finding of a tropical bird's nest in the Spanish cannon sent to St. Paul by the government, and accuses the bird that put it there of temerity. Now possibly the bird had been a witness to some of the bad workmanship of the Spanish gunners and considered itself and nest entirely out of the way of danger.

A. B. ALLEN, formerly of the Jackson, Minn. Republic, has purchased the Battle Lake Review, together with the office building and residence of Bronson Strain. Old Growler Allen has been for many years one of the leading newspaper men of Southern Minnesota. He is a ready and forcible writer. Bronson Strain is one of the strong minded conscientious writers among the fraternity, and has made the Review a power for good

"TAKE down the flag; don't disgrace it any longer." These words were buried, by a woman who has a father, a brother and son in the army, at a reverend gentleman in Chicago who, while delivering a tirade against the government at a public meeting, stood under the stars and stripes. No more eloquent plea than this in behalf of the administration could be made, and nothing more scathing and withering could be said to the antis, for it came from the heart and spoke the whole truth in a word. Men defending Aguinaldo's treacherous actions and seeking to bring about the defeat of our boys in blue must stand from under the flag.

THE Daily Courier, of East Grand Forks, recently had a somewhat humorous editorial anent the newspaper situation in Crookston, depicting the Tribune and the Press as calling up the Times and the JOURNAL respectively to receive orders. There is nothing in it, Brother Duffy, as far as we are concerned. The Times is simply trying to throw dust in the people's eyes. We have denied the statement made by the Times that the JOURNAL owns the Press and we here again reiterate the denial. So far as we know the Times has never come out and denied its ownership of the Tribune. The Times knows it would be useless to do so, for too many facts to the contrary are positively known.

THE TIMES' STATEMENTS NOT TRUE.

The Times editorial of last Saturday night consists exclusively of personal abuse of the editor of the JOURNAL and some arguments based on misstatements. While it may have given the writer of the editorial—whoever he may be—considerable satisfaction to make such insinuations about, cast slurs upon and hurl ridicule at the editor of this paper, it is no satisfaction to the business men, who find that a large part, almost one-fifth, of all the money spent upon the Carnival—which money was subscribed by them—went to enrich the treasury of the Times-Tribune, nor does it in any way answer the charge we made that the Times' bill for advertising and printing was exorbitant.

The Times classes us with the crookers because we criticised the Carnival management, forgetting, perhaps, that the true critic is as much a "pusher", or in other words, a creator, as anyone else. A crooker is one who complains unreasonably and we submit that for every charge we made we gave well founded reasons

With reference to the Polk county exhibit at the State Fair the Times charged that we used our "efforts in an underhand and deceitful way to secure the award for another county" in which we had "interests". The man who wrote that statement knows that it is utterly false. We have no interests whatever in Le Sueur county nor did we either in an "underhand" or open way exert any influence to secure the award for any county. Our interests are centred in Polk county and hence we cannot but regret that the first prize did not come here, still we could not say with the Times that Le Sueur county "was clearly not entitled to it". Doubtless, however, the editor of the Times made as extensive inspection of the county exhibits at the State Fair while he was in the Twin Cities a few days, at 882 expense to the business men of Crookston, looking up performers (?) for the Street Carnival.

As is usual with the Times there is an utter absence of all regard for truth in the editorial referred to, and if the editor of that paper expects the people to approve of such action he must, indeed, hold them in contempt.

WHEN Admiral Dewey was being driven through the streets of New York last month in the triumphal procession, the applause and salutes of the vast multitudes were acknowledged by a continual doffing of his cap, but when he came opposite a group of school children, who received him with a joyous song, he at once stood up in the carriage and remained uncovered till the littleones were passed, picking up a flower which a little girl threw to him and pinning it to his coat. This incident is characteristic of the Admiral's feeling and attitude toward the children. The plan, therefore, of the Minneapolis Journal, of raising a fund by one cent contributions by the children of the northwest and of using the money thus given to buy for Dewey a watch to be presented to him when he visits Minnesota this fall, is one that we can heartily endorse and we feel sure that the children will give their pennies when they know all about the project. The lesson of patriotism cannot be taught too early to the littleones, and in after years it will be pleasant for them to remember that they helped to honor the great Admiral, George Dewey. The POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, as announced elsewhere in this issue, will gladly receive these contributions, and forward them to Minneapolis. Certificates will be issued showing that the holder has given an equal share with all other children in the northwest to the Dewey fund.

ENGLAND is making war preparations far in excess of the demands in South Africa This leads to the conclusion that she is apprehensive, that attacks may be made upon her by some of the nations of Europe. Indeed it is reported that Russia and France will object to England's annexing the Transvaal and the Orange Free state, which without question will be the outcome of the present British-Boer war. Great Britain is one of the factors in the progress of Anglo-Saxon civilization. If a combination of European states attempts to stop the onward movement of this civilization and there is danger of the combination being successful, then we say the United States ought to lend a helping hand. This union would be joined by Germany and Japan, and would in effect be an Anglo-Saxon alliance and before it all other persons must give way for it would include the greatest forces for good in the world. Anglo-Saxon civilization has thus far in history shown the most constructive power and it is, therefore, a legitimate inference to make that this civilization is bound ultimately to be uppermost everywhere. We hope this stage may be reached peaceably but it is possible that it can only be attained by the sword.

It is unfortunate that the question of paving which involves about $80,000 expense to the taxpayers could not have been settled by an unanimous vote of the council or at least with less disputing than is the case The council is now divided into two groups, each claiming to be working solely for the interests of the people. In advertising for bids the council as it had a right to, reserved the right to reject any and all bids, but if, as is claimed, there was absolutely no intention of accepting any of these bids under any circumstances, the bidders or contractors were unfairly dealt with. Then again, if the adopting of the report of the roads and bridges' committee does not award the contract what is to be gained by repealing that action? If nothing binding has been done then why undo what has not been done? The cheaper the paving, provided the work is well done the better, and yet the point is well taken that if there were cheaper contractors their bids ought to have been handed in. If the council considered all the bids too high they should have been rejected when opened, as was the case with the bids on the city hall, and not referred to a committee.

DAME RUMOR SAYS

That the Columbia is still the gem of the ocean.

That dairy farming is far more profitable than wheat raising.

That a man talks of your faults sometimes to hide worse ones of his own.

That we are now having a fair sample of our Minnesota Indian summer.

That the Times admits poor management in securing attractions for the recent Carnival.

That Ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed has just been admitted to practice law in New York courts.

That sportsmen are heading towards the proposed park regions in search of big game.

That deer and moose can be lawfully killed after next Wednesday for a period of fifteen days.

That the JOURNAL has a larger list of subscribers than any other newspaper in Polk county.

That prices paid by Crookston dealers for butter, eggs and farm produce are equal to those paid at any point in the Red River Valley.

That Carl Schurz and Horace White, two political hacks, who have grown gray on the wrong side of every public question, were the principal leaders of the anti-expansion convention recently held in Chicago.

High School Notes.

Jennie McAskill and Irma George are playing a duet this week for the scholars to keep time to.

The football boys have set the fashion in the way of head gear, by wearing the Norwegian toques or stocking caps, in all sorts of flashy colors. This is the first time the girls have allowed themselves to be surpassed by the boys in this department.

Fred Dahl and Amer Mathieson are among the tardy arrivals this week.

The second foot team of the University of North Dakota will be over Saturday to play the high school boys. The game will be interesting, as it is the first game to be played in this town in a number of years. Let everybody turn out and root for the boys.

SHELLY.

P. Z. Ele has been threshing on his farm the last week.

Mrs. J. W. G. Anderson and Mrs. K. T. Malme went to Halstad Wednesday.

C. A. Hawkins and L. E. Olson drove to Halstad last Sunday afternoon.

A special coach with Supt. Jenks was attached to Wednesday's west bound train.

C. A. Varneson and Ole Bekkedahl made a business trip to Hillsboro last Wednesday.

Dr. Taylor, the Hillsboro veterinary surgeon, transacted business in town last Wednesday.

Alfred Johnson, who has been working with C. Onstad, left for his home at Minneapolis last Wednesday.

Shelly gets wheat from four miles west of Hillsboro, N. D. Accordingly we must have good markets here.

We will now have a new depot. Two car loads of lumber arrived last Monday and G. N. carpenters will commence work at once.

Miss Emelia Scheil expects to have work commenced on a new house at once for her millinery parlor, as her present accommodations are too small.

George Afterlit, Joe Anderson and Christ Varnson went out on a hunting trip last Sunday. They returned home with one chicken and a duck after traveling over the whole country.

For Sale

One lot in Jerome's addition and two lots in Sampson's addition. If you want a good lot at a low figure, ask to see them. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

LENGBY.

John Riste is around again.

Ed. Welte was at Ebro Sunday.

Ida Welte is visiting with Mina Lavioe this week.

Ole Hidden came home from Hendrum last week.

I. Skjegstad is around taking orders for tailor made clothing.

John Olson returned from the Dakota wheat fields Tuesday.

Miss Hattie Olson commenced teaching school in the school east of town Monday. Thirteen scholars were enrolled the first day.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Lee were in Lengby Saturday. Mr. Lee has traded his farm to Anton Johnson for the Hotel Dewey. Mr. Lee will take possession about the 15th of November.

Ole Lindberg left Wednesday for a couple of weeks visit to his farm near Turtle Lake. Mr. Hallberg will have charge of the blacksmith shop during his absence.

RED LAKE FALLS.

S. Brown is building a brick residence.

J. T. Knight went to Thief River Falls last Friday.

W. A. Lund went to Thief River Falls Wednesday.

P. Johnson has just finished burning his last kiln of brick for this season.

The Red Lake Falls Electric Light Company got their new dynamo in good running order Monday night.

ERSKINE.

Tom Bjorn did business here Thursday.

Noah Narveson visited at home Sunday.

Willie Torgerson visited at Fosston Monday.

Will Lawrence was here on business Saturday.

A. D. Tice transacted business here Wednesday.

Adolph Anderson lost a valuable horse Wednesday.

W. H. Bailey moved his family to Crookston Thursday.

Knudt Haugen of Fertile did business here Thursday.

O. Nelson of McIntosh did business here Wednesday.

C. P. Hole of McIntosh was an Erskine visitor Friday.

Jens Rudd of Fertile spent Tuesday in the village on business.

M. N. Novotney of Argyle visited with Editor Egley Monday.

H. T. Gilbertson is our new president, as Thos. Torgerson resigned.

About thirty-five cars of wood are being shipped from this station every week.

A. A. Ramburg returned from Fosston Tuesday, where he has been visiting the last few days.

Thomas Torgerson and wife returned Wednesday after a week's visit with their son on Red Lake.

Dr. Mohn was called to O. J. Tagley's Wednesday as the latter has three horses on the sick list.

A basket party was given for Mrs. Hoken Helestad at the Erskine Hotel Saturday evening and the sum of $25.00 was raised.

The telephone line is here from the east and have only about three miles west of town left before we can say hello with Crookston.

Wanted.

A man with a family of four, boy and girl, to take charge of small dairy farm. Good position and good salary to right man. Enquire at Fontaine & Anglim's store. 36-27

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture

.....AND.....

Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a home.... CROOKSTON, MINN.

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Makes the food more delicious and wholesome

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

MAPLE BAY.

We are having rainy weather.

A sociable was given at Horton's last Friday evening.

Nick Peterson went to Fertile on business Monday.

Mr. Bjerge moved into his new dwelling house last week.

O. M. Olson returned from a visit with friends in Lake Park on Monday.

A party of five from Ada spent a few days hunting around here and went home will satisfied with the game they got.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

Literary Notes.

Vick's magazine comes to our table much improved this month and announces a change in business management. The size and shape makes a far more attractive book than formerly, and the exquisite colored frontispiece of roses is a beauty. The reading matter is excellent in every department and will prove an invaluable aid to every person who cultivates a garden or rears a house plant. Single subscriptions 50 cents. Clubs of five $2.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street CROOKSTON, MINN.

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

50 lbs Patent Flour for 1 bu. No. 1 Nor. Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS, CROOKSTON, MINN.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. ERSKINE, President. WM. ANGLIM, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:
George B. Erskine, A. A. Miller, Wm. Anglim, J. R. Robinson, E. M. Walsh, L. Fontaine J. P. Foote, W. H. Crosby, J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Crookston, Minnesota.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block. Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 7, 8, 4 and 5, over Fountain & Anglim's
Office hours—9 to 12 n. m; 1 to 3 p. m; 7 to 8 p.m

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets
Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR RELIABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice, Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday. Morning 11:00, even ing, 8:00. Holy Communion the First Sunday of every Month. Sunday School 10:00 a. m. Strangers welcome.
REV. H. M. GREEN, B. D.
Rector

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

Strayed.

From the farm of A. H. Taylor in the town of Funny, one month ago, a New foundland dog. Finder will please leave at Collins livery barn in Crookston. Liberal reward.

CITY AND VICINITY.

—A. F. Cronquist was up from Erskine last Monday night.

—Chas. J. Cook, of Argyle, was in the city last Monday night.

—S. M. Rooke, of Warren, spent Monday night in Crookston.

—Miss Mattie Marin went to Red Lake Falls yesterday morning.

—F. A. Carter from the Black Duck County was in the city yesterday.

—G. A. Fargo, after a short visit in the city returned to Euclid yesterday morning.

—Thomas T. Brown, of Euclid, has recently secured a patent on a bean harvester.

—Ex-Senator Burkhardt, of Wabasha, is visiting his sons. He will likely spend the winter here.

—Ike Simmons has been engaged this week in raising his barn and in other ways fixing it up for winter.

—Donald Bain, of Fisher, was a caller Monday. He reports that dogs killed eight fine high grade sheep for him last week.

—Mrs. C. M. Benson has closed her hotel on North Main street and has removed to Bemidji, where she will open up in the same business.

—Drs. Loe and Holte performed a difficult surgical operation last Monday upon Mrs. Ole Lee whose home is twenty miles north of Thief River Falls.

—Hotel James has changed hands and is now under the management of John Mahoney an experienced hotel man who will make this a favorite hostelry.

—R. A. Lawrence's little boy fell into a rain water barrel Monday and only for some quick work on the part of rescuers he would have been drowned.

—East Grand Forks had a small sensation this week in the way of an elopement. The parties were arrested in Langdon, N. D., and brought back to the Forks.

—Thos. C. Shapleigh is visiting at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fred Mix. He will remain until after Christmas. He spent the past summer with his son at Moorhead.

—Crookstonites interested in Maple Lake being a fine fishing place will be pleased to learn that the State Fish Commission intend sending to this lake a large number of young fish.

—Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls have been building many private residences during the past summer and otherwise appear to be moving along an upgrade. The crops, also, in the vicinity of these towns have been excellent.

—A church council was held at Ada Tuesday at which time the Rev. Mr. Stiles was installed as pastor of the Congregational church. Among others present were Rev. P. W. Yarrow, of Fosston, and Rev. H. P. Fisher, of Crookston, the latter giving the charge to Mr. Stiles.

—Dr. Robert Forbes, presiding elder of the Duluth district, passed through the city yesterday morning on his way from Hallock to St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls. He returns to Crookston Saturday evening and will spend Sunday at Ada. The doctor is just beginning the rounds of his circuit for the first time since conference.

—See A. G. Andersen for your paints and oils.

—The St. Hilaire mill saws 200,000 feet of lumber per day.

—E. F. Whitney, of Warren, was in the city the first of the week.

—E. Lanctot of Gentilly, was a caller at the JOURNAL office Monday.

—Editor Novotny of the Argyle Banner, was in the city over Sunday.

—Crookston vs. Grand Forks at the Fair grounds in a football game next Saturday.

—F. W. Flanders, the insurance man at Warren, spent Friday night in the city.

—A regular meeting of the school board will be held at the Merchants bank tonight.

—The probate court was engaged in a hearing of claims in the Gaston estate, Monday.

FOR SALE—First class restaurant outfit complete in all respects. Apply to W. W. Hoch.

—Don't pay too much for your coal. Call and see Vance & Stone and get their prices.

—George Parvis returned Saturday morning from a two days business trip to the Twin Cities.

—Twenty minute halves at the foot ball game Saturday at the Fair grounds. Play begins at 2 o'clock.

—Charley Kiewel, of the Crookston brewery, was up in the Thief River district last week looking after business.

—David Corbin, a prominent farmer living two and a half miles east of Gentilly, gave the JOURNAL a call last Saturday.

—M. P. Evenson and O. P. Johnson, of Thief River Falls, have moved into their handsome new brick building, called the Diamond store.

—The Salvation Army barracks will be vacated Nov. 1, by the Army and Henry Burkhardt will open up there a meat packing establishment.

—Mr. Stanton, night yard master of the Carman Great Northern railway yards, has moved into the Filiatrault house near W. E. Slocum's in Jerome's addition.

—A reception will be given tomorrow evening at the home of M. E. Harbin in Jerome's addition to the new Methodist pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Kathan.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—J. W. Milligan representing the North Dakota Institute of Grand Forks for the cure of liquor, morphine and opium habits, was a caller at the JOURNAL office yesterday.

—M. Magnussen has leased the Crookston bed spring works for the period of one year. This is an industry that should prosper here and no doubt will under Mr. Magnussen's management.

—County Attorney Holston is looking up evidence in the matter of the recent prairie fire in this county. The state fire warden is determined to sift the matter and see if he can't make such conveyances less numerous.

—The building lately occupied as a residence by the officers of the Salvation Army, has been greatly improved in appearance both inside and out, and will be occupied by H. Burkhardt as a residence.

—Manager Hill, of the People's Furniture Co., left Saturday night for a purchasing trip to the eastern markets. He expects to buy a large stock for the holiday and winter trade. He will be away for about two weeks.

—Larsen & Carpenter have in their repair shop, in the rear of their machinery emporium, a 26 horse power advance threshing engine, about the largest made. It is indeed a giant and well worth taking a look at.

—Vance & Stone have bought the lots and barn on State street, in Jerome's addition, which were formerly owned by John McLean, Sr. in the near future they expect to tear down the old building and build a private residence.

—Insurance rates in Moorhead may be raised owing to the fact of several destructive fires occurring there recently and to the strife that is said to exist among the firemen. No danger of anything like this happening in Crookston for this city has a model fire department.

—Tomorrow the probate court will have one of the most interesting cases that has occupied its attention for some time. The Stevens estate case comes up for a hearing. This is one of the largest estates in the county and will be the first in which the inheritance tax law has been applied.

—The Crookston Brewery Co. have begun some extensive improvements on their plant. They will tear down the south wing and make large additions to the main building. A lot of the old machinery will be thrown out and new put in. Mr. Kiewel has already been east and purchased the new machinery, which will be placed in as soon as the building is ready.

—Take your prescriptions to A. G. Anderson.

—Judge Watts is holding court at Red Lake Falls.

—Miss John Ristow was down from Key West Tuesday.

—J. P. McDonald, of Climax, was a Crookston visitor Monday.

Rev. J. Dohias left yesterday for his new field in Omaha, Neb.

—Archie Hillard is away in the Turtle River country hunting.

—Alfred Olson was down from Warren the first part of the week.

—Call on us before making your purchases. The Strawbridge Co.

—That sale of remnants is making things hum at the New York Store.

—Go to the Strawbridge's for dress goods, flannels, blankets, shoes, etc.

—President McKinley has proclaimed the 30th of November as Thanksgiving Day.

—Pay your taxes before Nov. 1 or you will have to pay a penalty of ten per cent.

—M. O. Soredahl and E. P. Storaasli were down from Red Lake Falls last Monday.

—Henry Funk, bookkeeper at the Crookston brewery is confined to his bed with an attack of typhoid fever.

—See Vance & Stone before you buy your winter's coal supply. They have all kinds of coal at the lowest prices.

—Good coal means solid comfort for these cold winter days and nights. Vance & Stone will give you the right article.

—Miss Olive Fortier, of the Times staff, left Monday morning for Winnipeg where she will spend a week or so visiting friends.

—The New York Store is going to quit selling carpets, rugs and mattings as soon as the present stock is sold out and it is rapidly decreasing.

—Sheriff Anderson, of Marshall county, spent Sunday in this city. He was down after the man Myers who was wanted by the authorities of his county.

—The ladies of the Presbyterian church will serve a hot supper in the Y. M. C. A. rooms in the McKinnon block this afternoon from 5 to 8 o'clock.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—Argyle was represented at the Masonic dedication last night by H. L. Meignard, the banker, Dave Coutts, Thos. Clark, P. S. Nelson, R. G. Marlette and P. S. Buckingham.

—Victor Anderson, a nephew of Erick and G. Johnson, of this city, who was a Minnesota soldier in the Philippines, returned to the Twin Cities last Tuesday after a short visit in Crookston.

—Ernest L. Brown, of Warren, shipped from that town last Tuesday night to the Zoological gardens in New York, a four-months-old moose, which he secured from a young lad who captured the animal.

—Now is the time to group for winter We have quite an accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Co. Telephone 40.

—The Women's Relief Corps will serve supper at the G. A. R. Hall next Tuesday evening from 5:30 till 7 o'clock. Every body is invited. Fifteen cents will pay for the delicious viands with which the tables will be loaded.

—Mr. Harry Murphey, representing Gordon & Furguson's great fur establishment, will be at the New York Store Monday and Tuesday Oct. 30, and 31, with a complete line of ladies', misses' and children's fur garments. He will also have sample skins of the popular lines of furs so as to accommodate any one who wishes to have a garment made to order.

For Sale

A good farm of 320 acres, well cultivated, has a good house and barn and close to Crookston markets. Can be bought right. For particulars call at the JOURNAL office.

For Sale

A desirable house and lot with barn. This house is in first class condition and well located. The price is $1,700 and it is a bargain. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by all Druggists, price 75c per bottle.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

THE C.O.D.
The Best Establishment ..... in the Northwest.

Men's Suits
Men's Overcoats

The largest, the best assorted, the cleanest stock of Men's Clothing ever shown in the Northwest. A careful inspection of Qualities and Prices will convince you that equal values are not to be found elsewhere. We do not carry "shoddy" sort of Clothing. Our customers are the sort of people who wear shoddy things.

Men's Suits $3.00 to $25.00
Men's Fur Overcoats $7.00 to $65.00
Men's Overcoats $3.00 to $30.00

C. O. D. CLOTHING STORE

S. C. Johnson's
Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale	35c
Oats, per bushel	28c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs	75c
Shorts, 100 lbs	65c
Bran, 100 lbs	60c
Shelled Corn, per bu	40c
Condition Powder, per pkg	25c
Shorts, per ton	$12.00
Bran, per ton	10.00

Cedar Posts from 12½c to 15c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

COAL AND WOOD
VANCE AND STONE

Fur Carnival...

Mr. Harry Murphy representing Gordon & Furguson's great Fur establishment will be at our store next Monday and Tuesday with a complete line of Ladies, Misses' and Children's Fur Garments. Also a line of sample Skins of the popular line of Furs so as to accommodate any one who wishes to have a garment made to order. Remember the dates and don't fail to be on hand.

REMNANTS Our REMNANT CLEARING SALE is now on in full blast, and all Ladies desiring to secure good values for little money in short lengths of DRESS GOODS, SILKS, LININGS, LINENS, COTTON GOODS, LACES, EMBROIDERIES, ETC. should come early and avail themselves of this rare opportunity.

CARPET SALE To make room for our large and finely assorted stock of CLOAKS AND SUITS we have decided to close out all CARPETS, RUGS and MATTINGS. Every yard of these Goods will be sold. Not a yard will be reserved for they must positively go at once.

The New York Store
A. CHABOT, PROP.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

N HIS STEPS.

What Would Jesus Do?"

Charles M. Sheldon.

CHAPTER II. (Continued.)

Here followed the name of one of the largest dealers in tobacco in the city. He had been in the habit of inserting a column of conspicuous advertising and paying for it a very large price.

Edward Norman laid this letter down very thoughtfully, and then after a moment he took up a copy of his paper and looked through the advertising columns. There was no connection implied in the tobacco merchant's letter between the omission of the whole principle and the withdrawal of the advertisement, but he could not avoid putting the two together. In point of fact, he afterward learned that the tobacco dealer withdrew his advertisement because he had heard that the editor of The News was about to enter upon some queer reform policy that would be certain to reduce its subscription list.

But the letter directed Norman's attention to the advertising phase of his paper. He had not considered this before. As he sat there in the office alone he could not escape the conviction that Jesus could not permit some of them in his paper. What would Jesus do with that other long advertisement of liquor? Raymond enjoyed a system of high license, and the saloon and the billiard hall and the beer garden were a part of the city's Christian civilization. He was simply doing what every other business man in Raymond did, and it was one of the best paying sources of revenue. What would the paper do if it cut these out? Could it live? That was the question. But—was that the question, after all? "What would Jesus do?" That was the question he was answering, or trying to answer, this week. Would Jesus advertise whisky and tobacco in his paper?

Edward Norman asked it honestly, and after a prayer for help and wisdom he asked Clark to come into the office.

Clark came in feeling that the paper was at a crisis and prepared for almost anything after last Monday morning experience. This was Thursday.

"Clark," said Norman, speaking slowly and carefully, "I have been looking at our advertising columns and have decided to dispense with some of the matter as soon as the contracts run out. I wish you would notify the advertising agent not to solicit or renew the ads. I have marked here."

He handed the paper with the marked places over to Clark, who took it and looked over the columns with a very serious air.

"This will mean a great loss to The News. How long do you think you can keep this sort of thing up?" Clark was astonished at the editor's action and could not understand it.

"Clark, do you think if Jesus were the editor and proprietor of a daily paper in Raymond he would print advertisements of whisky and tobacco in it?"

Clark looked at the editor with the same look of astonishment which had greeted the question before.

"Well, no; I don't suppose he would. But what has that to do with us? We can't do as he would. Newspapers can't be run on any such basis."

"Why not?" asked Edward Norman quietly.

"Why not? Because they will lose more money than they make; that's all." Clark spoke out with the decision that he really felt. "We shall certainly bankrupt the paper with this sort of business policy."

"Do you think so?" Norman asked the question not as if he expected an answer, but simply as if he were talking with himself. After a pause he said:

"You may direct Marks to do as I said. I believe it is what Jesus would do, and, as I told you, Clark, that is what I have promised to try to do for a year, regardless of what the results may be to me. I cannot believe that by any kind of reasoning we could reach a conclusion justifying Jesus in the advertisements in this sort of whisky and tobacco in a newspaper. There are many other advertisements of a doubtful character I shall study into. Meanwhile I feel a conviction in regard to these that cannot be silenced."

Clark went back to his desk feeling as if he had been in the presence of a very peculiar person.

He could not grasp the meaning of it all. He felt enraged and alarmed. He was sure any such policy would ruin the paper as soon as it became generally known that the editor was trying to do everything by such an absurd moral standard. What would become of business if this standard were adopted? It would upset every custom and introduce endless confusion. It was simply foolishness, it was downright idiocy, so Clark said to himself, and when Marks was informed of the action he seconded the managing editor with some very forcible expletives. What was the matter with the chief? Was he insane? Was he going to bankrupt the whole business?

But Edward Norman had not faced his most serious problem.

When he came down to the office Friday morning he was confronted with the usual programme for the Sunday morning edition. The News was one of the few evening papers to issue a Sunday edition, and it had always been remarkably successful financially. There was an average of one page of literary and religious items to 30 or 40 pages of sport, theater gossip, fashion, society and personal material. This made a very interesting magazine of all sorts of reading matter and had always been welcomed by all the subscribers, church members and all, as a Sunday necessity.

Edward Norman now faced this fact and put to himself the question, "What would Jesus do?" If he were editor of a paper, would he deliberately plan to put into the homes of all the church people and Christians of Raymond such a collection of reading matter as one day of the week which ought to be given up to something better and holier? He was of course familiar with the regular argument for the Sunday paper —that the public needed something of the sort, and that, if conducted properly, one would not go to church anyway, ought to have something entertaining and instructive on Sunday, his only day of rest. But suppose the Sunday morning paper did not pay. Suppose there was no money in it. How many would the editor or the proprietor be likely to supply this crying need of the workingman? Edward Norman summoned himself with himself over the subject. Taking everything into account, would Jesus probably edit a Sunday morning paper, no matter whether it paid? That was not the question. As a matter of fact, The Sunday News paid as well that it would be a direct loss of thousands of dollars to discontinue it. Besides, the regular subscribers had paid for a seven day paper. Had he any right now to give them anything less than they had supposed they had paid for?

He was honestly perplexed by the question. So much was involved in the discontinuance of the Sunday edition that for the first time he almost decided to be guided by the standard of Jesus' probable action. He was sole proprietor of the paper. It was his to shape as he chose. He had no board of directors to consult as to policy. But as he sat there surrounded by the usual quantity of material for the Sunday edition he reached some definite conclusions, and among them was the determination to call in the force of the paper and frankly state his motive and purpose.

He sent word for Clark and the other men in the office, including the few reporters who were in the building and the foreman, with what men were in the composing room (it was early in the morning, and Raymond was still in), to come into the mailing room. This was a large room, and the men came in, wondering, and gathered around the tables and counters. It was a very unusual proceeding, but they all agreed that the paper was being run on new principles anyhow, and they all watched Mr. Norman curiously as he began:

"I called you in here to let you know my plans for the future of The News. I propose certain changes which I believe are necessary. I understand that some things I have already done are regarded by the men as very peculiar. I wish to state my motive in doing what I have done. Here he told the men what he had already told Clark, and the result was as he had done, and looked as painfully conscious.

"Now, in acting on this standard of conduct I have reached a conclusion which will probably cause some surprise. I have decided that the Sunday morning edition of The News shall be discontinued after next Sunday's issue. I shall state in that issue my reasons for discontinuing. In order to make up to the men whatever the amount of mailing matter they may suppose themselves entitled to, we can issue a double number on Saturday, as is done by very many evening papers that make no attempt at a Sunday edition. I am convinced that, from a Christian point of view, more harm than good has been done by the Sunday morning paper. I do not believe that Jesus would be responsible for it if he were in my place today. It will occasion some loss to arrange the details caused by this change with the advertisers and subscribers. That is for me to look after. The change itself is one that will take place. So far as I can see, the loss will fall on myself. Therefore the reporters nor the pressmen need make any particular changes in their plans."

Edward Norman looked around the room, and no one spoke. He was struck for the first time in his life with the fact that in all the years of his newspaper life he had never had the forces of the paper together in this way. "Would Jesus do that? That is, would he probably run a newspaper on some loving family plan where editors, reporters, pressmen and all met to discuss and devise and plan for the making of a paper that should have in view"—

He caught himself drawing almost away from the facts of typographical unions and older rules and repressive enterprise and all the cold businesslike methods that made a great daily successful. But still the vague picture that came up in the mailing room would float before him when he had gone into his office and the city had gone back to their places with wonder in their looks and questions of all sorts on their tongues as they talked over the editor's remarkable actions.

Clark came in and had a long serious talk with the chief. He was thoroughly roused, and his protest almost reached the point of resigning his place. The man guarded himself carefully. Every minute of the interview was painful to him, but he felt more than ever the necessity of doing the Christlike thing. Clark was a very valuable man. It would be difficult to fill his place. But he was not able to give any reasons for continuing the Sunday paper that answered the question, "What would Jesus do?" by letting Jesus print that edition.

"It comes to this, then," said Clark finally, "You will bankrupt the paper in 90 days. We might as well face that future fact."

"I don't think we shall. Will you stay by The News until it is bankrupt?" asked Edward Norman, with a strange smile.

"Mr. Norman, I don't understand you. You are not the same man this week that I ever knew."

"I don't know myself either. Clark. Something remarkable has caught me and borne me away. I was never more convinced of final success and power for the paper. You have not answered my question. Will you stay with me?"

Clark hesitated a moment and finally said "Yes." Norman shook hands with him and turned to his desk. Clark went back into his room stirred by a number of conflicting emotions. He had never before known such an exciting and mentally disturbing week, and in fact now as if he were connected with an enterprise that might at any moment collapse and ruin him and all connected with it.

Sunday morning dawned again on Raymond, and Mary Maxwell's church was again crowded. Before the service began Edward Norman attracted general attention. He sat quietly in his usual place about three seats from the pulpit. The Sunday morning issue of The News contained the statement of its discontinuance that been read by nearly every man in the house. The announcement had been canvassed in such remarkable language that every reader was stirred by it. No such series of distinct sensations had ever disturbed the usual business custom of Raymond. The events connected with the News were not all. People were eagerly talking about the strange things done during the week by Alexander Powers and the railroad shops and by Milton Wright in his stores on the avenue. The service progressed upon a distinct wave of excitement in the pews. Henry Maxwell faced it all with a calmness which indicated a strength and purpose more than usual. His prayers were very helpful. His sermon was not so easy to describe. How would a minister be age to preach to his people if he changed them after an entire week of quiet reading: "How would Jesus preach? What would he probably say?" It is very certain that Henry Maxwell did not preach as he had done two Sundays before. Sunday of the past week he had stood by the grave of the dead stranger and said the words, "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," and still he was moved by the spirit of a deeper impulse than he could measure as he thought of his people and yearned over the Christ message when he should be in his pulpit again.

Now that Sunday had come and the people were there to hear what would the Master tell them? He questioned over his preparation for them, and yet he knew he had not been able to fit his message into his ideal of the Christ. Nevertheless no one in the First church could reasonber hearing such a sermon before. There was in it rebuke for sin, especially hypocrisy; there was definite rebuke of the greed of wealth and the selfishness of fashion, two things the First church never heard rebuked this way before, and there was in it a call to people that gathered new force as the sermon went on. When it was finished, there were those who were sure of it in their hearts, "The Spirit moved that sermon." And they were right.

Then Rachel Winslow rose to sing, this time, after the sermon, by Henry Maxwell's request. Rachel's singing did not provoke applause this time. With deeper feeling carried people's hearts into a reverent silence and tenderness of thought. Rachel was beautiful, but all the consciousness of her remarkable loveliness had always marred her singing with those who had the deepest spiritual feeling. It had also marred her rendering of certain kinds of music, added element of humility and parity which the audience strictly felt and bowed to.

Before the service closed Henry Maxwell asked those who had remained the week before to stay again for a few moments for consultation and any others who were willing to make the pledge taken at that time. When he was at liberty, he went into the lecture room. To his astonishment, it was almost filled. This time a large proportion of young people had come, but among them were a few business men and officers of the church.

As before, Henry Maxwell asked them to pray with him, and, as before, a distinct answer came in the presence of the Divine Spirit. There was no doubt in the minds of any present that what they proposed to do was so clearly in line with the Divine will that a blessing rested on it in a very special manner.

They remained some time to put questions and consult together. So full was a feeling of fellowship such as they had never known in their church membership. Edward Norman's action was well understood by them all, and he answered several questions.

"What will be the probable result of your discontinuance of the Sunday paper?" asked Alexander Powers, who sat next to him.

"I don't know yet. I presume it will result in a falling off of subscriptions and advertisements. I anticipate that."

"Do you have any doubts about your action? I mean do you regret it for fear it is not what Jesus would do?" asked Henry Maxwell.

"Not in the least, but I would like to ask for my own satisfaction if any one of you here thinks Jesus would issue a Sunday morning paper?"

No one spoke for a minute. Then Jasper Chase said: "We seem to think alike on that, but I have been puzzled several times during the week to know just what he would do. It is not always an easy question to answer."

"I find that notable," said Virginia Page. She sat by Rachel Winslow. Every one knew who Virginia Page was, wondering how she would answer the keeping her promise.

"I think perhaps I find it specially difficult to answer the question on account of my money. Jesus never owned any property, and there is nothing in his example to guide me in the use of mine. I am studying and praying. I think I see clearly a part of what he would do, but not all. What would Jesus do with a million dollars?' is my question really. I confess that I am not yet able to answer it to my satisfaction."

"I could tell you what to do with a part of it," said Rachel, turning her face toward Virginia.

"That does not trouble me," replied Virginia, with a slight smile. "What I am specially troubled about is the principle of Jesus that will enable me to come the nearest possible to his action as it ought to be reached home, and that now in my life, so far as my wealth and its use are concerned."

"That will take time," said Henry Maxwell slowly. All the rest in the room were thinking hard of the same thing. Milton Wright told something of his experiences. He was gradually working out a plan for his business relations with his employees, and it was opening up a new world to him and them. A few of the younger men told of special attempts to answer the question.

There was almost general consent over the fact that the application of the Jesus spirit and practice to everyday life was the serious thing required in their mutual conference that they had met to put Jesus's name and code back together. Jasper Chase and the superintendent of the Endeavor society stood talking earnestly in one corner of the room. Alexander Powers and Henry Maxwell remained even after all the others had gone.

"I want you to come down to the shops tomorrow and see my men and talk to the men. Somehow I feel as if you could get nearer to them than any one else just now."

"I don't know about that, but I will come," replied Henry Maxwell a little sadly. How was he fitted to stand before 300 or 400 workingmen and give to them a message? He had a sudden sense of his weakness, as he asked the question, he rebuked himself for it. What message would do? That was an end to the discussion.

He went down the next day and found Alexander Powers in his office. It lacked a few minutes of 12, and the superintendent said. "Come up stairs, and I will get you a pass and then we'll try to do."

He went through the machine shops climbed a long flight of stairs and entered a very large empty room that had been used by the company for a storeroom.

"Since making that promise a week ago I have had a good many things to think of," said the superintendent, "and among them is this: Our company lives up to the law in this room, and I am going to fit it up with tables and a coffee plant in the corner there where the men can get their pail of beer. I propose to provide a good place where the men can bring their lunch and eat their noon lunch and give them tea or coffee. Once a week the privilege of a 15 minutes' talk to the men will be given to all who feel to them in their lives."

Maxwell looked surprised and asked if the men would come for any such purpose.

"Yes, they'll come. After all, I know the men pretty well. They are among the most intelligent workingmen in the country today, but they are, as a whole, the most misunderstood class of people I ever knew. I asked, 'What would Jesus do?' and, among other things, it seemed to me he would begin to get acquainted and to add to the lives of these men more physical and spiritual comfort. It is a very little thing, this room and what it represents, but I acted on the first impulse to do the first thing that appealed to my good sense, and I want to work out this idea. I want you to speak to the men when they come up at noon. I have asked them to come up and see the place and I'll tell them something about it."

Henry Maxwell was ashamed to say how uneasy he felt at being asked to speak from the center of confronting workingmen. How could he speak without notes or to such a crowd? He was afraid from the center of confronting such a crowd, so different from the Sunday audiences he was familiar with.

The next half a dozen days were tables and benches in the great room, and when the noon whistle sounded the men poured up stairs from the machine shop below and, seating themselves at the tables, began to eat their lunch. There were perhaps 800 of them. They had read the superintendent's notice, which he had posted up in various places, and came largely out of curiosity.

They were favorably impressed. The room was large and airy, free from smoke and dust and well warmed from the steam pipes.

About 20 minutes or I Alexander Powers told the men what he had in mind. He spoke very simply, like one who understands thoroughly the character of his audience, and then introduced the Rev. Henry Maxwell of the First church, his pastor, who had consented to speak a few minutes.

Henry Maxwell will never forget the feelings with which for the first time he confronted that grimy faced audience of workingmen. Like hundreds of other ministers, he had never spoken to any gathering except those made up of people of his own class in the sense that they were familiar in their dress and education and habits to him. This was a new world to him, and nothing but his new rule of conduct could have made possible his message and its effect. He spoke on the subject of satisfaction with life, what caused it, what its real sources were. He had the great good sense on this first appearance not to recognize the men as a class distinct from himself. He did not use the term "workingmen" and did not say a word to suggest any difference between their lives and his own.

The men were pleased. A good many of them shook hands with the principal going down to their work, and Henry Maxwell, telling it all to his wife when he reached home, said that never in all his life had he known the satisfaction he then felt in having a handshake from a man of physical labor. The day marked an important one in his Christian experience, more important than he guessed. It was the beginning of a fellowship between him and the working world. It was the first plank laid down to help bridge the chasm between the church and labor in Raymond.

Alexander Powers went back to his desk that afternoon much pleased with his plan and seeing much help in it for the men. He knew where he could get some good tables from an abandoned eating house at one of the stations along the road, and he saw how the coffee arrangement could be made a very attractive feature. The men had requested even better than he anticipated, and the whole thing could not help being a great benefit to them.

He took up the routine of his work with a glow of satisfaction. After all, he wanted to do as Jesus would, he said to himself.

It was nearly 4 o'clock when he opened one of the company's long envelopes which he supposed contained orders for the purchase of coal. He ran over the first page of typewritten matter in his usual quick, businesslike manner before he saw that it was a letter what was not intended for his office. but for the superintendent of the freight department.

He turned over a page mechanically, and beginning to read it, was at once arrested to him, but before he knew it he was in possession of evidence which conclusively proved that the company was engaged in a systematic violation of the interstate commerce laws of the United States. It was a distinct and unequivocal breaking of law as if a private individual should enter a house and rob the inmates. The discriminations shown in rebates was in total contempt of all the statutes framed by the state. the state it was also a distinct violation of certain provisions recently passed by the legislature to prevent private trusts. There was no question that he held in his hand evidence sufficient to convict the company of willful, flagrant violation of the law of the commission and the law of the state also.

He dropped the papers as he did so as if they were poison, and instantly the question flashed across his mind, "What would Jesus do?" He tried to shut the question out. He tried to reason with himself by saying it was none of his business. He had supposed in a more or less indefinite way, as did nearly all of the officers of the company, that this had been going on right along in nearly all the roads. He was not in a position, having no place in the office except to do anything direct, and he had regarded it all as a matter which did not concern him in the least. The papers just before him revealed the entire affair. They had through some carelessness in the address come into his hands. What business of his was it? If he saw a man entering a house to burglarize it was it under a different rule of conduct, so that he could rob the public and defy law and be unmolested because he was such a big organization? What would Jesus do?

Then there was his family. Of course if he took any steps to inform the commission it would mean the loss of his position. His wife and daughters had always considered luxury and a good deal in society. If he came out against this lawlessness as a witness, it would drag him into the courts, his motives would be misunderstood, and the whole thing would end in his disgrace and the loss of his position. Simply, it was not part of his business. He could easily get the papers back to the freight department and no one be the wiser. Let the iniquity go on. Let the law be defied. What was it to him? He would work out his plans for bettering the conditions just about him. What more could a man do in this railroad business, where the power so much going on anyway that made it impossible to live by the Christian standard? But what would Jesus do? he knew the facts? That was the question that confronted Alexander Powers as the day wore into evening.

The lights in the office had been turned on. The night men came to engine and the crash of the planer in the big shop continued until 6 o'clock.

Then the whistle blew, the engines slowed down, and the men dropped their tools and ran for the blockhouse.

Alexander Powers heard the familiar click, click, of the blocks as the men filed pass the window of the blockhouse just outside. He said to his clerk: "I'm not going just yet. I have something extra tonight." He waited until he heard the last man deposit his block. The men behind the block case went out. The engineer and his assistants had work for half an hour, but they went out at another door.

At 7 o'clock that evening any one who had looked into the superintendent's office would have seen an unusual sight. He was kneeling down, and his face was buried in his hands as he bowed his head upon the papers on his desk.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

MODUS VIVENDI IN EFFECT.

Temporary Alaskan Boundary Has Been Agreed On.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Mr. Tower, the British charge here, called at the state department and handed Secretary Hay a note formally accepting for his government the proposition for the temporary adjustment of the Alaskan boundary line, proposed by Secretary Hay on this note of Thursday. With that act the long-expected modus vivendi relative to the vexed boundary question went into effect. The result has been brought about through the direct negotiations of Secretary Hay and Mr. Tower, after several failures in the past through commissioners and ambassadors. The state department is confident that it has conserved every American interest in the arrangement without unjustly treating Canada. The division line on the west pass by which the Dalton trail is reached is placed 22½ miles above Pyramid harbor, which is regarded under the treaty as tide water mark, so the Canadians are not allowed to reach any point on the Lynn canal. Moreover, there is no permission given for a free port or even for the free transfer across American territory of Canadian goods, except of miners belongings. These matters may figure later on when it comes to a permanent boundary line, but they are not touched upon in this modus.

The modus vivendi follows the precedent established by Secretary Evarts in 1878 in agreeing upon a temporary boundary on the Stikine river in Alaska by an exchange of notes.

CANADA'S ANSWER.

Final Proposition Made Concerning the Alaska Boundary.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Associated Press is enabled to give authentically Canada's final proposition for a permanent settlement of the Alaska dispute. It is very different from the former demands and was delivered to United States Ambassador Choate by the Canadian minister of interior, Sir Louis Henry Davies, late the night before the latter sailed and dispatched Tuesday to Washington by the officials of the United States embassy. It is as follows:

"That the boundary line be arbitrated upon terms similar to those imposed by the United States and Great Britain over Venezuela, particularly those provisions making 50 years occupancy either side conclusive evidence of title, occupancy of less than than that period to be taken as equity allowed under international law.

"That a condition precedent to and absolutely preliminary to arbitration, Skagway and Dyea would be conceded to the United States without further claim, if Canada received Pyramid harbor.

"In other words Canada gives up much of the disputed gold country in return for a seaport, but stipulates that she must get that latter before she agrees to arbitrate the boundary line."

Absorbed the Wagner Company.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—After a two day's session of the directors of the Pullman Palace Car company, it is announced that the Pullman company has absorbed the Wagner company.

TO ADOPT NEW TELEGRAPH.

Plan For Uniting Our Island Colonies by Wireless System.

It is probable that before the beginning of the new year the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy will be installed by the signal corps of the army in connection with our island colonies, says a Washington dispatch to the Philadelphia Press. Captain Squier, "Marconi will come to Washington. During his visit we expect to make some valuable experiments to test his system over long distances. Marconi is confident he can send messages 1,000 miles. We are preparing to install the system in connection with our coastal telegraph line, which will stretch will be between Key West and Cuba, but I have no doubt of the new system's ability to reach it.

"The intention is then to connect the eastern end of Cuba with Haiti and the eastern end of Santo Domingo with Porto Rico. We will also connect the two important islands of the Hawaiian group and such islands of the Philippine archipelago as may be necessary. I believe wireless telegraphy will be of inestimable advantage to the government in covering the short distances that separate these islands."

New Zealander's Profitable Patent.

A New Zealander has patented and is marketing an invention for branding stock without injuring the hide in which makers of cattle in New Zealand find an immense advantage, says the Chicago Record. The new process uses a chemical mixture which permanently destroys the hair. The destruction of part of the hide was one of the bad features of the old method, the branding appearing on the best part of the skin. Gibson's patent will add a value of 6 or 7 cents at least to every hide to which it is applied, and it is needless to add that in countries like Australia and New Zealand, where millions of cattle are raised every year, such an advance in the price of hides exactly meets the desire of stock owners. The right for Australia alone has just been disposed of for $250,000.

BRITAIN AND THE BOERS

Real Issue Between England and the Transvaal.

QUESTION OF SUZERAIN RIGHTS.

Outline of the Two Contentions Upon Which the Controversy Which Led to the Present War Is Based—What the Transvaal Quotes in Support of Its Case.

The controversy between the British and the Boers which has led to war is based upon two irreconcilable contentions, says the New York World. The British contention is that Great Britain has unseverable rights over the Transvaal republic and therefore may legally interfere in the internal affairs of the republic. In support of this view Mr. Chamberlain quotes the convention of 1881, which did undoubtedly give Great Britain the right to interfere in the internal affairs of the Transvaal republic. He maintains that that convention is still in force and that the convention of 1884 is merely a supplement to it. The Transvaal's contention is that Great Britain has no suzerain rights over the Transvaal and no right whatever to interfere in its internal affairs. In support of the case it quotes:

First.—The official title of the convention of 1884, which is, "A convention in substitution of the convention of Aug. 3, 1881."

Second.—The words of Lord Derby, who negotiated the convention of 1881 for the British, "By the omission of those articles of the convention of Pretoria which assigned to her majesty and to the British resident certain specific powers * * * connected with the internal government * * * your government will be left free to govern the country without interference."

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

Third.—Mr. Chamberlain's own words a few months after the Jameson raid in 1896, "To go to war with President Kruger to enforce upon him reforms in the internal affairs of his state, in which secretaries of state, standing in their places, have repudiated all right of interference—that would be a course of action which would be immoral."

When Mr. Chamberlain took up with the Transvaal government in October, 1897, the matter of franchise reforms and the other points of difference, he based his representations not upon the moral ground, but upon the legal right of Great Britain to interfere in the Transvaal's internal affairs.

The progress of the negotiations has revealed more and more clearly Great Britain's determination to insist upon the convention of 1881, which the Transvaal government has repeatedly and continues to regard as superseded by the convention of 1884. The Transvaal's disposition to yield all that Great Britain asked in the matter of internal reforms has been clear, but that yielding has been based firmly upon Great Britain's abandonment of her claims to a legal right to internal interference.

Finally, in August, Great Britain began to mass troops in South Africa. The Transvaal asked her why. She replied, through Sir Alfred Milner. "These troops are here in order to protect British interests and make provision against eventualities." And on Sept. 19 the British government sent a note to the Orange Free State voluntarily explaining northward movements of large bodies of British troops: "The movement is in no way directed against the Free State. * * * The imperial government is still hopeful of a friendly settlement of the differences which have arisen between them and the Transvaal. But if this hope should unfortunately be disappointed," etc. As early as Aug. 26 Mr. Chamberlain said in a public address, "The issues of peace and of war are in the hands of President Kruger and of his advisers."

On Aug. 21 the Transvaal offered Great Britain more than she had asked, but insisted that Great Britain must accompany acceptance of the offer with a definite agreement never again to raise the abrogated convention of 1881, but always thereafter to stick to the convention of 1884. That is, the Transvaal government insisted that Great Britain should accept the concessions as the voluntary act of an independent state and not as the yielding to a legal right, a formal admission by the Transvaal republic that it is not an independent state. Mr. Chamberlain's reply reasserts Great Britain's claim in this language: "The imperial government has been compelled by the action the government of the South African Republic (the Transvaal), which has asserted the right of the republic to be a sovereign international state, absolutely to deny and repudiate this claim."

These facts make it clear:

First.—That Great Britain, through Mr. Chamberlain, revived a claim which she had formally abrogated in 1884—a denial of the independence of the Transvaal republic.

Second.—That the real difference between Great Britain and the Transvaal was not about the franchise, but about this matter of independence.

Third.—That Great Britain not only threatened war, but only prepared to make war to enforce her claim to sovereignty over the Transvaal and to the right of interference in its internal affairs, but also in so many words announced that war was the only alternative to accepting her commands.

Fourth.—That the Transvaal rejected. He was prepared to agree to almost any terms Great Britain might command, short of the abandonment of its existence as an independent state.

Finally, it may be said that the Transvaal republic made one more offered to submit any and all points in dispute to impartial arbitration, and Great Britain steadily refused.

The London Speaker in its last issue puts the matter thus:

"The Boers are going to war not to resist demands for this franchise or that, but to oppose an impossible interpretation of a canceled document."

GIRL'S MIRACULOUS CURE.

For Many Years Unable to Stand, She Longs From Bed and Walks.

A supposed death scene terminated in a sensation at Kokomo, Ind., recently that is puzzling the doctors and is a mystery to everybody. For 12 years Miss Edna Osborn, the 20-year-old daughter of the Rev. W. H. Osborn of South Kokomo, has been prostrated with spinal trouble and unable to walk a step or bear her weight on her feet.

She gradually grew worse, and the other day the family gathered around the bed, thinking her dying, when to the amazement of all the supposed expiring girl leaped from the bed and stood upright on the floor, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. Still thinking it was only a dying struggle, the relatives sought to place her back on the bed, but were unable to do so. She now has the full use of all her faculties, walking as firmly and actively as anybody. Her father thinks the sudden recovery was due to faith and prayer.

"HAMLET" BY CANDLELIGHT

Osmond Tearle's Funereal Experience in Natal, South Africa.

South African papers just received in London relate that Mr. Osmond Tearle had a curious experience while playing "Hamlet" at Durban, Natal, recently.

Suddenly, during Hamlet's "nunnery scene" with Ophelia, the electric lights in the theater went out, and it and the whole town were in darkness. Quick as thought Mr. Leonard Boyne, who was playing Polonius, seized a candle and, assuming town duties, assured the audience that they had nothing to fear and that he hoped the light would be presently restored.

As a matter of fact, it was not until the end of the play that the light which had so suddenly gone out was as suddenly switched on again. Candles consequently had to be resorted to for footlights, which gave intensified and "funereal character" of the graveyard scene.

Latest Golf Machine.

Golf enthusiasts will be glad to learn of the invention of a new machine which will enable them to keep their skill in driving up to the top notch during the winter, says the Chicago Tribune. The new device consists of a ball at the end of an arm, attached to an upright. When the ball, which when in its normal position, rests two inches above the surface of the floor, is struck, it flies around at the end of the arm and registers the number of hundreds of yards it would have gone if it had been driven from a "tee" on the links. In this way one may even improve in driving during the winter months and go out next spring ready to surprise the experts

TESTING A CRUISER'S ROLL

Important Experiments on the New Orleans in Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Important tests of the stability of a cruiser of the United States navy were made recently by the naval constructor at the Brooklyn navy yard. There was a crowd of interested spectators at dock No. 3, all bent upon witnessing this official decision as to whether the New Orleans would prove seaworthy. It is an odd fact about the New Orleans that she was bought from the government of Brazil by this government in order to prevent her coming into the possession of the government of Spain. This transaction was followed by her passage northward without damage in the last war.

The serious charge has been brought against the New Orleans that she rolls too much, says the New York Press. The cruiser was tested in the Brooklyn dock by floating and by experiments with weights affecting her draft. One of these weights was an anvil weighing 1,000 pounds. This burden caused the cruiser to list six inches to starboard when placed upon that side. Another test caused a list to port of eight inches. Yet another weight of 17,650 pounds was placed on board, and this caused a list so serious as to alarm naval experts as to the safety of the vessel.

As this ship was expected to carry many stores, as well as many men to Manila, further tests of her seaworthiness will be made. The New Orleans has just come out of drydock and her engines are still under repair.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Oct. 19.

Germans are said to be supplying the Boers with officers and ammunition.

A regiment of Scots is being enlisted in the United States for service against the Boers.

The First Montana volunteers have left San Francisco for their homes on a special train.

The statement that the bubonic plague is raging at Santos, Brazil, is officially confirmed.

The Cologne Gazette announces officially that Emperor William will start for England on Nov. 11.

Charles L. Kohler, one of the most prominent and wealthy men of Des Moines, is dead of typhoid fever.

Henry Frohman, father of Daniel, Charles and Gustave Frohman, the theatrical managers, is dead at New York.

Friday, Oct. 20.

General Henry will command the department of the Missouri.

Two smugglers were killed in a fight with revenue officials in Arizona.

Robert T. Lincoln has been elected president of the Pullman company.

General Lawton has reached San Isidro and will hold the town as a base of supplies.

Several railroad building projects will be postponed because of the high price of steel rails.

The Illinois supreme court has pronounced the American Glucose company's charter void because the concern is a trust.

The director of posts at Manila denies that there has ever been censorship of the mails there since the Americans came into power.

Saturday, Oct. 21.

Vryburg has been captured by the Boers.

The number of persons now receiving famine relief throughout India reaches 893,000.

The steamship Moana, at San Francisco from Australia, brought $1,132,000 in treasure.

Mrs. Thomas R. Merrein, president of the Society of Colonial Dames of Wisconsin, is dead.

The 19th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor will be held at Detroit, Mich., beginning Dec. 11 next.

William H. Appleton of the publishing house of D. Appleton & Co., died at his home at Riverdale, N. Y., aged 83 years.

Reciprocity arrangements are sought by the island of St. Kitts and Turks island, West Indies. Arrangements so far cover nearly all the British West Indian possessions save these two, and Mr. Tower, the British charge, has taken the initial steps in their behalf.

Monday, Oct. 23.

Sir Thomas Lipton promises another challenger for the America's cup.

F. Tennyson Neely, the New York publisher, has made an assignment.

Senator Foraker in a speech nominated McKinley for the next president and Roosevelt for 1904.

It is stated that important reforms will be recommended by the assistant postmaster general in his annual report.

Twenty persons are said to have lost their lives in Teton county, Montana, alone, during the recent heavy snow storm.

Miss Fanny Langdon, instructor in zoology in the University of Michigan, died Sunday of appendicitis. The remains will be shipped to Boston for interment.

Daniel Hunter, an old settler of the St. Croix valley, who located at Hudson, Wis., 45 years ago, and subsequently removed to Roberts, Wis., died there Wednesday of old age. He was born in Canada and was 103 years old.

Tuesday, Oct. 24.

Yellow fever has practically become epidemic at Jackson, Miss.

The war department is considering the desirability of having a Cuban exhibit at the Paris exposition.

William P. Lord of Oregon has been appointed envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the Argentine Republic.

Emperor William will exhibit the Frederick the Great collection of curios, literary productions and French paintings, at the Paris exposition.

A Berlin dispatch says medals have defaced newly erected monuments in the Siegess Allee. The noses and hands of seven of the emperor's ancestors have been demolished.

The will of the late George W. Clayton, who bequeathed $1,000,000 to the City of Denver for an orphans' college, has been admitted to probate. Contests have been abandoned.

Wednesday, Oct. 25.

Times in Samoa are stormy again.

A Chicago man has confessed to having 32 wives.

General Funston, it is said, will be brevetted major general.

The United States troops will be withdrawn from the Cœur d'Alenes Nov. 1.

Insurgent Commander Castro has assumed control of the Venezuelan government.

The Russo-American dispute over the seizure of American sealers will be arbitrated.

A plan for insuring its employes has been inaugurated by the management of the Chicago and Alton railroad.

It is rumored that the pending British naval preparations are due to Russia's intention to seize a port in the Persian gulf.

Governor General Brooke prevented Cubans from driving Syrians out of the island under an old Spanish law against "heretics."

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Thomas H. Graham, a bankrupt.

To the creditors of Thomas H. Graham, of Lee and Forks, in the County of Polk, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 2nd day of October, A. D. 1899, the said Thomas H. Graham was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned at the City of Crookston in the County of Polk in said district on the

6th day of November, A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Oct. 26d, 1899. OLE J. VALE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

Summons.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
The State of Minnesota, to R. H. Walker, defendant:

You are hereby summoned to be and appear before the undersigned, one of the Justices of the Peace in and for said county, on the 28th day of October, A. D. 1899, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, at my office in the City of Crookston in said county, to answer unto the plaintiff in a civil action, to the damage one hundred dollars or under. Should you fail to appear at the time and place aforesaid, judgment will be rendered against you upon the evidence produced by said P. D. Stone for the sum of forty-five and 50-100 dollars with interest since January 3, 1899 at 7 per cent and the costs of this action.

Given under my hand this 26th day of September, 1899.

G. H. HOLT,
Justice of the Peace.

[26-28]

Summons

State of Minnesota, } ss. DISTRICT COURT
County of Polk. } Fourteenth Judicial District.

William A. Lanctot, plaintiff, against
The Minneapolis Trust Company, as Receiver of the North Western Guaranty Loan Company; and Mary Rose Milner; also all other persons or parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

The state of Minnesota to the above named defendants:

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which is on file in the office of the Clerk of said Court, at the Court House in the City of Crookston in said county, within twenty days after the service of this summons upon you, exclusive of the day of such service, and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff in this action will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint herein.

DEFOREST BUCKLEN,
Plaintiff's Attorney.
Crookston, Minn.

State of Minnesota, } ss. District Court.
Polk County. }
Fourteenth Judicial District.

William A. Lanctot, plaintiff, against
The Minneapolis Trust Company, as receiver of the North Western Guaranty Loan Company; and Mary Rose Milner; also all other persons or parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

Notice is hereby given, that the above entitled action is brought by the above named plaintiff against the above named defendants, to determine adverse claims to their estate or right of real estate situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: The northeast quarter of section nine in township one hundred and forty-three of range forty-three. That the relief demanded by the plaintiff is that the plaintiff be adjudged the owner in fee of all of the above described real estate, and that the defendants have no right, title, estate, lien or interest in the same or any part thereof. That said action is now pending in the above named Court, and no personal claim is made against any of the defendants.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., July 8, 1899.
DEFOREST BUCKLEN,
[25-31] Plaintiff's Attorney.

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court. Special Term, Oct. 17, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Hanken H. Netteland, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Johan O. Sundberg of the County of Polk praying that administration of said estate may be granted to him, and that Letters of Administration issue to him.

It is ordered, That the Court of Polk, the intestate, and being an inhabitant of the County at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels, and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is interested by purchase of real estate, and praying that administration of said estate be to Johan O. Hanson granted.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the 10th day of November A. D. 1899, at two o'clock P. M., at the Probate office, in Crookston in said County.

And ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs at law, next of kin, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for the three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston the 17th day of October A. D. 1899.
OLE J. VALE,
[26-28] Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 50-100 dollars claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Andrew Chilson and Ida Chilson, wife, to Daniel Hunter, mortgagee, to George Q. Erskine, assignee of said mortgage, on the 19th day of June 1893, and with a power of sale therein contained, which said mortgage was filed in the Register of Deeds and County Auditor of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 26th day of August 1893, at 11 o'clock a. m. in book 6 of mortgages, on page 410-13 and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The southeast (1/4) quarter of the southeast (1/4) of block number eleven (11) in Crookston, according to the recorded plat thereof, in addition to the townsite of Crookston according to the recorded plat thereof on file in office of the register of deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house, in the City of Crookston in said County and State, on the

6th day of December 1899,

at ten o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 50-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars, attorney's fee in case no action or proceeding has been instituted, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated Oct. 31 A. D. 1899.
A. A. MILLER, GEORGE Q. ERSKINE,
Attorney. Mortgagee.
Crookston, Minnesota. [29-35]

Final Proof.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Sept. 16 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. on November 1, 1899, viz:

EDWARD E. BRAATEN.

H E. 18026 for the se¼, sw¼ section 1 Township 148 N., Range 46 W.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole J. Grevlos, Knut Hofland, Ernest Naber and Hans Gjesen, of Crookston, Minn.

SYLVESTER PETERSON,
[25-30] Register.

SCANDIA-AMERICAN BANK,
OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought.

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON.....Pres. H. STENERSON.....Vice-President.
N. S. GERVAIS.....2d Vice-President. L. ELLINGTON.....Cashier
A. P. HANSON, Asst. Cashier.

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laying out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have our architect include electric wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give on the benefit of our experience in laying out wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

CARY SAFE CO.,
BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.
....Manufacturers of....
Fire and Burglar Proof Safes
Vaults, Locks, Etc.
CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

The Weekly Inter Ocean

Largest Circulation of all Political Papers in the West

Always American—Always Republican

THE WEEKLY INTER OCEAN SUPPLIES ALL NEWS AND BEST CURRENT LITERATURE

The Inter Ocean's Telegraphic Service is Exclusive. Every Column is Bright, Clean and Packed with News.

$1

The Literature of its Columns is equal to that of the best magazines. It is interesting to the children as well as the parents.

The Inter Ocean is a Western Newspaper,

And while it brings to the family The News at the World, and gives its readers the best and ablest discussions of all questions of the day, it is in full sympathy with the ideas and aspirations of Western people and discusses literature and politics from the Western standpoint.

$1.00—PRICE, ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR—$1.00

Price of Daily by mail - - - $4.00 per year
Price of Sunday by mail - - - 2.00 per year
Daily and Sunday by mail - - - 6.00 per year

The Sunday and Daily Editions of the Inter Ocean are the Best in the West

DEFECTIVE PAGE

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

SOUTH CROOKSTON.

Nice weather in the Fifth ward. Well, I guess yes.

Wm. Arnold left Monday for Warren, where he is buying cattle.

Frank Steinbrook is able to be out again after a short run of typhoid.

D Lavalley left for Canada last Monday. He expects to spend the winter in the East.

G. W. Banks and T. C. Stewart are putting the finishing touches on Mr. McGregor's house.

T. S. Hutchins is still improving his building on First Avenue North. Tom is a hustler. He is always doing something.

The social and musicale given last Friday night in the Baptist block was a grand success. It was under the leadership of Mrs. Hayes.

A young son arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jef. Lowry on Sunday last. Jef. is feeling good. He says the boy will make a No. 1 switchman the same as his father.

Little Alva Siver, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Siver, of Carman, is sick in bed, threatened with the fever. We hope she may soon be well again. She is a nice little girl and a perfect little lady and her face is missed among the little folks now.

GENTILLY.

Old settlers predict a fine winter owing to the wet summer and balmy fall.

Many farmers in this vicinity are done plowing.

Laframboise & Labonte have their store and shop painted. The building looks well.

Supt. Jenks private car was attached to the St. Vincent train yesterday morning.

Mr. Verity, our cheese marker, was called away. He left for North Dakota Tuesday evening.

Gentilly cheese factory closed yesterday. The total amount of milk received this season is 343,000 pounds.

Last Thursday a runaway team was stopped by a barb wire fence. One horse was cut severely about the hind legs.

ELDRED.

Plowing is nearly finished around here.

Wheat buyer Berg is at Hallock, Minn.

E. G. Monson returned from Dakota last week.

Messrs. Dyrud and Fleming drove to Climax Saturday.

Very little wheat is being sold here on account of bad roads.

Miss Christine Sitness was at Crookston last Saturday.

Misses Moen and Nygard were to Climax Tuesday shopping.

J. R. Johnson, of Northcote, was here last Saturday evening.

A Woodmen's camp was organized here last Saturday by Mr. Chase.

Miss Gevning and Miss Dyrud were visitors at E. G. Monson's Sunday.

A few boys from this vicinity attended the dance at Climax last Saturday night.

Joe Boucher reports a very large yield of all kinds of grain on his farm this year.

O. H. Munson, who is running an engine near Mayville, is expected home this week.

The young folks at Nehy had a dance last Monday evening. All present report a good time.

We are getting a taste of Squaw Summer these days, which is very agreeable after the cold snap of last week.

With flax $1.13 and wheat 56, farmers think the former would be the more profitable and next year a much larger acreage of flax will be sown.

Chris Monson, second man at the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator at Eldred spent Sunday at his brother's. Chris was one of the immunes during the late war.

The Woodmen, of Eldred, will give a grand ball one week from next Friday night. A good time is assured. Riggs fall orchestra of Crookston will furnish the music. Every body is cordially invited.

RUSSIA.

A new settler is located on section eight.

Work on Peter Wermager's buildings is delayed because of the scarcity of carpenters.

Plowing around here is about finished, and we had favorable weather for it this fall.

John Generoux has stopped work with his threshing machine and expects to return to his home at West Superior.

Edward E. Bratton, who has been doing carpenter work for Felix Rauenhuehler, visited with H. Clausen in Fairfax last Sunday.

Mr. Finch, a brother to Harry Finch, of Finch-Smith & Company, of Crookston, stopped off here one day last week on his way to Leckhurt.

Next Saturday evening the new store building of Felix Rauenhuehler will be formally opened with a grand dance. Good music has been engaged, dainty refreshments will be served and free works sent off. A big time is expected. Come and bring your best girl.

EUCLID.

W. Currie and D. Losey have completed their fall plowing.

Miss L. Davis spent last Sunday with her parents in Crookston.

Threshing is about done. Wet weather has caused some delay.

Rumor has it that a Ghost party is to be given on Hallowe'en night. Ghosts, witches and spirits will be in evidence.

The young ladies will have charge of the Missionary Tea this week Friday at the church. A big time and attendance is expected.

W. Currie is doing the grading and filling in on the loading platform on the east side of the depot, consequently a good job is assured.

Two of Euclid young folks took in the concert at the M. E. Church in Crookston last week. They pronounce it very fine, in fact never enjoyed themselves better. We know how it was ourself.

NORTHLAND.

Plowing is about completed around here.

Miss Linstrom from East Grand Forks is visiting with Mrs. Geo. English this week.

Thos. Henrikson has just completed the threshing of 700 bushels of flax at his farm north of here.

Mrs. Math Doyle is back from North Dakota, where she has been visiting with relatives and friends.

A. Berg has left for the coast. Mr. Berg's departure leaves quite a void in Northland society and probably in some hearts.

Chas. Anderson and Miss Annie Johnson were married on Friday last. The young couple left immediately for Grenville Mines., where Mr. Anderson intends to start a blacksmith shop.

Gust Fundonet claims that he has solved the great problem of perpetual motion and that he soon will show the sceptical and the world at large something that will open their doubting eyes wide.

ST. HILAIRE.

J. M. Palmer, representing the JOURNAL, spent a day in St. Hilaire last week.

Carl Johnson is at Red Lake Falls during court, being one of the grand jurors.

MARRIED—Pete Mosleth and Lizzie Strom, of St. Hilaire, at Red Lake Falls, Wednesday, Oct. 18.

Harry Ives is in Indianatasking mud baths. Better come home Harry, as we have plenty of mud here at present.

The farmers in Block River have been busy the past week hauling lumber for a barn to be erected at the parsonage.

J. L. Johnson's drug store has been removed to a North Dakota town. We are unable to learn what Mr. Johnson's plans are for the future.

Oscar Erickson, while working around a threshing machine at O. P. Johnson's farm in Block River had the misfortune to get one of his hands into a gearing, crushing one finger and badly bruising two other fingers. Dr. Blomburg amputated the finger.

FELTON.

A. Cromer dropped in on us Friday morning from Ada.

Dr. Davenport, of Moorhead, had his office here yesterday.

M. T. Dalhquist returned from St. Paul Wednesday morning.

Felton has a new postmaster, Ole Windeleir, the P. W. Mills resigned.

F. M. Byerly went to Pelican Lake Tuesday morning for a couple of days' stay.

Ed. Stevens has moved from the Talmer building into C. E. Fox's place.

L. R. Perry, of Forest City, Iowa, and H. G. Gardner, of Titonka, Iowa, are in the city.

The net proceed of the basket sale for the benefit of the Catholic church Friday evening was $61.

James Long arrived in our city Tuesday morning from Walsreta where he has been engaged as station agent.

F. M. Byerly has sold his barber outfit to M. J. Paranho, who will run a tonsorial shop in connection with his harness shop.

NEILSVILLE.

Threshing is all done in this neighborhood, the average yield was from 12 to 16 bushels per acre.

Mrs. N. O. Faulsrud went to Crookston yesterday to see a doctor as she has been feeling poorly for some time.

Quite a few of our young people went to Climax Saturday night to to help the boys up there celebrate the organization of a new brass band. Of course they had a good time.

Elling Ellingson, who lost his barn, horses and stock with considerable hay and feed a couple of weeks ago is now hauling lumber to rebuild his barn. His property was partly insured.

Mrs. Olive Grande, who lives three miles from here was surprised the other day by a visit from her son, whom she has not heard from for several years. The boy has been a mariner on one of the United States battle ships in the Cuban waters.

A party from Shelly, who had a rig from here out for hunting Monday tried, when he came back into the town, to take a cartridge out of his gun when the gun for some reason went off and the charge barely missed Alfred Vigin's head. Some persons ought not fool with a gun.

John Paulsrud, who has been soldiering in the Philippines is back with us. He is the same old fellow only a little shinner perhaps: but he is gaining right along. John can tell quite a number of experiences that he had while gone but you have to pump it out of him, as it were, as he is not of the kind that talk just for the sake of hearing his own voice. The writer asked him one day if he had killed many Filipinos, and he said. "Oh well, I had plenty chances."

HIDDEM.

Louis Broman has gone to Staples.

Andrew Finseth has quite a large school.

Clara Figenskau is clerking in Grand Forks.

Olaf Broman has gone to the woods for the winter.

Andrew Finseth is again teaching in District No. 25.

Mrs. Frank Nelson visited at P. Modenes last week.

Josie Dalen and Annie Johnson are dressmaking at Argyle.

Maggie Lindgren has gone to Goodhue County to visit relatives.

Did you attend that Royal Neighbor banquet at Northland last week?

Henry Daxton has returned. We are all glad to see you back Hunk.

Dam Dalen has hung up his threshing rig for this fall. Dam is all right.

Thomas Figenskau is helping the wheat buyer in the flat houses along the river.

Rainy weather. The farmers who have not finished ploughing feel rather blue.

Ole Kleven is threshing when the sun shines. You should have begun earlier Ole.

Nearly every day hunters shoot around the lakes in this town, and still there are lots of mud hens left.

Misses Annie Browman and Inga Larson have gone to Grand Forks to learn dressmaking with Miss Lauderg.

Captain Rhinehart is threshing at the Elk Horn Farm, and hauling the grain from the machine to a barge on Red River.

Mr. and Mrs. Old Hendrickson have returned from Fairhault where they placed their eldest daughter Winnie, in the State School for the deaf and dumb.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eliot were guests at M. Rose Northrup's Lake Side Farm for three days last week, also Mr. Caswell. All were from Grand Forks.

A young man from the southern part of the state who has been harvesting and threshing in this town, visited East Grand Forks for two or three days and now he is looking for work again, without a dollar out of what he left. He thinks he was robbed. No one, however, pities him.

GRAND FORKS.

J. N. Green has returned from his business trip out west.

Harry Adams returned to Winnipeg after a week spent in the city.

Geo. B. Clifford is transacting business before the federal court.

A. T. Cowan, of St. Vincent, is the guest of J. R. Glover, agent of the Great Northern.

The Ladies' Club are taking up their winter's work with renewed energy, after their summer vacation.

It is almost certain that East Grand Forks will have a new stone depot, to be erected by the Great Northern.

Mrs. J. H. Rouard entertained the Nebus Club Monday afternoon, Mrs. Coulson, of Colorado, being the guest of honor.

The East side mill is running full blast and is turning out a goodly amount of lumber. The East siders feel justly proud over the large concern.

The Great Northern officials of this city are greatly interested in the repair of the track on the Duluth line. The track has sunk 12 feet since its construction.

A great many of the society people are in St. Paul this week to attend the 25th anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Prouty, former residents of Grand Forks.

The funeral of Gus Hines occurred Tuesday a. m. at St. Paul's church. The floral offerings were beautiful, and a large concourse of people followed the remains to the cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. W. H. Brown, wife of Col. Brown took place Sunday afternoon from St. Paul's church. One of the largest funerals ever held in Grand Forks.

WYLIE

Scot Hall, of Red Lake Falls was with us this week.

Wheat is beginning to roll in and times look better.

J. G. Brady and Miss Kate Martin drove over to the lower Falls Sunday.

Mr. Poutz is threshing this week and contemplates getting rich this fall.

Hon. Marcus Johnson passed through here Tuesday, enroute to the county seat.

P. N. Duff made an effort to wheel to Red Lake Falls Sunday but the condition of the roads didn't permit.

TABOR.

Next Saturday will be held the annual meeting of the Tabor Literary Society at Farmers Merchandise store.

Mr. Moravec will leave the Williams farm east half of Sec. 34 and Chas. Hablch will take possession for next three years. Good luck Charley.

Joseph Kresl and Miss Mary Copek procured the great permit from our Hon. Clerk of Court and Rev. Father Green of East Grand Forks says "as husband and wife Amen."

Our blacksmith is doing a great rushing business. It required him to send for help and it came last Wednesday. It was a brand new boy. Mother and son are doing well. Anton "Ho."

KITTSON.

Clem St. George finished cutting flax Saturday.

Supt. Sheffield and wife were calling in Kittson one day last week.

Miss Louise Smith was calling on Miss Gertrude Hooper Monday.

Albert Helmich and wife returned Wednesday from Maple Lake, where they had been visiting Mr. Helmich's parents.

Albert Helmich has raised and carried one hundred and ten quarts of ripe tomatoes on his farm this summer. How is that for Minnesota?

Mrs. Winning from Arlington, Oregon, is expected here in a few days to visit her brother, A. J. Price. Mr. Price has not seen his sister for some fifteen years.

THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Joe Smith of Crookston was in town Tuesday.

The rush still continues in the steamboat traffic on Red Lake river.

Local sports are getting ready for the coming season for deer and moose.

J. M. Palmer of the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL was a visitor in our city last week.

Our saw mill is again running twenty-four hours daily instead of twenty-two hours.

Emmigrants are coming our way rapidly and the country to the northeast is rapidly being taken up.

Robert Kittleson, who died at the Crookston Hospital, was buried at Greenwood cemetery last Wednesday.

There is some talk of an opposition ticket for mayor and aldermen. So the town may yet have a warm election.

Prosperity reigns in our city. Business is good, farmers are marketing their crops and it is almost impossible to find a man who wants a day's work.

The new houses of U. G. Richards, L. P. Stranahan and E. M. Rogers are nearly completed and are a great improvement to the residence portion of our rapidly growing city.

At the recent city convention the following officers were nominated: Mayor, Carl Kretzschmar; treasurer, J. W. Wallin; aldermen, John Aos, M. Bargen L. P. Stranahan, S. T. Johnson and W. T. Mullarky; justices of the peace, C. E. Traverse, N. W. Tarrant and S. T. Johnson.

Choice Farm for Sale,

I offer for sale my farm consisting of 160 acres, located two and a half miles northeast of Fisher. Good warm buildings, artesian well, and well improved. Title perfect. For particulars inquire of

G. E. MERRILL,
24-28 Fisher, Minn.

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

A Success...

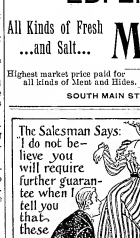
The past week was under our new Cash Basis System and we must say we are highly pleased with the success of the change. We find our sales as large as ever. New customers are daily making our acquaintance and the familiar faces of our old friends continue to greet us. The reason for this is that with the change in our style of doing business came a change in prices that gives us an immense drawing power. If you are among those who have not called in to test this mode of doing business, take the earliest opportunity of doing so.

Slocum's CASH GROCERY
CHASE BLOCK, BROADWAY.

ED. ERICKSON,
DEALER IN
All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...

Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides. Stall fed Beef.....a Specialty

SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.



In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota. In Bankruptcy. In the matter of John Turcotte, bankrupt.

To the creditors of John Turcotte, of the City of Red Lake Falls in the County of Red Lake, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 16th day of October, A. D. 1899, the said John Turcotte was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned in city of Crookston, in the county of Polk in said district on the 23rd day of October, A. D. 1899, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Oct. 19th, 1899.

OLEJ. VALLE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

[37-39]

TIME CARD
—OF—
TRAINS,
Crookston

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep't
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:25 pm	8:35 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	6:30 a m	6:20 a m

C. A. SHARKEY, Agt. Crookston, Minn. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A. St. Paul, Minn

THE GREAT NORTHERN

[ARRIVE] •Daily •Except Sunday. [LEAVE]

6.55 am • Grand Forks, North and West 7.00 am
2.00 pm Duluth, St. Paul and points east 6.05 pm
6.30 pm[St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls..... 8.20 am
4.35 pm[*Fosston, Bemidji, Duluth and Superior..... 9.00 am
6.45 pm[St. Vincent to Fargo..... 5.15 pm
8.05 am[Fargo to St. Vincent..... 9.30 am

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

FOR SALE.

Imported Yorkshire Swine and Shropshire Sheep at reasonable prices.

For full particulars address

A. W. EDSON,
Austin, Minn.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Polk County Journal.

Historical Society

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1899 No. 30

THE SCORE WAS 6 TO 0

Crookston High School Boys Cover Themselves With Glory Playing Against Grand Forks.

CLEAN GENTLEMANLY GAME

Crookston Played Quick Snappy Ball and Made Big End Gains—Grand Forks Fumbles.

Crookston High School, Rah! Rah! Rah! and the score was 6 to 0. This tells the story of the football game last Saturday afternoon at the Fair grounds between the Crookston High School team and the Second team from the North Dakota University at Grand Forks, and a more gentlemanly, though hotly contested game was never played on the gridiron. The play was fast and furious particularly so when Crookston had the ball but it was clean football and a game such as tends to make the pigskin kicking sport more popular. The Grand Forks boys were fine fellows and played good ball but Crookston played better.

The day was almost ideal. The sun came out from behind the clouds early in the morning making everything bright and everybody cheerful. Grounds had been staked out at the Fair grounds and thither some foot ball enthusiasts wended their way shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon, but to say that there was a crowd there would be far from the truth. The High School boys have been practicing for weeks and deserved that the people should turn out and encourage them by their presence if not by their cheering. Crookston has a team to be proud of and it is hoped that in the next game the boys will receive the patronage that they ought to receive. Many outdoor sports where strength and skill are needed, are most healthful and invigorating for the boys and interest should be taken in these sports.

Grand Forks chose the south goal with the wind with them and at 2:45 the referee's whistle sounded. Bradish kicked the ball for Crookston and the game was on. In every play throughout the game on the side of Crookston the ball was given to either Simmons, left half, Westerberg, right half or Miller full back and almost every time they were equal to the situation and made gains. They pounded the centre for three, four and five yards time and again and on their end runs they almost invariably advanced the ball, once for 40 yards. But while the men behind the line played well it must not be forgotten that they were enabled to do this by the fact that the line men made holes in the line for them and prevented their opponents from breaking through and breaking up the play, and when Grand Forks had the ball these same men on the line stood like a stone wall most of the time. The men who carry the ball appear to be doing the work but without equally brilliant work on the part of the men in the line the progress of the bucks would be stopped. Left tackle once and left guard once broke through and blocked kicks and in front of right guard and right tackle there was a hole whenever it was needed. The ends prevented Grand Forks from making progress in end runs, usually tackling for losses, in fact "Benny" played a star game and "D" at quarter never made a fumble.

Bradish kicked off for Crookston for 35 yards and Grand Forks was downed with only 5 yards advance of ball. Crookston line held well and forced Grand Forks to kick, the kick was blocked but an off-side play gave Grand Forks 5 yards. Grand Forks not making the necessary 5 yards gave on next four downs Crookston got the ball. Miller went through tackle for a good gain and Crookston got 5 yards on off-side play. They continued to pound the line for gains till they got to Grand Forks' ten yard line when they lost the ball on downs. Grand Forks tried a run around Crookston's left end but "Steene" got through and tackled his man and they lost ground. In going through the line they were more successful but in short time Crookston got ball on downs. The playing so far was within Grand Forks thirty yard line. Crookston made gains through centre and it looked like a touch-down but again on 10 yard line they lost the ball on downs. Grand Forks soon fumbled ball and Arnold fell on the pigskin and Prof. Newbury's protages started in a procession for the Grand Forks goal. Westerberg went around opponents' leftend for 7 yards, the line was pounded and Miller skirted the end, but unfortunately some one dropped the ball on Grand Forks' one yard line and the touch-down that was imminent and was earned was not scored by Crookston. Grand Forks here began a terrific banging of the line and had already covered close to half the field when time was called.

In second half Crookston had advantage of wind and Grand Forks kicked off, but the ball went sideways and Davies fell on it close to the centre line. Westerberg made 20 yards gain, Simmons 10 around end, Miller made 5 through centre and then Miller skirted opponents' right end, dodged several men and had about 40 yards to his credit before he was finally downed. Ground, however, was now lost on a bad fumble and in consequence Grand Forks got ball on their own 15 yard line. Our boys, however, stood firm and got the ball on downs and then Simmons, Miller and Westerberg were sent through the line till finally Westerberg was shoved over for touch-down. Bradish kicked a pretty goal from the side and the score stood 6 to 0 in favor of Crookston. Grand Forks kicks off, Westerberg advances 10 yards before he is downed, Miller soon after made a long kick, Grand Forks gained through line but lost on their right half's end run. Time was called with ball in possession of Grand Forks near centre in Crookston's territory. Final score, Crookston 6, Grand Forks 0. Halves 20 and 15 minutes. Referee Chas. Mahony, Umpire G. A. E. Finlayson, Linesmen A. Thompson and Art Fuller, Time Keepers Ed. Gilbertson and J. Waldrell. Following was the line up:

Crookston		Grand Forks
Bjorge	Centre	Ward
Montague	right guard	Stead
Arnold	left guard	McLenn
Davies	right tackle	Wilson
Bradish	left tackle	Thompson
Gans	right end	Crewe
Steenson	left end	Smith
Rosenthal	quarter back	Morrow
Westerberg	right half	Duty
Simmons	left back	Staub
Miller	full back	Jennings

Substitutes: Wilkinson, Barrett, Swain, Dahl for Crookston, Murphy, Hawkins and Olson for Grand Forks.

OFF FOR THE DEER

Crookston Sportsmen bie Them to the Woods in Search of Moose.

The deer season opened yesterday and for fifteen days the sportsmen will hunt the moose and the deer in northern Minnesota. The number of deer that any one hunter may shoot, according to law, is limited to five. The license of $25.00 which all outsiders have to pay in order to shoot in Minnesota is expected will keep a great many from chasing the deer, and thus the number of these animals left will be killed will be less than usual.

Crookston has furnished her share of the sportsmen who during the next two weeks will roam the woods out east of here in search of the big game. Among those who are observing the ground, if they have not before now laid low several of the antlered kind, are Steve Withey, A. R. Fuller, T. G. Thompson, J. B. Rooms, I. U. Jennings, Louis Fontaine, J. Stephens, Chas. Vine, Alex Burnham and his sons Wesley and Otto, Chris Hoch and Al. Vanstrum. Should not all go together but they may nevertheless meet somewhere in the heart of the big forests. If this aggregation of crack shots can't get something all others would better give up the chase.

Maccabee Entertainment.

There was a joint meeting of the ladies and the Knights of the Maccabees at their lodge rooms last Monday evening. During the early part of the evening there was given a program consisting of a violin solo by C. Berg, a piano solo by Miss Bertha McIntyre, and recitations by Miss Field and John Crawford. Refreshments were served and then those so inclined whiled away the hours in the delights of the dance. The Maccabees always make a success of any thing they go at, and this evening's entertainment was no exception.

Reception to Football Team.

In honor of their brilliant victory of Saturday afternoon the high school football team were entertained Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. M. C. Malone by the young ladies of the senior class and the high school faculty. Regul refreshments were served, speeches were made by Superintendent Hitchcock, Principal Newberry, Mr. Gans, D. Rosenthal and others and a very pleasant social time was spent in playing games, etc.

STEAMBOAT FACILITIES

For Carrying Grain on Red River Ought to be Increased.

The following is clipped from the Eckvold correspondence in the Warren Sheaf:

Several of the farmers in this locality are shipping their grain by steamboat to Grand Forks this fall. This saves the long distance hauling to market, and a little better price for their grain. It would be of great benefit to the farmers who live along the river, especially on the Minnesota side, if better facilities for the transportation of grain on the river could be secured. We are informed that a grain commission firm at Grand Forks, N. D., contemplates the construction of a steamer during the coming winter, which will be used for carrying wheat and other farm products on the Red, north of the above named city. If our fate is such that we are always to live in a well populated and prosperous country without any railroad facilities, some means should be provided to carry on a more extensive river traffic. And we may during the coming generation see the Red river the chief commercial route of northwestern Minnesota.

MINNESOTA DAIRY SCHOOL.

There Is Where One May Learn to Make First Class Butter.

The next session of the Minnesota Dairy School will open at St. Anthony Park, January 2, 1900. Arrangements are being made to make this one of the best sessions since its organization. Notwithstanding that some six hundred students have attended this school there still seems to be a deficiency of good butter makers. The creamery business is growing so rapidly in the West that there is a constant call for good men to operate creameries. Creamery buttermaking is an art that under present conditions requires intelligence and careful training. The marked advance that the creamery business has made in Minnesota, and the enviable reputation that our buttermakers possess shows that the establishment of the Dairy School was a wise provision, and that it has accomplished great good. Write to Prof. T. L. Haecker, St. Anthony Park, Minn., for catalogue.

VICTORY FOR GRINDELAND.

Law Requiring Bonds from Commission Men is Constitutional.

The Grindeland law passed at the last session of the legislature, requiring commission men and grain dealers to take out a license and become subject to regulation of the State Railroad and Warehouse commission, was declared constitutional by the supreme court in two test cases decided Oct. 26.

When the law become operative the produce commission and grain men of the Twin Cities decided by mutual consent to make a test of the constitutionality of the new statute in the supreme court after a decision had been rendered in the district court sustaining the constitutionality of the act. The Red Path case of St. Paul, involving the law in its application to commission men, and McAleher case representing the grain men, were both decided by the court.

The supreme court sustains the constitutionality of the act upon every point raised, and holds that none of its provisions are at variance with the constitution of the United States.

Some of the commission men claim that the effect of the decision will be to drive all but the largest commission firms out of business.

Long Litigation Ends.

The final decree in the estate of Kenny J. Bradley, a wealthy property owner of Polk county who died several years ago, was issued last Saturday by Judge Hagen and the estate is closed. Bradley was worth about $20,000.00 but in his will nothing was left to his two daughters, Mrs. John and Mrs. Ole Larson. They fought the legality of the will through the probate, district and supreme court and finally succeeded in having it set aside. In the final settlement each receive about a quarter of the property. John K. Johnson and Martin Erickson were the administrators.

Superior Dining Service.

Rev. Jesse R. Zeigler, of Monango, N. D., recently went over the Burlington on a trip to Pennsylvania. He writes: "I found the service and accommodations of your route superior to any I have known in the West. This is especially true of the dining service."

COSTLY COLLECTION.

E. S. Brown of Warren the Possessor of a fine National Display.

MOST COMPLETE IN THE STATE.

Tley be Purchased by the State for the State University Museum.

No one visiting the enterprising town of Warren ought to fail to see the collection of animals, birds and fishes which belongs to E. L. Brown. It is without question the most complete group of its kind in the state and is indeed invaluable. The specimens here brought together are, with one exception, from the woods, rivers and lakes of Minnesota and it is not unlikely that the State University at Minneapolis may purchase them.

Mr. Brown is a naturalist, hunter, trapper and taxidermist, and has himself captured almost all the specimens he has and mounted them. From boyhood he has been fond of life in the woods, and of the various forms of life found there and in the lakes and rivers, and for that reason has taken an intense pleasure in collecting and mounting the specimens he has. But not only has he almost everything conceivable in the way of animal life but he has arranged them in families and in order from the lowest to the highest form of life. This scientific classification renders it possible for one to make an interesting and profitable study of the fauna of the state and shows that Mr. Brown is an expert in his line.

Of the fish he has specimens of the garfish and sturgeon. He has a black bear that looks very lifelike the way he has the animal mounted. He has five varieties of deer, the moose, the elk, the caribou, the tail deer and the common deer, three kinds of wolves and the young at various ages, three foxes and their young, a beaver, a martin, 12 specimens of the rodentives, such as the woodchuck, the porcupine, the squirrel, the gopher, rat, mouse, etc., a wild cat, a coon. He has all kinds of birds, of the waders, the crane, the bittern, the heron, the snipe, of the swimming birds, the duck, the goose the pelican, etc., and eleven varieties of owls. Of the animals he has 30 specimens, all that can be found in the state save a very few. There is in the collection also badgers and its young. Of the animals about the wildest and hardest to get was the martin.

These specimens are arranged in such a way as to make them appear as natural, in fact one almost expects to hear the birds sing from the trees, the rats and mice scamper away and the fishes to splash.

Mention has been made of only a very few of the animals and birds, enough, however, to convince any one that he misses considerable when at Warren if he does not call on Mr. Brown.

MCINTOSH 42 FOSSTON 0

Was the Result of an Interesting Football Game at McIntosh.

Even the biggest optimist of the home sports had not looked for such a walk away for the McIntosh team with Fosston. It was McIntosh's game from start to finish.

First half opened with a kick-off from Fosston, McIntosh picking it up and forcing it past center line. Fosston had barely time to line up before the ball was put in play again, and five minutes after the first line-up McIntosh had made a touch-down. Four more touch-downs were made in the first half, as Fosston wavered and broke at every rush.

Second half was by mutual consent, lessened to ten minutes time. McIntosh kicked off ball and downed it on Fosston's territory. Fosston kept the ball a short time but lost it on a fumble, after which, McIntosh, by a series of wedges, made three touch-downs and too good kicks. As the teams were lining up again, time was called, leaving the miserable score of 42 to 0.

A return game will be played at Fosston next Sunday.

Professor Williams Here.

Prof. H. S. Williams, of Milwaukee, has called at our office and exhibited his Medicated Air Treatment for catarrh. Williams treats all pulmonary troubles with Medicated Air consisting of balsams and puts no solid material on the stomach. He gives formulas with his treatment so any one can procure his medicine at any drug store when he takes his departure. Mr. Williams comes highly recommended.

A SWELL SOCIETY AFFAIR

Was the Reception and Grand Ball Given by the Gopher Club.

The rooms were richly and tastily decorated, the music captivating, the refreshments delicious, the ladies were attired in their most elegant evening gowns, and the men looked their handsomest.

The above partly tells the story of the reception and grand ball given by the Gopher Club at their elegantly furnished rooms in the Reckitt block last Friday evening. Crookston was then in all her beauty and her chivalry. At nine o'clock President Shate introduced the Hon Halvor Steenerson who made a very happy speech, referring most appropriately and humorously to some of the incidents connected with the history of the young organization. Mrs. Riggs played a piano solo and Miss Walsh, of Grand Forks, sang, both of which selections were roundly applauded. Soon after the dancing began and continued till midnight.

It was indeed a most brilliant affair and is a foretaste of the many pleasant evenings that will be spent, during the coming winter, at the headquarters of the Gopher Club. The young men proved themselves entertainers of the true blue.

Missionary Concert.

In the Congregational church last Sunday evening, instead of the usual service with sermon, a home missionary concert was held. The work had been planned and given out by the pastor and his assistants a week before hand. The music was appropriate and largely patriotic.

All the organizations connected with the church such as the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies, together with the Endeavor Society and Sunday School took individual and special parts. Some of the responsive readings in printed form, were distributed through the audience so that every individual could take part in the exercise.

The children did themselves credit by the thorough manner with which they prepared their parts, and the distinct utterance of every word. The superintendent of the Sunday school, Mrs. Dr. Just, had general charge of the service.

Among the adults who gave short addresses were Miss Fitzgerald, and Messrs. Miller, Lloyd and Vannet.

The Senior Endeavor Society is now preparing for a "Miniature National Council" to be held sometime this month. It is expected that greetings will be given from all the states together with Alaska the Philippine and Hawaiian Islands and Cuba.

New Books for Schools.

The board of education at the meeting last Thursday night appropriated about $600.00 to be used in buying supplementary reading for the grades. The books selected after a careful examination of many sample copies by Superintendent Hitchcock and the trustees are standard works of literature and complete selections will be read by the pupils and not scraps. This is certainly a move in the right direction. Too much attention can hardly be paid to training the boys and girls to read the best literature and this cannot be done without the books.

Reception to Methodist Pastor.

M. E. Harbin's handsome new residence in Jerome's addition was the Mecca last Friday night, for a large number of Crookstonites, who were bent on welcoming to the city Rev. and Mrs. Kuhan, the new pastor of the M. E. church and his wife. Addresses of welcome were made by Rev. C. G. Poole and Prof. H. M. Green to which Mr. Kuhan responded. Vocal and instrumental music was furnished and tea and cake were served. A most pleasant and social time was spent by all.

Missionary Exercises.

The services at the Congregational church last Sunday evening were in the hands of the members of the Sunday school and consisted of a series of responsive readings, recitations by individuals and classes, addresses by Miss Fitzgerald, Mr. Vannet and Mr. Miller and music by the choir and the school.

The entire program pertained to the work being done by the Congregational Home Missionary society and the outlook for the future.

Burlington Reclining Chairs

Running on two trains a day to and from Chicago, are the largest, roomiest, and in every way best, of any such cars running from St. Paul and Minneapolis. When you buy a ticket over the Burlington you get the best.

ENGINEER BRADY KILLED

Runs Into a Freight Near Winnipeg Junction

Michael H. Brady, of East Grand Forks, one of the old reliable engineers running on the Northern Pacific, was killed in a wreck near Winnipeg Junction last Friday. Through some one's mistake he was switched onto a side track where a long line of freight cars was standing, and before he had a chance to jump his engine crashed into the rear of the freight cars completely demolishing two of them. Part of the wrecked cars struck the engineer in the chest crushing the life out of him. The fireman escaped by jumping.

So great was the force of the collision that not only were two cars loaded with wheat cut in twain from end to end and the engine badly smashed, but the cars immediately ahead of the caboose on Brady's train jumped clean off their trucks and landed out in the ditch, while the trucks and wheels remained on the rails.

Engineer Brady was a native of Ireland, about 40 years of age. He went to East Grand Forks from Wisconsin fifteen years ago and was considered one of the most reliable men in the service of the Northern Pacific railroad. He leaves a wife and three children—in comfortable circumstances, fortunately—and a brother who is an engineer on the main line of the Northern Pacific. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of the Workmen, and of the Catholic Order of Foresters. The funeral was held on Sunday at East Grand Forks.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

Misses Chandler, Low and Johnson Entertain Their Friends.

Mr. Earbin's new house in Jerome's addition is admirably adapted for social gatherings and the company of young people that were the guests there last Monday evening of Misses Chandler, Low and Johnson enjoyed a very pleasant evening indeed. The guests were received by ghosts and for a time conversation was carried on in whispers and the only light in the parlors came from Jack'o lanterns. A game of parlor football proved exciting and interesting. Vocal and instrumental music by Miss A. Walsh and Miss McKercher formed part of the evening's entertainment. Soul shivering ghost stories were told that made each individual hair of the listeners "to stand on end." Refreshments were served and the guests departed reluctantly feeling that through the kindness of their hostesses they had spent several hours in a most enjoyable manner.

Dame Rumor Says

That Brief Work is usually long work.

That Thanksgiving turkeys are roosting high this year.

That wheat is not coming to market as fast as in former years.

That you can eat venison now without fear of the game warden.

That "we" in the Crookston Times does not always refer to W. Z.

That storm windows and storm doors are becoming fashionable again.

That the new electric light poles to replace old ones have the look of stability.

That the Rem-Sho typewriter is the most complete machine ever put onto the market.

That the football season is in full swing and other sports must stand aside for the season.

That macadam paving has turned out to be so hard a matter that it has split the council.

That farmers have their plowing much farther advanced than they had last year at this time.

That the newspaper boys are "mentioned" a good man when they suggest Hon. H. Steenerson for governor.

That Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. is a poor unfortunate poverty-stricken man because his father, in the latter's will left him only $1,500,000.

That the Tawney gentleman from the First Congressional district may be chairman of a new committee on Territories in the National House of Representatives.

That the prophecy that the end of the world might be expected this month, does not seem to be generally accepted. But few seem to be preparing for the event.

That Dewey will be more likely than ever to get after the widow, or vice versa, now that the Admiral is settled in his new home in Washington, which was presented to him by the people.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

AN EXCLUSIVE STORY.

A Strange Tale Of Wills-Mayhew, a Little Necklace and a Murder.

By LLEWELLYN PERCE CHURCHILL.

Copyright, 1899, by Llewelln P. Churchill.

The Cerberus of the office took out the slip of paper and looked on top of the copy which the [illegible] was reading. These slips are the only means by which to protect the secrets of the paper against the best of news which would fritter away the editor's time.

The office boy waited while Mr. Standish gave the scantiest glance at the memorandum, just enough to gather that Mr. Wills-Mayhew was without and that his errand was to find "journalistic employment." When he had hastily considered on the slip of paper the terse formula "no possible opening" with which the messenger was to dismiss the several dozenth applicant that day, Mr. Standish did not find his usual facility in putting the common enough incident out of mind.

An Englishman, of course, he reasoned from the name with a stile in the middle of it and shuddered at the bare idea of Britsh journalism in a New York new-paper office. for Standish had been on Fleet street and knew the solemn reliance on the books and logs of steamships, which makes the British journalist so very inaccurate and so very dull. But the boy was back again with the same slip, and across one end editor once more, and he ceased to remember the two in their far corner.

I WILL COME IN TOMORROW AND CLEAR UP THE MYSTERY.

Possibly an hour had gone by when Standish passed on some errand of his work in the neighborhood of the big Englishman and the little Hindoo lad. Recalling the nature of their ask, he remarked that the man had a hefty pile of completed sheets before him and that his hand was still traveling rapidly over the paper without any interruption of his smoking. But Standish was attracted by the little Hindoo. He sat in the attitude which Indian art has prehistorized among the western nations by the lunges of the countless gods of the peninsula. The lad's eyes were riveted on a ball of glass or crystal which he held in the palms of his two hands, the fingers being interlaced in his lap. In a soft monotone he was speaking rapidly to his companion in a fluid speech which the editor could not identify, but which he thought was probably some one of the many Hindoo tongues. As he passed by them Standish found his glance caught by the glitter of the toy which the boy held, and in the moment of passing he seemed to see a picture in the glitter, a picture as of something happening somewhere. It was just a flash, and he was far too much occupied with other things to think of returning for another look.

Not long after this Wills-Mayhew brought a thick loop of manuscript to the desk and laid it before Standish, who saw that, although it was written in a generous hand, there was matter enough for at least two columns.

"There is the story of the murder," said the Englishman. "You will find it all there except the name and the present place at which the murderer may be found. You can pay me for those at your best rates for good material, and I will come in tomorrow and clear up the mystery which still remains in the story. I cannot do it today, for Ahdul is tired out, and I must take him to rest."

A rush of real copy came along just then, and the hurry the Englishman and the little Hindoo went off together. It was not until comparatively later in the day that Standish found time to look at the copy thus left with him for trial. It did not begin in a very promising way. There was a preface and also an introduction which blunketed whatever story might be to follow. There was also some verbose reasoning, and the apt citation from classical sources showed that the writer was both a man of wide reading and just as widely unfit to be allowed to write a story for an American newspaper. Disgusted at the preface, Standish hastily cut into the middle to see if there were really any story after all the overloaded introduction. Here all was different, as different as the work of another hand, of another mind. There was indeed a story, and it was told in terse, nervous sentences, with the accuracy of detail which only eyewitnessing could give to an account and then only if written on the very spot of the action in progress. Standish worked backward to where the story itself began, laid aside the heavy introduction and read with growing amazement the consistent account of a murder wrought on a young girl. Every needed detail was presented, the girl's name and address were given, and her domestic and social relations were fully set forth. The city editor recognized that it would be necessary to be securely convinced of every point, for the social position of the girl and of her friends was of the highest. The graphic narrative continued with a slight account of the trifles over which the girl was occupied in her own sitting room at the entrance of one who was on terms of sufficient intimacy to be admitted to such freedom. The newcomer was treated in the account to be a woman—at least the feminine pronoun was used throughout. The identity of this second person, even by physical features, was obscure in the story, but there was manifest a psychic familiarity with her motives and passions.

Passing over the commonplaces of such a meeting between intimate women, yet always showing as by a subordinate consciousness the black haired and wild rage which gushed under the smooth words of the visitor, the King Bali journalist hurried on his dialogue to the point where the murder was done, done with the consent of the victim, gained by the trick of some specious pretext. The weapon was but a common hypodermic syringe, common enough now among the toilet appliances of women on whom social duties press heavily. The young girl shrank a little at sight of the weapon, but her companion assured her that it was no more painful than the prick of a needle needle and that a single application would instantly cure the headache from which she was suffering. The girl at once consented. A very graphic touch in the narrative was the simple way in which she was represented as passing her hand across her forehead while her companion took the glittering implement of glass and silver from its blue bed of velvet in the leather pocket case, carefully withdrew the letetic from the needle point and screwed the latter into place, having first drawn the piston out to its fullest reach. In the syringe was not a drop of any fluid, nothing but the air of the room. While she was explaining that a charge of pure oxygen would be better, yet that ordinary atmospheric air would produce a satisfactory result, the young girl childishly bade her begin, for her courage was at the sticking point. A deft hand pressed the hollow needle beneath the skin of the girl's left wrist and gently slid it onward into puncture of the most prominently displayed blood vessel, a delicate blue vein in the clear white flesh. A very slight pressure in the ring of the piston forced a single imbible of air—oxygen would have been no better for the purpose—into the vein. The girl was dead, dead in that instant.

There the English journalist's story ended. Standish still held the last sheet of copy in his hand and looked with astonishment at the double cross which showed the finish. It was as though some one who had seen and heard all these incidents had been speaking and had suddenly broken off.

This was a story which needed cautious handling, for Standish at once accepted it as true. With a family of such position as that of the murdered girl, herself already a figure in society, no paper could afford any blunder. A reporter was sent to investigate, and Standish cautiously locked the manuscript in a drawer of his desk. The reporter's story was the account of such a career as may come to a young woman in her first year in society, a record of social successes. She had died suddenly that afternoon in her room. She had received a visit from her most intimate friend, who said that she had complained of a slight headache, but that it had passed away while they were together. An hour later her maid had found her in her easy chair, limp and dead. The family doctor certified to heart failure, for the publicity of an inquest ceases at a certain social level.

Standish seemed puzzled and read the latter part of this copy a second time. Then he unlocked a drawer in his desk, took out a mass of manuscript, turned up the last few pages and read them with care. Finally he called up a medical friend on the telephone, and this was his share of the conversation after the preliminaries incident to that mechanical convenience:

"Tell me, doctor, what would be the result of the injection of a bubble of air into one of the veins of the wrist?"

"Instantaneous, you say, and painless? Then what would an autopsy disclose as to the cause of death?"

"Well, then, if the heart should be found just as it is in certain well known pathological conditions there might be a possibility of foul play. But not the mark of the syringe be found?"

"Not one chance in a million, you say? Then that may be left out of account. Thank you kindly. Goodby. Ring off."

The regular reporter's story was printed the next morning. Possibly that discouraged Mr. Wills-Mayhew, for he never came again.

Standish now speaks with great respect of the marvels of the Hindoos. He has not yet given up his search for a British journalist accompanied by a young Hindoo named Abdul. Judging from sample, a place could be found for the pair.

Football in Siam.

Lovers of outdoor sports would find one thing to interest them in Siam, and is the native game of football. Harper's Weekly says that it is very interesting to a looker on. It is played with a ball about four inches in diameter, hollow and strong.

The number of contestants varies, but play is sharpest when there are enough to form a circle about ten feet in diameter. Beyond that the larger the circle the slower the play.

The game consists in keeping the ball tossing in the air without breaking the circle. If a man misses his opportunity, he drops out, and when but four or six remain the work is sharp and very pretty.

The ball is struck most frequently with the knee, but also with the foot, from before, behind and at the side of the player. A player has been known to let a ball drop directly behind his back and then, without turning, return it clear over his head and straight in to the middle of the circle, all with one well aimed backward kick of his heel.

HOBART VERY ILL.

Feared the Vice President Will Not Recover From the Last Attack.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Vice President Hobart, who has been ill for weeks at his home in Patterson, N. J., suffered a relapse during the afternoon. He had a succession of choking spells, resulting from an imperfect action of the heart, an old affection, complicated with inflammation of the stomach. Mr. Hobart has been ill since the close of the last congress. Dr. Newton says that between 11 p. m. and 2 a. m. Mr. Hobart's condition was more critical than it has been at any time during the eight months he has been ill.

After the passage of the crisis he rested quietly until daylight and during the day he was in good spirits. It is said that during the day he was and that he was able to talk to Mrs. Hobart and their son, Garrett, Jr.

Able to Sit Up in Bed

Dr. Newton refused to make any statement as to the cause of Mr. Hobart's illness. He said, however, that he report that Mr. Hobart's mind was in no way affected by the illness was not true. This statement was also made by members of the family and Hobart Tuttle, the vice president's secretary.

Mr. Anson, Mr. Hobart's lifelong friend and law partner, said he did not think Mr. Hobart would die during the night, but he feared the vice president had not long to live. He refused to enter into details relative to the malady from which the patient suffered, but his idea was that it was necessarily fatal, though not immediately so.

HIS CONDITION IMPROVED.

Vice President Hobart Had a Good Night's Rest.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 1.—Vice President Hobart is resting quietly. He slept well during the night and Dr. Newton reports his condition improved. A relapse or death is not anticipated within the next 12 hours.

GENERAL HENRY DEAD.

Former Military Governor of Porto Rico Succumbs to Pneumonia.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Brigadier General Guy V. Henry, U. S. A., late military governor of Porto Rico, died a few minutes before 4 o'clock at his home, 130 Madison avenue, of pneumonia, after 10 days. He had been unconscious for several hours and his end was peaceful. At his bedside were all the members of his family, except his son, Captain Guy V. Henry, Jr., who is in the Philippines.

Grant Allen Dead.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Grant Allen, the author, who has been in ill health for some time past, is dead. He was born at Kingston, Ont., in 1848.

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

DULUTH, Nov. 1.

WHEAT—Cash No. 1 hard, 68¾c; No. 1 Northern, 67¾c; No. 2 Northern, 64¾c. No. 1 [illegible] to Arrive—No. 1 hard 68; No. 1 Northern, 67¾c; No. 2 Northern, 67¾; May, 71¾c.

FLAX—To arrive, $1.23½; October, $1.24; December, $1.21¾.

Minneapolis Wheat.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 1.

WHEAT—In Store—No. 1 Northern, Otto or, 67; December, 66¾@66¾c; May, 71@1. On Track—No. 1 hard, 69c; No. 1 Northern, 67c; No. 2 Northern, 0-6.

Sioux City Live Stock.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 1.

HOGS — Market 5@10c lower. Range of prices, $3.20@3.40 for packers; $3.40@3.60 for choice to fancy.

CATTLE—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $3.30@3.60 for beeves; $2.00@2.85 for cows, bulls and mixed; $2.30@3.25 for stockers and feeders; $3.00@3.75 for veal calves and yearlings.

Receipts—Cattle, 2,000; hogs, 3200.

St. Paul Union Stock Yards.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Nov. 1.

HOGS—Market 5@10c lower. Range of prices, $3.25@3.50.

CATTLE—Market for cattle steady and unchanged.

Sales ranged at $2.30@3.75 for cows; $2.00@3.00 for heifers; $2.80@4.80 for stockers; $2.25@3.65 for bulls; $3.80@3.50 for steers; $4.00 for calves.

SHEEP—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $4.75@5.00 for lambs and $3.00@3.65 for sheep.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Nov. 1.

HOGS—Market slow, lower.

Sales ranged at $3.30@3.50 for mixed and butchers; $3.40@3.50 good heavy; $3.50@3.60 for rough heavy; $3.00@3.35 for lights.

CATTLE—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $4.50@5.00 for beeves; $1.75@3.10 for cows and heifers; $2.80@4.00 for Texas steers; $3.00@4.00 for stockers and feeders.

SHEEP—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $2.00@4.75 for sheep; $4.00@5.00 for lambs

Receipts: Hogs, 38,000; cattle, 6,000; sheep, 15,000

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.

WHEAT—December, 71@71½c; May, 75¾c.

CORN—October, 31½c; November 31¼; December, 31½c; January, 31c; May, 35½c.

OATS—October, 23½c; November, 23½c; December, 22¾c; May, 25½c.

PORK—October, 9.05; December, $9.15; January, $9.70@9.72½; May, $9.80.

FLAX—Cash, Northwestern, $1.28; Southwestern, $1.27½c; October $1.26; December $1.25c; May, 1.29¼c.

POULTRY—Turkeys, 8c; chickens, 6½c; ducks, 7@8c; geese, 6@7c.

BUTTER—Creameries, 14@23c; dairy, 15@20c.

EGGS—Fresh, 17c.

Minneapolis Cash Market.

Corrected Thursday morning, Nov. 2.

WHEAT—No. 1 Hard 67 No. 1 Northern 66 No. 2 Northern 64.

CORN—20 to 22c.

BARLEY—26 to 32c.

FLAX—$1.20.

POTATOES—20 to 25c.

EGGS—17c.

BUTTER—18 to 20c.

CHEESE—10c.

HAY—Baled $5.00, loose $4.00.

HOGS—6c.

CATTLE—2½ to 3¾ live weight, 5½ to 6½c dressed beef.

SHEEP—5c.

CHICKENS—10c.

TURKEYS—8c

GEESE—6 to 6c.

VEAL—5½c.

FLOUR—2.50 per cwt.

BRAN—60 per ton.

SHORTS—65 per ton.

CARY SAFE CO.

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

Manufacturers of

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON, ... PRE.
S. S. GERVAIS, ... VICE PRESIDENT.
H. STRENERSON, ... VICE-PRESIDENT.
L. ELLINGTON, ... CASHIER
A. P. HANSON, ASS'T. CASHIER.

The Weekly Inter Ocean

Always American—Always Republican.

Largest Circulation of all Political Papers in the West

THE WEEKLY INTER OCEAN SUPPLIES ALL NEWS AND BEST CURRENT LITERATURE

The Inter Ocean's Telegraphic Service is Exclusive. Every Column is Bright, Clean and Packed with News.

$1

The Literature of its Columns is equal to that of the best magazines. It is interesting to the children as well as the parents.

The Inter Ocean is a Western Newspaper,

And while it brings to the family The News of the World, and gives its readers the best and ablest discussions of all questions of the day, it is in full sympathy with the ideas and aspirations of Western people and discusses literature and politics from the Western standpoint.

$1.00—PRICE, ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR—$1.00

Price of Daily by mail . . . $4.00 per year
Price of Sunday by mail . . . 2.00 per year
Daily and Sunday by mail . . . 6.00 per year

The Sunday and Daily Editions of the Inter Ocean are the Best in the West

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laying out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have our architect include electric wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give ou the benefit of our experience in laing out wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

AN OBVIOUS TRICK

BOERS AT LADYSMITH CAUGHT THE BRITISH IN A TRAP.

Disaster to the English Troops a Repetition of Majuba Hill on a Larger Scale—Loss of the Two Regiments in Such a Manner Causes Consternation Throughout Great Britain.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Public anxiety over the situation in Natal has been increased by a special dispatch from Ladysmith, published in the late editions of the afternoon papers, to the effect that the Boers reoccupied the old position held by their heavy artillery, which General White had reported as silenced by the guns of the naval brigade from the Powerful, and had opened fire again. The dispatch further says:

"The enemy are again closing in and the situation is one of grave anxiety. Beyond doubt the Boer retirement on Monday was a ruse to draw General White into the hilly country and away from the British camp."

This last sentence is significant and confirms the opinion of military experts here that General White is allowing himself to be Outgeneraled by General Joubert.

From the scanty advices received up to 11 o'clock p. m. it seems tolerably certain that the disaster was a repetition of the battle of Majuba hill though on a larger scale. The two regiments were allowed to march into a trap set for them by the Boers. It is simply a case of the Boer spider and the guileless British fly. In fact that whole engagement of Monday seems to have been brought on by Commandant General Joubert, who skillfully conceived a gigantic trap, out of which, as the official dispatch shows, Sir George White only escaped with difficulty.

General White advanced with the idea of driving the Boers from the hill seven miles out, which General Joubert made an ostentatious show of fortifying on Sunday.

The Boer commander left a force sufficient to draw General White out while the main body of the Boers moved stealthily round the British right and to endeavor to cut off General White from Ladysmith. The British commander succeeded in heading off the attack, but only with great difficulty and during the turning movement his troops suffered from a flanking fire.

To Deliver a Flank Attack

Harsh things are said in military circles of the British tactics, which have made possible the ambush of the Eighteenth Hussars at Glencoe and now the loss of two fine regiments. It is feared that Sir George White is no match for the Boers and it is pointed out that if the British commanders continue to lead their men into obvious traps further disasters must be looked for.

The disaster has caused a feeling akin to consternation and in Gloucestershire and the north of Ireland, where the captured regiments were recruited, the blackest gloom prevails, many families awaiting with heating hearts the names of the killed and wounded.

At the government offices, no official news was made to conceal the feeling of dismay prevailing. One official said:

"It is inexplicable, and I am sorry to say its moral effect is inestimable. We have lost heavily in many ways and have had regiments almost wiped out, but to have regiments captured and by the Boers, it is terrible."

GENERAL WHITE REPORTS.

Assumes Entire Responsibility for the Disaster at Ladysmith.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The following is the text of General White's dispatch to the war office regarding the disaster at Ladysmith:

"I have to report a disaster to the column sent by me to take a position on a hill to guard the left flank of the troops. In these operations today the Royal Irish Fusileers, No. 10 Mountain battery and the Gloucestershire regiment were surrounded in the hills and, after losing heavily, had to capitulate. The casualties have not yet been ascertained.

"A man of the Fusiliers, employed as a hospital orderly, came in under a flag of truce with a letter from the survivors of the column, who asked for assistance to bury the dead. I fear there is no doubt of the truth of the report.

"I formed a plan in the carrying out of which the disaster occurred and I am alone responsible for the plan. There is no blame whatever to the troops, as the position was untenable."

TO REPLACE CAPTIVES.

General Buller Notified That Additional Troops Will Be Sent.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The war office has sent the following dispatch to General Buller:

"Three extra battalions of foot and one mountain battery, with reserves, will leave England during the course of 20 days to make good the casualties."

While minor reverses were not wholly unexpected, nothing like the staggering blow General Joubert delivered to General White's forces Monday was anticipated. The full extent of the disaster is not yet acknowledged, if it is known at the war office. The loss in effective men must be appalling to a general who is practically surrounded. Two of the finest British regiments and a mule battery deducted from the Ladysmith garrison weakens it about a fifth of its total strength and alters the whole situation very materially in favor of the Boers, who have again shown themselves stern fighters and military strategists of no mean order. The disaster cost the British from 1,500 to 2,000 men and six 5-pound screw guns, and as the Boer artillery is already stronger than imagined, the capture of these guns will be a great help to the Boers.

IS A SERIOUS MATTER.

Heavy Loss of Officers Embarrassing to the British.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The large number of British officers killed in the battles which have already taken place in Natal has brought out streahons protests from many quarters against the ancient custom of British officers in refusing to take cover when under fire. From figures at Glencoe, it is apparent that one out of every four men killed was an officer, whereas, the organization exists upon the principle that to every 32 men there is one officer.

It is evident that if the same ratio of mortality is kept up, the British forces will become seriously under-officered. Among the enlisted men at Glencoe the proportion of killed to wounded was 30 to 150, while 10 officers were killed to 22 officers wounded. The difference in the percentage leads to the conclusion that many of the officers were hit more than once and kept on leading their men after the first wound. Emperor William's recent criticism of the British officers' refusal to take cover is now frequently quoted. The feeling in the army itself is that though the regulations do not say the officers must not lie down, it is such an old established principle that it would take a brave man to inaugurate a change, and the adage of the British soldier "follow wherever an officer leads" is held to be still intensely true, for although the officers do love the personnel of the army is as good as ever, it has been the history of Great Britain that they at the same time maintain that "Their Majesty's needs more leading than any man in the world, so the spilling of Great Britain's best blood is likely to continue for the present.

Hear Loss at Elandslaagte.

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 31.—A dispatch to the South African news from Pretoria states that the Boer loss at Elandslaagte was 30 killed and 64 wounded.

Preparing to Attack Kimberley.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 1.—It is reported that Kimberley West that the Boers are constructing forts around Kimberley for the purpose of shelling the town.

MR. GAGE'S ANNUAL.

Favors Enactment of the Gold Standard and Also a New Elastic Currency.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A special to The Herald from Washington says:

Enactment of the gold standard into law and reform of the banking currency laws so as to give the country a more elastic bank note currency, will be the leading recommendations of Secretary Gage's annual report.

When the secretary went before the banking and currency committee of the house of representatives early in the present month and declared for the enactment of the gold standard into law he startled many of his party associates. He stood his ground, however, and has had the satisfaction of seeing the rank and file of his party, with some exceptions, come up to the standard which he has planted.

In the same way the secretary will now take advanced ground in favor of bank reform and system of banking which will allow banks to issue their notes to meet extraordinary demands for currency.

He will recommend the enactment of a law providing for the issue of notes against deposits of bonds, and greenbacks, treasury notes or silver certificates, and allowing the banks to issue additional notes against their assets. The details of the plan will be principally the same as those he recommended in his first annual report in 1897.

THE YEAR'S IMMIGRATION.

Commissioner Powderly Makes His Annual Report.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—In his annual report to the secretary of the treasury, Commissioner Powderly of the bureau of immigration hereau gives the total arrivals for the year ended June 30, 1899, as 311,715, an increase over the next preceding year of 82,416, or 36 per cent. The opinion is expressed that at least 25,000 persons were not listed in this number through a defect in the law, as they were not specifically named. From Canada and Mexico, who are not, under existing regulations, accounted for. The commissioner says he does not believe the figures for last year is represented largely by immigrants from Europe, specifically from Italy, Austria-Hungary and Russia, which show gains respectively of 18,896; 22,684 and 31,154. Of the total arrivals, Europe supplied 297,849, Asia 8,072, Africa and all other countries, 5,343.

STATE FAIR RATES.

Chicago Roads to Inaugurate a Campaign Against Them

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Officers of a number of the important roads running out of Chicago are inaugurating a campaign against the practice of making reduced rates to state fairs, carnivals, festivals and all outside demonstrations that attract to any one point of drawing trade to particular communities at the expense of others. These affairs have grown to such proportions, say the railroad men, that they are injuring freight and passenger business. The theory is that they drain one community at the expense of another, resulting in consequent loss of traffic to the railroads.

New Treaty With Spain.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—An understanding has been reached by which it is expected that negotiations will be opened soon at Madrid for a new treaty between the United States and Spain This will be the last step towards completely laying the friendly relations between the two countries.

Expect Good Results.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—The German delegation to the Philadelphia commercial congress cables that it is quite evident that Germany's participation is accomplishing good results and that the Americans are extremely willing to abolish those nuisances of the commercial intercourse between the two countries which are complained of here.

GEN. LEE ON CUBANS

TIME NOT RIPE TO GRANT THEM INDEPENDENCE.

Natives Wholly Lacking Both in the Theory and Practice of Self-Government, but Their Impulses Are in the Right Direction—Industrial Situation on the Island Steadily Improving.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—General Fitzhugh Lee in an interview says that the people of Cuba are steadily improving under the existing protectorate of the United States and are slowly but surely rebuilding their war-wasted homes and repairing their crippled fortunes. Life and property are secure in Cuba, owing largely, he said, to the salutary restraint exercised by American military authority. He thinks the time not ripe yet, however, for a purely Cuban government.

"Cuba," said General Lee, "is improving. The Cubans are tractable and quiet and the revolution has given them self-respect and self-reliance. Their impulses are generally in the right direction, but of course of self-government there they wholly without experience. There is among certain Cubans a deep-seated prejudice against some men whom they think oppressed Cubans under Spanish rule, and if given a free rein they would settle short work of them. The United States government is pledged to grant independence to Cuba after the island has been pacified and I believe that promise should be fulfilled as swiftly as we can in reason and justice. The industrial situation is improving and money is gradually going into Cuba, but until life it would if investors were sure that property would remain safe for years to come and be protected by a government strong enough to enforce law and order."

Lack a Theory and Practice

AFTER THE INSURGENTS.

Filipinos Driven Out of Spain Hoss. Operations a Negro.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The war department has received the following dispatch from General Otis:

"Young struck insurgents at Santa Rosa, north of San Isidro, driving them, capturing some of their property. Casualties, two killed, one wounded. Evans, Sixth infantry, overtook and band Negros 27th inst., killed 10, wounding many, capturing 20 prisoners. Simons, fifth infantry, struck a small band, dispersed them, killing three. No casualties.

MANILA, Oct. 30.—6:00 p. m.—Detachments of the Sixth infantry have recently been engaged in dispersing bands of bandits who have been operating in the island of Negros. Captain Simons struck a village of Talmoan near San Carlos and Captain Evans defeated another band, killing 10, wounding many and capturing 20. There were no American losses.

PHILIPPINE COMMISSION.

Denby, Dewey, Schurman and Worcester Discuss Their Forthcoming Report.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The Philippine commission held its first meeting at the quarters selected for them in the Arlington. Professor Schurman, to whose arrival the other members have been waiting, sold an early train for the state department, after which he went to the commission's rooms, where Admiral Dewey and Colonel Denby were waiting. Professor Worcester was the last to arrive, and the commission sat down to business soon after 10:30. It was announced before the meeting that all the sessions would be secret, and that none of the deliberations would be made public until the commission had finished its labors. Colonel Denby said that no program had been arranged and that it was impossible to say even what general course would be followed, as that will be after the commissioners had discussed the matters.

ADMIRAL DEWEY TO WED.

His Engagement to the Widow of General Hazen Announced.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — Admiral Dewey has announced to some of his more intimate friends the fact of his engagement to Mrs. W. B. Hazen of this city. Mrs. Hazen is the widow of General Hazen, formerly chief signal officer of the army, who died about a year ago, and is a sister of John R. McLean, Democratic candidate for governor of Ohio. Mrs. Hazen has no children and since her husband's death has made her home with her mother. She is a woman of large means, about 40 years of age and popular in the best social circles of Washington. The date for the wedding has not been fixed, the understanding is that it will take place some time during November. Rumor has connected the names of the admiral and Mrs. Hazen for some time, but little attention was paid to the matter. Previous to his departure to take charge of the Asiatic squadron two years ago he had been a visitor at the home of Mrs. McLain, Mrs. Hazen's mother. The admiral's first wife died in 1872. She was the daughter of a former governor of Vermont.

SCOFIELD IS OPPOSED.

Wisconsin's Governor Believes It Dangerous to Keep the Philippines.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 1.—Governor Scofield has written a letter on the Philippine question in which he says he would be dangerous to the republic to keep the Philippines. The governor writes: "Possibly I may be taking too gloomy a view of the situation, but it seems to me that the continued existence of our present form of government is threatened by this Philippine problem. We are a great nation, but we have our limitations."

Montana Coal Miners Strike.

GREAT FALLS, Mon., Nov. 1.—Three hundred and fifty coal miners struck at Lethbridge. The cause of their grievance is not known.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Seven arrests have been made at Willmar for blind pigging.

Sleepy Eye will erect a monument for Chief Sleepy Eyes, whose grave has just been found.

J. W. Taylor of St. Paul has been elected president of the Inland Lakes Yachting association.

The American Public Health association holds its 27th annual session in Minneapolis Nov. 1, 2 and 3.

The Swift & Co. packing plant at South St. Paul is to be nearly doubled, involving an outlay of $100,000.

The constitutionality of the law governing the distribution of the state school fund is called in question.

Joe King, on trial at Cambria, accused of having murdered Gus Berg near Mahlowa, has been acquitted.

Because of the unjust French tariff the Minneapolis flour millers will not have exhibits at the Paris exposition.

Among the passengers who arrived Sunday on the steamer Amidon was Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota.

Minnesota State University and Grinnell played a game of football Saturday at Minneapolis. The score was 5 to 5.

A steel shipbuilding plant is to be established at Collingwood, Ont., with the assistance of Captain McDougall of Duluth.

A movement has been started to obtain the pardon of the Fifteenth Minnesota regiment who were sentenced to imprisonment for mutiny.

The state supreme court has upheld the Grindelwald law which requires Minnesota merchants to take out licenses, give bonds and make reports of sales.

The supreme court has made a ruling that an oral contract made by a school teacher with the board of trustees of a school district to teach school is invalid and no recovery can be had for services performed thereunder.

According to the insurance commissioner's report the amount of insurance written in Minnesota in 1898 increased 8 per cent over the amount written in 1897, from $842,000 to $467,000. The increase was noted notably, from $293,000 to 1,061. Two years ago the average rate was 1.49.

Martin Flak, for whose whereabouts a query was recently received by Mayor Kiefer of St. Paul, was found at Duluth. Flak is wanted at the heir to a fortunes left him by his father at Oberammergau, Bavaria. He is employed as blacksmith by the Northwestern Manufacturing company of that city.

George H. Hayes, since the beginning of the chief clerk of the state reformatory at St. Cloud, has been notified of his dismissal by Superintendent Houlton. He says Venusa a week and instruct his successor, Thomas Hellier. Hayes' dismissal is the result of the unsuccessful effort some months ago to oust Houlton and he is accused of disloyalty.

The Mahoning mine, at Hibbing, Mesaba range, has closed down for the season with a total shipment of 760,000 tons. This makes over 2,000,000 tons that the mine since starting in 1893, when it was first opened. The Fayal mine, Mesaba range, will close down soon with a shipment of over 1,000,000 tons, and will probably lead all mines of the Lake Superior country. It is the property of the Federal Steel company.

Dr. Franklin Staples, president of the state board of health, announces the segment set of rules adopted by the board concerning quarantine and other precautions to guard against the smallpox where it has broken out in towns along the Southern Minnesota railroad. The rules provide for the strict quarantine of all smallpox patients, such quarantine to continue not less than four weeks from the appearance of the disease.

The state bureau of labor has compiled statistics of accidental reports for the first nine months of 1899. There were 466 reported, for January and an increasing number every month until it was 89 in September, a three-fold increase. Reports to come in December. Among the accidents were 28 fatalities and 17 in which limbs were lost.

Peter M. Gideon, one of the best known characters in Southern Minnesota, is dead. He was born in Champlain county, Ohio, in 1820, and resided there until 1841, when he removed to Clinton, Ill. From Clinton he came in 1853 to Excelsior, there being at the time only about five or six white families settled on Lake Minnetonka. The following year he began experiments and investigations in fruit growing, and he became more known than any other man in the Northwest to advance the cultivation of apples and other fruits. He was the originator of the Wealthy apple, which he named after his wife, Wealthy Hall, whom he married in 1849. In 1878, when the state established an experimental fruit farm, he was made superintendent and continued in that capacity for several years.

WILL QUIT THE BUSINESS.

Minnesota Commissioner Men Discuss the Grindelwald Decision.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 31.—Commission men from the three cities met in the chamber of commerce rooms and discussed the effect on the trade of the Grindelwald law, just pronounced valid by the supreme court of the state, to the amusement of the commission men, who thought their case against it was convincing.

The general purport of the discussion was that the commission men would be compelled to abandon that branch of their business and buy and sell their own goods. They say half their trade takes that form now and it is not worth while to submit to the exactions of the law, even if possible to conform to it.

NEWS CONDENSATION.

Thursday, Oct. 26.

Governor Roosevelt of New York is campaigning in Maryland.

Railroads have been notified of another advance in steel rails.

Colonel Pando has been elected president of Bolivia in succession to Senor Fernandez Alonzo.

The president has issued a proclamation naming Thursday, Nov. 30, Thanksgiving day.

Admiral Sampson was presented a sword at Trenton, N. J., Wednesday, the gift of the people of the state.

Ex-Mayor John Black, one of the most prominent and wealthy men in Milwaukee, is dead of Bright's disease.

The White Star liner Germanic collided with a barge in Liverpool harbor, and the big steamer was quite seriously damaged.

Friday, Oct. 27.

Frank L. Henry, a well known New York banker, died suddenly, aged 48.

Fourteen people were burned to death near Mobile, Ala., in two dwelling houses fires.

The Ohio supreme court rendered a decision which has the effect of legalizing the practice of osteopathy in Ohio.

A story via Hudson bay has it that two white men supposed to belong to Andree expedition have been shot by Esquimaux traders.

Mr. Sewall has informed the state department that H. E. Cooper, at present attorney general of Hawaii, has been appointed minister of finance, ad interim.

The Portuguese authorities have reconducted over the Transvaal border 200 white and black prisoners whom the Boers released from their jails and turned loose in Portuguese territory.

Saturday, Oct. 28.

The queen has prorogued parliament.

Furniture prices have been advanced by the manufacturers.

It is now said that Canadian yachtsmen may challenge for the America's cup.

Cape Colony authorities have declared null and void the Free State annexation proclamation.

General Symons, the British commander in South Africa who was wounded at Glencoe, is dead.

The Standard Oil company is buying abandoned natural gas territory in Indiana in the belief that it is to be flooded with oil.

The work of the grand lodge of Knights of Pythias at it last session is declared by the judiciary committee unconstitutional.

Monday, Oct. 30.

The Rev. Edward Lyon Berthe, the inventor of deadly boats, is dead.

William H. Welch, the shipbuilder and philanthropist, is dead at New York, aged 83.

Lord Rosebery has been elected rector of Glasgow University by 829 votes, to 551 cast for Lord Kelvin.

Twenty-four million dollars is to be demanded through the courts from corporations in Cook county, Ills., for violation of Illinois statutes in failing to make proper return to the assessors.

The critical condition of the cotton industry is exciting considerable attention at Calcutta and Bombay. Owing to the overproduction of the mills it is feared the decision to partly close down comes too late to save the situation.

Tuesday, Oct. 31.

Germany is to put up grain duties to pay for her enlarged navy.

Large tracts of Wisconsin swamp lands may be reclaimed by means of a drainage canal.

Admiral Dewey announces his engagement to John R. McLean's sister, widow of General Hazen of the signal service.

Chicago Turners are opposed to the continuance of the Turner-Philippines and have passed resolutions to that effect.

Dr. Lewis physician thinks insanity can be cured in most cases by resetting dislocated bones. He has tried it successfully in some cases.

The first night's play in the 900-point onehlon carom billiard match between Sharon and Schaefer at New York resulted in an easy victory for Slosson.

Wednesday, Nov. 1.

Shamrock has sailed for home.

Brazil and Bolivia have settled their boundary dispute.

General Gomez evinces a fear that Cubans will favor annexation rather than independence.

Captain Charles French, late of the Montana regiment, is dead as the result of wounds received near Florida Blanca

President McKinley attended the launching of the torpedo boat Shubrick at Richmond.

Vice President Hobart's family announces that he will not resume his office. His condition is said to be fully recover, which is considered very doubtful.

Seven Columbian insurgent vessels were sunk by government steamers and 300 soldiers were drowned

FOR THE IOWA BOYS.

State Will Pay All Their Expenses to Actual Homes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—The Fifty-first Iowa volunteers have been notified by Adjutant General Byers that the state would furnish transportation free here to each man's actual home, no matter where he enlisted. The state has provided three special car trains and subsistence, to leave here with the regiment as fast as it is mustered out. The Iowans will be guests of Council Bluffs and Des Moines as they pass through the state.

Pain or Shine,

The station agent is on duty. On his exact communication or train orders depends thousands of lives, and millions of dollars in property, each day. In his haste he runs out in the rain or the snow hatless and unprotected. Then comes the sequel—bronchihis, or some other disease of the respiratory organs. The most effective remedy for bronchial or pulmonary disease is Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Almost all remedies prescribed for such diseases contain opium or some narcotic which stops coughs by paralyzing the nerve of cough. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains neither narcotics nor alcohol. It stops coughs by curing their cause. It heals weak lungs, builds up wasted tissues, and promotes perfect health of every organ of the body.

"I am a railroad station agent," writes A. Staples, Esq., of Barclay, Osage County, Kans., "and for years was my work keeping me in a warm room and stepping out frequently into the cold air, sometimes, which brought chronic sore throat. Doctors failed to relieve me. I procured Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and after using several bottles of same, I was entirely cured. I have also used Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate the stomach, liver and bowels.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate the stomach, liver and bowels.

Summons.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk, ss.
The State of Minnesota to E. H. Walker, Defendant:

You are hereby summoned to be and appear before the undersigned, a justice of the peace of the Prairie school district, on the 30th day of October 1899 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the office in the City of Crookston in said county, to answer to A. P. Stone in a civil suit to be by him commenced against you on said day. And you will take notice that if you fail to appear at the time and place aforesaid, judgment will be rendered against you by default, and the sum of forty-six and 50-100 dollars, and interest since January 3 1899 at 7 per cent, and the costs of suit.

Given under my hand this 28th day of September 1899.

G. H. HOLT,
Justice of the Peace.

[Sept28]

Eureka Harness Oil is the best preservative of new leather and the best restorer of old leather. It oils, softens, blacksens and polishes. Use it.

Eureka Harness Oil

on your best harness, your old harness, and your carriage and buggy will not only look better but wear longer. Buggy whips kept in good condition with it will not crack.

Sold by dealers everywhere.

Burlington Route

Finest Train on Earth from

ST. PAUL
-AND-
Minneapolis
-TO-
ST. LOUIS
AND ALL
SOUTHERN CITIES

Electric Lighted and Steam Heated.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

NO. 3. THE "FLYER"

ONLY MORNING TRAIN

-FROM-

ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS

FOR MONTANA AND THE PACIFIC COAST,

Makes immediate connection with limited and fast mail trains from Chicago and the East

EVERY DAY.

Polk County Journal,

By N. S. GORDON.

☞ Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

McKENZIE of the Times is engaged in an attempt to befuddle the minds of the people, but he will find that the people have intelligence and are not the dupes he takes them to be.

PRESIDENT KRUGER, of the Transvaal, has set a price on Cecil Rhodes' head, namely a farm of 300 acres, stocked with cattle and the necessary farm implements. The primitiveness of the Boers is shown in the kind of reward that is offered.

GOVERNORS and state officers are to be chosen in Massachusetts, Maryland, Mississippi, Kentucky, Ohio and Iowa. In Nebraska, South Dakota and Pennsylvania some state officers are to be chosen, and, while the offices are not very important, the interest is intense in Nebraska and Pennsylvania.

THE Times continues to make charges without offering a scrap of evidence in support of them and if McKenzie were to try to prove his statements—such an idea has probably never occurred to him—he would find the task as hard as it would be to convince the people that he spent their money judiciously and furnished them refined entertainment at the Carnival.

THE Artistic Advertiser is now a publication by Barnhart Brothers & Spindler of Chicago. It is the same size and shape as the JOURNAL and is also printed on book paper. It contains the news in brief, shows the faces of their type, advocates and gives an illustration of new methods of advertising and makes suggestions in the way of make-up and the setting of advertisements.

ANDREW CARNEGIE has agreed to give Duluth $50,000.00 for a library building on the one condition that the city provide a suitable site. Now if Mr. Carnegie will only cast his eyes west of Duluth till it lights on Crookston and make this city a similar offer to that made to Duluth the sum of human happiness will be increased and we venture to say that the site will be selected here sooner than at Duluth. A public library is something that Crookstonneels very much.

BULLETIN No. 62, issued by the Agricultural Experimet Station of the University of Minnesota, was prepared by Professors W. M. Hayes and Andrew Boss and deals with the question of wheat, its varieties, breeding and cultivation. Every farmer should have a copy of this bulletin. It and all other bulletins of this station are mailed free to all residents of the state who make application for them. Send to the Agricultural School at St. Anthony Park, Minn.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON, the owner of the Shamrock which was beaten in the yacht race for the America's Cup, was an excellent representative of the fine old English gentleman and a true sportsman. He accepted his defeat like a man, lodged no complaints, acknowledged that the Columbia was the faster boat, but he promises to return again with a challenger that will surely win and if the Cup were to cross the Atlantic there is surely no one whom the Americans would rather see have it than Sir Thomas Lipton.

THE Times in a recent issue stated that the Midway features of the Crookston Street Carnival "were secured at the State Fair." Now, while some of the people of the Midway Company may have been at the State Fair, the disgraceful and indecent features that were a part of the Midway at Crookston were not given anywhere on the State Fair grounds. This is only another attempt of the Times to bolster up a hopeless cause by false statements. It will not work, however: for the people realize that no dependence can be placed upon what the Times says.

THOUGH we think that at some time the Transvaal was bound to adopt the higher forms of civilization and ultimately become a part of the British Empire in Africa, still this condition would not have been brought about so soon nor is it likely that war would have taken place at the present time had not President Kruger sent such an ultimatum to England as no self-respecting nation would have accepted. This ultimatum was a strategic move and in consequence the Boers have rather the better of it in the war up to now, for they outnumber the British, but defeat in the end is sure to be their portion. While their bravery and skill in military operations cannot but be greatly admired and one's sympathies are naturally with the weaker side, still it would seem to be a foregone conclusion that they must soon surrender.

THE deer shooting season is on and the woods to the east and north of Crookston are full of hunters. As the rifles now-a-days carry a bullet from two to five miles it may be readily seen that there is considerable danger in this sport, but that is no reason why it should be given up. Great care and caution, however, should be used and sportsmen ought not to be quite so quick, as is their wont, in shooting at any moving object.

Notes From Exchanges.

Dry goods firms in New York are using a large number of auto-mobile delivery wagons.

The value of personal property in Red Lake county as finally fixed by the state board is $477,267.

A number of the older employees of the Great Northern are tendering their resignations at the present time for the reason that with the new hands there is too much responsibility for one man to take upon his shoulders.

Halstad Reporter: Nicholas Olson writes from Crookston that he has formed a partnership with Mr. Rudd, a Crookston photographer, and they expect to work Halstad and Henderson this fall with Crookston. Mr. Olson says he is lonesome without Halstad news and so we send the Reporter.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: The Red Lake Falls Lumber company will at once commence the construction of a dam across the Red Lake River about half way between this place and St. Hilaire. This will do away with all the difficulty in driving between these points. The logs will be flooded over Cook's Rapids.

Bemidji Times: The deer shooting will be the best in years. Deer are plentiful in all localities hereabouts and will be in prime condition for the table by the opening of the season. The News would advise the use only of the ordinary cartridges. Fully as good execution can be obtained as with the steel jacket bullet, and there is much less danger to the sportsmen.

St. Louis county has what no other county in the United States has and that is four iron mines that can, and probably will, each ship in round numbers, 1,000,000 tons of ore next year. These four mines will probably ship not far from one-fifth of the output of Minnesota iron mines for 1900. The four mines referred to are the Fayal, Adams, Mountain Iron and Mahoning.

McIntosh Times: Torkel Holland, formerly of this township, but who is now canvassing the country for the Fosston Woolen Mills, passed through here Saturday on his return trip from Red River, where he met with excellent success. He says that the only trouble is to get the goods out in time, the mills being now crowded to their utermost capacity and running nights.

Chicago Inter Ocean. The most independent of all churches in America is the Universalist. It has been disclutched to concerted movement or to missionary work. In the general convention to open in Boston tomorrow morning propositions as to a common declaration of faith and a more active missionary work at home and abroad will be discussed. It will be a novelty to see a Universalist missionary in the field.

Park Rapids Clippings: This is a republican year—and the bank clearances and commercial agency reports show that fully 50 per cent. more business is being done in the United States today than was done during the reign of Grover II. And yet you will now and then run across a hollow-headed politician who will tell you that it would be well for this country to go back to the dead sea stagnation of three hard old free trade and free soup democratic days.

Warren Register: A few days since a man who is what is generally termed a common laborer told us he was getting ready to come down town, because he would be stopped on nearly every corner by some one who wanted work done. This state of things would please said him were it not that he already has on hand all the jobs that he can attend to. None, perhaps, are rolling in wealth, but every one seems to be busy, and that fact is generally accepted as a proof of prosperity. If prosperity has not yet arrived in this section, there is nothing like constant employment at good wages to bring it.

Fisher Bulletin: To live for fifty years in happy wedlock is a blessing that very few can hope for, and among the few Mr. and Mrs. Annund Lindeen, parents of Ex-Commissioner Anthon Lindem, of the town of Bygland, celebrated their golden wedding last week Wednesday, with several of their friends and neighbors. The old and happy couple were married fifty years ago in Norway, but the latter and best part of their lives have been spent in free America. That they were well remembered was shown by the many tokens of love and esteem given by those present, and it was the hope of all that they could join each other around the festive board twenty-five years hence, to which the Bulletin adds amen.

FOUNDER OF AN EMPIRE

Career of Cecil Rhodes, South Africa's Uncrowned King.

HE IS AN ADMIRER OF AMERICA.

First He Made a Fortune of $75,000,000, Then Went to Work to Gain Power—Is Intensely Hated by Kruger—How He Gave a Warning to England.

Perhaps Oom Paul Kruger knows, and perhaps he does not, just how much his personal hatred for Cecil Rhodes influenced him when he flung his impossible ultimatum in England's face and practically declared for war just when all things seemed making hopefully for peace, says the New York World. When a man as strong as Oom Paul hates, he does it with an intensity which, even more than he suspects, may bend awry the usual even, true lines of his judgment and lend him to acts his natural cold wisdom would not indorse.

"That murderer." is Oom Paul's gentlest word in speaking of Rhodes, when, indeed, he can so far overcome his loathing for the man as to refer to him at all. Next to religious fervor the predominating sentiment in Oom Paul's mind is hatred for this grand Englishman who towers as a Colossus among his countrymen in South Africa, just as Oom Paul himself towers a mighty spirit among the Boers there. They are two giant figures in the world in those closing months of the century—giants locked now in a struggle in which either one or the other must go down with a crash never to rise again. One of the first acts of the Boer campaign was to put a price on Cecil Rhodes' head. About the first concerted struggle move was against the place where he was intrenched.

CECIL RHODES

When in 1871 Cecil Rhodes' mouth gave way and he was obliged to leave college, he consulted a physician, who told him he must go to a milder climate. He was a methodical old doctor, and in his private memorandum of the case he wrote as a footnote, "Cannot live six months." He was a thin faced lanky lad of 18 then, with dull eyes. His countenance did not augment intelligence and indicated nothing of force. That was only 28 years ago. Now he is the diamond king, the gold king, the railroad builder, the multimillionaire among multimillionaires in his private lumdrum capacity. In his public capacity he is the founder of a vast empire, a statesman who in Gladstone's time was counted second only to the Grand Old Man himself; since Gladstone's death ranks second to none in all the vast British dominions for relentless force and sheer weight of personal power.

It naturally would be a good deal of a man who could make hatred for himself the one overshadowing passion of a character so broad and full of force as that of Kruger. It is impossible to think of the Transvaal leader indulging himself in real hatred for anything smaller than a giant. "It is no use for us to have big ideals," said Rhodes once in conversation with his friend, Chinese Gordon, "unless we have money to carry them out."

That sentiment was the keynote of his early career in South Africa. He had big ideals, and he needed a colossal fortune to carry them out. So he went and got the colossal fortune, just as a carpenter would go and get his tools to do a piece of work. His one ideal, around which all other ideals centered, was a vast United States of South Africa. His dream was a compact federated nation like the United States of America. He stood first and above all things for the right of the governed to a voice in the government. No taxation without representation! No rule of an oligarchical ring! are the cries with which he has made South Africa ring until they culminated in the demands for representation which made Oom Paul throw down the gauntlet. How thoroughly he is imbued with American ideas he is constantly showing in his utterances, private and public. When the home rule agitation was going on in England, he exclaimed impatiently: "Why don't they go and read the constitution of the United States instead of speculating on this and doubting about, that? There is no speculation or doubt about it. Home rule is not an experiment. It has been worked out and solved in the United States for more than 100 years."

Another time, commenting on the vilification that was being poured by the English papers on South African ambitions and on him personally, he said: "That is the sort of talk that led to Bunker Hill. I am loyal. The Cape is loyal. But continued injustice and misrepresentation will alienate the most loyal. If England interferes with us—well, the United States of South Africa is not an ill sounding name."

As to his wealth, it is no somewhere among those prodigious figures where a million or so does not matter either way. Some place it at $75,000,000 and some at $150,000,000, and a figure between the two is probably about right. In his money getting days he was a money getter and fond of money and that which represents money. The story is still told of him in Kimberley how he filled a pail full of diamonds, all his own, and poured out the glittering heap again and again with almost childish pleasure. But that epoch quickly passed, and he turned to greater things.

"He would now no more think of hoarding money," said an acquaintance of his recently, "than a puny lender would think of hoarding votes. To him a million pounds simply means a lever, an instrument of power." It is impossible for those who see him now to think of him as ever having been a weakling sent abroad to die. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall in his shoes, and heavy and muscular in proportion. His appetite is a marvel. Chief Lobengula called him "the man who eats a whole country for his dinner." "He had the face of a Cæsar, the ambition of a Loyola and the wealth of a Croesus," says one writer.

His gray eyes, somewhat sunken in their orbits, have an almost melancholy expression, in curious contrast with the bold resolution of the other features. Washington had such eyes; so did Lincoln. In speech Cecil Rhodes is simple and direct and in manner frank. He has passed several fierce wars with natives, he is building a railway and telegraph line from Cairo to the Cape, to say nothing of the lines he has built in the Cape country itself, he has founded an empire—and he is but 46 years old. Yet his great reproach against himself is that he is lazy—has led, on the whole, rather an indolent life.

Elsewhere.

The Belmont County Advocate, published at Sheriln, is now a legal paper as it is now a year old.

The annual state convention of the Y. P. S. C. E. was held at St. Cloud during the past week, closing Sunday night.

The annual excursion of the National Editorial Association will be a visit to Cuba, which will take place in March.

Norman county will build a new court house at Ada. It is hardly likely that they will undertake after Polk county's capital building.

A new administration building is being added to the State Reformatory at Sauk Centre, which will take place cost to be in the neighborhood of $500.

Red Wing has taken advantage of the law of the state and appointed a truant officer who will round up the almost incorrigible youngsters and see to it that they attend school.

St. Paul Herald: There will be universal approval among all republicans of the proposition to indorse Knute Nelson for re-election to the United States Senate. Senator Nelson has been one of the ablest representatives this state ever sent to the national capital and is a worthy associate of that other distinguished statesman, Cushman K. Davis. The latter is understood to be earnestly and anxiously interested in the re-election of his colleague, and will lend his support and sanction to any move looking to the promotion of Senator Nelson's interests. Ramsey county will have a warm host for Senator Nelson, who has been our constant and efficient friend in everything undertaken in behalf of St. Paul's interests.

A grand meteoric display is expected this month. The maximum of the display will probably be soon after midnight on the morning of November 16.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the pinter's trade.

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture

.....AND

Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a house.... CROOKSTON, MINN.

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Makes the food more delicious and wholesome

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

According to the report of the state labor bureau, which has just been issued, during the last nine months 495 accidents have been reported in the state, of which 66 were in September. Youthful workers were the principal sufferers. 80 accidents occuring to those under 20 years of age, and 70 to those from 20 to 24 years, while only 20 occurred to those of 30 years and over. The iron mines lead in fatal accidents. Eight out of 19 mishaps in the mines proved fatal.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

The Woodlawn site for the new federal building in Fergus Falls, has been formally decided upon by the treasury department at Washington. This site was a compromise between two factions.

T. H. Booker, the ex-treasurer and former president of the defunct Grand-Forks National bank, was acquitted last week at Fargo by the United States court upon the charge of falsifying records sent to the comptroller of the currency. He signed the report, it seems, but did neither make the false entries himself nor directed them to be made.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample. "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street CROOKSTON, MINN.

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

50 lbs Patent Flour for 1 bu. No. 1 Nor. Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS, CROOKSTON, MINN.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK, OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. ERSKINE, President. W.K. ANGLIN, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier. H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

George B. Erskine, A. A. Miller, Wm. Anglin, J. R. McKinnon, E. M. Walsh, L. Fontaine J. P. Foote, W. B. Crosby, J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Crookston, Minnesota.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block. Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fontaine & Anglim's
Office hours—9 to 12 a. m; 1 to 5 p. m; 7 to 8 p.m

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets
Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR RELIABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice. Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday: Morning, 11.00, even ing, 8:00. Holy Communion the First Sunday of every Month. Readers you are welcome.
REV. H. M. GRIFFIN, Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

—J. F. Farden, of Dugdale, was in the city last Friday.

—John Hinchcliff, of Grand Forks, Sundayed in Crookston.

—C. Kelley, of Euclid, spent last Friday night in the city.

—T. J. West, of McIntosh, spent last Thursday night in the city.

—Dr. A. M. Umland, of Fosston, was in the city Tuesday morning.

—Father Murphy, of Bemidji, was at Euclid on pastoral work last Tuesday.

—H. H. McCoy, of the Grand Forks Lumber company, spent last Sunday in this city.

—H. B. Haney came over from Fisher and transacted business here last Monday.

—Jas. Lafond, one of Argyle's old est residents, died last week at the advanced age of 77.

—O. L. Larson and A. Trousen came in from Fosston Sunday afternoon and went south on the evening train.

—J. A. Hawley, formerly freight conductor for the Great Northern, is the new day clerk at the Commercial Hotel.

—W. H. Rose, of Angus, was down to Erskine and Mentor last Saturday where he bought a car load of wood of I. K. Mesalt of Mentor.

—Chas. Akerlund and Velmer Gates are printing stamp photographs for the good looking people up at Warren and everybody is patronizing them.

—Freddyh Westerberg was an interested spectator at the Grand Forks-Henley football game at Grand Forks last Monday. The University team won by a score of 18 to 8.

—A. N. Hixon, who is joint owner with Chas. Sawyer, of the West Superior Flour Mills, has been in the city for several days during the past wee kattending to business matters.

—The fine weather that we have been having was greatly needed by many of the farmers away north of here and in the Thief River Falls country where threshing is quite late.

—Mrs. W. S. Hawes and Mrs. R. F. Leick received word last week by telegram of the death of their father L. La Rock, at Providence, R. I. Mr. La Rock was at one time a resident of Crookston.

—Work on the new water works building is being pushed that it may be enclosed before the severe weather sets in. As it gets dark before six Superintendent Peterson has arranged to furnish the men with electric light till it is time to quit work.

—Miss Mamie Desjardins, of the Crookston high school class of '98, who has been attending the Moorhead Normal school, has been obliged on account of sickness to give up her work and returned to her home at Shevlin. She passed through en route last Friday morning.

—Word has been received that A. J. Bigham, brother-in-law of George Wareham and J. P. Mason, who was in business in Crookston six or seven years ago and since that time has been in business in Portland, Oregon, has gone with 26 others to the Philippines in the interests of the government.

—Collins' new livery barn on the corner of Fourth and Main streets is one of the best barns in the northwest. It is so arranged as to be as comfortable in winter as in summer, and is most conveniently laid out, with sufficient accommodation for all the business that is likely to come to him. Mr. Collins is an up-to-date livery man and understands the wants of the public in his line.

—Land Attorney Nat Campbell is out again.

—Arthur Egley is the editor of the Erskine Echo.

—Will Bloom made a business trip to Warren Monday.

—Geo. M. Swift was in from Mentor, last Friday.

—Henry Nelson, of Angus, spent Sunday night in Crookston.

—Ole Thompson, of McIntosh, was at the county seat on Friday.

—Alex McIntosh was registered in from Red Lake last Sunday.

—Chas. Hitchcock went up to Thief River Falls Monday morning.

—John Gilstorf and family of Angus, will winter at the county seat.

—Miss Bertha McIntyre is organizing a music class at Red Lake Falls.

—Will Leeson, the timber cruiser, has been in the city part of this week.

—Miss Amelia Brown, of Red Wing, is the guest of her brother, H. F. Brown

—Charley March was in from Akley on Sunday, returning Monday morning.

—Have your suit steam cleaned and pressed at Dye works 305 North Broadway. 30tf

—A missionary meeting was held at the Swedish Lutheran church last Tuesday evening.

—L. U. Jennings started out Monday morning for the woods out east and will endeavor to pick off his quota of deer.

—Harry Ives returned Sunday from Indiana, where he has been taking treatment at a hot spring sanitarium.

—Henry Nelson and Frank Smith, of Euclid were down at the county seat on business last Tuesday.

—Charley Kronse, of Euclid, was a caller at the JOURNAL office last Friday. He was on his way out east to hunt deer.

—Fred Lasian came in from his school in western Polk last Saturday to "root" for the high school pig skin chasers.

—Gus Schuneman and wife, Miss Fox, Fred Barclay and City Editor Hayford, of the Tribune, spent Sunday at the Forks.

—Mrs. R. Olson has been appointed by Judge Hagen as administratrix in the estate of her former husband, Iver Johnson, of Fosston.

—Charley Lohn, court reporter, came down from Red Lake Falls to take in the dance Friday night and remained at home till Monday morning.

—Chas. McKinnon, chairman of the State Board of Appeals in grain matters, came up from below Sunday to look after his business here.

—Editor M. H. Novotny, of the Argyle Banner, has been at Erskine part of the past week assisting Arthur Egley in getting the Erskine Echo started.

—W. H. Stephens, of East Grand Forks, purchased a time piece and the Judge gave him thirty days to think the matter over in the Polk county jail.

—Col. and Mrs. R. A. Wilkinson and daughter Miss Mary Wilkinson have gone to St. Paul to their winter home. Miss Mary will study music in the East.

—Charley Lusian came in from his school near Argus Friday night to see the high school boys defeat the University students. Charley has two more weeks' school after this week.

—S. S. Wardwell, one of the "U" students, who came over from Grand Forks, to see the football game Saturday remained over Sunday the guest of Principal Gans of the South Crookston schools.

—Joseph Leicht, editor of the Westlichter Herald, of Winona, has been in the city this week looking after the interests of his paper. Mr. Leicht is one of the leading newspaper men in the southern part of the state.

—The hotel buses that make the Great Northern trains are pretty nearly crowded off the earth these days, between the excavating for the steam heating plant pipes and the foundation of the new station.

—No strike is imminent on the Great Northern. All talk of this kind comes from those who are simply hired for a short time during the rush season, and will be let out soon anyway when heavy fall work is over.

—Court at Red Lake Falls was adjourned last Friday afternoon till Monday, when the cases of those against whom the grand jury brought in indictments were taken up. Nine saloon keepers were indicted for keeping open on Sunday.

—The Supreme Court of Minnesota has recently decided that an oral contract made by a school teacher with the board of trustees of a school district to teach school is invalid and no recovery can be had for services performed thereunder.

—Dan Meehan, a brakeman on the Great Northern, was quite severely injured at Kitson station last Thursday by being caught between the bumpers. He is, however, on a fair way to recovery, thanks to the skill of Dr. Dampier.

—Ed. Emerson was up from Ada last Sunday.

—F. Radi was over from Fisher last Friday on business.

—M. V. Evenson, of Thief River Falls, was here Monday.

—Fred Rauch is settled in his new house in Jerome's addition.

—Th. S. Berg, one of McIntosh's merchants spent Sunday in the city.

—C. J. Gullickson was in from Belgrand doing business here Monday.

—Frank Suttor, of Key West, spent last Friday night at the county seat.

—Angus was represented in the city Friday by Mr. and Mrs. G. Evans.

—Fifteen people filed on homestead claims at the U. S. land office here on Monday.

—James Buchanan was one of the Fisheries, who visited the Queen City Monday.

—Will and Chas. Casmey, of Euclid, were at the county seat on business Monday.

—P. Stuhr and S. C. Lytle, were down from Euclid last Saturday on business.

—Agents to learn Dye plating and also good canvassers, 306 North Broadway. 30tf

—A. H. Gerlock, of Wylie, is suffering from a fractured leg, the result of being kicked by a horse.

—O. I. Survold will give a stereopticon lecture at College Hall this evening on "The Land of the Midnight Sun."

—J. Schefstad, the violinist, assisted by Prof. and Mrs. Elgys gave a concert last Saturday night at Fisher.

—J. Fleming, the enterprising farmer with a big farm at Hixson, was transacting business in the city Monday last.

—Big cut on price of dry goods, gents' furnishing goods, etc. at Eldred, Minn., for one week beginning Monday, Nov. 6.

—Rev. Rowning, a returned missionary from China, lectured at the Bauges church last Tuesday evening on life among the Chinese

—There was a final account rendered last Friday in the probate court in the estate of Ole E. Stovern, of McIntosh, and the final decree was issued.

—Attorney General Douglas and a small party from below passed through the city Sunday morning on their way to the hunting grounds out east of here.

—General Superintendent Ward and other superintendents have been making a minute inspection of the conditions in railway circles at the different points along the Great Northern.

—Will O'Neil, who has played the euphonium combination instrument in the Crookston band has gone to Solway, where he is clerk in the Solway Mercantile store.

—The Misses Crawford gave a Hallowe'en party to a company of their friends on Tuesday night. Ghosts and witches were in evidence and cast around them a spell that everyone thoroughly enjoyed.

—Evangelin Cisneros, the great Cuban fortune teller, can be consulted daily at the Phoenix Hotel parlor. She tells the past, present and future. Madame Cisneros is well known throughout the country for her wonderful power as a fortune teller and reader.

—Little Miss Cecilia, the eleven-year old daughter of W. J. Shaughnessy, started Sunday night for Poplar Bluff, Missouri, to visit at her mother's old home. The long journey, 1,100 miles, Miss Cecilia traveled alone, reaching her grandmother's Tuesday evening at 5 o'clock.

The Burlington buffet library car is one of the most convenient ever put on wheels. Besides all the periodicals and literature provided, there are duplicate whist boards for the amusement of the traveler. Goodness only knows what is "limited" in the way of beauty, comfort and luxury on the Burlington "limited."

—To Grand Forks last week came a member of the British aristocracy, a genuine lord, you know. After being in the city a short time and having looked over the situation, he asked an acquaintance where "the gentry" were. The friend not clearly understanding what he meant by "the gentry" asked him to explain further and he replied that he meant by "the gentry" those who did not work. "Oh!" was the reply; "those people in this country we call tramps."

—The annual convention of the American Association of Fairs and Expositions will be held at Chicago, Nov. 21 and 22. The purpose of the convention is to discuss matters pertaining to fair and exposition management and to consider new propositions for the betterment and enlargement of the work. Secretary E. W. Randall, of the Minnesota State Fair Association, will give an address on "Advertising the Fair." E. W. Randall, N. S. Gordon and C. E. Cosgrove are the Minnesota delegates to the convention.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....In the Northwest.

OVERCOATS
FOR MEN.
All Styles—All Colors. $3.00 to $30.00

SUITS
FOR MEN.
All Styles—All Prices. $2.50 to $25.00

C. O. D. CLOTHING STORE

Crookston Tannery
Aug. Miller & Co.
Proprietors.

Watch this Next Week

S. C. Johnson's
Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale	35c
Oats, per bushel	25c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs	75c
Shorts, 100 lbs	65c
Bran, 100 lbs	60c
Shelled Corn, per bu	40c
Condition Powder, per pkg	25c
Shorts, per ton	$12.00
Bran, per ton	10.00

Cedar Posts from 12½c to 15c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

—James Daily of Stoughton, N. D., was in Crookston yesterday.

—Call on us before making your purchases. The Strawbridge Co.

—Wylie's pedagogue, H. T. McNulty Sundayed with friends at Dugdale.

—Have your overcoat cleaned or colored at Dye Works, 305 North Broadway. 30tf

—I. H. and M. E. Widness brothers will open a mercantile business in their new store building at Olga, Minn., Nov. 6.

—Dr. Morley, the eye specialist, moved yesterday into his new office rooms on the second floor of the Wallace block.

—Anton Linden of Bygland is hauling lumber from Fisher for a leanto to his barn, 14x28, which will be completed this fall.

—I. K. Messlt, one of Mentor's business men, was in the city last Friday making purchases from the wholesale houses.

—For next Sunday morning in the Congregational church, Rev. Mr. Fisher has announced "An Elderly People's Service."

—The Cass Lake Times suggests to the republican party of Minnesota the name of Halvor Steenerson as a gubernatorial candidate.

—J. S. Lewis and family of Mazu, N. D., drove through Crookston yesterday on his way to Bemidji, where he will make his future home.

—G. O. Weeks, of this city, has lately finished and equipped a house on his claim on near Turtle River and will make his home there.

—The county auditor has been kept busy the past few days in issuing licenses to sportsmen to hunt deer. These permits cost state residents 25 cents but outsiders $25

—Towns along the St. Vincent line are agitating the question of having the long distance phone put in. They want to be within speaking distance of the rest of the world.

—This evening the Epworth League of the Methodist church will hold a social at the home of M. E. Harbin on East Bridge street in Jerome's addition. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

—Dr. Robert Forbes, presiding elder of the Duluth district, spent Sunday at Ada, and Monday morning went north to visit the towns along the St. Vincent line. Friday evening he will preside at the first quarterly conference of the Crookston Methodist church to be held in the church parlors.

—J. B. Bren was down from Tabor on Friday.

—See Miss L. M. Bassett's millinery ad in this issue and call on her when you want anything in her line.

—Oney Oldne, who has been a druggist's clerk at Thief River Falls, has come to Crookston, where he will spend the winter.

—The Great Western Clothing House, Second street, will have a large advertisement in next issue. Watch for it as they have some good things to say to you.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—Hollowe'en passed off rather quietly in Crookston. The usual innocent pranks were played by the small boys and girls but no harm was done anywhere in the city.

—Gilbertson & Hagen have moved their restaurant to the room formerly occupied by Daly's restaurant. They are putting things in first-class shape and we predict for them a good business.

—Officers of the W. C. T. U. and delegates returning from Washington state, where the National Convention of that organization has recently been held, stopped off at Grand Forks and spent last Sunday.

—C. H. Leeson has moved his shooting gallery to the north room of the Opera Block, where he has made numerous improvements in his equipments, and added several new amusements. He calls his place "Dewey Hall."

—The St. Hilaire Spectator is responsible for the statement that Gus Schmidt, the Crookston painter, who has recently encouraged the habit of going on wild goose chases and, running out of shells before getting any geese, was here Monday for a short time.

—Wm. Bloom left last night for Phoenix, Arizona, where he will spend the winter. This is made necessary on account of his health. The JOURNAL joins his many friends in the hope that he will find the change beneficial and will return to Crookston in the spring, his old self.

—Jno. W. Croney while standing on the west side of De Mers avenue bridge, at Grand Forks, Sunday morning, suddenly became ill and accidently fell over the railing to the ground, a distance of 20 feet. Several ribs were fractured and other injuries sustained, but the man will notwithstanding recover.

FOR SALE.

Imported Yorkshire Swine and Shropshire Sheep at reasonable prices.

For full particulars address
A. W. EDSON,
Austin, Minn.

NORTHERN PACIFIC
TIME CARD
—OF—
TRAINS.
Crookston

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep's
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:25 pm	8:35 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	6:30 a m	6:30 a m

C. A. SHARREY, Agt. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A.
Crookston, Minn. St. Paul, Minn

THE GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE	DAILY	EXCEPT SUNDAY.	LEAVE
4.35 a m		Grand Forks, North and West	7.00 a m
2.00 p m		Minneapolis, St. Paul and points east	9.05 p m
6.30 p m		St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls, and Red Lake Falls	9.70 a m
4.53 p m		Fosston, Bemidji, Duluth and Superior	9.00 a m
6.45 p m		St. Vincent to Fargo	1.15 p m
8.25 a m		Fargo to St. Vincent	8.05 a m

Saw Mill Machinery For Sale Cheap.

One 3-Saw Lath Bolter, One 3-Saw Lath Mill,

The above machines are in good repair and capable of making 40,000 lath in ten hours.

On Perkins Hand Shingle Machine

With drop tilt attachment — in good repair.

A complete outfit of Saws and Collars goes with above machinery.

Write for Prices.

CROOKSTON LUMBER CO.,
Crookston, Minn.

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

[Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.]

CHAPTER III.

If any man cometh unto me and hateth not his own father and mother and wife and children and brethren and sisters—yea, and his own life also—he cannot be my disciple. * * * And whosoever forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple.

When Rachel Winslow and Virginia Page separated after the meeting at the First church on Sunday, they agreed to continue their conversation the next day. Virginia asked Rachel to come and lunch with her at noon, and Rachel accordingly rang the bell at the Page mansion about half past 11. Virginia herself met her, and the two were soon talking earnestly.

"The fact is," Rachel was saying after they had been talking a few minutes, "I cannot reconcile it with my judgment of what he would do. I cannot tell another person what to do, but I feel that I ought not to accept this offer."

"What will you do, then?" asked Virginia, with great interest.

"I don't know yet, but I have decided to refuse this offer."

Rachel picked up a letter that had been lying in her lap and ran over its contents again. It was a letter from the manager of a comic opera offering her a place with a large traveling company for the season. The salary was a very large figure, and the prospect held out by the manager was flattering. He had heard Rachel sing that Sunday morning when the stranger had interrupted the service. He had been much impressed. There was money in that voice, and it ought to be used in comic opera, so said the letter, and the manager wanted a reply as soon as possible.

"There's no virtue in saying 'No' to this offer when I have the other one," Rachel went on thoughtfully. "That's harder to decide, but I've made up my mind. To tell the truth, Virginia, I'm completely convinced in the first case that Jesus would never use any talent like a good voice just to make money. But, now, take this concert offer. Here is a reputable company to travel with an impersonator and a violinist and a male quartet, all people of good reputation. I'm asked to go as one of the company and sing leading soprano. The salary (I mentioned it, didn't I?) is to be guaranteed—$200 a month for the season. But I don't feel satisfied that Jesus would go. What do you think?"

"You mustn't ask me to decide for you," replied Virginia, with a sad smile. "I believe Mr. Maxwell was right when he said we must each one of us decide according to the judgment we felt for ourselves to be Christlike. I am having a harder time than you are, dear, to decide what he would do."

"Are you?" Rachel asked. She rose and walked over to the window and looked out. Virginia came and stood by her. The street was crowded with life, and the two young women looked at it silently for a moment. Suddenly Virginia broke out as Rachel had never heard her before.

"Rachel, what does all this contrast in conditions mean to you as you ask this question of what Jesus would do? It maddens me to think that the society in which I have been brought up, the same to which we are both said to belong, is satisfied, year after year, to go on dressing and eating and having a good time, giving and receiving entertainments, spending its money on houses and luxuries and occasionally, to ease its conscience, donating, without any personal sacrifice, a little money to charity. I have been educated, as you have, in one of the most expensive schools of America, launched into society as an heiress, supposed to be in a very enviable position. I'm perfectly well. I can travel or stay at home. I can do as I please. I can gratify almost any want or desire, and yet when I honestly try to imagine Jesus living the life I have lived and am expected to live and doing for the rest of my life what thousands of other rich people do I am under condemnation for being one of the most wicked, selfish, useless creatures in the world. I have not looked out of this window for weeks without a feeling of horror toward myself as I see the humanity that pours by this house."

Virginia turned away and walked up and down the room. Rachel watched her and could not repress the rising tide of her own growing definition of discipleship. Of what Christian use was her own talent of song? Was the best she could do to sell her talent for so much a month, go on a concert company's tour, dress beautifully, enjoy the excitement of public applause and gain a reputation as a great singer? Was that what Jesus would do?

She was not morbid. She was in sound health, was conscious of great powers as a singer and knew that if she went out into public life she could make a great deal of money and become well known. It is doubtful if she overestimated her ability to accomplish all she thought herself capable of. And Virginia—what she had just said smote Rachel with great force because of the similar position in which the two friends found themselves.

Lunch was announced, and they went out and were joined by Virginia's grandmother, Mme. Page, a handsome, stately woman of 65, and Virginia's brother, Rollin, a young man who spent most of his time at one of the clubs and had no particular ambition for anything but a growing admiration for Rachel Winslow, and whenever she dined or lunched at the Page mansion, if he knew of it, he always planned to be at home.

These three made up the Page family. Virginia's father had been a banker and grain speculator. Her mother had died ten years before, her father within the past year. The grandmother, a southern woman in birth and training, had all the traditions and feelings that accompany the possession of wealth and social standing that have never been disturbed. She was a shrewd, careful business woman of more than average ability. The family property and wealth were invested, in large measure, under her personal care. Virginia's portion was, without any restriction, her own. She had been trained by her father to understand the ways of the business world, and even the grandmother had been compelled to acknowledge the girl's capacity for taking care of her own money.

Perhaps two persons could not be found anywhere less capable of understanding a girl like Virginia than Mme. Page and Rollin. Rachel, who had known the family since she was a girl playmate of Virginia's, could not help thinking of what confronted Virginia in her own home when she once decided on the course which she honestly believed Jesus would take. Today at lunch, as she recalled Virginia's outbreak in the front room, she tried to picture the scene that would at some time occur between Mme. Page and her granddaughter.

"I understand that you are going on the stage, Miss Winslow. We shall all be delighted, I'm sure," said Rollin during one of the pauses in the conversation, which had not been animated.

Rachel colored and felt annoyed.

"Who told you?" she asked, while Virginia, who had been very silent and reserved, suddenly roused herself and appeared ready to join in the talk.

"Oh, we hear a thing or two on the street! Besides, every one saw Crandall, the manager, at church two weeks ago. He doesn't go to church to hear the preaching. In fact, I know other people who don't either, not when there's something better to hear."

Rachel did not color this time, but she answered quietly:

"You're mistaken. I'm not going on the stage."

"It's a great pity. You'd make a hit. Everybody is talking about your singing."

This time Rachel flushed with genuine anger.

Before she could say anything Virginia broke in.

"Whom do you mean by 'everybody?'"

"Whom? I mean all the people who hear Miss Winslow on Sunday. What other time do they hear her? It's a great pity, I say, that the general public outside of Raymond cannot hear her voice."

"Let us talk about something else," said Rachel a little sharply. Mme. Page glanced at her and spoke with a gentle courtesy.

"My dear, Rollin never could pay an indirect compliment. He is like his father in that. But we are all curious to know something of your plans. We claim the right from old acquaintance, you know. And Virginia had already told us of your concert company offer."

"I supposed, of course, that was public property," said Virginia, smiling across the table. "It was in The News yesterday."

"Yes, yes," replied Rachel hastily. "I understand that, Mme. Page. Well, Virginia and I have been talking about it. I have decided not to accept, and that is as far as I have gone yet."

Rachel was conscious of the fact that the conversation had up to this point been narrowing her hesitation concerning the company's offer down to a decision that would absolutely satisfy her own judgment of Jesus' probable action. It had been the last thing in the world, however, that she had desired to have her decision made in any way so public as this. Somehow what Rollin Page had said and his manner in saying it had hastened her judgment in the matter.

"Would you mind telling us, Rachel, your reasons for refusing the offer? It looks like a good opportunity for a young girl like you. Don't you think the general public ought to hear you? I feel like Rollin about that. A voice like yours belongs to a larger audience than Raymond and the First church."

Rachel Winslow was naturally a girl of great reserve. She shrank from making her plans or her thoughts public. But with all her repression there was possible in her an occasional sudden breaking out that was simply an impulsive, thoughtful, frank, truthful expression of her most inner personal feeling. She spoke now in reply to Mme. Page in one of those rare moments of unreserve that added to the attractiveness of her whole character.

"I have no other reason than a conviction that Jesus would do the same thing," she said, looking in Mme. Page's eyes with a clear, earnest gaze.

Mme. Page turned red, and Rollin stared. Before her grandmother could say anything Virginia spoke.

Her rising color showed how she was stirred. Virginia's pale, clear complexion was that of health, but it was generally in marked contrast to Rachel's tropical type of beauty.

"Grandmother, you know we promised to make that the standard of our conduct for a year. Mr. Maxwell's proposition was plain to all who heard it. We have not been able to arrive at our decisions very rapidly. The difficulty in knowing what Jesus would do has perplexed Rachel and me a good deal."

Mme. Page looked sharply at Virginia before she said anything.

"Of course I understand Mr. Maxwell's statement. It is perfectly impracticable to put it into practice. I felt confident at the time that those who promised would find it out after a trial and abandon it as visionary and absurd. I have nothing to say about Miss Winslow's affairs, but"—she paused and continued with a sharpness that was new to Rachel—"I hope you have no foolish notions in this matter, Virginia."

"I have a great many notions," replied Virginia quietly. "Whether they are foolish or not depends upon my right understanding of what he would do. As soon as I find out I shall do it."

"Excuse me, ladies," said Rollin, rising from the table. "The conversation is getting beyond my depth. I shall retire to the library for a cigar."

He went out of the dining room, and there was silence for a moment. Mme. Page waited until the servant had brought in something and then asked her to go out. She was angry, and her anger was formidable, although checked in some measure by the presence of Rachel.

"I am older by several years than you, young ladies," she said, and her traditional type of bearing seemed to Rachel to rise up like a great frozen wall between her and every conception of Jesus as a sacrifice. "What you have promised in a spirit of false emotion, I presume, is impossible of performance."

"Do you mean, grandmother, that we cannot possibly act as Jesus would, or do you mean that if we try to we shall offend the customs and prejudices of society?" asked Virginia.

"It is not required. It is not necessary. Besides, how can you act with any"—

Mme. Page paused, broke off her sentence and then turned to Rachel.

"What will your mother say to your decision? My dear, is it not foolish? What do you expect to do with your voice anyway?"

"I don't know what mother will say yet," Rachel answered, with a great shrinking from trying to give her mother's probable answer. If there was a woman in all Raymond with great ambitions for her daughter's success as a singer, Mrs. Winslow was that woman.

"Oh, you will see it in a different light after wiser thought of it! My dear," continued Mme. Page, rising from the table, "you will live to regret it if you do not accept the concert company's offer or something like it."

Rachel said something that contained a hint of the struggle she was still having, and after a little she went away, feeling that her departure was to be followed by a painful conversation between Virginia and her grandmother. As she afterward learned, Virginia passed through a crisis of feeling during that scene with her grandmother that hastened her final decision as to the use of her money and her social position.

Rachel was glad to escape and be by herself. A plan was slowly forming in her mind, and she wanted to be alone to think it out carefully. But before she had walked two blocks she was annoyed to find Rollin Page walking beside her.

"Sorry to disturb your thought, Miss Winslow, but I happened to be going your way and had an idea you might not object. In fact, I've been walking here for a whole block, and you haven't objected."

"I did not see you," replied Rachel.

"I wouldn't mind that if you only thought of me once in awhile," said Rollin suddenly. He took one last nervous puff of his cigar, tossed it into the street and walked along with a pale face.

Rachel was surprised, but not startled. She had known Rollin as a boy, and there had been a time when they had used each other's first name familiarly. Lately, however, something in Rachel's manner had put an end to that. She was used to his direct attempts at compliment and was sometimes amused by them. Today she honestly wished him anywhere else.

"Do you ever think of me, Miss Winslow?" asked Rollin after a pause.

"Oh, yes, quite often!" said Rachel, with a smile.

"Are you thinking of me now?"

"Yes, that is—yes, I am."

"What?"

"Do you want me to be absolutely truthful?"

"Of course."

"Then I was thinking that I wished you were not here."

Rollin bit his lip and looked gloomy. Rachel had not spoken anything as he wished.

"Now, look here, Rachel—oh, I know that's forbidden, but I've got to speak some time—you know how I feel. What makes you treat me so hard? You used to like me a little, you know."

"Did I? Of course we used to get on very well as boy and girl, but we are older now."

Rachel still spoke in the light, easy way she had used since her first annoyance at seeing him. She was still somewhat preoccupied with her plan, which had been disturbed by Rollin's appearance.

They walked along in silence a little way. The avenue was full of people. Among the persons passing was Jasper Chase. He saw Rachel and Rollin and bowed as he went by. Rollin was watching Rachel closely.

"I wish I were Jasper Chase. Maybe I'd stand some show then," he said moodily.

Rachel colored in spite of herself. She did not say anything and quickened her pace a little. Rollin seemed determined to say something, and Rachel seemed helpless to prevent him. After all, she thought, he might as well know the truth one time as another.

"You know well enough, Rachel, how I feel toward you. Isn't there any hope? I could make you happy. I've loved you a good many years"—

"Why, how old do you think I am?" broke in Rachel, with a nervous laugh. She was shaken out of her usual poise of manner.

"You know what I mean," went on Rollin doggedly, "and you have no right to laugh at me just because I want you to marry me."

"I'm not, but it is useless for you to speak—Rollin," said Rachel after a little hesitation and then using his name in such a frank, simple way that he could attach no meaning to it beyond the familiarity of the family acquaintance. "It is impossible." She was still a little agitated by the fact of receiving a proposal of marriage on the avenue, but the noise on the street and sidewalk made the conversation as private as if they were in the house.

"Would you—that is—do you think—if you gave me time I would"—

"No!" said Rachel. She spoke firmly. Perhaps, she thought afterward, although she did not mean to, she spoke harshly.

They walked on for some time without a word. They were nearing Rachel's home, and she was anxious to end the scene.

As they turned off the avenue into one of the quiet streets Rollin spoke suddenly and with more manliness than he had yet shown. There was a distinct note of dignity in his voice that was new to Rachel.

"Miss Winslow, I ask you to be my wife. Is there any hope for me that you will ever consent?"

"None in the least." Rachel spoke decidedly.

"Will you tell me why?" He asked the question as if he had a right to a truthful answer.

"I do not feel toward you as a woman ought to feel toward the man she ought to marry."

"In other words, you do not love me?"

"I do not, and I cannot."

"Why?" That was another question, and Rachel was a little surprised that he should ask it.

"Because"— She hesitated for fear she might say too much in an attempt to speak the exact truth.

"Tell me just why. You can't hurt me more than you have done already."

"Well, I don't and can't love you because you have no purpose in life. What do you ever do to make the world better? You spend your time in club life, in amusements, in travel, in luxury. What is there in such a life to attract a woman?"

"Not much, I guess," said Rollin, with a little laugh. "Still, I don't know that I am any worse than the rest of the men around me. I'm not so bad as some. Glad to know your reason."

He suddenly stopped, took off his hat, bowed gravely and turned back. Rachel went on home and hurried into her room, disturbed in many ways by the event which had so unexpectedly thrust itself into her experience.

When she had time to think it all over, she found herself condemned by the very judgment she had passed on Rollin Page. What purpose had she in life? She had been abroad and studied music with one of the famous teachers of Europe. She had come home to Raymond and had been singing in the First church choir now for a year. She was well paid. Up to that Sunday two weeks ago she had been quite satisfied with herself and her position. She had shared her mother's ambition and anticipated growing triumphs in the musical world. What possible career was before her except the regular career of every singer?

She asked the question again and, in the light of her recent reply to Rollin, asked again if she had any very great purpose in life herself? What would Jesus do? There was a fortune in her voice. She knew it, not necessarily as a matter of personal pride or professional egotism, but simply as a fact, and she was obliged to acknowledge that until two weeks ago she had purposed to use her voice to make money and win admiration and applause. Was that a much higher purpose, after all, than Rollin Page lived for?

She sat in her room a long time and finally went down stairs resolved to have a frank talk with her mother about the concert company's offer and her new plan, which was gradually shaping in her mind. She had already had one talk with her mother and knew that she expected Rachel to accept the offer and enter on a successful career as a public singer.

"Mother," Rachel said, coming at once to the point, as much as she dreaded the interview, "I have decided not to go out with the company. I have a good reason for it."

Mrs. Winslow was a large, handsome woman, fond of much company, ambitious for a distinct place in society and devoted, according to her definitions of success, to the success of her children. Her youngest boy, Lewis, ten years younger than Rachel, was ready to graduate from a military academy in the summer. Meanwhile she and Rachel were at home together. Rachel's father, like Virginia's, had died while the family were abroad. Like Virginia, she found herself, under her present rule of conduct, in complete antagonism with her own immediate home circle.

Mrs. Winslow waited for Rachel to go on.

"You know the promise I made two weeks ago, mother?"

"Mr. Maxwell's promise?"

"No, mine. You know what it was, mother?"

"I suppose I do. Of course all the church members mean to imitate Christ and follow him as far as is consistent with our present day surroundings. But what has that to do with your decision in the concert company's matter?"

"It has everything to do with it. After asking, 'What would Jesus do?' and going to the source of authority for wisdom I have been obliged to say that I do not believe he would in my case make that use of my voice."

"Why? Is there anything wrong about such a career?"

"No; I don't know that I can say there is."

"Do you presume to sit in judgment on other people who go out to sing in this way? Do you presume to say that they are doing what Christ would not do?"

"Mother, I wish you to understand me. I judge no one else. I condemn no other professional singers. I simply decide my own course. As I look at it, I have a conviction that Jesus would do something else."

"What else?" Mrs. Winslow had not yet lost her temper. She did not understand the situation or Rachel in the midst of it, but she was anxious that her daughter's career should be as distinguished as her natural gifts promised, and she felt confident that when the present unusual religious excitement in the First church had passed away Rachel would go on with her public life according to the wishes of the family. She was totally unprepared for Rachel's next remark.

"What? Something that will serve mankind where it most needs the service of song. Mother, I have made up my mind to use my voice in some way so as to satisfy my soul that I am doing something better than pleasing fashionable audiences or making money or even gratifying my own love of singing. I am going to do something that will satisfy me when I ask, 'What would Jesus do?' and I am not satisfied and cannot be when I think of myself as singing myself into the career of a concert company performer."

Rachel spoke with a vigor and earnestness that surprised her mother. Mrs. Winslow was angry now, and she never tried to conceal her feelings.

"It is simply absurd! Rachel, you are a fanatic! What can you do?"

"The world has been served by men and women who have given it other things that were gifts. Why should I, because I am blessed with a natural gift, at once proceed to put a market price on it and make all the money I can out of it? You know, mother, that you have taught me to think of a musical career always in the light of a financial and social success. I have been unable since I made my promise two weeks ago to imagine Jesus joining a concert company to do what I would do and live the life I would have to live if I joined it."

Mrs. Winslow rose and then sat down again. With a great effort she composed herself.

"What do you intend to do, then? You have not answered my question."

"I shall continue to sing for the time being in the church. I am pledged to sing there through spring. During the week I am going to sing at the White Cross meetings down in the Rectangle."

"What! Rachel Winslow! Do you know what you are saying? Do you know what sort of people those are down there?"

Rachel almost quailed before her mother. For a moment she shrank back and was silent.

"I know very well. That is the reason I am going. Mr. and Mrs. Gray have been working there several weeks. I learned only this morning that they wanted singers from the churches to help them in their meetings. They use a tent. It is in a part of the city where Christian work is most needed. I shall offer them my help. Mother," Rachel cried out with the first passionate utterance she had yet used, "I want to do something that will cost me something in the way of sacrifice. I know you will not understand me. But I am hungry to suffer something. What have we done all our lives for the suffering, sinning side of Raymond? How much have we denied ourselves or given of our personal ease and pleasure to bless the place in which we live or imitate the life of the Saviour of the world? Are we always to go on doing as society selfishly dictates, moving on its narrow little round of pleasures and entertainments and never knowing the pain of things that cost?"

"Are you preaching at me?" asked Mrs. Winslow slowly. Rachel understood her mother's words.

"No. I am preaching at myself," she replied gently. She paused a moment as if she thought her mother would say something more and then went out of the room. When she reached her own room, she felt that, so far as her mother was concerned, she could expect no sympathy or even a fair understanding from her.

She kneeled down. It is safe to say that within the two weeks since Henry Maxwell's church had faced that shabby figure with the faded hat more members of his parish had been driven to their knees in prayer than during all the previous term of his pastorate.

When she rose, her beautiful face was wet with tears. She sat, thoughtfully a little while and then wrote a note to Virginia Page. She sent it to her by a messenger and then went down stairs again and told her mother that she and Virginia were going down to the Rectangle that evening to see Mr. and Mrs. Gray, the evangelists.

"Virginia's uncle, Dr. West, will go with us if she goes. I have asked her to call him up by telephone and go with us. The doctor is a friend of the Grays and attended some of the meetings last winter."

Mrs. Winslow did not say anything. Her manner showed her complete disapproval of Rachel's course, and Rachel felt her unspoken bitterness.

About 7 o'clock the doctor and Virginia appeared, and together the three started for the scene of the White Cross meetings.

The Rectangle was the most notorious district in all Raymond. It was in the territory close by the great railroad shops and the packing houses. The slum and tenement district of Raymond congested its most wretched elements about the Rectangle. This was a barren field used in the summer by circus companies and wandering showmen. It was shut in by rows of saloons, gambling hells and cheap, dirty boarding and lodging houses.

The First church of Raymond had never touched the Rectangle problem. It was too dirty, too coarse, too sinful, too awful, for close contact. Let us be honest. There had been an attempt to cleanse this sore spot by sending down an occasional committee of singers, of Sunday school teachers or gospel visitors from various churches, but the church of Raymond as an institution had never really done anything to make the Rectangle any less a stronghold of the devil as the years went by into this heart of the coarse part of the sin of Raymond the traveling evangelist and his brave little wife had pitched a good sized tent and begun meetings. It was the spring of the year and the evenings were beginning to be pleasant. The evangelists had asked for the help of Christian people and had received more than the usual amount of encouragement, but they felt a great need of more and better music. During the meetings on the Sunday just gone the assistant at the organ had been taken ill. The volunteers from the city were few and the voices of ordinary quality.

"There will be a small meeting tonight, John," said his wife as they entered the tent a little after 7 o'clock and began to arrange the chairs and light up.

"Yes, I think so." Mr. Gray was a small, energetic man, with a pleasant voice and the courage of a highborn fighter. He had already made friends in the neighborhood, and one of his converts, a heavy faced man, who had just come in, began to help in the arrangement of the seats.

It was after 8 o'clock when Alexander Powers opened the door of his office and started to go home. He was going to take a car at the corner of the Rectangle, but as he neared it he was aroused by a voice coming from the tent.

It was the voice of Rachel Winslow. It struck through his consciousness of struggle over his own question that had sent him into the Divine presence for an answer. He had not yet reached a conclusion. He was troubled with uncertainty. His whole previous course of action as a railroad man was the poorest possible preparation for anything sacrificial, and he could not yet say what he would do in the matter.

Hark! What was she singing? How did Rachel Winslow happen to be down here? Several windows near by went up. Some men quarreling in a saloon stopped and listened. Other figures were walking rapidly in the direction of the Rectangle and the tent.

Surely Rachel Winslow never was happier in her life. She never had sung like that in the First church. It was a marvelous voice. What was it she was singing? Again Alexander Powers, superintendent of the machine shops, paused and listened.

"Where he leads me I will follow,
Where he leads me I will follow,
Where he leads me I will follow,
I'll go with him, with him all the way."

The brutal, stolid, coarse, impure life of the Rectangle stirred itself into new life as the song, as pure as the surroundings were vile, floated out into saloon and den and foul lodging. Some one stumbling hastily by Alexander Powers said in answer to a question:

"The tent's beginning to run over tonight. That's what the talent calls music, eh?"

The superintendent turned toward the tent. Then he stopped, and after a moment of indecision he went on to the corner and took the car for his home, but before he was out of the sound of Rachel's voice he knew that he had settled for himself the question of what Jesus would do.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

KANSAS SOLDIER'S PIE.

Biggest Ever Baked Greeted a Young Kansas Warrior.

Probably the biggest pie ever baked was the big feature at a reception to Artie Phillips, a member of the Twentieth Kansas, on his return home to Mulvane, Kan. This soldier boy, in one of his letters from Manila, said he would give four years of his life for one of those apple pies such as his mother used to make, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

At the reception tendered him by the people of Mulvane he was presented with a pie, square in form, measuring five feet one way by two feet the other. In the pie were 2½ bushels of apples, ten pounds of flour, ten pounds of sugar, six pounds of lard, two pounds of butter and a commensurate amount of other truck which goes in this kind of pastry. The pie was cut and served, and "it didn't last longer than a keg of beer in a prohibition town."

A Genius.

"Whew!" remarked the head of the firm after he had listened to the report of the chief collector. "Who can the rascal be? And all these people say that they have paid and hold a receipt?"

"Precisely. Some fellow has been going the rounds, and wherever my men are sent they find that at least 75 per cent of the bills have been paid. He has even collected a lot of bills that we considered bad. He certainly must be a villain of the deepest dye, sir, and I have taken the liberty of notifying the best private detective in the city."

"Perfectly right. Send the detective to me as soon as he puts in an appearance. We must find this villain."

Half an hour later the head of the firm and the detective were closeted together.

"Can you find him?" asked the former.

"Sure! I'm satisfied now that I know who he is, and I'll have him inside the bars before morning."

"Who's hiring you and who's going to pay for your services?"

"You, of course."

"Then I'll do my own planning. If that fellow won't take $150 a month to work for me, offer him $200. He has the kind of talent I'm looking for."—Detroit Free Press.

The Final Touch.

"Brushley was a good hearted fellow; no one ever appealed to him for a loan in vain."

"No, and wasn't his death characteristic? He was struck by lightning, you know."—Philadelphia North American.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Order For Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Oct. 24, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Bertel C. Jorgenson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Bertine Jorgaine of the County of Polk respectfully showing other things, that Bertel C. Jorgenson late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of October, A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk died intestate and being at the time of his death a resident of this county at the time of his decease, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased and praying that administration of said estate be to Andrew P. Jorgenson.

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the 17th day of November A. D. 1899, at two o'clock P. M. at the Probate office, in Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publication of a copy of this order in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing.

Dated at Crookston the 24th day of October A. D. 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Oct. 24, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Haslen Tallandsland deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Johan O. Sandberg of the County of Polk representing among other things, that Haslen Tallandsland late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the 9th day of October A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk died intestate and being at the time of his death a resident of this County at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased and praying that administration of said estate be to Andrew P. Jorgenson.

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the 17th day of November A. D. 1899, at two o'clock P. M. at the Probate office, in Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publication of a copy of this order in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing.

Dated at Crookston the 24th day of October A. D. 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of the bankrupt estate of Tollef Peterson, of the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 1st day of November, A. D. 1899, the said Tollef Peterson was duly adjudicated a bankrupt upon the creditors of the undersigned in a proceeding in said court on the

13th day of November, A. D. 1899,

at two o'clock in the afternoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Dated, Oct. 31, 1899.

OLE E. VATLE
Referee in Bankruptcy.

FRANK B. FRETHAM,
Grand Forks, N. Dak.
Attorney for Bankrupt.

PATENTS DESIGNS TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS OBTAINED

ADVICE AS TO PATENTABILITY FREE
Notice in "Inventive Age"
Book "How to obtain Patents"

Charges moderate. No fee till patent is secured. Letters strictly confidential. Address,
E. G. SIGGERS, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C.

Summons

State of Minnesota } ss. DISTRICT COURT
County of Polk } Fourteenth Judicial District.

William A. Lanctot, plaintiff, against,
The Minneapolis Trust Company, as Receiver of the Red River Valley Land Company, and Mary Rose Baker and other persons of parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

The State of Minnesota to the above named defendants:

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which is now on file in the office of the Clerk of said Court, at the Court House in the City of Crookston in said county, within twenty days after the service of this summons upon you, exclusive of the day of such service, and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff in this action will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

DEFOREST BUCKLEY,
Plaintiff's Attorney.
Crookston, Minn.

State of Minnesota, } ss. DISTRICT COURT,
Polk County. } Fourteenth Judicial District.

William A. Lanctot, plaintiff, against,
The Minneapolis Trust Company, as receiver of the North Western Guaranty Loan Company, and Mary Rose Baker and other persons of parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

Notice is hereby given that the above entitled action is brought by the above named plaintiff against the above named defendants to determine adverse claims to that certain tract of real estate situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota described as follows, to wit: The northeast quarter of section 4 in township one hundred and forty-nine of range forty-three. That the relief demanded in said complaint is to have it adjudged that the owner in fee in all of the above described real estate, and that the defendants have no right, title, estate or interest therein or to any part thereof. That no action is now pending in any court upon said, and no personal claim is made against the defendants in said action.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., July 5, 1899.

DEFOREST BUCKLEY,
Plaintiff's Attorney.

[29-34]

Final Proof.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Sept. 16, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on November 1, 1899, viz:

EDWARD E. BRATTEN.

H. E. 7020 for the S. W. ¼ section 11, Township 149 N., Range 45 W.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Jens Emmes, Knut Hoffard, Ernest Miller, and Hans Thomsen, of Crookston, Minn.

SYLVESTER PHTERSON,
Register.

[30-39]

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Thomas H. Graham, bankrupt.

To the creditors of Thomas H. Graham, of Fisher, in the County of Polk, and district aforesaid, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1899, the said Thomas H. Graham was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned at the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk in said district, on the

8th day of November, A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Oct. 31, 1899.

OLE E. VATLE
Referee in Bankruptcy.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 45-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and unpaid at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Isabella L. Chilbach and John Chilbach, her husband, mortgagors, to George Eisalen, mortgagee, bearing date the 20th day of June 1892, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of June 1893, at 11 o'clock a. m. in book 61 of mortgages, on page 1041 and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, by virtue of the power given, by virtue of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The southeast quarter (¼) of section eleven (11) in township one hundred eleven (111) in Jerome's addition to the township of Crookston according to the recorded plat thereof on file in office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, and State of Minnesota in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston, in said county and State, on the

8th day of December 1899,

at ten o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the debt of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 45-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars attorney's fees stipulated for and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, which said disbursements allowed herein, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated Oct. 5th A. D. 1899.

A. C. MILLER, GEORGE EISALEN,
Attorney. Mortgagee.
Crookston, Minnesota

[28-38]

Literary Notes.

LIPPINCOTT

The "New Lippincott" has been fortunate in its last three completenovels, and the fourth of the new series, called "The Livesey or Honor," by Mark Lee Luther, is a surprising performance from a new pen. Mr. Luther has hitherto been known only by a few strieking short stories. His first novel is a rattling tale in the vein of Richard Carvel," and of the same times, but it was written long before and has its own tender and romantic elements of interest.

The month of meteors is November, and the approaching display is expected to be unusual. All this is set forth in "The November Meteors," by Professor C. A. Young, of Princeton, in the current "New Lippincott."

SATURDAY EVENING POST

Mr. Markham's great recent poem, the Muse of Brotherhood, is one of the few really great poems that the closing years of the century have produced. In it Mr. Markham voices a lofty optimism that is at once more impressive and more convincing than the hopelessness and despair that characterize The Man with the Hoe. The Muse of Brotherhood will appear exclusively in The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, in its issue of October 21.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

The publication of what has been planned to be the most complete and up-to-date authority on etiquette begins in the November Ladies' Home Journal in a series of articles called "Good Form for All Occasions." The series will run in the magazine for a year. The authorship belongs to Mrs. Burton Kingsland, which is really the nom de plume for one of the most prominent women in New York society.

The Ladies' Home Journal has added Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, of the Boston Cooking School, to its domestic editorial corps, thus completing a trio of unusually strong domestic writers: Mrs. S. T. Rorer, Miss Maria Parloa and Mrs. Hill, all three of whom are now on the magazine's editorial staff.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY

In his new article, The Ohioans, in the November Atlantic, Mr. Hart carries his characteristic method into a new and prolific and widely interesting field: and his pictures of the Buckeye State, and of the "Buckeyes" at home and abroad, will be eagerly read and enjoyed, even by those who recognize themselves as the subject of his good-natured satire and his keen and amusing characterization. Mr. Hart's methods of observation are not superficial, and his treatment, while distinctly facetious, is not flippant; but he has the unique faculty of seeing the salient points of a community, and presenting their humorous side in a manner that is not merely amusing, but also covers a serious purpose, and a keen and thoughtful analysis of the situation.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The chief editorial topic in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for November is the war in South Africa. In "The Progress of the World" the editor gives a full exposition of the British and Boer sides of the quarrel, respectively. The subject is also treated in the department of "Current History in Caricature," and Mr. Stead contributes a character sketch of "the man of the month" in South Africa—Cecil Rhodes."

President Schurman's thoughtful addresses to the Cornell students on "The Problem of Territorial Expansion" appear in a revised and authorized form in the Review of Reviews for November. President Schurman's position as chairman of the Philippine commission just about to meet in Washington gives special importance to his expressed opinions on this subject.

GRAND GIFT DISTRIBUTION

The Most Remarkable Offer Ever Made by a Reliable Concern.

EDITOR JOURNAL: Please announce that for a limited time we will give absolutely free to every married lady sending name, address and a two cent stamp for postage, an elegant triple-silver-plated Rogers Shell Such goods sell in jewelry stores at 75 cents each. This is the most expensive advertising we have ever done, but it will make us thousands of friends and permanent customers. There is nothing to pay except a two cent stamp as a sort of guaranty of good faith. The House Furnisher, our own monthly publication, showing our line of high grade silverware and furniture, will also be sent free. But one Sugar Shell to a family.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO.
Morgan and Harrison Streets, Chicago. [28-33]

For Sale

A desirable house and lot with barn. This house is in first class condition and well located. The price is $1,100 and it is a bargain. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

WANTED—At the JOURNAL office a boy to learn the printer's trade.

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

KEY WEST.

R. Buchanan drove to Grand Forks on Tuesday.

A party of Key West folks went to Burlington on a visit Monday.

Our merchant R. P. Skarstad went to Grand Forks on business Monday.

Mrs. A. Dillenbaugh and daughter Ellen went to Grand Forks on Monday.

LENGBY.

Belle Lommen returned home from Fosston Sunday.

W. R. Curthright did business at Fosston Monday.

Agnnes Olson returned home from Bemidji Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Olson paid a visit to his parents at Brandsvold Sunday.

Carl Fredrickson, August Wiemar and Otto Olson returned from Dakota Saturday.

Torkel Hoiland, agent for the Fosston Woolen mills, returned Saturday from a trip to Red River.

Mrs. Geo. Welte, of Bagley, has been visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Fredrickson the past week.

Andrew Olson left for Fosston Monday where he will remain for a couple of weeks. O. M. Olson will have charge of the elevator during his absence.

WYLIE

Nick Eickstein is threshing this week.

Miss Kate Martin was over to Red Lake Falls Sunday, visiting her sister Mrs. Theo. LaBissonere.

A turkey raffle was the attraction at G. Gerlach's place Saturday evening.

P. M. Duff and G. H. Brady drove over to St. Hilaire Sunday, the former for sight seeing and the latter visiting relatives.

Mrs. Jacob Thill had a "Sewing Bee" Saturday and all who attended report an enjoyable time. Refreshments were also served and pronounced O. K.

Monday evening the young folks of this place presented Miss Kate Martin with a pleasant surprise. Miss Martin was equal to the occasion, and as the result an enjoyable time was had. Those present were the Misses Emma Sutor, Lizzie Power, Sadie Power, Nora Dargan and Messrs. John Dargan, H. F. McNaulty, Albert Power, J. G. Brady and P. M. Duff.

MAPLE BAY.

We are having fine weather.

Jens Rude was at the Bay Monday on business.

Cal. Horton, from Red Lake Falls, spent Sunday at home.

E. Gustavson and Sam Felsing went to Bemidji Friday on business.

Sam Felsing and Ed. Klinger made a trip to Red Lake Falls last Wednesday on business.

GENTILLY.

James Finn has Miss Roney nursing his wife. Miss Roney is a kind and careful nurse.

Rev. Father Thellion and Mr. Wheeler were Red Lake Falls visitors last Wednesday.

Sam Charron's team took a free-for-all runaway Monday night. They ran four miles and then quieted down to a slow walk. Nothing was injured.

Last Friday Joseph Sauve's engineer ran Mr. Sauve's threshing machine into a swamp. After a few hours work themachine was steered on terra firma. The engineer says "the longest way around is the shortest way home."

"Have they fixed the dump hole at the end of Jerome's bridge?" inquired a man. "Yes," replied his partner, time for 'em. I broke my cart last Saturday in the hole. Had it been my neck I'd make the town put up for it."

Yesterday evening a young man in riding down hill on his wheel determined to run a race with the wheel. He succeeded in getting ahead of the wheel for an instant, but soon saw his mistake. He lit on his head carrying the handle bars with him, and leaving the wheel to continue its course. He was not hurt.

For Sale

One lot in Jerome's addition and two lots in Sampson's addition. If you want a good lot at a low figure, ask to see them. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

LION COFFEE

Used in Millions of Homes!
Accept no substitute!
Insist on LION COFFEE, in 1 lb. pkgs.

These articles mailed FREE in exchange for lion heads cut from front of 1 lb. LION COFFEE pkgs.

Silk Umbrella (either Lady's or Gents).

Sent by express (charges prepaid), for 170 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

A very fine umbrella, made of union silk taffeta; 26-inch frame with seven ribs; steel rod and silver Congo handle. Would cost $2.00 at the store.

STRENGTH, PURITY AND FLAVOR

Best Coffee for the Money!
Try LION COFFEE and you will never use any other. It is absolutely pure Coffee and nothing but Coffee.

Fancy Gold Ring.
For 18 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Genuine Ruby Setting Gold Ring.
For 25 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

These rings are genuine rolled-gold plate, having the exact appearance and qualities of solid gold, and guaranteed by the manufacturers to wear with ordinary usage. New patterns and very popular.

To Determine the Size.

Cut a strip of thick paper so that the ends will exactly meet when drawn tightly around second joint of the finger. Lay one end on this diagram and the other on the number of the size you wish and it will send it thereat ready for bringing.

Dress-Pin Set.
Mailed free for 12 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Three pins in leather case (as illustration shows), composed of fine rolled gold plate, handsomely engraved and ruby-colored settings. Suitable for waist-pins, cuff-pins, cuff-pins, cuff-pins or as a child's set.

"Knickerbocker" Watch.
Given for 175 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Neat appearing and an excellent time-keeper. Solid nickel-silver case, with ornamental back. Nickel movement, open-faced bull dog pattern. Stem-wound and stem-set. Guaranteed a "knickerbocker" watch.

Pair of Lace Handkerchiefs.
Two extra fine cambric handkerchiefs, with imported lace patterns in the corners. Full inch hem, machine hemstitched; stylish and durable. Given for these handkerchiefs for 15 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2c. stamp.

Art Picture, "Easter Greeting"
Given for 8 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp.
A highly artistic picture, that will grace the finest drawing-room. The central figure is a typical Easter lily, and her entire Easter costume is in perfect harmony with the floral surroundings.

Sash-Belt and Buckle.
Mention your waist-measure when sending.
Mailed free for 15 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp. Latest style of fingered black Swiss gros-grain ribbon belting; stylish imitation gilt-finished silver buckle; neat, strong and fashionable.

Ladies' Watch Chain.
A double strand of best silk cord, united at intervals with colored beads; neat and substantial. For 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Gent's Watch.
Mailed free for 90 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. The movement is of the best made; stem-wound and stem-set; durable nickel-plated case; each watch accompanied by guarantee of the maker, a reliable time-keeper.

Ladies' Pocket-Book.
Large size and elegant shape. Black seal grain leather, with five separate divisions, including a nickel-plated coin purse. Given for 25 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2c. stamp.

Century Cook-Book.
368 pages of valuable cooking receipts, also treatise on the labor of the household, hints for management of the room, and information for the mere convalescent. Given for 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Flower Picture.
For 8 lion heads and a 2c. stamp. American Beauty Roses and Lilies-of-the-Valley. Size, 12x18 inches. Bright and artistic coloring.

Coin-Purse.
For 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Made of dark brown. Made of fine kid leather; clasp on hinge; nickeled frame, with strong snap fastening.

Silver Napkin-Ring.
For 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Neat and substantial. Made of durable metal, handsomely silver-plated. Two different patterns.

Table Cover.
Durable, dark-colored material, tastefully stamped for working, including floral border. Mailed free for 25 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

"The Dancing Lesson."
The green grass and trees, the little brown chicken and the girl's snow-white dress form a pleasing combination of colors. Size, 10x15 inches. Mailed free for 8 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Ladies' Pen-Knife.
For 15 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2c. stamp. Long blade, good material; handles elegantly decorated and assorted colors.

Boys' Pocket-Knife.
The "Eagle Opener;" strong, sharp blade; full-sized handle.
For 12 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

THE ABOVE ARE ONLY A FEW OF THE LION COFFEE PREMIUMS. Another list will shortly appear in this paper. Don't miss it! The grandest list of premiums ever offered!

You always know LION COFFEE by the wrapper. It is a sealed package, with the lion's head in front. It is absolutely pure if the package is unbroken. LION COFFEE is roasted the day it leaves the factory.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.
When writing for premiums send your letter in the same envelope or package with the lion heads. If more than 15 lion heads are sent, you can save postage by trimming down the margin. Ask your grocer for large illustrated premium list. Address all letters to the

WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

KITTSON.

Mr. Craft had the job of unloading the material for the engine house.

O. H. Richardson and family are contemplating moving into Crookston for the winter.

Mrs. Vining took the north bound train Tuesday morning to visit a niece in Ore. N. D.

Mrs. R. A. Smith and daughter was calling on Mrs. Vining, Mr. Price's sister, Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Winsey of Crookston were down Thursday looking after the interests of their farm.

Skunks are hunting for winter quarters as the cold winter approaches. Just ask A. J. Price. He can tell you all about it.

Business has been rushing at the elevator the last few days. Farmers about through plowing and are now are hauling in their grain.

The St. A. & D. Elevator Co. have received three cars of brick, sand and lumber. Workmen are now here building a brick engine house.

Last Thursday as the Great Northern was switching cars on the side track one of the brakemen was caught between the bumpers and considerably hurt. He was immediately taken to the Riverside Hospital at Crookston.

THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Mrs. E. M. Rogers is visiting at Little Falls.

Cruiser William Lennon is down from the woods.

Many farmers are seen on our streets and business is good.

Shortage of logs. Our saw mill runs no more nights.

P. & J. Meehan have nearly closed their lumbering interests here.

Henry Bye's homestead has been contested by R. J. Whipple of Solway.

New buildings are still going up and we hear some rumors of a new hotel.

Reservation fires are numerous. Seemingly Lo wants more dead wood to sell.

District court at Red Lake Falls called many of our citizens to that city last week.

The Thief River Falls Lumber Co. are stocking with camp goods preparatory to making a heavy cut this winter.

Young Pine Lodge I. O. O. F., of this city will dedicate its new hall with a dance and banquet Nov. 30. Everybody invited.

A decision has been given by the United States supreme court in the famous Jones-Meehan case, involving what is known as the "fraction" of Indian land on Thief river, for the Meehans. This practically gives Chief Mon-Li-Moh the right to sell or lease his entire section.

ELDRED.

Mr. Moen lost a valuable cow last Friday.

J. B. Measner, the Climax butcher, was out this way Sunday.

A Woodmen's camp will be organized this week at Nehy.

A dance will be held at Nehy Hall next Thursday evening.

E. G. Moreson and wife drove to Grand Forks last Tuesday.

Mr. Dyrud expects to leave next week for an extended visit to relatives in the eastern part of the state.

Last Saturday the machinery and stock lately held by Chas. Berg, who has left for new fields recently, were sold at sheriff's sale, at Climax. Numerous creditors are left whose accounts are thought to be a total loss. Chas. was a bright young man but became too fond of "corn juice" which proved his ruin.

TABOR.

John Brandt, our chairman of the town supervisors, was at Grand Forks last Friday on business.

John Bren went to Warren last Saturday to see his family.

About seven different vehicles accompanied Rev. J. Dobias as far as Angus on his trip to the new field.

Our blacksmith, A. Hauzlik was at Warren last Wednesday on business.

The board of supervisors are in session at the town clerk's office.

J. B. Bun was at Crookston last Wednesday.

Joseph Kresl was at Grand Forks last Monday.

P. M. Cemonsek and son Frank was at Warren last Saturday.

Rev. Father Rabstinek of Pine City will preach a sermon at Tabor church on Tuesday.

It leaks out that our neighbor Frank Khazak will build a new store at Tabor.

FOR SALE—First class restaurant outfit complete in all respects. Apply to W. W. Hoch.

ERSKINE.

Very little wheat is marketed as yet.

John Boe was in town Wednesday.

Noah Narveson did business here Tuesday.

C. F. Finsand did business at McIntosh Friday.

Guy Pratt of McIntosh did business here Monday.

Aamund Torgerson did business here Monday.

Casper Hanson did business at McIntosh Friday.

C. Soldberg returned from Crookston Wednesday.

Ole Peterson returned from the harvest fields Monday.

Andrew Johnson returned from the harvest fields Sunday.

F. O. Sustad of Minneapolis did business here this week.

We can talk with Dugdale and Mentor by Thursday evening.

Miss Emma Ostby visited at McIntosh Saturday and Sunday.

Anton Jenson, the McIntosh miller, done business here Monday.

John Tuff did business here Monday, while on his way to McIntosh.

Arthur Egley, our editor, made a business trip to Crookston Tuesday.

W. H. Bailey of Crookston got off here Sunday to make a visit with his family for a few days.

Our editor, Mr. Egley, returned from Crooston Wednesday in company with a lady friend of his.

George Chase returned from Fosston Tuesday where he has been lathing for the past ten days.

John Distad of McIntosh stopped over night here Tuesday, as he is having up a car load or two of cattle.

Svan Stenerson came up from Pelican Rapids Sunday to make a visit with his brother Gunder for a few days.

H. N. Nelson arrived from Hutchinson, Minn., Saturday to look after collections for himself and A. A. Ames.

The Milwaukee binder head agent was here the first part of this week, checking up accounts with O. Narveson & Son, their agent here.

MENTOR.

J. K. Austin Sundayed here.

J. F. Hawkins, of Crookston, Sundayed here.

J. L. Sletten drove to Maple Lake church Sunday.

The Drinkwine Bros. will finish threshing today.

Wheat is coming in very slow for this time of the year.

Hans Folvig went to Fisher Saturday returning Monday.

J. K. Messelt was in Crookston last Saturday Saturday.

Joe Tagley is out threshing on one of his farms in Woodside today.

Chas. Whitmy and wife left for Clitherall Saturday, where they are going to reside after this.

Misses. Hilman Walseth and Brusso attended the services in the Episcopal church Sunday.

Ed. Drinkwine is going to move into town next week. He is going to run a feed mill here this winter.

The Great Northern loading platform is now completed and has already been used for loading wheat.

Fred Magnus was out hunting ducks Sunday. He reports plenty of game, but we have failed to see any so far.

Call on L. N Steseide at Mentor when in need of harness goods. He carries a good supply and does work cheap and neatly.

Mr. Fuller, of Crookston, was down to Maple Lake with several thousand different kinds of fish which he planted in the lake.

P. N. Barnes, the barber moved into town today, and he will have his tonsorial parlors ready for business the last part of this week.

J. K. Messelt received a car load of apples Monday, and he can supply anybody with choice Ben Davis, Baldwins and Greenings very cheap.

The Mentor school district held its first meeting Friday night to appoint officers and select a site for the school house. F. E. LaPage was elected clerk, R. Barker, treasurer, J. O. Buhn, director. It was decided to build the school house across from the depot on the south side of the track.

Mentor had quite an excitement Saturday. Bullets and lasoos were whistling through the air so it was quite dangerous to be around, and the only cause of it was that one of Landlord LaPages hogs was to be killed. It got away from the butchers, and was running at large, so everybody joined to help capture the porker which was not accomplished until several shots had been fired.

For Sale

A good farm of 320 acres, well cultivated, has a good house and barn and close to Crookston markets. Can be bought right. For particulars call at the JOURNAL office.

GRAND FORKS.

Frank Fisk, of Larimore, visited with old time friends Wednesday.

The Henley football players are making headquarters at the Griggs.

Charley Kops has returned to the city after an extended business trip to the smaller towns.

Dr. John Merritte Dewer lectures at the M. E. church tonight on "Ultimate America."

C. S. Buck visited the cigar trade in the city last Saturday, returning to Fargo Wednesday evening.

Yesterday's football game showed what good coaching can do in the way of developing a team work.

Frank DeCamp returned this morning from Minneapolis, where he has been on a business trip for the firm.

H. Gumez, the well known merchant of Red Lake Falls, transacted business with the jobbers in the city today.

Dr. S. P. Johnson, owing to the effects of a severe cold contracted some time ago, is unable to attend to the duties of his office.

H. Young, Supreme Junior Warden of the Knights of Malta at St. Paul and one of the leading lights in the Supreme Commandry, is in the city on a visit to Judge Becker.

Ben F. Dodson, advance agent for Hoyts' "A Stranger in New York," arrived in the city today, and is distributing day photo work and a handsome likeness of Mr. Hoyt, the well known playwriter and general writer.

Another very important transfer of real estate took place yesterday. R. White becomes the owner of the large Prouty farm four miles north of the city. Mr. White claims to have one of the finest farms in the Red River Valley, having 432 acres in a block.

Former Manager Griffin, of the local telephone exchange was a passenger Saturdry evening to Minneapolis with Gen. Supt. Christie, who came to this city to accompany the popular manager to his new position as manager of the Minneapolis local exchange.

Dr. S. Rowall, who has for some time been associated with Dr. S. P. Johnson, will after tomorrow be a member of the firm of Ramsey & Rowall, dentists, having recently made an arrangement to that effect which becomes operative tomorrow. The new firm is a strong one, and will command success.

Mayor Dinnie is now the owner of new properties, near the city, which is considered by the real estate dealers to be of ordinary value. The new purchase made Saturday, comprises 120 acres of land, and was formerly a possession of S. N. McLaughlin, but at the time of the purchase the land was in the hands of the Merchants National bank. There are 40 acres whithin the city limits, which is the remainder of the quarter, and it is thought the mayor will soon be in possession of the whole 160. It is understood that $5,000 cash was the consideration for which the transfer was made.

McINTOSH

J. M. Jorgensen's new residence is completed and will soon be occupied.

The Oppegsard restaurant has adopted the name, The Palace. It deserves the name.

The emergetic M. L. Forth has added to his livery service some valuable horses to supply the growing demand.

Knute Jacobson is tolling back and forth from meals on crutches, caused by an attempt to chop wood in the dark.

A literary society and debating club has been organized by our young people. Meetings are to be held at the school house.

An auction sale will be held at A. Solberg's place in November. He intends to sell all his property here and move back to Norway.

Visitors in the city this week: Ed. Hairick, of Grit: Ole Lee, of Sheelin: Rev. J. Sather, of Fosston: J. Paalsrud of Crookston, Nancy Egeland, of Espetveit.

The new city hall is going to be a great and useful ornament to our city, and citizens are already looking up in pride at the new born thing as it grows and rises, and assumes shape and beauty.

FISHER

F. J. Worden of Bygland was on our streets Monday.

Fred Lusian went to Crookston Saturday to take in the foot ball game.

J. B. Cyr, the barber, left for Bemidji Saturday morning for a month's visit.

J. Schefstad, the noted violinist, gave a concert at the opera house Saturday evening. He was assisted by Prof. and Mrs. Riggs. The music was very fine and he showed himself to be an artist on the violin.

The opera house was well filled, in fact crowded, last Wednesday evening, by our people to see and hear the McPhee company play "Bonnie, the Meddler," and so far we have not heard of a single person being disappointed. The play was good and the characters well taken by people well adapted to their parts.

Births.

HALLETTE

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hallette on Thursday Oct 26, a boy.

The Finest Limited Train.

From St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago is the Burlington electric lighted and steam heated. Every comfort that other trains have and some that no others have. Remember this when buying railroad tickets.

Especially for Ladies.

Are those splendid compartment cars on the Burlington Limited from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago. All the comforts of home including an electric heater for your curling iron. When you send for a railroad ticket, insist on having it over the Burlington.

Storm Sash. Storm Sash.

We have a complete stock—and our prices are right. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company.

—Now is the time to RE-UP for winter We have quite a accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Co. Telephone 40.

—Go to the Strawbridge's for dress goods, flannels, blankets, shoes, etc.

WAREHOUSE AT SHANGHAI.

It Will Be an Aid to American Exporters in China.

The project of establishing a mammoth warehouse at Shanghai, China, where American manufacturers and exporters may store goods intended for the American trade with the orient seems now assured of success. The credit for the successful promotion of this great enterprise is due to the National Association of Manufacturers. In a Washington dispatch to the Philadelphia Public Ledger. This association sent out invitations to a number of leading firms all over the country to participate in the undertaking, and nearly all business houses approached have joined the new company, which will be known as the Shanghai Warehouse association.

The idea of starting the enterprise has occupied the attention of the Manufacturers' association for some time past, but not until after the opening of the National Export exposition at Philadelphia did the plans take definite shape. The Philadelphia exposition has opened the eyes of manufacturers and exporters to the vast possibilities of trade with the east, and one of the practical results was the decision to carry out the Shanghai warehouse scheme without further delay. A site, on which the promoters of the plan had an option, has been secured, and a suitable building for displaying and storing American goods will be erected thereon. Mr. Y. L. Boech, who has spent a number of years in China in a commercial capacity, will be manager of the warehouse, and as soon as the organization of the company has been perfected, preparations for the receiving of goods and samples will be made. It is expected that the warehouse will be built and ready for occupancy in considerably less than a year's time.

What Cuban Independence Would Mean.

Of the 19 different nations which exist in America, there are hardly three within whose territory civilized man may live in peace.—Havana Epoch.

PISNER'S Rheumatism and Kidney Cure. A sure cure for rheumatism and kidney troubles. Those who drink water from surface wells, which is nearly always charged with alkali are nearly all more or less afflicted with rheumatism and kidney trouble. Ask your druggist for PISNER'S RHEUMATISM AND KIDNEY CURE. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail by C. E. MISNER, Crookston, Minn.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss
LUCAS COUNTY.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

A. W. GLEASON,
SEAL Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials. free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all druggists, price 75c.
Halls Family Pills are the best.

Some people punish their feet—others wear the comfortable

Kellogg, Johnson & Co's Shoes

They wear.

KELLOGG, JOHNSON & CO.
ST. PAUL, MINN

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

Economy

Is the Road to Wealth. There are several tracks in the road, however, but the principal and shortest is buying what you require at the very lowest possible prices. Our front door is built right over this track. We can prove it if you give us an opportunity. We find our present mode of doing business most economical to us and we are willing to share its advantages with our customers.

Slocum's CASH GROCERY

CHASE BLOCK, BROADWAY.

ED. ERICKSON,

DEALER IN

All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ... Season ...

Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides. Stall fed Beef..... .....a Specialty

SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

COAL AND WOOD

VANCE AND STONE

A "Love" of a Bonnet

Is frequently the cause of a quarrel in the family. Ours are not so expensive as to cause one. We have a large number of very lovely ones that are veritable family peace makers. Call and examine them.

Reckitt Block, and St. L. M. Bassett.

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Polk County Journal.

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1899 No. 31

Historical Society

BRILLIANT METEORS.

Visible in the Sky Near the Constellation Leo In Large Numbers—Watch for Them.

ONCE IN THIRTY-THREE YEARS

Display may be Seen on the Coming Tuesday and Wednesday Nights.

Most every year about the 14th of November, numerous meteors are visible in the sky near the Constellation Leo. Once in 33 years at that date, very great numbers of them are seen, and the effect is said to be brilliant, almost like that of the piece of fireworks called "the mine."

The last brilliant display occurred in November 1866, and as we may expect the next one on the coming Tuesday and Wednesday nights, perhaps it will be of interest at this time to speak about the nature of those bodies which flash into light and fade from sight. We all have seen them, and perhaps called them "shooting stars." They are simply small masses of matter; many of them probably not larger than a stone which we could toss with the hand, and most of them very small, perhaps mere particles of matter. It is believed that as many as 12,000,000 meteors, which could be seen by unaided vision, enter the earth's atmosphere every day, while the telescopic meteors would quadruple that number.

Astronomers speak of this matter as cosmic dust, or dust of the universe. The elements of these bodies are the same as the elements of the earth. There are some specimens of meteoric iron which have been found. I have seen some of them at Harvard, Amherst and Yale Colleges and elsewhere. When these meteors fell, they were very hot, and buried themselves deeply into the earth by their force of gravity. Some of these flashing masses have been known to explode in the air almost like rockets, and their pieces scatter over a territory as large as a township.

The use of the spectroscope convinces us that the constituent matter of the planets, and probably of the stars, as well as the cosmic dust (the meteors) is composed of the same chemical elements as the matter of the planet which we inhabit. The meteors become heated and shine with such brilliancy because of their contact with the atmosphere. This extends perhaps four or five hundred miles in height. It is much rarified, however, beyond the first seventy miles. Outer space is dark and cold. The smallest and lightest body would move there as steadily as the earth moves. The long train of light connected with a meteor is due to the effect of the rapidly moving flash upon the eye. A like effect is produced by the waving of a brakeman's lantern.

As regards the distance of the meteors where they flash into sight, scientific scholars think they are not more than a hundred miles, and when within forty miles of the earth, they become so heated as to dissipate into gasses, which the air then cools into dust. Probably no meteors are seen which are upwards of two or three hundred miles distant. The reason why we have the unusual number every November, and the extraordinary number every 33 years, is that the earth crosses the track of the meteoric groups at these times. These meteors move about the sun in innumerable groups, each meteor having its own orbit, and making its circuit in a little more than 33 years. The orbit of the earth does not lie wholly inside, nor wholly outside of the orbits of the meteors. Its eccentricity varies from the eccentricity of theirs. These orbits are very diverse in eccentricity, some coming quite near to the sun in their perihelion point, and others far from the great body. Their rapidity of motion consequently varies—some moving nearly 30 miles per second, and others not one-twentieth of that. This diversity of rapidity and eccentricity accounts for meteors being seen at almost any time. Once in 33 years the earth moving at the rate of 18 miles per second, crosses the main track of the meteors just as they are using the track. Hence the extraordinary display. At the 19th of second crossing the earth passes just before, and at the thirty-fourth crossing, just after the main body of the meteors have passed.

Perhaps in a future paper a few words about the constitution and motions of comets will be of interest.

HERMAN P. FISHER.

FOR SALE—First class restaurant outfit complete in all respects. Apply to W. W. Hoch.

THE MIDDLE RIVER DITCH

Was Officially Inspected by the Drainage Commission.

Last Saturday Ezra G. Valentine, president of the Red River Valley drainage commission, Prof. W. R. Hoag, engineer, and J. J. Lomen, assistant state auditor, of the commission, with L. A. Rosing, Gov. Lind's private secretary, and Engineer Whitten, representing the Great Northern Railway Company, made an official inspection of the Middle River ditch, located near Argyle in Marshall county. James Kennedy, of Fargo, and P. McDonald, of Duluth, were the contractors who constructed the ditch, and the commission was met here by Mr. McDonald who accompanied them on their tour of inspection. This completes the work of the commission until more funds are provided and this should be done at the next session of the legislature. Prof. Hoag has spent considerable time this fall inspecting the various ditches in the valley, without compensation, President Hill, of the Great Northern Railway, generously furnishing the transportation that the work of inspection might be thorough, and a complete report of the condition of the ditches and the benefits resulting therefrom might be made so the people. From an interview with the commission the JOURNAL representative learned that the ditches were found to be in good condition and the benefits to the surrounding country have been of untold value.

Dame Rumor Says

That butter and eggs are bringing good prices.

That saw dust makes a good banking for the house.

That Grand Forks is to have a new linseed oil mill.

That Thanksgiving comes on the last day of this month.

That fat stock is bringing 3? per hundred on the Chicago market.

That venison is still so deer that the JOURNAL has not been supplied.

That the brick walls for the new electric light plant will soon be up.

That the JOURNAL is receiving from forty to fifty new subscriptions every week.

That the biggest fool in the country is the one who stands up and argues against facts.

That the old Koeppe building has been moved off and Main street is face more clear.

That American patriotism will always be exalted by a thoroughly American government.

That the Japanese have caught the north pole enthusiasm and are fitting out an arctic expedition.

That it is the time of year when the inspector is busy, and fake adviser is abroad in the land.

That prosperity, morality and intelligence are conspicuous in republican counties and places.

That newspaper advertising brings better returns to the merchant than the fakir who never saw saw.

That quite a number were late to dinner Tuesday, waiting to hear the familiar whistle of the big saw mill.

That some men are considered wise because they are considerate enough to keep their opinions to themselves.

That the pickle crop is light and the price of pickles is likely to follow the general tendency toward advancement.

That the cold weather and heavy snow storms south and east confirms us in the belief that Minnesota is about the best state in the union.

That Prof. Riggs and his popular band will give the first of a series of band concerts at the Grand opera house next Wednesday evening.

That Bryan made seventeen speeches in one day on a flying trip across Nebraska. He must have been pretty nearly as tired as his audiences.

That anti-expansionists refuse to recognize the President's Thanksgiving proclamation and will appoint a day for groaning on their own hook.

That the fisher Bulletin has a stick in pickle for the Tribune of this city. Now the combined clippings under the head of "Fisher Special Correspondence."

That Minnesota has 700 successful creameries, patronized by 54,000 farmers, receives the milk from 400,000 cows and pays to its patrons about $10,000,000 annually.

That some of our farmers complain that their potatoes grew so big this year that they have no little ones to feed their pigs. This might be good argument for the populists.

That E. D. Childs is about the whole thing in the milk business in this neck of the woods. He has several agencies established to distribute his milk. He has covered the Duluth line as far as Cass Lake.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY.

Forty-five New Routes in Minnesota.

Thomas Howard, the special post-office agent for establishing rural free delivery in Minnesota, has made a report to which he says:

There is not only a desire but pronounced demand for the establishment of routes throughout the state of Minnesota, and the department will undoubtedly be called upon within the next six months to authorize the laying out of routes at forty-five places at least. I have talked with people in general and with prominent citizens of nearly every county of Minnesota, and the unvarying opinion in every instance was that routes should be laid out as soon as possible. A large majority of persons consulted stated that it would have proved a godsend to the farming community of the West if the service had been inaugurated years ago, thereby serving as a means for doing away with the deadly monotony of farm life. It is a deplorable fact and one easily demonstrable by reference to the records of the insane asylum of this state, that isolation resulting from infrequency of communication between many farming communities and the outside world is one of the most notable causes of insanity, especially among women. Beyond a doubt many of the women living on farms in this state would have been saved from incarceration in hospitals for the insane if facilities for obtaining news and for exchange of thought insured by a free delivery service had been placed at their disposal earlier.

Mr. Howard has laid out seven routes, four at Cottage Grove, one at Waseca, one at Austin and one at Stillwater.

DISH VS. SHOE DRILLS.

An Interesting Experiment Carried on by Prof. Hoverstad.

The following is the result of an experiment made at the Experiment station for the purpose of determining the relative merits of disk and shoe drills.

Grain	Disk	Shoe	Dist. between Disks or Shoes
Oats	88.7 bu.	98. bu	6 in., Chain drag
Barley	14.1 "	19.3 "	6 in., "
"	13.4 "	19.3 "	8 in., "
Flax	12.1 "	14.9 "	6 in., "
"	8.8 "	9.5 "	8 in., "
"	7.2 "	9.5 "	8 in., Chain "
	90.7 bu.	81.5 bu.

In many sections of the United States the disk drill is growing in favor rapidly. It is greatly valued where they sow grain in the corn stubble. In a dry season the disk harrow seems doubtless to advantageous. In a very wet season the shoe drill would be preferable. Where there is about the right amount of moisture probably there would not be much difference. More experimentation will be carried on to get nearer the truth of the matter.

Creamery Statistics.

The Chicago Daily Produce presents some interesting figures concerning the product of the average cow in Minnesota, and the operating expenses. It appears that the milk yield of the average creamery cow is about 3,500 pounds and the average butter yield is about 160 pounds. The largest average mild yield is in Steele county, 4,660 pounds to a creamery cow, and Freeborn comes next 4,450 pounds. Rice shows 3,700 pounds of milk a year per cow. Freeborn leads with the highest average butter yield per cow, 211 pounds in a year. Next in order come Steele with 200, Brown 189 and Rice 171 pounds per cow. In some of the new counties the average butter yield per cow drops as low as 100 pounds. The average of the state is about 160. The books of the creameries of 23 counties, representing 2,800 of the state's 52,000 creamery patrons show that the average yield is one pound of butter for each 22 pounds of milk received. In Steele county the average butter product per patron is very near 1,000 pounds. Rice county comes next with 1,764 pounds. Goodhue is only 1,040 pounds. The average of 20 principal creamery counties is 1,370 pounds.

Not an Easy guy.

Some times the foxey humo men in the large cities steer the wrong kind of men against their layouts, as was proven in Minneapolis last week. A young man by the name of Shark was hied in a gambling house and after he had lost his money he pulled a gun, took all the money in sight and left. He was a arrested one appeared against him he was turned loose, $215 ahead.

THEY LIKE OUR BUTTER

The Britishers have a Trial at It and Pronounce It a Decided Improvement

RIVALS THEIR BEST COLONIAL

England may Become an Important Purchaser if Properly Treated.

The following from the London Grocer of Oct. 14 will be of interest to Minnesota creamery men and produce merchants:

An interesting trial shipment of American butter arrived on the London market this week per the "St. Paul," and was on view in Tooley street. It represented variously treated butters from four different dairy states, namely, Nebraska, Illinois, Minnesota and Iowa. All the butters were made from separated cream, excepting two from gathered cream, and it is curious that the latter turned out the worst of the whole parcel.

The consignment from Minnesota, and the unbranded butter from Nebraska, made a particularly good impression, and, although not quite equal to the best colonial, show a marked improvement on the states' butter hitherto received; and no doubt careful study of the market requirements will enable these shippers so to improve their quality as to compete successfully against the highest grades now reaching this country from Canada. The dairying industry has been rapidly developing in the United States during the past few years, but hitherto American butter has been coming over very spasmodically, the manufacturers evidently studying their home requirements exclusively, and simply sending over such surpluses as were not wanted on their market without paying particular attention in the preparation of these shipments to the altered conditions required for English tastes. When the increased output of dairy produce, the importance of this market has now attracted the interest of the more enterprising firms, who hope by cultivating the English taste to secure a permanent foot hold here.

The Sulu Group and the Sultan

Prof. Schurman, of the Philippine commission, who was one of the first Americans to interview the Sultan of Sulu after the United States had acquired the sovereignty of the Philippines, said of the cock and bull stories, which have been circulated about this government and the Sultan of Sulu: "It seems to me that were it not for the ignorance displayed, the present hue and cry about polygamy and slavery in these islands would be absolutely criminal.

In taking over the Sulu group we have acquired no rights of any sort there except those bequeathed us by Spain. She was bound by her agreement with the Sultan not to interfere with the religion or customs of the islands, and it would be most unwise for us to attempt this by force, when it can ultimately be accomplished by the slower methods of civilization and education. The Sulu group proper contains about 100,000 inhabitants. They are all Mohamedans, as are about 150,000 of the residents of Mindanao, directly east. To attempt to interfere with the religion of these people would precipitate one of the bloodiest wars in which this country has ever engaged. Polygamy is a part of their religion, and the slavery, about which so much is being said just now, is a mild type of feudal bondage. I firmly believe that an attempt to interfere by force with the customs in the Sulu islands at this time would bring on a bloody and wholly unnecessary war."

A Colonial Bureau,

The colonial affairs will be directed from the war department a Washington dispatch says: It has practically been decided that a colonial bureau will be established to take directly in charge all matters pertaining to the outlying dependencies of the United States. The office will be a bureau of the war department, and not a separate department, as has been suggested, and the matter has so far advanced that the selection of a chief of the bureau is now under consideration.

Capt. Dreyfus Sick.

A dispatch from Carpenteras, department of Vaotas France to which place former Capt. Dreyfus went after the conclusion of his trial, says that Dreyfus is confined to his bed by illness, the result of a cold.

AN INCIPIENT FIRE

What Might have been a Fire was Nipped in Time.

Wednesday morning about 1:30 o'clock as one of the employes of W. W. Hoch's billiard rooms was preparing to close up the place, he noticed the room filling with smoke and smelled burning wood. He immediately started out to find the fire and discovered a box of excelsior in the basement burning quite briskly. With the assistance of a couple of men, who happened to be in the room above and several pails of water from a handy faucet he succeeded in putting out the fire with practically no damage resulting. The origin of the fire is a mystery as no one had been in the basement during the day and no fire is ever kept in there nor in the room over head. The timely discovery is very lucky as the damage would have been considerable and the flames got a headway, the rooms being in the large Rickett block that structure would have been greatly in danger of total distruction.

THE LIST OF JURYMEN.

Names of Those Who Will Try Cases at Next Term of Court.

The following is a list of the jurymen, grand and petit, who will set at the next term of court, Dec. 13.

GRAND JURY.

Iver Amundson, Badger.
E. Pederson, Brandsvold.
E. O. Haves, Parnell.
James Gilmore, Nesbit.
S. S. Fricley, Sandsville.
L. I. Benoit, Crookston.
Thos. Frazer Grand Forks.
A. R. Amber, Fosston.
John H. Strande, Chester.
Jno. Juverud, Rosebud.
Joseph Larvarier, Hammond.
E. D. Childs, Crookston.
W. M. Davidson. Keyatone.
E. P. Tuff, Garden.
I. N. Grover, Chester.
M. H. Holte, Erskine.
E. O. Stortreen, Vineland.
John J. Johnson, Garden.
Anton Lindem, Highland.
Alex. Sampson, Andover.
C. B. Merrill, Fisher.
Fred Brunnelle, Parnell.

PETIT JURY

Jno. Tice, Grove Park.
C. Westerberg, Crookston.
Jos. Couvrette, Kertsonville.
John Roome, Roome.
A. G. Adams, Tilden.
J. W. Galloway, Rosebud.
Burt Cochrane, Crookston.
A. K. Austin, Crookston.
C. C. Barnaas, Fairfax.
Thos. Tibbin, Parnell.
Ole Oleson, Russia.
Jno. Love, Fanny.
B. Haveson, Sletten.
Gust Eklund, Rosebud.
E. C. Johnson, Knute.
K. K. Knutson, Bygland.
Charles Richardson, Farley.
David Corbin, Gentilly.
Jas. H. Enright, Huntsville.
D. T. Mitchell, Godfrey.
Erick E. Steepple, Badger.
Halvor S. Soli, Winger.
Harry Johnson, Brandsvold.
Christ Haason, Lowell.

Married.

WARRING-LABREE.

A quiet Wedding occurred at the residence of N. Campbell, last Sunday, when Stephen Warring and Miss Mallinda LaBree were united in marriage. Mr. Warring is a well known and influential citizen of Marshall county, and Miss LaBree is a sister of Mrs. Campbell and is well known in Crookston. Only a few intimate friends of the parties were present. The happy couple were made the recipients of numerous handsome and useful presents. They left Monday morning for Thief River Falls, their future home.

TICE-DENNISON.

TICE-DENNISON.

On Thursday afternoon Nov. 2, in the parlors of the Congregational church a very pretty double wedding occurred, Rev. Herman P. Fisher officiating. The grooms were Messrs. William and Edward Tice, the sons of Dea. Albert D. Tice, of Mentor, and the brides were Misses. Hannah A May and Maud, the daughters of George Denison of the same town. All these young people have grown up together in Mentor, their parents being among the old and respected citizens of that place. On Friday morning the young couples returned to Mentor where they will make their future homes.

Call on I. N Stenelde at Mentor when in need of harness goods. He carries a good supply and sells work cheap and neatly.

BAND CONCERT PROGRAM

For the Opening Concert of the Winter Series.

Next Wednesday evening, Nov. 15, will occur the first of a series of band concerts to be given by the Crookston band, monthly, during the fall and winter.

The series of concerts given by the band last winter were very successful and thoroughly enjoyed by all who heard them and indeed there were but few who did not attend.

It is, therefore, with pleasure that all our people look forward to the concert announced for next Wednesday evening. Here is the program:

PART I.

Band—(a) Caesar's Triumphal March—Mitchell
—(b) played by Hinghug bros. Band.)
(b) Short and Sweet Polka for two cornets—Short—Messrs. Hughg and Bonk—(Band accompaniment)
Violin—Fantasia, appassionata—Vieuxtemps—
Mr Schofstad.
Band—(a) Willow Grove March—Sorrentino—
Played by the famous Bands Rossa.)
(b) Fantasia—Old Folks at home"—
Arr. Dalbey, with variations for Trombones, Clarionets, Cornets and Baritone.
Short intermission.

PART II.

Orchestra—(a) Campin' on de ole Swance—
Smith.
(b) Overture "Le Cid". Arr. Tobani.
Song—Silent Night—Novin—
Messrs Nordh and Pudd.
Orchestra—"The Chicken Brigade"—
Introducing Lasses Coon melody.
Vocal Strain—
"Pull in, you blind crows,
Jine de Parson's Brigade.
We'll rob all de hen roosts
Wid de Dark'ness Brigade
So, Coons, draw yo' sashes, now
And don't work too slow.
Aud hab dem big roosters
For dey am she' to crow."
The roosters crow, and the Coon Brigade is discovered.
Violin—(a) Hungarian Air—
(b) Norwegian Dance—Halvor-en—
Mr. Schofstad
Band—"Manilla Heroes March"—Hall

WILL BE A GOOD GAME.

The High School Footballists to Play a St. Paul Team.

The high school boys have arranged a game for next Saturday with the Central High school team of St. Paul, who have a record as being almost invincible in their class. The local boys being also in possession of a pretty good reputation, causes us to look forward to a game worth seeing. Coach Finlayson has the boys hard at work and will make them play for all there is in them. The people should take an interest in this game and show their appreciation by turning out in good numbers, thereby assisting the boys to make expenses.

Their Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Walsh entertained a large number of their friends at their fine new residence last Tuesday evening, the event being the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. Quite a number of out of town guests were present, among whom were Mr. Walsh's father, Thos. Walsh, J. B. and Mrs. Wineman, Mrs. C. G. Conran and Miss Abbie Walsh, of Grand Forks. After the host and hostess had received the congratulations of those present, the evening was spent very enjoyably at card playing, music and dancing. This being their silver event Mr. and Mrs. Walsh received a large number of beautiful presents of that metal along with the heartiest well wishes of the donors, for a long and happy life.

High School Notes.

Every class in the high school has organized and elected president, vice president, secretary and an executive committee of three. The president of each class has also appointed three committees one each on colors, class flower and music.

Singing has been introduced into the high school, and every morning before the beginning of the regular work, the students are treated to a little concert, consisting of solo, quartet and chorus singing. Monday Miss Alice LaBree rendered a solo in a very pleasing manner and Wednesday morning Miss Alva Bates dedicated the performance of Miss LaDue.

The football boys are practicing hard for their game with the St. Paul central's Saturday. It will be a hot game and everybody should turn out to see it.

Professor Williams Here.

Prof. H. S. Williams, of Milwaukee, has called at our office and exhibited his Medicated Air Treatment for catarrh. Williams treats all pulmonary troubles with Medicated Air consisting of balsams and pats no solid material on the stomach. He gives formulas with his treatment so any one can procure his medicine at any drug store when he takes his departure. Mr. Williams comes highly recommended.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE FUNNY MAN'S BEST GIRL.

BY HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1899, by C. W. Hooke.

You can't pick up a comic paper without reading about me. I am the funny man's best girl. He loves me better than a mother-in-law, or his Chicago girl with the big feet. I am the homely type, writer girl who is employed by the gentleman with the jealous wife.

Few of my readers can realize how hard it is to be a living joke; to be a sister to the lemmon peel on the sidewalk and to the countryman's carpet bag. Let me assure you that it is very trying.

I wasn't always a homely girl. Five years ago I was quite pretty, and at that period of my life the humble typewriting instrument was far below the level of my ambitions. I expected to marry a rich man, but the rich man married somebody else, and very inopportunely for me, because it was just at that time that we all became poor. My mother's little fortune went to Australia in a trustee's pocket and never came back. So my sister and I had to go to work.

Helen, who was a great expert with the camera and had won prizes in amateur contests until she couldn't have carried her models in a basket, got a position in a fashionable "studio" at $7 a week, and I studied stenography and typewriting. I worked hard and became good at my trade.

I began my professional career at $5 a week and worked up to $15. Every dollar advance cost me two pounds of flesh. I forgot how to dress or how to fix my hair. There were wrinkles around my eyes, and my mouth was set in an expression suggesting that I fed upon woman typewriters and other scrap iron. I had stood it well enough until Helen lost her position and mother fell ill. Then I began to do extra work in the evenings and on Sundays, and that was the end of my youth. Oh, it's all true enough—I was a homely old maid at 23!

When I, too, lost my position last spring, I felt—well, as soured and old as I looked. However, it was not my fate long to endure the misery of the unemployed. In less than a fortnight I had secured a position as secretary to Albert Hamlin, the well known lawyer, as the newspapers say.

I never shall forget that day. It was a strange mélange of joy and woe, like a life condensed. In the first place, when I was waiting to have my trial I prayed heaven to give me the position, because I wanted so much to spend my days in Mr. Hamlin's offices. They are high up in the Brayton building, and from the windows one can see everything.

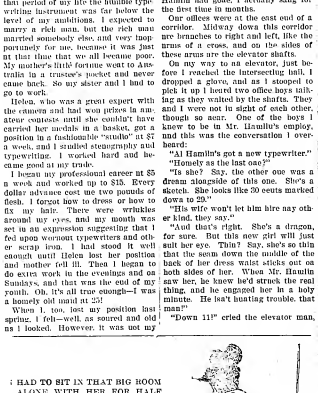
All the rooms in Mr. Hamlin's suit were big, handsome, elegant. So was Mr. Hamlin himself. And he looked so young! I felt old beside him, though he was born ten years before I was.

He greeted me as if he really was glad to see me, and of course I never thought there could be a reason for it aside from the courtesy that properly belonged to a man of such an aspect.

The trial of my abilities which followed seemed brief and easy, probably because I expected fate to her the way to so good a place with unusual difficulties.

I think I breathed twice—maybe three times—in the ten minutes during which Mr. Hamlin was examining my work, but when he said, "This is extremely satisfactory, Miss Blisdell," I drew one breath long enough to make my average right.

Then he offered me the position of secretary—he was careful to say secretary—and inquired if $20 a week would be satisfactory in the beginning. Twenty dollars a week! Twenty gold nuggets in the Klondike! Was it satisfactory? Well—



I HAD TO SIT IN THAT BIG ROOM ALONE WITH HER FOR HOUR AN HOUR.

I went to work immediately and really had quite a busy day, though it ended before 5 o'clock.

"You won't find me so diligent on the average," said Mr. Hamlin as he prepared to leave the office. "I usually wind it up about 4. Can you be here at 10 o'clock tomorrow?"

Ten to 4! Was I a banker?

All this was too good to be true, and it came to me with an especial shock of joy because I had just had my first experience of that peculiar fear which comes from the failure to get work—the sensation that all doors are shut and only the way that leads down to abject poverty is left open. When Mr. Hamlin had gone, I actually sang for the first time in months.

Our office were at the east end of a corridor. Midway down this corridor are branches to right and left, like the arms of a cross, and on the sides of these arms are the elevator shafts.

On my way to an elevator, just before I reached the intersecting hall, I dropped a glove, and as I stooped to pick it up I heard two office boys talking as they waited by the shafts. They and I were not in sight of each other, though so near. One of the boys I knew to be in Mr. Hamlin's employ, and this was the conversation I overheard:

"Al Hamlin's got a new typewriter."

"Homely as the last one?"

"Is she? Say, the other one was a dream alongside of this one. She's a sketch. She looks like 70 seats marked down to 29."

"His wife won't let him hire any other kind, they say."

"And that's right. She's a dragon, for sure. But this new girl will just suit her eye. Think? Say, she's so thin that the seam down the middle of the back of her dress waist sticks out on both sides of her. When Mr. Hamlin saw her, he knew he'd struck the real thing, and he engaged her in a holy minute. He isn't hunting trouble, that man?"

"Down 111" cried the elevator man, and down went my heart; down, down into the subcellar of despondency.

Isn't it silly to use to so hurt by the rough side of the truth? Those boys hadn't told me any news about myself, and why should I care for their opinions? Yet, while I stood there waiting for the next car two big tears of misery welled out of my eyes, and each found a good, deep wrinkle to run away in.

It was mean of fate to spoil my day. I had been so happy, and now I must think all the way home that this big, kindly man whose praise of my work had pleased me so much had really employed me only because I was "a sketch."

There's no doubt that I was hurt. The next morning, though I felt it to be regardless my brand and button, I ventured to fix my hair a bit and make my dress look a little more becoming.

Mr. Hamlin seemed to notice the change in my appearance, and I thought he showed surprise. He was in the office only about an hour that forenoon, and I had nothing to do while he was away except watch the vessels in the East river and wonder why I couldn't be cheerful any more.

About 12 o'clock Mrs. Hamlin suddenly appeared. I had to sit in that big room alone with her for half an hour, and it was a trial. She pretended not to know that I was alive, but she had studied me from all points of view before she had been there ten minutes.

After awhile I got scared, and I began surreptitiously to muss up my hair, pull my necktie around to one side and generally disguise my many attractions. I put on the sourest face that mortal ever wore and cuffed the typewriter as if I had been a hired nurse and it a baby.

Mr. Hamlin didn't come back when he was expected, and by and by the lady took her hatchet face and cold eyes out of the office. I heard her a sigh of relief. It seemed to me that I had passed the inspection fairly well.

It was wonderful in the days and weeks that followed how Mr. Hamlin was always out when Mrs. Hamlin called. I grew to regard him as a supernatural being, endowed with powers of perception entirely beyond those of ordinary mortals. He must have known when she was coming. I have seen him jump right up in the middle of his work, run his hat on and hurry away, and inside of three minutes Mrs. Hamlin would be announced.

After awhile she began to talk to me. She was always perfectly polite, perfectly cold, utterly disagreeable. She communicated absolutely nothing. It was all questions.

How could that marriage ever have happened? I used to wonder. Marches are made in heaven, they say, and surely the reasons for most of them are known only there, where all mysteries are clear.

During July, August and a part of September I saw nothing of Mrs. Hamlin. She must have been out of the city. Singularly enough—perhaps—Mr. Hamlin, though so rich and really not very busy, remained in town.

In those few months I perceived that a great danger threatened me. Kindness, uniform consideration, reasonable work, the end of worry—all produced their effect upon me. Happiness is the best tonic. Helen and I, being both at work at last, were able to send mother to the seashore, and she wrote of wonderful improvement in her health. I think Mr. Hamlin heard about her, for just before she went away he raised my salary so that the burden of added expense really did not count.

And now for the peril. With all these cheerful things happening, and despite the summer heat, I began to grow young again. I gained 15 pounds. My face looked smooth as a young girl's even in the crowded mirror of my boarding house, and I got a color like the famous millionaire's. I trembled for Mrs. Hamlin's return.

Back she came toward the end of September, and when she first visited the office, if she had been an artist engaged to paint my picture she couldn't have studied me more closely. I was scared, and the next day I came down to the office almost in disguise. I looked just as bad as I could.

In the afternoon of that day Mr. Hamlin was standing by the window with a fieldglass in his hand, and he called me to his side to look at a beautiful steam yacht that was coming down the river.

"That's my yacht," he said. "I haven't had much chance to use her this summer, but I'm going to cruise in her nearly all winter. I can leave here all right. My brother will be free to take up the work. He's been so occupied this summer with the affairs of the Wall Street National that he's had his office in the bank building. But that's all over, and he's coming back here. So I'll go and take a rest. My health requires it."

And he laughed.

"Then you won't need me any more?" said I, and it seemed to me that I spoke calmly enough, but somehow the strength had all gone out of me, so that the fieldglass, which I was still absurdly holding at the level of my eyes, dropped from my hand.

Mr. Hamlin caught it before it reached the floor. I never saw anything so quick and dexterous as that. It was lucky for me that he was standing near, for the glass was jeweled and worth I don't know how much money.

"Oh, how fortunate!" I exclaimed. "If I had broken it"—

"If we had broken it," he interrupted. "Al's wife would have given us fits. It belongs to her. She left it here the other day, and I tell you Mrs. Al isn't a person to be trifled with. You've seen her?"

"Yes," said I, as if speaking in a hypnotic trance, "but I—thought—she—was—Mrs.—Albert—Hamlin."

"You've heard her spoken of as Mrs. Al Hamlin perhaps," he said. "Al is my brother. I'm usually called Hal by my intimates. The lady in question is Mrs. Al, thank heaven! I really beg her pardon. She's a most excellent woman, but you know I'm not married, and so I speak after the disagreeable fashion of bachelors. Let me see, what were we talking about? I shouldn't need you any more or something like that. Really it's nonsense, you know. I couldn't get along without you."

"But you're going away on your yacht!"

"True, true!" said he nervously.

"Could I be of use to your brother while you are gone?" I asked. "Perhaps"—

"My brother!" said he. "Oh, no! Alfred has a secretary. You should see her, poor girl. Mrs. Alfred has curious taste in the matter of secretaries for her husband—and you couldn't do at all. For particulars consult the mirror. You're getting more and more unfit for Alfred's secretary every day."

"Now, please, don't be offended. You must know that you're so pretty I can't have to put you with your back to me in order that I may do any work at all, and even then your hair—my heart is all tangled up in it this minute and never'll get away."

"Jennie, I want you to go in the yacht with me. I want you to be my wife this very month, and then we'll sail away, heaven knows where! The sea is wide, but I will love you a year for every wave on all the oceans!"

I didn't hear any more. I died right there and woke in paradise, and he was still speaking, still telling me that he loved me—me, the homely old maid!

MICA AXLE GREASE

It's easy to haul a big load up a big hill if you grease the wagon wheels with

MICA Axle Grease

Quick and Years only it's the best lubricant that you can buy. Sold everywhere. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture ....AND.... Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a home.

CROOKSTON, MINN.

FAST TIME

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

ONLY 2½ DAYS

From ST. PAUL, and MINNEAPOLIS to the PACIFIC COAST.

Only 2 Nights on the Train.

Time Card OF TRAINS. Crookston

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep't.
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:37 pm	8:37 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	6:20 a m	6:20 a m

C. A. SHARKEY, Agt. Crookston, Minn. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A. St. Paul, Minn

Time Card OF THE GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE	*Daily †Except Sunday.	LEAVE
6.55 am	Grand Forks, Noch and Week	7.00 am
9.00 pm	Minn., St. Paul and points east	9.05 pm
6.30 pm	St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls	9.20 am
4.53 pm	Fisherton, Hemidji, Duluth and Superior	9.00 am
6.40 pm	St. Vincent to Fargo	7.35 am
8.25 am	Fargo to St. Vincent	3.10 am

ASK FOR Kellogg Johnson & Co's IDEAL SHOE

"Kick my boy kick your cast rip this shoe"

KELLOGG, JOHNSON & CO., ST. PAUL, MINN.

CARY SAFE CO.

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

....Manufacturers of....

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK, OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON, Pres. — H. STEENERSON, Vice-President.
N. S. GERVAIS, 2d Vice-President. — L. ELLINGTON, Cashier
A. F. HANSON, Asst. Cashier.

The Weekly Inter Ocean

Largest Circulation of all Political Papers in the West

Always American— Always Republican;

THE WEEKLY INTER OCEAN SUPPLIES ALL NEWS AND BEST CURRENT LITERATURE

The Inter Ocean's Telegraphic Service is Exclusive. Every Column is Bright, Clean and Packed with News.

$1

The Literature of its Columns is equal to that of the best magazines. It is interesting to the children as well as the parents.

The Inter Ocean is a Western Newspaper,

And while it brings to the family The News of the World, and gives its readers the best and ablest discussion of all questions of the day, it is in full sympathy with the ideas and aspirations of Western people and discusses literature and politics from the Western standpoint.

$1.00—PPICE, ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR—$1.00

Price of Daily by mail - - - $4.00 per year
Price of Sunday by mail - - - 2.00 per year
Daily and Sunday by mail - - 6.00 per year

The Daily and Daily Editions of the Inter Ocean are the Best in the West

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laing out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have our architect include electric wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give ou the benefit of our experience in laing out wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

NASH WAS ELECTED

REPUBLICANS CARRY OHIO BY FIFTY THOUSAND PLURALITY.

Democratic Gains in the Larger Cities More Than Offset by the Republican Gains in the Country—Maryland Flops Into the Democratic Column by Defeating Governor Lowndes.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 8.—The Republicans claim that their plurality for Judge Nash exceeds 50,000, with over 100,000 for Jones out of a total of less than 900,000. The Republican majority in the legislature is larger than usual, but no senator is to be elected.

Early returns showed Democratic gains in the larger cities. At the same time the Republican net gains outside Cincinnati, Cleveland and Toledo were increasing at such a rate as to indicate a plurality of from 20,000 to 40,000 for Judge Nash for governor and the entire Republican state ticket including a majority of the legislature. Chairman Dick had, previous to the election, claimed the election of the entire Republican state ticket by not less than 60,000 plurality and so far he has refused to change his figures.

At an early hour Chairman Dick gave out the following:

"The returns from Hamilton, Cuyahoga and Lucas counties are as yet too meager to give definite figures. Enough have been received to indicate the election of Judge Nash by a greater plurality than that of Governor Bushnell two years ago, which was over 50,000. Both branches of the legislature are Republican."

LEGISLATURE REPUBLICAN.

Claim a Gain of Fourteen in the New York Assembly.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Returns from state and city so far indicate that the Republicans will have a larger majority in the next assembly than in the last, the Democratic gains in this city being more than offset by losses in the smaller cities and counties. In 190 assembly districts which have reported, including 31 in this city, 91 Republicans and 89 Democrats were elected, a Republican gain of 14. The Democrats suffered grave reverses in Erie county (Buffalo) and Chemung county, the home of ex-Senator David B. Hill. In the city elections up the state the Democratic vote showed a great falling off. Buffalo, Troy and Albany gave large Republican majorities, a complete overturn.

LOWNDES GOES OUT.

Maryland Democrats Put John Smith in the Governor's Chair.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8.—Returns show the Republicans of Maryland have been overwhelmingly defeated and that John Walter Smith, Democratic candidate for governor, has been elected by a majority variously estimated at from 10,000 to 15,000. It is also reasonably certain that the lower house of the legislature will be Democratic by a large majority and that the Democrats will elect enough state senators to overcome the Republican advantage among the holdover senators, thereby controlling both branches of the legislature.

TAYLOR IS GOVERNOR.

Republicans Carry Kentucky by About 15,000 Plurality.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 8.—By the combined efforts of the Republicans and anti-Goebelites, Attorney General W. S. Taylor, Rep., has been elected governor of Kentucky by a majority estimated at 15,000 over Goebel, Dem. Returns also indicate the election of the entire Republican ticket, while the complexion of the legislature is in doubt, but will probably be Republican.

Blackburn Claims Kentucky.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 8.—Former Senator Blackburn has sent the following telegram to W. J. Bryan: "We have carried Kentucky by a small but safe majority. Sincere congratulations upon your splendid victory in Nebraska."

SIXTY-FIVE THOUSAND.

Republican Plurality in Massachusetts About the Same as Usual.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—The Republicans carried Massachusetts by 65,000 votes electing W. Murray Crane governor. The entire Republican state ticket was elected by practically the same plurality as the head of the ticket and the legislature of 1900 will also be Republican by the usual large majority, there being few changes in either branch.

CONTROL BOTH HOUSES.

Republicans Have a Working Majority in the New Jersey Legislature.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 8.—Returns indicate that the Republicans have carried the state by about 20,000, although there was no direct vote on a state ticket. The Republicans will control both houses of the legislature by good working majorities and will have an increased representation in the house of assembly.

THE USUAL RESULT.

Pennsylvania Goes Republican by 140,000 Plurality.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—Republican Chairman Reeder said: "Colonel Barnett's majority for state treasurer in the state will be 140,000. The majority in Allegheny county is about 20,000 and in the state, exclusive of Philadelphia and Allegheny, about 80,000. The other candidates will run somewhat ahead of Barnett as the opposition within our own party has been concentrated on Colonel Barnett."

BELONGS TO UNCLE SAM.

Ex-Secretary Foster on the Disputed Strip in Alaska.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Ex-Secretary of State John W. Foster, a member of the joint high commission to settle differences between the United States and Canada, has prepared a summary of this government's case on the Alaskan boundary. It was read before the American Geographical society.

Mr. Foster reviewed the history of the negotiations between Russia and Great Britain and showed Great Britain only sought to prevent the extension of the Russian claims eastward to the Rocky mountains. The British government was then prepared to accept a boundary line a hundred miles from the coast of the mainland. Great Britain afterwards succeeded in reducing this strip to a width of ten marine leagues.

Mr. Foster showed that in 1839, the Hudson Bay company leased from the Russian government the very strip in question, as shown by the Russian maps, and in 1897, a parliamentary committee examining the head of the cape brought out the fact that Russian sovereignty extended 30 nautical miles inland following the indentations of the coast.

In 1878, he continued, a provisional boundary was established by the United States at the crossing of the Stickeen river, which follows the present American contention, and in 1876, a criminal by Canadian courts because his offense was committed "in American territory."

With this as a basis, Mr. Foster made the following presentation of the American position regarding the boundary:

"There is no claim or pretense that the British authorities or subjects ever occupied any of the territory now in dispute, except under the lease cited, or ever exercised or attempted to exercise any acts of sovereignty over the strip or waters enclosed by it."

RECOVERY IMPOSSIBLE.

His Physician Reports That Hobart Cannot Live Long.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 7.—The condition of Vice President Hobart is little changed. He spent a fairly comfortable day and slept through the night. Dr. Newton was asked what he thought were the chances of Hobart to survive during the week and replied that it was impossible to give an intelligent guess, as his patient might die at any minute or might survive for several weeks, though his recovery was impossible.

He spent a comfortable day and sat up in bed propped up by pillows, for a long time. He news of the day was read to him, but he was not allowed to enter into discussion. He made comments, but when he began to talk at length on anything his attention was called to something else.

He saw no one during the day and sent his regrets to callers.

When first taken ill the vice president weighed something around 200 pounds, and now he is down to about 128 pounds.

MILK FEVER.

A Veterinary Gives Some Valuable Suggestions For Dairymen.

Germs can't grow any more than seeds if they are not planted in soil favorable to their germination, writes Dr. C. S. Mead. It therefore becomes cow owners to so manage the cow that she will be immune when the time comes for the disease to manifest itself, and that is always within 100 hours after giving birth to a calf, never to be feared with a heifer's first calf, rarely following a prolonged delivery or a retained afterbirth, generally following an easy, quick delivery and the placenta soon passing away. In short, it comes on when the owner is congratulating himself on the good luck the cow has had in passing through giving birth, always taking one of the best cows in the herd and never one so poor that it might have been a blessing to the owner had she had the disease and died with it. Now, I have said the best cows. This means a good deal. First, it means we know the ones to watch. It means a cow that is bred for a purpose, and that purpose is to give milk. This being true, then the lesson is to learn to feed and milk her just as long as her inherent nature will yield milk, not say to ourselves, "I believe we had better dry you off anyway, old cow." No; that isn't cow sense, and it is a violation of her individual nature for us to fight that nature by drying her off simply because it is our belief. If she is bred for milk and won't readily dry off after 10 or 11 months in lactation when fairly well fed, better by far milk her the year through and avoid one of the conditions which will help wonderfully to have her a fit subject for parturient apoplexy, or milk fever. If it is warm weather, don't keep her, if dried off, in the hayyard and feed timothy hay, as many do. That may be preferrable to letting her run in the rich pasture, where she will be on full feed and make blood if she can't make milk. That would be an unfavorable condition for the disease. But give her an hour's run on the pasture morning and night and keep her in the yard the rest of the time. If in the winter or spring months, and she is not on pasture, give, if possible, a feed of beets, turnips or cabbage daily to keep the bowels a little relaxed.

Wrong Kind of Skimming.

Butter making, like everything else, requires close application and study if continued success be met with. Too many butter makers overlook this fact and are inclined to skim over their work.—Creamery Journal.

Dry Too Soon.

Some cows promise extremely well when in the first flush of milk, but go down so fast that the real test of a cow is her performance after three or four months in milk.

NO CHANGE IS MADE

GOVERNOR SHAW, REP., RE-ELECTED IN IOWA.

Majority of 60,000 About the Same as Usual—Legislature to Select Senator Gear's successor Also Republican—Nebraska Elects Fusion Officials by a Good Stand Majority.

DES MOINES, Nov. 8.—Chairman Hoffman of the Democratic state central committee concedes the re-election of Governor Shaw Rep., by 40,000 while the Republican state chairman claims it will go 60,000 or better.

The calculations are that the Republican total vote will show an increase of 6 per cent from two years ago and that the Democratic total vote will show a loss of about 5 per cent. The probabilities are that there will be 82 Republican members in the house and 40 Republican members in the senate, a net Republican gain of 10. It seems that this strength is certain and it is probable that it will be increased when all the returns are in.

Returns from 417 precincts or about one-fifth of the state show that Shaw, Rep., received 53,581 and White, Dem., 37,812. The same precincts two years ago gave Shaw 51,045 and White 41,-274. Net Republican gain 6,036 with little more than 14 to the precinct. The same ratio, if kept up, will give Shaw a plurality of about 60,000.

IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

Republican Supreme Court Judges Carry the State.

SIOUX FALLS, Nov. 8.—Chairman Bowler of the Democratic committee has conceded the election of the Republican judges by 7,000. The Argus-Leader claims the state by not less than 16,000 for the Republicans.

ABERDEEN, Nov. 8.—Chairman Herreid of the Republican state central committee says: "I regret the small vote cast in the state. It is due to the fact that the farmers are busy. Had there been a full vote there would have been a Republican landslide. As it is we will carry the state by at least 8,000. This victory is especially gratifying because of the desperate efforts of the fusionists and because Senator Pettigrew threw his personality into the fight for all he was worth."

NEBRASKA GOES FUSION.

Holcomb Elected Supreme Court Judge by 10,000 Majority.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 8.—There is no longer any doubt as to the result in Nebraska. The returns continue to show steady fusion gains and the majority for Holcomb will not be less than 10,000. W. J. Bryan gave out the following statement:

"The campaign in Nebraska was fought on national issues and the result is a protest against the policy of the administration."

Mr. Bryan said he had no comment to make on the election in other states.

Chairman Taft of the Republican committee admitted the figures at hand showed the election of the fusion ticket.

Republican Gains in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 8.—Returns received indicate that the Republican gain over the state at large will average 10 per cent. Cowley county is the lead so far as heard from, showing an average Republican gain of 400 over last year.

Great Interest in Returns.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—More than the usual amount of interest in off year elections was manifested both in official and unofficial circles. Particularly was this the case with reference to the states of Ohio, Maryland, Kentucky and Nebraska.

UNDER STARS AND STRIPES

First Autonomous Government in the Philippines Established at Bacoor.

MANILA, Nov. 7.—At Bacolor, in the island of Negros, the first autonomous government of the Philippines was established during the day. General Smith, governor of the island of Negros, administered the oath of office to the judges of the supreme court, who, in turn, swore in the governor, district judges, twelve councilmen, the auditor and the secretary of the interior. The natives of the entire island attended the ceremony. The officers from Iloilo were also present. Three days' feasting will follow in celebration of the new government and the anniversary of the surrender of the Spaniards to the Negros revolutionists, ending with a ball in the government house in the evening. American flags are displayed in the village. The celebration consisted of horse racing and other sports, music, religious functions and an illumination.

Election was Held Oct. 2.

Elections were held Oct. 2, the number of votes cast being 8,098. There were 40 candidates for the various offices. Melecio Severino was elected governor, receiving 1,308 votes. Suffrage was determined by property qualification and ability to read and write. Colonel Minor welcomed the officers on behalf of the United States. In the course of his remarks he said:

"Negros leads the van in civilization in the Philippine islands. Your honor lies in adding a new star to civilization's flag."

Senor Severino in replying said: "The best thing for the future of Negros is the closest relations with the United States."

A number of political prisoners were liberated to commemorate the event.

Hobart's Condition More Favorable.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 8.—At a late hour Vice President Hobart's condition was reported to be more favorable. It was stated at his home that Mr. Hobart had been able to sit up in a chair for a short time and had eaten some solid food, something he had not done in three weeks.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Nov. 2.

Shamrock has sailed for home.

The yellow fever epidemic in Florida has ended.

The Gaelyln has sailed from Gibraltar for Port Said en route for Manila.

The government receipts in October were $8,858,562 greater than the expenditures.

General Funston, it is said, threatens to bring suit against Archbishop Ireland for libel because of a recent interview in Chicago.

The ministers of the army during the past year, according to the annual report of Acting Commissary General Watson, cost $27,000,000.

Judge John D. Long, Republican national committeeman from Florida, has been appointed diplomatic agent and consul general at Cairo, Egypt.

Friday, Nov. 3.

Levi R. Doty, a Chicago capitalist, is bankrupt, with nearly $5,000,000 liabilities.

Sixty-five more Chinese have crossed the Canadian border into North Dakota and must settle with the federal authorities.

The Philippine commission's preliminary report has been submitted to President McKinley. It says we must stay there.

There is no communication with Ladysmith, but the latest accounts show the British to be holding their own in the fighting.

The state department is informed of the arrival at Reval, Russia, of the first steamer with American Indian corn and that eight more shiploads are expected at the same port.

Princess Isabelle of Orleans (sister of the Duke of Orleans) and Prince Jean of Orleans were married at St. Raphael's church, Kingston. The Bishop of Scotchwork, assisted by Purisan and London priests, officiated.

Saturday, Nov. 4.

Kimberley is surrounded by 6,000 Boers.

North Dakota has celebrated the 10th anniversary of her statehood.

Dixon, the featherweight champion of the world, defeated Will Curley of Boston in 20 rounds.

Portugal questions the right of the British to no police duty in Delagoa bay, a Portuguese port.

The Twentieth Kansas regiment, with General Funston, has reached home. They received a royal welcome.

A gigantic iron and timber transportation company, for operations around the Klondike, is being organized.

Filipinos who wish to go to Manila have been informed by General Otis that those who have joined the rebels must remain with them.

In his annual report Admiral Crowninshield, chief of the bureau of navigation, lectures congress for having failed to promote naval officers who distinguished themselves in Cuban waters.

Monday, Nov. 6.

Ex-President Harrison and wife were passengers on the American line steamer St. Paul from Southampton.

A company is to be organized to use a process whereby tin can be manufactured in 70 minutes; six days now being required.

The transports Leelawan and Conemaugh have sailed for Manila with horses for the United States troops in the Philippines.

Mayor Richard A. Tabbs of Alcester, S. D., has been convicted in the United States court at Sioux Falls of sending obscene matter through the mails.

Pietro Caluno, the well known baritone with the Lombardi Italian Grand Opera company, went suddenly insane at St. Joseph, Mo., and is a raving maniac.

James H. Smith, the Chicago and Milwaukee banker who died in London, left most of his $80,000,000 to his nephew of the same name living in New York.

Tuesday, Nov. 7.

A municipal pawnshop has been opened in Chicago.

The Lincoln monument at Springfield, Ills., is to be restored.

Admiral Dewey is credited with a positive and final declaration that he will not be a presidential candidate.

The Republicans of the First district of Maine elected Amos T. Allen to congress as Reed's successor, by nearly 5,000 majority.

Frederick Weyerhauser has bought a million acres of Pacific coast timber land from the Northern Pacific, said to be the largest individual deal of the kind in history.

The Boers set fire to the veldt at Kimberley with the design of exploding British dynamite magazines. One was exploded and the other and greater magazine is in danger.

Wednesday, Nov. 8.

At the Hercules Athletic club, Brooklyn, Marty McCue got the decision over Oscar Gardner at the end of the 25th round.

Hong Kong papers of Oct. 5, received by the Doric, give details of a great fire in Canton at midnight on Oct. 2, by which over 50 persons lost their lives.

The Union Pacific has decided to make Sioux City a terminal point and states that more comfortable and commodious buildings would be erected soon.

A national movement of women has been started by Chicago ladies to present swords to Generals Wheeler and Lee and petition congress to make them major generals in the regular army.

The Weyerhaeuser syndicate is negotiating with the Northern Pacific for 1,000,000 acres of pine lands lying along its line. The price agreed upon is said to be $6.50 per acre or a total of $6,500,000.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Crookston, Minnesota.

Auction Sale!

Of Farm Stock and Machinery

Consisting of 8 working horses, 4 milch cows, 2 yearlings, 2 binders, 2 gang plows, 1 spring tooth harrow, 1 drill, 2 disc harrows, 2 lumber wagons, 2 pair bob sleighs, 50 tons hay. 1 two-seated buggy, 4 set double harness, 1 set single earness. Sale to take place at 10 o'clock a. m.

Wednesday, November 22

On my farm one and a half miles northwest of Russia elevator.

Terms: All sales up to $10, cash; over $10, good bankable paper will be taken.

Half Section of Land alredy plowed for sale or rent to good party.

CLAYMONT PAYANT.

Subscribe Now

And get the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL from now till January 1st, 1901, for $1.50.

This offer includes the handsome Christmas Editions for the two years. The JOURNAL is the best paper in this Congressional district and is improving with each issue.

++++THE JOURNAL++++

CROOKSTON, MINN.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. KESSLER, President. J. W. WHEELER, Cashier
WM. ANDREWS, Vice-President H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

George B. Erskine, A. A. Miller, Wm. Andrews, J. R. McKenzie, E. M. Walsh, L. Fontaine J. P. Foote, W. H. Crosby, J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

Polk County Journal,
BY N. S. GORDON.

☞ Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

OHIO elected Nash republican for governor by 30,000 majority.

VERY complete election news will be found in the news columns of the JOURNAL today.

TUESDAY'S elections are a very flattering endorsement of the present republican administration.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY'S Thanksgiving proclamation was longer than Mr. Cleveland's, but then we have so much more to be thankful for this year.

THE supreme court of North Dakota have recently handed down a decision holding that the husband is responsible for the illegal selling of liquor on his premises, even when conducted in the name of his wife.

VOL. 1. No. 1 of the Red River Review, published at Hendrum, by Bangs & McGhee, has made its way to our exchange table. It is a very creditable little paper. We extend fraternal greetings and wish the editors all kinds of prosperity.

THE total imports at Honolulu, Hawaii, during the first nine months of 1899 amounted to $13,067,372, being an increase of $5,306,282 over the corresponding period of 1898. Prosperity seems to have extended to all parts of the Union, even the islands of the Sea sharing in the general increase.

A STEEL roadway that was constructed in 1802 between Valencia and Gray in Spain, a distance of two miles, is attracting considerable attention. Reports show that the annual cost of keeping it in repair is about $380, against over $5,000 for the former flint stone road.

IT now seems certain that the government revenues for the current year will considerably exceed the advance estimates, and will leave a surplus. Under democratic rule we had to issue bonds in time of peace to meet expenses. Now we have a surplus and we are carrying on a war. Are the people ready for another change?

THE action of Capt. Leary, governor of the Island of Guam, in expelling certain friars who were obstructing reforms, is no more than is constantly being done on Indian reservations in the United States, from which undesirable characters are frequently removed by the agent, if their influence on the Indians is found to be bad.

THE Schurman commission are unanimous in their report and advise the President and the American people to continue the war in the Philippines, not only in the interests of national honor and international obligations, but also in the interests of the Filipinos themselves. The good judgment of the commission will be heartily approved by the American people.

VICE PRESIDENT HOBART is reported to be some better, still his condition is very critical and grave doubts are entertained as to his ultimate recovery. It is certain that he will not be able to occupy his position as presiding officer of the United States Senate when it convenes again. Congress will meet again in a few weeks and one of the first duties of the senate will be to elect a president pro tempore to preside over its meetings. Senator Frye, having previously held the position and proved himself a model presiding officer will probably be elected.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY has issued his proclamation naming Thursday, Nov. 30, as a day for general thanksgiving and prayer, "to be observed as such by all our people on this continent and in our newly acquired islands as well as those who may be at sea or sojourning in foreign lands." The year just closing has been crowned with many blessings for us as a people. We have been favored with general health and prosperity. The soil has brought forth a bountiful harvest; our mines and forests have yielded abundantly of their riches to the uses of commerce, and wealth and population are steadily pouring into our borders. The president points out the facts that support his statement that "seldom has this nation had greater cause for profound thanksgiving." Here are some of the causes set forth in the proclamation: "No great pestilence has invaded our shores." "Liberal employment waits upon labor." "Abundant crops have awarded the efforts of the husbandman." "Increased comforts have come to the home." "The national finances have been strengthened and public credit it has been sustained and made firmer." "In all branches of industry and trade there has been an unequaled degree of prosperity, while there has been a steady gain in the moral and educational growth of our national character." "Churches and schools have flourished." "American patriotism has been exalted." Such are the chief causes for thankfulness suggested by the president in his proclamation. They are causes which appeal to the pride and excite the gratification of every true American.

Notes From Exchanges.

McIntosh Times: As a result of the farmers of this section having a little ready money of their own, interest rates are from one to two per cent lower than the contract rate of former years

Red Lake Falls Gazette: No city of our class in the northwest can show greater improvements for the past season than Red Lake Falls. Our record is one that any good citizen may look upon with justifiable pride.

Ada Index: The raising of the grain inspection fee from 10 cents to 25 cents will cost the farmers of the Northwest from $50,000 to $75,000 annually. The "reformers" are rapidly working off that forty year appetite.

Austin Transcript: The attempt is being made in Minneapolis and other northern cities to solve the servant girl question by bringing from the south a supply of intelligent colored women. This will be watched with great interest, as it may really help materially to solve a vexing domestic problem.

Brainerd Dispatch: The commission men have decided to oppose the nomination of Judge Collins for governor, because as supreme judge, he decided to uphold the constitutionality of the commission law. There are some people whose opposition and ill-will is a compliment and to be desired, and this seems to be a case of that character.

Minneapolis Journal: A Nebraska town has an old man who does odd jobs for a living while his son, a silver tongued reformer, in prosperous circumstances, goes about the country delivering political speeches and weeping real tears over the woes of the laboring man. This smooth and specious fraud wears fine clothes and stops at the best hotels and lives in ease and comfort. There must certainly be a modified kind of a bell somewhere.

Cass Lake Times: Engineer J. C. Higdon, freight engineer on the Dakota division of the Great Northern is now at the Cass Lake hotel nursing a recently broken leg. In company with Julius Brown and Conductor Coon he was returning from Little Wolf Lake last Monday night. The road is not free from stumps by any means, and the horses became somewhat unmanageable, and started to run. A stump was struck by the wheel of the wagon and threw the occupants of the back seat out, Mr. Higdon falling in such a position that the wagon ran over his right leg, breaking both bones below the knee.

Wabasha Herald: There perhaps is no class of men more in touch with the financial and economic condition of the country than the commercial traveling men. Ask any of them where the small investor will find the best field for his surplus earnings, and they will tell you in the cheap farm lands of Northern Minnesota and North Dakota. In years gone by they have invested in city property and bank stock. This has been a failure and they want no more of it. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have gone into farm lands this season. This should furnish the key note for the farmer who has a little surplus money to invest.

Elsewhere.

J. J. McCallum, an old resident of Grand Forks, died Tuesday.

William Dorscheid an old and respected resident of Argyle, died last week.

Dr. N. M. Watson has received the nomination for mayor of Red Lake Falls.

A young man was killed at Hutchinson last Hallowe'en night by a shot from a set gun.

Thief River Falls held their city election last Tuesday. Carl Kretschmar was elected mayor.

The wife of Maj. Diggles, of Minneapolis, has been granted a widow's pension of $25 per month.

Sixty-six Chinamen are awaiting trial at Fargo on the charge of trying to evade the Chinese exclusion act.

Ray Fadden, of Grand Forks, has been bound over to the district court for biting off another man's nose last Saturday.

Jerry Ellis, of Isinours, Minn., a prominent breeder and trainer of light harness horses, will sell his entire stock, and announces that he will permanently retire from the business.

Mrs. Lena Rutz, of Chicago, was arrested last week on complaint of several neighbors and taken before a justice of the peace for trial, on the charge of cruelty to her husband, the cruelty consisting of spanking him twice a day. Mrs. Rutz told the justice that it was good for her husband's health and improved his appetite.

Robert Crickmore, of Pratt, Minn., Secretary of the State Dairymen's Association, while repairing a house on his farm, fell from the staging broke his leg above the ankle and also fractured the ankle.

The Southern States will realize from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 for this year's crop of cotton more than they received for last year's crop. These figures are large and mean a great deal to the south as well as to the entire country.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Interesting Program for Its Half Century Meeting.

The fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Minnesota Historical society will be in the hall of the House of Representatives, St. Paul, Minn., Wednesday, Nov. 15, 1899.

The president of the society, Hon. Alexander Ramsey, who fifty years ago was the first governor of the Territory of Minnesota, will preside.

The following program is announced.

AFTERNOON, AT 2:30 O'CLOCK.

Invocation, Rev. Robert Forbes, of Duluth.

Greeting, Hon. John Lind, governor.

Response, Hon. Alexander Ramsey.

Organization and growth of this Society, Gen. William G. LeDuc, of Hastings.

The Library and Museum of the Society, Hon. Nathaniel P. Langford, of St. Paul.

Recollections of Persons and Events in the History of Minnesota, Bishop Henry B. Whipple, of Faribault.

Progress of Minnesota during the Half Century, Hon. Charles E. Flandrau, of St. Paul.

Auld Lang Syne, to be sung by the audience.

EVENING, AT 8 O'CLOCK.

Opening Remarks, Hon. John S. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis.

Education in the United States and in Minnesota during the past fifty years, Cyrus Northrop, president of the State University.

Progress of the United States during the Half Century, Hon. Cushman K. Davis, U. S. Senator.

Minnesota in the National Congress and Cabinet during these fifty years, Hon. Knute Nelson, U. S. Senator.

The Society's Work through fifty years in preserving Minnesota History, and its Duty to the Future, Gen. James H. Baker, of Mankato.

America, to be sung by the audience.

FOSSTON.

The electric light poles are being wired this week.

The long distance telephone will be in operation soon.

Mr. Hart, of Solway, was in town on business Monday.

Deputy Sheriff Losey was in town Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Gorigen was at Crookston visiting friends last Friday.

Samuel Sutor is building a fine residence. Sam is a rustler.

Joe Kronenberg has received a very fine safe from Buffalo, N. Y.

E. H. Bridger returned Saturday from a visit to his old home at Ada, Minn.

Mr. Sharf, of Crookston, the genial bookkeeper for Larsen Carpenter & Co., arrived a few days ago.

The football game between Fosston and McIntosh teams this week was won by Fosston. Score 16 to 0 in favor of Fosston.

Anton Koistad is building a new house, size main part 14x32 and addition 14x24. He hopes to finish it before winter sets in.

John Williams has accepted a position as bookkeeper at Park Rapids.

John Keenan was in town Tuesday the guest of C. A. Anderson.

Dr. Warniger has recently patented some colic medicine on which he has a ready sale. Every farmer should purchase this medicine for their horses.

East Grand Forks Election.

East Grand Forks had quite an exciting time at its municipal election Tuesday, which resulted in the election of the following officers:

Mayor—John F. Brandt.

Treasurer—Thos. H. Graham.

Justices of the peace—C. A. Brown, P. A. Byrnes.

Constable—James McIlraith.

Aldermen at Large—James E. Sullivan, George H. Barlow.

Ward Aldermen—First, James Jarvis. Second, undecided. Third, Frank Tessier. Fourth, Aaron Brown.

Capt. Brandt defeated the present mayor, Hugh Thompson by 106 majority.

A Splended Chance for You.

The Farmers' (Twice-a-week) Tribune, of Minneapolis, is making an exceptionally liberal offer to young people generally, particularly persons who have never tried soliciting newspaper subscriptions, to aid them in getting 100,000 subscribers by Jan. 1, 1900. It is perhaps the most liberal proposition ever made by any newspaper in America, and it will interest many who do not ordinarily care to engage in getting subscriptions.

The Farmers' Tribune is the daily Minneapolis Tribune and the Evening Tribune "boiled down" for the use of people who do not have time to read a daily paper. It comes to the home twice every week, filled with the best news of the world and the northwest, the best serial and short stories, political gossip and market reports—all the best that money will buy.

Almost everybody can get a few newspaper subscribers from among his friends and acquaintances, and with such a generous offer as made by The Farmers' Tribune it is quite worth one's while to make the effort.

Send a postal card to The Farmers' Tribune for their subscription circular and sample paper.

Burlington Reclining Chairs

Running on two trains a day to and from Chicago, are the largest, roomiest, and in every way best, of any such cars running from St. Paul and Minneapolis. When you buy a ticket over the Burlington you get the best.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

A. W. GLEASON,
SEAL. Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all druggists, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Advertised Letters.

List of letters remaining unclaimed at the Crookston, Minn. postoffice, for the week ending Nov. 4, 1899.

Allen, J W	Caple, Earnest S
Anderson, Frank	Debebosh, Benjamin
Eriekson, Erick	Gardner, Wm
Hamelin, Frankie	Hesbery, H J
Imeshreson, Ole	Koppenial, Reginc
Kester Gust	Johnsson, Hjalmun
Lefever, A	Lindsay, M Mr.
Olson, K K	Purfree, G William
Pederson, Robert	Perry, Wilbur
Peterson, Ole	Sesson, P Mr.
Sparre, Arthur Mr.	Thompson Ole
Villeneau, Phillipe	Tolsaus, O K
Chouard, Elias Mrs.	Lee, Julia Mrs.
Owen, Annie	Smith, G Portus.

Persons calling for the above say advertised.

ANDREW RIGEN,
Postmaster.

Final Proof.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., November 8, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. on

December 15, 1899.

Viz: Anton M. Peterson, of Ada, Minn. for the se¼, section 30, Township 146, Range 47.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole P. Stokke, Charles Thorgeson, Ole Simonson, all of Crookston, and Thor Thorgeson, of Eldred.

SYLVESTER PETERSON,
[31-37] Register.

Saw Mill Machinery For Sale Cheap.

One 3-Saw Lath Bolter, One 3-Saw Lath Mill,

The above machines are in good repair and capable of making 40,000 lath in ten hours.

On Perkins Hand Shingle Machine

With drop tilt attachment — in good repair.

A complete outfit of Saws and Collars goes with above machinery.

Write for Prices.

CROOKSTON LUMBER CO.,
Crookston, Minn

S. L. Gollins,

LIVERY AND FEED STABLES

Horses bought and sold on commission. Everything neat and nobby. Feeding a specialty.

Main and Fourth streets.

CROOKSTON — — MINNESOTA.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE
Makes the food more delicious and wholesome
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

YOU MAY SHIP VENISON.

The Law Is so Considered by a St. Paul Lawyer.

A St. Paul attorney, who is thoroughly conversant with the game laws, has discovered an omission, either accidental or intentional, in the game laws as they were amended by the legislature of 1895, which will permit the shipments of deer without it being necessary for the man that ships the deer to accompany it.

The law of 1899 changed the dates for deer killing somewhat, making the open season run from Nov. 1 to Nov. 20, and providing that no deer shall be exposed to sale until five days have passed, or until Nov. 6. It was evidently intended to incorporate in the law the clause prohibiting shipments save when the shipper accompanies the venison, but the law of 1899 drops out in that paragraph the words "common carrier or convey or cause to be conveyed by," and the section now reads:

It shall be and is hereby made unlawful for any person to ship or cause to be conveyed by any private conveyance at any time any elk, moose, caribou or deer to any person except the same is in the control of and accompanied by some person in charge thereof other than an employe of a common carrier.

The above wording of the law means that venison must not be shipped by a "private conveyance in charge of an employe of a common carrier," which has been time and again held to be a public "conveyance."

The law apparently does not prevent a man from shipping venison by a common carrier and in charge merely of an employe of a common carrier.

It is the opinion of the attorney, who discovered the fatal omission in the law that any one can ship a car load of venison if he wants to and need not accompany it.

Superior Dining Service.

Rev. Jesse R. Zeigler, of Mosango, N. D., recently went over the Burlington on a trip to Pennsylvania. He writes: "I found the service and accommodations of your route superior to any I have known in the West. This is especially true of the dining service."

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to consignors. Orders for future delivery delivered executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

35 lbs Patent Flour for 1 bu. No. 1 Nor. Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS, CROOKSTON, MINN.

A "Love" of a Bonnet

Is frequently the cause of a quarrel in the family. Ours are not so expensive as to cause one. We have a large number of very lovely ones that are veritable family peace makers. Call and examine them.

Reckitt Block, 2nd St. L. M. Bassett.

COAL AND WOOD

VANCE AND STONE

DEFECTIVE PAGE

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McGinnon Block. Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fontaine & Anglin's.
Office hours—9 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 5 p. m.; 7 to 8 p.m

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets
Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR DESIRABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice. Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday. Morning, 11:00, even ing, 8:00. Holy Communion the third Sunday of every Month. Sunday school at 9:30 a.m.
REV. H. M. GREEN, M. D.
Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

—Roy Nichols, of Fertile, was a visitor in town Sunday.

—Miss Mary Crawford is visiting with friends in St. Paul.

—Col R. A. Wilkinson was up from St. Paul last Saturday.

—Hon. H. Steenerson went to Bemidji Tuesday on legal business.

—Mrs. Scott, formerly of Hotel Crookston, is visiting friends in the city.

—County Attorney and Mrs. Holston spent a few days this week in the Twin cities.

—Deputy Sheriff Losey was down to Fosston on official business the first of the week.

—Mrs. E. M. Walsh is entertaining Mrs. J. B. Wineman, of Grand Forks, this week.

—The Higgs orchestra will be in the best shape they were ever in, for the Concert Nov. 15.

—Mr. Schefstad, the violinist will be the big attraction at the Band Concert next Wednesday Nov. 15.

—The seat sale for the Band Concert will open at Tom Morris Tuesday morning Nov. 14, at 10 o'clock.

—Miss Lottie Anglin left Monday night for St. Paul, where she will spend some time visiting friends.

—Dr. O. Bolsta, of Ortonville, is the guest of his sister Miss Josephine Bolsta, of the Bethesda hospital.

—Register Dwyer went over to East Grand Forks Sunday to shake hands with his numerous friends in that burg.

—Julius C. Johnson, an old acquaintance of the editor of the JOURNAL, was a pleasant caller Saturday.

—At last our streets are cleared of old buildings. The last one, the Koeppe building was moved to a back street last week

—Auditor Gleason has been very busy the past week issuing hunting permits. The number has gone to a good high mark.

—United States Senator Knute Nelson has returned from his visit to Norway, arriving at his home in Alexandria last week.

—J. E. Greenhalgh has been spending a week or so in Brainerd and Staples, combining a little business with considerable pleasure.

—P. J. Russell will spend the winter in the lumber woods as book keeper and stenographer. He left Sunday for his new field of labor.

—Mr. Schefstad, the great Norwegian violinist, has been engaged to play two numbers at the Band Concert Wednesday evening Nov. 15.

—The first winter term of the Crookston Business College opened last Monday. The attendance is very largely increased over former years.

—Wm. Munch is going to have one of the prettiest residences in the northwest. His new house is nearly completed and he now has a large barn under way.

—Chas. Rauch, who has been suffering for some time with rheumatism, left Sunday night for the Hot Springs, where he will spend a few weeks at the baths.

—The Willow Grove March which was made popular by the famous Banda Rossa, will be played by our home band at their Concert Wednesday evening, Nov. 15.

—Will some one of our subscribers bring us a load of hay to apply on subscription, and another one a load of oats? Both hay and oats will be fully as acceptable as money just now.

—Fred McGregor was the victim of a very pleasant surprise party last Friday evening, the occasion being his birthday. About twenty were present and a very pleasant time is reported.

—Mrs. W. D. Scott has been the guest of Mrs. Rosenthal during the week.

—Agents to learn Dye plating and also good canvassers, 306 North Broadway. 30tf

—Several of our citizens took in the U. C. C. ball at Grand Forks, last Friday night.

—K. Brooks, of Kertsonville township, was a caller at the JOURNAL office last Friday.

—Rev. Dr. Forbes, presiding elder of this district, conducted services at the Methodist church last Friday night.

—Adolph Wagner and sisters, Annie and Bertha, of Fisher, were visiting at the home of C. Elchoff last Sunday.

—Judge Hagen has appointed Even Tuff as administrator of the estate of the late J. P. Tuff, of Gordon township.

—The local land office staff is kept busy with filings and other business these days. Some days the filing run up into the teens.

—Auditor Johnson and Probate Judge Bazelle, of Ramsey county, were in town last week. They were up on a hunting expedition.

—Mr. Jefferson has the work on the walls of the new water works building well under way, and next week will see them nearly completed.

—A. R. Fuller has just merged from the chaos of house cleaning and repairing, and the Klondyke store is settled down to business again.

—Louis Billideau, living about four miles northeast of town, is laid up with a sprained leg, the result of a slip while unloading a barrel of pork.

—The foundation of the Great Northern depot has been completed and a large corps of bricklayers are ready to take the brick work to completion in quick time.

—J. E. Morrisey has a force at work giving his foundary building a general fixing up for the winter. A new roof and some patches to the siding are among the improvements.

—Prof. Geo. T. Churchill, who has charge of the commercial department of the college, arrived Saturday from the South. He is a teacher of large experience and will be quite an acquisition to the educational coterie of our city.

—Last Sunday was "Elderly People's Day" at the Congregational church, and Rev. Fisher preached on the subject, "Progress in Life a Vocation". Next Sunday will be "Young Men's Day" and the pastor will speak on subjects of interest to young men.

—At the regular weekly meeting of the ministers of the city last Monday morning, Rev. Herman P. Fisher gave an address on "The International Congregational Council" which was held at Boston. Rev. C. R. G. Poole presented a plan for the systematic visitation of the homes of the city.

—An old settler named Patrick Cox, died near Mallory last week. His funeral took place on Friday and the remains were laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery at Fisher. Mr. Cox was about 85 years of age and unmarried. He leaves a brother and several sisters who reside near Mallory.

—Mrs. Shelly has just completed a fine new residence at the foot of the Robert street bridge. The house is of convenient size and is finished in the most modern style. The interior is finely frescoed and grained throughout. The house is warmed by steam heat and is supplied with electric lights.

—The advertisement of Frank Brown last week should have read 35 pounds of Patent flour for a bushel of wheat instead of 80. Frank believes in expansion, but not to the extent of fifteen pounds of flour to the bushel. The figures are correct this week. Try a sack of it. The flour is as good as was ever made, and you will get full weight.

—M. F. Stone is tearing down the old skating rink and will use the lumber in building for machinery and coal sheds. It seems to us that if some enterprising citizen would invest some money in a first class rink in Crookston it could be made a paying investment. Nearly every town of any importance has a rink, and when properly conducted pays very well.

—The first of the winter series of concerts to be given by the band and orchestra will take place at the opera house next Wednesday evening. The program will consist of the usual instrumental and vocal numbers, including a duet by Misses Munch and Field. These musical organizations have made wonderful improvement since their last winter's concerts and there will no doubt be a vast improvement in the concerts.

—The new reservoir came near being the scene of a fatal accident last Monday morning. One of the teamsters was dumping dirt around the brick work when the team started to back up and only stopped when the hind wheels struck the brick work of the reservoir. The teamster was thrown from the wagon and narrowly missed falling into the fifty foot hole, and it is only a miracle that team, wagon, and all did not go into the same place.

—Go to the Strawbridge's for dress goods, flannels, blankets, shoes, etc.

—Have your suit steam cleaned and pressed at Dye works 305 North Broadway. 30tf

—Tom Sundet is treating his residence in Sampson's addition, to a coat of paint, and otherwise getting in shape for the winter.

—Have your overcoat cleaned or colored at Dye Works, 306 North Broadway. 30tf

—A dime sociable will be given at the Baptist block, Carman, tomorrow Friday evening. You are invited to attend.

—Big cut on price of dry goods, gents' furnishing goods, etc. at Eldred, Minn., for one week beginning Monday, Nov. 6.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—Col. Cobham Post G. A. R. is putting up an addition to their hall to be used for a dining room. It will be a convenient and needed improvement.

—Claymont Payant will sell off his stock and farm machinery at auction on Wednesday, Nov. 22. Read his announcement and terms of sale in another column.

—We have just secured the services of Mr. Sam Hulberg, of LaCrosse, Wis., as manager of our Shoe Department. He is an expert in this line, and will see that his department is well to the front in the way of bargains. NEW YORK STORE.

—Now is the time to fix-up for winter. We have quite an accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Co. Telephone 40.

—H. K. Volstad, of Nevada township in Mower county, one of the substantial farmers of the southern par of the state, called at the JOURNAL office today. He was on his way home from Red Lake Falls, where he had been to visit his son. Mr. Volstad is well pleased with the valley, and finds Crookston a much thriftier city than he expected.

—Hans Banner, the line man of the Electric Light company, while stringing a line across Jerome's bridge, last Friday, missed his footing and fell to the floor of the bridge. He was unconscious when found and an examination disclosed the fact that he had fractured two ribs. He was taken to Bethesda Hospital, where he is getting along nicely.

—Chief Gonyea deserves considerable credit for the manner in which he has handled the tough element that congregated in Crookston during the harvesting and threshing season, just past. The crowd was fully as large as that which infested any of the towns or cities in the northwest, yet Crookston's name has not once appeared in the dispatches in connection with a lawless act.

—Last Friday morning the separator that was at work on the farm of Mr. Batz, near Marin, was consumed by fire. The men had cleaned up the machine the night before and pulled it onto some plowed ground and left it as they thought, safe for the night. The fire was discovered at about 3 a. m. and had such headway that all efforts to stop it were futile. The cause is not known. Himmelsbach & Nossen were the owners of the machine.

—Two men were pretty badly hurt last Saturday afternoon, by the falling off a scaffold at the new water works reservoir. The two men, McSherry and Jefferson, were working on the wall of the tank when the scaffold gave away letting them down a distance of about ten feet. Mr. McSherry sustained some severe cuts in the head and on the leg, but Mr. Jefferson came out with only a few bruises. They are both getting along alright.

—The school of instruction for this district instituted by the Grand Chapter Order of the Eastern Star was held in Masonic Hall Thursday Nov. 2. Mrs. Adelaide Bissell, of Litchfield, Grand Worthy Matron reviewed the work of Crookston Chapter and gave very encouraging words of the manner in which it was executed. Although but three months since this chapter was organized it has a large membership. Ada lodge was represented by Mesdames Patterson, Mathers, Brown, Sunstad and Miss Gerber. Mrs. Hooper, of Grand Forks, was also present. A sumptuous banquet was served at six o'clock and a social hour spent until the train left at nine.

Mare Strayed

On the night of Oct. 23, a roan mare ran away with a harness on. Weight about 900 pounds. Brand "T" on the left hip. Finder will please notify Claud W. Lawton, Mentor, Minnesota.

Storm Sash. Storm Sash.

We have a complete stock—and our prices are right. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....in the Northwest.

A legitimate Clothing Business
Conducted on legitimate Plans
A Plan Appreciated by all.

We sell more Men's Suits
We sell More Men's Overcoats
We sell more Men's Fur Coats
Than any other dealer in Men's Wearing Apparel in the Northwest.

Men's Suits $2.50 to $25.00
Men's Overcoats $3.00 to $30.00
Men's Fur Coats $7.50 to $125.00

C. O. D. CLOTHING STORE

Crookston Tannery

Aug. Miller & Co.
Proprietors.

Watch this Next Week

Farmers' Tribune

The Twice-a-Week Edition of the Minneapolis Tribune

WANTS
100,000
SUBSCRIBERS

And is willing to pay you to help get them. It will give the most liberal pay ever offered to persons who will try—experience is not necessary.

Write a postal for subscription circular and sample paper.

The New York Store

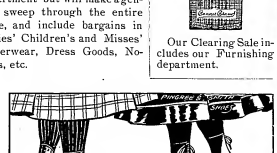
GREAT CLEARING ....SALE....

ASK TO SEE OUR
...Cresco Corsets...
The best made; do not break at waist line. All sizes 18 to 36.

OUR Great Clearing Sale begins tomorrow and continues till New Years. All of our Ladies', Misses' and Children's Winter Wraps in Fur and Cloth must be closed out in this time. The bargains during this sale will not be confined to any one department but will make a general sweep through the entire store, and include bargains in Ladies' Children's and Misses' Underwear, Dress Goods, Notions, etc.

Our Clearing Sale includes our Furnishing department.

See our line of LADIES' MISSES' and CHILDREN'S SHOES



6

7

We handle the Famous
Pingree & Smith Shoes than which no better are put on the market.

A. CHABOT, PROP.

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

(Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.)

CHAPTER IV

If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me.

Henry Maxwell paced his study back and forth. It was Wednesday, and he had started to think out the subject of his evening service which fell upon that night.

Out of one of his study windows he could see the tall chimneys of the railroad shops. The top of the evangelist's tent just showed over the buildings around the Rectangle.

The pastor of the First church looked out of this window every time he turned in his walk. After awhile he sat down at his desk and drew a large piece of paper toward him.

After thinking several moments he wrote in large letters the following

"A NUMBER OF THINGS THAT JESUS WOULD PROBABLY BE IN THIS TOWN:

"1. Live in a simple, plain manner without needless luxury on the one hand or undue asceticism on the other.

"2. Preach fearlessly to the hypocrites in the church, no matter what their social importance or wealth.

"3 Show in some practical form sympathy and love for the common people as well as for the well to do, educated, refined people who make up the majority of the church and parish.

"4. Identify himself with the great causes of humanity in some personal way that would call for self denial and suffering.

"5. Preach against the saloon in Raymond.

"6. Become known as a friend and companion of the sinful people in the Rectangle.

"7 Give up the summer trip to Europe this year. I have been abroad twice and cannot claim any special need of rest. I am well and could forego this pleasure, using the money for some one who needs a vacation more than I do. There are probably plenty of such people in the city.

"8. What else would Jesus do as Henry Maxwell?"

He was conscious with a humility that once was a stranger to him, that his outline of Jesus' probable action was painfully lacking in depth and power, but he was seeking carefully for concrete shapes into which he might cast his thought of Jesus' conduct Nearly every point he had put down meant for him a complete overturning of the custom and habit of years in the ministry In spite of that, he still searched deeper for sources of the Christlike spirit. He did not attempt to write any more, but cat at his desk absorbed in his attempt to solve one more of the spirit of Jesus in his own life. He had forgotten the particular subject for his prayer meeting with which he had begun his morning study.

He was so absorbed over his thought that he did not hear the bell ring, and he was roused by the servant. who announced a caller. He had sent up his name—Mr. Gray Maxwell stepped into the head of the stairs and asked Gray to come up

"We can talk better up here."

So Gray came up and stated the reason for his call.

"I want you, Mr. Maxwell, to help me Of course you have heard what a wonderful meeting we had Sunday night and last night The Winslow has done more with her voice than I could, and the tent won't hold the people

"I've heard of that It's the first time the people there have heard her It's no wonder they are interested."

"It has been a wonderful revelation to us and a most encouraging event in our work But I came to ask if you could not come down to night and preach I am suffering with a severe cold I do not dare to trust my voice again I know it is asking a good deal for such a busy man, but if you can't come say so freely, and I'll try somewhere else."

"I'm sorry, but it's my regular prayer meeting night," said Henry Maxwell Then he finished and added "I shall be able to arrange it in some way so as to come down You can count on me."

Gray thanked him earnestly and rose to go

"Won't you stay a minute, Gray, and let us have a prayer together?"

"Yes," said Gray simply.

So the two men kneeled together in the study Henry Maxwell prayed like a child Gray was touched to tears as he kneeled there There was something almost pitiful in the way this man who had lived his ministerial life in such a narrow limit of exercise, now begged for wisdom and strength to speak a message to the people in the Rectangle Gray rose and held out his hand.

"God bless you, Mr. Maxwell. I'm sure the Spirit will give you power tonight."

Henry Maxwell made no answer. He did not even trust himself to say that he hoped so, but he thought of his promise, and it brought a certain peace that was refreshing to his heart and mind alike.

So that is how it came about that when the First church audience came into the tent room that evening it was met with another surprise.

There was an unusually large number present. The prayer meetings ever since that remarkable Sunday morning had been attended as never before in the history of the First church.

Henry Maxwell came at once to the point He spoke of Gray's work and of his request.

"I feel as if I were called to go down there tonight, and I will leave it with you to say whether you will go on with the meeting here. I think perhaps the best plan would be for a few volunteers to go down to the Rectangle with me, prepared to help in the after meeting, and the rest remain here and pray that the Spirit's power may go with us."

So half a dozen of the men went with Henry Maxwell, and the rest of the audience stayed in the lecture room Maxwell could not escape the thought as he left the room that probably in his entire church membership there might not be found a score of disciples who were capable of doing work that would associate with the rough, needy, sinful men into the knowledge of Christ The thought did not linger in his mind to vex him as he went on his way, lest it was simply a part of his whole new conception of the meaning of Christian discipleship.

When he and his little company of volunteers reached the Rectangle, the tent was already crowded They had difficulty in getting to the little platform Rachel was there, with Virginia and Jasper Chase. who had come in stead of the doctor tonight

When Maxwell stepped into the tent, he was greeted with a song in which Rachel sang the solo and the people were asked to join in the chorus. not a foot of standing room was left in the tent The night was mild. and the sides of the tent were up. and a great border of faces was visible outside, looking in and forming part of the audience

After the singing and a prayer by one of the city pastors who were present Gray stated the reasons for his inability to speak and in his simple manner turned the service over to "Brother Maxwell of the First church."

"Who's he choice?" asked a hoarse voice near the outside of the tent

"De Post church parson. We've got de whole high tone swell outfit tonight."

"I did you say Post church? I know him. My landlord has got a front pew up there," said another voice, and there was a laugh, for the speaker was a saloon keeper.

"Throw out de life line 'cross de dark water!" began a drunken man near by, singing in such an unconscious imitation of a loon] traveling singer's usual tone that roars of laughter and jeers of approval rose around him. The people in the tent turned in the direction of the disturbance. There were shouts of "Put him out!" "Give the Post church a chance!" "Song, song! Give no an other song!"

Henry Maxwell stood up, and a great wave of actual terror went over him. This was not like preaching to the well dressed. respectable, good mannered people on the boulevard. He began to speak but the confusion increased. Gray went down into the crowd, but did not seem able to restore order. Henry Maxwell raised his arm and his voice The crowd in the tent began to pay some attention to the noise of the disturbance outside increased. In a few minutes the audience was beyond Maxwell's control He turned to Rachel with a sad smile

"Sing something. Miss Winslow They will listen to you." he said and then sat down and hid his face in his hands.

It was Rachel's opportunity, and she was fully equal to it. Virginia was at the organ. and Rachel asked her to play a few notes of the hymn

Saviour, I follow on,
Guided by thee,
Seeke not yet the hand
That leadeth me.
Enabled by my heart and still;
Fear I no further ill;
Safe to meet thy will
My will shall be.

Rachel did not sing the first line before the people in the tent were all turned toward her. hushed and reverent Before she had finished the verse the Rectangle was subdued and tamed. It lay like some wild beast at her feet. and she was it into harmlessness. Ah. What were the flippant. perfumed critical audiences in concert halls compared with this dirty, ragged, unwashed, degraded, besotted humanity that trembled and wept and grew strangely, subtly thoughtful under the touch of the divine ministry of this beautiful young woman! Henry Maxwell saw his relief his head and saw the transformed mob had a glimpse of something that Jesus would probably do with a voice like Rachel Winslow's. Jasper Chase sat with his eyes on the singer, and his greatest longings and ambitions artistic was swallowed up in the thought of what Rachel Winslow's love might some time mean to him And over to the shadow outside stood the last person any one might have expected to see at a gospel tent service, Rollin Page. who, jostled on every side by rough men and women, who stared at the swell in the fine clothes, seemed careless of his surroundings and at the same time evidently swayed by the power that Rachel possessed. He had just come over from the club Neither Rachel nor Virginia saw him that night.

The song was over Henry Maxwell rose again. This time he felt calm What would he do? He spoke as he thought once he never could. Who were those people? They were immortal souls. What were [illegible] A calling of sinners, not of saints, to repentance. How would Jesus speak? What would he say? Never before had he felt [illegible] responsibility. Never before had he felt [illegible] for the multitude. What had [illegible] been to him during the years in the First church but a [illegible] dignity, troublesome factor in society, outside of the church and [illegible] a cause that caused him occasionally an unpleasant feeling of care? Such a factor in Raymond that was talked about at associations as the "[illegible]" in papers written by the brethren in attempts to show why the "[illegible]" were not being reached But tonight as he faced the "masses" he saved himself whether, after all. this was not just about such a multitude as Jesus faced oftenest, and he was the one man who knew of love for a crowd which is one of the best indications a preacher ever has that he is living close to the heart of the world's eternal life. It is easy to love an individual sinner. especially if he is personally picturesque or interesting. To love a multitude of sinners is distinctly a Christlike quality.

When the meeting closed there was no special interest shown. The people rapidly melted away from the tent, and the saloons, which had been experiencing a dull season while the meetings progressed. again drove a thriving trade. The Rectangle, as if to make up for lost time. started in with vigor on its usual night life of debauch Henry Maxwell and his little party, including Virginia. Rachel and Jasper Chase. walked down past the row of saloons and dens until they reached the corner where the cars passed

"This is a terrible spot," said Henry Maxwell as they stood waiting for their car

"I never realized that Raymond had such a festering sore. I do not see how it is a city full of Christian disciples."

He paused and then continued

"Do you think any one can ever remove this great curse of the saloon? Why don't we all get together and end the traffic? What would Jesus do? Would he keep silent? Would he vote to license these causes of crime and death?"

Henry Maxwell was talking to himself more than to the others He remembered that he had always voted for license, and so had nearly all of his church members. What would Jesus do? Could he answer that question? Would Jesus preach and act against the saloon if he lived today? How would he preach and act? Suppose it was not popular to preach against license. Suppose the Christian people thought it was all that could be done—to license the evil, and so get revenue from a necessary sin. Or suppose the church members were not ready to vote where the saloons stood. What then? He knew that these were the facts in Raymond. What would Jesus do?

He went up into his study the next morning with that question only partly answered. He thought of it all day. He was still thinking of it and reaching certain real conclusions when The Evening News came. His wife had opened it up and sat down a few minutes while he read it to her.

The Evening News was at present the most sensational paper in Raymond That is to say, it was being edited in such a remarkable fashion that its subscribers had never been so excited over a newspaper before. First they had noticed the absence of the principal, and gradually it began to dawn upon them that The News no longer printed accounts of crime with detailed descriptions or scandals in private life. Then they noticed that the advertisements of liquor and tobacco were being dropped. together with certain other advertisements of a questionable character. The discontinuance of the Sunday paper caused the greatest comment of all. and now the character of the editorials was creating the greatest excitement. A quotation from the Monday paper of this week will show what Edward Norman was doing to keep his promise The editorial was headed

"THE MORAL SIDE OF POLITICAL QUESTIONS.

"The editor of The News has always advocated the principles of the purest political party at present in power and has therefore discussed all political questions from a standpoint of consistency or of belief in the party as opposed to other organizations Hereafter, to be perfectly honest with all our readers, the editor will present and discuss political questions from the standpoint of right and wrong In other words. the first question will not be, 'Is it in the interest of our party?' or 'Is it according to the principles laid down by the party?' but the question first asked will be, 'Is this measure in accordance with the spirit and teachings of Jesus as the author of the greatest standard of life known to men?' That is, he perfectly plain, the moral side of every political question will be considered. Its most important side, and the ground will be distinctly taken that nations as well as individuals are under the same law to do all things to the glory of God as the first rule of action

"The same principle will be observed in this office toward candidates for places of responsibility and trust in the republic. Regardless of party politics, the editor of The News will do all in his power to bring the best men into power and will not unwarrantly lend his support for office any candidate who is unworthy, however much he may be endorsed by the party. Such considerations asked about the man, as about the measure, will be: 'Is he the right man for the place? Is he a good man with ability?'

There had been more of this, but we have quoted enough to show the general acter of the editorials Hundreds of men in Raymond had read it and rubbed their eyes in amazement A great many of them had promptly written to The News. telling the editor to stop their paper. The paper [illegible] however, and was now [illegible] the city. At the end [illegible] ward Norman knew [illegible] had actually [illegible] ber of valuable [illegible] the conditions entirely [illegible] the managing editor [illegible] ultimate bankruptcy. [illegible] Monday's editorials.

Tonight as Henry [illegible] he wife he could see [illegible] these editorials. Suppose [illegible] tions obedience to [illegible] was an absence of [illegible] cause heads. The [illegible] paper and the headlines was [illegible] with them. He noticed in two columns that the reporters' names appeared signed at the bottom, and that was a distinct advance in the dignity and style of their contributions.

"So Norman is beginning to get his reporters to sign their work. He has talked with me about that. It is a good thing. It fixes responsibility for items where it belongs and raises the standard of work done, a good thing all around for public and writers."

Henry Maxwell suddenly paused. His wife looked up from some work she was doing. He was reading something with the utmost interest.

"Listen to this, Mary," he said after a moment, while his voice trembled

"This morning Alexander Powers, superintendent of the L. and T. R. R shops in the city, handed his resignation to the board and gave as the reason the fact that certain proof had fallen into his hands of the violation of the interstate commerce law, and also of the state law, which has recently been framed to prevent and punish railroad pooling for the benefit of certain favored shippers. Mr. Powers states in his resignation that he can no longer consistently withhold the information he possesses against the road. He has been placed in direct antagonism to the company in the hands of the commission and it is now for them to take action upon it.

"The News wishes to express itself on this action of Mr. Powers In the first place he has nothing to gain by it. He has lost a valuable place voluntarily when by keeping silent he might have remained in it. In the second place, we believe his action ought to receive the approval of all thoughtful, honest citizens who believe in seeing law obeyed and lawbreakers brought to justice. In a case like this, where evidence against a railroad company is generally understood to be almost impossible to obtain, it is the general belief that the officers of the road are often in possession of criminating facts, but do not consider it to be any of their business to inform the authorities that the law is being defied.

"The entire result of this evasion of responsibility on the part of those who are responsible is demoralizing to every young man connected with the road. The editor of The News recalls the statement made by a prominent railroad official in this city a little while ago that nearly every clerk in a certain department of the road who understood how large amounts of money were made by shrewd violations of the interstate commerce law was ready to admire the shrewdness with which it was done and declared that they would all do the same if a position of trust was given to railroad circles to attempt it. [This was actually said in one of the general offices of a prominent railroad, to the author's knowledge.]

"It is not necessary to say that such a condition of business is destructive to all the nobler and higher standards of conduct. and no young man can live in the atmosphere of surrounding dishonesty and lawlessness without growing into a like character.

"In our judgment, Mr. Powers did the only thing that a Christian man could do. He has rendered a valuable public service to the state and the general public. It is not always an easy matter for business men to draw the line between the individual citizen and his fixed duty to the public. In this case there is no doubt in our mind that the step which Mr. Powers has taken commends itself to every man who believes in law and its enforcement. There are times when the individual must not for the people in ways that will mean sacrifice and loss to him and his family character Mr. Powers will be misunderstood and misrepresented. There is no question that his course will be approved by every citizen who wishes to see justice established and law as well as the weakest individual subject to the same law. Mr. Powers has done all that any Christian patriot could do. He now remains for the commission to act upon his evidence, which, we understand, is overwhelming in favor of the lawlessness of the L. and T. Let the law be enforced, no matter who the guilty parties may be, is the duty of every citizen."

Henry Maxwell finished reading and dropped the paper.

"I must run and see Powers. This is the result of his promise."

His wife said as he was going out his wife said

"Do you think, Henry, that Jesus would have done that?"

Henry Maxwell paused a moment Then he answered slowly

"Yes; I think he would. At any rate, Powers has decided so, and each one of us who made the promise understands that he is deciding under our conduct for any one else, only for himself."

"How about his family? How will Mrs. Powers and Celia be likely to take it?"

"Very hard, I have no doubt. That will be Powers' test. His martyrdom. They will not understand his motive."

Henry Maxwell went out and walked over to the next block, where the superintendent lived. To his relief, Powers himself came to the door.

"I was just coming over to see you," said Powers after awhile, "and that is the work began at the shops. So far as I know, the company will not object to that going right on. It is one of the contradictions of the railroad world that the Y. M. C. A. and other Christian influences are encouraged by the roads, while all the time the most un-Christian and lawless acts are being committed in the official management of the roads themselves. Of course it is understood that if pay is raised to have In its employ men who are temperate and honest and Christian. So I have no doubt the number mechanic will have the same courtesy extended to him that I had in the matter of the room and its use. But what I want you to do, Mr. Maxwell, is to see that my plan is carried out Will you? You understand what the idea was in general You made a very favorable impression on the men Go down there as often as you can Go. Milton Wright interested to provide something for the furnishing and expense of the coffee plant and reading tables. Will you do it?"

"Yes," replied Henry Maxwell. He stood a little longer Before he went away he and the superintendent had a prayer together, and they parted with that silent hand grasp that seemed to them like a new token of their Christian discipleship and fellowship

The pastor of the First church went home stirred deeply by the events of the week Gradually the truth was growing upon him that the pledge to do as Jesus would was working out a revolution in his parish and throughout the city Every day added to the serious results of obedience to that pledge Henry Maxwell did not pretend to see the end. He was, in fact, only now at the very beginning of events that were destined to change the history of hundreds of families, not only in Raymond. but throughout the entire country As he thought of Edward Norman and Rachel and Mr. Powers and of the results that had already come from their actions he could not help a feeling of intense interest in the probable effect if all the persons in the First church who had made the pledge faithfully kept it Would they all keep it, or would some of them turn back when the cross he came too heavy?

He was asking this question the next morning as he sat in his study when the president of the Endeavor society called to see him.

"I suppose I ought not to trouble you with my case." said young Morris, glancing at the clock as he entered. "but I thought, Mr. Maxwell. that you might advise me a little."

"I'm glad you came. Go on. Fred." Henry Maxwell had known the young man ever since his first year in the pastorate, and loved and honored him for his consistent. faithful service in the church

"Well, the fact is I'm out of a job You know, I've been doing reporter work on the Morning Sentinel since I graduated last year. Well, last Saturday Mr Barr asked me to go down the road Sunday morning and get the details of that train robbery at the station and write the thing up for the paper. I'm editor that came into Monday morning, just to get the start of The News. I refused to go, and Burr gave me my dismissal. He was in a hard temper, or I think perhaps he would not have done it. He has always treated me well before. Now, don't you think I ought to have done as I did? I ask because the other fellows say I was a fool not to do the work. I want to feel that a Christian acts from motives that are more exalted than to obey mere orders, but not foolish. What do you think?"

"I think you kept your promise, Fred. I cannot see that it means work as newspaper work on Sunday, as you were asked to do it."

"That's just it, Mr. Maxwell. I felt a little troubled over it, but the longer I think it over the better I feel.

Morris rose to go, and Henry Maxwell rose and laid a loving hand on the young man's shoulder.

"What are you going to do, Fred?"

"I don't know yet. I have thought some of going to Chicago or large some city."

"Why don't you try The News?"

"They are all supplied. I have not thought of applying there."

Henry Maxwell thought a moment.

"Come down to The News office with me and les ns see Norman about it."

So a few minutes later Edward Norman received into his private business and young Morris, and Henry Maxwell briefly told the cause of their errand.

"You can give you a place on The News," cold Edward Norman, with his keen look softened by a smile that made it winsome. "I'd want reporters who won't work Sundays. And what is more, I am making plans for a special kind of reporting which I believe young Morris here can develop because he is in sympathy with what Jesus would do.

He assigned Morrie a definite task, and Henry Maxwell started back to his study feeling that kind of satisfaction —and it is a very deep kind—which a man feels when he has been even partly instrumental in finding an unemployed person a situation.

He had decided to go back to his study, but on his way home he passed by one of Milton Wright's stores He stopped there simply step to shake hands with his parishioner and bid him godspeed in what he had heard he was doing to put Christ into his business, but when he went into the office Milton Wright insisted on detaining him a moment over some matters of like, according to the regular order of the business world, and without every being fully aware of it Henry Maxwell found himself from the standpoint of "Will it pay?"

"There is no use to disguise the fact, Mr. Maxwell, that I have been compelled to revolutionize the whole method of my business since I made that promise. I have been doing a great many things during the last 20 years in this store that I know Jesus would not do, but that is a small item compared with the number of things I begin to believe Jesus would do. My sense of commission have not been as many as those of omission in business relations."

"What was the first change you made?" asked Henry Maxwell. He felt as if his sermon could wait for him in his study. As the interview with Milton Wright continued he was not so sure but he had found material for a sermon without going back to his study.

"I think the first change I had to make was in my thought of my employees. I came down here Monday morning after that Sunday and asked myself: 'What would Jesus do in his relation to these clerks, bookkeepers, office boys, draymen, salesmen? Would he try to establish some sort of personal relation to them different from that which I have sustained all these years?' I soon answered the question by saying, 'Yes.' Then came the question of what it would lead me to do.

"I did not see how I could answer it to my satisfaction without getting all my employees together and having a talk with them So I sent invitations to all of them, and we had a meeting out there in the warehouse Tuesday night.

"A good many things came out of that meeting I can't tell you all. I tried to talk with the men as I imagined Jesus might. It was hard work, for I have not been in the habit of it, and I must have made mistakes. But I can hardly make you believe, Mr. Maxwell, the effect of that meeting on some of the men. Before I got through I saw more than a dozen of them with tears on their faces. I kept asking, 'What would Jesus do?' and the more I asked it the further along it pushed me into the intimate and loving relations with the men who have worked for me all these years. Every day something new is coming to me, and I am right now in the midst of a reconstructing of the entire business, so far as its motive for being conducted is concerned. I am so practically ignorant of all plans for cooperation and itsapplication to business that I am trying to get information from every possible source. I have lately made a special study of the life of Titus Salt. the great mill owner of Bradford, England. who afterward built that model town on the banks of the Aire There is a good deal in his plans that will help. But I have not yet reached definite conclusions in regard to all the details. I am not enough used to Jesus methods. But see here."

Milton eagerly reached into one of the pigeonholes of his desk and took out a paper.

"I have sketched out what seems to me a programme such as Jesus might go by in a business like mine. I want you to tell me what you think about it."

"WHAT JESUS WOULD PROBABLY DO IN MILTON WRIGHT'S PLACE AS A BUSINESS MAN

"1. He would engage in business for the purpose of glorifying God and not for the primary purpose of making money.

"2. All money that might be made he would never regard as his own, but as trust funds to be used for the good of humanity.

"3. His relations with all the persons in his employ would be the most loving and helpful He could not help thinking of them all in the light of souls to be saved This thought would always be greater than his thought of making money in business

"4. He would never do a single dishonest or questionable thing or try in the remotest way to get the advantage of any one else in the same business.

"5. The principle of unselfishness and kindness in all the details of the business would direct its details

"6. Upon this principle he would shape the entire plan of his relations to his employees. to the people who were his customers and to the general business world with which he was connected

Henry Maxwell read this over slowly It reminded him of his own struggle the day before to put into a concrete form his thought of Jesus' probable action. He was thoughtful as he looked up and met Milton Wright's eager gaze

"Do you believe you can continue to make your business pay on those lines?

"I do. Intelligent unselfishness ought to be wiser than intelligent selfishness. don't you think? If the men who work for me receive wages to feel a personal share in the profits of the business and, more than that, a personal love for me and for the part of me in him won't the result be more care. less waste, more diligence. more faithfulness?

"Yes; I think so. A good many other business men don't, do they? I mean as a general thing? How about your relations to the selfish world that is not trying to make money on Christian principles?

"That complicates my action. of course.

"Does your plan contemplate what is coming to be known as co-operation?

"Yes; as far as I have gone, it does As I told you. I am studying out my details carefully. I am absolutely convinced that Jesus in my place would absolutely unselfish He would love all these men in his employ. He would recognize that his highest work was his business—to be a mutual helpfulness and would conduct it all so that God's kingdom would be evidently the first object sought. I have gone only a little way, as I say. I am working. I must have the to complete the details."

Henry Maxwell finally left Milton Wright. he was profoundly impressed with the revolution that was being wrought directly in the business. As he passed out of the store he caught something of the new spirit of the place. There was no hesitancy in the look that Milton Wright's new relations to his employees were beginning, even though after less than two weeks, to conform the entire business. This was apparent in the conduct and faces of the clerks.

"If Milton Wright keeps on, he will be one of the most influential preachers in Raymond." said Henry Maxwell to himself when he reached his study. The question rose as to his continuance in this course when he began to lose money by it. as was possible. Henry Maxwell prayed that the Holy Spirit, who had shown himself with growing power in the company of the first church disciples, might abide long with them all, and with that prayer on his lips and in his heart he began the preparation of a sermon in which he was going to present to his people on Sunday the subject of the saloon in Raymond, as he now believed Jesus would do. He had never preached against the saloon in this way before. He knew that the things he should say would lead to serious results. Nevertheless he went on with his work, and every sentence he wrote or shaped was preceded with the question, "Would Jesus say that?" Once in the course of his study he went down on his knees. No one except himself could know what that meant to him. When had he done that in the preparation of sermons before the change that had come into his thought of discipleship? As he viewed his ministry now he did not dare to preach without praying for wisdom. He no longer thought of his dramatic delivery and its effect on his audience. The great question with him now was, "What would Jesus do?"

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Saturday night at the Rectangle witnessed some of the most remarkable scenes that Mr. Gray and his wife had ever known. The meetings had intensified with each night of Rachel's singing. A stranger passing through the Rectangle in the daytime might have heard a good deal about the meetings in one way and another. It cannot be said that up to that Saturday night there was any appreciable lack of oaths and impurity and heavy drinking. The Rectangle would not have acknowledged that it was growing any better or that even the singing had softened its conversation or its outward manner. It had too much local pride in being "tough." But, in spite of itself, there was a yielding to a power it had never measured and did not know well enough to resist beforehand.

Gray had recovered his voice, so that Saturday he was able to speak. The fact that he was obliged to use his voice carefully made it necessary for the people to be very quiet if they wanted to hear. Gradually they had come to understand that this man was talking these many weeks and using his time and strength to give them a knowledge of a Saviour, all out of a perfectly unselfish love for them. Tonight the great crowd was as quiet as Henry Maxwell's decorous audience ever was. The fringe around the tent was deeper, and the saloons were practically empty. The Holy Spirit had come at last, and Gray knew that one of the great prayers of his life was going to be answered.

And Rachel—her singing was the best, most wonderful Virginia or Jasper Chase had ever known. They had come together again tonight with Dr. West, who had spent all his spare time that week in the Rectangle with some charity cases. Virginia was at the organ, Jasper sat on a front seat looking up at Rachel, and the Rectangle swayed as one man toward the platform as she sang:

"Just as I am, without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me
And that thou bidst me come to thee—
O Lamb of God, I come, I come!"

Gray said hardly a word. He stretched out his hand with a gesture of invitation, and down the two aisles of the tent broken, sinful creatures, men and women, stumbled toward the platform. One woman out of the street was near the organ. Virginia caught the look of her face, and for the first time in the life of the rich girl the thought of what Jesus was to a sinful woman came with a suddenness and power that were like nothing but a new birth. Virginia left the organ, went to her, looked into her face and caught her hands in her own. The other girl trembled, then fell on her knees, sobbing, with her head down upon the back of the bench in front of her, still clinging to Virginia. And Virginia, after a moment's hesitation, kneeled down by her, and the two heads were bowed close together.

But when the people had crowded in a double row all about the platform, most of them kneeling and crying, a man in evening dress, different from the others, pushed through the seats and came and kneeled down by the side of the drunken man who had disturbed the meeting when Henry Maxwell spoke. He kneeled within a few feet of Rachel Winslow, who was still singing softly, and as she turned for a moment and looked in his direction she was amazed to see the face of Rollin Page! For a moment her voice faltered. Then she went on:

"Just as I am thou wilt receive,
Wilt welcome, pardon, cleanse, relieve.
Because thy promise I believe,
O Lamb of God, I come, I come!"

The voice was as the voice of divine longing, and the Rectangle, for the time being, was swept into the harbor of redemptive grace.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Co-operative Dairying In Holland.

According to the German paper, Milch Zeitung, an extraordinary development has of late years taken place in co-operative dairying in Holland. For several years, says that paper, much attention has been paid to the manufacture and marketing of butter, now nearly all carried out on co-operative principles, peasant proprietorship in that country being almost universal. Large butter factories, too, are the rule, where the most advanced methods are adopted. For instance, with a view to making first rate butter, the cream is often pasteurized and separated by the Schwartz process instead of by the centrifugal system. Artificial cultures are often used, and the result is most satisfactory. So are the simple but very businesslike methods of marketing. At Maestricht a combined association disposes of the great bulk of the butter and cheese made by the members. It not only sells the produce for its members upon co-operative principles, but endeavors to put the individual dairies into direct business relation with foreign firms, particularly in England, with the aid of the Dutch consular agents.

THE BOERS SUFFER

RECENT FIGHTING NEAR LADYSMITH DISASTROUS TO THEM.

British Make Several Successful Sorties In Which the Loss to the Enemy's Force Is Very Heavy Feeling In London That General White May Yet Retrieve His Shaken Reputation.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Dispatches from the front have rent the veil of gloom enveloping Ladysmith, showing the British garrison not merely standing on the dogged defensive, but executing a series of brilliant sorties.

Accounts from different sources agree that the laconic official description of Thursday's engagement as "an effective shelling of the Boer laager," was unduly modest. It appears that General Sir Stewart White sent a strong force of cavalry and infantry to attack the Boers at Latham's farm, about 10 miles to the northwest, and apparently achieved a surprise, the Boers being caught on the open veldt and cut to pieces and their camp captured. Encouraged by this success, General White decided to risk an even more important engagement on the following day which was Again Justified by Success.

Ladysmith had been isolated and a Boer force had intercepted the railway between Ladysmith and Colenso. This force Friday had descended upon Colenso, and, as shown by the dispatches from Estcourt, had compelled a hurried abandonment of Colenso and a retirement of the British to Estcourt. General White had ascertained that the Boers were attacking Colenso, but he was not aware of the British retirement. General White's force caught the Boers in the rear and after the hills had been shelled the British infantry stormed the position. Meanwhile the British cavalry swept around the base and as the retreating enemy swept down the plains with the storming force behind them and the river before them the cavalry charged and the Boers perished almost to a man. The British returned to Ladysmith without coming into touch with the Colenso garrison, which had retired to Estcourt.

BOERS AT KIMBERLEY.

Apparently Increasing Their Force Food Becoming Scarce.

HOPE TOWN, Cape Colony, Nov. 4.—A dispatch which has been received here from Kimberley dated Nov. 1 says:

"Apparently the Boer reinforcements from Mafeking have arrived, as the burghers are more numerous and closer around Kimberley. About 1,200 of them made a demonstration three miles eastward of Premier mine, and opened fire on the De Beers carts, but no damage was done.

"The explosion of the dynamite magazine caused by the Boers firing the place, was terrific. The huts contained 35 tons of dynamite, valued at £3,500.

"All the wounded are progressing satisfactorily.

"A committee to regulate the supply and prices of food is being formed.

BOERS LOST HEAVILY.

Further Reports of Friday's Battle Near Ladysmith.

ESTCOURT, Natal, Nov. 8.—A reliable native has brought confirmatory evidence of Friday's fight south of Ladysmith. A reconnaissance in force was made by a British division, the object being to relieve the Colenso column, which had been attacked by the Boers. The British infantry charged the Boers, who were strongly posted on Globlers Kloof hill, and drove them down on the plain towards the Tugela river, when the British cavalry, executing a fine flanking movement, charged the Boers, almost annihilating them. The plain was strewn with slain Boers.

An armored train has again left for Colenso with a company of the Dublin Fusileers and a railroad engineering staff to repair the line. No fighting is supposed to have occurred Saturday as no firing was heard.

QUIET AT LADYSMITH.

Hostilities Have Ceased Since the Battle of Friday.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—An official dispatch from Ladysmith, dated Monday, Nov. 6, says:

"There has been a cessation of hostilities since Friday. Only one Kaffir was killed by the Boer bombardment. The total British loss was eight killed, including Captain Knapp and Lieutenant Brabant, and 20 wounded in Thursday's and Friday's engagements. The town is well provisioned and is believed to be entirely safe."

KING OSCAR ARBITRATOR.

Will Settle Claims Arising From Military Operations in Samoa.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Assistant Secretary Hill, for the United States, Mr. Tower, for Great Britain, and Mr. Mumm von Schwarzenstein on the part of Germany, at the state department signed a convention providing for the adjustment by arbitration of claims of inhabitants of Samoa, for damages resulting from the naval and military operations there last spring.

King Oscar II of Norway and Sweden is specified by the treaty as the arbitrator.

OPEN DOOR IN CHINA.

German Foreign Office Favors a Live and Let Live Policy.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The foreign office authorized the Associated Press to say regarding the United States government's representations relative to maintaining the open door in China, that Germany has shown by opening a free port at Kiao Chou and by Count Von Buelow's binding declarations that she favors a live and let live policy in China.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

The Duluth grand jury is investigating police methods in that city.

A test of the interstate phase of the Grindeland law has been begun.

The Twin City union carpenters will ask for an 8-hour day with 9-hour pay.

An omission in the state game law apparently permits the shipment of venison.

The trial of Louis Menage of Minneapolis Guaranty Loan fame has been set for Dec. 11.

Ex-Governor Barto of Minnesota, who has been ill for some time, died at his home in St. Cloud Saturday.

Robert P. Porter has been offered the position of the insular division, now held by John S. Speel of St. Paul.

Ten persons were injured—one perhaps fatally—by the falling of an elevator in a Minneapolis building.

A garrote from the Manila prison has been presented to the Minnesota State Historical society by Major Ed S. Bean.

Judge Lochren has decided the Section 30 case in favor of the Germania Iron company, which holds title under the Hartman entry.

The American Public Health association, in session at Minneapolis, pronounced heartily in favor of the Minnesota national park project.

Lake lumber shipments for the month at Duluth were over 70,000,000 feet, with about 5,000,000 feet more shipped all-rail to points as far east as Pittsburg.

A special policeman at Albert Lea was fatally injured by a blow on the head, struck by a man whose son the officer attempted to remove to the hospital, he having smallpox.

The Cambridge cut-off on the Great Northern will be opened for traffic about the middle of the month. Trains will be sent out from Duluth via Cambridge instead of Elk river, as at present, and the Elk River line will have a stub train during the winter.

The iron ore shipments from Minnesota for October were 1,158,000 tons, making the total to date 1 205,000 tons ahead of last year to the same time. Shipments in November are not likely to be large, but they will make the total increase for the year about 1,700,000 tons.

The state auditor has requested remittances from freight line transportation companies for taxes due this year under the valuation fixed by the equalization board. These are private companies operating cars over the various railroads, such as tank lines, packing house car lines, refrigerator companies, etc.

Work on the new capitol will be stopped by severe cold weather, which would not come as a surprise at any time now. The past summer has witnessed a great amount of work on the big state structure. The walls are now practically finished up to the roof beams. Only on the south side, over the main entrance, the wall has not been completed.

The trustees of the state hospitals for the insane held a meeting at St. Paul and received reports from contractors of the two new asylums at Anoka and Hastings, giving promise of an early completion of both institutions. It is expected to open the Anoka asylum in two months at least, while the Hastings building will not be ready until late in the winter.

The Duluth city council and public library board have notified Andrew Carnegie that it stands ready to purchase a tract 150x140 feet, on the corner of Second street and First avenue west, subject to his approval. When it is received the land will be bought and plans ordered. The city will pay $15,000 for the site, leaving all of Mr. Carnegie's $50,000 to go into the building.

The fourteenth annual report of the state weighmaster has just been submitted to the state railroad and warehouse commission by Weighmaster Edward C. O'Brien of Minneapolis, shows the number of bushels of grain weighed in and out of mills and elevators during the year to be as follows: Wheat 120,765,937, corn 9,961,464, oats 21,518,813, rye 1,264,833, barley 1,932,486, flour 5,496,493.

The state timber board, governor, auditor and treasurer, have decided to hold no sales of stumpage this fall. They had previously agreed that there would be no sale at the capitol and this decision negatives any smaller sales at the county seats. Reports from cruisers were given that there was no timber subject to waste, the condition of sale, and the board agreed that stumpage is worth more to hold than to sell unless in exceptional cases.

Insurance Commissioner O'Shaughnessy has given notice to the Security Trust, Safe Deposit and Surety company of Philadelphia that he had canceled the company's license to do business in Minnesota because it had not satisfied the claim of King & Steele, Duluth contractors, who won a suit against the company as surety for a Pennsylvania firm. The company's defense was that the judgment was tied up by attachment proceedings. The Minnesota authorities hold that the proceedings are frivolous and void.

Director Merriam has completed the districting of Minnesota into geographical divisions for taking the census. C. S. Sloan, the official geographer, has decided upon each division except a few in Duluth. According to Mr. Sloan's divisions there will be more than 1,500 enumeration districts in the state. There will be one enumerator for each division. In Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and a few more cities compensation for counting will be paid at the rate of 2 cents for each person counted and in other districts a per diem of from $3 to $4.

GRAND GIFT DISTRIBUTION

The Most Remarkable Offer Ever Made by a Reliable Concern.

EDITOR JOURNAL: Please announce that for a limited time we will give absolutely free to every married lady sending name, address and a two cent stamp for postage, an elegant triple-silver-plated Sugar Shell. Such goods sell in jewelry stores at 75 cents each. This is the most expensive advertising we have ever done, but it will make us thousands of friends and permanent customers. There is nothing to pay except, a two cent stamp as a sort of guaranty of good faith. The Home Furnisher, our own monthly publication, showing our line of high grade silverware and furniture, will also be sent free. But one Sugar Shell to a family.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO.
Morgan and Harrison Streets, Chicago. [28-33]

For Sale

One lot in Jerome's addition and two lots in Sampson's addition. If you want a good lot at a low figure, ask to see them. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

For Sale

A desirable house and lot with barn. This house is in first class condition and well located. The price is $1,700 and it is a bargain. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

Especially for Ladies.

Are those splendid compartment cars on the Burlington Limited from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago. All the comforts of home including an electric heater for your curling iron. When you send for a railroad ticket, insist on having it over the Burlington.

For Sale

A good farm of 320 acres, well cultivated, has a good house and barn and close to Crookston markets. Can be bought right. For particulars call at the JOURNAL office.

LATE MARKET REPORT

Duluth Grain.

DULUTH, Nov 8

WHEAT—No. 1 hard, 68½c; No 1 Northern, 6[illegible]c; No 2 Northern, [illegible] No Northern, [illegible]. To Arrive—No 1 hard 6[illegible]; No 1 Northern, 67½c; May 70¾c.

FLAX—To arrive, $1.24; December, $1.22½; May, [illegible].

Minneapolis Wheat.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov 8

WHEAT—In Store—No. 1 Northern November, [illegible]; December 6[illegible]; May 69¾c. [illegible]—No 1 hard, [illegible]; No 1 Northern, [illegible]; No. 2 Northern, [illegible] 63¼c.

Sioux City Live Stock.

SIOUX CITY, Ia, Nov [illegible]

HOGS Market steady. Range of prices, [illegible]

CATTLE—Market slow, stockers 10c lower.

Sales ranged at $4.75@[illegible] for beeves; $2.00@3.50 for cows, bulls and mixed; $3.5[illegible] for [illegible]; $4[illegible] for calves [illegible]

Receipts: Hogs, [illegible]; cattle, [illegible]

St Paul Union Stock Yards.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Nov 8

HOGS—Market [illegible] Range of prices, [illegible]

CATTLE—Market steady and [illegible]. Good stockers and feeders are [illegible]; common slow.

Sales ranged at $3[illegible]@3.50 for stockers; $2.4[illegible]@[illegible] for cows; $2[illegible]@[illegible] for bulls; $2.80@3.[illegible] for heifers.

SHEEP—Market steady, lambs opened steady, closing weaker.

Sales ranged at [illegible]@4.00 for sheep; $4.[illegible]@[illegible] for lambs.

Receipts: Cattle, 6[illegible]; calves, 300; hogs, 250; sheep, 2,000.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8

HOGS—Steady to strong.

Sales ranged at $4.00@4.30 for mixed and butchers, [illegible]@4.30 good heavy; $3.[illegible]@4.00 for rough heavy; $3.95@[illegible] for light.

CATTLE—Best natives steady to firm others easy.

Sales ranged at $4.30@5.75 for beeves; $1.75@[illegible] for cows and heifers; $3.9[illegible]@4.2[illegible] for Texas steers; $3.00@4.50 for stockers and feeders.

SHEEP—Market few Western lambs; native lambs steady; sheep steady.

Sales ranged at $[illegible]@4.50 for sheep; $4.00@[illegible] for lambs.

Receipts: Hogs 31,000; cattle, 16,5[illegible]; sheep, 1[illegible],000.

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.

WHEAT—December, 69⅛@69¼c; May, 73⅛.

CORN—December, [illegible]c; January, 31[illegible]; May [illegible]c.

OATS—November, 23⅝@23¾c; December, [illegible]; May, [illegible].

PORK—November, $8.15; December, $8.23½; January, $9.75@9.77½; May, $9.7[illegible]

FLAX—Cash northwestern, $1.[illegible]; southwestern, 1.2[illegible]; December, $1.[illegible]; May $1.[illegible]; November, $1.27.

POULTRY—Dressed, turkeys, 9@10c; chickens, 7½ [illegible]

BUTTER—Creameries, 15@24c; dairy, 14@[illegible]

EGGS—Fresh, 18c.

Crookston Market.

Corrected Thursday morning, Nov. 9.

WHEAT—No. 1 Hard 56 No. 1 Northern 55 No. 2 Northern 52.
OATS—22c.
BARLEY—20 to 30c.
FLAX—$1.09.
POTATOES—20 to 25c.
EGGS—17c.
BUTTER—18 to 22c.
ONIONS—50c
BEANS—1.50.
HAY—Baled $6.00, loose $4.00.
HOGS—4c live; 5½c dressed.
CATTLE—2¼ to 3½ live weight, 5½ to 6½c dressed beef.
SHEEP—7c.
CHICKENS—10c.
TURKEYS—10c
HIDES—5 to 6c.
WOOL—12½c.
FLOUR—2.20 per cwt.
BRAN—$10 per ton.
SHORTS—$12 per ton.

A Happy Mother

Frolicking with her baby makes one of the prettiest spectacles ever seen in the home. But nothing is sadder to see than the unhappy mother, weak and nervous, striving in vain to hush the cries of her weak and nervous babe. There can be no happiness for either mother or child without health. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription "has done wonders" for many a woman, by restoring her health and opening for her the way to happy motherhood. This really wonderful medicine is not a cure-all. It is a preparation specially designed to cure diseases peculiar to women. It dries debilitating drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, cures female weakness, and removes the causes which generally make women nervous and sleepless.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

Mrs. James W. Blacker, of 629 Catherine Street, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "Your medicines have done wonders for me. For years my health was very poor; I had four miscarriages, but since taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I have much better health, and now I have a fine healthy baby."

Use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets with "Favorite Prescription" if the bowels are inactive or irregular.

FOR SALE.

Imported Yorkshire Swine and Shropshire Sheep at reasonable prices.
For full particulars address
A. W. EDSON,
Austin, Minn.

S. C. Johnson's

Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale	35c
Oats, per bushel	28c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs	75c
Shorts, 100 lbs	65c
Bran, 100 lbs	60c
Shelled Corn, per bu	40c
Condition Powder, per pkg	25c
Shorts, per ton	$12.00
Bran, per ton	10.00

Cedar Posts from 12½c to 15c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

Burlington Route

Finest Train on Earth from
ST. PAUL
-AND-
Minneapolis
-TO-
ST. LOUIS
AND ALL
SOUTHERN CITIES
Electric Lighted and Steam Heated.

Order For Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court. Special Term. Oct. 24, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Bertel C. Jorgenson, deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of Berthe Jorgenson of the County of Polk representing, among other things, that Bertel E. Jorgenson, late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of October A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels, and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased and praying that administration of said estate be to Jacob J. Ida, granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the

24th day of November A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock a. m., at the probate office, in Crookston in said county.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 24th day of October A. D. 1899. By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
[30-34] Judge of Probate.

PATENTS DESIGNS TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS OBTAINED
ADVICE AS TO PATENTABILITY FREE
Notice in "Inventive Age"
Book "How to obtain Patents"
Charges moderate. No fee till patent is secured.
Letters strictly confidential. Address,
E. G. SIGGERS, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C.

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota—In bankruptcy.

In the matter of Ole Gaustad, bankrupt.

To the creditors of Ole Gaustad, of East Grand Forks in the County of Polk, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 1st day of November, A. D. 1899, the said Ole Gaustad was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned in Crookston, in said county on the

13th day of November, A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Nov. 1st, 1899.
OLE J. VAULE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.
FRANK B. FEETHAM,
Grand Forks, N. Dak.
Attorney for Bankrupt.

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court Special Term. Oct. 17, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Hauken H. Netteland, deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of Johan O. Sandberg of the County of Polk representing among other things that Hauken H. Netteland, late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on or about the 1st day of August A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this County at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels, and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is interested by purchase of real estate, and praying that administration of said estate be to Andrew P. Hanson granted.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the 10th day of November A. D. 1899 at two o'clock P. M., at the Probate office in Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for the three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston the 17th day of October A. D. 1899. By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
[29-33] Judge of Probate.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court. Special Term October, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Oscar Strand, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of Oscar Strand, deceased, late of the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, being granted to Jens P. Christenson.

It is Ordered, That six months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the probate court of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is Further Ordered, That the

23rd day of April, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m., at a special term of said probate court, to be held at the probate office in Crookston in said county, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said probate court will examine and adjust such claims and demands.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston this 21st day of October, A. D. 1899.
By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
[29-31] Judge of Probate.

Summons

State of Minnesota, County of Polk }ss. DISTRICT COURT
Fourteenth Judicial District

William A. Lanctot, plaintiff against

The Minneapolis Trust Company, as Receiver of the North Western Guaranty Loan Company, and Mary Rose Miller, also all other persons or parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

The state of Minnesota to the above named defendants:

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which is on file in the office of the Clerk of said Court, at the Court House in the City of Crookston in said county, within twenty days after the service of this summons upon you, exclusive of the day of such service, and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff in this action will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

DEFOREST BUCKLEN,
Plaintiff's Attorney,
Crookston Minn.

State of Minnesota, Polk County. }ss. DISTRICT COURT.
Fourteenth Judicial District

William A. Lanctot, plaintiff against

The Minneapolis Trust Company, as receiver of the North Western Guaranty Loan Company; and Mary Rose Miller; also all other persons or parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

Notice is hereby given, that the above entitled action is brought by the above named plaintiff against the above named defendants, to determine adverse claims to that certain tract of real estate situate in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota described as follows, to wit: The northeast quarter of section nine in township one hundred and forty-nine of range forty-three. That the relief demanded by the plaintiff is that the plaintiff be adjudged the owner in fee of all of the above described real estate, and that the defendants have no right, title, estate, lien, or interest therein or to any part thereof. That said action is now pending in the above named Court, and no personal claim is made against any of the defendants.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., July 24, 1899.
DEFOREST BUCKLEN,
[25-31] Plaintiff's Attorney.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 43-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Isabella I. Chilback and John Chilback, her husband, mortgagors, to George Q. Erskine, mortgagee, bearing date the 7th day June 1893, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 16th day of June 1893, at 11 o'clock a. m., in book 64 of mortgages, on page 110-13 and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

Lots numbered one (1) two (2) three (3) and four (4) of block number eleven (11) in Jerome's addition to the townsite of Crookston according to the recorded plat thereof on file in office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house, in the City of Crookston in said County and State, on the

8th day of December 1899,

at ten o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 43-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars, attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated Oct. 21th A. D. 1899.
A. A. MILLER, GEORGE Q. ERSKINE,
Attorney. Mortgagee.
Crookston, Minnesota. [29-35]

MISNER'S Rheumatism and Kidney Cure. A sure cure for rheumatism and kidney troubles. Those who drink water from surface wells, which is nearly always charged with alkali are nearly all more or less afflicted with rheumatism and kidney trouble. Ask your neighbor about the good quality of this remedy. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail by C. E. MISNER, Crookston, Minn.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

MALLORY.

Mrs. R. B. Bale, of Fisher, is visiting on the Marais this week.

Jas. Gilmour spent several days with friends at Leeds, N. D.

F. I. McMahan is putting in a full line of groceries for the fall trade.

Mr. Chas. McGinnis has opened a confectionery store and is doing a rushing business.

Representative Cummings was seen on our streets exchanging compliments with his many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. have Hannah moved to their farm at Leeds, N. D., where they will spend the winter.

The M. W. A. dance tomorrow night should be a grand success. Good music and supper will be furnished. Tickets only one dollar.

Died, on Tuesday morning, Patrick Cox, one of the oldest settlers in Polk county having settled near Red Lake River in 1872. He was buried today. His remains were followed to their last resting place by his many friends. His sisters and brother have the entire sympathy of this community.

FELTON.

Stenerson Bros. & Co. received two car loads of wood from Eagle Bend this week.

J. H. Robertson special agent for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company did business in town last Tuesday.

John F. Giles, late superintendent of the public schools at Moorhead, was in the city Monday and Tuesday, in the interest of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York.

Frank Donally, living about four miles south of town, committed suicide last Tuesday evening by shooting himself in the head. His body was not found before next morning by neighbors. He fired two shots before he could accomplish the deed, the second shot entirely blowing off the top of his head.

MAPLE BAY.

We are having our Indian summer.

N. Nelson went to Mentor on business Saturday.

Messeh and Sletten were down from Mentor last week.

Will Conklin has gone to Grand Forks on business.

Daniel Dow, from Grand Forks, done business here last week.

Miss Nelson spent Sunday here with her brother and returned to Mentor Monday.

The factory is once more running with a full crew. They are manufacturing shingles.

Mrs. Th. Rustad has been visiting with her parents at Hitterdale. She returned home Saturday.

S. D. Felsing, who has been ill all fall, has gone to Minneapolis to consult the doctors there. We wish him good success.

WYLIE

Maurice Dargan is painting his house this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Thill drove to Red Lake Falls Sunday.

Ed. Erickson, of Crookston, shipped a car load of cattle from here.

Prof. McAnulty biked it to Dugdale Friday returning Sunday.

Miss Emma Larson returned from Crookston Tuesday, after an extended visit in that city.

The Great Northern railroad has put in a stock shoot. We hope the next improvement will be a new depot.

L. Widecamper has finished his carpenter contracts for the season, and has gone to Red Lake Falls for the winter. It is expected he will visit here quite frequently as he has a contract of another nature not yet completed.

WARREN.

Mrs. Frank Robbins is building an elegant new home in the Harwood addition to the city.

H. L. Wood, head "punch" with W. F. Powell & Co., leaves tonight for Minneapolis, on business for that firm.

A. J. Sies, one of the old Warren boys, is visiting his parents and relatives. He has been in Montana and in British Columbia for the past seven years. Has bought and sold a number of mines and won and lost a fortune during his stay in the West. He expects to "hit Alaska soon" as he put it.

The new court house has just begun to show progress. The contractors have had a number of set backs. The north vault recently caved in, one of the factories furnishing material for inside work burned down and several other little discouragements have delayed the work. But when our new court house is completed it will be second to none in the north part of the state.

The Finest Limited Train.

From St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago is the Burlington electric lighted and steam heated. Every comfort that other trains have and some that no others have. Remember this when buying railroad tickets.

SOUTH CROOKSTON.

Mrs. T. C. Stewart is very sick but we hope she may recover again.

T. S. Hutchins and family have gone to St. Vincent for a visit.

Mr. Sullivan is doing a rushing business in his hotel, the South Crookston.

Wm. Arnold, of the Fifth ward, passed through here with a car load of cattle going to St. Paul.

H. Skeer has gone to Larimore to work on the Great Northern road after a lay-off of about eight weeks.

B. J. McCloran has his building rented for a restaurant. B. J. says it will be first-class all through.

A young man boarding at Mr. Chilbuck's is very low with typhoid. There is little hope for his recovery.

Con Kepple is the leading hotel man of the Fifth ward, always crowded. Con is all right among the boys—.

The Fifth ward has been improved a good deal by a new sidewalk from Carman to the city. It is something that was needed very much.

Alex. Gray spent last Sunday with us. He is a good fellow and we enjoy seeing him come over to see us once in a while.

We notice that the citizens living on Second Avenue North have not yet had their street graded and new sidewalks put in as was promised them.

G. W. Banks and T. C. Stewart are putting on the finishing touches on Mr. McGregor's house in Jerome's addition and nothing better can be found in the addition. Of course it could not be otherwise when Geo. Banks and T. C. Stewart had the building of it, as both of the gentlemen understand their business.

LENGBY.

Otto Wolte returned from Warren Thursday.

A. H. Johnson was at Fosston Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carthright were at Fosston Thursday.

Ole O. Lommen did business at Fosston Saturday.

Ida Wolte returned home from Hansville Monday.

Mrs. G. Erickson and children were visitors here last week.

Carrie Molstad returned home from Grand Forks Thursday.

Ole Lindberg is building an addition to his blacksmith shop.

Saterstrom, Olson & Co. received a carload of feed Wednesday.

Ida Lillo, of McIntosh, visited with Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Lillo Sunday.

Dorothy Lillo, who has been staying at Fosston, paid a visit home Sunday.

Joe Dargen, of Grand Forks has been here and bought ten carloads of wood.

Evalena Lillo, who has been staying at Crookston, came home for a visit Sunday.

Charley Kompstad has finished threshing and has laid up his machine for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Ellason and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Olson were at Fosston Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Olson who have been staying at Fosston the past week, returned Sunday.

Mrs. J. L. Dove left Thursday for her old home in Iowa to visit her parents and other relatives. She will remain there the greater part of the winter.

NORTHLAND.

O. Sathre left for St. Paul on Friday.

Mrs. Martin Hillard is visiting at Neby this week.

A jolly party surprised Mrs. G. Nelson last Saturday.

L. Thompson spent Sunday with his family in Grand Forks.

Ida Figenskan is here from Grand Forks, visiting with her brother Tom.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Johnson, a daughter. We all smoke Sam

John Hillard has sold 80 acres of his farm to S. Petterson, consideration $3,000.

Frank Nelson lost a valuable horse last week which makes the fourth one within a year.

John Larson is the man who is to look after the horse shoeing and other blacksmithing at Hoglos.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Nystrom are the happy parents of twins, both daughters. The girls are coming.

Quite a number from here went up to Crookston on Thursday to take in the wonderful bargains in furs and buckskin goods.

The farmers are busy scraping, ditching and preparing for a wet spring, which we earnestly hope will turn out to be a dry one.

Miss Emma Basgrud gave a party for her numerous friends on Saturday evening. Dancing was kept up until 12 o'clock, when a dainty supper was served, after which all went home, knowing that they all had had a good time.

ERSKINE.

Mrs. Gunder Stenerson is very sick.

Dr. Mohn, of Fertile, was here Sunday.

Miss Johanna Espeseth is home on a visit.

H. N. Nelson left for Red Lake Falls Monday.

Miss Clara Eggen left for Grand Forks Monday.

Ole Mervald returned from North Dakota Monday.

Tollef Torgerson, of Fisher, was in town Wednesday.

Echo's editor was at McIntosh between trains Sunday.

Knute Olson, of Maple Lake, done business here Tuesday.

Andrew Olberg transacted business in the county seat Saturday.

Erik Hanve and John Roisum did business at Fertile Thursday.

E. E. Osthy returned from the fall's work in North Dakota Sunday.

Carl Bay left for Minneapolis Monday to work in a machine shop.

N. O. Nelson quit threshing Saturday and put his rig under shed.

H. N. Nelsondid business in Badger and Mentor Friday and Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Narveson transacted business at McIntosh Monday.

Christian Mellsness left for Neilsville Wednesday to visit with his sons.

A brand new boy at the home of M. E. Flom. Both mother and child doing well.

We are right in line here now. Our phone is in running order. (Hello, who is there?)

Mrs. S Drew and daughter of McIntosh, visited with the Cronquist family Friday and Saturday.

Henry Nass returned from North Dakota Tuesday, just in time to attend the marriage of his brother, Jull.

Andrew Thompson, our new jolly man, moved in over the drug store Monday and is now ready for business.

Svan Stenerson returned to Pelican Rapids Saturday and will leave there for the old country within ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. Halvor Osby and Miss Emma, attended the funeral of the child of Halden Osby in Winger Sunday.

I. U. Jennings transacted business here Thursday and while here did some practicing in shooting cannon ball duck.

Jull Nass and Miss Anna Nelson were married Tuesday at the home of the bride's parents in the town of Woodside, and a large number of invited guests were there to witness the ceremony.

GRAND FORKS.

Senator Arnold is in from Larimore on business.

W. E. Patton was a Wahpeton visitor in the city today.

H. B. Asbelman, of Fargo, was a Sunday visitor in the city.

Modjeska was greeted Thursday evening with a packed house.

Capt. Brandt defeated Hugh Thompson for mayor of East Grand Forks.

Miss Lottie Tibbals, of Larimore, was a guest of Mrs. N. W. Fegan over Sunday.

Mrs. D. E. Sassun and children, of Fargo, have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Nash.

The Misses Jessie and Leora Davies, of Crookston, were guests of Mrs. F. P. Davies over Sunday.

Supt. E. A. Douken, of the Dakota division, of the Great Northern, has been on the sick list for the past few days.

The annual meeting of the Grand Forks Federation of Clubs will be held Thursday afternoon. Reports of the year's work will be given, and new officers elected.

The new dormitory at the university is so near completion than some of the students moved into their new quarters today. The rooms are elegant and equal to any thing of the kind in the northwest.

Caniff & Co., began the work of painting and paper hanging in the elegant new court house at Warren this morning. Their most expert men are detailed on the job, as it is a big one and also difficult.

Judge Becker expects to leave next week for Steelton, S. D., where he will organize a Knights of Malta lodge, the only one in that state, as is the one in Grand Forks for the State of North Dakota.

Train Dispatcher S. A. Johnson, one of the oldest employes on the road, has resigned his position at Larimore, so it is rumored. He will visit a few weeks with his family in Grand Forks before laying definite plans for the future.

Two Devils Lake gentlemen Messrs. Phillips and Coburn have taken charge of the Windsor hotel in East Grand Forks. They are experienced hotel men, and will have the Windsor thoroughly refitted and remodeled both inside and out.

GREAT NOVEMBER SALE

Our Great November Sale of Winter Goods is now running. We are offering values that cannot be duplicated in any store in this part of the state. We have just received a large consignment of Men's, Youth's and Boys' Winter Clothing that will be a surprise and a pleasure to all bargain hunters. Here are a few samples:

Overcoats

50 Overcoats, lot 8230, all wool beaver, a good $10 value....$4.98

50 Overcoats, lot 8880, all wool melton, a good $15 value....$7.98

Ulsters

100 Ulsters, lot 2464, a good $10.50 quality for.....$6.50

75 Ulsters, lot 2424, all wool Irish frieze, a good $18 value for.....$9.98

Suits

100 worsted tweed Suits, a good $10 quality.....$4.49

One entire lot of cassimeres, other stores' prices, $7.50, 8$ and $10. Great Western price is.....$5.00

50 Suits in worsted and French clay, $16, $18 and $20 values, all go at.....$9.98

Duck Coats

10 dozen Duck Coats, $1.50 values, Great Western price..98c

One extra lot of 50 Duck Coats, black and brown, rubber lined, regular $3 value, Great Western price.....$1.98

Mackinaw Coats

5 dozen Mackinaw Coats, regular $8 values, Great Western price.....$5.50

5 dozen all wool Mackinaw Coats in a heavy brown and mixed colors, $6 values at..$4.00

Shirts

50 dozen shirts, regular 50c values, Great Western price 25c and upward.

Underwear

50 dozen of Underwear, wool fleece lined, $1.50 values at, per suit.....90c

Heavy lumbermen's underwear in all wool, double breasted, regular $3 quality, Great Western price.....$1.75

Gentlemen's fine all wool underwear, $4 value, Great Western price.....$2.48

10 dozen red flannel underwear, $1 values, Great Western price.....48c

Caps

10 dozen Caps, 50c values, our price.....25c

All wool melton and beaver caps, 50c and upward.

Sweaters

50 dozen worsted sweaters, $1 values, Great Western price, 45c

Pants

Heavy all wool kersey pants, $3.50 values, Great Western price.....$1.98

10 dozen worsted pants at 75c

Boys' Suits and Overcoats at the greatest reduction ever heard of in Crookston.

Boys' Overalls

Boy's good quality overalls, our price.....15c

Ties

36 dozen Ties, 50c quality, our price.....25c

..Great Western Clothing House..

Opposite the Post Office. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.

ST. HILAIRE.

Harry Ives is back from Indiana, looking well.

The saw mill, it is said, will close down next Saturday.

Axel Chrisoferson was kicked by a horse on the 20th ult., dying from his injuries the day following.

J. L. Johnson, our former doctor and druggist, has opened a barber shop in the building formerly occupied by his drug store.

Mrs. Rev. Lunde was surprised on her birthday by a few of her friends, they presenting her with a fine silver coffee pot and cake tray.

Chas. Johnson, of Wylie, while working around his threshing machine one day last week, had the misfortune to fall from the machine onto a foot board, fracturing four ribs. Dr. Blomburgh reduced the fracture, and reports Mr. J. doing well.

Mrs. Andrew Swensen, of Wyandotte township, died the night of Oct. 31, unknown to the inmates of the house. She retired the evening previous in comparatively good health, complaining of nothing but a sore throat, from which she had been ailing for two or three days. Coroner Blair and Dr. Blomburgh were called and after examining the remains decided that Mrs. Swenson had died from diphtheria, heart paralysis evidently being the immediate cause of death.

If there be a "good road" committee in this state or any other state let them visit this section now that the roads are passable, and make a few suggestions to those having the roads in charge. With road graders in many of our towns it does seem as though a little work might be done to improve our roads. The lack of good roads and ditches is the greatest drawback to this country, and still a great many of our farmers seem to think that time and labor spent in that way is foolishly thrown away.

KEY WEST.

Miss Mable Haney, of Fisher, is visiting relatives of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Genkins, of Bellington, were callers here on Saturday.

D. Crain is improving the comfort of his residence by an application of tar paper.

Mrs. C. Folstad's sister, of Maple Bay, is visiting at the home of the former of this place.

Mrs. L. A. Gilphas, our telegraph operator's wife, arrived from Michigan Thursday morning.

W. Chalmers, of this place, has been trading horses. He now possesses a very subtle looking steed.

Rev. Cook, of Fisher, called at the Diffenbaugh home for the purpose of baptising the youngest daughter.

The Burlington buffet library car is one of the most convenient ever put on wheels. Besides all the periodicals and literature provided, there are duplicate whist boards for the amusement of the traveler. Goodness only knows what is "limited" in the way of beauty, comfort and luxury on on the Burlington 'limited'."

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

Economy

Is the Road to Wealth. There are several tracks in the road, however, but the principal and shortest is buying what you require at the very lowest possible prices. Our front door is built right over this track. We can prove it if you give us an opportunity. We find our present mode of doing business most economical to us and we are willing to share its advantages with our customers.

Slocum's CASH GROCERY

CHASE BLOCK, BROADWAY.

ED. ERICKSON,

DEALER IN

All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...

Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides. Stall fed Beef.....a Specialty

SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street CROOKSTON, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
Historical Society

Polk County Journal.

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1899 NO. 32

SOME LIVELY TOWNS

Along the Line of the Duluth Road As Witnessed by a Representative of the Journal.

MOST BEAUTIFUL SCENERY.

A Paradise for the Business Man, Sportsmen and Lover of the Beautiful in Nature.

Last week a representative of the JOURNAL made a business trip down the Fosston branch as far as Cass Lake, and stopped off at several of the towns on the way. This is one of the new localities that has been opened to business during the past year and to the stranger who makes his first trip over the road many surprises are prepared.

McIntosh, located in the southeastern portion of this county, is one of the first towns on this end of the line that attracts the attention. This is strictly an agricultural town, located as it is in one of the best farming districts in the Valley. The building boom has been sailing merrily on during the past summer and is even at this late season of the year in considerable evidence. A fine new city hall is now in course of erection as well as a large number of residences. Business is especially good this season as the crops in that neighborhood were very satisfactory. Business men are happy and money is as plenty as could be desired and expected. The town is up-to-date in the way of improvements, both public and private. The hotels furnish good cheer for the traveler and the citizens in general have a way of making one's stay among them pleasant. A short ride took us from here to Fosston.

This place, although one of the oldest towns in this district has never enjoyed anything in the boom line until tapped by the railroad a year ago. The town is inhabited by a very progressive class of business men and enjoys the trade of a large district. They have a first class school system and many up-to-date city improvements, including electric lights, large woolen mill, grist mill and waterworks. The place is growing with a rapidity characteristic of all the towns along the line and bids fair to be an important place in the due course of time.

The next place our representative stopped at was Bagley. This is a creation of the conditions arising from the advent of the railroad and is one of the young giants already. A boom has just struck this town in awful earnest, and the idler has no business there: all is activity. Buildings are being started in every direction and the sound of the saw and hammer is the music that lulls you to slumber and the reveille that calls the tardy one to the business of the day. A large school house and elegant churches have been erected, besides a large number of very substantial residences and business houses. The town, like all its neighbors, stands surrounded by the beautiful pine forests and is the headquarters of a number of logging enterprises. The supplying of the provisions for the lumber men who go from here to the lumber camps is one of its principal sources of revenue. The hunting and fishing to be found in the immediate vicinity attracts hunters of pleasure seekers at all seasons, and the place is always the centre of interest on this account. Thoen & Davids have a large lumber yard here, where they handle a large stock and do a large wholesale trade as well as supply the wants of local builders.

The next stop was made at Solway. The Solway Mercantile Co., A. J. Lammers & Co., proprietors, is located here. They do about the largest trade in the supplying of supplies for logging camps of any institution in the district, having some twenty odd camps on their list. They also do quite an extensive logging business themselves. This season they are banking 35,000,000 feet for the Crookston and East Grand Forks mills, besides 15,000,000 feet for other parties. They have a salesroom 40 x 48, two stories, besides four warerooms with an aggregate floor space of 4,000 square feet, and their business averages over $1,000 a day. Over 1,200 men have gone out to the logging camps from this place this season and will all be paid off there in the spring. This gives the place quite a business and makes it a very substantial factor in the business world. The Solway Land Co. own about 30,000 acres of land in one block in this vicinity and sold over 5,000 acres during the past season at an average price of $3.75 per acre.

Bemidji, the largest and most important of these towns of the woods was our next stop, and although we were prepared to see a very fair town a great surprise met us. Here in the new northwest surrounded by illimitable forests and extensive lakes is a city in every sense of the word, equipped with all the modern improvements and conveniences. Hotels that would do credit to the largest of our older towns, invite the weary traveler. A host of handsome business houses await your order for all the necessities and luxuries that one is used to seeing in the more advanced communities. Waterworks, electric lights, handsome public buildings, including a large city hall erected at a cost of $8,000, a brick school house that would do credit to a city of much greater pretentions, and as fine a collection of residences as one could imagine in a town of its size and age. The lake that lies to the east of the town is one of the beauties of the park region, and has a great reputation among those who enjoy the seductive pleasures of the rod and line. The pine woods that cover the country are the home of wild game that entice the hunter from the busy haunts of man. Here too the lumber man also finds unlimited material for the lumber for which this district is so famous. Loth though we were to leave this enchanting place business called and we took the train for Cass Lake.

Cass Lake, through its recent fire, the Indian uprising, its trouble with the Interior department, has by no means much before the public during its short life that we fain would let it pass without adding more to its already large stock of literature. The town is unique in its history and location and the whole country is watching it as the arena of an interesting controversy.

Taken as a whole this entire line of country bids fair to be of great importance in the near future and will play a good part in the history of the northern part of the state. Its resources are unlimited and will increase in value as the country is developed.

FOREST PARK PLANS

Minnesota Project to be Brought to the Attention of Congress.

Promoters of the national park project in Minnesota are preparing for their campaign before congress this winter. Col. Cooper, of Chicago, who is regarded as the originator of the antional park scheme, will be in Washington on the opening of congress for a conference with northwestern and other members who have given some thought to the subject. It is the intention of those who have charge of the matter to make it a general legislative proposition, and not local or sectional, as some seem to think.

It is contemplated at present to prepare a bill which will be presented in congress, the provisions of which will authorize the president to appoint a commission to take charge of the park matter and after a thorough investigation to report to congress at some future session. It is said that no expense to the government is to follow the appointment of the proposed commission. Whether senators and members of congress or private citizens or officials of the interior department are to be designated in the bill as members of the commission is not yet determined.

It is understood that the Indians have given their consent to the park bill, on the understanding that they are to receive full compensation for their lands, and receive perhaps more liberal treatment than they think they have received under the Nelson act.

Elsewhere.

A statute of Miss Winnie Davis, "The Daughter of the Confederacy," was unveiled at Hollywood, Va. last Friday in the presence of 10,000 people.

The Butter and Cheese Makers Association of the State held their annual meeting at Owatonna last Wednesday and Thursday.

Edward Atkinson has announced that he will suspend the publication of the Anti-Imperialist. The recent elections were a serious blow to imperialistic designs.

A French journal tells a story about a dog which belonged to an English dentist. The dog was scarcely able to support life owing to the loss of its teeth. The dentist made an artificial set, including four canine teeth and four molars mounted on a plate in the ordinary way. The dog now eats meat and even gnaws bones without difficulty and he has gained considerably in weight.

J. E. O'BRIEN RESIGNS

From the Presidency of Council and T. A. Harris is Chosen to Succed Him.

PAVING QUESTION CONSIDERED

And City Officials Instructed to Complete Contract—City Attorney's Salary Made $6nn.

At the meeting of the city council held last Tuesday evening Jas. E. O'Brien tendered his resignation as president of the council assigning as his reason for such action that he felt that he could best defend the city's interests from his place on the floor. The resignation was accepted, only three of the council men voting in the negative. T. A. Harris was then elected president and G. S. Chesterman vice-president.

Aside, perhaps, from the change made in the presiding officers of the council the most important business transacted had to do with the paving question. The following motion, made by Alderman Childs, was passed unanimously: That to the carrying out of the determination of the city council, heretofore made, to pave and curb certain parts of the streets of the city, heretofore ordered paved and curbed, all proceedings shall be under and in contemplation of the provisions of Chapter 235 of the General Laws of 1895 and notice is hereby given to all officials of said city to this effect. Alderman Childs then offered this motion: That the city attorney and city engineer be and the same are hereby directed to draft and prepare the contract for paving and curbing the streets heretofore ordered paved and curbed, which contract was awarded to J. H. Killmar, of Mnson City, Iowa, and present the same to the proper city officials for their signature. It is further directed that in drafting said contract its provisions shall be in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 235 of the General Laws of 1895 and shall provide that payment be made in bonds or certificates of indebtedness payable in five equal annual installments, which certificates shall be drawn in accordance with the requirements of said chapter. President O'Brien ruled the motion out of order as he claimed such action by the council could be taken only by ordinance. Alderman Childs appealed from the ruling of the president and the latter was not sustained. After considerable discussion the ruling was cut off by the motion for the previous question prevailing and the original motion then being put was passed, Alderman Chesterman voting aye. At this point President O'Brien tendered his resignation and moved its acceptance which motion prevailed, Aldermen Brown, Chesterman, Harris voting nay and Alderman McGregor not voting.

Mayor Stephens recommended that the salary of the city attorney be raised from $300 to $600 as there were several suits pending against the city and legal questions in connection with the city paving would take up a great deal of the city attorney's time. The recommendation was adopted.

The city hall committee was instructed to advertise for bids for coal.

The city attorney informed the council that Andrew Olson, who had constructed the sewer in the 5th ward, had sued the city for $2,640.70. Mr. Olson claims that alterations in the original plans made him incur additional expense.

The election of Tom Morris as fire chief was confirmed.

A resolution was passed providing that, under instructions from the city engineer, the sidewalk on Polk street might be made to conform to the grade of the lots.

The question of the abatement of taxes of Chas. Wood on his lots in the 5th ward was referred to the finance committee.

President Harris told the council that he would announce his committees later.

The council adjourned till Nov. 24.

A Famous Fat Family.

The mother of a most remarkable family has just died at Crickard, Randolph county, W. Va. Mrs. John K. Scott, who herself weiged 208 pounds and whose husband weighed 237 pounds, was the mother of eight sons, whose aggregate weights are 2,213 pounds. Their individual weights are as follows: Jefferson, 238 pounds; Charles, 275; Hugh, 275; James, 265; Oliver, 216; John J. 276; Winfield, 255; Edwin S. 343. Each of Mrs. Scott's sons are well-to-do farmers and all live in Randolph county.

COMMANDER FLOUR MILLING CO.

C. E. Sawyer and A. M. Hixson Are Booming Things Down East.

The following article taken from the West Superior Telegram will be read with interest by the many friends of Messrs. A. N. Hixon and C. E. Sawyer:

The Commander Flour Milling Company, which has bought the mill on Hughitt slip formerly owned by the Barclay Milling Company, is rapidly coming to the front among the local flour producers. The new company has a capital of fifty thousand dollars. The officers are A. N. Hixon, president and general manager: James E. Newman, vice-president: and Charles Sawyer, secretary and treasurer. These gentlemen have absolute control of the property and Messrs. Hixon and Sawyer are giving their personal attention to it. Mr. Newman divides his time between this and his mill at Portland, Mich. The mill has a capacity of from six to eight hundred barrels per day, and since it started up, over a month ago, has been running to the full limit night and day. The mill makes the two best patent brands, the "Commander" and "Superior's Glory." The first baker's called "Happy Thought" and a second baker's called "Monitor." "Superior's Glory," which is intended for the local trade, is a high-grade flour and has met with very favorable reception by the trade. The mill also makes a specialty of mixed feed for the local and eastern trade, known as the "Commander Mixed Feed."

The mill is located on Hughitt slip, has a dock frontage of 200 feet running to the street, with 376 feet of terminal tracks along the building. This gives it excellent shipping and receiving facilities, equal to those of any mill at the head of the lakes.

The storage capacity is from twelve to eighteen thousand bushels and is in the mill.

This is the only mill at the head of the lakes, now running, which is not connected with the United States Flour Milling Company. The mill is doing business in the foreign market, but at present its main trade is in the east and at home. The product of the mill today is sold ahead and the prospects for a successful season could not be better.

Mr. Hixon, president and general manager, is a Red River Valley bonanza farmer. He has been in the milling business and has handled the northern wheat for over fifty years, and there is very little he does not know about wheat. He has moved his family here and is devoting his whole time to the business.

Mr. Sawyer, the cashier and treasurer has for eleven years been cashier of the First National Bank of Crookston. He is thoroughly familiar with the financial end of the business and has excellent connections. His family has moved his family here. Mr. Newman is president of the Portland Milling Company, of Portland, Mich., and has been thirty years in the milling business. He was formerly in business with Mr. Hixon.

The Commander mill is very well equipped and up to date in every respect and the management has secured experienced men to run it. The mill has the plansifter system and it is expected that arrangements will be made shortly to increase the capacity of the mill which can be done without enlarging the size of the building.

TO DAM NIAGARA.

Government Planning to Raise the Level of the Lakes.

The construction of a great dam at the headwaters of the Niagara river, near Buffalo, is the project of the engineer corps of the army for solving the problem of deep water ways through the lakes. The dam is designed to raise the level of Lake Erie fully three feet and the levels of Lakes Huron and Michigan one foot. The plan was discussed by Alfred J. Henry, chief of the bureau of records and meteorological data of the weather bureau, in a lecture delivered last night before the National Geographical society. Mr. Henry stated that the engineer corps had been planning the project several years, but the department under which the plans are being pushed is not ready to make its intentions known, and therefore the details are considered a secret. The main feature, however, is to be a dam or system of piers constructed near Buffalo that will in a measure hold the flow of the Niagara river.

The building operations that have been carried on in this place this season have very materially increased the number of substantial buildings that adorn our city.

THE HEAVENLY BODIES

Interesting Facts With Reference to the Constitution and Motion of Comets.

THEIR VELOCITY IS VERY GREAT

Diameter of Tail Sometimes a Million Miles—"Undevote Astronomer Is Mad."

Since the recent meteoric display has awakened some interest in astronomical phenomena, perhaps a few words about the constitution and motion of comets may be timely.

Let us first consider their constitution. For convenience, astronomers speak of the parts of a comet as the nucleus, the centre of the bright head the coma, the wavy light which envelopes it: and the tail, the long stream of light which follows. The nucleus may be solid, as in the larger (bright) comets, consisting of very dense matter, and possibly be hundreds of miles in diameter: or it may be transparent, as in the case of the smaller (telescopic) comets, and consist of very attenuated matter.

How do we know about the constitution of comets? We know from the use of the spectroscope and telespectroscope. Light from a luminous gas or vapor gives a broken (bright-lined) spectrum, while that from a bright solid or liquid gives an unbroken (continuous) spectrum. Having determined whether the comet is a gas, a liquid, or a solid, we continue to ascertain what its elements are. We know by experiment what spectra lines the different familiar substances give, and when we admit the light from the cometic matter, and find the lines identical with those of some well known substance we conclude as to the composition of the comet. In the cases of some comets the coma and tail have been found to consist of hydrogen and carbon vapors. The nuclei of comets are undoubtedly composed of matter varying in density from that of iron (perhaps denser) to that of our atmosphere, and perhaps even more attenuated. By the spectroscope we also determine the motion of the comet. If advancing nearer to the spectra lines move toward the dark violet end, and if retreating, toward the bright red end of the spectrum. This results from raising or lowering the refrangibility of the rays of light—the refrangibility being raised by a bright body advancing and lowered by that body retreating. By carefully noting the rapidity of the displacement of the spectra lines, the scientist can determine approximately the rapidity of the comet's motions.

We come now to the origin of comets. In the paper of last week there were a few words about the origin and nature of meteors. Comets and meteors probably have the same origin, and their elementary matter is the same as that which composes the solar system. If we accept the Nebular Hypothesis of Laplace (which seems to be entirely reasonable) there is no more difficulty in accounting for comets and meteors than for planetoids and satellites. They are the chips of the solar system.

The motions of comets are of interest. By the comet of 1680 Newton demonstrated two things: First, that comets are under the laws of gravity. Second, their paths are ellipses, parabolae or hyperbolae. The ellipse is also the path of the earth and planets above the sun. The path of a comet is a very eccentric or flattened ellipse. We do not know certainly that any comets follow parabolae or hyperbolae, but it is conjectured that some do, and so return to the solar system only after an indefinite period, perhaps never. Comets are seen only when comparatively near the sun, either approaching or receding from him. They are not seen when at their nearest point to the sun, nor when they have passed into space, leaving him far behind. When a comet plunges through the solar system, its motion is liable to be affected by the attraction of the planets, and thus be either accelerated or retarded. This accounts for the irregular motions, even of periodic comets. The planet Jupiter is the largest of the solar system, and doubtless has a great influence on the paths of comets. Some seem to revolve about the sun. If the resultant of the influence of the solar system be an increased velocity of the comet, then its path will be more and more nearly a parabola: if it be a decreased velocity, then its path will become nearer an ellipse. Probably most comets change their path at every revolution. When observing a comet pass the sun, astronomers note two things: First, its distance from the sun: Second, its velocity. If the comet is near the sun, and moving with great velocity, the path is probably a parabola: if far from him, and moving slowly, the path is an ellipse. Sometimes comets meet with accidents by collision and become broken, and their fragments sooner or later attracted by larger bodies, fall as meteors.

The velocity of some comets is tremendous. Our earth moves at the rate of 18 miles per second. Think how far it would go in a year. The comet of 1843 moved about the sun in 115 minutes.

The size and constitution of the tails of comets may be of interest. The comet of '58 (Donate's) was upwards of 90 million miles in length. Newton's (that of 1680) was more than 100 million. The "war-time comet" ('61) was between 250 and 275 million miles in length. The tails are hollow. How is this occasioned? As the comet reaches the sun, bright streams are seen to flash out of the side nearest the sun. This we should expect as the result of the intense heat, since some comets pass the sun at a point so near that the estimated heat is at least 2000 times that of red hot iron. As these bright streams increase, a part of them flash to one side of the nucleus, and a part to the other. As the nucleus shoots on through its own far-flashing flames, its path is left as a hollow. Probably these flames shoot out tens of thousands of miles on either side, making the diameter of the cometary tail sometimes a million miles.

A very interesting feature of these bright streams is that after dashing toward the sun, they sometimes seem to dart back from him, and so produce the effect of shafts of fire flashing to and fro. This is thought to be the result of electrical action, since we observe similar phenomena of attraction and repulsion in our experiments with electricity and magnetism.

It is probable that the constituent matter of the nuclei of comets becomes less and less in quantity, because every time a comet passes the sun the long streak of attenuated matter which we call "the tail," is produced at the expense of the comet's material. There comes a question here: How does it happen that this attenuated matter appears bright? Is the ether of space a retarding medium, and is there consequent friction? Probably not, but (as was suggested in the paper of last week) it is such that a particle of dust would move in it as steadily as a world. This brightness is due to powerful electrical conditions produced by the intense heat of the sun, and the tremendous rapidity of the comet's motion through the sun's atmosphere. The first of these probably continues in its effects long after the comet has swept past the sun. As to the number of the comets: Some of us may reason that because we have seen but one or two, (and most of us none) therefore there are but few. Astronomy is well nigh the oldest of the sciences. A fairly good record has been kept of all the cometary appearances. As a result, during the Christian era, records of more than 600 have been made. Since the invention and perfection of the telescope, more than 200 telescopic comets have been observed. We believe that the vast majority are telescopic, and so have never been seen. Among the periodic comets, Halley's is of special interest. Its first recorded appearance was in 1456; then in 1531: Kepler saw it in 1607: Halley in 1682. It appeared in 1759 and in 1835. Its period seems to be about 75 years, and it is predicted to appear in 1911.

A comet may appear unheralded at any time. Seven years ago this month (as most of us may remember) a comet appeared. People said, why did not the astronomers tell us about this beforehand? In reply it may be said that it is difficult to detect a comet unless it is approached and keep examined. Why? Because there are many nebulae in the heavens. One is in the Constellation Andromeda: another in Orion. A comet (telescopic especially) appears just like one of these nebulae, the only appreciable difference being, that by continued observation, the comet is found to have moved, while the nebula is stationary.

As in closing word, I know of no study in the natural sciences, whose rewards for the scholar are more manifest as Astronomy. There man is brought face to face with God's great works, and challenged to think God's thoughts after Him. The heavens are beautiful: but He who made them is more beautiful than they. The great orbs that move in the sky at night, are mighty in their majesty and momentum, but He who "hangeth out their host by number" is mightier than they.

HERMAN P. FISHER.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

[Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.]

CHAPTER V.

If any man serve me, let him follow me.

It was nearly midnight before the service at the Rectangle closed. Gray staid np long into Snnday morning praying and talking with a little group of converts that, in the great experience of their new life, clung to the evangelist with a personal helplessness that made it as impossible for him to leave them as if they had been depending upon him to save them from physical death. Among these converts was Rollin Page.

Virginia and her uncle had gone home about 11 o'clock, and Rachel and Jasper Chaso had gone with them as far as the avenuo where Virginia lived Dr. West had walked on a little way with them to his own house, and Rachel and Jasper had then gono on together to her mother's.

That was a little after 11. It was now striking midnight, and Jasper Chase sat in his room staring at the papers on his desk and going over tho last half honr with painful persistence.

He had told Rachel Winslow of his love for her, and she had not given her love in return.

It wonld be difficnlt to know what was most powerful in tbe impnlse that had moved him to speak to her tonight. Ho had yielded to his feelings withont any special thongbt of results to himself because he had felt so certain that Rachel would respond to his love for her. He tried to recall now just the impression she made on him when ho first spoke to her.

Never had her beanty and her strength influenced him as tonight. While she was singing he saw and heard no one else. The tent swarmed with a confused crowd of faces, and he knew he was sitting there hemmed in by a mob of people, but they had no meaning to him. He felt powerless to avoid speaking to her. He knew he shonld speak when they were once alone.

Now that he had spoken he felt that he had misjudged either Rachel or the opportnnity. He knew, or thought he did, that she had begun to care for him. It was no secret between them that the heroine of Jasper's first novel had been his own ideal of Rachel, and the hero of tbe story was himself, and they had loved each other in the book, and Rachel had not objected. No ono else knew. The names and characters had been drawn with a subtle skill that revealed to Rachel, when she received a copy of the book from Jasper, the fact of his love for her, and she had not been offended. That was nearly a year ago.

Tonight Jasper Chase recalled the scene between them, with every inflection and movement unerased from his memory. He even recalled the fact that he began to speak jnst at that point on the avenue where a few days before he had met Rachel walking with Rollin Page. He had wondered at the time what Rollin was saying.

"Rachel," Jasper had said, and it was the first time he had ever spoken her first name. "I never knew until tonight how much I love you. Why should I try to conceal any longer what yon have seen me look? You know I love you as my life. I can no longer hide it from you if I would."

The first intimation he had of a refusal was the trembling of Rachel's arm in his own. She had allowed him to speak and had neither turned her face toward him nor away from him. She had looked straight on, and her voice was sad, but firm and quiet, when she spoke.

"Why do yon speak to me now? I cannot bear it—after what we have seen tonight."

"Why—what"— he had stammered and then was silent.

Rachel withdrew her arm from bis, bnt still walked near him.

Then he cried ont with the anguish of one who begins to seo a great loss facing bim where he expected a great joy.

"Rachel! Do you not love me? Is not my love for you as sacred as anything in all of life itself?"

She had walked on silent for a few steps after that. They had passed a street lamp. Her face was pale and beantiful. He had made a movement to clutch her arm, and she had moved a little farther from him.

"No," she had replied. "There was a time—I cannot answer for that. You should not have spoken to me tonight."

He had seen in these words his answer. He was extremely sensitive. Nothing short of a joyous response to his own love would have satisfied him. He could not think of pleading with her.

"Some time, when I am more worthy?" he had asked in a low voice, bnt she did not seem to hear, and they had parted at her home, and he recalled vividly the fact that no good night had been said.

Now, as he went over the brief bnt significant scene, he lashed himself for his foolish precipitancy. He had not reckoned on Rachel's tense, passionate absorption of all her feeling in the scenes at the tent which were so new in her mind. But he did not know her well enongh even yet to understand the meaning of her refnsal. When the clock in the First church steeple struck 1, he was still sitting at his desk, staring at the last page of manuscript of his unfinished novel.

Rachel Winslow went np to her room and faced her evening's experience with conflicting emotions. Had she ever loved Jasper Chase? Yes—no. One moment she felt that her life's happiness was at stake over the result of her action; another, she had a strange feeling of relief that she had spoken as she did. There was one great overmastering feeling in her. The response of the wretched creatures in the tent to her singing, the swift, awesome presence of the Holy Spirit, had affected her as never in all her life before. The moment Jasper had spoken her name and she realized that he was telling her of his love she had felt a sudden revnlsion for him, as if he shonld have respected the snpernatural events they had just witnessed. She felt as if it were not the time to be absorbed in anything less than the divine glory of those conversions. The thought that all the time she was singing with the one passion of her soul to touch the conscience of that tent full of sin Jasper Chase had been moved by it simply to love her for himself gave her a shock as of irreverence on her part as well as on his. She could not tell why she felt as she did; only she knew that if he had not told her tonight she would still have felt the same toward him as she always had.

What was that feeling? What had he been to her? Had she made a mistake? She went to her bookcase and took out the novel which Jasper had given her. Her face deepened in color es she turned to certain passages which she had read often and which she knew Jasper had written for her. She read them again. Somehow they failed to touch her strongly. Sho closed tho book and let it lie on the table. She gradually felt that her thought was busy with the sight she had witnessed in that tent. Those faces, men and women, tonched for the first time with the Spirit's glory. What a wonderful thing life was, after all! The complete regeneration revealed in the sight of drunken, vile, debauched humanity kneeling down to give itself to a life of purity and Christlikeness—oh, it was snrely a a witness to the superhuman in the world! And the face of Rollin Page by the side of that miserable wreck ont of the gutter—she could recall as if she now saw it Virginia crying, with her arms about her brother, jnst before she left the tent, and Mr. Gray kneeling close by, and the girl Virginia had taken into her heart bending her head while Virginia whispered something to her. All these pictures, drawn by the Holy Spirit in the human tragedies brought to a climax there in the most abandoned spot in all Raymond, stood out in Rachel's memory now, a memory so recent that her room seemed for the time being to contain all the actors and their movements.

"No, no!" she bad said aloud. "He bad no right to speak to me after all that! He should have respected the place where our thonghts shonld have been. I am snre I do not love him, not enougb to give bim my life."

And after she had thus spoken the evening's experience at the tent came crowding in again, thrnsting ont all other things. It is perhaps the most striking evidence of the tremendons spiritual factor which had now entered the Rectangle that Rachel felt, even when the great love of a strong man had come very near her, that the spiritual manifestation moved her with an egitation far greater than anything Jasper had felt for her personally or she for him.

The people of Raymond awoke Snnday morning to a growing knowledge of events which were beginning to revolutionize many of the regular customary habits of the town. Alexander Powers' action in the matter of the railroad frauds had created a sensation, not only in Raymond, but throughout the country. Edward Norman's daily changes of policy in the conduct of his paper had startled the community and caused more comment than any recent political event. Rachel Winslow's singing at the Rectangle meetings had made a stir in society and excited the wonder of all her friends. Virginia Page's conduct, her presence every night with Rachel, her absence from the nsual circle of her wealthy, fashionable acquaintances, bad furnished a great deal of material for gossip and qnestion. In addition to tbe events which centered about these persons who were so well known, there had been all through the city, in very many homes and in bnsiness and social circles, strange happenings. Nearly a hundred persons in Henry Maxwell's church had made the pledge to do everything after asking, "What would Jesus do?" and the result had been, in many cases, unheard of actions. The city was stirred as it bad never been. As a climax to the week's events had come the spiritual manifestation at the Rectangle and the announcement, which came to most people before chnrcb time, of the actual conversion at the tent of nearly 50 of the worst characters in the neighborhood, together with the conversion of Rollin Page, the well known society and club man.

It is no wonder that, under the pressure of all this, the First church of Raymond came to the morning service in a condition that made it quickly sensitive to any large truth.

Perhaps nothing had astonished the people more than the great change that had come over the minister since he had proposed to them the imitation of Jesus in conduct. The dramatic delivery of his sermons no longer impressed them. The self satisfied, contented, easy attitude of the fine figure and the refined face in the pulpit had been displaced by a manner that could not be compared with the style of his delivery. The sermon had become a message. It was no longer delivered. It was brought to them with a love, an earnestness, a passion, a desire, a humility, that poured their enthusiasm abont the truth and made the speaker no more prominent than he had to be as the living voice of God. His prayers were unlike any the people had ever heard before. They were often broken. Even once or twice they had been actually ungrammatical in a phrase or two. When had Henry Maxwell so far forgotten himself in a prayer as to make a mistake of that sort? He knew that he had often taken as mnch pride in the diction and the delivery of his prayers as of his sermons. Was it possible he now so abhorred the elegant refinement of a formal public petition that he purposely chose to rebuke himself for his previous precise manner of prayer? It is more likely that be had no thought of all that. His great longing to voice the needs and wants of his people made him unmindful of an occasional mistake. It is certain he had never prayed so effectively as he did now.

There are times when a sermon has a valuo and power due to conditions in the audience rather than to anything new or startling or eloquent in the words or the arguments presented. Such conditions faced Henry Maxwell this morning as he preached against the saloon, according to his purpose determined on the week before. He had no new statements to make about the evil influence of tho saloon in Raymond. What new facts were there? He had no startling illustrations of the power of the saloon in business or politics. What could he say that had not been said by temperance orators a great many times? The effect of his message this morning owed its power to the unusual fact of his preaching about the saloon at all, together with the events that had stirred tbo people. He had never in the course of his ten years' pastorate mentioned tho saloon as something to be regarded in the light of an enemy, not only to the poor and the tempted, but to the business life of the place and the chnrch itself. He spoke now with a freedom that seemed to measure his complete sense of the conviction that Jesus would speak so. At the close he pleaded with the people to remember tbe new life that had begun at tbe Rectangle. The regnlar election of city officers wonld be an issue in that election. What of the poor creatures surrounded hy the hell of drink while just beginning to feel the joy of deliverance from sin? Who conld tell what depended on their environment? Was there one word to be said by the Christian disciple, business man, professional man, citizen, in favor of continning to license these crimes and shame producing institutions? Was not the most Christian thing they conld do to act as citizens in the matter, fight the saloon at the polls, elect good men to the city offices and clean the municipality? How much had prayers helped to make Raymond better while votes and actions had really been on the side of the enemies of Jesus? Wonld not Jesus do this? What disciple could imagine him refnsing to suffer or take up his cross in the matter? How mnch had the members of the First church ever suffered in an attempt to imitate Jesus? Was Christian discipleship a thing of convenience, of custom, of tradition? Where did the suffering come in? Was it necessary, in order to follow Jesus' steps, to go up Calvary as well as the Mount of Transfiguration?

His appeal was stronger at this point than he knew. It is not too much to say that the spiritual tension of the First church reached its highest point right there. The imitation of Jesus which had begun with the volnnteers in the chnrch was working like leaven in the organization, and Henry Maxwell would, even thus early in his new life, havo been amazed if he could have measured the extent of desire on the part of his people to take up the cross. While he was speaking this morning, before he closed with a loving appeal to the discipleship of 2,000 years' knowledge of the Master, many a man and woman in the chnrch was saying, as Rachel had said so passionately to her mother: "I want to do something that will cost me something in the way of sacrifice. I am hnngry to suffer something." Trnly, Mazzini was right when he said, "No appeal is quite so powerful in the end as the call, 'Come and suffer.'"

The service was over, the great audience had gone, and Henry Maxwell again faced tho company gathered in the lecture room as on the two previons Sundays. He had asked all to remain who had made the pledge of discipleship and any others who wished to be included. The after service seemed now to bc a necessity. As he went in and faced the people thero his heart trembled. There were at least 200 present. The Holy Spirit was never so manifest. He missed Jasper Chase, but all the others were present. He asked Milton Wright to pray. The very air was charged with divine possibilities. What conld resist such a baptism of power? How had they lived all these years withont it?

They counseled together, and there were many prayers. Henry Maxwell dated from that meeting some of the serious events that afterward became a part of the history of the First chnrch of Raymond. When finally they went home, all of them were impressed with the joy of the Spirit's power.

Donald Marsh, president of Lincoln college, walked home with Henry Maxwell.

"I have reached one consclusion, Maxwell," said Marsh, speaking slowly. "I have found my cross, and it is a heavy one, but I sball never bo satisfied until I take it up and carry it."

Maxwell was silent, and the president went on:

"Your sermon today made clear to me what I have long been feeling I ought to do. What would Jesus do in my place? I have asked the question repeatedly since I made my promise. I have tried to satisfy myself that he would simply go on, as I have done, attending to the dnties of my college, teaching the classes in ethics and philosophy. But I have not been able to avoid the feeling that he would do something more. That something is what I do not want to do. It will cause me genuine suffering to do it. I dread it with all my soul. You may be able to guess what it is."

"Yes; I think I know," Henry Maxwell replied. "It is my cross too! I would almost rather do anything else."

Donald Marsh looked surprised, then relieved. Then he spoke sadly, but with great conviction:

"Maxwell, you and I belong to a class of professional men who have always avoided the duties of citizenship. We have lived in a little world of scholarly seclnsion, doing work we have enjoyed and shrinking from the disagreeable duties that belong to the life of the citizen. I confess with shame that I have purposely avoided the responsibility that I owe to this city personally. I understand that our city officials are a corrupt, unprincipled set of men, controlled in large part by the whisky element, and thoroughly selfish, so far as the affairs of city government are concerned. Yet all these years I, with nearly every teacher in the college, have been satisfied to let other men run the municipality and have lived in a little world of my own, out of touch and sympathy with the real world of the people. 'What would Jesus do?' I have tried even to avoid an honest answer. I can no longer do so. My plain duty is to take a personal part in this coming election, go to the primaries, throw the weight of my influence, whatever it is, toward the nomination and election of good men and plunge into the very depths of this entire horrible whirlpool of deceit, bribery, political trickery and saloonism as it exists in Raymond today. I would sooner walk up to the month of a cannon any time than do this. I dread it because I hate the touch of the whole matter.

"I would give almost anything to be able to say, 'I do not believe Jesus would do anything of the sort,' but I am more and more persuaded that he would. This is where the suffering comes to me. It would not hurt me half so much to lose my position or my home. I loathe the contact with this municipal problem. I would much prefer to remain quietly in my scholastic life with my classes in ethics and philosophy, but the call has come so plainly that I cannot escape: 'Donald Marsh, follow me. Do your duty as a citizen of Raymond at the point where your citizenship will cost you something. Help to cleanse this great mnnicipal stable, even if you do have to soil yonr aristocratic feelings a little.' Maxwell, this is my cross. I must take it up or deny my Lord."

"You have spoken for me also," replied Maxwell, with a sad smile. "Why should I, simply because I am a clergyman, shelter myself behind my refined, sensitive feelings and, like a coward, refuse to touch, except in a sermon possibly, the duty of citizenship? I am unused to the ways of the political life of the city. I have never taken an active part in any nomination of good men. There are hundreds of ministers like me. As a class we do not practice in the municipal life the duties and privileges we preach from the pulpit. What would Jesus do? I am now at a point where, like you, I am driven to answer the qnestion one way. My duty is plain. I must suffer. All my parish work, all my little trials or self sacrifices, are as nothing to me compared with the breaking into my scholarly, intellectual, self contained habits of this open, coarse, public fight for a clean city life. I could go and live at the Rectangle the rest of my days and work in the slums for a bare living, and I conld enjoy it more than the thought of plunging into a fight for the reform of this whisky ridden city. It wonld cost me less. But, like you, I have been unable to shake off my responsibility. The answer to tho qnestion, 'What would Jesus do?' in this case leaves me no peace, except when I say, 'Jesus wonld have me act the part of a Christian citizen.' Marsh, as you say, we professional men, ministers, professors, artists, literary men, scholars, have almost invariably been political cowards. We have avoided the sacred duties of citizenship either ignorantly or selfishly. Certainly Jesus in onr age would not do that. We can do no less than take up this cross and follow him."

These two men walked on in silence for awhile. Finally President Marsh said:

"We do not need to act alone in this matter. With all the men who have made the promise, we certainly can have companionship and strength even of numbers. Let us organize the Christian forces of Raymond for the battle against rum and corrnption. We certainly onght to enter the primaries with a force that will be able to do moro than ntter a protest. It is a fact that the saloon element is cowardly and easily frightened, in spite of its lawlessness and corruption. Let us plan a campaign that will mean something because it is organized righteousness. Jesns would use great wisdom in this matter. He would employ means. He would make large plans. Let ns do so. If we bear this cross, let us do it bravely, like men."

They talked over the matter a long time and met again the next day in Henry Maxwell's study to develop plans. The city primaries were called for Friday. Rumors of strange and unheard of events to the average citizen were current in political circles throughout Raymond. The Crawford system of balloting for nominations was not in use in the state, and the primary was called for a public meeting at the courthouse.

The citizens of Raymond will never forget that meeting. It was so unlike any political meeting ever held in Raymond before that there was no attempt at comparison. The special officers to be nominated were mayor, city council, chief of police, city clerk and city treasurer.

The Evening News in its Saturday edition gave a full account of the primaries, and in an editorial colnmn Edward Norman spoke with a directness and conviction that the Christian people of Raymond were learning to respect deeply becanse so evidently sincere and unselfish. A part of that editorial is also a part of this history:

"It is safe to say that never before in the history of Raymond was there a primary like the one in the courthouse last night. It was, first of all, a complete surprise to the city politicians, who have been in the habit of carrying on the affairs of the city as if they owned them and every one else was simply a tool or a cipher. The overwhelming surprise of the wire puller last night consisted in the fact that a large number of the citizens of Raymond who have heretofore taken no part in the city's affairs entered the primary and controlled it, nominating some of the best men for all the offices to be filled at the coming election.

"It was a tremendous lesson in good citizenship. President Marsh of Lincoln college, who never before entered a city primary and whose face even was not known to many of the ward politicians, made one of the best speeches ever heard in Raymond. It was almost ludicrous to see the faces of the men who for years bave done as they pleased when President Marsh rose to speak. Many of them asked, 'Who is he?' The consternation deepened as the primary proceeded and it became evident that the old time ring of city rulers was outnumbered. Henry Maxwell, pastor of the First church; Milton Wright, Alexander Powers, Professors Brown, Willard and Park of Lincoln college, Rev John West, Dr. George Maine of the Pilgrim church, Dean Ward of the Holy Trinity and scores of well known business and professional men, most of them church members, were present, and it did not take long to see that they had all come with the direct and definite purpose of nominating the best men possible. Most of these men had never been seen in a primary. They were complete strangers to the politicians, but they had evidently profited by the politician's methods and were able by organized and united effort to nominate the entire ticket.

"As soon as it became plain that the primary was out of their control the regular ring withdrew in disgnst and nominated another ticket. The News simply calls the attention of all decent citizens to the fact that this last ticket contains the names of whisky men, and the line is distinctly and sharply drawn between the machine and corrupt city government, such as we have known for years, and a clean, honest, capable businesslike city administration, such as every good citizen onght to want. It is not necessary to remind the people of Raymond that the question of local option comes up at the election. That will be the most important question on the ticket. The crisis of onr city affairs has been reached. The issue is squarely before us. Shall we continue the rule of rum and boodle and shameless incompetency, or shall we, as President Marsh said in his noble speech, rise as good citizens and begin a new order of things, cleansing our city of the worst enemy known to municipal honesty and doing what lies in our power to do with the ballot—to purify our civic life?

"The News is positively and withont reservation on the side of the new movement. We shall henceforth do all in our power to drive out the saloon and destroy its political strength. We shall advocate the election of men nominated by the majority of citizens met in the first primary, and we call upon all Christians, church members and lovers of right, purity, temperance and home to stand by President Marsh and the rest of the citizens who have thns begun a long needed reform in onr city."

President Marsh read this editorial and thanked God for Edward Norman. At the same time he understood well enough that every other paper in Raymond was on the other side. He did not misunderstand the importance and seriousness of the fight which was only just begun. It was no secret that The News had lost enormously since it had been governed by the standard of "What would Jesus do?" The question now was, "Would the Christian people of Raymond stand by it?" Would they make it possible for Norman to conduct a daily Christian paper, or would their desire for what is called "news," in the way of crime, scandal, political partisanship of the regular sort and a dislike to champion so remarkable a reform in journalism, influence them to drop the paper and refuse to give it their financial support? That was, in fact, the question Edward Norman was asking even while he wrote the Saturday editorial. He knew well enough that his action expressed in that editorial would cost him very dearly from the hands of many business men of Raymond, and still as he drove his pen over the paper he asked another question, "What wonld Jesus do?" That qnestion bad become a part of his life now. It was greater than any other.

But for the first time in its history Raymond had seen the professional men, the teachers, the college professors, the doctors, the ministers, take political action and put themselves definitely and sharply in antagonism to the evil forces that had so long controlled the machine of the mnnicipal government. The fact itself was astonishing. President Marsh acknowledged to bimself, with a feeling of humiliation, that never before had he known what civic righteousness could accomplish. From that Friday night's work he dated for himself and bis college a new definition of the worn phrase, "the scholar in politics." Edncation for him and those who were under his influence ever after meant some element of suffering. Sacrifice must now enter into the factor of development.

At the Rectangle that week tbe tide of spiritual life rose high and as yet showed no signs of flowing back. Rachel and Virginia went every night. Virginia was rapidly reaching a conclusion with respect to a large part of her money. She had talked it over with Rachel, and they had been able to agree that if Jesus had a vast amount of money at his disposal he might do with some of it as Virginia planned. At any rate, they felt that whatever Jesus might do in such a case would have as large an element of variety in it as the difference in persons and circumstances. There conld be no fixed Christian way of using money. The rule that regulated its use was unselfish utility.

But meanwhile the glory of the Spirit's power possessed all their best thought. Night after night that week witnessed miracles as great as walking on the sea or feeding the multitude with a few loaves and fishes, for what greater miracle than a regenerated humanity? The transformation of these coarse, brutal, sottish lives into praying rapturous lovers of Jesus struck R[illegible] the feelings that people may have had when they saw Lazarus walk out of the tomb. It was an experience full of profound excitement to them.

Rollin Page came to all the meetings. There was no doubt of the change that had come over him. He was wonderfully quiet. It seemed as if he were thinking all the time. Certainly he was not the same person. He talked more with Gray than with any one else. He did not avoid Rachel, but he seemed to shrink from any appearance of seeming to wish to renew the old acquaintance with her. Rachel found it even difficult to express to him her pleasnre at the new life he had begun to know. He seemed to be waiting to adjust himself to his previous relations before this new life began. He had not forgotten those relations, but he was not yet able to fit his consciousness into new ones.

The end of the week found the Rectangle struggling hard between two mighty opposing forces. The Holy Spirit was battling with all his supernatural strength against the saloon devil which had so long held a jealous grasp on its slaves. If the Christian people of Raymond once could realize what the contest meant to the souls newly awakened to a new life, it did not seem possible that the election could result in the old system of license. But that remained yet to be seen. The horror of the daily surroundings of many of the converts was slowly burning its way into the knowledge of Virginia and Rachel, and every night as they went up town to their luxurious homes they carried heavier hearts.

"A good many of those poor creatures will go back again," Gray would say with a sadness too deep for tears. "The environment does have a good deal to do with the character. It does not stand to reason that these people can always resist the sight and smell of the devilish drink all about them. O Lord, how long shall Christian people continue to support by their silence and their ballots the greatest form of slavery now known in America?"

He asked the question, but did not have much hope of an immediate answer. There was a ray of hope in the action of Friday night's primary, but what the result wonld be he did not dare to anticipate. The whisky forces were organized, alert, aggressive, roused into unusual hatred by the events of the last week at the tent and in the city. Would the Christian force act as a unit against the saloon, or would it be divided on account of its business interests or because it was not in the habit of acting together, as the whisky powers always did? That remained to be seen. Meanwhile the saloon reared itself about the Rectangle like some deadly viper, hissing and coiling, ready to strike its poison into any unguarded part.

Saturday afternoon, as Virginia was just stepping out of her house to go and see Rachel to talk over her new plans, a carriage drove up containing three of her fashionable friends. Virginia went out to the driveway and stood there talking with them. They had not come to make a formal call, but wanted Virginia to go riding with them up on the boulevard. There was a band concert in the park. The day was too pleasant to be spent indoors.

"Where have you been all this time, Virginia?" asked one of the girls, tapping her playfully on the shoulder with a red silk parasol. "We hear that you have gone into tho show business. Tell us about it."

Virginia colored, but after a moment's hesitation she frankly told something of her experience at the Rectangle. The girls in the carriage began to be really interested.

"Tell you what, girls, let's go slumming with Virginia this afternoon instead of going to the band concert! I've never been down to the Rectangle. I've heard it's an awful wicked place and lots to see. Virginia will act as a guide, and it would be real"—"fun," she was going to say, but Virginia's look made her substitute the word "interesting."

Virginia was angry. At first thought she said to herself she would never go under any such circumstances. The other girls seemed to be of the same mind as the speaker. They chimed in with earnestness and asked Virginia to take them down there.

Suddenly she saw in the idle curiosity of the girls an opportunity. They had never seen the sin and misery of Raymond. Why should they not see them, even if their motives in going down there were simply to pass away an afternoon?

"Very well; I'll go with you. You must obey my orders and let me take you where you can see the most," she said as she entered the carriage and took the seat beside tho girl who had first suggested the trip to the Rectangle.

"Hadn't we better take a policeman along," said one of the girls, with a nervous laugh. "It really isn't safe down there, you know."

"There's no danger," said Virginia briefly.

"Is it true that Rollin has been converted?" asked the first speaker, looking at Virginia curiously. It impressed her during the drive to the Rectangle that all three of her friends were regarding her with close attention, as if she were very peculiar.

"Yes; he certainly is. I saw him myself on the night of the first interest shown, a week ago Saturday," replied Virginia, who did not know just how to tell that scene.

"I understand he is going around to the clubs talking with his old friends there, trying to preach to them. Doesn't that seem funny?" said the girl with the red silk parasol.

Virginia did not answer, and the other girls were beginning to feel sober as the carriage turned into the street leading to the Rectangle As they neared the district they grew more and more nervous. The sights and smells and sounds which had become familiar to Virginia struck the senses of these refined delicate society girls as some [illegible] horrible As the carriage halted [illegible] Rectangle [illegible] seemed to stare as with one [illegible] bleary b[illegible] contaminated at this fine carriage with its load of fashionably dressed young ladies. "Slumming" had never been a fad with Raymond society, so this was perhaps the first time that the two had come together in this way. The girls felt that, instead of seeing the Rectangle, they were objects of curiosity They were frightened and disgusted.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

"Let's go back I've seen enough," said the girl who was sitting with Virginia

They were at that moment just opposite a notorious saloon and [illegible] house The street was unusually crowded, and sidewalk crowded. Suddenly out of the door of the saloon a screaming woman reeled She was singing in a broken drunken sob that seemed to reflect in part the wretchedness of her horrible condition. "Just as I am, without one plea," and as the carriage rolled past she leered at it, raising her face as she did Virginia saw it very close to her own It was the face of the girl who had kneeled sobbing that night with Virginia kneeling beside her and praying for her

"Stop!" cried Virginia, motioning to the driver, who was looking amazed. The carriage stopped, and in a moment she was out and had gone up to the girl and taken her by the arm

"Come!" she said, and that was all The girl looked into her face, and her own changed with a look of utter horror The girls in the carriage were smitten into helpless astonishment The saloon keeper had come to the door of the saloon and was standing there looking on, with his hands on his hips, and the Rectangle from its windows its saloon steps, its filthy sidewalk, gutter and roadway paused and with undisguised wonder stared at the two girls Over the scene the warm sun of spring poured its mellow light A faint breath of music from the band stand in the park floated into the Rectangle The concert had begun, and the fashion and wealth of Raymond were displaying themselves up town on the boulevards

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 15.

WHEAT—Cash No 1 hard, 69c; No 1 Northern, 68c; No 2 Northern, 6 3/4c; No. 3, 66 3/4c. To Arrive—No. 1 hard, 69c; No 1 Northern, 68c December, 68c; May, 69c.

FLAX—To arrive, 11 24 1/2; December, $1 22 1/2; May, $1 22 1/2.

Minneapolis Wheat.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 15.

WHEAT—In store—No 1 Northern, 68 1/4c; December, 68 1/4c; May, 69 3/4c. On Track—No 1 hard, 69 3/4c; No 1 Northern, 68 1/4c; No 2 Northern, 61 3/4c.

Stock City Live Stock.

Stock City, Ia., Nov. 15.

HOGS—Market [illegible] 10@5 lower Range of prices, $ 80@3 90.

CATTLE—Market steady.

Sales ranged as follows: $ 00@3 00 for beeves, $2 00@3 65 for cows, bulls and mixed; $3 00@3 15 for stockers and feeders. $3 40 @4 70 for calves and yearlings

St. Paul Union Stock Yards.

South St. Paul, Nov. 15

HOGS—Market 5c lower. Range of prices, $3 80@ 3 95.

CATTLE—Market steady; bulk of receipts common

Sales ranged as follows: $3 80@4 40 for stockers; $2 00@3 25 for cows; $3 00@3 90 for bulls; $3 40@4 10 for heifers $3 00@3 75 for calves

SHEEP—Market [illegible] for sheep and lambs and feeding at steady rate

Sales ranged at [illegible]@ 00 for sheep, $4 00@5 70 for lambs.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

Chicago, Nov. 15.

CATTLE—Market [illegible] strong Best ranged at [illegible] for steers, $3 25@4 25 for cows, and heifers, $3 00@ 4 30 for stockers and feeders, $4 75@5 40 for Texas steers, $4 10@5 10 for Westerns.

HOGS—Market [illegible] lower

Sales ranged at $3 80@4 15 for mixed and butchers, $3 90@4 05@ good heavy, $3 80@3 90 for rough heavy, $3 90@4 10 for light.

SHEEP—Market steady at yesterday's prices

Sales ranged at $3 00@4 30 for sheep, $4 00@5 30 for lambs

Receipts—Cattle, 3,000; hogs, 17,000; sheep, 15,000

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

Chicago, Nov. 15.

WHEAT—December, 68 3/4c; May, 71 3/4c @73 1/4c.

CORN—November, 31 1/4c; December, 31 3/4c @31 7/8c; May, 33 3/4c.

OATS—November, 23 1/4c; December, 23 1/4c; May, 25 3/4c.

PORK—November, 8 87 1/2; January, $8 47 1/2c; May, $9 07 1/2.

LARD—Cash, Northwestern, $4 32 1/2; Southwestern, $4 32 1/2; December, $4 20 1/2; May, $4 32 1/2.

BUTTER—Creameries, 13@21 1/2c; dairy, 14@20c.

POULTRY—Dressed, chickens, 7 1/2@ 9 1/2c; turkeys, 6 7 1/2c.

EGGS—Fresh, 19c.

Crookston Market.

Corrected Thursday morning, Nov. 9.

WHEAT—No. 1 Hard 65 No. 1 Northern 64 No. 2 Northern 61

OATS—25c

BARLEY—24 to 28c.

FLAX—$1 06.

POTATOES—20 to 25c.

TURNIPS—

BUTTER—18 to 22c.

ONIONS—50c

BRAN—$ 00.

HAY—Baled $6 00, loose $4 00.

HOGS—3 1/2c to 4c.

CATTLE—3 1/2 to 3 1/2 live weight, 5½ to 6½c dressed weight.

SHEEP—

CHICKENS—6c.

TURKEYS—7c.

HIDES—5 to 6c.

WOOL—25c.

FLOUR—3 00 per cwt.

BRAN—$1 per cwt.

SHORTS—$1 per cwt.

Storm Sash. Storm Sash.

We have a complete stock—and our prices are right. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company.

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk,—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Oct. 17, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Reuben H. Nettestad, deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of Johan O. Sandberg of the County of Polk respondent, among other things, that Reuben H. Nettestad, late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, died on the 15th day of October, A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this County at the time of his death, having goods, chattels and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is interested by reason of real estate, and praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Andrew T. Hanson

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the 8th day of November A. D. 1899, at two o'clock P. M., at the Probate office, in Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for the three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston the 17th day of October A. D. 1899.

By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[24-26]

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk,—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, October, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Oscar Strand, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of Oscar Strand, deceased, late of the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, being granted to Ingolf Christensen.

It is ordered that six months be and the same are hereby limited from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the probate court of said county for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is Further Ordered, That the

23rd day of April, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m., at special term of said probate court, to be held at the probate office in Crookston in said county, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said probate court will examine and adjust such claims and demands.

And it is further Ordered, That notice hereof be given by publication of this order in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston this 23d day of October, A. D. 1899.

By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[24-28]

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 45-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Isabella I. Chilbeck and John Chilbeck, husband and wife, mortgagors, to Gerrick Bredsteen, mortgagee, bearing date the 1st day of June 1893, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 6th day of June 1893, at 11 o'clock a. m. in book 61 of mortgages on page 484, and the action or proceeding having been instituted, no action or other thing to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, That by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises described in said conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

Lots numbered one (1) two (2) three (3) and four (4) of block number sixteen (16) in Crookston in addition to the township of Crookston according to the recorded plat thereof on file in office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County and State of Minnesota in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston in said County and State, on the

8th day of December 1899,

at ten o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt or sum secured by said mortgage, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars, attorney's fees as stipulated in said note and mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as by law provided.

Dated Oct. 9th A. D. 1899.

GEORGE Q. ERSKINE,
Attorney, Mortgagee.
Crookston, Minnesota.

[29-85]

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota—In bankruptcy. In the Matter of Ole Simonson, Bankrupt.

To the creditors of Ole Simonson, of East Grand Forks, in the county of Polk, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:

Notice is hereby given that on the 1st day of November, A. D. 1899, the said Ole Simonson was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned in Crookston, in said county, on the

13th day of November, A. D. 1899,

at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Dated, Nov. 1, 1899.

OLE J. VAULE
Referee in Bankruptcy.

FRANK B. FERTHAM,
Grand Forks, N. Dak.,
Attorney for Bankrupt.

Final Proof.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., November 8, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Herbert Bergseker and Clerk of the U. S. District Court, at Crookston, Minn., on

December 15, 1899,

viz: Anton M. Larson, H. E. 10282 for the S½ section 30 township 151 range 47 west.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole P. Stokke, Charles Thoreson, Ole Thoreson Stokke, and Thor Thoreson Stokke, all of Mentor, Minn.

SYLVESTER PETERSON,
[10-22] Register.

Summons

State of Minnesota, } ss. District Court
County of Polk. } Fourteenth Judicial District.

William A. Lancter, plaintiff, against

The Minneapolis Trust Company, as Receiver of the Red River Valley Loan and Trust Company, and Mary Rose Miller; also all other persons or parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

The State of Minnesota to the above named defendants:

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint of the plaintiff in the above entitled action, which is on file in the office of the Clerk of said Court, at the Court House in the City of Crookston in said county, within twenty days after the service of this summons upon you, exclusive of the day of such service; and if you fail to answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid the said plaintiff in this action will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

DEVEREST DICKERT,
Plaintiff's Attorney.

State of Minnesota, } ss. District Court.
Polk County. } Fourteenth Judicial District

William A. Lancter, plaintiff, against

The Minneapolis Trust Company, as receiver of the North Western Guaranty Loan Company, and Mary Rose Miller; also all other persons or parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real estate described in the complaint herein, defendants.

Notice is hereby given, that the above entitled action is brought by the above named plaintiff against the above named defendants to determine adverse claims to that certain piece or parcel of land lying and being in the County and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: The northeast quarter of section nine in township one hundred and forty-nine of range forty-three. That the relief demanded by the plaintiff is that the plaintiff is the owner in fee of all of the above described land, and that each of the defendants have no right, title, estate, lien, or interest therein or to any part thereof. That said action is now pending in the above named Court, and no personal claim is made against any of the defendants.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., July 24, 1899.

DEVEREST DICKERT,
Plaintiff's Attorney.

[28-91]

Order For Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk,—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Oct. 24, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Bertel C. Jorgenson, deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of Bertel Jorgenson, praying among other things, among other things that Bertel C. Jorgenson, late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, died on the 8th day of October A. D. 1899 at the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this county at the time of his death, having goods, chattels and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is interested by reason of real estate, and praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Jacob J. Ida, granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Friday, the 24th day of November A. D. 1899, at ten o'clock a. m., at the probate office, in Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 7th day of October A. D. 1899.

By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[29-31]

JISNER'S Rheumatism and Kidney Cure. A sure cure for rheumatism and kidney troubles. Those who dine, wine their friends, suffer from which is nearly always charged with alkali are liable to kidney disease or [illegible] with rheumatism and kidney cure will cure your neighbor about the good quality of this remedy. Sold by all druggists, or sent by mail by C. E. JISNER, Crookston, Minn.

RAILWAY TIME CARD

CROOKSTON, MINN.

NORTHERN PACIFIC

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep't
No. 3 for Fargo, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	9:37 pm	9:57 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 for Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	8:30 a m	9:20 a m

C. A. Sarsbury, Agt. Chas. S. Fee, G. P. A.
Crookston, Minn. St. Paul, Minn

GREAT NORTHERN

CARRIES	Depart	Except Sunday	Arrive
Fast Line to Grand Forks, Winnipeg and Coast	7:00 pm		7:00 am
Mpls. St. Paul and points east	8:00 pm		8:00 am
Mpls. Hallock, Thief River Falls	6:30 pm		6:30 am
Fargo, Bismarck, Duluth and Superior	4:35 pm	*Passim. Bemidji, Duluth and Superior	9:00 am
Thief River Falls			9:00 am
Grand Forks, Winnipeg and Pacific Coast	6:15 pm	St. Vincent to Fargo	7:15 am
	8:35 am	Fargo to St. Vincent	8:00 am

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

EUCLID.

Lots of business at the store these days. Our merchants are kept on the jump.

Rev. Mr. Carrie and son Will transacted business in Crookston on Friday last.

Mrs Ballou and Walter D. drove to Crookston Saturday. W. D. is our head push in the Parris farm.

Mrs. C. Nelson, our up-to-date genial landlady, made glad the hearts of the Crookston merchants Saturday.

Thanksgiving Day will be celebrated here by a town dinner to be given in Woodman Hall and in the evening the Woodmen will give one of their enjoyable dances. Best of music will be furnished.

Mr. Williams and daughter arrived Tuesday morning from Crystal Lake, and will occupy the Beebe place two miles northeast of town. They have on the road two cars of stock, etc., which will arrive Wednesday.

H. C. Misner boarded Hank Murray's train for the Queen City Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Misner and his better half are badly missed in our burg. All will be glad when spring brings them back to us again.

R. Teal is very busy these days building a combination hay and wood rack. He says it is the cheapest thing, especially for hauling mill wood. Those in want of wood and having the price please apply.

BEMIDJI.

Chas. Casler is now driving a delivery wagon for Snow & Schrader.

S. C. Brannon returned from a business trip to Minneapolis Saturday.

Bob English has accepted a position as clerk in A. L. Benn's clothing store.

Edward Glenn, of Fargo, was shaking hands with Bemidji friends this week.

Con. O'Brien has resigned his position with the Brainerd & Northern, as says agent.

Edward French has resigned his position with the Warfield Electric Light Company.

—W. H. Campbell has opened a law office here over the store of Dareiare & Rossa.

Mrs Benson, lately of Crookston, has opened up a hotel and restaurant here and is doing a good business.

J. J. Boyer returned Saturday from a deer hunting expedition. He succeeded in bagging a few rabbits of the timid variety.

Go to Naylor & Young for first class furniture, upholstering and frames. Repair work a specialty. Third street, Bemidji.

Owing to the crowded condition of the school here, Miss Bailey and scholars have taken possession of the Peschbacher church till different arrangements can be made.

We have a new laundry firm. Messrs. Plummer & Wilder have leased the plant of the old firm and are making many improvements. They will do a good business.

Halvor Steenerson and A. C. Wilkinson have been attending to legal business in this place during the past week. They also did a little in the hunting and fishing line.

Geo. Leathman, who has been acting as day operator for the Great Northern at this place, has been installed as agent at Farris, Minn. Mr. Jenkin has taken his place here as day operator.

The Hotel Markham will have a grand opening Nov. 17. Every effort is being made to have it a complete success. Invitations are extended to Brainerd, Walker, Cass Lake, Poston, McIntosh and Crookston.

Miss Helen Grant gave a party last Saturday in honor of her 16th birthday. After a dainty supper had been served, and a few choice selections on the piano given by Miss Blanche Boyer, the party returned to their respective homes much pleased after their evening's enjoyment.

Game is so plentiful that even the town curs go out and chase deer for a recreation. A few days ago they rounded up three deer in the city lights, but as every body was too busy to fool with them they made their way back to the woods. Venison is the staple meat, and it is no slight to see five or six carcasses in one shop.

FOR SALE—First class restaurant outfit complete in all respects. Apply to W. W. Hoch.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal,

By N. S. GORDON.

Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

It is becoming more and more apparent every day that anti-expansion is not very popular.

THE Northern Pacific railroad reports gross earnings for the month of October of $3,415,675. Total for July 1, $11,736,111, as compared with $8,207,020 and $10,408,358 for the same period of 1898.

JOHN WALTER SMITH, the newly elected governor of Maryland, will follow the example set by David B. Hill, of New York, and will hold his seat in congress until he is inaugurated as governor on the second Monday in January.

THE sugar factory at Minneapolis is now turning out fifty tons a day of the finest kind of beet sugar, all from Minnesota grown sugar beets. And this too is only a beginning. We predict that in a very few years more Minnesota will be rated as one of the successful sugar producing states.

ADMIRAL DEWEY was married to Mrs. Mildred Hazen in Washington last Thursday. It is not inopportune to remark right here that he did not say to the officiating clergyman, "You may fire when ready," although he was as cool as he was on the bridge that bright May morning in '98.

THE situation in the Transvaal is critical. The Boers have taken the offensive and have beaten in the British at Lady-smith, so that the dual bombardment of that town and attempted assault are hourly expected if they have not already taken place. British reinforcements are now pouring into South Africa and the only hope the Boers have is to strike a decisive blow before Gen. White is relieved.

THE supreme court has denied an application for a rehearing in the case of the commission men and the denial was written by Judge Collins. The only thing left for the commission men to do now is to renew their hostilities against the judge and prevent, if they can, his nomination for governor next year. But the common people will have something to say about who shall be governor, we predict.

A LIVELY interest is now being taken in live stock breeding because of the better prices prevailing. The outlook for the cattle interests are brighter than they have been for a long while. The farmers of Polk county are beginning to turn their attention strongly in the direction of live stock raising. There is no place in the country where the best of feed can be raised more abundantly than right here in the Red River Valley, and stock breeding and feeding should be carried on at a good profit by our farmers.

THE council at the last meeting passed a resolution that, under instructions from the city engineer, the sidewalk on Polk street might be made to conform to the grade of the lots alongside of which it runs. At present the sidewalk on this street is level and does, the greater part of its length, conform to the grades of the lots. In one case, however, the lot is higher and in several instances the lots are lower, hence, in the latter case, the people have to descend a very short distance to reach the ground. If the lots were filled in this latter defect would be remedied. On the other hand, if the sidewalk be lowered or raised according to the height of the lot the appearance will be very distasteful and the walking will be up hill and down dale and positively unsafe at night. We are of the opinion, after making a careful examination of the ground, that the change would be anything but beneficial.

JAS. E. O'BRIEN'S resignation from the presidency of the council clearly implies that he recognized that he was not acceptable to the council as a presiding officer and we congratulate him on having the good sense to withdraw from an office for which he was not fitted and which he did not fill to the satisfaction of the aldermen. He who presides over a deliberative body has the power, if he be wise and tactful, to control legislation, to a certain extent, but he must be impartial and reasonable in his rulings if he expects to retain the respect of his fellow-workers. In all kindliness Mr. O'Brien we must say that he has made anything but an ideal presiding officers. He has been arbitrary and at times has ruled in utter disregard of all accepted parliamentary procedure, and the council has, in consequence, been forced to reject his rulings time and again. With his ability as an orator we feel sure that he will give a better account of himself on the floor of the council chamber than he has with the gavel in hand.

THRIFT AND PROSPERITY

Apparent Among the Farmers—Drainage Being Looked After.

A trip through the country surrounding Crookston, and a look at the different farms gives one an encouraging idea of the farm prospects. Though the crop was not large this year, nor the price either, yet general signs of thrift are everywhere apparent. One thing noticeable is the finished condition of the fall work. The plowing was mainly done sometime ago, and some farmers are working out with their teams to financial advantage. In some cases the farmers are enjoying an annual outing among the haunts of the deer, having previously put on the storm windows, and partially banked-up their buildings in anticipation of the usual mid-November freeze-up.

Another feature of the farm work this year is the prevalence of the use of the grader looking to the proper and better drainage of certain pieces. In some places where the grader has not been used, the plowing has been done in such a manner as to partially answer the same purpose as the grader. This work will generally insure proper conditions for not only getting on the land early in the spring but also for preventing from being drowned out, in case of a very wet season.

THE BAND CONCERT.

The First of This Winter's Series Given Last Evening.

Last evening the Crookston band and Riggs orchestra gave the first of their winter concerts at the Grand. The program was made up of selections by the band, orchestra, instrumental and vocal duets, and violin solos by Mr. Shefstad. All the parts were very satisfactorily performed, each receiving ringing applause. The band won many complimentary remarks for the manner in which it rendered the several different selections, and we must say the rendition of "The Old Folks At Home" was one of the prettiest musical effects that we have had the pleasure of hearing for some time. Mr. Shefstad was down for four numbers, and regardless to say did not detract from his already high reputation. Prof. Riggs deserves great credit for this high class entertainment. He has by the untiring efforts and exceptional ability made his two organizations among the best of their kind in the state. The opera house was crowded and everyone who appreciates high class musical entertainment went away with nothing but praises.

Literary Notes.

The Forum for November contains a number of articles of world-wide interest. Puerto Rico, Spain, Finland, France, China, and America are touched upon by articles representing each country. Among the thirteen articles of vital interest may be found, "How Shall Puerto Rico be Governed," by Hon. H. K. Carroll, Special U. S. Commissioner to Puerto Rico. Hon. J. L. M. Curry, former U. S. Minister to Spain, gives many pungent points on "Spain, Living or Dying?" "The Finnish Question" is discussed in a masterly way by Prof. Rudolf Encken, of the University of Jena, the leading spirit of the Finnish movement in Germany. Jacob Schoenhof shows, by lucical facts, "What the World Owes to France." "Civil Service by Special Training," by Herman Atkinson, sheds new light upon an important subject. Prof. William P. Trent of the University of the South, writes in his most entertaining style an article on "Mr. McCarthy's Reminiscences."

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

The November number of The North American Review is a significant proof that the standpoint occupied by the new editor in his direction of this great magazine commands a marvelously wide range of the world's living interest, and moreover, that he possesses apparently unlimited facilities for securing the services of those who are, and who are known to be, best qualified to discuss those interests in an enlightening and authoritative way.

The contributors are of diverse nationalities, American, British, French, Russian, Roumanian, while they include many personages of the highest distinction, such as the Queen of Roumania, a member of the British House of Peers, the leader of the House of Commons, two members of the late Conference at The Hague, the director of the Comedie Francaise, and others.

Superior Dining Service.

Rev. Jesse R. Zeigler, of Monango, N. D., recently went over the Burlington on a trip to Pennsylvania. He writes: "I found the service and accommodations of your route superior to any I have known in the West. This is especially true of the dining service."

Brazil celebrated the tenth anniversary of the proclamation of republic yesterday.

Notes From Exchanges.

Exchange: The next time a traveling peddler calls at your doors and tries to sell you goods ask him if he will take your eggs, butter and other farm products; ask him if when the town is getting up a little celebration or a subscription is being circulated to defray the expenses of a ball game he would willingly donate a few dollars to help it along. Tell him there is a poor family down the road—would he donate a little money to buy provisions: ask him if he will contribute to a new enterprise just starting. Your home merchant will do all these and much more.

Halstad Reporter: Last Monday A. M. Eckman, of Goodrum, sold his farm one mile east from that place, 372 and a fraction acres, at $35 per acre ($13,020) to Knud Nominad, of Buxton, N. D., formerly state treasurer, of North Dakota. Kaud is a brother-in-law of Mr. Gunderson, of Hendrum, who recently bought Ole Nygard's farm, and expects soon to become a resident of Norman county. He never lets a good thing go by, and knows the value of Norman county soil. We congratulate Mr. Nonland on his good investment, and welcome him to our midst.

Ada Herald: Elmore Jenkins claims the belt for wheat yield this year. A patch containing eight acres yielded 361 bushels to the acre, and all his field yielded 273 bushels to the acre. If anybody did better than that let him say so. It should be remarked that Mr. Jenkins does not try to farm more land than he can cultivate well.

St Paul Herald: Old Pease has taken to pelting the street car conductors of the Twin Cities with American Beauties, and in spite of one confidence in the general purity of his motives, we are forced to speculate on the question of whether he is making a bid for the labor vote for governor or simply trying to square himself for transportation.

Austin Transcript: Trusts are numerous and increasing in Germany, as well as in other countries. Last year, in Germany were formed trust unions of iron-ear manufacturers, of wooden goods manufacturers, of iron goods dealers, of wall paper manufacturers, of cast-iron manufacturers, of cloth dealers, of asphaltum manufacturers, of yarn consumers, of cotton-yarn consumers, of indigo exports, etc. Of course, this must all be laid to the high tariff in the United States.

Halstad Reporter: Last Thursday night the Great Northern train killed six horses belonging to Frank Andes, a farmer living two and a half miles east from town. It is reported that Frank was in the habit of allowing his horses to take an occasional excursion all by themselves after the fall work was over, and they had supposed all six of them to be on the track when the south-bound passenger came along. One of the horses with a broken leg picked his way home during the night, and the other five were found next morning lying along the track immediately south of Sidsted Bros.' farm. Frank has put in his bill to the railroad company for $600.

Halstad Reporter: While enroute for Crookston last Friday we met our former genial townsman K. E. Malme, who now farms his father-in-law's farm near Shelly. Knut says he has cleared $1,300 on farming and well digging during the last two years and is negotiating with A. K. Austin for a large farm near Crookston.

Norman County Herald: A terrific prairie fire swept over sections 25, 36, 35 and part of 26 in Winchester Sunday afternoon. The loss of hay was 130 tons owned principally by John Anderson, Ole Halvorson and Leroy McDonald. The fire went into Rockwell and across into Clay county. Fortunately the wind was not high.

Ada Index: The best sugar factory at Minneapolis is grinding out fifty tons of sugar daily and the farmers who furnish the beets are highly pleased with the profits in beet raising.

Wasecn Radical: Queer ideas. The Christian Scientists says If you do not know you have a liver you will never have liver complaint and if you didn't know you had an appendix you would never have appendicitis. According to that if you did not know you had a stomach you would never be hungry.

Scientific American: At the first indication of diphtheria in the throat, make the room close, then take a tin cup and pour into it an equal quantity of tar and turpentine, then hold the cup over the fire so as to fill the room with fumes. The patient on inhaling the fumes will cough out the membraneous matter and diphtheria will pass off. The fumes of the tar and turpentine loosen the throat and thus afford the relief that has baffled the skill of physicians.

Ulen Union: John Bjerkell was caught by a shaft in the basement under the feed mill Friday and instantly killed. As far as known he has no relatives here. Deceased was well known and has many friends here.

A Splendid Chance for You.

The Farmers' (Twice-a-week) Tribune, of Minneapolis, is making an exceptionally liberal offer to young people generally, particularly persons who have never tried soliciting newspaper subscriptions, to aid them in getting 100,000 subscribers by Jan. 1, 1900. It is perhaps the most liberal proposition ever made by any newspaper in America, and it will interest many who do not ordinarily care to engage in getting subscriptions.

The Farmers' Tribune is the daily Minneapolis Tribune and the Evening Tribune "boiled down" for the use of people who do not have time to read a daily paper. It comes to the home twice every week, filled with the best news of the world and the northwest, the best serial and short stories, political gossip and market reports—all the best that money will buy.

Almost everybody can get a few newspaper subscribers from among his friends and acquaintances, and with such a generous offer as made by The Farmers' Tribune it is quite worth one's while to make the effort.

Send a postal card to The Farmers' Tribune for their subscription circular and sample paper.

Burlington Reclining Chairs

Running on two trains a day to and from Chicago, are the largest, roomiest, and in every way best, of any such cars running from St. Paul and Minneapolis. When you buy a ticket over the Burlington you get the best.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.
FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
FRANK J. CHENEY.
Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.
A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, price 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

FOR SALE.

Imported Yorkshire Swine and Shropshire Sheep at reasonable prices.
For full particulars address
A. W. EDSON,
Austin, Minn.

Farmers' Tribune

The Twice-a-Week Edition of the Minneapolis Tribune

WANTS

100,000

SUBSCRIBERS

And is willing to pay you to help get them. It will give the most liberal pay ever offered to persons who will try—experience is not necessary.
Write a postal for subscription circular and sample paper.

Saw Mill Machinery For Sale Cheap.

One 3-Saw Lath Bolter,
One 3-Saw Lath Mill,

The above machines are in good repair and capable of making 40,000 lath in ten hours.

On Perkins Hand Shingle Machine

With drop tilt attachment — in good repair.

A complete outfit of Saws and Collars goes with above machinery.

Write for Prices.
CROOKSTON LUMBER CO.,
Crookston, Minn

S. L. Collins,

LIVERY AND FEED STABLES

Horses bought and sold on commission. Everything neat and nobby. Feeding a specialty.
Main and Fourth streets.
CROOKSTON — — MINNESOTA.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Makes the food more delicious and wholesome

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Dame Rumor Says

That the engines for a first class man of war cost about $700,000.

That Leon H. Moore, of Pipe Stone, at the age of 85y has developed into a sculptor of renown. He has carved statutes and figures of great renown and originality directly upon stone without instructions or model.

That a deaf man of Chicago complains that the noise of the streets prevent him from sleeping.

That Milwaukee is not making any effort to secure the holding of the national prohibition convention in that city next year.

That the price of butter is likely to keep well up during the winter.

That the time of year for buckwheat pancakes has arrived.

That the water in the Red Lake River is now the lowest on record.

That the Merchants National bank will be the first to try the new steam heating plant.

—Have your overcoat cleaned or colored at Dye Works, 305 North Broadway. 30tf

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr.
Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street
CROOKSTON, MINN.

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

35 lbs Patent Flour for 1 bu. No. 1 Nor. Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

A "Love" of a Bonnet

Is frequently the cause of a quarrel in the family. Ours are not so expensive as to cause one. We have a large number of very lovely ones that are veritable family peace makers. Call and examine them.

Reckitt Block, 2nd St. L. M. Bassett.

COAL AND WOOD

VANCE AND STONE

DEFECTIVE PAGE

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block, Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fontaine & Anglim's. Office hours—9 to 11 a. m; 1 to 5 p. m; 7 to 8 p. m

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW.
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR RELIABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice, Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday, Morning, 11:00 except 8:00 Holy Communion the FIRST Sunday of every Month. Hoster you are welcome.
REV. H. M. DARIN, B. D. Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

—Hugh Fox, of East Grand Forks, visited here Tuesday.

—D. E. Gorton, of Fosston, stayed over Sunday in the city.

—H. L. Gaylord and wife, of Fertile, were visitors here last Saturday.

—Editor Wilson, of the Minot, N. D., Journal, was in the city last Friday.

—Geo. A. Ralph is entertaining his sister, Mrs. Bourdon, of Red Lake Falls, this week.

—Chief Gonyea took the Van Tuyl girl to the reformatory and returned Monday morning.

—Chas. Mills, of East Grand Forks, transacted business in this city last Tuesday.

—T. J. Reishus, cashier of the bank of McIntosh, was doing business in town last Friday.

—John D McPhee, of the Lockhart farm, was in the city Monday going to and returning from McIntosh.

—Miss Aggie McClellan left last Friday evening for St. Paul, where she will spend a couple of weeks visiting friends.

—N. McDougal, formerly foreman at the Lockhart farm, was in town Saturday, and purchased two lots in Jerome's addition.

—Attorney Brown, of Warren, registered at the Crookston last Saturday and did some business with our city legal fraternity.

—A. Chabot gave up all business Saturday and paid strict attention to passing around cigars and receiving the congratulations of his friends. It was all on account of that new girl.

—Elias Steenerson has been out through the country during the past week doing some canvassing for his loan and insurance companies, and incidentally looked in at his farm to see how things were progressing.

—The workmen are now getting into the woods, after a good fall's work in the wheat fields and during threshing. The business men are finding a very good trade supplying them with their winter's necessities.

—H. G. Bhighausen went up to Grafton, N. D., Tuesday morning on business connected with his interests there. He returned last night accompanied by Mrs. Bhighausen, who has been visiting in that place for several weeks.

—A team belonging to Otto Burkhardt came near having a serious run away Monday morning near the city hall, and were only prevented by Chief Gonyea, who was lucky enough to be near. The neck yoke broke and frightened the animals.

—Several young men in this place, who have claims in the country to the east of us are arranging to spend the winter holding them down. They will take in provisions for the winter and put in the time enjoying themselves and tasting frontier life.

—A girl by the name of Mabel Van Tuyl, was sent to the state reform school last week by Judge Watts. The girl has developed quite a propensity for being tough during several months past and the action of the judge is none too previous. It will be remembered that her father was killed at the saw mill last summer.

—Elias Steenerson informs us that the saw mill in which he is interested out in Beltrami county is making arrangements to run during the winter and will saw up about a million feet of lumber for himself besides about a million feet for other parties. The summer's cut as well as the result of the winter's run will be hauled to the railroad, a distance of about twenty-five miles, during the winter.

—Archie Hillard is home again from his claim near Turtle Lake.

—E. D. Chase, has been in the city for several days looking after his business interests.

—Tom O. Sundet spent Sunday in Nelsville, where Mrs. Sundet has been visiting for the past two weeks.

—Miss Emma Worm and Miss Dora Eikhoff spent Sunday at Fisher visiting with Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Scheller.

—Don't go back on your local store if it is trying to serve you right. It can serve you better if you encourage it.

—S. Engebretson, of St. Hilaire, one of the old settlers of that place, was in the city a day or two last week.

—Wm. Sharf, of the firm of Larson & Carpenter, has been spending the past week combining business with sight seeing.

—Jas. Brassfield, a former Great Northern conductor, who is now a farmer near Solway is reported as dangerously ill.

—A team of horses backed themselves into the steam heating ditch on Robert street early Tuesday morning and gave the crew considerable work getting them out.

—C. C. Hoch and party returned Monday from quite a long hunting trip in the woods to the east of us. They had all kinds of a nice time, and got plenty of game.

—O. L. Taylor, one of the new proprietors of the Lockhart farm was up from St. Paul Saturday and came up to Crookston to visit the Experimental farm and Mr. Childs' dairy farm.

—The JOURNAL will guarantee the fair dealing of every advertiser in this paper. You will make no mistake in patronizing the business firms whose advertisements are found in the JOURNAL.

—The local post, G. A. R. are building quite an addition to their hall on Main street, which is intended to be used as a kitchen and mess room during entertainments given in the main building.

—Will Smith, who has held a situation in the G. N. yards at this place for some time has been promoted to the position of an accountant at Larimore. He began in his new capacity Monday morning.

—W. W. Fegan, Grand Forks' hustling wholesale cigar dealer, was in town for a few days this week, transacting business with our merchants and shaking hands with his numerous friends in this neck of the woods.

—Mrs. Jas. Nielson, who has spent some time here visiting her mother Mrs. Jas. McKenzie, and other relatives returned to her home in Buffalo, N. Y. Saturday evening, accompanied by her mother who will spend some time visiting in the east.

—Todd J. Farden and his son Ole came up from Mentor Saturday on business. He says the JOURNAL with its fine quality of paper and new dress of type is the neatest paper he gets, and this with its interesting news from all over the county makes a paper that he and his family enjoy reading.

—Several of our citizens are very well acquainted with W. C. Andrew, the veteran paper salesman, who has been making Crookston for a number of years, and will much regret to learn that his wife died at their home in Minneapolis on Saturday last. Mrs. Andrew was also the mother of our own townsman, Robt. K. Parr.

—The material that has been holding back the work on the new depot has arrived and a large force of brick layers are now at work and have the side walls nearly completed. The work will be finished as fast as possible in order that the building may be enclosed before cold weather sets in.

—Some of our country news last week did not reach this office until after the paper had been printed. The JOURNAL goes to press every Thursday morning. If our correspondents will bear this fact in mind and mail their news items so that they will reach us not later than Wednesday morning it will be appreciated.

—Crookston has two more inventive geniuses, who recently developed. This time it is the genial landlord of the Palace hotel, Dan McKinnon, who asked the government for protection on a buggy clip that is intended to prevent traces from coming loose, and Missor who puts in his spare time pressing hard, desires the exclusive right to manufacture and sell a new fangled burglar proof lock.

—The many friends in Crookston of Miss Rose Milne, of Grand Forks, have an opportunity to assist that young lady in a worthy cause. The Grand Forks Herald says: "Miss Rose Milne will take orders and renewals for the Ladies' Home Journal and Saturday Evening Post. She wishes 1,000 subscribers to win a musical scholarship. If sending your order, mentioning to be applied on her scholarship, proper credit will be given by the Journal." Remember her when making your renewals or sending in subscriptions. Miss Milne is a sister of Mrs. Finch, of this city.

—Attorney A. A. Miller is attending court at Warren this week.

—The forgery case from Fisher was settled out of court last Tuesday.

—Go to the Strawbridge's for dress goods, flannels, blankets, shoes, etc.

—John Erikson purchased from the government this week a quarter section in 12-150-52.

—John Carlson has been busy for the past week getting his cellar in shape for the winter.

—John Steenerson, the popular mayor from Climax, was transacting business in town on Tuesday.

—Nils Nuns, Neilsville's rustling general merchant was up from that burg this week transacting business.

—Chas. Cameron went south Tuesday evening as far as Girard, where he will spend a few days visiting with friends.

—Geo. A. Ralph returned Tuesday night from Red Lake Falls, where he has spent a few days with the drainage ditch reviewers.

—Miss Anna Sundberg of Wylie, is visiting in town, the guest of her brother, A. G. Sundberg, of the Marshall-Johnson elevator.

—Landlord Carlson has got his West Hotel in shape for the winter and his guests will have no occasion to fear the winter's chilling blasts.

—Attorney Rowe went up the St. Vincent line this week to attend to some important business in connection with cases now being prepared by his firm.

—Alex McKinnon paid Crookston his regular fortnightly visit this week and spent most of his time looking after his numerous personal interests here.

—Every body is busy these nice days getting up storm doors and windows and preparing for the cold weather that will be with us in the near future.

—Citizens Paquet will sell off his stock and farm machinery at auction on Wednesday, Nov. 22. Read his announcement and terms of sale in another column.

—Commissioner Thompson was detained from the meeting of the county commissioners this week on account of the death of his father-in-law, Mr. McMasters, at Fisher.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—Shoes are suffering at our slaughter sale that is to continue till the new years. We have a large line of Smith & Pingree shoes, a class of goods whose name is sufficient recommendation.

—Frank Cernousek, the duke of Tabor, transacted business in the county seat the fore part of the week. He was talking with the county commissioners regarding some bridges in his district.

—The steam heating plant is being installed in several of our business houses and the construction crew have nearly completed the laying of the mains. Broadway, only, remains to be piped.

—J. D. Plummer, formerly proprietor of the Electric laundry in this city, has gone in partnership with H. S. Wilder and opened up a laundry in Bemidji, where they are reported as doing a good business.

—Now is the time to fix up for winter. We have quite an accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Co. Telephone 40.

—Remember the big wrap sale at the New York Store. Everything in that line is to be sold to make room for spring and summer goods. Our premises are not large enough to permit us to carry the stock over and it must be sold.

—S. H. Withey, the jolly conductor, of the St. Vincent passenger train, has, as usual, made a record. It is stated on good authority that while in the woods north of Solway last week he brought down a buck that dressed 165 pounds.

—The New York Store is having its sale of ladies wraps this week and until the new year. If you want anything in this line come in and see us. We have the finest line in the city. We can fit you any class of goods you want from a collarette to a seal skin coat.

—Mrs. J. W. Wheeler entertained a pleasant party at her residence last Saturday evening. The event was in honor of her sister, Mrs. Bradish. The evening was spent in a very enjoyable manner, as is usual when this estimable lady entertains.

—Gilbert Bang has purchased the restaurant formerly owned by Mr. Twedten on the corner of Main and Robert streets. He is a first class man in the business and as he has a large circle of acquaintances in this vicinity will have no trouble in holding up the past high standard of the place.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....in the Northwest.

Cold Weather

MEN'S OVERCOATS
$3.00, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $7.50, $10.00 to $30.00

MEN'S SUITS
$2.50, $3.50, $5.00, $6.00, $7.50, 10.00 to $25.00

MEN'S UNDERWEAR
40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, up to $4.00

MEN'S CAPS
Largest line in the Northwest, 25c to $2.00

MEN'S FUR COATS
7.50 and Upward

C. O. D. CLOTHING STORE

—Edward Kaiser, editor of the Bemidji Pioneer, was in the city yesterday on business before the land office.

—Will some one of our subscribers bring us a load of hay to apply on subscription, and another one a load of oats? Both hay and oats will be fully as acceptable as money just now.

—H. C. Scribner, a prominent farmer living about 9 miles south of Fosston was robbed of a load of wheat last week. He is on the track of the thief, one John Harvey, and expects to capture him soon.

Next Sunday morning at the Congregational church Rev. Mr. Fisher will speak on "The Possibilities of the True Woman." In the evening he speaks on "The Young Woman, Her Place, Her Influences, and Her Friends."

At the ministers' meeting last Monday morning, there were present Messrs. Fraser, Fisher, Green, Kathan, Ltuberg and Poole. Reports from the different churches was the order of the day, and each gave a brief synopsis of the services of the previous day. Steps were taken looking toward a union Thanksgiving service.

—Mrs. George W. Schrum, of Euclid, spent Tuesday in the city. She was on her way to Alexandria where she will visit with friends and relatives till after the Christmas holidays. Mr. Schrum has rented his hotel at Euclid to A. H. Kuhlert and is now handling wheat at the St. Anthony & Dakota elevator at that place.

High School Notes.

Mr. Newbury tried a new way of marching out this week. It promises to work well.

Prof. G. O. Riggs played one of his famous cornet solos for the high school on Tuesday.

The musical program for yesterday afternoon consisted of a piano solo by Miss Ema George.

The Senior literature class will begin the study of Dickens "David Copperfield" next week.

On Monday afternoon Miss Abbie Walsh, of Grand Forks, favored the high school with a vocal solo entitled "Only You."

The sophmores have appointed a committee on class yell. It is bound to be a warm one as "Steenie" is chairman of the committee.

Misses Pearl Winney Delores Kearnes, Annie Miller and Trixie Pitkins are playing duets for marching purposes this week.

The football boys have closed the season with a percentage of 1,000. Next year we will profit by this year's experience and have a few more games.

Up to this year it has not been customary for the classes of the high school to organize until the Senior year, now each class has its own organization.

The football boys were very much disappointed as not being able to complete arrangements for the game with the St. Paul team, which was scheduled for last Saturday.

The committee on decorations are kept busy arranging for the temporary decoration of the assembly room during the Northwest Teachers' association to be held here the last of the month.

Births.

CHABOT.

To Mr. and Mrs. A. Chabot, on Saturday, Nov. 10, '99, a girl.

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

Crookston Tannery

Aug. Miller & Co.
Proprietors.

Watch this Next Week

ED. ERICKSON,
DEALER IN
All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...
Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides. Stall fed Beef..... .....a Specialty
SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

The Best Goods

are are always the cheapest goods" is an old motto and a true one, but it is made better when the best goods can be bought as cheap as poor goods. This is the case at our store. We handle nothing but the best goods and our prices are just as low as those of merchants who handle any old kind of goods. One reason for this is that we pay cash for our goods, thereby saving a good discount; another is that we sell for cash, consequently we have no bad accounts to charge against the profits of good ones. A saving both ways. We offer you the benefit. Come in and claim it.

Slocum's CASH GROCERY
CHASE BLOCK, BROADWAY.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Hastings has a new opera house.

Albert Dunal was convicted at Jackson of the murder of Andrew Zeller.

The annual convention of the state Y. W. C. A. closed at Hamline Sunday.

John Coleman of Anoka has been chosen superintendent of the the Anoka insane asylum.

Adjutant General Lambert is arranging the state's war claims against the war department.

The name of the postoffice at Groans Horse, Kanabec county, has been changed to Ogilvie.

The provision of the game law in relation to shipment of venison will be tested in the courts.

A Northwestern branch of the International Bureau of Commerce will be established in St. Paul.

Argument has begun in the United States circuit court in the Duluth and Iron Range land grant case.

There will be a determined effort to secure the next meeting of the National League of Republican clubs for St. Paul.

The state board of health has the smallpox epidemic in the southern part of the state well under control ...d it is now abating.

In a decision at St. Paul Judge Otis ruled that a witness in a civil case need appear only on the day for which he receive fees

At the annual meeting of the Needlework Guild at St. Paul 3,616 garments were turned in for distribution among the worthy poor.

The State Historical society celebrated its fiftieth anniversary at St. Paul Wednesday. Fifteen of the charter members are still alive.

The Brainerd and Northern has ordered 25 logging cars for immediate delivery, in anticipation of an increased business during the coming winter.

On petitions signed by nearly a third of the voters of St. Paul the district judges will appoint a commission to prepare a new charter which will adequately provide for school interests.

A reunion of Company H, Fourteenth Minnesota regiment, United States volunteers, will be held at Olivia in December. Invitations have been issued to all old members of the company to attend the reunion, when a permanent organization will be effected.

A threshing machine separator was blown apart when in operation on the farm of Mr. Hehe, north of Easton. It is thought to have been the result of dynamite placed in one of the stacks. No one was injured, although several men were around the machine at the time.

The Duluth grand jury, after investigating charges made by a newspaper that an unnamed gang of confidence men had been for months fleecing woodsmen on what is known as the Bowery, found that such conditions existed and that, while the police are hampered by insufficient appropriations, they could have stopped it by determined efforts.

The Minnesota Elevator company is again making further additions to its line of elevators by building at the new stations on the Blue Earth-Mason City line now in course of construction by the Chicago and Northwestern. Material and workmen are en route from Winona to build 25,000 bushel capacity elevators at Keister, Frost, Marna, Brecelia and Lake Mills.

The funeral of Hon. John S. Shields was held at Litchfield Saturday. He was found dead in a ditch by the roadside, between Litchfield and his country house. The buggy was upset and lay on top of him, and from appearances death was without a struggle. He was 68 years old and had held many positions of trust. He represented Meeker county in the senate four years.

After a consultation with their attorneys, the St. Paul commission men that deal in game have sent out circulars over the state inviting shipments of deer and guaranteeing protection from liability. It is cited that the loophole in the law neglecting to prohibit shipment by common carrier is sufficient guarantee from liability in the matter, and that there is no way the dealers or the shippers can be reached.

Judge Brill in the district court at St. Paul has filed two orders of considerable interest to depositors in savings banks. They are in the cases of Grace L. Snell and Edward Pallon, both of whom petitioned the court to be allowed to offset notes for money borrowed from the St. Paul Savings bank against deposits. Judge Brill, in denying the petitions says that a savings bank is not a depositor's debtor, but has agent.

At the meeting of the normal school board at Moorhead it was decided to request the state high school board to modify the resolution requiring all high school teachers to be college graduates. Director Hammond, President Ankeny and Professor Phelps were selected to confer with the high school board. Many normal school graduates are now teaching in the high schools of the state, and the enforcement of the resolution would be an injustice to them.

Seized Illegal Fishing Tackle.

FOXN SU LAC, Wis., Nov. 15.—The largest haul of illegally used fishing tackle ever made in Wisconsin was that completed during the day in Lake Winnebago by special Wardens N. F. Carpenter and C. E. Lucas of Fond du Lac and County Warden J. H. White of Appleton. Forty thousand feet of deep water gill nets and eight miles of set lines comprised the seizure.

Three Hundred Dollars Taken.

BRAINER, Minn., Nov. 14.—The general store of Gyllenhorg & Olson of this place was broken into, the safe blown open and $300 carried off. There is no clue to the perpetrators.

RIOT CASES CALLED.

Damages of Railroads for Losses During the Chicago Strike Being Heard.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—The trial of what are known as "the riot cases" have been called before Judge Kohlsaat in the federal court. These are the cases in which various railroads ask for judgments against the city for damages to their property suffered during the railroad strike in 1894, on account of the alleged failure of police authorities to furnish adequate protection.

One of these cases, a minor one, has been tried and taken to the supreme court of the state by the city on the pleas that the state statute holding the city liable for damages of this character was unconstitutional. The supreme court, however, held the statute constitutional and decided the city must pay.

The present cases accordingly will turn simply on questions of fact, the city trying to show the companies have not suffered as much damages as they claim. The aggregate of these claims is nearly $8,000,000, and in the one trial, brought by the Pennsylvania company, the amount claimed is $300,000.

Chief Kipley issued an order to all members of the police department who were on active service at the time of strike to call at the controller's office Sunday morning and give their testimony. Almost 200 patrolmen responded and turned in their testimony.

LITTLE HOPE OF RECOVERY

Senator Hayward of Nebraska in a Most Precarious Condition.

OMAHA, Nov. 15.—Word has been received from Nebraska City which indicates that Senator Hayward is in a most precarious condition and that his death is to be expected at any time. A consultation of physicians was held, Dr. Bridges being summoned from Omaha for the purpose. At the close of consultation it was given out that the physicians could hold out no hope whatever for the senator's permanent recovery and very little if any of even a temporary improvement in his condition.

TO CALL A MEETING.

Hanna Will Soon Issue Summons to Republican Committeemen.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 13.—Senator Hanna stated that a call will be issued within a few days for the meeting of the national Republican committee at Washington. The meeting will probably be held on Dec. 19 or 14, although the exact date will not be decided upon until next week. The committee at this meeting will choose the date and place for holding the next national convention. There are two vacancies on the committee and these will be filled at the forthcoming session of that body.

Succeeded in Boaring the Market.

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 15.—Zinc ore, which has been selling at $26 a ton, took another drop during the day and is now $21 a ton less than it was two weeks ago, being now scheduled at $23. The slump in price is due to the successful efforts of the smelters in the combine to bear the market.

Reichstag Reassembles.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—The reichstag has reassembled. The president, Count Von Ballestrem, welcomed the members. The proceedings were formal. The house then adjourned.

A Misplaced Amen.

Attorney John A. Ward, one of the popular members of the Philadelphia bar, says The Inquirer, of that city, recalls at times an incident in one of the courts which happened shortly after he had been admitted to practice law, and which he tells with scarcely the shadow of a smile.

It was when court was just opening for the morning session that a boy, sitting by his side, heard the usual prayer made by the crier. The lad seemed deeply surprised, until, as the last words were uttered by the official, Ward, without a thought as to the result, punched the boy in the side with his elbow and told him to say amen. Quick as a flash came the response from the boy in a tone of voice that at first startled lawyers and spectators and disturbed the equilibrium of the presiding judge.

When the instant of astonishment had passed, men and women who were present laughed lightly as all eyes were directed toward the lad and Ward said: "I was confused to do anything," says the latter, "except to look in any direction but at the youth, who seemed to be appealing to me to know why everybody was looking at us. I still say 'amen' myself when prayer requires it, but I have never told any one else to do so since the occurrence in court, and I never will."

Hypnotism.

The subject of hypnotism was rescued from the charlatans, rechristened and subjected to accurate investigation by Dr. James Braid of Manchester as early as 1841. But his results, after attracting momentary attention, fell from view, and, despite occultory efforts, the subject was not again recorded a general hearing from the scientific world until 1878, when Dr. Charcot took it up at the Salpetriere in Paris, followed soon afterward by Dr. Bandof of Helsingfors of Breslau and a host of other experimenters. The value of the method in the study of mental states was soon apparent.

Most of Braid's experiments were repeated, and in the main his results were confirmed. His explanation of hypnotism, or artificial somnambulism, as a self induced state, independent of any occult or supersensible influence, soon gained general credence. His belief that the initial stages are due to fatigue of nervous centers, usually from excessive stimulation, has not been supplanted, though supplemented by notions growing out of the new knowledge as to subconscious mentality in general and the inhibitory influence of one center over another in the central nervous mechanism.—Harper's Magazine.

GRAND GIFT DISTRIBUTION

The Most Remarkable Offer Ever Made by a Reliable Concern.

EDITOR JOURNAL: Please announce that for a limited time we will give absolutely free to every married lady sending name, address and a two cent stamp for postage, an elegant triple-silver-plated Sugar Shell. Such goods sell in jewelry stores at 50 cents each. This is the most expensive advertising we have ever done, but it will make us thousands of friends and permanent customers. There is nothing to pay except a two cent stamp and a sort of guaranty of good faith. The Home Furnisher, our own monthly publication, showing our line of high grade silverware and furniture, will also be sent free. But one Sugar Shell to a family.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO.
Morgan and Harrison Streets, Chicago. [28-33]

Especially for Ladies.

Are those splendid compartment cars on the Burlington Limited from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago. All the comforts of home including an electric heater for your curling iron. When you send for a railroad ticket, insist on having it over the Burlington.

For Sale

One lot in Jerome's addition and two lots in Simpson's addition. If you want a good lot at a low figure, ask to see them. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

For Sale

A good farm of 320 acres, well cultivated, has a good house and barn and close to Crookston markets. Can be bought right. For particulars call at the JOURNAL office.

For Sale

A desirable house and lot with barn. This house is in first class condition and well located. The price is $1,500 and it is a bargain. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

The Finest Limited Train.

From St Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago is the Burlington electric lighted and steam heated. Every comfort that other trains have and some that no others have. Remember this when buying railroad tickets.

Call on F. N Stowell at Nestor when in need of harness goods. He carries a good supply and does work cheap and neatly.

FLABBY FELLOWS

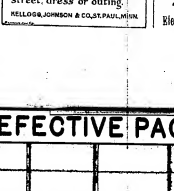
WHO WANT TO BUILD UP THEIR BODIES WILL FIND THE "ONE THING NEEDFUL" IN

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

The body is built up from the food we eat. But before food can be assimilated by the body it must be prepared for assimilation by the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Food does not feed when the stomach is "out of order." The result is, weak muscles and flabby flesh. "Golden Medical Discovery" heals diseases of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system. It works with Nature to make manly muscle and firm firm flesh.

In a letter received from A. D. Weller, Esq., of Pensacola, Escambia Co., Fla. (Box 564), he states: "I have, since receiving your diagnosis of my case, as stomach trouble and liver complaint, taken eight bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and must say that I am transformed from a walking shadow (as my friends called me) to perfect health."

A TRUE Temperance Medicine.
CONTAINS NO ALCOHOL.



An old shoe has its place but it is not upon the foot. Throw yours away and secure a pair of the celebrated

Kellogg, Johnson & Co's Shoes

Unequalled in retaining shape and in wear; luster and comfort. All the fashionable shapes for street, dress or outing.

KELLOGG, JOHNSON & CO. ST. PAUL, MINN.

Preserves

Jams, jellies, pickles or catsup are very tasty, more quickly, more economically sealed with Rutland Parowing Wax than by any other method. Dozens of other uses will be found in every household. It is clean, convenient, reliable. Ask your dealer to let you smell the pound package with a list of its many and from your druggist or grocer. Sold everywhere. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture

AND

Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a house.... CROOKSTON, MINN.

S. C. Johnson's Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale	35c
Oats, per bushel	28c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs	75c
Shorts, 100 lbs	65c
Bran, 100 lbs	60c
Shelled Corn, per bu	40c
Condition Powder, per pkg	25c
Shorts, per ton	$12.00
Bran, per ton	10.00

Cedar Posts from 12c to 15c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

THE "FLYER"

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

ONLY 2 NIGHTS

ON THE TRAIN BETWEEN THE TWIN CITIES AND THE PACIFIC COAST.

Burlington Route

Finest Train on Earth from

ST. PAUL -AND- Minneapolis -TO- ST. LOUIS AND ALL SOUTHERN CITIES

Electric Lighted and Steam Heated.

CARY SAFE CO..

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

....Manufacturers of....

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON.....PRE H. STEENERSON.....VICE-PRESIDENT.
N. S. GERVAIS.....2d VICE-PRESIDENT. L. ELLINGTON.....CASHIER
A. P. HANSON, ASST. CASHIER

The Weekly Inter Ocean

Always American—Always Republican

Largest Circulation of all Political Papers in the West

THE WEEKLY INTER OCEAN SUPPLIES ALL NEWS AND BEST CURRENT LITERATURE

The Inter Ocean's Telegraphic Service is Exclusive. Every Column is Bright, Clean and Packed with News.

$1

The Literature of its Columns is equal to that of the best magazines. It is interesting to the children as well as the parents.

The Inter Ocean is a Western Newspaper,

And while it brings to the family The News of the World, and gives its readers the best and ablest discussions of all questions of the day, it is in full sympathy with the ideas and aspirations of Western people and discusses literature and politics from the Western standpoint.

$1.00—PPICE, ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR—$1.00

Price of Daily by mail - - $4.00 per year
Price of Sunday by mail - - 2.00 per year
Daily and Sunday by mail - - 6.00 per year

The Sunday and Daily Editions of the Inter Ocean are the Best in the West

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laing out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have our architect include electric wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give ou the benefit of our experience in laing out wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

VERY BRISK FIGHT

AMERICANS DEFEAT INSURGENTS NEAR SAN JACINTO.

Enemy Puts Up an Unexpected "Good Fight but Finally Retires Toward Dagupan—Americans Lose Five Killed and Thirteen Wounded, Major John A. Logan Being Among the Slain.

MANILA, Nov. 15.—The Thirty-third infantry, in one of the sharpest 2-hour engagements of the war with an equal force of insurgents a few miles from San Fabian on Saturday, lost 1 officer and 4 men killed and 1 officer and 12 men wounded. They captured 21 Filipinos and 100 rifles and found 81 insurgent dead lying in the trenches and rice fields. Many more Filipinos, doubtless, were killed or wounded.

General Wheaton was informed that the enemy was gathering at San Jacinto for the purpose of preventing the Americans controlling the road from Dagupan north, whereby Aguinaldo might retreat. The Thirty-third and a detachment of the Thirteenth, with a Gatling gun, were sent to disperse them. The troops encountered the worst roads ever found in the island of Luzon. There was a succession of creeks whose bridges the Americans had to stop at and repair and many ditches where horses and men Struggled Waist-Deep in Quagmire.

A hundred soldiers had to drag the Gatling gun part of the way, the horses being useless. The insurgents opened the fight two miles from San Jacinto, while the leading American battery was passing a clump of houses in the midst of a cocoanut grove, knee-deep in mud. The Filipino sharpshooters, hidden in trees, houses and a small trench across the road, held their fire until the Americans were close to them. When they began firing other Filipinos opened fire from thickets, right and left, farther away. The insurgent sharpshooters picked off the officers first. Five of the Americans who fell were shoulder straps or chevrons. But the Thirty-third never wavered. Its crack marksmen knocked the Filipinos from the trees like squirrels and the Americans reached the trench, leaving four dead insurgents there. The regiment then deployed under fire with Major Logan's battalion in the center, Major Cronicle's on the right and Major Marsh's on the left. The keeping up a constant fire. The Filipinos made an unexpectedly good stand, many of them remaining under cover until the Americans were within two feet of them. Major Marsh surprised a small trench full of insurgents, slaughtering nearly all of them. The Gatling killed a number of those holding the bridge and swept the country near the town, driving about 150 Filipinos to the hills. They are supposed to have retreated towards Dagupan. It was impossible to pursue them, as the American troops were exhausted and their ammunition low. The officers say it is impossible for General Wheaton to effect a junction with General Young on account of the roads.

Skirmish Line Advanced Rapidly,

The couriers report they saw an army, estimated at 25,000 (probably an exaggeration), retiring towards Dagupan. They hint that Aguinaldo crossed the line intended for General Young and General Wheaton's junction and that he passed north two weeks ago.

AGUINALDO MISSING.

Whereabouts of the Insurgent Leader Still a Mystery.

MANILA, Nov. 15.—8:40 a. m.—The whereabouts of Aguinaldo and his army are obtained in a perfect enigma. General Otis has learned that Aguinaldo recently issued a proclamation transferring the capital to Bayambang, giving as a reason for the step the unsanitary condition of Tarlac.

It is supposed that the leaders of the insurrection who are not already at Bongabon are retreating toward that place, but whether they left Tarlac and are travelling with the army, how many soldiers they were able to hold together and whether the leaders and troops have got beyond General Lawton's lines are all unknown. It is hoped, however, that General Wheaton has effected a junction with General Young, forming a cordon from San Fabian to San Isidro. General Lawton has 6,000 men; General Wheaton has 2,700—a small force to control so many miles, but it commands the main roads by which the insurgents must move to the northwest.

With the Americans advancing at the present rate, they could drive the insurgents from Bongabon in a fortnight, and it is impossible for the rebels to establish another capital in Luzon which cannot be captured within a month.

DEATH OF JOHN A. LOGAN.

Son of the Civil War Hero Killed by a Filipino Bullet.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—A cable dispatch received at the war department announces that Major John A. Logan, Jr., Thirty-third volunteer infantry, has been killed in a fight in Luzon. He was leading his battalion in action. He is a son of the late General John A. Logan of Illinois, and Mrs. Mary A. Logan, now a resident of Washington. He leaves a widow and two children, who are at present residing at Youngstown, Ohio.

The Twenty-sixth Sails.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—The transport City of Sydney with the Twenty-sixth infantry on board sailed for Manila during the day. The Forty-fifth infantry will be the next to sail.

Hobart Had a Good Day.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 15.—Vice President Hobart had a fairly good day and is resting easily. He ate three meals and sat up in his easy chair most of the time.

TANGLE GROWS WORSE.

No Light on the Situation as a Result of the Official Count.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 14.—The tangle growing out of last week's election grows worse with each day. This was the third day of the official count, but the work of the county boards of canvassers disclosed little information to clear the situation.

Chairman Long of the Republican campaign committee repeats his claim of a majority of 8,111 for Bradley based on official returns from 110 counties and unofficial returns from the remaining 6. The Democratic papers and leaders here have ceased to give figures, but Frankfort specials quote Candidate Goebel and other party leaders as saying they are confident of the success of the Kenton county man.

Result Depends on Contests.

The complexion of the returns to be presented to the state board of election commissioners when it meets at Frankfort next month still depends upon the determination of the contests which are being raised in several parts of the state. These contests have assumed much feeling in the localities affected. One of them involves the vote of Knox county, which gave Taylor 1,886 plurality. Monday Barbourville, the county seat, was visited by hundreds of people interested in the result, their avowed purpose being to see that justice was done. At Hoskinsville a contest over a precinct which gave Taylor a plurality of 96 is delaying the official return of the vote of Christian county, which gave Taylor a plurality of 790.

REPORTED BY BRISTOW.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Gives Out Statistics.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Fourth Assistant Postmaster General John D. Bristow in his annual report announces that during the past fiscal year 14,404 postmasters were appointed, 18,928 being fourth class postmasters and the remainder presidential. Concerning the policy of removals, the report says:

There were 2,036 postoffices established and 1,005 discontinued. At the close of the year the total number of postoffices in the country was an even 76,000. The department has discontinued a number of private postoffices, which it has been advised were conducted for the sole benefit of some private institution, not only depriving government of the legitimate revenues, but giving undue advantage over competing firms in postal facilities. Extension of rural delivery necessitated discontinuing 80 postoffices, applications to restore a number of which are now pending.

About 4,000 more postoffices were inspected than in any previous year. Registered mail lost averaged 1 piece in every 80,000 handled. There were 1,079 postal arrests during the year, including 119 postmasters, 31 assistant postmasters, 41 postoffice clerks, 21 railway postal clerks, 84 letter carriers, and 361 postoffice burglars. Of all these 659 were convicted and 629 cases are still pending in the courts.

WATCHING THE CONTESTS.

Result in Kentucky Will Depend on the Decisions Made.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 1.—The progress of the contests in various counties of Kentucky is the point about which interest in the fight for the governorship is centered. The determination of these disputes may swing in either direction the result of the face of the returns as they will be made to the state board of election commissioners. These contests involve over 4,000 votes in seven counties.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 16.—A special to The Commercial-Tribune from Frankfort, Ky., says: There no doubt opponents at the state capital during the day in the muddle over the governorship. A majority of the Democratic politicians are inclined to give it up, but Mr. Goebel, according to his own statement, remains serenely confident and says: "I know I have been elected."

WRECK OF CHARLESTON.

Cruiser Struck on a Hidden Reef With Deep Water on Both Sides.

MANILA, Nov. 14.—12:25 p. m.—The United States cruiser Charleston ran aground near Vigan on a hidden reef with 35 fathoms of water on both sides. She worked her machinery for two days and nights in trying to get afloat, but, a typhoon arising, the crew were compelled to take to their boats and seek refuge on a small island three miles away. The natives are friendly. Lieutenant McDonald and a number of sailors put off in a small boat and reached the Callao, which brought them to Manila. The gunboat Helena has been dispatched to bring away the crew.

Lieutenant McDonald describes the Charleston when he last saw her as hard and fast aground, with her bottom badly stove in, well out of water.

DIFFERENCES GROWING.

Breach Between Russia and Japan Perceptibly Widens.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A special dispatch from Shanghai says the differences between Russia and Japan have been accentuated by Japan's refusal to grant Russia a foothold on sea front of Missampo harbor, Korea.

Saw Gilmore Nov. 1.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The following has been received at the navy department from Admiral Watson: Escaped Spanish prisoners at San Fabian report seeing Gilmore Nov. 1 in Tarlac, with five men; all well. He crossed mountain from Gilmore Oct. 27 day with 18 men. Location of other eight unknown. Have called Hong Kong for salvage for Charleston.

Cannot Recover Damages.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—Judge Colt, in the United States district court, has decided that an employe of a railway injured while riding on a pass given him by the corporation, even if it was part compensation for his services, could not recover damages.

DID NOT MEAN IT

SALISBURY EXPLAINS A PHRASE OF HIS RECENT SPEECH.

Most Seeking Gold Fields or Territory" Misinterpreted by Boer Sympathizers

That the Government Did Not Intend to Annex the Transvaal Premier Intimates It's a Question for the Future.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Lord Salisbury has written to the newspapers protesting against Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice's misquotation from his recent speech at the Guildhall banquet and again declaring that he does not wish to discuss "arrangements which, under conditions that are yet in the future, the government may think desirable." The letter refers to the phrase "We do not seek gold fields or territory," and is intended as a disavowal of The Daily Chronicle's interpretation that the government does not intend to annex the Transvaal.

NOTHING FROM THE FRONT

Some Apprehension Felt in Regard to Ladysmith.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—In the absence of fresh news the morning papers are driven to discuss Lord Salisbury's letter regarding misinterpretations of his utterances at the lord mayor's banquet and President Kruger's intention to execute British officers now in his hands unless Nathan Marks, a supposed Boer spy, is released by Sir George Sprigg. The premier's deliverance meets with universal approval, although the explanation was in no way necessary, as outside The Daily Chronicle no one had supposed his words could bear the meaning which Boer sympathizers had been endeavoring to read into them.

President Kruger's threat has excited widespread indignation. The Daily News demands that his friends should promptly inform him that his own neck and that of Dr. Reitz, the Transvaal state secretary, will be held responsible for any such violation of the elementary rules of civilized warfare.

Let One Story Through.

For once the censorship is blamed for laxity. It is and the censor ought to have suppressed the story of Father Matthews regarding the surrender at Nicholsons Nek, which, while too vague to be considered evidence, must cause uneasiness. The feeling is that until the facts can be ascertained it would have been wiser not to have circulated more gossip.

The general delay on South African messages, now amounting practically to five days, and the lack of any definite news from Ladysmith, gives rise to some apprehension which is not relieved by the fact that no adverse tidings have come from either British or Boer sources. Nothing is known as to the whereabouts of General Sir Redvers Buller.

H. M. S. Powerful has arrived at Simons bay from Durban and begun to coal. The cruiser will return to Durban immediately with more guns.

Plan of Campaign Unknown.

Lord George Hamilton, secretary of state for India, announced in a speech that a relief force would immediately be sent to Ladysmith, but beyond that nothing is known of the British plan of campaign and equal secrecy shrouds the movements of the Boers.

The Morning Post, which complains that it was unwise tactics on the part of the British officials to leave the railway intact in their retirement to Ladysmith, says:

"It is another illustration of British contempt for the Boers, that they treated the retirement as though it was an advance and preserved the enemy's line of communication as carefully as if it had been our own."

Dr. Jameson, the hero of the raid, left Cape Town for England last Thursday. The Cape authorities have seized a wireless telegraph plant found on board a vessel destined for Delagoa Bay.

FIGHTING AT KIMBERLEY.

Boers Reported to Be Very Active in That Vicinity.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The war office has issued the following dispatch from General Sir Redvers Buller dated Cape Town, Nov. 11:

"Colonel Kekewich (British commander at Kimberley) reports that the enemy were very active on Nov. 8, principally with the object of driving off cattle. The Orange Free State troops retired rapidly before Colonel Burnes.

"Our casualties were limited to Major Acland of the Cape police, who was wounded in the neck. The Boer loss was probably heavy, but had not been estimated by Colonel Kekewich."

BRITISH COLONEL KILLED.

Keith-Falconer Is Only Officer of Higher Rank Than Second Now Reported.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The war office has received from General Buller the following dispatch:

"A reconnoitering force from the Orange river had a skirmish with the enemy about four miles east of Belmont. The casualties are:

"In the Northumberland Fusiliers, Colonel C. E. Keith-Falconer, killed; Lieutenants E. Bevan and H. C. Hall, wounded.

"In the North Lancashire regiment, Lieutenant C. C. Wood and two privates wounded. Lieutenant Wood died later."

Buller Has Left Cape Town.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The fact that the latest two official war dispatches were received from General Sir Francis Hugh Walker and not from General Buller seem to indicate that the latter may have left Cape Town. A special from Cape Town asserts that he had actually reached Durban. This is certainly premature but he may have started.

Troopships Arriving in Africa.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The war office announces that the troopship Roslyn Castle has arrived at Durban and the troopship Gascon at Cape Town.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Nov. 9.

Passenger rates between St. Paul and Chicago will be restored to $11.50 on Nov. 20.

J. W. Anderson, the Winnipeg bank cashier accused of stealing $62,000, has been acquitted.

Daniel M. Rosser, Jr., son of D. M. Rosser, proprietor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is dead, aged 29.

The Rootenai Valley branch of the Great Northern will be open for business on the 15th inst. This will open up a new mining district to rail traffic.

The Third battalion of United States marines, consisting of 18 officers and 320 men, has arrived at Mare Island, en route to the Philippines for shore duty at Cavite.

A national movement of women has been started by Chicago ladies to present swords to Generals Wheeler and Lee and petition congress to make these major generals in the regular army.

Friday, Nov. 10.

Gus Ruhlin has posted $1,000 for a fight with James J. Jeffries.

The marriage of Admiral Dewey and Mrs. Hazen occurred at Washington Thursday morning.

The United States district court convened at Juneau Nov. 1. Nine men charged with murder are booked for trial.

Ex-Governor John H. McGraw of Washington has been appointed United States court commissioner at Cape Nome.

The Canadian Development company is establishing relief and supply posts at intervals of 20 miles along the Yukon, between Bennett and Dawson.

Guatamala has agreed to arbitrate the R. H. May claim, according to a dispatch received by Secretary Hay from Minister Hunter. Guatamala has denied May's right to an indemnity, but has expressed her willingness to submit all disputed points to arbitration.

Saturday, Nov. 11.

A. J. Newton is the new lord mayor of London.

Fears are again felt in England for the safety of Ladysmith.

The trial of a number of French senators for sedition has begun.

Trouble with Indians in Utah has necessitated the calling out of troops.

Kid McCoy knocked out Jack McDonough of St. Paul in the fourth round.

The Samoan agreement has been approved by the German colonial council.

Aguinaldo has been definitely located at Bambang, in the mountainous country northeast of Tarlac.

Warm weather is reported on the Yukon and the river has cleared of ice again, enabling several boats steamers to move.

Denis J. Sweenie, who has been chief of the Chicago fire department since 1875, has handed his resignation to Mayor Harrison.

Monday, Nov. 13.

Admiral Schley is quoted as heartily in favor of the Nicaragua canal.

A general concert is being made to consolidate the leading trunk railways.

The Carnegie-Oliver interests will establish a great shipbuilding plant on the great lakes.

A subcommittee of the industrial commission will inquire into the transportation question in Chicago, Nov. 20.

The Republican leadership in the next congress seems to rest between Speaker of New York and Cannon of Illinois.

Treasury department officials say the emergency in New York will relax when that city begins getting its money back from the West.

Saturday football games: Minnesota 5, Beloit 5; Yale 42, Pennsylvania State 0; Harvard 11, Dartmouth 0; Princeton 12, Carlisle 0; Michigan 10, Pennsylvania, 11; Chicago 76, Northwestern 0; Wisconsin 28, Illinois 0; Columbia 17, West Point, 0; Cornell 5, Lafayette 6; Iowa 16, Grinnell 0.

Tuesday, Nov. 14.

A German expedition in West Africa killed 250 cannibals in a punitive measure.

The New York presbytery has referred "Heretic" McGiffert to the general assembly.

It is now stated that United States troops have Aguinaldo surrounded. His secretary has been captured, also a son of General Llanares.

The official count in Maryland gives J. Walter Smith, Democratic candidate for governor, 12,121 plurality over Lowndes, Republican incumbent.

The United States cruiser Charleston, which had been patrolling the northern coast of the island of Luzon, was wrecked on a reef on the northwest coast Tuesday, Nov. 7. All on board were saved.

Wednesday, Nov. 15.

The broomcorn trust has raised prices from $80 to $200 per ton.

The National Association of Postmasters has convened in Washington.

Admiral Dewey will transfer to his family the title to the home given him by the American people.

In his yearly report General Otis justifies the course of the American army in the Philippines.

Once more Alonzo J. Whiteman, formerly of Duluth, has been arrested; this time in New York and swindling is the charge.

President McKinley will visit Tennessee to welcome home the regiment of that state from the Philippines and incidentally make a few expansion speeches.

The managing director of the American Steel and Wire company gave to the industrial commission an account of an attempt to form a world-wide combine of wire producing companies.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Crookston, Minnesota.

Auction Sale!

Of Farm Stock and Machinery

Consisting of 8 working horses, 4 milch cows, 2 yearlings, 2 binders, 2 gang plows, 1 spring tooth harrow, 1 drill, 2 disc harrows, 2 lumber wagons, 2 pair bob sleighs, 50 tons hay, 1 two-seated buggy, 4 set double harness, 1 set single earness. Sale to take place at 10 o'clock a. m.

Wednesday, November 22

On my farm one and a half miles northwest of Russia elevator.

Terms: All sales up to $10, cash; over $10, good bankable paper will be taken.

Half Section of Land already plowed for sale or rent to good party.

CLAYMONT PAYANT.

Subscribe Now

And get the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL from now till January 1st, 1901, for $1.50.

This offer includes the handsome Christmas Editions for the two years. The JOURNAL is the best paper in this Congressional district and is improving with each issue.

THE JOURNAL

CROOKSTON, MINN.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. ERSKINE, President. WM. ANGLIM, Vice-President.
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms, Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

George B. Erskine, A. A. Miller, Wm. Anglim, J. R. McKinnon, F. M. Walsh, L. Fontaine J. P. Foote, W. H. Crosby, J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

GRAND FORKS.

A meeting of the county commissioners has been called for Monday.

The Episcopal ladies held a social at the residence of Mrs. James Farmer Elton.

Messrs. N. K. Chandler and Carl Nash returned Sunday from a very successful goose hunt.

The collectors are all chuckling over the good roads and good collections. They're dead easy—they say.

Edwin Mayo delighted a large audience Saturday evening in his great production of Pud'n Head Wilson.

The Presbyterian ladies hold their annual fair Thursday and Friday, under the able management of Mrs. J. H. Bosard.

The tri-county Teachers' Association met Friday and Saturday, and a great many teachers were in from the country points.

Miss Anna Parsons left yesterday for Missouri. She will make a short stay in Chicago and will arrive in Ravenswood, Mo. in time to be present at the marriage of her brother, H. G. Parsons.

The president of the newly organized State Chess Association desires that persons who intend to Spin will do so immediately, as the correspondence for the championship of the state will be instituted very shortly.

It is reported that Flanagan, the famous full back of the University football team, has practically arranged to pitch for the Minneapolis base ball team next season. Flanagan is both swift and speedy in the box, a sure fielder and good for a base hit at any time.

J. D. Myers, the assistant county superintendent of schools, died Friday morning after a long and painful illness. He was one of the best known and most respected of Grand Forks' citizens. The flags of the city were hung at half-mast. He was a member of three lodges.

FISHER.

(Too late for last week.)

Ole Olson visited at Crookston Monday.

George Walsh, of Larimore, N. D., was visiting here Wednesday.

Ed. Olsen came down from the Forks Wednesday to visit his folks.

L. B. and C. B. Merrill went to Grand Forks on business Wednesday.

John Morum returned from Bemidji Tuesday, where he has been visiting for the past week.

F. H. Herrick, traveling salesman for DeCamp Fruit Co., was on our streets Wednesday.

The W. R. C. crowd surprised Miss Clara Sheire at her home Tuesday evening and it was spent in playing games and pulling taffy. They all report having an enjoyable time.

FOSSTON.

Attorney D. H. Fisk went to Crookston Tuesday.

Helland & Hiererson are building an addition to their butcher shop on Harrison Ave.

Attorneys B. S. Bennet, J. A. Hendricks and D. H. Fisk are attending court at Bemidji this week.

Anton H. Johnson, formerly of Langby, has purchased the Helland meat market building on Stevens Ave.

Mrs. W. E. Black returned from Bottineau, N. D. Friday, where she attended the funeral of her brother E. Carey.

Last week the Minneapolis Journal representative and POLK COUNTY JOURNAL man met here. Both got good lists.

Andrew J. Olson, of Langby, has moved with his family to Fosston, where he has accepted a position with S. S. Studsvold.

The "Thirteen Towns" plant is being moved into the Helland building. A. W. Foss, the editor having rented it for 3 years.

The McIntosh Tribune claims the Fosston boys charged them 10 cents admission to the grounds to see the football game last Sunday and allowed the Fosston boys to go free. This is a mistake and is not claimed by the best citizens of the village of McIntosh. No, Mr. Tribune, all were charged alike. We have no cheap boys here.

CASS LAKE.

H. H. Frost has opened a bazaar.

Mr. Hartley is platting the townsite.

John P. Atchison has opened the Boston Restaurant and is doing finely.

The Nells Lumber company have broken ground for a new mill which will employ about 250 men.

Conductor W. P. Pruneau took the remains of his little son to St. Cloud for burial. The family have the sympathy of all.

WARREN.

Attorney G. E. Carr, from Stephen, is also in attendance at court.

J. J. Sutton, the popular corporation lawyer, is down from Argyle attending court.

Court convenes this week. Judge Watts occupies the bench. There are no criminal cases to be tried.

E. L. Brown the taxidermist, City Recorder Hull, John Boldon and Dan Bernard have just returned from a big hunt for specimens of deer, moose and elk.

Attorney W. J. Brown and F. W. Flunders are spending a few days in St. Paul on business pertaining to a certain shipment of old iron, that has been in dispute and over which there is considerable trouble.

MAPLE BAY.

We are having fine weather.

C. Nelson went to Fertile Sunday.

M. Gronvold has started a feed mill.

C. W. Russell, from St. Paul, was here on business Monday.

Some of our young folks attended the dance at Mentor Friday night.

There will be a good many of the boys going to Bemidji this winter.

Ole M. Olson leaves in two weeks for Bemidji, where he expects to work during the winter.

There are thousands of ducks in Maple Lake now and the boys are having quite a time hunting.

A basket party was given at S. Petterson's for the benefit of Harry Halvorson and it was well attended.

LENGBY.

Andrew Olson went to Fosston Sunday.

Evaleua Lillo left for Crookston Sunday.

Alen Olson was up from Fosston Sunday.

Elling Olson, of Brandsvold, was here between trains Sunday.

A. Wiglund, an old time Columbia farmer, is up from Renville looking after his interests here.

Mrs. Jens Norstrom died Thursday evening. She leaves several children and a husband to mourn her loss. The funeral was held Saturday.

Our section foreman, Pat Glynn had a narrow escape from death Friday night. While coming from Elsey just before six o'clock with twelve men on a hand car and running at full speed they came to the sink hole about one and a half miles east of town where a crew of men and teams were at work. Some gravel had been left on the rails which caused the car to jump the track, and Pat was thrown under the car and was badly cut and bruised but no bones were broken. Mr. Glynn is at Crookston undergoing repairs and will be back in a short time. A. H. Ohrlin has charge of the section during his absence.

RUSSIA.

Will Duval recently lost two working horses.

P. Wermager is rushing his barn to a finish.

Felix Rauenbuehler's store is painted white with red cornices.

Adeline Menare went to Winnipeg, to a convent college last Monday.

The Great Northern railway is filling up alongside the loading platform.

Everybody is pleased about this late favorable season as there is lots of fall work to be done.

Ed. St. Ives who has been employed here for the last eleven months has gone home to Terrebonne, Red Lake county.

Miss Mary Potvin has left the Russia farm to go with her folks to Duluth, Minn., and John Potvin will leave next week.

Ben Geroux is taking the jobs of threshing, which were to be done by Peter Noesen's machine. that was burned recently. It is too late in the season for Mr. Noesen to buy another machine.

J. E. O'Brien has had the foreman of the Russia farm doing some extensive road grading, which is much needed in this neighborhood, because the most of the farmers are unwilling to do any public work on the roads.

The opening dance at Felix Rauenbuehler's new store building was a great success, especially in the enjoyment, and everybody, who attended it wishes a repetition of it. They all say it is the best country dance they were ever at. Mr. Rauenbuehler knows how to give the young folks a good time.

P. Wermager, our hustler in getting settlers, has succeeded in locating another new neighbor, T. Skrevset, from Buxton, North Dakota, who said his former home fur $9,000 and has bought the west one-half of section eight, and is bargaining for the section north of P. Wermager's land. Mr. Skrevset is intending to go into stock farming. He has already moved some of his farm machinery from his former home.

RED LAKE FALLS.

F. A. Grady is down with typhoid fever.

Horvitz Bros. will move into the Kaus block this week.

Krueger Bros have a second handed peanut roaster for sale cheap.

The cistern for the fire engine will be finished the latter part of the week.

The addition to the school house will be completed the last of the week.

The North Western Telephone company are moving their office to W. A. Schrester's drug store.

ST. HILAIRE.

Chas. Johnson, of Wylie, was in town Monday last.

Many of the mill boys will put in the winter working in the pineries.

Landlord McAndres gave a farewell party to the mill boys Friday night of last week.

The mill closed down Friday night last, having cut in the neighborhood of 35,000,000 feet this season.

More and finer residences have been erected in St. Hilaire during the past year than ever before in the history of this place.

Threshing in this section is not yet completed. Very little wheat has been marketed so far, owing to low prices and the poor condition of the roads.

KEY WEST.

F. G. Horton drove to Maple Bay on Sunday.

Wm. Chalmers drove to Fisher Friday morning to transact business.

R. Chalmers wheeled out to Leeds, N. D. where he is improving his claim.

D. Crain and Albert Sophes left recently for the woods where they expect to spend the winter.

Mrs. R. Hunt, of Crookston, and daughter Mrs. P. McVeesy, of Marais, called on Mrs. Wm. Chalmers on Sunday.

Miss Carrie Wik, of Maple Bay, who has been visiting her sister Mrs. C. Folstud of this place expects to return homeon Monday.

FELTON.

I. I. Stenerson took Saturday's train for Erskine.

Martin Nelson, of Fargo, was a visitor here Sunday.

Adolph Lindberg has secured work as blacksmith in Lake Park.

O. Fursneth, of Fosston, did business here for the Fosston Woolen mills last Tuesday.

F. A. Johnson, of Northcote, deputy head council of the M. W. A., is here in the interest of his society.

A. C. Nogen from Kindred, N. D., and Iver Haug from Rotsay, Minn., visited with the Gilherts last Sunday.

SOLWAY.

The Sibley residence is nearing completion.

The Solway Mercantile Company is busy filling orders for the camps.

M. E. Heldrith, one of our city merchants, reports business slow, but sure.

L. P. Levi, of Grand Forks, has opened up a fruit and vegetable store.

A. E. Underwood, proprietor of Hotel Solway, is doing a rushing business.

Solway wants 1,500 men for the lumber woods. Wages range from $20 per month up.

H. E. McDonald conspicuously displayed the star of law and order during City Marshal Lindley's absence.

Charlie Comesky and Ben Johnson, of Chicago, have returned after a week's hunt at White Fish Lake, with considerable game.

George Laidley returned Tuesday from White Fish Lake with a party of Chicago hunters. George had a hard time to keep his men from getting lost.

James Brassfield, a former conductor on the Great Northern railroad, but now living a few miles south of Solway, is dangerously ill.

Solway has come to the front in educational institute. Our new school house is just completed. This a fine structure, Baxter & McCray being the contractors.

SHELLY.

Isuse Sletten was up from Halstad last Saturday.

P. J. Eig made a business trip to Climax Tuesday.

Miss Schells' millinery parlor is nearly completed.

Edwin and Olaf Paulsrud, of Nellsville were in town Tuesday.

A. O. Anderson attended the telephone meeting last week at Hillsboro.

C. A. Varnson, C. A. Hawkins and L. E. Olson drove to Hulstad Sunday afternoon.

Well, we shall have a depot at last. There are now eight men working on a structure to be 24x60.

Ole Anlkedal and G. Aamodt went to Moorhead last Tuesday to attend the Concordia College.

Miss Clara Schele returned from Fargo Monday, where she has been visiting friends since last Friday.

GREAT NOVEMBER SALE

Our Great November Sale of Winter Goods is now running. We are offering values that cannot be duplicated in any store in this part of the state. We have just received a large consignment of Men's, Youth's and Boys' Winter Clothing that will be a surprise and a pleasure to all bargain hunters. Here are a few samples:

Overcoats

50 Overcoats, lot 8236, all wool beaver, a good $10 value,...$4.98

50 Overcoats, lot 4889, all wool melton, a good $15 value,...$7.98

Ulsters

100 Ulsters, lot 2404, a good $10.00 quality for.....$5.00

75 Ulsters, lot 2424, all wool Irish frieze, a good $18 value for.....$9.98

Suits

100 worsted tweed Suits, a good $10 quality, ...$4.49

One extra lot of cassimeres, other stores' prices, $7.50 and $10. Great Western price is.....$5.50

50 Suits in worsted and French clay, $16, $18 and $20 values, all go at.....$9.98

Duck Coats

10 dozen Duck Coats, $1.50 values, Great Western price..98c

One extra lot of 50 Duck Coats, black and brown, rubber lined, regular $3 value, Great Western price.....$1.98

Mackinaw Coats

5 dozen Mackinaw Coats, regular $3 values. Great Western price.....$1.89

5 dozen all wool Mackinaw Coats in a heavy brown and mixed colors, $6 values at..$4.00

Shirts

50 dozen shirts, regular 50c values. Great Western price 35c and upward.

Underwear

50 dozen of Underwear, wool fleece lined, $1.50 values at, per suit.....98c

Heavy lumbermen's underwear in all wool, double breasted, regular $3 quality, Great Western price.....$1.79

Gentlemen's fine all wool underwear, $4 value, Great Western price.....$2.48

10 dozen red flannel underwear, $1 values, Great Western price, ...89c

Caps

10 dozen Caps, 50c values, our price.....39c

All wool melton and beaver caps, 50c and upward.

Sweaters

50 dozen worsted sweaters, $1 values, Great Western price, 45c

Pants

Heavy all wool kersey pants, $3.50 values, Great Western price.....$1.98

10 dozen worsted pants at 75c

Boys' Suits and Overcoats at the greatest reduction ever heard of in Crookston.

Boys' Overalls

Boy's good quality overalls, our price.....19c

Ties

25 dozen Ties, 50c quality, our price.....25c

..Great Western Clothing House..

Opposite the Post Office. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.

ERSKINE.

Geo. Q. Erskine, of Crookston, was here Friday.

Ed. West, of McIntosh, did business here Thursday.

Henry Nelson visited at Fosston Sunday.

Erik Humre did business at Fosston Sunday.

H. N. Nelson, returned from Red Lake Falls Monday.

O. O. Nelson, of McIntosh, did business here Monday.

J. J. Stenerson, of Felton, is visiting his brother, Gunder.

Casper Hanson has built a barn on his lot in South Erskine.

N. J. Oredson went to St. Paul Wednesday and returned Sunday.

John Distad, of McIntosh, was here on business Thursday.

Ole Knudson, of McIntosh, spent Saturday in the village.

Tholof Anderson, of Mentor, was in the village on business last Friday.

Sam Godboe got off here Saturday on his way to his home at Terrebonne.

The Erskine Woodmen have five victims in sight for their next meeting.

Miss Tena Hilman, of Crookston, visited with Vinnie Narvesoe Saturday.

Thomas Luvdahl, of Red Lake reservation, died very suddenly Monday.

Another scrap in West Erskine, Thursday night with a little blood spilt.

Amund Hanson, of Fertile, transacted business here Thursday and Friday.

Geo. Chase visited here Thursday and left again for Fosston, where he is at work lathing.

Tom Johnson, of Red Lake reservation, was transacting business here Monday and Tuesday.

We had another boarder at the village lockup Tuesday night and Wednesday he did street work to pay his board.

Andrew T. Anderson did business at the county seat Saturday and returned Sunday.

Wheat is coming more lively now, but prices are so low that the farmers do not sell.

There has been some road work done on the roads leading to town. Let the good work go on.

Ole Hegdum returned from California Wednesday where he has been for his health, but he is still a very sick man.

Pastor Juil, of Brandon, Minn., visited his sister Mrs. Ole Narveson, Sunday, and also laid the corner stone of the Senoda church Sunday.

Mare Strayed

On the night of Oct. 23, a roan mare ran away with a harness on. Weight about 900 pounds. Brand "T" on the left hip. Finder will please notify Claud W. Lawton, Mentor, Minnesota.

The Burlington buffet library car is one of the most convenient ever put on wheels. Besides all they eriodicals and literature provided, there are duplicate whist boards for the amusement of the traveler. Goodness only

KITTSON.

There was a dance at Mr. Noisen's last Friday night.

Mr. Ingham shipped a carload of baled hay Monday.

Robert Rose contemplates moving into Crookston for the winter.

Will Lemore is driving a team for H. W. Price while filling in the loading platform.

J. Stewart, Hixon elevator agent, wheeled down Saturday and spent Sunday with Mr. Price.

Will Lemore just bought himself a wheel. Suppose Will intends to put it on runners for the winter.

Price and Craft have sent their teams to Russia and are now filling in the loading platform there.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin went to Fisher Tuesday. Fred Lefever acted as foreman during Mr. Erwin's absence.

The Great Northern sent in a car of wood last week for some one but the owner seems rather slow in taking it away.

Some sneak thief visited H. C. Scribner's granary one night last week and hauled away some seventy bushels of wheat.

(Too late for last week.)

Mrs. Robert Rosa was calling on friends Friday.

Mrs. R. A. Smith spent the day with Mrs. Price last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Finch, of Crookston, were calling in Kittson Sunday.

A. Spotter, for the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator company, was around Tuesday trying to catch some of the agents off duty.

Thomas Samson thrashed Tuesday. St. George and Hooper machine did the work.

The work on the new gasoline engine house is about completed.

SOUTH CROOKSTON.

W. Arnold has returned home from buying cattle at Warren.

Engineer Compton is all smiles over the arrival of a eleven-pound baby girl at his place.

H. R. Phillips is out in the country running a hay press. Hurry is an old hand pressing hay.

A party was given last Monday night in honor of Miss Jennie McLaren, it being her birthday.

H. Bass, a railroad man, has bought a house and lot over here where he expects to make his home.

The Fifth ward is quiet now. A good many railroad men have left for other parts and business is slack on the road.

C. A. Myers has put in a nice line of fresh groceries and he wishes the people of the Fifth ward to call in and inspect his stock.

W. H. Carter, father of Mrs. C. A. Myers, of the Fifth ward, is here making a visit. He is on his way to Wisconsin, where he will make his home in the future.

A farewell social was give last Friday night in honor of Mrs. Hays, who expects to leave soon for other parts of the state. She will be greatly missed here by all who know her.

BAGLEY.

The village school has an attendance of sixty at present.

T. J. Welsh, of Minneapolis, is here looking after his business interests.

Andrew Stenerson, ex-sheriff of Polk county, was here on business Tuesday.

C. S. Christianson paid a visit to his home near Sletten Minn., over Sunday.

Ole G. Lee, one of Bagley's most prosperous merchants, was doing business in Bemidji Thursday.

A. J. McArty and P. H. Pederson are among the members of the grand jury in session at Bemidji this week.

A. L. Morris has built an addition to his store and put in a well assorted line of groceries, dry goods and notions.

Melby & Bros have got their new meat market about ready. They have put in a choice line of fresh and salt meats, hams, etc.

L. Barness, of Michigan City, N. D., arrived last week to take the position of depot agent here in place of A. A. Axsaun, who has resigned.

I. M. Covey, of Philbrook, Minn., has just received a line of dry goods, groceries and shoes and is going to open up a general store in Brown's building.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational church had a supper for the benefit of the church last Saturday night at the new school house. The visitors reported a good time and an elegant supper.

NORTHLAND.

(Too late for last week.)

L. Mellem spent Sunday with Gust Fundonet.

E. O. H. Eliason has left for his home at Sacred Heart.

Mr. Kleven and Jennie Juelson were visitors at Northland Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hoglo have been visiting at Grafton for the last week.

While Tom Paulson was coming from Grand Forks with a load of lumber, his team ran away. Paulson was thrown off the load the wagon passing over him and breaking his leg in two places and crushing his right arm very badly.

Last Thursday night some unknown parties stole the blacksmith's double buggy, a harness and two blankets out of his yard. John Hoglo and Thos Figenskan hns been all over the neighborhood trying to get some trace of the thieves or the stolen property, but their search has been in vain so far.

Weddings.

FISK-PATTERSON.

In the Congregational church of this city, on Wednesday, Nov. 15, at 11:30 a. m., DeWitt H. Fisk, Esq., of Fosston, was wedded to Mrs. Lucy A. Patterson, of Minneapolis. Rev. Philip W. Yurrow, the pastor of the Congregational church of Fosston, officiated, assisted by Rev. Herman P. Fisher. There were present as guests August F. George and wife and Mrs. W. H. Watts, of this city, Miss Alta A. Fisk, of Fargo college, Miss M. A. Scheurman, of Minneapolis, and Mr. B. F. Ashelman of Fargo.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Polk County Journal

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1899 No. 33

CANAL TO DULUTH

Report That Great Northern Canal Transportation Co. Will Build Waterway Across State.

WILL CHEAPEN FREIGHT RATES

Farmers Will be Benefited—Eastern Capitalists are Behind the Big Deal.

A project is on foot to build a canal from Grand Forks to Duluth. If the plan be executed it will cheapen the cost of transportation to the head of the lakes and thus the farmers would above all others be benefited. The Plaindealer is authority for the statement that a Grand Forks lawyer, Le Dru Guthrie, persuaded some eastern capitalists to look with favor upon the scheme, while he was east the past summer. Recently he received a letter from New York hearing the information that a company had actually been organized, and a charter had already been secured under the laws of New Jersey. The name of the new organization is the Great Northern Canal and Transportation Company, from which it must not be inferred that the Great Northern railroad has any connection whatever in the enterprise, as they have absolutely none, nor would it be to the railroad's advantage to father any such proposition.

The president of the new company is Mr. Geo. McGowan, ex-mayor of Trenton, N. J., and at the present time at the head of the big rubber trust. Associated with him are many of the best known financial men of the east, and their plan is to push the enterprise to completion with as little money as possible. Mr. Guthrie is also authority for the statement that several well known Grand Forks men are interested in the deal, but their names he refused to divulge at the present time.

The preliminary survey of the country to be traversed by the canal will begin within the next two weeks, the work continuing all through the winter months. The plan is to use to advantage the Red Lake river to Red Lake, through this lake, thence southeast through many of the other smaller streams and lakes that frequent that locality, into the Mississippi, and a point due west of Duluth. From that point the actual canal work will be begun, there being no natural bodies of water to aid in the work. They now figure that there will not be over 150 to 200 miles of actual canal work to be accomplished, and figure that the entire canal can be ready for use inside of two years, if not less.

The company is capitalized at $1,000,000, but this figure, of course, is no criterion of what they anticipate the cost will be. It will cost several million dollars to complete the task, but the men back of the scheme have the money and propose to see it through.

The advantages that the canal will bring to this section of the country are immense. The estimated cost of shipment to Duluth by canal is from four to five cents per bushel. It means a saving to the farmers of all elevator storage charges in Duluth and gives the shipper a water rate as far as Liverpool, England. It will advance the price of wheat about ten cents per bushel, averaging the farmer an increase of about $3 per acre.

The enterprise is an enormous one, and will revolutionize many things in the northwest. Rates on coal will likely be affected, as will the rates on a great many other commodities. It is known that the scheme is one for many years contemplated, but active operations along the line have never progressed so far as they have in the present instance. Future developments will be watched with interest by everybody all over the northwest.

"Human Hearts".

is a stirring, softening, humanizing play. Like "Shore Acres" of which it was the successor at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, for a year's run, it appeals to all classes, and pleases every spectator. It teaches a wholesome lesson too and is enlivened with genuine, natural comedy. A play that once seen so impresses one as never to be forgotten. Its record has in consequence proven that those who have seen it once go again and again, its return dates each season attracting larger houses than the season prior. "Human Hearts" with its grand company and using only the scenery painted exclusively for each of its four acts comes to the Grand Opera House on Friday, Nov. 24. The seat sale opened today. Prices 25. 50, 75 cents and $1.00.

Valley Encampment.

Two years ago a Valley Encampment of the I. O. O. F. was established at Crookston at which time was initiated the largest number of members ever received at one time in the history of Odd Fellowship, which splendid record was due to the untiring efforts of G. S. Chesterman. Last year the anniversary of the establishment of the encampment was celebrated and last night occurred what has really come to be a regular annual meeting. A large class was initiated into the higher order of Odd Fellowship in the presence of about one hundred members consisting of Crookston members and delegations from many of the surrounding towns. Grand Forks visiting members did most of the work. A banquet was served in the lodge rooms and after the work was through the Odd Fellows enjoyed a most sumptuous feast.

Corn and Grapes.

Jacob Berg, one of the prominent farmers of Mentor, formerly of Steele County, was in the city last Friday and gave the JOURNAL a call. Eight new settlers, he says, have bought farms near Mentor since last spring and have already moved in with their families. Mr. Berg is one of the old settlers in these parts and has had success in growing corn of both the yellow dent and the King Philip variety, of the latter kind having raised as much as 100 baskets to the acre. He has also cultivated grapes and this year he had a fine large crop. To preserve the vines during the winter, he covers them with straw, removing the straw about the middle of May. To put dirt on the vines he found made too warm a covering.

Weddings.

EGLEY-KIRSCH

At Erskine last week Miss Rose Kirsch was married to Arthur Egley. The bride is a neice of M. E. Kirsch of this city, and the groom is the editor of the Erskine Echo, a newspaper whose first publication took place only a few weeks ago.

FRITZ-PALEWSKE

At St. Paul's German Lutheran church at seven o'clock last night in the presence of a large number of friends, Rev. J. Fritz, pastor of the above mentioned German church and Miss Wilhelmine Palewske of Fisher, were married. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. Von Fischer, of Norris. Minn. Miss Hattie Palewske is sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Rev. E. Hess. of Jamestown, N. D., best man. The bride and groom will begin housekeeping at their home on North Ash street.

BUTZ-NOPHEW

On Wednesday Nov. 15 at 2 p. m. at the home of the bride's parents who live about half way between Maple Bay and Fertile, John Butz was married to Miss Bertha Nephew. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Ioons in the presence of about thirty relatives. The bride and groom will make their home in Woodside.

Eloquent Lecturer.

Speaking of the Rev. Mr. Fisher's lecture on the "Civil War" at the North Dakota University Monday night the Grand Forks Herald says among other things, "The narration was such as one does not often have an opportunity to hear, the facts were first hand and the hand that displayed them was of the first class. The manner in which Mr. Fisher joined together the tragic, the humorous, the daring and the pathatic, was most affective. He was in full command of his subject and his subject held the undivided attention of the audience for two hours. during which he devinted from the straight thread of his narrative only to vary it with illustrative anecdotes and pointed observations of his own that will be remembered with pleasure by those who heard them. When Rev. Mr. Fisher comes to the University to give another lecture he will be heartily welcomed."

Hospital Certificates.

The Riverside hospital has on hand guaranteed hospital certificates which they will issue to any applicant, those good for six months at a cost of $5.00, those good for a year at a cost of $10.00. Thirteen weeks' care at any hospital in the state the six months' certificate will entitle the holder to, twenty-six weeks, the year certificate. The case is this: A certificate is bought. If the holder, then, at any time within six months or a year, as the case may be, takes sick, he may present the certificate to any hospital in the state and that hospital will take care of him, free of all charges, for thirteen or twenty-six weeks according to which certificate he holds.

PROSPERITY EVIDENT

All Over This Section of the Country —Fall Work on Farms in Best Possible Shape.

MUCH BUSINESS ACTIVITY

In Fertile, Gary, Twin Valley and Ulen—Many Houses and Business Blocks Being Built.

Everywhere throughout the Red River Valley there are evidences of thrift and prosperity. The farmers are increasing the number of their farm buildings, making their homes more attractive and the quarters for their stock more commodious and comfortable, and in consequence of the success and welfare of those tillers of the soil the inhabitants of the towns and villages, scattered all over, are also enjoying good times.

A representative of the JOURNAL made a trip last week to many of the towns along the Northern Pacific between Crookston and Winnipeg Junction and he learned from the merchants and other business men in these places that business was lively and he noticed that private residences and business establishments were being erected in all points.

Fertile is a good sized town that is surrounded by a prosperous farming community. The farmers in this section were more fortunate than those in some other parts, for hail did not damage them and the only being a little sandy the excessive rains at one part of the season rather helped than harmed them. The town is growing as is evidenced, if by nothing else, by the fact that the school accommodations have been steadily increasing for some time, so that Fertile now has one of the progressive educational systems of this part of the state. At the municipal elections held last spring no license was voted so that this enterprising burg is now a strictly temperance town.

The Fertile House furnishes first class accommodations to travelers and an institution of this kind always is a great aid to a town. In the line of manufactures this place has an extensive brick yard in the southwest part of town, which is managed by George Kronschnabel. During the past season 1,800,000 brick were manufactured, the most of which have been sold, a large number going to Contractor Kennedy, of Fargo, for sewers. Next year Mr. Kronschnabel expects to turn out 3,000,000 brick.

Gary is a thriving village of several hundred inhabitants situated about twelve miles below Fertile. It is to the present time enjoying a large sized boom. No where else in this part of the valley was there evidence of so much building going on, a hotel, store buildings, private residences, bank building and others, and next year there are prospects that the building operations will be equally extensive. The business men are enterprising hustlers just such men as make a town grow even in spite of itself. There are four elevators here, three general stores, two hardware stores, a furniture store, a lumber yard, two blacksmith shops, three restaurants, two hotels, one jewelry store, a harness shop, a photograph gallery, two butcher shops, real estate offices, a creamery, churches, a school house, etc, in fact everything that is needed in a live place. In the surrounding country the wheat crop was large this last season and other crops likewise, notably flax. The farmers are increasing their stock and dairying is becoming quite an industry with them. The creamery in the town is well patronized. As further evidence of prosperity a new brick bank building is almost completed and the bank will soon open for business. W. H. Mathews, of Ada, is the president of the new financial institution.

Twin Valley is situated in the midst of an industrious and flourishing farming community which is fortunate in reaping a large crop this last season. Here as elsewhere the splendid fall weather has enabled the farmers to get all the fall plowing done they wished, so that they are in ship shape for next spring. Building operations have also been going on here, for Hans Burgess, the lumber man, has found it necessary to enlarge his quarters and in consequence he has put up a new shed fifty-four feet square and will next spring build another, one. A new hardware firm. Aasgaard & Doer, are just moving in their stock from a neighboring town.

In and around Ulen there has been a large sale of land for some time past. Farms have been selling at from $8 to $13 per acre and upwards, and hardly a day passes but some new settler comes to the village and makes enquiries about real estate. This state of affairs has, of course, made things boom and private dwellings and business blocks have been erected. In the way of manufacturing Ulen has roller mills which were built in there in the summer of 1898. Cook & Kasdorf are the proprietors. A state bank, established last July is doing a good business. Since the new telephone line was built not only Ulen but the other towns thereabouts have been within speaking distance of the great commercial and business centers.

FIRE NEAR MARIN

Destroys House and Much Personal Property of E. B. Himmelsbach.

Fire, started in an unknown way last Monday about four o'clock in the afternoon, destroyed the dwelling house of E. B. Himmelsbach, who farms near Marin station, and much personal property. The goods in the lower story were removed, but everything upstairs was destroyed, including a choice library, valuable bedding and clothing and family heirlooms, such as money can't buy. The total loss is about $1,500, only partially covered by a few hundred dollars insurance.

Miss Mamie Bullen, a school teacher who was boarding at the house, lost by the fire all her clothing and $40 in cash. Bizzie Munch, who was working on the farm, also lost almost all his clothes.

Yesterday Mr. Himmelsbach's neighbors drove into town and brought out for him several wagon loads of lumber with which he will build a temporary house for the winter.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

Educators Will Meet At Crookston Dec. 1,—President Weld Lectures.

The Northwestern Minnesota Educational association will meet at Crookston Dec. 1. The following topics will be discussed:

"What the Common Schools Need Most," "Individual Psychology," "The Teaching of Animal Biology," "Should School Boards Employ Only Non-resident Teachers?" "The Employment of Teachers' from the School Board's Point of View," "Supplementary Reading."

On Friday evening Dec. 1, a lecture will be given by Pres. Frank A. Weld of the Moorhead Normal on "Expression as an Aim in Literary Study." In connection with this lecture illustrative readings will be given by Miss Glenna Smith also of the Moorhead Normal.

The railroads have made a rate of a fare and a third on the certificate plan subject to an attendance of not less than 75 who have paid full fare one way to Crookston.

S. A. CHALLMAN,
President.

High School Notes.

Pearl Winney and Delorese Konrad are playing for the classes this week.

The freshmen class have selected "lavender and white" for their colors.

Last Friday Miss Alice LaDue rendered a vocal solo entitled "Friend," in her usual charming manner.

Last Thursday morning Miss Dorward and Miss Elva Bates sang a duet in the afternoon, and Miss Field and Miss Munch also sang a duet.

The foothall boys received an offer to go to Grand Forks and play on their color and the "Illoc" for their flower.

The committee on decorations are making plans for improving the looks of the high school during the session of the Northwestern Teachers association to be held in December.

The Sophomores held a meeting Tuesday evening at which they decided upon "illies of the valley and pink roses" for class flowers, and "pearl gray and light cyreno" for colors.

On Monday Mr. Congdon, a representative of the Scott Foresman Music company of Chicago, rendered two vocal numbers and spoke of the influence of music in the schools.

Monday morning the history class presented two statuettes to the high school, representing Winged Victory and Venus. Prof. Newbury and Supt. Hitchcock made speeches accepting the gift in the name of the high school.

THE EASTMAN NOZZLE

A Test Made by the Firemen Tuesday Afternoon Before Citizens And a Few Council Men.

THE TAKING OF THE CENSUS

Will Begin Next June—15 Days Will Probably Complete Work Competent Men Needed.

The firemen and city council have received on approval the Eastman nozzle, which is claimed to be far superior to anything else of this line and is, in fact, used in all the large cities. With a view to testing the qualities of the new hose attachments and showing the citizens and council men the advantages that the Eastman nozzle possesses, a test was made Tuesday afternoon on South Main street just below the JOURNAL office. A large crowd of citizens and a part of the members of the council were on hand to see the performance. The test was successful in every way and it was clearly demonstrated to every one there that the new nozzles far excell the old ones now in use.

Water passing through the hose becomes twisted and when the old nozzles are used the water is sprayed and scattered the moment it leaves the nozzle. In the case of the Eastman nozzle the twist is taken out of the water and the latter keeps compact, in a solid mass, for twenty or thirty fees after it is discharged from the nozzle. Again with the nozzles now in use it takes from two to six men to hold them when the stream is passing through them and even then it is hard work, while with the Eastmn nozzle a child can hold it when it is in action, it can be fastened to a ladder or a window sill and manipulated with one hand and when attached to a wall or window sill, inmates from upper stories can escape by sliding down the hose. Besides by the use of what is called the three-way deluge, the water from three different hose can be forced through the one nozzle. This makes a heavy, compact stream and with this, water can be thrown from the ground into a second or third story with very little being wasted in spray. This last combination will also throw a stream of water close to 200 feet high under high pressure.

Crookston has so much and such valuable property to be protected that the most precautions should be taken to insure safety and the Eastman nozzles will certainly be a great advantage to the firemen in their fights with the ruthless monster, fire.

The Next Census.

Elmer E. Adams, editor of the Fergus Falls Journal and supervisor of the census for the Seventh District of Minnesota, has the following to say with reference to the next census:

The work of taking the census will not be commenced until June 1, 1900. As there are no large cities in the district, thirty days will be allowed for the enumerators to do the work, but the districts will be so small that it can be completed in fifteen days and the schedules returned to the supervisor before July 1. The census bureau at Washington divides the supervisor districts into enumerator districts.

There will be about 300 enumerator districts and one enumerator will be appointed for each district. These enumerator districts will generally consist of one township unless two townships are very sparsely settled or the topography of the country is such that it is desirable to make them larger.

The enumerators are appointed by the supervisor, but approved by the director at Washington. They will not be appointed until May, 1900, and the commission will not be issued until about the 20th of the month. The enumerator must be a resident of the district, provided there is anyone in the district who is competent.

The work of the enumerator consists in filling in three or four schedules or blanks which the government provides for obtaining the information, and no one will be appointed who cannot write a neat and readable hand, and spell well. These schedules form the records of the census at Washington and, unless they can be read easily and quickly, they are worthless.

Flattery Merry.

The Mallory Woodmen gave a most successful dance at their handsome new hall last Friday evening. As the weather was not the best only a few more than half a hundred were present but those who were there spent a most enjoyable evening. The new hardwood floor proved to be just the thing for the quadrilles, two-steps and cake-walks which formed the principal dances of the evening. The People's orchestra from Grand Forks furnished the music.

Elsewhere.

—Shevlin will have two new churches in the near future, a Presbyterian and a Congregational.

—D. H. Freeman, of St. Cloud, had, two weeks ago, 1,000,000 feet of pine logs cut and skidded at his two camps, 12 miles north of Bemidji.

The farmers of the Northwest are waking up to the fact that the sheep was pretty nearly made on purpose for them. Sheep talk is popular now, and when men hear anything about sheep, lambs or wool they listen.

Justice Daniel Buck, of the supreme court of the state, has resigned his position on the bench and Judge Brown who would have taked a place in the supreme court Jan. 1, was tendered the vacant place and accepted it.

Because the fall pastures are good it does not follow that hogs should have no grain until they are taken up for finishing. If they are feed some grain while on pasture it will not only do good at the time, but prepares the digestive functions to take better care of the fattening ration of corn later on.

Now is the best time to invest in a thoroughbred cockerel to breed with your best hens next spring. as most breeders have a surplus to the fall which they are willing to dispose of at very reasonable figures. Four or five dollars in the fall will insure one's getting a fine breeder bird, while for the same bird in the spring one would be apt to have to pay considerable more.

BAGLEY.

Ole G. Lee made a trip to Fosston on Friday.

Otto Latness was at Shevlin on a visit over Sunday.

Edward Grover was doing business at Shevlin Tuesday.

Syver Erickson leftiday for a visit with relatives in Wisconsin.

F. J. Dawsondy, our county superintendent of schools, was in town Monday visiting our school.

Miss Inga Lee, of this place, left last Saturday for Crookston where she is going to attend college during the winter.

A. J. Dwyer, of Minneapolis, was here last week looking after his business interests and hiring men to work in his lumber camps.

The steam shovel on the Great Northern railway line which has been working here for the last month, left last week for Minot, N. D.

The ladies of the Lunstad Lutheran church had a basket social at the school house last Friday eve for the benefit of the church. Quite a number of young people attended and an enjoyable time was had by all.

MENTOR.

J. L. Sletten received a carload of lumber from Shevlin Saturday.

We are having nice weather for this time of the year and the farmers have all their plowing done.

John Lynch, of Grand Forks, was here last Monday and loaded a car of hay out of the house here.

Mr. Haugen, traveling man for a Duluth Paper and Stationery company is in town transacting business today.

A. L. Nelson went out east to his claim Sunday accompanied by George Cochran and William Work, who went out for hunting.

J. H. Fulton and Lewis Larson shot 3 or 4 geese Monday night in mourning. They heard them fall, but were unable to find them although they had dogs along.

J. L. Fox returned from Dakota Friday he having put in three months of good work harvesting and threshing and now he thinks it is very nice to get into a warm, comfortable house again.

James Anderson, our bustling blacksmith, is building a residence 14x18 and two story high. This must indicate that he is going to bring home some nice young lady for a housekeeper That's right Jim.

Mentor is going to have school in town this winter. It being too late to build, the board have rented the town hall for a school house. It is the intention of the board to have school commence the 1st of December if they can get ready.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SPORTING WORLD.

Jake Schaefer, the billiard expert, was rolling the balls around the table one day when a well dressed traveling man strolled in and, not knowing Jake, challenged him for a game. The two hooked for shot. The stranger won the hook.

"Just to make it interesting suppose we play for a dollar?" said he.

"I am willing," said Jake.

The traveling man was an average player and proud of his game, but he lost by a few points. He was eager for another game.

JACOB SCHAEFER.

"I will play you this one for $2," said he.

"All right. If you will let me play two strings to your one," said the smiling Schaefer.

The overjoyed stranger was only too willing to accept odds, but he lost again. The odds were again increased, with the same result. Jake winning each time by a small but safe margin.

"I don't believe you know who I am," said Schaefer as the stranger insisted on another game.

"No, I don't, and I don't care," said the sanguine traveling man.

"I am George Slosson," said Jake.

"The thunder you are!" exclaimed the victim in great scorn. "Well, you have none the best of me. My name is Jake Schaefer."

Cheaper Men in Baseball.

That the National league magnates think that they will be up against some opposition in 1900 is assured, even though they won't really admit it. They are making all kinds of bluffs over the decadence of the national game, etc., their object being, so it looks, to scare off the new men who are out for an organization of their own. It is a well known fact that the big league magnates intend cutting down salaries next year as far as possible, and with this end in view every club in the league has been trying out young players for the past several weeks, their idea being, it would appear, to get only high salaries to the real stars and to fill out their teams with cheap men, men who have never before played in the National and who will be willing to sign for $1,500 or thereabout.

A host of veterans have passed away during the past year, notably Ed McKean, Jack Stivetts, John Clements, Al Maul, Harry Vaughn, "Scrappy" Joyce, "Dusty" Miller, Mike Griffin, Mike Tiernans, George Decker, Jake Stenzel, John Grim, Tommy Tucker, Billy Hallman, "Bug" Holliday, Jack Crooks, Jimmy McAleer, Billy Nash, Billy Shindle, Billy Hart, Amos Rusie, Fred Klobedanz and Frank Dwyer. Nearly every member of this bunch received the limit, $2,400, or very close to it, and the majority of the men who are now filling their places are being paid at about an $1,800 average.

There is every promise of the big league players being asked to accept a cut when they are presented with their contracts for 1900, and as many youngsters as show sufficient speed will be signed to fill their positions. The magnates parade themselves as spending all their time trying to stop rowdyism and solving the umpire question, but their initial object seems to be reducing expenses for 1900, so money can be made all around, despite the fact that this has been a profitable year.

Earnings of Cyclists.

Some of the professional bicycle riders who devoted their attention to middle distance racing this season have earned more money than the racing men who followed the sprint events on the circuit. As a result of the National Cycling association promoting the greater number of meets, the riders affiliated with this association have fared the best. Harry Elkes holds a commanding lead in the middle distance race in America this year. After starting early in the spring and cruising for middle distance events exclusively he made a record of nine victories and one defeat. His prize earnings are in excess of $4,000. Elkes had a very competent team of pacemakers and was forced to pay his pacing men large salaries, so that his earnings figure out much less than his prize winnings. In view of the complications in racing this season because of the struggle between the L. A. W. and the N. C. A., there were fewer big races run off than in previous years and smaller purses offered. Elkes' only defeat was administered by Tom Linton. He caught the American in poor condition and after his victory refused all sorts of inducements to again ride with Elkes. Next to Elkes, B. W. Pierce has the second best record of the season and is rated as winning $2,500 in prizes. Charles W. Miller comes next with $2,000 and Joseph Downey fourth with $1,500. Frank Walker, who did not follow the big races regularly, won over $1,200. If the plans outlined for next season mature, middle distance races will receive special attention.

A LITTLE WORLD OF MATRIMONY.

BY HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1899, by C. W. Hooke.

When Mr. Frost came to the portal of the Ann street bank building where in his office he was located, he observed that some workmen were repairing the roof of the vestibule. It is a unique structure, unlike anything else in New York. Mr. Frost, being an architect, was peculiarly sensible of its absurdity. It looked to him as if the builders had tried to carry a classic marble tomb into the modern structure and had got stuck with it half way through the front door.

Considering the weight of the slabs which formed the main part of the vestibule's roof, Mr. Frost was of the opinion that they ought not to be disturbed while people were passing in and out beneath. This opinion, however, was entirely professional. Personally he did not care whether the laborers did or did not drop 500 pounds of marble on his head, whence we conclude that Mr. Frost was not happy.

Really he had stood it about as long as he could. The trouble did not seem to be that he had lost the girl, but that he could not stop thinking about her. When their engagement was broken, he was able to say to himself that the fact was wise; that she would be happier as the wife of somebody else and he as the husband of nobody at all. Of course Miss Elton was a very attractive girl, with a face that simply wouldn't get out of a fellow's mind and a lot of the prettiest ways— Confound it! Why had he ever seen her? Why couldn't he stop worrying and get back to work? Must he resort to travel in far lands, as lovers in novels usually do?

On this particular day the desire could be turned by force properly applied. His own position prevented him from putting much power into the effort, for in pushing upon the partition ahead of him he had nothing to brace against except the partition behind him, and such an attempt was like the old joke about the man who tried to lift himself by pulling on his boot straps.

Meanwhile the situation was inexpressibly embarrassing. Dozens of men who knew Mr. Frost and Miss Elton and the main facts of their unfortunate love story were among the bank's customers or held offices in the building. A certitude of attention to that might be expected at that hour in the forenoon. Passey being shut up in a little glass walled cell with a girl to whom you used to be engaged and thus exposed to public view and the ridicule of your friends! It was not to be borne.

In the few seconds that were required for the situation to reveal itself to Frost a crowd had collected. It was still possible to pass in and out of the building, for on each side of the "revolver" there was an ordinary door; but most people seemed to prefer to halt and view the spectacle. Frost saw the uniformed watchman of the building, a gigantic and impressive creature, push his way through the throng within and apply his strength to the door. It did not move the smallest part of an inch. Frost shouted to him to get help from the workmen who were climbing down from the vestibule's roof, and the watchman replied reassuringly that it would be all right in half a minute.

Evidently relief must come from outside. He wrote a few letters, seized his traveling bag and tied with out much idea as to where he was going.

"HERE WE ARE SHUT UP TOGETHER IN A CAGE."

In the lower hall of the building he met Miss Elton. It was what he had long feared, for her uncle was cashier of the bank, and she had to come down to see him often on errands for her mother.

Of course he couldn't look at her. Neither could she look at him. And that is why they both tried to get out first and both came together with a jolt in one of the compartments of the revolving door.

Frost perceived the catastrophe the tenth of a second too late. He stopped suddenly in the wild hope that he could back out. The door bumped against his heels with tremendous force, and he lurched forward against Miss Elton in a most embarrassing way. Babbling the most abject apologies, he thrust out a hand ahead of Miss Elton and tried to push the door around. It did not move. He threw his weight against the leaf behind him, but it was as immovable as an iron wall.

"Why, what's the matter with the thing?" he exclaimed.

"It's stuck," replied the girl feebly.

That was the truth certainly. Frost could not move it either way. Their segment was completely closed by one of the curved walls between which the door revolved. They were imprisoned in a space just big enough to hold them.

Frost's first idea was that the shock of the door had disarranged its mechanism. He had never taken the trouble to find out just how these contrivances were built, but he knew that the revolving partitions could be folded together handily; so there was good prospect of immediate release.

Indeed it was probable that the door would be turned by force without. It remained for those within to summon up their patience. Frost was a young man of remarkable self control.

"This must be very annoying to you," he said, "but of course it can't last long. I think we should make the best of it, and that suggests the idea that you would better sit down."

He turned his dress suit case over on end and placed it so that she could have the end wall of the cell for a back.

"Thank you," said she. "I shall not be so conspicuous if I sit down. But I'm afraid the door will begin to turn."

"And I'm afraid that it won't," he rejoined, laughing gently. "At any rate it will hit me first, and I will give you warning. Ah, here comes Paulsen!"

Paulsen was the chief mechanist employed in the building. He went right to work as if he thought that two minutes' time would be enough to settle the affair. But the minutes passed, and the door was immovable.

In the segment opposite the one in which Mr. Frost and Miss Elton were immured an elderly gentleman of rather elegant appearance had been caught. His position was in all respects similar to theirs. He was taking matters very coolly, leaning against one of the partitions and smoking a cigar.

"Our neighbor is hearing it well," said Frost, with the amiable intention of diverting his companion's thoughts.

"He has the advantage of being alone," replied Miss Elton.

She had not meant to say anything disagreeable. Naturally she compared the man in the one compartment with the man in the other. But the remark was susceptible of being taken another way. It cut Frost's heart right in two.

"You are ungrateful to Providence," said he gently. "Think of the extreme brevity of our present association and of the much longer one that you have sacrificed."

Forgetting that she had been the original aggressor, Miss Elton proceeded to get even with Frost for reverting to an unpleasant topic.

"As you imply," said she, "this experience is comparable to matrimony. Here we are shut up together in a cage, each longing to get away and yet incapable of doing so."

"And Paulsen, who typifies the divorce court, is so dreadfully slow," rejoined Frost.

"These glass walls," said the girl, continuing the allegory, "are like the publicity of marriage. Married people are forever in the sight of all the world, and such must in effect declare at all times, 'This is the best partner I could get.'"

"As to that," responded Frost, "the remedy is to make a choice of which one can never be ashamed. I did so."

"Upon my word," said she, "you said nothing so polite as that in the old days!"

"I thought you would like something of the kind," he replied, "and I tried very hard. People who are forced to be together should strive to be agreeable. That is, I fancy, the great and open secret of happiness in marriage."

"No one is so disagreeable," said she, "as the man who strains his naturally unamiable nature in the effort to be so and then immediately demands credit for it. That, I should suppose, would be the heaviest of a wife's burdens. Her husband is a bear—a polar bear, fierce and cold. Once in awhile he pulls in his claws and looks pleasant for about two minutes, and for the next hour, or week perhaps, he is always saying how hard he tried to please his wife."

"Would you like me to hurry Paulsen?" he asked.

"He represents the divorce court doesn't he?" said she. "Very by all means appeal to him. There is an every case here—of incompatibility of temper."

Frost called to Paulsen, and the unclubbist came close to the prison wall.

"The trouble is not with the door," he said; "it is on top. The whole thing is crimped."

The roof of the vestibule had settled, perhaps as the result of some unusual segment of the repairs, and one of the supports was pressing down upon the door in such a way as to hold its four flanges immovable. Possibly the jar of the door's striking Frost's heel might have furnished the last pound of power that precipitated the catastrophe, or it might have been fate that timed it so nicely.

"The court," said Frost, "decides that we have not been here long enough to gain a residence. Action on your petition is therefore postponed."

"And meanwhile," she replied, "all our friends know that we are anxious to part and cannot. There's Harry Winslow grinning through the glass. I'll bet he'll tell everybody. And, oh, there's uncle! Poor fellow, how sorry he will be for me!"

"Then our friends should be amused and our near relatives grieved," said Frost, "is the inevitable result of these entanglements. However, let us be consoled. Your uncle will spend large sums to get us out of this."

"It will get into the papers!" she exclaimed. "I see a man writing something in a notebook."

"There'll be an artist here presently," said Frost. "I wonder if they can photograph us through this glass."

They both laughed at the preposterous notion of their pictures being together in the afternoon papers. Their merriment was interrupted by an outburst from the other cell. The third prisoner was making a rumpus. His patience had given out. His cigar was smoked up, and, besides, he had gathered from Paulsen's statements that the situation was not without peril. He was threatening damage suits and per sonal violence.

Miss Elton caught some words of his which let her know the real cause of the trouble, and it frightened her. She gularly enough, she clasped Frost's hand with an impulsive grasp.

"Is it true," she cried, "that something is wrong with the roof over us?"

"It is," said he, "but there is no real danger. If there were, they would break down the doors and release us."

He did not let her hand get away while he was speaking, and, indeed, she made no effort to withdraw it. Suddenly there were tears in her eyes.

"I am glad you are here!" she cried.

"Of course I would not wish you to be in danger, but I should be so frighten ed if I were alone."

"I think that we have been of some use to each other," he replied. "Even our quarrels have helped to pass away the hour. Our friend in the cage, who typifies the bachelor, began the ordeal more calmly than we did, but he has not held out as well. His inner est is selfish, and that is the worst kind of unhappiness."

"Be careful, Jack," she whispered. "You are leading our little allegory to a strange conclusion."

"Let it lead where it will," he replied. "The fact is that all life is an ordeal which two can bear better than one."

She looked serious for a moment and then laughed happily, like a child.

"Tell Paulsen that I don't want to get out," said she. "The petition is withdrawn. You're a good fellow, Jack, and the harder the situation the better fellow you are. It is worth while to go through troubles for the sake of going through them with you."

Half an hour later, when the door decided to move, these two did not take advantage of their freedom. They went up to Grace's house and told her mother that they had made it all up. And while they told the story they were just as close together as in the narrow cell of wood and glass. But they had learned to like it.

CARY SAFE CO.

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

.....Manufacturers of.....

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

SCANDIA-AMERICAN BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON.....Pre H. STEENERSON.....Vice President.
N. S. GERVAIS.....2d Vice President. L. ELLINGTON.....Cashier
A. P. HANSON, Asst. Cashier.

The Weekly Inter Ocean

Always American— Always Republican.

Largest Circulation of all Political Papers in the West

THE WEEKLY INTER OCEAN SUPPLIES ALL NEWS AND BEST CURRENT LITERATURE

The Inter Ocean's Telegraphic Service is Exclusive. Every Column is Bright, Clean and Packed with News.

$1

The Literature of its Columns is equal to that of the best magazines. It is interesting to the children as well as the parents.

The Inter Ocean is a Western Newspaper.

And while it brings to the family The News of the World, and gives its readers the best and ablest discussions of all questions of the day, it is in full sympathy with the ideas and aspirations of Western people and discusses literature and politics from the Western standpoint.

$1.00—PPICE, ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR $1.00

Price of Daily by mail . . . $4.00 per year
Price of Sunday by mail . . . 1.00 per year
Daily and Sunday by mail . . . 5.00 per year

The Sunday and Daily Editions of the Inter Ocean are the Best in the West

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laing out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have our architect include electric wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give ou the benefit of our experience in laing out wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

REGRET IS GENERAL

DEATH OF VICE PRESIDENT HOBART UNIVERSALLY MOURNED.

Attack Resulting Fatally Occurred Some Hours Previous to His Demise, but His System Was Too Weak to Rally—Funeral Will Occur Saturday and Many Public Officials Will Attend.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 22.—The death of Vice President Hobart, although not unexpected, came as a shock to the public generally, who were led to believe by recent reports that the patient was improving or at least holding his own. The beginning of the end came during the previous afternoon, when there was a sudden failure of the heart, and from this attack Mr. Hobart never rallied. He had been sick for a long time and had suffered frequently from heart failure and his strength had been undermined. Gradually the failure of the heart's action became more apparent and soon after midnight Mr. Hobart became unconscious. He remained in that condition until his death, which was due directly to angina pectoris complicating myocarditis. At his bedside at the time were Mrs. Hobart and his son, Garret A. Hobart, Jr., together with Dr. William K. Newton and his wife and Private Secretary Evans.

Will Be Buried at Paterson.

Owing to the prostration of Mrs. Hobart the funeral arrangements have not been completed. The only step decided upon is that the services shall be held in the Church of the Redeemer at Paterson and the interment in the family plot at Cedar Lawn, where the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hobart was buried several years ago. The church can accommodate not over 800 persons and as thousands will be eager to attend the services it was suggested that they be held in the armory, which will accommodate 9,000 persons. It is known, however, that Mrs. Hobart wishes the funeral to be as quiet as possible and there is little likelihood that the programme will be changed.

The mayor and aldermen of Paterson have suggested that the body lie in state at the city hall on Friday or Saturday morning and this suggestion will probably be carried out.

Fully 300 messages of sympathy have been received by Mrs Hobart.

KNEW HE MUST DIE.

Vice President Hobart Early Resigned to His Fate.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 22.—Although many regarded Mr. Hobart's illness in the early and later part of the year as serious, it was not until late in October that his family and friends began to despair of his life. Mr. Hobart was then informed of the fatal character of his malady—dilated right heart duct myocarditis—and he remarked:

"Well, if it must be that I am to go, I may as well be resigned to my fate."

On the morning of Oct. 31 it was thought that the end had come, but the patient rallied and for more than a week continued to eat solid food with a relish. Three days ago, however, his appetite failed and he gradually grew weaker and weaker. He realized a few hours before he became unconscious that he was near to death and he said to those about the bedside:

"I know that my time is nearly up, but death is welcome to me."

OFFICE REMAINS VACANT.

No Provision For the Election of a Successor to Hobart.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—By the death of Mr. Hobart, the office of vice president of the United States becomes vacant for the rest of President McKinley's term, as the law provides no succession. A president pro tempore of the senate will be elected by that body when congress assembles.

By law the succession in the event of the president's death devolves upon the secretary of state, the next of line being the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of war, then down through the list of cabinet officers in order of precedence fixed by act of congress when the death of Vice President Hendricks disclosed the necessity of such provision.

LAST TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Funeral of Vice President Hobart Will Be Largely Attended.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Vice President Hobart's funeral on Saturday will be attended by the president and his cabinet, the supreme court, the senate in a body and a large committee from the house of representatives, besides many other high dignitaries of the government, who will journey to Paterson to pay their last tribute of respect to the memory of the vice president. Every senator has been invited to be present and the senate will meet at the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York, Saturday and thence travel in a body to Paterson.

MANY NATIVES KILLED.

Disastrous Civil War Breaks Out in New Guinea.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Sydney, N. S. W., says that a disastrous civil war has broken out in the British possession of New Guinea, eleven villages having been obliterated, with a heavy slaughter of the inhabitants.

Chamberlain Has Resigned.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Chief Justice Chambers of Samoa has resigned and his resignation has been accepted by the United States, one of the three parties to the Berlin treaty, by the president. The resignation will also be made to Great Britain and to Germany.

Long Not Resigning.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. — Secretary Long's attendon was called to the reports that intended to resign from the cabinet. Without hesitation the secretary said he had no such intention.

COLOMBIAN REVOLUTION.

Thousand Rebels Killed and Two Thousand Wounded.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A dispatch to The Herald from Panama says:

Official advice from Bogota, dated Nov. 16, report that a terrible battle between the government forces and the revolutionists was fought near Buenaramanga, capital of the department of Santander, in which the government forces were victorious.

It is stated that the battle lasted two days, ending at noon of Nov. 16. More than 1,000 rebels were killed and 2,000 were wounded. About 10,000 men on both sides were engaged in the fight. General Uribe and General Juan Francisco Gomez, prominent leaders of the revolutionists, were wounded, and it is reported that General Pablo Emilio Valtier was killed.

On the government side General Pena Solano Pilleuizar and General Fernandez were wounded. The insurgents, commanded by Generals Holguin and Lujan are reported to have occupied Bucaramanga on Nov. 18. The place had been held by the revolutionists since the civil war of a month ago.

The Manavia, an English steamer, arrived here with 600 recruits from Buenaventura. About 400 more recruits are expected soon, and on their arrival all will proceed to the Atlantic coast, the movement beginning next month.

No news has yet been received from Tunaco.

HENDERSON'S PLANS.

Programme of the Speaker-to-Be Foretold in Detail.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—A special to The Herald from Washington says:

Adoption of the old rules, immediate passage of the caucus committee's financial reform bill and reorganization of committees along old lines as far as possible, with the Republican membership of the committee on rules consisting of Messrs. Henderson, Dalzell and Babcock, is the programme which Mr. Henderson is said to be the speaker, has mapped out for the coming session as a result of his conference with the president, with leading members of the house and other prominent Republicans since his arrival in Washington. At his conference with the president Mr. Henderson talked over this programme and found that it met Mr. McKinley's entire approval. Mr. McKinley was especially pleased with the proposition to pass the financial bill without delay. It is understood that the whole matter will come up at the meeting of the Republican caucus on Saturday, Dec. 2.

JEFFRIES AND CORBETT.

Match Between the Two Noted Heavyweights Is Arranged.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A match between Jim Jeffries, the champion heavyweight pugilist, and Jim Corbett, ex-champion, has been arranged between Corbett personally and W. A. Brady for Jeffries. The articles will be signed next Tuesday. Jeffries will have the fixing of the date of the bout.

Recognized the De Castro Government.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Nov. 21.—The United States government has officially recognized the de facto government headed by General Cipriano de Castro, the Venezuelan revolutionary leader.

Buttermilk and Health.

But few appreciate buttermilk. It would be a sorry day for the doctors and hogs if everybody ate and drank as much buttermilk as this writer, says A. N. Hyatt in North-western Agriculturist. I give buttermilk considerable credit for the fact that I have never been so sick as to have a doctor come to feel my pulse and look at my tongue. I don't believe we would find half as much error and nonsense in our agricultural papers if all the editors would eat and drink genuine buttermilk. Buttermilk clears the brain and cleans the blood.

A noted physician said not long ago that buttermilk is "a true milk peptone"—that is, milk already partially digested. It is a decided laxative, and nothing equals it in habitual constipation. It is a diuretic and is excellent for kidney troubles. It is the most refreshing and delicate of all the products of milk. Nothing is better in the treatment of diabetes. In some cases of cancer of the stomach and gastric ulcer buttermilk is the only food that can be retained. One of my neighbors spent money enough to go to the Philippines for doctors, drugs, etc., to cure his rheumatism without getting better. I told him a few barrels of nice buttermilk would drive rheumatism from his anatomy, and it was done with less than a barrel, worth about 20 cents per hundred pounds to feed hogs. I know of not a dozen in this country of buttermilk who by the cure of their rheumatism to loppered milk and hot vermilk. Any of you who think your system needs a little beer, whisky or tobacco, try a little buttermilk instead (give it a good trial) and become happier and healthier. The only stimulants this writer takes are buttermilk and loppered milk.

Solidity of Butter.

The writer was asked recently if the food of the cow affects the solidity of butter, says a correspondent of The National Stockman. Unquestionably the food has a marked effect upon the solidity or hardness of butter. Soft spring butter is partly due to the large amount of oleïn in the butter fat of cows fresh in milk and partly due to the green succulent food of early pastures. Linseed meal makes a soft, oily fat, while cottonseed meal and bran make a fat that is much harder. Then as the cows grow older in milk the fats grow harder, and consequently the butter becomes firmer, although it may contain as much or more water as the softer butter. It is well, of course, to avoid either extreme in butter making, and if one is familiar with the principle controlling these things it is easy to remedy any trouble that may arise.

FILIPINO ACTIVITY

AMERICANS ENCOUNTER A STRONG FORCE NEAR MANILA.

Compel the Insurgents to Retreat but the Latter Return Reinforced and Our Troops Retire Under Fire—General MacArthur Arrives at Iloilo but Finds No Fighting Filipinos.

MANILA, Nov. 21.—There has been a revival of insurgent activity south of Manila, particularly in Cavite province. At 4 o'clock Monday the Filipinos fired a smooth bore cannon, but this was soon silenced by the American artillery. In the course of the morning Major Cowles, with a battalion of the Fourth Infantry and two guns, scattered the enemy from the districts around Imus and to the direction of Perez das Marinas. The Americans could not pursue the retreating insurgents because their ammunition was exhausted. The Filipinos were under command of General Mariano Arina.

Two columns, one from Imus and the other from Bacoor, converged on the Zapote bridge, where they found a deserted Filipino camp. Two troops of the Fourth cavalry, four companies of the Fourth Infantry and two guns of Captain Riley's battery proceeded to Anibo, south of Imus, and came upon the enemy intrenched at that point. They scattered the Filipinos, but as the latter were subsequently reinforced the Americans returned to Imus under fire, several of our men being wounded. Our forces found 15 dead insurgents at Anibo.

Spies report that the insurgents are coming into Cavite province from Calamba, in Laguna province, and the other southerly provinces. The insurgents have smooth bores and two modern cannon. Firing was in progress during the afternoon and it was reported that there are more insurgents in the vicinity of Imus than ever before.

WHEELER WILL STAY.

Does Not Intend to Leave the Philippines at Present.

MANILA, Nov. 21.—General MacArthur's reconnaissance returned to Manila during the afternoon. The Americans found that no insurgents had been there for four days. The Thirty-third infantry was probably in Dagupan several days previous. No insurgents have been seen anywhere near the railway and it is believed that the only armed force of any size is in the mountains of Zambesino to the west, although there are rumors of insurgents seen at San Miguel de Camingo, west of Paniqui, and at Mamagatrom, west of Bayambong. The Twelfth infantry, a battalion of the Seventeenth infantry and two troops of cavalry are with General MacArthur below Dagupan. General Wheeler has decided not to return for congress. He is writing a Letter to President McKinley

with a request that it be forwarded to the house of representatives. In the course of an interview with a correspondent of the Associated Press he said:

"Congress, if it accepts the first day of the session in passing a resolution declaring in unmistakable terms that the sovereignty of the United States is to be maintained in the Philippines, thus dispelling Aguinaldo's assertion that the 'anti-imperialists' can protect him, will be performing a sacred duty. Such a resolution would save the lives of American soldiers, thousands of Filipinos, avert famine and suffering and avoid the expenditure of millions of dollars."

AGUINALDO GETS AWAY.

Escaped Between the Forces of Young and Wheaton.

MANILA, Nov. 22.—Aguinaldo has escaped between Generals Young and Wheaton. General Young is pushing towards Bayambong.

Crew of the Charleston Arrives.

MANILA, Nov. 21.—The United States gunboat Helena has arrived at Cavite with the crew of the United States cruiser Charleston, which was wrecked early in the month on a reef off the northwest coast of Luzon. All the men are well.

VERDICT FOR THE WIDOW

Sixth Trial of the Hillmon Insurance Case Closed at Leavenworth.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 20.—The sixth trial of the Hillmon case closed at 10:40 o'clock, when the jury, after having been out for nearly eleven hours, brought in a verdict for Mrs. Smith, the widow of Hillmon, the plaintiff.

The amount of insurance which the verdict gives Mrs. Smith is $68,12f. This includes the interest on two policies, one in the Mutual Insurance Company of New York and the other in the Connecticut Mutual for $10,000 and $5,000 respectively, with interest at 6 per cent for twenty years.

The case was bitterly contested and will be appealed.

UNITE ON OTHER ISSUES.

Chicago Gold and Silver Democratic Organizations Get Together.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22. — The Iroquois club, gold Democratic organization of the Monticello club of free silverites, both prominent local political organizations, have buried the cognizance and consolidated on the slogans of anti-trust and anti-imperialism as drafted at the Monday meeting of the United committeemen. The invitation to consolidate was extended by the Iroquois club three weeks ago and has now been formally accepted by the Monticello club.

Will Be Ready Next Month.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Colonel Denby of the Philippine commission says that the full report of the commission will probably be ready about the middle of next month. Colonel Denby said the report would be rather voluminous.

NEWS CONDENSATION.

Thursday, Nov. 16.

Vice President Hobart passed a comfortable day.

George P. Pe.se, American consul at Dusseldorf, Germany, is dead.

The steamer Patria, New York for Hamburg, burned at sea, but all on board were saved.

At San Francisco Jack Root of Chicago knocked out Alex Gregunias of San Francisco in the sixth round.

A postal deficiency of $6,910,777 for the fiscal year just closed is shown in the annual report of the third assistant postmaster general.

Milwaukee will be an active candidate for the Republican national convention and has raised a fund of $100,000 for convention purposes.

The Russian minister to Korea states there is no basis whatever for reports of a conflict between Russia and Japan over Korea. On the contrary, the two countries have entered into two formal compacts by which it is agreed that the independence of Korea shall be maintained.

Friday, Nov. 17.

An unconfirmed report of General Joubert's death is afloat.

A witness before the industrial commission revealed the enormous profits in tin plate.

The official reports of naval officers on the work of the Holland submarine torpedo boat are unqualifiedly favorable.

The strike of the longshoremen at West Superior against the Eastern Railway of Minnesota has been officially declared off.

Aguinaldo is stated to have issued orders not to oppose the advance of the Americans, but to burn the villages as they are evacuated.

The British at Ladysmith are reported to have defeated the Boers by a successful maneuver. The Boers annihilated an armored train and 400 to 100 Britons are missing as a result.

C. P. Greathouse, who was consul general of the United States to Kanagwiy, Japan, from 1866 to 1869, died at Seoul, Oct. 21. At the time of his death Mr. Greathouse was adviser to the Korean government.

Saturday, Nov. 18.

A battle is reported in Armenia between Kurds and Armenians.

A Russian warship has started for the Persian gulf, with a British cruiser after it.

Confidence in the government has been voted by the French chamber of deputies.

The British admiralty has chartered the Dominion liner Canada for use as a troopship.

The two W. C. T. U. organizations—the National and Non-Partisan—talk of amalgamation.

Aguinaldo is so hard pressed that his wife's wardrobe has fallen into the hands of the Americans.

Thirteen students of the University of Wisconsin have been suspended for complicity in the raid on Lasnel hall.

George B. Harvey, of the North American Review, has been chosen president and manager of Harper & Bros., the New York publishers.

Monday, Nov. 20.

An international live stock exposition will be held in Chicago a year hence.

Prominent Cubans propose a government by Cubans under continued American military protection.

Near Stanley, Wis., a 13-year-old girl, Mary Hayes, was assaulted by two other girls older than herself, and is not expected to live.

According to the report of the commissioner of navigation American shipbuilding industries thrived better last year than ever before.

Indian Commissioner Jones in his annual report, anticipates the abolition of reservations and the advance of all Indians to citizenship.

Tuesday, Nov. 21.

Emperor William and party are at Windsor.

Lady Salisbury, wife of the British premier, is dead.

The candidacy of Senator Hayward of Nebraska is not so favorable.

The Forty-first regiment has sailed from New York for Manila on the transport Logan.

An American League club will be located in Chicago next spring. Charles Comiskey of St. Paul will be manager.

Colonel Metcalf of the Twentieth Kansas, is charged with having shot an unarmed and supplicating Filipino prisoner.

Admiral Dewey has formally transferred to his wife the title to the house at 1747 Rhode Island avenue, constituting the gift to him made by the people of the country.

Wednesday, Nov. 22.

The Charleston is reported to be a total wreck.

Yaqui Indians in Mexico have made an offer of surrender.

The condition of Evangelist Moody shows a steady improvement.

A national association has been formed by window glass jobbers.

Alonzo J. Whiteman has been extradited from New York to Illinois.

Aaron J. Jones of Indiana has been elected master of the National Grange.

Hon. Stanford Newell, minister at The Hague, is at his home in St. Paul on a vacation.

Colored United States soldiers and white citizens of Rio Grand City, Tex., have a race riot on hand.

Baltimore contractors at work for the federal government have been fined for violating the eight hour law.

President Kruger has deprived United States Consul Macrum of all his powers as British agent at the Boer capital.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Crookston, Minnesota.

Auction Sale!

Of Farm Stock and Machinery

Consisting of 8 working horses, 4 milch cows, 2 yearlings, 2 binders, 2 gang plows, 1 spring tooth harrow, 1 drill, 2 disc harrows, 2 lumber wagons, 2 pair bob sleighs, 50 tons hay. 1 two-seated buggy, 4 set double harness, 1 set single earness. Sale to take place at 10 o'clock a. m.

Wednesday, November 22

On my farm one and a half miles northwest of Russia elevator.

Terms: All sales up to $10, cash; over $10, good bankable paper will be taken.

Half Section of Land already plowed for sale or rent to good party.

CLAYMONT PAYANT.

Subscribe Now

And get the Polk County Journal from now till January 1st, 1901, for $1.50.

This offer includes the handsome Christmas Editions for the two years. The Journal is the best paper in this Congressional district and is improving with each issue.

++++ THE JOURNAL ++++

CROOKSTON, MINN.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. EDGLIE, President. WM. ANGLIN, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier. H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:
George B. Erskine. A. A. Miller, Wm. Anglin. J. R. McKinnon. F. M. Wabb. L. Fontaine J. F. Foote. W. B. Crosby. J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes like right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal,

By N. S. GORDON.

Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

THE Nation mourns over the death of Vice President Hobart, which occurred at his home at Paterson, New Jersey, last Tuesday evening.

JOHN LIND says he would go and assist the Boers in their fight against the British if his duties as governor did not compel him to stay at home. How fortunate for the Boers even if it is a little hard on Minnesota!

IN filling the vacancy on the Board of Regents of the State University, which vacancy was caused by the recent death of Governor Barto, Mr. Lind ought to throw aside all thoughts of politics and appoint the best possible man for the place. Partisanship and partyism ought to have nothing to do with educational affairs.

THE name Logan in the United States will always be connected with military prowess. "Black Jack" won his fame in the Civil War and now word come that his son, an officer in the Philippines, displayed unusual bravery and gallantry in an attack on one of the Philippine towns. The place was taken but the young officer lost his life.

AS the time for the assembling of congress draws near the efforts to prevent Congressman-elect Roberts, of Utah, from taking his seat in the national house of representatives, become greater. Being a polygamist he is breaking the laws of the United States and surely such a man ought not to be permitted to make laws. The question of the future legal status of polygamy in the United States is really involved in this case, hence its importance.

THE St. Vincent Era continues to boom the editor of the famous "Bridget" for governor. "We want a scrapper" the Era," says, a man who will shoot out the lights, a bad man, one who can give thirty-nine reasons why he should be elected governor and firmly believes in forty. Give us J. Adam Bede, and the voters will do the rest." There is no doubt that J. Adam would make an efficient governor but his ambition does not lie in that direction. He has his eye on Washington.

HENRY WOLFER, warden of the state penitentiary at Stillwater, has resigned his position, resignation to take effect Dec. 1, and Governor Lind has appointed to the place General Reeve, at one time commanding officer of the 13th Minnesota Regiment. Mr. Wolfer has made a most efficient public officer and place he became warden the most scientific methods have obtained at Stillwater. His services have been in great demand and it was only last winter that his salary was raised that the state might keep him in its employ.

THE Filipino insurgents are not fighting for the independence of the Philippines for Aginaldo and his followers do not represent a sixth of the population and those not with the insurgents leader are against him. Were Aginaldo to be successful, as fortunately he will not be, he would furnish the people of those islands a worse government than the Spaniards did, and yet for political purposes our populist friends say that the war the nation is waging across the seas is against liberty. What won't some people say in order to get office!

GOVERNOR LIND says in his Thanksgiving Proclamation that the people in this state should be thankful for the institutions for the defective and dependent classes that have been established this year and for the money appropriated for schools. When he came to write this proclamation he probably became painfully aware of the fact that he had himself been in power during the year, and his own mistakes loomed up so large before him that he was unable to see the many blessings other than those he mentions for which we in this state ought to be grateful.

IT has become evident more and more as the case of General Pope vs. the city council of Mankato has proceeded that the state examiner has hardly acted honorably in the matter. He took money from the city funds of Mankato without the knowledge of any of the city officials and has practiently made no defense of this act, the only attempt really being to try and shield himself by defaming the name of his late partner, Mr. Willard. As even the St. Paul Globe puts it, "not only did the Mankato council Friday night fail to pass the resolution vindicating the examiner, but the general did not appear in person, and sent his attorney, while the opposition had expert accountant Donaldson threatening to make new trouble." Had Mr. Pope openly acknowleged his wrong, the public would have been more disposed to treat him kindly for "to err, is human," but such a course does not seem to have occurred to him.

GLYNDON

Fire Monday morning at 5:30 a. m. destroyed the buildings owned by Chris Syverson, Tom Anderson and Margaret Shea the fire starting in the Anderson building. Syverson has insurance of $1,200 on building and contents, Anderson $1,700 on building and contents. No insurance on the Shea building as it was unoccupied. Olas Anderson, who occupied the Anderson building had no insurance on his stock of goods. As there was no fire in the building for 24 hours before the fire broke out it is believed to be incendiary.

WYLIE

Grading the Wylie streets is now in progress.

The new restaurant of P. F. Smidesang is a great attraction.

J. G. Brady and P. M. Duff drove to Red Lake Falls to visit friends.

Henry Mac stays at home lately. There must be some new attraction.

Miss Nov. Dargan departed for Donaldson this week where she will visit friends.

Miss Gertie Melin and Miss Swanson have gone to Moorhead for an extended visit.

Miss Kate Martin says her sister, Mrs. Theo. LaBissionaire of Red Lake Falls, is improving from her late illness.

WARREN.

Court adjourned Tuesday until Dec. 4. We will miss the smiling countenance of Judge Watts and Crookston Attorneys.

P. F. Spaulding and wife left on the 20th inst., for New York their home. Mr. Spaulding is one of our bonanza farmers and a jolly good fellow.

James Christinnson died suddenly while in his barn attending to his work. He is a popular and well to do farmer in the town of Farley, Polk county. He had gone out to do his work as usual Saturday and nothing was misssed until he was found dead, leaning over a grain box. A large host of friends mourn his lost.

Dr. E. T. Frank V.S., has recently discovered several cases of Tuberculoses among cattle in our vicinity, mostly of the Jersey breed. He killed and examined an animal owned by W. N. Powell and showed the lungs and heart to the writer. It was worth seeing, but in a terrible state of decomposition in both the organs. It would be well for farmers to have stock examined before using the milk from such cows.

One of the interesting cases during the court held here was the case of Dr. Ray F. Whetstone, plaintiff, against J. J. Sutton, defendant, wherein plaintiff sued J. J. Sutton for $10,000 damage alleging that defendant called plaintiff a fiend beat and other uncomplimentary names. During the trial Mr. Sutton admitted but he used the above terms excepting the thief. This he denied. J. J. Sutton conducted his own case assisted by A. A. Miller. The plaintiff defended and had popular Argyllties. The verdict was given in favor of defendant.

NEILSVILLE.

A. A. Buckingham was here one day last week looking over business interests,

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hayes leave next week for a visit to Pennsylvania to attend over winter.

We miss the presence of our good natured mayor, Henry Simon, who is making a short stay at Crookston.

Berger Trounes wears a smile half mile long when you ask him who he took home Sunday. Berger is all right

Mrs. Geo. Michael returned Tuesday evening to her home at Hulsted, having visited with Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Hayes.

The baby of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Arneson died last Thursday after a short illness. The remains were buried Tuesday.

Miss Julia Thompson, of Bygland, left for her home Sunday, after closing a successful fall term of school in the district east of Neilsville.

The Neilsville Cornet band has resumed practice under the leadership of Prof. H. M. Howe, principal of our village school. They will meet twice a week.

The Neilsville Farmers' Lumber Company, has just received a twenty-five ton carload of coal which was disposed of in two days. A. P. Johnson, the manager, says he has more coming.

Cases of mumps have been frequent in our neighborhood of late some proving to be quite serious. Nils Muus had the most severe attack and now Mrs. Muus and Mrs. P. E. Hamsey are just recovering, having been quite sick.

At the church last Sunday afternoon occurred the wedding of Pedar Ramsey and Guri Thompson, Rev. Brolland officiating. A large number of invited guests were present. The remainder of the day and evening were spent at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Neilsville, where the guests were royally entertained. The unusually large number of costly and beautiful wedding presents is strong evidence of the popularity of the young couple.

The stores in town not happening to have his extraordinary size and finding himself in urgent need of a pair of shoes for the wedding, C. C. Melsness went up to Crookston last Wednesday to purchase a pair which he brought home on the freight the next day.

ERSKINE.

Andrew Crosquist was at the county seat Friday.

H. N. Nelson returned from Crookston Saturday.

Sheriff Lawrence took in the sights here Sunday.

I. I. Stenerson did business at Fosston Friday.

Miss Jennie Hanson visited at McIntosh Monday.

A brand new girl at the home of Geo. D. Lawrence.

W. J. Dargon's boy and girl visited with him Saturday.

Mrs. Julius Bradley visited at Fosston Saturday.

Dr. Mohn, of Fertile, was looking over our town on Saturday.

Martin Haugen, of Fertile, transacted business here Saturday.

John N. Roisum, of Dundee, N. D., is visiting with his uncle, Pete Roisum.

Mr. and Mrs. Martinus Nelson and Mrs. Pete Peterson visited at Fosston Sunday.

Andrew Olberg shipped his Engine to Solway Saturday, where he has a saw mill.

G. Stenerson was over at Solway on business Tuesday, returning Wednesday.

Andrew Olberg sold his farm in Badger to Ole Carlson. Consideration $3,000.

Miss Tena Hillmen, of Mentor, visited with Vinnie Narveson Saturday and Sunday.

Eli Godboe moved his family down from the Red Lake reservation Monday and will live in M. H. Holte's old house.

Mr. Arthur Egley and Miss Rose Kirsch, of Thief River Falls were married here Friday. Only intimate friends were present at the wedding.

A. R. Holston, of Crookston, was legal adviser in the Gundy & Mc-Kusick case here Tuesday. Geo. Gundy was bound over to the grand jury.

FELTON.

W. P. Barry drove to Fargo Monday.

Collector Rowey, of Fargo, was a caller here Monday.

Geo. Selfort returned this morning from a visit to his Iowa home.

Dr. Stewart, of Ada, has been a regular visitor here this last week.

Fifteen car loads of hogs were shipped out from here last Thursday.

D. Scobey, of Whipeton, N. D., was in town the first part of the week.

Felton witnessed the biggest rain storm of the season last Thursday evening.

M. T. Dahlquist has been sick with inflamation of the stomach, but is now improving.

Dr. Stuart accompanied by Fred Wyngant, of Ada was down this week to examine applicants for a Modern Woodman Camp to be started here in the near future.

MAPLE BAY.

Will Klinger drove to Fertile Sunday.

Even Nelson, of Fertile, spent Sunday at the Bay.

Nels Patterson moved into his new residence Saturday.

Mrs. and Miss Backen, from Hitterdale, visited with relatives here Friday.

Miss Minnie Masson, from McIntosh, went home Tuesday to attend his sister's wedding.

Mr. Barholtz, from Fertile, was at the Bay Monday.

Christ Nelson drove to Dugdale on Tuesday.

Joe Wikre left Tuesday for Colfax, Wis., where he expects to stay this winter.

C. D. Conklin and Ole M. Olson went to Fertile on business Tuesday.

LENGBY.

Joe Welte returned Saturday from a couple of weeks' stay at Ebro.

Mrs. M. E. Wilhorg, of Ebro, visited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Scavieho, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Otto Welte and Martin Eyle left for the woods Tuesday.

Willie and Pearl Noel returned Saturday from Hansville where they have been attending school.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Olson, of Fosston, were here between trains Sunday.

We had a little snow Saturday.

Hotel Dewey received its new landlord, Gunder Lee, Wednesday.

GREAT NOVEMBER SALE

Our Great November Sale of Winter Goods is now running. We are offering values that cannot be duplicated in any store in this part of the state. We have just received a large consignment of Men's, Youth's and Boys' Winter Clothing that will be a surprise and a pleasure to all bargain hunters. Here are a few samples:

Overcoats

50 Overcoats, lot 8230, all wool heaver, a good $10 value,...$4.98

50 Overcoats, lot 4889, all wool melton, a good $15 value,...$7.98

Ulsters

100 Ulsters, lot 2464, a good $10.50 quality for.....$5.50

75 Ulsters, lot 2424, all wool Irish frieze, a good $18 value for.....$9.98

Suits

100 worsted tweed Suits, a good $10 quality,.....$4.49

One extra lot of cassimeres, other stores' prices, $7.25, $8 and $10. Great Western price is.....$6.50

50 Suits in worsted and French clay, $16, $18 and $20 values, all go at.....$9.98

Duck Coats

10 dozen Duck Coats, $1.50 values, Great Western price..98c

One extra lot of 50 Duck Coats, blanket lined, rubber lined, regular $3 values, Great Western price.....$1.98

Mackinaw Coats

5 dozen Mackinaw Coats, regular $3 values, Great Western price.....$1.50

5 dozen all wool Mackinaw Coats in a heavy brown and mixed colors, $6 values at..$4.00

Shirts

50 dozen shirts, regular 50c values, Great Western price 25c and upward.

Underwear

50 dozen of Underwear, wool fleece lined, $1.50 values at, per suit.....90c

Heavy lumbermen's underwear in all wool, double breasted, regular $3 quality, Great Western price.....$1.75

Gentlemen's fine all wool underwear, $4 value, Great Western price.....$2.48

10 dozen red flannel underwear, $1 values, Great Western price.....89c

Caps

10 dozen Caps, 50c values, our price.....25c

All wool melton and beaver caps, 50c and upward.

Sweaters

50 dozen worsted sweaters, $1 values, Great Western price, 45c

Pants

Heavy all wool kersey pants, $3.50 values, Great Western price.....$1.98

10 dozen worsted pants at 75c

Boys' Suits and Overcoats

at the greatest reduction ever heard of in Crookston.

Boys' Overalls

Boy's good quality overalls, our price.....10c

Ties

25 dozen Ties, 50c quality, our price.....25c

..Great Western Clothing House..

Opposite the Post Office. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.

Superior Dining Service.

Rev. Jesse E. Zeigler, of Monango, N. D., recently went over the Burlington on a trip to Pennsylvania. He writes: "I found the service and accommodations of your route superior to any I have known in the West. This is especially true of the dining service."

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & CO., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

A. W. GLEASON,
(SEAL.)
Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by all Druggists, price 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota.

In the matter of Hans N. Nelson, bankrupt. To the creditors of Hans N. Nelson, of Erskine, in the County of Polk, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 21st day of November, A. D. 1899, the said Hans N. Nelson was duly adjudged bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned referee in bankruptcy, at the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk, in said district on the 4th day of December, A. D. 1899, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Dated Nov. 21st, 1899.

OLE J. VAULE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

H. STENERSON,
Attorney for Bankrupt,
Crookston, Minn.

Saw Mill Machinery For Sale Cheap.

One 3-Saw Lath Bolter, One 3-Saw Lath Mill,

The above machines are in good repair and capable of making 40,000 lath in ten hours.

On Perkins Hand Shingle Machine

With drop tih attachment -- in good repair.

A complete outfit of Saws and Collars goes with above machinery.

Write for Prices.

CROOKSTON LUMBER CO.,
Crookston, Minn

S. L. Collins,

LIVERY AND FEED STABLES

Horses bought and sold on commission. Everything neat and nobby. Feeding a specialty.

Main and Fourth streets.

CROOKSTON — — MINNESOTA.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street

CROOKSTON, MINN.

FRANK BROWN....

is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

35 lbs Patent Flour for 1 bu. No. 1 Nor. Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

A "Love" of a Bonnet

Is frequently the cause of a quarrel in the family. Ours are not so expensive as to cause one. We have a large number of very lovely ones that are veritable family peace makers. Call and examine them.

Reckitt Block, 2nd St. L. M. Bassett.

COAL AND WOOD

VANCE AND STONE

DEFECTIVE PAGE

RAILWAY TIME CARD

CROOKSTON, MINN.

NORTHERN PACIFIC

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep't.
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:27 pm	8:37 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	6:20 a m	6:20 a m

C. A. SHARKEY, Agt. Crookston, Minn. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A. St. Paul, Minn

GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE	DEPART
6:55 am *Daily †Except Sunday.	7:00 am
9:00 pm Mpls., St. Paul and points east	9:05 pm
4:30 pm St. Boniface, Thief River Falls	4:30 pm
Grand Rapids, Duluth and Superior	9:00 am
4.35 pm *Fosston, Bemidji, Duluth and Superior	7:30 am
6:45 pm St. Vincent to Fargo	7:15 pm
8:55 am Fisher to St. Vincent	9:10 am

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block, Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fiduciary & Agency's Office hours—9 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 5 p. m.; 7 to 8 p. m.

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOAN AGENTS
FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice. Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday. Morning, 11:00, everyone invited. Holy Communion the First Sunday of every Month. Reader for the week.
REV. H. M. GREEN, R. D. Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

—The Grand Central hotel has a new handsome sign.

—William Martin was down from Fanny last Saturday.

—C. G. Rapp, of St. Hilaire, spent last Sunday in Crookston.

—P. McLennan was down from Angus last Monday on business.

—Casper Tiedtemau and wife were down from Euclid last Saturday.

—S. Crookshanks was down from Burlington on business last Saturday.

—Frank Kratka, of Thief River Falls, was in the city last Friday night.

—Attorney Geo. E. Erickson, of Argyle, spen Sunday and Monday in the city.

—George Lewis will spend the coming winter in one of the lumber camps out east of here.

—Miss Clara Mageau entertained some of her friends at her home last Monday evening.

—Mrs. J. O. Sargent left Monday morning for the Forks to visit with relatives for a short time.

—A. H. Smithers left Monday morning for Lambert where he will take a position in a general store.

—A. P. Cronquist, cashier in the bank at Erskine, was in the city on business last Friday night.

—The Misses Brown and Miss Woodall will entertain their lady friends at a five o'clock tea next Saturday.

—Miss Abbie Walsh, who has been visiting in Crookston for several weeks, has returned to her home in Grand Forks.

—Mrs. Paul Carpenter, of McIntosh, took the train Tuesday morning for Euclid where she will visit for a short time at her old home.

—Rev. H. P. Fisher, delivered a lecture on the "Civil War" before the students of the North Dakota university last Monday night.

—Hugh Robertson, assistant cashier of the First National bank, was called to Warren Tuesday to give evidence in a case before the court.

—John Young is the new express man on the St. Vincent line. He takes the place of E. Gallagher who has been transferred to another line.

—Attorneys Halvor Steenerson and A. A. Miller boarded the St. Vincent train Tuesday morning. They were bound for Warren to attend court.

—Word has been received from Will Bloom that he reached Arizona all right. He will spend the winter there in hopes that the climate will improve his health.

—The United States land office officials report that the applications for homesteads are coming in right along. New settlers perhaps thinks spring is near at hand.

—Judge Watts and Court Reporter Lohn spent Sunday and Monday at Crookston returning Tuesday morning to Warren to hold court which adjourned that evening.

—George Rutherford, of Key West, was transacting business in the city last Friday.

—Rev. Father Lanret has resigned his position as pastor of St. Ann's church in this city.

—The rumor that an infanticide had occurred at Fisher turned out to be without foundation.

—Rev. Mr Estenson, of Gary, occupied the pulpit of the Lutheran church in this city last Sunday.

—H. P. Knappen, of the People's Press, spent part of the week visiting with his brother C. C. at Turtle River.

—Invitations are out for the marriage next Thursday of Miss Blanche Carey, of Northcote, to Edward Florence.

—Henry Burkhardt, Jr., and family, of Whashta, are among the latest additions to the residents of Polk county's capital.

—WANTED, a position as cook in lumber camp. Have had experience in cooking. For particulars call at JOURNAL office.

—Hotel Markham, the new hotel recently opened at Bemidji was the handiwork of Contractor Frank Mageau, of Crookston.

—Charley Bang, formerly Northern Pacific express agent here, but now of St. Paul, has been visiting in the city during the last few days.

—FOR SALE, two quarter section farms near Mentor, on easy terms. M. H. Waters 502 Guaranty Loan Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

—The case of Whetstone vs. Sutton, a suit for damages for slander, was finally settled at Warren last week, the defendant getting the verdict.

—M. R. Brown has already got his cohorts to work in the wood out east where he will cut this coming winter large quantities of ties and poles.

—The Spokelle estate, valued at $11,000, will be sold by the administrator Nils Mum. This action is taken by order of the judge of probate.

—Thomas A. Harris was adjudicated bankrupt last Saturday. The first meeting of the creditors will take place before the referee in bankruptcy on Dec. 1.

—John S. Nichols, late of Fertile, in this county, writes from his new home in Rockford, Ill., that he is assisting in publishing the Chronicle at that place.

—E. M. Lancuster has returned from Maine where he went some weeks ago to be present on the occasion of the one hundredth anniversary of his father's birth.

—Plowing is still going on to a certain extent and the only reason that there is not more of it just now is that most of the farmers have completed their work in the fields.

—Eight new electric lights have been put in at different street corners in the city and in consequence traveling through darkness in certain parts of the city has come to an end.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Fritz, of Plum Coutie, Manitoba, parents of Rev. J. Fritz, reached the city last Monday evening. They came down to attend the wedding of their son last night.

—The members of the Y. W. C. T. U. entertained the young men who belong to the Y. M. C. A. last Friday evening in the parlors of the Baptist church. A very pleasant evening was spent by all.

—Frank Conlan, the night clerk of the Commercial hotel, had an altercation with Landlord Powers last Thursday night. The clerk was ejected from the hotel and later was arrested and fined for disorderly conduct.

—Two Warrenites, Albert S. Opgar and D. A. Finley, find that their assets are considerably less than their liabilities and have been endeavoring to have matters straightened out before Ole Vaule, referee in bandruptcy.

—Stephen Young, who has acted as representative of the East Grand Forks Lumber company in this city during the past summer and fall, left Monday morning for Solway where he will look after the company's interest this winter.

—Will Smith, who has been working for a short time for the Great Northern at Larimore, has been offered and accepted a position in the tax department of the Northern Pacific. He will now make his home at St. Paul.

—Within two weeks complete telephone connections will be made with Tilden and thence to Thief River Falls and neighboring towns, Fosston, and St. Paul by way of Winnipeg Junction. The last poles are now being put in place.

—According to the estimates of Geo. A. Ralph, of this city, the new ditch that is to be dug in Red Lake county will be seven miles long, drain 25,000 acres, and cost about $1,000 a mile. Work on this new drainage canal will begin early next spring.

—Now is the time to fix up for winter. We have quite an accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Co. Telephone 40.

—Rev. H. M. Green has been attending an Episcopal church meeting at St. Cloud.

—Mr. Mosse came in from Neilsville yesterday morning and took the train for Duluth, —The Ladies' Whist Club was entertained by Mrs. Tom Morris last Saturday afternoon.

—N. I. McMahan has been appointed postmaster at Mallory in place of Osmund Osmundson resigned.

—W. H. Bohannan, a former member of Company F, 13th Minnesota Regiment, is visiting in the city with H. P. Knappen of the People's Press.

—On Monday Herman D. Fisher visited the University of both Dakota and spent two days as the guest of President Merrifield. While there he visited the different professors in their class rooms.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—The Great Northern land office is making large sales of lands to buyers from all over the country. Red River Valley land can't be beat, a fact that is becoming more patent every day.

—Rev. J. T. Bursett left last Friday evening for Berlin, N. H., where he goes to take charge of a church. Mr. Bursett has been pastor of the Lutheran church in this city and his many friends here regret his departure.

—A. E. Wright expects in a short time to start in business on Broadway near Munn's old shop. He will manufacture carriages, tents, awnings, etc. Mr. Wright has had considerable experience in this line and will undoubtedly be successful.

—There was an informal hop at the elegantly furnished rooms of the Gopher Club last Friday night and a most pleasant time was had by all. The young gentlemen composing this club are certainly doing their best in entertaining and they are doing it in a masterly manner.

—A monster petition signed by citizens from all over the country will be presented to the next congress asking that body to take such steps as are necessary to make polygamy unlawful, according to national statutes. The petition is now being signed by Crookston citizens.

—E. D. Childs has about 100 tons of good corn fodder more than he will need for his own use, and will sell it at $2 per ton, delivered anywhere in the city, in quantities of one ton or more. This makes cheap feed and first class feed for anyone who keeps a cow.

—Louis Larson, a stranger in town, was sentenced in justice court Tuesday to 30 days in the county jail for writing a $10 cheque upon the People's bank, Minneapolis, payable to J. J. Molstad when he had no funds in the bank. This is only one of several cases against him but he thinks he can straighten up the other matters before the expiration of his sentence.

—E. D. Lanctot, one of the old settlers, living a few miles east of the city, has recently lost a fifty cent piece, which came from the mints in 1830 and he offers a liberal reward for the return of this coin. He has carried this piece of money with him for the last twenty years it having been coined in the year in which he was born.

—John B. Seuve, who lives eight miles southeast of Gentilly and has been engaged in farming in Polk county for the past seventeen years and has made a success of the business, informs the JOURNAL that he has raised field corn year after year and has had a crop, on the average of fifty bushels of shelled corn to the acre.

—Elias Steenerson of this city, and his brother Andree Steenerson of Climax, have made a deal by which the latter trades a farm near Climax for a large quantity of lumber which the former has sawed at his mill at Phoenix out east of here. Andrew Steenerson will ship the lumber to Climax and there open up a lumber yard.

—The ladies of the Congregational church will tie comfortables or comforts for 50 cents a piece and will tie and finish the edges for 75 cents. They have now on hand for sale two comforts. Orders for this kind of work will be received by Mrs. Van-Arnum or any of the other ladies of the Congregational church.

—Andrew Ahplanalp, of the town of Tilden, was examined in probate court last Saturday and committed to the hospital for the insane at Fergus Falls, where he had been years ago. On the same day the will of Barney Hagerty came up for consideration but action was postponed till today. On Monday there was a hearing of claims in the estate of J. F. Murray buttbecase was adjourned till next Saturday, and Patrick Murray's estate was closed.

FOR SALE—First class restaurant outfit complete in all respects. Apply to W. W. Hoeb.

THE C.O.D. SPECIAL!

The Best Establishment .....in the Northwest.

400 MEN'S ALL WOOL SUITS

Goods that are worth every cent of Ten Dollars---We are offering these at $6.90

The Legitimate Clothing House.

THE C. O. D.

ANGUS.

G. E. Winchester spent Sunday in town.

Mrs. H. C. Clark was in Warren on Friday.

Mrs. J. M. Palmer is visiting in Grand Forks.

F. Stroble and sons were in Warren on Wednesday.

Misses Edith and Annie King were in Warren on Saturday.

Mrs. Wm. Campion arrived home from Crookston on Tuesday.

Mrs. J. F. Montgomery was in Warren on Tuesday and Wednesday.

J. F. Montgomery, W. Lemon and A. T. Campion spent Wednesday in Warren.

Mr. Roth, salesman for Griggs, Cooper & Co., was in town on Wednesday.

L. E. Wattem came down from Warren on Saturday evening to spend Sunday with his brother.

Miss Cozy B. McAvoy returned to her home in Crookston on Monday, after a week's visit with her sister.

RUSSIA.

Arthur Hasty is laid up with a bad cold.

Fred Baatz has been visiting his friends at this place.

Peter Vermager is improving his land by ditching with a grader.

Sebastian Skrevset, who was at P. Wermager's place, left this morning on the fyer for Bemidji.

Most everybody in this vicinity attended the auction sale yesterday by Clement Payant in Hammond town. Everything sold at a high price.

Sebastian Skrevset reported last week that his brother has bought a one half section of railroad land and intends to move on to it as soon as possible. The latter is one of the best farmers in the northwest and has one of the heaviest and strongest team of horses weighing 3200 pounds. He has already built a large barn on section eight in this town.

ROLETTE.

More plowing done this fall than ever before.

Herb Miller has gone to Mentor for a two days visit.

At Frank Gaetke's auction sale every thing sold well except horses.

The new owners of the Lockhart farm will sell the same in small tracts to actual settlers.

Ben Halst went to Gardner, N. D., Monday to relieve the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator agent a few days.

With the Fisher and Lockhart farms cut up into small farms this town ought to enjoy a good sized real estate boom.

Mrs. H. B. Budd and Mrs. J. J. Carey, of Beltrami, were down one day this week calling on Mrs. F. B. Dykeman.

Neil McDougall, who has been foreman on the Lockhart farm the past six years has resigned his position and moved to Crookston.

Burlington Reclining Chairs

Running on two trains a day to and from Chicago, are the largest, roomiest, and in every way best, of any such cars running from St. Paul and Minneapolis. When you buy a ticket over the Burlington you get the best.

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

Spend the Holidays at Home

$40 Canadian excursion via Northern Pacific

Canadian Excursion

Tickets will be sold by the Northern Pacific from December 4 to December 31 inclusive, to principal points in.....

Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia.

Good for three months from date of sale, with liberal stop-over privileges. Limit will be extended upon payment of reasonable additional sums. Round trip tickets will be sold to points as far east as Montreal for $40.00, and at corresponding low rates to points east of Montreal in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Call on agents of the Northern Pacific Ry., for detailed information.

CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. & T. A.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

[Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.]

CHAPTER VI

For I came to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law, and a man's foes shall be they of his own household.

Be ye therefore imitators of God, as beloved children, and walk in love even as Christ also loved you.

When Virginia left the carriage and went to Loreen, she had no definite idea as to what she would do or what the result of her action would be. She simply saw a soul that had tasted of the joy of a better life slipping back again into its old hell of shame and death, and before she had touched the drunken girl's arm she had asked only one question. "What would Jesus do?" That question was becoming with her, as with many others, a habit of life.

She looked around now as she stood close by Loreen, and the whole scene was cruelly vivid to her. She thought first of the girls in the carriage.

"Drive on. Don't wait for me. I am going to see my friend here home," she said, calmly enough.

The girl with the red parasol seemed to gasp at the word "friend" when Virginia spoke it. She did not say anything. The other girls seemed speechless.

"Go on. I cannot go back with you," said Virginia.

The driver started the horses slowly. One of the girls leaned a little out of the carriage.

"Can't we—that is—do you want our help? Couldn't we"—

"No, no!" exclaimed Virginia. "You cannot be of any use to me."

The carriage moved on, and Virginia was alone with her charge.

She looked up and around. Many faces in the crowd were sympathetic. They were not all cruel or brutal. The Holy Spirit had softened a good deal of the Rectangle.

"Where does she live?" asked Virginia.

No one answered. It occurred to Virginia afterward, when she had time to think it over, that the Rectangle showed a delicacy in its sad silence that would have done credit to the boulevard.

For the first time it flashed upon her that the immortal being who was flung like wreckage upon the shore of this earthly hell called the saloon had no place that could be called home.

The girl suddenly wrenched her arm from Virginia's grasp. In doing it she nearly threw Virginia down.

"You shall not touch me! Leave me! Let me go to hell! That's where I belong! The devil is waiting for me! See him!" she exclaimed hoarsely. She turned and pointed with a shaking finger at the saloon keeper. The crowd laughed.

Virginia stepped up to her and put her arm about her.

"Loreen," she said firmly, "come with me. You do not belong to hell. You belong to Jesus, and he will save you. Come."

The girl suddenly burst into tears. She was only partly sobered by the shock of meeting Virginia.

Virginia looked around again. "Where does Mr. Gray live?" she asked. She knew the evangelist boarded somewhere near that tent.

A number of voices gave her the direction.

"Come, Loreen. I want you to go with me to Mrs. Gray's," she said, still keeping her hold of the swaying, trembling creature, who still moaned and sobbed and now clung to Virginia as before she had repulsed her.

So the two moved on through the Rectangle toward the evangelist's lodging place. The sight seemed to impress the Rectangle seriously. It never took itself seriously when it was drunk, but this was different. The fact that one of the most beautifully dressed girls in Raymond was taking care of one of the Rectangle's most notorious characters, who reeled along under the influence of liquor, was a fact astonishing enough to throw more or less dignity and importance about Loreen herself. The event of Loreen stumbling through the gutter dead drunk always made the Rectangle laugh and jest, but Loreen staggering along with a young lady from the society circles up town supporting her was another thing. The Rectangle viewed it with soberness and more or less wondering admiration.

When they reached Mr. Gray's boarding place, the woman who answered Virginia's knock said that both Mr. and Mrs. Gray were out somewhere and would not be back until 6 o'clock.

Virginia had not planned anything further than a possible appeal to the Grays either to take charge of Loreen for awhile or find some safe place for her until she was sober again. She stood now at the lodging after the woman had spoken, and she was really at a loss to know what to do. Loreen sank down stupidly on the steps and buried her face in her arms. Virginia eyed the miserable figure with a feeling that she was fearful would grow into disgust.

Finally a thought possessed Virginia that she could not resist. What was to hinder Loreen from going home with her? Why should not this homeless, wretched creature, reeking with the fumes of liquor, be cared for in Virginia's own home, instead of being consigned to strangers in some hospital or house of charity? Virginia really knew very little about any such places of refuge. As a matter of fact, there were two or three such institutions in Raymond, but it is doubtful if any of them would have taken a person like Loreen in her present condition. But that was not the question with Virginia just now. "What would Jesus do with Loreen?" was what Virginia faced, and she finally answered it by touching Loreen again.

"Loreen, come! You are going home with me. We will take the car here at the corner."

Loreen staggered to her feet and, to Virginia's relief, made no trouble. She had expected resistance or a stubborn refusal to move. When they reached the corner and took the car, it was nearly full of people going up town. Virginia was painfully conscious of the stares that greeted her and her companion as they entered, but her thought was directed more and more to the approaching scene with her grandmother. What would Mme. Page say when she saw Loreen?

Loreen was nearly sober now, but she was lapsing into a state of stupor. Virginia was obliged to hold fast to her arm. Several times she lurched heavily against Virginia, and as the two went up the avenue a curious crowd of people turned and gazed at them. When she mounted the steps of the handsome house, Virginia breathed a sigh of relief, even in the face of the interview with her grandmother, and when the door shut and she was in the wide hall with her homeless outcast she felt equal to anything that might now come.

Mme. Page was in the library. Hearing Virginia come in, she came into the hall. Virginia stood there supporting Loreen, who stared stupidly at the rich magnificence of the furnishings around her.

"Grandmother" — Virginia spoke without hesitation and very clearly— "I have brought one of my friends from the Rectangle. She is in trouble and has no home. I am going to care for her a little while."

Mme. Page glanced from her granddaughter to Loreen in astonishment.

"Did you say she was one of your friends?" she asked in a cold, sneering voice that hurt Virginia more than anything she had yet felt.

"Yes; I said so." Virginia's face flushed, but she seemed to recall the verse that Mr. Gray had used for one of his recent sermons, "A friend of publicans and sinners." Surely Jesus would do this that she was doing.

"Do you know what this girl is?" asked Mme. Page in an angry whisper stepping near Virginia.

"I know very well. She is an outcast. You need not tell me, grandmother. I know it even better than you do. She is drunk at this minute. But she is also a child of God. I have seen her on her knees repentant, and I have seen hell reach out its horrible fingers after her again, and, by the grace of Christ, I feel that the least I can do is to rescue her from such peril. Grandmother, we call ourselves Christians. Here is a poor, lost human creature without a home, slipping into a possible eternal loss, and we have more than enough. I have brought her here and shall keep her."

Mme. Page glared at Virginia and clinched her hands. All this was contrary to her social code of conduct.

How could society excuse such familiarity with the scum of the streets? What would Virginia's actions cost the family in the way of criticism and the loss of standing and all that long list of necessary relations which people of wealth and position must sustain to the leaders of society? To Mme. Page society represented more than the church or any other institution. It was a power to be feared and obeyed. The loss of its good will was a loss more to be dreaded than anything, except the loss of wealth itself.

She stood erect and stern and confronted Virginia, fully roused and determined. Virginia placed her arm about Loreen and calmly looked her grandmother in the face.

"You shall not do this, Virginia. You can send her to the asylum for helpless women. We can pay all the expenses. We cannot afford, for the sake of our reputations, to shelter such a person."

"Grandmother, I do not wish to do anything that is displeasing to you, but I am going to keep Loreen here tonight and longer if I think it is best."

"Then you can answer for the consequences. I do not stay in the same house with a miserable"— Mme. Page lost her self control. Virginia stopped her before she could speak the next word.

"Grandmother, this house is mine. It is your home with me as long as you choose to remain, but in this matter I shall act as I fully believe Jesus would in my place. I am willing to hear all that society may say or do. Society is not my God. By the side of this poor, lost soul I do not count the verdict of society as of any value."

"I shall not remain here, then," said Mme. Page. She turned suddenly and walked to the end of the hall. She then came back and said, with an emphasis that revealed her intense excitement and passion:

"You can always remember that you have driven your grandmother out of your house in favor of a drunken woman." Then, without waiting for Virginia to reply, she turned again and went up stairs.

Virginia called for a servant and soon had Loreen cared for. She was fast lapsing into a wretched condition. During the brief scene in the hall she had clung to Virginia so hard that Virginia's arm was sore from the clutch of the girl's fingers.

Virginia did not know whether her grandmother would leave the house or not. She had abundant means of her own, was perfectly well and vigorous and capable of caring for herself. She had sisters and brothers living in the south and was in the habit of spending several weeks in the year with them. Virginia was not anxious about her welfare, so far as that went, but the interview had been a painful one to her. Going over it, as she did in her room before she went down to tea, she found little cause for regret, however. "What would Jesus do?" There was no question in Virginia's mind that she had done the right thing. If she had made a mistake, it was one of the judgment and not of the heart. When the bell rang for tea, she went down, and her grandmother did not appear. She sent a servant to her room, and the servant brought back word that Mme. Page was not there. A few minutes later Rollin came in. He brought word that his grandmother had taken the evening train for the south. He had been at the station to see some friends off and had by chance met his grandmother as he was coming out. She told him her reason for going.

Virginia and Rollin confronted each other at the table with earnest, sad faces.

"Rollin," said Virginia, and for the first time almost since his conversion she realized what a wonderful thing her brother's change of life meant to her, "do you blame me? Am I wrong?"

"No, dear: I cannot believe you are. This is very painful for us, but if you think this poor creature owes her safety and salvation to your personal care it was the only thing for you to do. Oh, Virginia, to think that we have all these years enjoyed our beautiful home and all these luxuries selfishly, forgetful of the multitude like this woman! Surely Jesus in our places would do what you have done."

And so Rollin comforted Virginia and counseled with her that evening, and of all the wonderful changes that Virginia was henceforth to know on account of her great pledge nothing affected her so powerfully as the thought of Rollin's change in life. Truly, this man in Christ was a new creature. Old things were passed away. Behold, all things in him had become new!

Dr. West came that evening at Virginia's summons and did everything necessary for the outcast. She had drunk herself almost into delirium. The best that could be done for her now were quiet nursing and careful watching and personal love. So in a beautiful room, with a picture of Christ walking by the sea hanging on the wall, where her bewildered eyes caught daily something more of its hidden meaning, Loreen lay, tossed she hardly knew how into this haven, and Virginia crept nearer the Master than she had ever been as her heart went out toward this wreck which had thus been flung torn and beaten at her feet.

Meanwhile the Rectangle waited the issue of the election with more than usual interest, and Gray and his wife wept over the pitiable creatures who, after a struggle with surroundings that daily tempted them, too often wearied of the struggle, and, like Loreen, threw up their arms and went whirling into the boiling abyss of their previous condition.

The after meeting at the First church was now regularly established. Henry Maxwell went into the lecture room on the Sunday succeeding the week of the primary and was greeted with an enthusiasm that made him tremble at first for its reality. He noted again the absence of Jasper Chase, but all the others were present, and they seemed drawn very close together by a bond of common fellowship that demanded and enjoyed mutual confidences. It was the general feeling that the spirit of Jesus was a spirit of very open, frank confession of experience. It seemed the most natural thing in the world for Edward Norman to be telling all the rest of the company about the details of his newspaper.

"The fact is, I have lost a good deal of money during the last three weeks. I cannot tell how much. I am losing a great many subscribers every day."

"What do the subscribers give as their reason for dropping the paper?" asked Henry Maxwell. All the rest were listening eagerly.

"There are a good many different reasons. Some say they want a paper that prints all the news, meaning by that the crime details, sensations like prizefights, scandals and horrors of various kinds. Others object to the discontinuance of the Sunday edition. I have lost hundreds of subscribers by that action, although I have made satisfactory arrangements with many of the old suscribers by giving even more in the extra Saturday edition than they formerly had in the Sunday issue. My greatest loss has come from a falling off in advertisements and from the attitude I have felt obliged to take on political questions. This last action has really cost me more than any other. The bulk of my subscribers are intensely partisan. I may as well tell you all frankly that if I continue to pursue the plan which I honestly believe Jesus would in the matter of political issues and their treatment from a nonpartisan and moral standpoint The News will not be able to pay its operating expenses unless one factor in Raymond can be depended on."

He paused a moment, and the room was very quiet. Virginia seemed specially interested. Her face glowed with interest. It was like the interest of a person who had been thinking hard of the same thing Norman went on now to mention.

"That one factor is the Christian element in Raymond. Say The News has lost heavily from the dropping off of people who do not care for a Christian daily and from others who simply look upon a newspaper as a purveyor of all sorts of material to amuse or interest them, are there enough genuine Christian people in Raymond who will rally to the support of a paper such as Jesus would probably edit, or are the habits of the people so firmly established in their demands for the regular type of journalism that they will not take a paper unless it is stripped largely of the Christian and moral purpose? I may also say in this fellowship gathering that, owing to recent complications in my business affairs outside of my paper, I have been obliged to lose a large part of my fortune. I have had to apply the same rule of Jesus' probable conduct to certain transactions with other men who did not apply it to their conduct, and the result has been the loss of a great deal of money.

"As I understand the promise we made, we were not to ask any questions about 'Will it pay?' but all our action was to be based on the one question, 'What would Jesus do?' Acting on that rule of conduct, I have been obliged to lose nearly all the money I have accumulated in my paper. It is not necessary for me to go into details. There is no question with me now, after the three weeks' experience I have had, that a great many men would lose vast sums of money under the present system of business if this rule of Jesus were honestly obeyed. I mention my loss here because I have the fullest faith in the final success of a daily paper conducted on the lines I have recently laid down, and I had planned to put into it my entire fortune in order to win final success. As it is now, unless as I said, the Christian people of Raymond, the church members and professing disciples, will support the paper with subscriptions and advertisements, I cannot continue its publication on the present basis."

Virginia asked a question. She had followed Mr. Norman's confession with the most intense eagerness.

"Do you mean that a Christian daily ought to be endowed with a large sum like a Christian college, in order to make it pay?"

"That is exactly what I mean. I have laid out plans for putting into The News such a variety of material, in such a strong and truly interesting way, that it would more than make up for whatever was absent from its columns in the way of un-Christian matter, but my plans called for a very large outlay of money. I am very confident that a Christian daily such as Jesus would approve, containing only what he would print, can be made to succeed financially if it is planned to the right lines, but it will take a large sum of money to work out the plans."

"How much do you think?" asked Virginia quietly.

Edward Norman looked at her keenly, and his face flushed a moment as an idea of Virginia's purpose crossed his mind. He had known her when she was a little girl in the Sunday school, and he had been on intimate relations in business with her father.

"I should say a half million dollars in a town like Raymond could be well spent in the establishment of a paper such as we have in mind," he answered, and his voice trembled a little. The keen look on Edward Norman's grizzled face flashed out with a stern but thoroughly Christian anticipation of great achievements in the world of newspaper life as it had opened up to him within the last few seconds.

"Then," said Virginia, speaking as if the thought were fully considered, "I am ready to put that amount of money into the paper on the one condition, of course, that it be carried on as it has been begun."

"Thank God!" exclaimed Henry Maxwell softly. Edward Norman was pale. The rest were looking at Virginia. She had more to say.

"Dear friends," she went on, and there was a sadness in her voice that made an impression on the rest that deepened when they thought it over afterward, "I do not want any of you to credit me with an act of great generosity or philanthropy. I have come to know lately that the money which I have called my own is not my own, but God's. If I, as a steward of his, see some wise way to invest his money, it is not an occasion of vainglory or thanks from any one simply because I have proved honest in my administration of the funds he has asked me to use for his glory. I have been thinking of this very plan for some time. The fact is, dear friends, that in our coming fight with the whisky power in Raymond, and it has only just begun, we shall need The News to champion the Christian side. You all know that all the other papers are for the saloon. As long as the saloon exists the work of rescuing dying souls at the Rectangle is carried on at a terrible disadvantage. What can Mr. Gray do with his gospel meetings when half his converts are drinking people, daily tempted and enticed by the saloon on every corner? The Christian daily we must have. It would be giving up to the enemy to have The News fail. I have great confidence in Mr. Norman's ability. I have not seen his plans, but I have the confidence that he has in making the paper succeed if it is carried forward on a large enough scale.

"I cannot believe that Christian intelligence in journalism will be inferior to un-Christian intelligence, even when it comes to making the paper pay financially. So that is my reason for putting this money—God's, not mine—into this powerful agent for doing as Jesus would. If we can keep such a paper going for one year, I shall be willing to see that amount of money used in the experiment. Do not thank me. Do not consider my promise a wonderful thing. What have I done with God's money all these years but gratify my own selfish, physical, personal desires? What can I do with the rest of it but try to make some reparation for what I have stolen from God? That is the way I look at it now. I believe it is what Jesus would do."

Over the lecture room swept that unseen yet distinctly felt wave of Divine presence. No one spoke for awhile. Henry Maxwell, standing there where the faces lifted their intense gaze into his, felt what he had already felt before, a strange setting back out of the nineteenth century into the first, when the disciples had all things in common, and a spirit of fellowship must have flowed freely between them such as the First church of Raymond had never known. How much had his church membership known of this fellowship in daily interests before this little company had begun to do as Jesus would do? It was with difficulty that he thought of his present age and its surroundings. The same thought was present with all the rest also. There was an unspoken comradeship such as they had never known. It was present with them while Virginia was speaking and during the silence that followed. If it had been defined by any one of them, it would perhaps have taken some such shape as this:

"If I shall in the course of my obedience to my promise meet with loss or trouble in the world, I can depend upon the genuine, practical sympathy and fellowship of any other Christian in this room who has with me made the pledge to do all things by the rule, 'What would Jesus do?'"

All this the distinct wave of spiritual power expressed. It had the effect that a physical miracle may have had on the early disciples in giving them a feeling of confidence in their Lord that helped them to face loss and martyrdom with courage and even joy.

Before they went away this time there were several confidences like those of Edward Norman. Some of the young men told of the loss of places owing to their honest obedience to their promise. Alexander Powers spoke briefly of the fact that the commission had promised to take action at the earliest date possible.

He was already at his old work of telegraphy. It was a significant fact that since his action in resigning his position neither his wife nor daughter had appeared in public. No one but himself knew the bitterness of that family estrangement and misunderstanding of the higher motive. Yet many of the disciples present in the meeting carried similar burdens. There were things which they could not talk about. Henry Maxwell, from his knowledge of his church people, could almost certainly know that obedience to this pledge had produced in the hearts of families separation of sympathy and even the introduction of enmity and hatred. Truly, "a man's foes are they of his own household" when the rule of Jesus is obeyed by some and disobeyed by others. Jesus is a great divider of life. One must walk either parallel with him or directly across his path.

But more than any other feeling at this meeting rose the tide of fellowship for one another. Henry Maxwell watched it, trembling for its climax, which he knew was not yet reached. When it was, where would it lead them? He did not know, but he was not unduly alarmed about it, only he watched with growing wonder the results of that simple promise as it was being obeyed in these various lives. Those results were already being felt all over the city. Who could measure their influence at the end of the year?

One practical form of this fellowship showed itself in the assurances which Edward Norman received in support of his paper. There was a general flocking toward him when the meeting closed, and the response to his appeal for help from the Christian disciples in Raymond was fully understood by this little company. The value of such a paper in the homes and in behalf of good citizenship, especially at the present crisis in the city, could not be measured. It remained to be seen what could be done now that the paper was endowed so liberally. But it still was true, as Edward Norman insisted, that money alone could not make the paper a power. It must receive the support and sympathy of the Christians in Raymond before it could be counted as one of the great Christian forces of the city.

The week that followed this Sunday meeting was one of great excitement in Raymond. It was the week of the election. Donald Marsh, true to his promise, took up his cross and bore it manfully, but with shuddering, with groans and even tears, for his deepest conviction was touched, and he tore himself out of the scholarly seclusion of years with pain and anguish that cost him more than anything he had ever done as a follower of Christ. With him were a few of the college professors who had made the pledge in the First church. Their experience and suffering were the same as the president's, for their isolation from all the duties of citizenship had been the same. The same was also true of Henry Maxwell, who plunged into the horror of this fight against whisky and its allies with a sickening dread of each day's encounter with it. Never had he borne such a cross. He staggered under it, and in the brief intervals when he came in from the work and sought the quiet of his study for rest the sweat broke out on his forehead, and he felt the actual terror of one who marches into unseen, unknown horrors. Looking back on it afterward, he was amazed at his experience. He was not a coward, but he felt a dread that any man of his habits feels when confronted suddenly with a duty which carries with it the doing of certain things so unfamiliar that the actual details connected with it betray his ignorance and fill him with the shame of humiliation.

When Saturday, the election day, came, the excitement rose to its height. An attempt was made to close all the saloons. It was partly successful, but there was a great deal of drinking going on all day. The Rectangle boiled and heaved and cursed and turned its worst side out to the gaze of the city. Gray had continued his meetings during the week, and the results had been even greater than he had dared to hope. When Saturday came, it seemed to him that the crisis in his work had been reached. The Holy Spirit and the satan of rum seemed to rouse up to a desperate conflict. The more interest in the meetings the more ferocity and vileness outside. The saloon men no longer concealed their feelings. Open threats of violence were made. Once during the week Gray and his little company of helpers were assailed with missiles of various kinds as they left the tent late at night. The police sent down special protection, and Virginia and Rachel were always under the protection of Rollin or Dr. West. Rachel's power in song had not diminished. Rather with each night it seemed to add to the intensity and reality of the Spirit's presence.

Gray had at first hesitated about having a meeting that night, but he had a simple rule of action and was always guided by it. The Spirit seemed to lead them to continue the meeting, and so Saturday night he went on, as usual.

The excitement all over the city had reached its climax when the polls closed at 6 o'clock. Never had there been such a contest in Raymond. The issue of license or no license had never been an issue under such circumstances. Never before had such elements in the city been arrayed against each other. It was an unheard of thing that the president of Lincoln college, the pastor of the First church, the dean of the cathedral, the professional men living in the fine houses on the boulevard, should come personally into the wards and by their presence and their example represent the Christian conscience of the place. The ward politicians were astonished at the sight. However, their astonishment did not prevent their activity. The fight grew hotter every hour, and when 6 o'clock came neither side could have guessed at the result with any certainty. Every one agreed that never had there been such an election in Raymond, and both sides awaited the announcement of the result with the greatest interest.

It was after 10 o'clock when the meeting at the tent was closed. It had been a strange and in some respects a remarkable meeting. Henry Maxwell had come down again at Gray's request. He was completely worn out by the day's work, but the appeal from Gray came to him in such a form that he did not feel able to resist it. Donald Marsh was also present. He had never been to the Rectangle, and his curiosity was aroused from what he had noticed of the influence of the evangelist in the worst part of the city. Dr. West and Rollin had come with Rachel and Virginia, and Loreen, who had staid with Virginia, was present near the organ, in her right mind, sober, with a humility and dread of herself that kept her as close to Virginia as a faithful dog. All through the service Loreen sat with bowed head, weeping a part of the time, sobbing when Rachel sang the song, "I was a wandering sheep," clinging with almost visible, tangible yearning to the one hope she had found, listening to prayer and appeal and confession all about her like one who was a part of a new creation, yet fearful of her right to share in it fully.

The tent had been crowded. As on some other occasions, there was more or less disturbance on the outside of the tent. This had increased as the night advanced, and Gray thought it wise not to prolong the service. Once in awhile a shout as from a large crowd swept into the tent. The returns from the election were beginning to come in, and the Rectangle had emptied every lodging house, den and hovel into the streets.

In spite of the distractions, Rachel's singing kept the crowd in the tent from dissolving. There were a dozen or more conversions. Finally the crowd became restless, and Gray closed the service, remaining a little while with the converts.

Rachel, Virginia, Loreen, Rollin and the doctor, President Marsh and Henry Maxwell went out together, intending to go down to their usual waiting place for their car. As they came out of the tent they at once were aware that the Rectangle was trembling on the edge of a drunken riot, and as they pushed through the gathering mobs in the narrow streets they began to realize that they themselves were objects of great attention.

"There he is, the bloke in the tall hat. He's the leader!" shouted a rough voice. President Marsh, with his erect, commanding figure, was conspicuous in the little company.

"How has the election gone? It is too early to know the result yet, isn't it?" He asked the question aloud, and a man answered: "They say second and third wards have gone almost solid for no license. If that is so, the whisky men have been beaten."

"Thank God! I hope it is true," exclaimed Henry Maxwell. "Marsh, we are in danger here. Do you realize our situation? We ought to get the ladies to a place of safety."

"That is true," said Marsh gravely. At that moment a shower of stones and other missiles fell over them. The narrow street and sidewalk in front of them were completely choked with the worst elements of the Rectangle.

"This looks serious," said Maxwell. With Marsh and Rollin and Dr. West he started to go forward through the small opening, Virginia, Rachel and Loreen following close and sheltered by the men, who now realized something of their danger. The Rectangle was drunk and enraged. It saw in Daniel Marsh and Henry Maxwell two of the leaders in the election contest who had perhaps robbed them of their beloved saloon.

"Down with the aristocrats!" shouted a shrill voice, more like a woman's than a man's.

A shower of mud and stones followed. Rachel remembered afterward that Rollin jumped directly in front of her and received on his head and chest a number of blows that would probably have struck her if he had not shielded her from them.

And just then, before the police reached them, Loreen darted forward at the side of Virginia and pushed her aside, looking up and screaming. It was so sudden that no one had time to catch the face of the one who did it. But out of the upper window of a room over the very saloon where Loreen had come out a week before some one had thrown a heavy bottle. It struck Loreen on the head, and she fell to the ground. Virginia turned and instantly kneeled down by her. The police officers by that time had reached the little company.

Donald Marsh raised his arm and shouted over the howl that was beginning to rise from the wild beast in the mob.

"Stop! You've killed a woman!"

The announcement partly sobered the crowd.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

"Is it true?" Henry Maxwell asked as Dr. West kneeled on the other side of Lorenn, supporting her.

"She's dying!" said Dr. West briefly

Loreen opened her eyes and smiled at Virginia. Virginia wiped the blood from her face and then bent over and kissed her. Loreen smiled again, and the next moment her soul was in pure bliss.

And yet this is only one woman out of thousands killed by this drink devil Crowd back now, ye sinful men and women in this filthy street! Let this august dead form be borne through your stupefied sobered ranks. She was one of your own children. The Rectangle bad stumped the image of the beast on her. Thank him who died for sinners that the other image of a new soul now shines ont of her pale clay. Crowd back! Give them room! Let her pass reverently, followed and surrounded by the weeping, awestruck company of Christians. Ye killed her, ye drunken murderers! And yet, and yet, O Christian America, who killed this woman? Stand back! Silence there! A woman has been killed! Who? Loreen, child of the streets—poor, drunken, vile sinner! O Lord God, how long? Yes: the saloon killed her—that is, the voters in Christian America who license the saloon And the judgment day out-lasts the declare who was the murderer of Loreen

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Tesla's Colorado Den.

While Marconi, the Italian, is telegraphing to Galileo without wires, Nikola Tesla is working away at his pandemonium den in the foot of the Rocky mountains, surrounded by miles of wire coils which emit messages unfelt into the air from the lofty top of Pike's peak. The Pittsburg Dispatch had a few days ago a highly interesting account of a visit that Mr. Robert C. Hall paid Tesla, who told him, "Before another year wireless telegraphy will be in actual use between New York and Paris." The Montezegin is located 7,000 feet above sea level while immediately back of him the mountains rise to a height of 14,000 feet. He went to Colorado Springs to get room and a clear atmosphere. Tesla's curious inventions must afford him sufficient income for his present work, as he has refused large offerings from his admirers. Mrs. Phoebe Hearst is said to have placed a large part of her fortune at his disposal, but it was declined with thanks.

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

Dec. 174, Minn., Nov. 22.
WHEAT—Cash No 1 hard, 69½; No. 1 Northern, 68½; No. 2 Northern, 65½; No 1 Tr. Arrive—No 1 hard, 69½; No 1 northern, 68½; December, 67½; May, 69½@69¾.
FLAX—To arrive, 1.29; December 1.29; May, 1.30.

Minneapolis Wheat.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 21.
WHEAT—In store—No 1 hard, 70c; No 1 northern, 68½@68¾c; No 2 Northern 65½@66½c. To arrive—No 1 hard, 69½; No 1 northern, 68½; December, 67½; May, 69½@69¾.

Sioux City Live Stock.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 21.
HOGS—Market strong. Range of prices, $3 10@3 40
CATTLE—Market steady

St. Paul Union Stock Yards.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 21.
HOGS—Market opened steady with yesterday. Range of prices, $3 35@3 47½
CATTLE—Butcher stock firm. There is a fine and only a few loads good cattle here

Sheep ranged at $1 00@4 70 for stockers; $4 40@5 10 for cows and heifers; $4 75@5 10 for bulls; $2 75@4 10 for heifers; calves, $4 00@6 00 steers, 10 to 60

SHEEP—Market easier.

Sales ranged at $2 25@3 00 for sheep; $4 75@5 10 for lambs.

Receipts: Cattle, 1,000; calves, 300; hogs, 600; sheep, 1,200.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.
CATTLE—Market steady

Sales ranged at $4 40@4 90 for sayers; $3 90@4 00 for cows and heifers; $3 60@4 45 for stockers and feeders; $4 10@5 10 for Texas steers; $4 00@4 75 for Westerns.

HOGS—Market strong to made higher

Sales ranged at $3 30@3 45 for mixed and heavy; $3 00@3 40 for good heavy; $3 40@3 50 for rough heavy; $3 40@3 60 for light. Bulk of sales, $3 40@3 47½

SHEEP—Market steady

Sales ranged at $4 75@4 85 for sheep; $4 00@5 25 for lambs

Receipts: Cattle, 3,000; hogs, 29,000; sheep, 14,000

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.
WHEAT—December, 67¼@67¾c; May, 71¾c
CORN—November, 39½c; December 39½@39¾c; January, 37½c; May, 40¾c
OATS—November, 29¾c; December, 30c; May, 34¾c
PORK November, $8.10; December $8.10; January, $8.07½; May, $8.60
FLAX—Cash, Northwestern, $1 40¾; Southwestern, $1 39½@1 40; December, May, $1 39
BUTTER—Creameries, 19@25c; dairy 14@22c.
POULTRY—Dressed chickens, 6@7½c; turkeys, 9@10c.
EGGS—Fresh, 18c.

Crookston Market.

Corrected Thursday morning, Nov. 23.
WHEAT—No. 1 Hard 66 No. 1 Northern 65 No. 2 Northern 62.
OATS—25c.
BARLEY—24 to 30c.
FLAX—1.25.
POTATOES—20 to 30c.
BUTTER—20c.
COTTON—Best 5c.
ONIONS—50c
BEANS—1.20 to 2.00
HAY—Baled $5.00, loose $4.00.
HOGS—3c to 3½ c.
CATTLE—2½ to 3½ live weight, 5½ to 6½c dressed beef.
CALVES—5c.
CHICKENS—10c.
TURKEYS—10c
HIDES—5 to 6c.
WOOL—18c, to 16
FLOUR—2.00 per cwt.
BRAN—80.00 per ton.
SHORTS—42.00 per ton.

Storm Sash.

We have a complete stock—and our prices are right. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company.

GO FURTHER SOUTH

REPORTED MOVEMENT OF BOERS IS CONFIRMED.

Have Reached a Point Between Estcourt and Harbon and Cut Off Communication Between the Two Points. Brief Official Dispatches From Ladysmith Make No Mention of a Victory.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The announcement from Durban that commentation with Estcourt is interrupted seems to confirm the belief that a Boer commando has established itself at Willow Grange or near the Mooi river and has cut the telegraph wires. Never heless, whatever demure news the British commanders may have obtained from the scouts of the disposition of the Boer commands in Natal and the conditions of the beleaguered garrisons particularly, nothing has been allowed to develop for the public information. It is certain that, owing to the heavy work of defortification and entraining at Durban, the preparations for the advance by the relief force are in no wise so advanced as has been supposed. This may also be due to the necessity of pushing stores and provisions to the front in needful quantities before the troops are sent.

British Reoccupy Nauswpoort.

The reoccupation of Nauswpoort is good news for the British. It is not known here from what point the troops came, but it is presumed they were from De Aar, in which event it will not be long before Stormberg also is reoccupied. Nauswpoort commands the gap in the Kikvorsberge, the last strong fighting position south of Orange river, and was admirably suited to Boer tactics.

Colonel Royston's dispatch from Ladysmith hardly disposes of all reports of another great British victory there last Wednesday.

It is announced from Nnuwpoort that the Boers are repairing the bridge previously destroyed by them. This, according to The Cape Times, is because the Boer invasion of Cape Colony was premature. The same authority asserts that no defense of Bloemfontein is in contemplation.

OFFICIAL DISPATCHES.

War Office Makes Public Two Unimportant Cablegrams.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The war office has made public two dispatches from General Buller at Cape Town. The first had been received from General Clery. It is dated Nov. 20, and announces that three privates were wounded the previous day at Mooi river. The second was from General Baden-Powell, dated at Mafeking, Nov. 8, saying:

"All well here. We have had a few successful sorties. Our loss is 2 officers and 15 men killed and 4 officers and 37 men wounded. The enemy's loss is heavy. Its numbers are decreasing; but his guns remain and shell us, keeping out of the range of our small guns. Have had no news from the outside since Oct. 30."

MAY MOVE THIS WEEK.

British Ahead Ready for the Advance on Ladysmith.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The war correspondent of The Standard at Estcourt telegraphs as follows:

"No actual confirmation can be obtained of the report that General Buller has moved from his position in front of Ladysmith. Our patrols and signal department secured about a dozen that several small commandoes are moving southward. There is a growing belief here that we will move toward Ladysmith about the end of this week."

NEWS FROM PRETORIA.

Joubert's Official Report Contains Little of Importance.

PRETORIA, Nov. 22.—Monday's report from General Joubert's headquarters, which was presented to the Transvaal council of war, says:

"Heavy gun firing was heard in the direction of Estcourt on Saturday and continuous rifle firing is proceeding south of Ladysmith.

"A small sortie from Ladysmith this morning was repulsed. The French Transvaal heavy guns hred a number of shells into the town this morning."

SITUATION UNCHANGED.

British Force at Ladysmith Maintaining Its Position.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Daily Mail publishes the following dispatch from Pietermaritzburg:

An official telegram from Ladysmith dated Nov. 18 says the garrison is maintaining its position. A Boer force is reported near Olston, about a day's ride from here.

JONES TO ISSUE THE CALL.

Democratic Executive Committee Adjourns Without Fixing a Date.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—The Democratic national executive committee after a brief session adjourned sine die to meet at the call of Vice Chairman Johnson. It was practically agreed among the members that meetings of the executive committee will be held every 30 days and no session will probably be held before January.

The exact matter of place and date of the national committee meeting was placed in the hands of Chairman Jones, who will issue the call. He refused to state when the meeting will be called, but some date in January is favored, with Washington as the place of meeting.

Senator Thurston Marries.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The marriage of Senator John M. Thurston of Nebraska, and Miss Lolo Furnan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Furnan of the 1426 Q street, was solemnized at the residence of the bride's parents. The wedding ceremony was attended only by the intimate relatives of the contracting parties and one or two immediate friends.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Fire at Glyndon destroyed three saloon buildings.

The state is considering appeal of the Iron Range land grant suit.

The detailed programme for the State Teachers' association has been issued.

T. C. Croft, the oldest Odd Fellow in the country, died in Minneapolis Sunday.

Owing to the high price of coal the Minneota roller mills will use flax straw for fuel.

St. Paul public improvements this year amount to nearly half a million dollars.

Secretary Hitchcock has extended Chippewa Commissioner Hall's official tenure to Jan. 1.

Judge Brown has been appointed to fill the unexpired term of Judge Buck on the supreme bench of Minnesota.

Repayment has been denied to lasting depositors of the St. Paul Savings bank, recently closed by Examiner Pope.

Judge Lochren has rendered a decision in which he holds the Grindelwald law valid so far as federal conflict is concerned.

Wisconsin defeated Minnesota in Saturday's football game, 19 to 6. O'Dea's remarkable kicking is said to have been responsible for this result.

A mass meeting in Minneapolis declared in favor of home rule, and the district court will be asked to appoint a committee to draft a new city charter.

George Matthew of Bine Earth City was relieved of $87 by a brace of highwaymen near the city hall on Bridge square, Minneapolis Matthew is an old soldier

According to the report of the health department there were 106 deaths and 284 births in St. Paul during October. The death rate for the city during the year is figured at 0.38 per 1,000.

Warden Wolfer, whose successor as warden of the state prison has been appointed, was made the recipient of an elegant diamond ring, the gift of the employes and officers of the prison

The members of Company A, of the Fourteenth Minnesota volunteers, held a reunion at Duluth Saturday evening. It is the first anniversary of their muster out. There was a musical and literary programme.

A Minneapolis chiropractist found a gold bill and turned it over to the landlord of the hotel. He failed to find the owner and rewarded the girl by giving her $20. She objected, brought suit and recovered the $100.

The Protestant Hospital association of Duluth, St. Luke's, has accepted plans for a $80,000 hospital to be built of fire proof material on the separate system, and will begin excavations in the spring. More than half the cash is on hand.

The state normal school board has accepted plans for the Duluth normal, for which nearly $80,000 is available, and bids will soon be asked for its construction. The building will be such a modification of the original $100,000 plan that it may be added to as necessity requires and funds are available.

Wisconsin bolters are much agitated over the fact that a Minneapolis man is selling brand there at 3 cents a loaf, 2 cents under their price, and is getting a good deal of trade in consequence. They held a meeting and decided to meet the cut and work together to discourage the sale of the foreign product.

William O'Brien of St. Paul and Samuel McClure of Stillwater have purchased the Murphy & Dorr tract of pine lands on the St. Louis river, estimated to contain 125,000,000 feet of pine. The deal is one the largest closed in this state for some time, the purchase price amounting about $900,000.

In a decision sent Insurance Commissioner O'Shaughnessy by Attorney General Douglas and in reply of inquiries of the former the latter holds that all insurance companies that are members of the so-called, Western Union association are illegal which adopted resolutions purporting to bind them to a certain percentage agreement on rates or the suppression of competition and is unlawful.

The supreme court, Justice Collins writing his opinion, has ruled that a tax sale is not final under chapter 33 of the last session laws without notice to the former owner to redeem. This chapter 33 is an amendment of section 1,654 of the general statutes and says nothing about redemption but offers an absolute deed. But section 1,654 had been modified by a law of 1895, which is not repealed by this amendment of the original section.

MAY HEAL AT WILL.

Nothing in Minnesota Laws to Prevent Practice of Christian Science.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 22.—According to the ruling of Judge Elliott the practice of so-called Christian Science healing does not come under the general statute regulating the practice of medicine in this state. This view was given public expression in an oral decision allowing the demurrer to the indictments in the cases of the state against Albert E. Meyers and Mary Brookings, who were charged with practicing medicine without a license. The indictment was based on a charge of malpractice made in connection with the treatment and subsequent death of a child in the Kearns family in North Minneapolis, suffering from diphtheria.

Declared Dividends.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The comptroller of the currency has declared dividends in favor of the creditors of insolvent banks as follows: Five per cent, Grand Forks National bank, Grand Forks N. D.; three per cent, Dakota National bank, Sioux Falls, S. D.

GRAND GIFT DISTRIBUTION

The Most Remarkable Offer Ever Made by a Reliable Concern.

ERTON JOURNAL: Please announce that for a limited time we will give absolutely free to every married lady sending name, address and a two cent stamp for postage, an elegant triple-silver-plated Sugar Shell Such goods sell in jewelry stores at 75 cents each. This is the most expensive advertising we have ever done, but it will mate us thousands of friends and permanent customers. There is nothing to pay except, a two cent stamp as a sort of guaranty of good faith. The Home Furnisher, our own monthly publication, showing our line of high grade silverware and furniture, will also be sent free. But one Sugar Shell to a family.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO.,
Morgan and Harrison Streets, Chicago. [28-33]

Especially for Ladies.

Are those splendid compartment cars on the Burlington Limited from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago. All the comforts of home including an electric heater for your curling iron. When you send for a railroad ticket, insist on having it over the Burlington.

For Sale

One lot in Jerome's addition and two lots in Sampson's addition. If you want a good lot at a low figure, ask to see them. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

For Sale

A good farm of 320 acres, well cultivated, has a good house and barn and close to Crookston markets. Can be bought right. For particulars call at the JOURNAL office.

For Sale

A desirable house and lot with barn This house is in first class condition and well located. The price is $1,700 and it is a bargain. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

The Finest Limited Train.

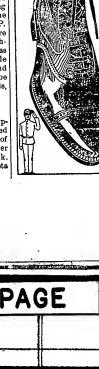
From St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago is the Burlington electric lighted and steam heated, Every comfort that other trains have and some that no others have. Remember this when buying railroad tickets.

Call on L. N. Smith, Agent Soutor when in need of harness goods. He carries a good supply and does work cheap and neatly.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

"I had been a sufferer for many years from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. M. Wilcox Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine. In the spring of 1897 my husband induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles, and then stopped for several weeks as I felt so much better, but still I was not completely cured. I commenced taking it again and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained about ten pounds in weight and one thousand pounds of comfort, for I am a new woman once more and your advice and your 'Favorite Prescription' is the cause of it, coupled with the 'Pleasant Pellets' which are not to be dispensed with. I took eight bottles of the 'Prescription' the last time, making fourteen in all, and will not take any more unless you so advise, for I do not see as I need it."

makes weak women STRONG, sick women WELL.



It is well known that

Kellogg Johnson & Co's Shoes

are the, limit of excellence in style, comfort, material and work manship

You will be pleased by trying a pair.

KELLOGG, JOHNSON & CO. FARGO, N. D.

Cordova Wax Candles

Nothing else adds so much to the cheer of the home room or vestibule as a fragile pure gut light from CORDOVA Candles. Nothing will compliment more to the appearance of the dining table than a box or dozen. The best decorative candles for the simplest or the most elaborate function—for colored candles to match the china and the most delicate shades of

STANDARD OIL CO.
Sold by dealers everywhere and sold everywhere.

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture

.....AND.....

Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a house... CROOKSTON, MINN.

S. C. Johnson's

Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale	35c
Oats, per bushel	20c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs	70c
Shorts, 100 lbs	65c
Bran, 100 lbs	60c
Shelled Corn, per bu	40c
Condition Powder, per pkg	25c
Shorts, per ton	$12.00
Bran, per ton	11.00

Cedar Posts from 15c to 25c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

TO THE ORIENT

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

AND

Nippon Yusen Kaisha

Japan Mail Steamship Co.

Magnificent Steamships Erom Seattle.

MONTHLY

FOR SALE.

Imported Yorkshire Swine and Shropshire Sheep at reasonable prices.

For full particulars address

A. W. EDSON,

Austin, Minn.

Farmers' Tribune

The Twice-a-Week Edition of the Minneapolis Tribune

WANTS

100,000 SUBSCRIBERS

And is willing to pay you to help get them. It will give the most liberal pay ever offered to persons who will try—experience is not necessary.

Write a postal for subscription circular and sample paper.

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota.

In Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Thomas A. Harris, Crookston, in the County of Polk and State aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 18th day of November, A. D. 1899, the said Thomas A. Harris was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned, referee in bankruptcy at the City of Crookston, in the County of Polk in said district on the 1st day of December, A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Dated Nov. 18, 1899 OLE J. VAULE, Referee in Bankruptcy.

DeFOREST BUCKLEY, Attorney for Bankrupt, Crookston, Minn. [3-5]

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss. In Probate Court. Special Term. Nov. 16, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Hasken B. Kettleson, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of Hasken B. Kettleson, deceased, late of the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, being granted to Ole Kettleson.

It is Ordered, That on the 22nd day of December and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the office of the probate court of said county, for examination and allowance, at a special term then

It is Further Ordered, That the

22nd day of May, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m., at a special term of said probate court, to be held at the probate office in Crookston in said county, be and the same is hereby appointed for the time and place when and where the said probate court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it Is Further Ordered, That notice of said hearing be given to all persons and persons interested, in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston, this 16th day of November, 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[3-25]

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss. In Probate Court. Special Term. Nov. 17, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Hasken B. Kettleson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Bertha Jorgenson of the county of Polk representing among other things that Hasken B. Kettleson late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on or about the 3rd day of August A. D. 1899, in the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of the County at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county and that he left no widow or said deceased and praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Jacob J. Ink, grantee.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court, on Friday

24th day of November A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock a. m., at the probate office, in Crookston Invalid county.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county and county.

Dated at Crookston the 24th day of October A. D. 1899. By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[30-34]

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three Hundred Forty-two and 10-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Isabella L. Chilback and John Chilback, her husband, mortgagors, to George Q. Erskine, mortgagee, bearing date the 5th day June 1895, and filed for record and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota, on the 6th day of June 1895, at 11 o'clock a. m. in book 61 of mortgages, on page 483 and no other or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, and mentioned.

Lots numbered one (1) two (2) three (3) and four (4) of block number eleven (11) in Jerome's addition to the village (now city) of Crookston, according to the recorded plat thereof as on file in office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston in said County and State, on the

5th day of December 1899,

at ten o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt, of Fifteen hundred forty-two and 45-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars, attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case a foreclosure thereof, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated Oct. 5th A. D. 1899.
GEORGE Q. ERSKINE,
Mortgagee.
A. A. MILLER,
Attorney,
Crookston, Minnesota. [3-38]

Final Proof.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., November 8, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on

December 15, 1899,

viz: Anton M. Larson, H. E. 1682 for the sw¼ section 6 township 153 range 48.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole P. Stokke, Charles Thoreson, Ole Simonson, all of Crookston, and Thor Thompson, of Eldred.

SYLVESTER PETERSON, Register

[31-37]

DEFECTIVE PAGE

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

GARY

Gary is on the boom.

K. Lee, of Ada, was in Gary last Tuesday.

A new brick bank building is in course of erection.

A Larson has erected a new barn. 16x30 for his stock.

Moe & Larson shipped a car load of cattle last Monday.

A wedding in sight. Who is the lucky one again now?

Moe & Larson have made a survey of their new addition to Gray.

Dr. and Mrs. Kjelland, of Ada, were the guests of Hotel Dewey Wednesday last.

E. Braaten, of Bagley, arrived here last Friday to visit relatives and friends.

B. K. Strand has built a new lumber shed 50x80 and a two story hardware store.

Gary will have a harness shop soon, also a drug store and doctor. That's just what we need.

The POLK COUNTY JOURNAL is one of our leading papers now. Boys subscribe for the JOURNAL.

Nelsan Bros. have a new restaurant and butcher shop combined and they are doing a good business.

H. J. Vangen drove out west last Sunday. What time he returned we don't know, still he is back.

Rishoff Bros. & Garden merchants, have built a substantial store building, 24x70 two stories high.

Wermager Bros. have much better accommodations in their new machine shed, 16x50, than they had before.

John Lien has a new restaurant building and in consequence his patronage will deservedly increase.

J. J. Lynch, the station agent, built a five-roomhouse this summer and expects next spring to put up an addition.

A grand ball was given at the Gary hall last Wednesday evening. Supper served at "Dewey." A good time is reported.

Andrew Gjerde has built a neat looking butcher shop 16x24 that he may be the better able to serve his customers.

G. Benson has a new boarding house, Alfred Thompson a new barn and Mr. Johnson a good sized dwelling house and barn.

The new Hotel Dewey on Main street is a handsome building, 30x40, with 22 foot posts. N. A. Natwick is the genial proprietor.

Miss Stenseth, of Hellberg, and Miss Ludvika Stetebak, of Crookston, attended the Ladies' Society auction at the Gary church last Saturday.

A week ago last Thursday occurred the wedding of Miss Alma Johnson to Halvor Lee. About 180 guests were there. A very good time is reported.

P. P. Overgard has a handsome new livery barn, 30x60 with 18 foot posts, which is now finished. It will hold 34 horses, besides carriages, hay, etc.

D. H. Aamoth has completed his new residence in the north part of the village. It is a handsome structure 16x28, with an addition 14x16 and 12 foot posts.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Dahl, Miss Julia Aamoth and Oscar Peterson drove up from Twin Valley last Sunday evening to spend a few hours at the Hotel Dewey.

The Great Western Elevator Company during the past summer built a fine large elevator here with all the latest improvements. E. J. Brown is the man who handles the grain.

Tony Hendricks has an attractive store in which will be found all kinds of chinaware and Christmas toys. He is also the agent for the Jewel Nursery Company. You will make no mistake by calling and seeing him.

BEMIDJI.

Jess Scarrot went to Crookston Sunday.

Mrs. F. Dudley has been ill for the last two weeks with la grippe.

The new county jail and sheriff's residence were completed last week.

Russ Whipple was down from Solway Tuesday looking up his interests here.

The volunteer firemen of this place are fitting up club rooms in the city hall.

Mrs. H. Gates is visiting her daughter Mrs. F. W. Rhoda, this week.

Mrs. McCraig is visiting friends and relatives in Princeton, Minn., this week.

Dudley & Nolan have opened up their new hotel and restaurant on Minnesota avenue.

Mrs. Clifford and son Willie, departed for an extended visit at Ashland, Wis., last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roberts returned Tuesday after a six weeks visit with relatives and friends in Michigan.

Black eyes and sore thumbs are in order since the organization of the high school athletic association here.

E. C. Paul, who has been visiting in Wisconsin for the past two weeks, returned Saturday and resumed work in Mayo's drug store.

We are glad to announce that Mrs. Ted Smith has almost recovered from the effects of a sprained foot, which she received about two weeks ago.

F. W. Rhoda will have, when completed, one of the finest dwellings in Bemidji. It will be supplied with steam heat, electric lights and waterworks.

Mrs. Newman came from Fargo, N. D., Friday. She will reside here with her husband, Dr. D. B. Newman, who is a well known physician in these parts.

BELTRAMI

E. H. Myram from Ada was in town Tuesday transacting business.

The new Union church is being finished inside and when completed will be second to none.

R. O. Finken started for the Twin Cities last Monday evening with two car loads of fat cattle.

Beltrami boys are talking hand pretty loud, but it is a question whether or not they have enough wind.

A. A. Njelde, our young and enterprising blacksmith, is remodeling and enlarging his shop. Quite an improvement.

P. Muffle, one of our enterprising farmers, has sold 160 acres of land in North Dakota and planned the proceeds in land near Beltrami.

A. P. Hill, our machine man, has received two car loads of machinery for winter and spring trade. He also is doing a sung little business selling coal and wood.

EUCLID.

Robert Teal and family spent Saturday in Crookston shopping.

The Purvis farm is buying up quite a number of cattle and deborning them at once as they arrive on the place. No horns for Joe.

Miss Lu. Tiedt is visiting with her sister Mrs. Biever after a prolonged visit at Wadena and other points.

Mrs. Hunter, of Mallory, visited her son this week. Mr. Hunter is agent here for the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Co.

Mrs. J. S. Chapin and son Harry took the Flyer for Minneapolis Tuesday evening, where Harry will attend school the balance of the winter.

E. B. Ballou and wife took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Misner at Crookston on Sunday. E. B. took the opportunity to have Sam Rosenthal fit him out with a new suit of clothes. They fit.

Quite a commotion was caused last week by some cattle being put in the pound. It is a pity that some people will be so careless in letting their cattle run loose and pay no attention to their whereabouts. It always makes more or less hard feeling which is to be deplored.

FISHER.

Albert Arness, of Eldred, Minn., was in town Tuesday.

F. H. Bey and Ed Everson visited Crookston Sunday.

Everybody got a turkey Saturday that could hit the Bull's eye.

Peter Sullivan, of Key West, was on our streets Saturday.

James Hanson, of Crookston, was visiting friends here Sunday.

E. L. Mains is moving his household goods to Crookston where he will make his home in the future.

The W. R. C. club drove out to A. A. Merrill's Thursday evening to see the shooting stars, but they failed to appear.

The advance agent for the American Kinetograph Exhibition company was here Tuesday billing the town for an entertainment here Thursday evening.

C. B. Merrill has something new in novelty of waterproof shoe polish. He polished about 50 pairs of shoes Friday last, also sold all the polish he had on hand, but says he has plenty more coming. He is a little black in the face but he is the first and only boot black in our town.

ULEN.

H. M. Webster has erected a handsome residence 24x24.

Andrew Olson has built a new, large two story house, 24x28, in the eastern part of town.

Setter & Harsha have erected a new wagon shop where they can take care of their ever increasing trade.

C. Paulson, the land agent, has put up a fine large residence, 24x26, two stories, and also a neat looking barn, 16x22.

Mellum & Hogenson are prominent blacksmiths of the village and the large amount of work they do shows that the machinery and horses around here are kept in motion. These anvil pounders are deserving of the patronage they receive.

John Peters, who moved into the village about a month ago, has his new two story residence 16x24 with addition 14 feet square, nearly completed.

1. B. Detlaff, who has been in the hardware business here for four years has built up a large trade. He makes a specialty of tinwork, repairing, etc. Give him a call when you are in town.

Did you see the bear Charlie?

F. Hall from Twin Valley visited in Ulen Sunday and Monday.

Charlie Snyder and family from Fertile visited with Mr. and Mrs. Cook and friends Sunday.

Sixty-three loads of wheat and flax were marketed in Ulen Tuesday Nov. 21. Who says Ulen is dead?

The Ulen sports had their skill tried Sunday by trying to shoot a couple of thanksgiving turkeys. Two turkeys seemed to be all that could be bought for the event, and the boys showed their excellent shooting qualities, so that the two turkeys only lasted from 1 o'clock until 5 o'clock. Well done boys, you couldn't do as well again if you tried.

GENTILLY.

Arthur Benoit and daughter are quite sick with typhoid fever.

Jeffery Gendron leaves for St. Paul Monday night. Jeffery has been visiting his brother Henry Gendron and friends.

Charley Trepanier and Miss Lilly Peltier, and E. Montreal and Miss Edwardinn Magre were married at Gentilly Tuesday morning. Rev. Father Theillon preformed the ceremony.

Jos. Laframbroise Sr., will complete the ditch between the town of Gentilly and Louisville in the near future. The ditch is to be n mile long, 16 feet wide at the top, four feet at the bottom and an average depth of three feet.

Charles Martel lost a fine colt seven months old last Monday. The colt was frightened by dogs, and in fleeing from her pursuers, got into a wire fence cutting herself about the neck. She lived only a few minutes.

ADA.

The Great Northern has completed its dam across Long Lake.

Ray Ahler's new residence is near completion.

Alderman Volland has moved into his new residence on the east side.

Mrs. C. H. Brown entertained a number of her lady friends Tuesday evening.

Ed. Emmerson returned from his hunting trip Saturday. Two deer is his report.

Bosworth Bros. have made some long needed improvements in their opera house.

The first of a series of club dances will be held at the opera house Friday evening the 24th.

Senator Myrum is planing to spend the winter either in California or Cuba for the benefit of his health.

County Auditor Herringer has just completed some extensive improvements on his dwelling house.

The first consignment of sand and rock was hauled to the new court house site near Pfunds Park, last week.

Attorney A. O. Deland and J. J. Rue, two prominent citizens of Halstad, transacted business in Ada Tuesday.

County Treasurer Helland has moved from his farm to the county seat, and will occupy the Ramstad residence.

A petition has been presented to the council for a sewer to run from Bosworth Bros. livery barn to Herringer's corner.

The new Masonic and K. P. hall in the Hotel Ada block will be one of the finest in this part of the state when completed.

Gary is having a postoffice fight between the north and south sides, with the north side contingent in the lead, if reports are true.

The chicken pie supper at the residence of Elmore Jenkins Friday evening was well attended and a very pleasant time reported.

Dr. Stuart keeps right on with improvements at his new place along the lake. If the doctor's plans are carried out his drive-way and grounds will be something fine.

The Amboy Hall Insurance company's agent was around this week settling loses on the basis of 40 per cent. The best are none too good in this line of insurance.

Court convenes at Ada on Monday the 27th with 22 cases on the calendar, 19 civil and three criminal. One of the important civil cases to be tried this term is the test case in the Hegne-Hendrum ditch, 21 appeals having been entered.

Valentine Yager and Miss Clara Busse were married at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Busse, Wednesday, and the event celebrated with a grand dance in the evening.

Landlord Moffatt, of the Northwestern hotel is having a streak of hard luck with his flowing well. Through an attempt to clean it out the flow took "MeGinty lenve."

J. H. Harmon has accepted the position of advance agent for Prof. Brown, who is making extensive preparations to take the road with an amateur troups in the near future.

ST. HILAIRE.

Dr. Dunlop was up from Crookston Tuesday of last week.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Halvorson, on Wednesday Nov. 15, a son.

A fine little boy put in his appearance at Iver Johnson's Wednesday, Nov. 15.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Gust Olson died Friday last of bowel trouble.

The mill dam is being repaired.

Herman Nelson lost a valuable horse last week. Internal hemorrhage was the cause of death.

Osea Tway died Wednesday of last week from brain fever, after an illness of but a few days. The funeral was held on Sunday, the Odd Fellows lodge of St. Hilaire, and many of the fraternity from Thief River Falls attending.

Why would not this be a good time to improve the streets of St. Hilaire. The statement has been made that it would be a greater expense to the town to gravel the streets than it would be to pave them. Now this cannot be true. Before paving blocks can be laid the streets must of necessity be levelled, graveled and put in condition to receive the blocks, a work that alone would be of more expense to the town than simply grading up and filling in with plenty of gravel would be. With a large gravel bed but a short distance out of town, and the many idle teams at the present time it seems as though the streets could be put in a good condition at a comparatively small expense. One has but to remember the condition of our streets in the spring and early summer to see the advisability of doing something to repair them in time, and not wait till the spring rains come to make work of that sort an impossibility. and then stand around and tell how the streets will be improved as soon as the roads are in fit condition to allow of the hauling of heavy loads, etc.

Dr. Bloomburgh was called to Ringbo Friday night last.

KITTSON.

Robert Rose is building a barn on his farm.

Pete Wermager, of Russia, was in Kittson Monday.

Miss Gertie Hooper has been sewing for Mrs. Thomas Wallace the past two weeks.

O. H. Richardson was out from Crookston Monday looking after the interest of his farm.

Robert Rose was the owner of the car of wood which stood here on the track for a week.

H. W. Price drove to Stephen Saturday. Mr. Price has rented a farm of Donald Stewart near Stephen.

Mr. Newhouse arrived this morning from the southern part of the state to look after the interest of his farm.

R. E. Smith has remodeled and plastered his kitchen. Mr. Smith now has as fine a residence as there is in Kittson.

The section foreman of Carman brought down a car load of railroad ties to the Kittson farmers Monday. It was a push car.

GRAND FORKS.

Chas. Wisner is home, after a year spent in Cuba.

Miss Robinson, of St. Paul, is the guest of Mrs. S. DeCamp this week.

Art Turner and Mayor Dinnie were at Thief River Falls last Tuesday on business.

Deputy Sheriff Losey and County Attorney Holston spent Sunday in the Dual Cities.

Dr. Fawcett has a very neat little stern wheel steamboat all ready for use in the spring.

Bales & Perkins were busy Tuesday putting in plate glass in the Dacotah dining room.

The big saw mill closed down Monday night for the season, having sawed about 2,000,000 feet.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Bangs are figuring on spending the winter in Southern California.

Judge Goodison will leave in a few days for Illinois, to look up some witnesses in the case of the State vs. Patterson.

Judge Glaspel spent Sunday at the Dacotah and left for Lakota Wednesday morning, where he will hold court for Judge Fisk.

Contractor Cameron Anderson is home from Warren, where he has been building a new court house for Marshall county.

Jess Garrell, of Bemidji, transacted business in town Tuesday. Jess is to put a line of boats on the lake this coming year.

Eugene Besse will leave for Paris early in December, where he expects to visit the scenes of his childhood days and take in the Paris Exposition.

City Attorney Grover and Gus Peterson returned from Minneapolis Tuesday morning, where they put in all of the last week taking the thirty-second degree in Masonry.

Mayor Thompson, of the East Side, on Tuesday, concluded a compromise with the receiver of the Grand Forks National bank, in the sewer matter. By the terms of the agreement the city saves $600.

KEY WEST.

G. A. Dieffenbaugh called at Buffington on Saturday.

Jas. McVeety, of Marvais, visited relatives here on Friday.

Robert Chalmers went to Buffington to transact business on Saturday.

Frank G. Horton drove to Warren on Saturday to take his first step in Masonry.

G. J. Chalmers raffled off a dozen turkeys at the store of R. P. Skarstad on Wednesday.

Rev. Mr. Wholesinger, our minister, is looking for a good horse to keep over winter.

Quite an accident occurred in the church on Tuesday. Two legs dropped from under the stove when there was fire in it, but no damage was done.

Rev. Mr. Cook, of Fisher, will preach here on Monday night at 7:30. Rev. Mr. Harvey will occupy the pulpit the remainder of the week. All are invited to attend.

RED LAKE FALLS.

Red Lake Falls has 12 arc lights at present.

J. N. Nimes received a carload of apples last Saturday.

Joe Belair went to Minneapolis Tuesday on business.

L. Johnson has shipped six carloads of brick to Crookston.

Louis Seiff and Wm. Zniser dissolved partnership Monday morning.

Kruger Bros. have the largest and freshest assortment of candies in the city.

TWIN VALLEY.

C. P. Waller made a flying trip to Ulen Saturday.

P. I. Berg made a flying trip to St. Paul last Sunday evening.

N. J. Nelson, Crookston, was down here on business Tuesday.

Stud. T. Score, of Decorah, Iowa, is visiting with Rev. Dale this week.

Mrs. J. W. Meighse, of Ulen, was here visiting last Friday and Saturday.

Over one hundred pupils are now attending the Twin Valley public school.

The Noxmana Creamery, of Home Lake, held their annual meeting here Saturday.

Jonetta Dale, Walter Homelvig's bookkeeper, has been on the sick list for a few days.

Mrs. Rhode Evenvold entertained a number of Twin Valley's young people last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaugsness, of Ada, passed through here Tuesday on their way to N. E. Nelson's.

Nels Porseth with family, of Ada, passed through here last Sunday, on the way to his sister, Mrs. Evenvold.

Sam St. Piere and daughter, of White Earth, has been here visiting with O. H. Aaker a few days this week.

B. Johnson and H. Optedahl, of Viroqua, Wis., are here with the intention of making Twin Valley their future home.

John Huheck was brought before Justice Frosheneg on Tuesday being accused of burning forty tons of hay of E. Pinske.

Roland Vaugen, who has been here visiting with Mollustuea's for a couple of weeks, left Tuesday evening for Albert Lea.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Dahl, Oscar Pederson and Julia Aamuth, of this place, visited with Mrs. Dahl's sister, Mrs. Matvie, at Gary, last Sunday.

The Ladies' Aid of the Congregational church gave a Harvest Festival at Hanson's Hall last Saturday evening. The program rendered was very interesting and well prepared.

The Noxmana Quartette consisting of Messrs. Olson, Hoeger, Sorenson and Pederson were up from Lake Park last Saturday evening and sang a few selections at the Harvest Festival.

To Eastern Canada
FOR THE
Christmas Holidays.
VIA THE
Burlington Route
ONLY $40.00 TO Montreal
Going by way of St. Paul and Chicago
and return
This munmont will buy a ticket good for a three months' visit to any point in Ontario or Quebec west of Montreal. Between St. Paul and Chicago there is only one first class line, and that is the Burlington. Ask your neighbors who have traveled by that line what they think of it.
Your home ticket agent has tickets for sale via our line. Ask him for a Burlington ticket.
Dates of sale every day from December 4 to December 31 inclusive
Or write to A. L. EIDEMILLER, Trav. Pass. Agt., care Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, Man., or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 2d.
GEO. P. LYMAN,
Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., C. B. & Q. R. R., St. PAUL, MINN.

Crookston Tannery
Aug. Miller & Co.
Proprietors.
Watch this Next Week

ED. ERICKSON,
DEALER IN
All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...
Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides.
Stall fed Beef.....
.....a Specialty
SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
Historical Society

Polk County Journal

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1899 No. 34

THE PAVING SITUATION

Is Again Changed by Council Reversing Its Previous Action Anent The Law of 1895.

MAY NOT PAVE NEXT YEAR.

Eastman Nozzles' are Bought for Firemen—Some License Deposits Returned.

The city council met last Friday night with all aldermen present. The most important matter discussed and acted upon was that of paving. As the case stands now there is little or no prospect of getting paving next year unless the motion adopting the recommendation of the committee to give the contract to Mr. Killmar be reconsidered and there are only four men who voted for this motion and can, therefore, move its reconsideration and as they have been given four or five chances already to do this and have resolutely refused to do so, it certainly looks as if they were not likely to do so.

The situation was changed Friday night in this way: At the previous meeting the council voted unanimously to place the city under the law of 1895 in accordance with the provisions of which the paving could be done first and the money levied afterward and the payments might be made in five annual installments, but at this meeting that action was reconsidered and the motion to adopt that law laid on the table. The city, therefore, is now acting under the City Charter and this document expressly forbids the city comptroller to sign any contract until the money to pay for the work called for in the contract is either provided for or in the treasury. No provision of this kind has been made and can't be made until Oct. 1, 1900. Those in favor of giving the contract to Killmar claim that the council has already given the contract to him and if the contract is not executed and Killmar allowed to do the work that the latter will be able to recover damages.

The rescinding Friday night of the action of the previous meeting was doubtless occasioned by the presentation to the council of a petition, signed by almost all the property owners affected by the paving, praying the council to reconsider its action in giving contract to Killmar and again to advertise for bids. The council, therefore, in what it did, did all it could toward granting the prayer of the petitioners. All responsibility for not doing as the taxpayers wish now rests, so say those opposed to Killmar's getting the contract, with the four aldermen previously mentioned.

With the petition also came a communication from E. M. Walsh stating that in case bids were re-advertised for he would put in a bid aggregating $8,000 less than Killmar's bid that the council has acted upon.

In addition to the above proceedings the council appointed a committee to confer with Mr. Knutson, chairman of the town board of Andover, in regard to fixing the road south of the city.

The council granted more time to the owners of the old Munn property on Broadway in which to build a new sidewalk.

The men who applied for license to sell liquor in the Fifth ward, which application was rejected, had the $10 which they deposited, refunded. Ole Olson who made application for license to sell liquor at Sherman House also had part of deposit refunded.

In the matter of the case of one Fenwick, a transient, who is at one of the hospitals sick, the clerk was instructed to write to the State Board of Charities and Corrections.

Tom Morris, chief of the fire department, appeared before the council in regard to the Eastman nozzle which fire apparatus the council ordered to be bought.

Auction Sale At Farm.

On next Tuesday Dec. 5, T. H. Bjoin will sell at public auction at his farm in Andover three miles south of Crookston, number less articles of personal property, including stock, buggies, wagons, all manner of farm implements, etc. Don't forget the time and place.

Wanted.

A manager, well recommended, for the Prisco Farm. Said farm is located near Argyle, Marshall county. Applicants for this position must call with references next Monday or Tuesday evening at Hotel Crookston in this city. 49

WORD FROM LIEUT. DECKER

His Regiment on Firing Line—Life in Manila Peaceful and Delightful.

The following letter from Lieutenant Decker, who is on the firing line with the American army in the Philippines, will be eagerly read by that officer's numerous friends in and about Crookston. This city is indeed fortunate in being represented in the islands beyond the sea by such a gallant, brave and efficient officer as Lieutenant Decker has proved and will still further prove himself to be. In the Trenches, Pasay Island of Luzon, Oct. 23, 1899.

EDITOR OF JOURNAL:

Your very interesting paper followed me from Presidio, and I found it the most interesting since I ever read. Even your advertisements were attractive and made good Sunday reading, for one 9,000 miles away from home. It was like the visit of an old friend.

As I predicted when last in Crookston our regiment was the first to move, the first in the trenches and tomorrow we expect to go north to Arayat to join General Lawton, which is the fighting line in dead earnest. Long before this letter can reach you, we, the 34th Infantry volunteers will have known what bullets and cannons are. I am studying the situation but am not sufficiently informed as yet to attempt to give an opinion.

Sunday afternoon I went in to the city and saw Fashionable Manila. Another officer and myself took a two-wheeled conveyance drawn by a Filipino horse weighing from four to four hundred and fifty pounds and drove around the city, taking in the drive along the Lunata about 6:30 p. m.

The city is nicely illuminated with electricity and the Lunata is a very beautiful drive. Many very handsome turnouts and fine people were passed, but at the band stand, were collected on the circular drives, perhaps 2,000 conveyances containing officers and wives. Spanish merchants and families and the better or richer class of natives.

The native band made very fine music and the scene, with its tropical plants, beautiful flowers, elegant carriages, and brilliant and numerous electric lights, was delightful.

I could scarcely believe that we were here to quell an insurrection, but tonight (Monday) it becomes a reality for we are under orders to go to the front.

I will not attempt in the midst of such preparations to write you further. More anon.

Very Respectfully,
S. M. DECKER,
1st Lieut 34th Infantry U. S. Volunteers.

Elsewhere.

The Grand Rapids Magnet is authority for the statement that the log output for the coming winter in Northern Minnesota by all lumber concerns and contractors will be 450,000,000 feet.

Fourteen were shot this season than usual owing to the fact that there was no snow. It is reported that hundreds of these animals have been wounded but could not be tracked without snow.

W. E. Widness, of Olga, Minn., came very near being suffocated by gas one night last week at Grand Forks. On retiring for the night at the Ingalls House he turned off the gas and then turned it on again so that it would be ready for morning. It took a doctor several hours to revive him.

Vice President Taussing of the Duluth Telephone Company, entertained a party of friends at the Spaulding Hotel, Duluth, last week with a long distance telephone concert by a band in the Milwaukee Palm Garden at Milwaukee. Verily the times predicted by Bellamy in his "Looking Backward" are drawing near.

The navy department at Washington has about concluded arrangements for bringing to this country the bodies of the 166 sailors of the Maine now interred in Colon cemetery, Havana; it is now proposed to assign a warship to this duty between December and February next. The bodies will be brought to Washington and interred in the Arlington National cemetery with suitable honors.

Williston, N. D., George Purvis' town, is at present enjoying a building boom. A new courthouse and public school building, each costing upward of $10,000, are fast nearing completion, and a fine brick store and opera house building, 50 x 100 feet, is well under way. The Great Northern Railway is changing its roadbed at that place, and, putting in a twenty-stall round-house.

The Nickel Plate road will sell tickets December 23, 24, 25, 30, 31, 1899 and January 1, 1900, at rate of a fare and a third for the round trip, to any point located in Central Passenger Association territory, good returning to and including January 2, 1900. Address General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago, for particulars. Depot Van Buren St. and Pacific Ave., on Elevated Loop. 49

TAKING UP "THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN."

M. E. CHURCH ENTERTAINMENT

Miss Rice Will Give Some Dramatic Readings Tomorrow Night.

Tomorrow night, Friday, Dec. 1, Miss Josephine Bonaparte Rice will give a dramatic reading at the M. E. church, which promises to be an excellent entertainment. Miss Rice is a reader of very high standing and has received splendid criticisms for her excellent work wherever she has appeared.

The program also contains piano solos and singing by Miss Tola May Paulson, who has a contralto voice of remarkable compass.

Price: are 35c for reserved seats and 20c for children.

Miss Rice will read a number of new pieces and several standard selections by Field, Riley and others concluding with some Shakespearean numbers.

In speaking of her performance the Philiadelphia Ledger says:

As a dramatic reader Josephine Bonaparte Rice has no peer and her appearance on the stage presages a bright future for her. Old theatre goers who remember Charlotte Cushman, and having heard Miss Rice in selected readings from "Macbeth" predict her presentation will prove a revelation that will suggest in hold lines the already mentioned immortal actress.

This entertainment is given under the auspices of the M. E. church and the net proceeds will be for their benefit. It is therefore to be hoped that everybody will avail themselves of this opportunity to enjoy a refined and high class entertainment.

EDUCATORS' MEETING

Held in Crookston Tomorrow—Interesting Topics to be Discussed.

The following is program for the fall meeting of the Northwestern Minnesota Educational Association, which convenes in Crookston at the high school building tomorrow morning:

MORNING SESSION.

9:30—Music, Crookston Schools.
9:40—Opening Address. Prof. John Moore, Crookston.
10:30—Individual Physiology, Prof. E. B. Hoag, Moorhead.
Discussion.
10:45—What the Common Schools Need most. Supt. F. G. Bennett, Marshall county.
Discussion—Supt. Wm. Angus, Warren.
11:30—The Teaching of Animal Biology. Prof. A. W. Uhl, Hallock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

1:30—Music, Crookston Schools.
1:40—Supplementary Reading. Supt. R. W. Hitchcock, Crookston.
Discussion—Prof. Wm. H. A. Sutherford, Mahnomen. Prof. P. T. McNally, Red Lake Falls. Prof. Herbert Fuller, Thief River Falls.
2:30—Employment of Teachers. Should School Boards Employ only Non-Resident Teachers—Prof. P. J. Butler, Ada. The Employment of Teachers from the School Board's Point of View. J. P. Matison, Secretary Board of Education, Warren.
Discussion—Supt. Cropper, East Grand Forks. A. A. Miller, Member Board of Education, Crookston.

EVENING SESSION.

7:30—Music.
Address—The Mission of Literature—Prof. Verona P. Squires, University of North Dakota.
Music.

Things To Be Thankful For.

That Crookston will have paving at some time.

That prosperity reigns and no man need be without work.

That the governor of the state holds office for only two years.

That McKinley is sure of being re-elected president next year.

That as Browning says, "God's in his heaven, all's well with the world."

That the weather this fall has been the best for the farmer for twenty years.

That Crookston has a magnificent school system that is in fine working order.

That the American flag is more honored and respected today the world over than ever before.

That the Great Northern railway has built in Crookston a new passenger station and freight depot.

That the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL will have a handsome Christmas edition to present to its readers.

That even though misery and sorrow still exist, comfort and happiness are more widespread than ever.

That the Philippine insurrection will soon be put down and peace and order established in the islands.

That hundreds of new settlers have come into the valley this year which state of affairs increases the value of all landed property.

WHEAT THIEF CAUGHT.

He Confessed, Waiveo Examination, Awaits Action of Grand Jury.

James Harvey, the man who three weeks ago stole a load of wheat from the granary of H. C. Scribner, a prominent farmer, of Hammond, and brought it into town and sold it at the elevator, was captured at Solway, and Sheriff Lawrence brought him to Crookston Sunday. He had a hearing before Judge McLean on Monday at which time he waived examination and was held to the grand jury. As he failed to furnish bonds he is lodged in the county jail. He offered to refund the wheat money and to plead guilty to petty larceny, but as the offense was greater than petty larceny the county attorney rejected his offer. He will get at least a year in the state's prison.

Deaths.

DEMUS

At Mount Clemens, Mich., Colonel N. J. Demis, at one time proprietor of the Commercial Hotel in this city. Mr. Demis left several weeks ago for Michigan in hopes that the hot baths there would improve his health.

STEWARD.

At the Riverside hospital Monday Nov. 27, Miss Hilda Stewart, died of consumption. The remains were shipped to her late home near Thief River Falls Tuesday morning.

High School Notes.

Miss Field and Miss Munch sang a duet for the school Friday.

Mrs. Riggs favored the high school with a piano solo Tuesday afternoon.

Some of the Moorhead and Warren teachers were visitors at the school Wednesday.

Miss Ella Walsh is playing the "13th Regiment" march this week for the classes to march by.

Miss Reynolds favored the high school with a very pleasing piano solo Monday afternoon.

The scholars of the high school are all thankful that there is not going to be any school for two whole days.

The committee on decorations have mounted about seventy "Art Study Pictures" around the room, which improves the appearance very much.

The Junior class held a meeting Monday to decide on class colors. The meeting was unsuccessful as the class did not have samples enough on hand.

The work of the decoration committee previous to the Teachers' Association, is at an end. Anyone who wishes to see the results of their labor, will have an opportunity of doing so during the association meetings.

The pupils were surprised Monday morning on coming to school, to find the walls and ceiling of the assembly hall decorated in fancy colors, the work of Schmidt & Bowes, the painters. The pupils are pleased at the action of the school board in bringing this about.

In the office of the superintendent of the city schools is a large sized photograph of Mr. John Moore who for fifteen years was at the head of educational affairs in this city. The teachers thus pay a merited tribute to their old superintendent. To P. E. Lynne, the photographer, words of praise are also due for without money and without price he handed over to the teachers the photo. It was placed in position Tuesday.

A short program was given in the high school yesterday afternoon. Instrumental music, Grace Haven: song "Ilioria," school; essay "Thanksgiving" Clara Steenerson: song "Die Lorelei," German class; address, Rev. Green; speech "What I Am Thankful For," Mr. Hitchcock Then followed short parliamentary proceedings in which the school, through Supt. Hitchcock, thanked the Board of Education for their promptness in responding to the appeal of the decoration committee for aid. Mr. Miller and Mr. Hanson, as trustees, then made short addresses telling the school how the Board appreciates their efforts to embellish the high school room. The program was then closed with a vocal duet "What Is That Song the Swallows Sing," by Misses Alice LaDue and Trixie Pitkin.

MURDER AND SHOOTING

Grand Forks Wrought up Over a Double Tragedy That Took Place There Monday Night.

J. MCCABE KILLED BY DORSEY

In a Saloon—Brakeman AnDyke Shot at Larimore, but Chances are in Favor of His Recovery.

A murder at East Grand Forks and the shooting of a brakeman whose home is in Grand Forks, at Larimore, last Monday night and a terrible cutting affray at Williston, N. D., the night before, made it very evident that "the deil had business on his hand."

The man murdered was John McCabe and his murderer Bish Dorsey, a colored porter. This terrible deed was committed in Dan Sullivan's saloon about 7 o'clock in the evening. McCabe, who is said to have been slightly intoxicated, had high words with Dorsey who was behind the bar and blows were exchanged across the bar. The bartender shook Dorsey and told him to behave himself. Dorsey thereupon left the room, going out the back way. McCabe stood around a few minutes and then started for the front door. Everyone in the room, and there were a number, thought the trouble was over.

McCabe had almost reached the vestibule doorway when Dorsey entered from the rear, armed with a stick of wood some three feet or more in length, and making a swift run the entire length of the room, he struck McCabe a vicious blow on the back of the head. McCabe sank to the floor like an ox which has just received a blow from the butcher's sledge, and died almost instantly.

Dorsey glanced at his fallen victim, and hurriedly slipped on his coat, departed before the startled spectators had time to realize what sort of tragedy had been enacted in their presence. Later he delivered himself up to the authorities.

John McCabe, the victim of the assault was about 45 years of age. He has lived in Grand Forks for several years, and has been engaged as a cook at various East Side restaurants, and during the past fall, he cooked for a threshing crew west of Grand Forks. He was a G. A. R. man.

Bishop Dorsey, is a young man who has lived in Grand Forks since childhood. He is a mulatto, and has been engaged as bell boy, elevator boy, porter, etc., since he was old enough to work. He has been attentive and obliging, and has neither been quarrelsome nor addicted to drink. He has played baseball ever since he was old enough to handle a ball, and was one of the star players of every first-class Grand Forks team organized. How he could have let a momentary passion so master him is a mystery to every one who knows him. His employer, Dan Sullivan, says that of late he seems to have developed a somewhat unruly disposition, and this has got him into trouble at various times. "Bish" was married about a year ago. The prisoner was brought to Crookston last night and lodged in the county jail.

SHOOTING OF MR. ANDYKE.

Andrew J. AnDyke, of Grand Forks a great Northern brakeman well known in Crookston, having formerly lived here, was shot at Larimore Monday night.

His train was just pulling out of Larimore and Mr. AnDyke was at the front of the train near the mail car, watching to see that no one boarded the "blind baggage," when some one standing beside the tender of the engine fired three shots at him, one entering his left breast just above the heart, glancing upwards and coming to the surface over the left shoulder.

One Tom Doyle is accused of doing the shooting and has been bound over to the district court. Mr. AnDyke will recover. Reports from Grand Forks this morning say that he rested well last night.

Dame Rumor Says

That this Minnesota weather cannot be beaten in the world.

That bulldozing methods in business are not profitable.

That the most strenuous protests against dragging Dewey into the mire of politics seems to come from those who would perhaps be crowded out of this mire.

Wanted.

Your orders for anything in the music line. We can save you money. Special attention given to all mail orders. Stone's Music House, Fargo.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Fontaine & Anglim ONE PRICE DEPARTMENT STORE

Fontaine & Anglim ONE PRICE DEPARTMENT STORE
Fontaine & Anglim ONE PRICE DEPARTMENT STORE

STOCK REDUCING SALE!

Our entire Winter Stocks from the Dry Goods, Clothing and Shoe Departments offered at

REMARKABLE REDUCTIONS

Now we will be frank with you—continuous nice weather through the months of October and November has caused many to delay buying winter goods. With the season now half gone and a large stock of winter goods not moving fast enough, we've accepted the alternative of cutting away into the prices and make them go—not a reduction of a few cents off profits—but a big cut in actual cost of goods to us. Its better for us to lose now while goods are seasonable for patrons to use, than next fall or winter when its the price alone that will sell them. Sale begins Tuesday morning, Dec. 5, and continues for two weeks, until Tuesday, Dec. 19.

Of course we can't promise to keep the same prices—as some of the lots are not likely to last through the two weeks—but of this you may be certain, as soon as one lot of goods is gone another lot, equally as good, will be made to take its place. It will take time, but you'll find how to save money by reading this advertisement through—it won't appear again in this paper.

Stores Closed all day Monday, Dec. 4, to Mark Down Goods and Arrange Stocks

.....Dry Goods Department.....

1=4 off on Cloaks

☐For this sale we offer the greatest genuine reductions on cloaks of the season. Remember we do not mark our cloaks up to mark them down. Every garment is new this season—the styles are the latest—they're not old goods or the mistakes of seasons gone by. This sale is absolutely without reserve and includes everything. The stock is too varied to be quoted in detail—but the prices will be reduced like this—

Women's Cloth Cloaks

Regular $ 8.75 cloaks will be $ 6.57
Regular 10.00 cloaks will be 7.50
Regular 11.00 cloaks will be 8.25
Regular 13.00 cloaks will be 9.75
Regular 15.00 cloaks will be 11.25
Regular 16.00 cloaks will be 12.00
Regular 18.00 cloaks will be 13.50
Regular 21.00 cloaks will be 15.75

Children's Jackets and long Cloaks

Regular $3.00 cloaks will be $2.25
Regular 4.00 cloaks will be 3.00
Regular 5.00 cloaks will be 3.75
Regular 5.50 cloaks will be 4.13
Regular 6.00 cloaks will be 4.50

Women's long Astrachan cloth Cloaks

LOT 1—Regular $16.50 cloaks. Made of a pretty short curl cloth, farmer's satin lined, lapel front, high storm collar, double breasted front—sleeves with cuffs. All sizes.

Sale Price $11.15

LOT 2—Regular $20.00 cloaks. Made of a black Persian curl cloth, silk serge lined, loop fastenings, lapel front, extra high storm collar. All sizes.

Sale Price $14.65

Women's Fur Coats

Women's fine dog skin coats—only two left—sizes 38 and 42. Best quality dark fur. Written guarantee with each coat. Quilted lining of best farmer's satin.

Regular Price $30.00. Sale Price $19.50

One Woman's made-to-order selected dark coon coat—size 42. Unplucked otar collar and cuffs—best farmer's satin lining—quilted—full 45 inches long.

Regular Price $65.00. Sale Price $41.50

Women's Astrachan Coats

Regular price $40.00. Only three coats left—sizes 38, 40 and 42. Written guarantee with each coat.

Sale Price $31.50

$43.00 Astrachan coats
Reduced to $36.50
$50.00 Astrachan coats
Reduced to $40.00

Women's Skirts

We've grouped together into one lot, thirty-three dress skirts that have been selling from $5.00 to $7.50. Skirts of plain black sicilian—skirts of figured sicilian—skirts of black diagonal cheviot—skirts of crepon; plaids and other suitings in colors.

Sale Price will be $2.49 each.

Shawls

Lot No. 711—Reversible beaver shawls—colors grey, brown and black mixed—knotted fringe—full size.

Regular price $4.25. Sale Price $2.89.

Women's Waists

Quite a variety of neat flannel and woolen waists. Some are trimmed—some are not. Some with tight fitting back with yoke, loose front—and others plaited front and back. We divide them into three lots as follows:

Lot 1 at $1.19 were $1.25 to $1.50
Lot 2 at 1.69 were 1.89 to 2.49
Lot 3 at 2.19 were 2.35 to 3.95

Women and Children's Underwear at reduced Prices

Women's Florence combination suits—grey—plaited, Jersey ribbed—

Regular Price 58c. Sale Price 69c.

Women's heavy fleeced underwear, flat and ribbed styles. All sizes.

Regular Price 50c. Sale Price 39c.

Women's Jersey ribbed underwear—plaited—natural grey color—

Regular Price 69c. Sale Price 64c.

Odds and ends of women's underwear. We've picked out of stock all the lines that are broken in sizes—goods selling regularly from $1.10 to $1.40 each and to clean them out we've marked them at 85c.

Children's fleeced lined underwear—camels hair or natural grey color—mostly all sizes in vests, pants and drawers.

Regular Price 25c. Sale Price 19c.

Children's Florence combination suits—sizes 1 to 8. Grey ribbed, 4 wool plaited—full length.

Regular Price $1.15. Sale Price 79c.

About six dozen children's two-thirds wool underwear—just odds and ends—not all sizes. Regular price averages 65c a garment.

Sale Price 34c.

A chance to Stock up on HOSIERY

You can never have too many stockings. This is your chance to get the best in quality at one quarter to one third regular price. For instance:

Children's ribbed cotton hose—extra heavy. Size 6 to 9, Regular Price 25c.

Sale Price 16c or 2 pair for 25c.

Children's woolen hose—heavy ribbed. Sizes 7 to 8½. Regular Price 25c.

For this sale 20c—or 2 for 35c

Women's cashmere hose—one seam hose—heavy weight. Sizes 8 to 10. Regular price 35c.

For this sale—29c.

Women's heavy ribbed woolen hose—grey heels and toes—all sizes, Regular. Price 33c.

For this sale—24c.

Women's Hats Reduced

We divide the balance of our fall and winter stock of hats into two lots as follows:

Lot 1 at 29c were 50c to $1.00
Lot 2 at 69c were $2.25 to 2.00

EXTRA SPECIALS

Tuesday, Dec. 5.

From 10 to 11 o'clock a. m.

Spool cotton—John Clarks—sizes 36, 40 and 50. Black and white.

Sale price 1c a spool

Quantities are limited.

IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Wednesday, Dec. 6.

From 10:30 to 11.30 o'clock a. m.

100 dozen children's colored border handkerchiefs. Regular price 2c each.

Sale price 2 for 1c

Quantities are limited.

IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Thursday, Dec. 7.

From 9 to 10 o'clock a. m.

100, 21-pound packages of best granulated sugar for $1.00, with every purchase of one dollars worth or more of other goods.

Quantities are limited.

IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Friday, Dec. 8.

From 10 to 11 o'clock a. m.

200 pairs women's, Misses' and children's shoes—mixed lots—not all sizes of each kind. Qualities from $1.25 to $4.00.

Sale price, one hour, 98c

Quantities are limited.

IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Saturday, Dec. 9.

From 9 to 10 o'clock a. m.

Women's fancy garters, with fancy buckles and ribbon bows—each pair in glass top box. Cheap at 25c each.

Sale price, one hour, 10c

Quantities are limited.

IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Monday, Dec. 11.

From 2 to 3 o'clock p. m.

75, 11-pound packages of best, freshest oatmeal worth regularly 38c.

Sale price 25c

But you must buy 25c worth or more of other goods to get the benefit of this reduction.

Quantities are limited.

IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Advertisement continued on next page

Dress Goods Specials

Our dress goods stock has some extra good propositions to present at astonishing reductions.

Colored Goods.

Value hasn't been much considered in putting a price on this lot of goods—fact is, we want to sell them out the first thing and a few dollars loss isn't going to stand in the way.

Well, about thirty pieces of serge, and other colored figure goods in the brown, blue, tan and green shades, just such cloths that can be made into sacques, wrappers and children's dresses.

Regular prices—29c, 33c, 40c, 50c, 60c and 75c.

Sale Price 25c a yard.

At 38c a yard. Some few pieces of 49c to 55c mixtures, 38 to 40 inches wide, also a few pieces of fancy mixtures as high as 75c a yard.

Golf plaids and plaid-back suitings, 18 oz weight, for suits and unlined skirts; a fair range of patterns, all new this season. Regular price $1.47 to $1.98.

Sale Price $1.24 a yard.

Dress Goods Remnants

It is customary to hold a remnant sale at the end of each season. We intend changing that routine by not letting remnants accommulate, so we put them on sale as fast as they accumulate at an average of one-third off regular prices. Remnants are marked for the whole piece and pieces cannot be cut, unless at regular price.

Black Dress Goods

Nothing can we say in praise of our black dress goods is half so eloquent as the fact that we offer them at 20 per cent discount for this sale. That means—

50c black dress goods for 40c a yard
75c black dress goods for 60c a yard
$1.00 black dress goods for 80c a yard
1.25 black dress goods for $1.00 a yard
1.50 black dress goods for 1.20 a yard
1.75 black dress goods for 1.40 a yard
etc.—etc.

A special low price leader will be a few pieces of 36 inch figured black goods at 21c a yard—reduced from 35 and 39c a yard.

Dress Trimmings

Divided into four lots for your convenience and offered at one-quarter to one-half their former prices

LOT 1—Your choice of a lot of 5c to 15c trimmings at 3c a yard.

LOT 2—Your choice of a lot of 12½c to 18c trimmings at 8c a yard.

LOT 3—Your choice of a lot of 20c to 30c trimmings at 14c a yard.

LOT 4—Your choice of a lot of 35c to 75c trimmings at 27c a yard.

Printed Cotton Fleeced Goods

For wrappers, shirt waists, etc. These are good enough to keep—but of course we shall want new styles next time, so down they go from 9c and 10c a yard to 6½c.

Flannels and Pants Goods

We feel justified in making very little prices on two lots of pants goods, as we don't intend to carry them in stock any longer.

LOT 1—will be 15c a yard, were 20c to 28c a yard.

LOT 2—will be 29c a yard, were 35c to 50c a yard.

All wool shirting and skirting flannels, in checks and stripes, 54c quality; for this sale, a yard, 39c.

Carpets

Seven pieces of strictly all wool Ingrain carpets selling regularly at 64c to 69c a yard—will be for this sale only—

A YARD 45c

Carpet Remnants

We want you to help us get rid of about 15 pieces of ingrain carpet remnants and to coax you to buy them—we'll sell them at one-third off regular prices. Pieces run from 6 to 12 yards—and the regular prices vary from 25c to 69c a yard.

Notion Specials

Scissors

At 25c a pair. All sizes. Worth double in exclusive hardware stores. They're proven to be good—our customers "say so" is our best test.

Ribbons

Plaids, stripes and checks regularly—12½c to 18c a yard.

Sale Price 8c.

25c to 43c—fancy ribbons—wide widths.

Sale Price 20c.

Kid Gloves

An accumulation of several months broken sizes in kid gloves, many of them are regular $1.25 and none less than 75c in the lot.

Sale Price, 63c.

Corsets

We have a miscellaneous lot of odds and ends in corsets, mostly sizes 23 to 30, worth 75c to $1.50.

Sale Price to close them out 49c.

Infants Leather Bootees, all colors, lace or button, 23c.

Silk and Cotton Crochet Cotton, all colors but black, 5c a spool.

Odds and ends of 5c to 25c buttons, one dozen on a card, for 3c.

Windsor ties, regularly 15c.

Sale Price, 9c

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Fontaine & Anglim ONE PRICE DEPARTMENT STORE

Fontaine & Anglim ONE PRICE DEPARTMENT STORE

Fontaine & Anglim ONE PRICE DEPARTMENT STORE

CLOTHING DEPARTMENT

MEN'S SUITS.

We divide our entire suit stock into four lots. These prices are not mistakes or fakes—the goods must be sold.

$8 and $8.50 suits for $5.60

Heavy brown plaid round cut sack suits—strictly all wool. Heavy black and brown diagonal cheviots made up in first class style. Heavy dark grey home spun worsted suits. Heavy dark blue and black double breasted suits—guaranteed fast colors. All the above at a special price of $5.60

$10.50 and $11 suits for $7.50

Fine plain grey worsted—square cut, single breasted suits. Unfinished worsted, blue or black double breasted suits—all wool and fast color. Fancy all wool serge single breasted round cut sack suits, made in the latest style material. All the above at a special price of $7.50

$13 and $13.50 suits for $9.50

Fancy striped worsted—grey, brown and black mixtures. Heavy dark brown, double breasted melton suits, ordinarily retailing at $15.00. Fancy silk mixed grey and black single breasted worsted suits—handsome dress suits.

$16, $18 and $20 suits for $13.25

In this lot we include our choicest patterns of suits made us by one of the best clothing manufacturers in the United States. Suits of fancy worsteds, suits of cheviot, suits of cassimeres, suits of serges, suits of herringbone stripes—in all, suits of 28 different patterns equal in fit and make to tailor made.

AN OVERCOAT CLEARANCE FOR SURE

Just 210 mens and boys overcoats are here to be turned into cash before inventory time. You're not buying fast enough at regular prices; so a third, half, two-thirds and more off the regular prices have been taken to justify their quick selling. We believe that these prices are the least ever named in this market upon equal-up-to-date—not shop-worn—overcoats. Not a single overcoat is reserved—everything is marked down—and mind you we don't mark them up to mark them down. The original price is in plain black figures—the reduced price is in plain red figures.

$5 to $6 Overcoats reduced to $2.98

This assortment consists of all our blue, black, and brown beaver overcoats—44 inches long—good wearing and neatly made.

$7.50 to $9 Overcoats reduced to $5.90

This assortment of blue, black, and brown beaver overcoats 41½ inches long—durable, fine fitting and stylishly cut.

$10.50 to $13.50 Overcoats reduced to $9.25

This assortment consists of blue, black, brown, and steel gray meltons and beavers—42 inches long—all wool materials—guaranteed.

$18 to $25 Overcoats reduced to $13.75

This assortment consists of black meltons, plush lined; all wool chinchillas, long and short nap—all perfect in fit, finish and fashion. This assortment is the cream of our overcoat stock.

$12.50 Ulsters reduced to $8.50

Your unrestricted choice of mens all-wool Irish frieze ulsters—black or brown—fine Italian cloth lining—guaranteed for strength and durability.

SHARP REDUCTION IN MEN'S FUR OVERCOATS

This opportunity should not be missed—these bargain prices will be in effect for only two weeks. Every fur overcoat in stock is reduced in price—and they're not trick prices, either—we don't make them. Original prices are marked in plain black figures—reduced prices in plain red figures.

21 men's black dog skin coats—fur evenly matched; every coat is right—not a white or grey spot on them—every garment jeam lined. Regular Price $13.50.

SALE PRICE $9.65

27 men's Russian calf coats—nutria trimmed—full length—thoroughly lined and sewed. Regular Price $22.50.

SALE PRICE $18.35

14 men's Alaska Buffalo coats—they're excellent and right enough—you take no risk buying here. Regular Price $22.50.

SALE PRICE 17.85

16 Alaska Buffalo coats—higher grade than above. Quilted satin lining. Regular Price $30.00.

SALE PRICE $24.25

Coon Coats

$40.00 coats will be $32.25
50.00 coats will be 42.50
65.00 coats will be 57.50

Coon coats in combination with other furs at the same rate of reduced prices.

BOYS LONG TROUSER SUITS REDUCED TO $3.95

Sizes 13 to 19 years. Forty-five suits in all—suits of cheviots, worsteds, heather mixtures and other fancy materials. The cheapest suit in the lot is marked to sell at our regular price of $5.00, a few are $6.00 to $6.75. There's only one or two of a kind—too few of any one lot to give detailed descriptions.

BOYS' SHORT TROUSER SUITS

If you come in during this sale you can buy any of our boys regular $5.00 suits for $3.75. All kinds of good suits—sizes 4 to 14 years.

MEN'S UNDERWEAR

AT $1.00—Mens camels hair underwear—double front and double back. It's a very good quality, and would be cheap at half again as much.

AT $1.19—Mens all wool natural grey underwear—double front and double back—jersey bottom and cuffs. Our regular price $1.50.

AT $1.37—The celebrated Norfolk, New Brunswick underwear for men. Silk front, pearl buttons, jersey ribbed bottom and cuffs. These are garments made of test-proof yarns—and the regular price is $1.75 from New York to San Francisco.

AT $1.62—Mens fancy striped woolen underwear—front and neck silk taped, pearl buttons, well shaped, locked seams—a thoroughly high class garment in every respect. Our regular price is $2.00.

Other lines of mens winter underwear at the same rate of reduced prices.

Shoe Department

When its below zero you will wish you had some of these—but we won't be selling shoes at these prices then. During this temporary warm weather we are making big reductions in prices to move them. If you need, or will need shoes, you cannot save money easier. Of course we have not reduced the prices on all lines of shoes in stock—just the lines we have too much of.

Women's shoes

LOT 1
One hundred pairs of $3.00 kid shoes, lace style, newest toe shapes and patterns,
SALE PRICE $2.27

Lot 2
Eighty-seven pairs of $2.40 kid shoes, lace style, nearly every pair this seasons arrivals,
SALE PRICE $1.93

LOT 3
Sixty-five pairs of $3.00 and $2.40 kid, lace shoes, cloth tops, widths are a little narrow and sizes are small,
SALE PRICE $1.50

LOT 4
An assorted lot of dongola shoes ranging in price from $1.50 to $2.00 about one hundred pairs in all,
SALE PRICE $1.08

LOT 5
One hundred and ten pairs of $4.00, $3.00 and $2.50 shoes, old style; button, sizes 2 to 4,
SALE PRICE 98c

Men's shoes

LOT 6
Ninety pairs of men's $4.00 tan shoes, all new styles,
SALE PRICE $2.78

LOT 7
Sixty-two pairs of men's $3.00, $2.40 tan shoes, nearly all new styles,
SALE PRICE $1.93

LOT 8
Seventy-eight pairs of kid, calf skin, and colt skin, lace shoes, $3.00 and $2.50 values,
SALE PRICE $1.87

LOT 9
Twenty-nine pairs of men's seamless shoes, double soles, soft pliable leather, the very best counters and insoles, an excellent shoe for carpenters, mechanics, bricklayers, etc., former price $3.00,
SALE PRICE $2.27

Boys', Misses' and Children's Shoes.

LOT 10
An assorted lot of boys shoes,
SALE PRICE $2.00
SALE PRICE $1.50

LOT 11
Our famous Little Giant school shoes for boys, made of Congo calf leather, which is soft and pliable and will not crack, regular values $2.25,
SALE PRICE $1.68

LOT 12
Misses kid shoes, button style regular $1.25 value,
SALE PRICE 89c

LOT 13
Infants shoes,
Sizes 3 to 5, sale price 40c
Sizes 5 to 8, sale price 60c

Miscellaneous

LOT 14
Boys moccasins,
SALE PRICE 98c

LOT 15
Men's Sheep skin socks, for rubbers,
SALE PRICE 98c

LOT 16
Boys combination felt boot and rubber, sizes 3 to 6,
SALE PRICE $1.65

LOT 17
Boys combination felt boot and rubbers sizes 12 to 2,
SALE PRICE $1.35

LOT 18
Women's felt shoes 98c

LOT 19
Women's felt shoes $1.20

LOT 20
Men's $2.00 shoe pacs $1.60

Fontaine & Anglim ONE PRICE DEPARTMENT STORE

CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.

Tuesday, Dec. 12

From 9 to 10 o'clock a. m.
Best quality 45-inch table oil cloth—regularly 15c to 18c a yard.
Sale price, a yard, 9½c
Quantities are limited.
IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'M BLAME OUR ADV.

Wednesday, Dec. 13

From 3 to 4 o'clock p. m.
55 suits for Little fellows. Double breasted reefer suits, vestee suits—suits of all kinds for boys from three to eight years. Some are braided—some are plain. They range in price from $2.75 to $4.00.
Sale price $1.98
Quantities are limited.
IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Thursday, Dec. 14

From 10:30 to 11:30 o'clock a. m.
14 dozen men's woolen shirts—the best made. Medium colors—all sizes. Regular prices from $1.25 to $1.75.
Sale price 98c
Quantities are limited.
IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Friday, Dec. 15

From 2 to 3 o'clock p. m.
HALF PRICE on all our laces, insertions and embroideries in the store. Those that are 10c, 15c, 20c, 25c, 30c, 40c etc., will be 5, 7½, 10, 12½, 15, 20c
Quantities are limited.
IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Saturday, Dec. 16

From 10:30 to 11:30 o'clock a. m.
COLORED SHIRTS for men. The best brands of shirts, "Monarch," "Silver" and "Eight"—some have colors and cuffs, and some detached cuffs only. Sold regularly at $1.00 to $1.50.
Sale price 69c
Quantities are limited.
IF YOU GET HERE TOO LATE DON'T BLAME OUR ADV.

Grocery and Crockery Department

FREE With every one pound can of Delicatsse Baking Powder at 25c, one two quart brown water pitcher worth alone at regular price 22c.

Dried Fruits

Raisins—fancy 3 crown, regular price 10c a lb,
SALE PRICE 8c a lb

Prunes—a large meaty prune—very choice, regular price 10c a lb.
SALE PRICE 7c a lb

Silver Prunes—large and very fine, regular price 12½c a lb.
SALE PRICE 9c a lb

Evaporated Peaches—very fancy, regular price 15c lb.
SALE PRICE 11c lb

Evaporated Apples—choice, nice tasted, regular price 15c lb.
SALE PRICE 11c a lb

Apricots—large and bright, regular price 18c lb.
SALE PRICE 14c a lb

Pitted Plums—something very fine for sauce, regular price 15c a lb.
SALE PRICE 12c a lb

Rice

Fancy Japan—not the broken quality.
SALE PRICE 5c a lb

Quaker Oats

Regular 15c pkgs.
SALE PRICE 10c

Soaps

All 5c cakes of toilet soap.
SALE PRICE 3c

Washing soap in boxes containing 40 cakes, regular price $1.00.
SALE PRICE 86c

Savonia scouring soap, regular price 10c.
SALE PRICE 8c.

Puritan Soap Powder—5c packages for 3c.

Kirkoline—same as gold dust—20c packages 11c,

YEAST FOAM
5c packages for 3c.

MATCHES
10c packages for 8c.

BLUEING
10c bottle for 5c.

AMMONIA
10c bottle for 7c.

CLOTHES PINS
Regular price 2c a dozen.
SALE PRICE 1c a dozen

CLOTHES LINES
10c lines for 7c.

MUSTARD
In fancy dishes and imitation cut glass tumblers—something new, 8c each.

CATSUP
10c pint bottles for 8c.

MAPLE SYRUP
½ gallon cans—guaranteed pure.
SALE PRICE 57c

BAKING POWDER
One lb can—good quality—not-in-the-trust-kind for 7c.

Crockery and Glassware

There's only one consideration now—we must get rid of the balance of our stocks—for you know we decided a long time ago to discontinue selling crockery.

Profits don't figure—a look at what we offer will prove the genuineness of our words. We can't print prices on many kinds as the lots are being broken and closed out every day.

LAMPS
Tall hand lamps—made of glass—with number two burner, wick and chimney complete, for 34c.

Same lamp with number one burner, wick and chimney complete for 26c.

Handled cups and saucers, 47c a set.

Unhandled cups and saucers, 39c a set.

Fontaine & Anglim ONE PRICE DEPARTMENT STORE

CROKSTON, MINNESOTA.

Polk County Journal,

BY N. S. GORDON.

Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

CONGRESS convenes next Monday. The Senate, out of respect to the late Vice-president Hobart, will at once adjourn for the day and the House will do the same as soon as an organization is effected.

WE return our thanks to Mr. Conde Hamlin with whose compliments we have received a card extending us the privileges of the Commercial club of St. Paul. We appreciate the courtesy very much.

CONGRESSMAN-ELECT ROBERTS, of Utah, is now in Washington and declares that he will not resign, but will fight to be seated as a congressman. He never should succeed, and unless appearances are deceiving he will hardly succeed in his fight.

THE Minnesota delegation to the convention of the National Association of Fairs and Expositions held at Chicago last week, were successful in securing the national exposition and sale of the American Hereford Breeders associations to be held in connection with the State Fair next year, Sept. 3 to 8. This exposition and sale will be a very strong feature of the fair next year.

THE educators of the northwestern part of the state meet at the Crookston high school tomorrow to discuss subjects dealing with the life and growth of the boys and girls. They will welcome to the sessions the citizens of the city and the latter will certainly be the better able to co-operate with the teachers in the work of the schools the more they know of what those teachers are striving to do.

THE recent visit of the German Emperor to England and his cordial reception there still further strengthens the amity and unity existing, at the present moment in a more pronounced degree than ever before, between the members of the Anglo-Saxon family. The people of the German Empire, the British Empire and the United States have a common origin, as to their language, institutions and laws, and more than any others they stand for freedom, justice and education. Their growing friendship is, therefore, a hopeful sign of the times.

A FARMER living not far from Crookston recently wrote to a Massachusetts farm paper inquiring whether or not it paid to raise field peas in this northwest country, for stock feed. The question was referred back to the Minnesota State Agricultural school, the answer sent east and then the paper with the answer printed in it sent west. How much better it would have been had this question been sent to the JOURNAL. We would have referred it to the Crookston Experiment station, the State Agricultural school or other reliable authorities and would have printed the answer in the JOURNAL and then all the farmers in this section would have known what experts thought of the raising of peas. We shall be glad at any time to answer any and all questions pertaining to matters agricultural.

ADMIRAL DEWEY decided to his wife the house in Washington which was presented to him by some Americans and Mrs. Dewey in turn transferred the property to the admiral's son. They reserved all rights to the property while both or either shall live. Their object was simply to provide a proper succession to the property. It was a private business transaction that it was thought wise to take. But in consequence scandalous and disgraceful attacks were made upon Dewey which reflected the unthinking multitude and the fickleness of the crowd. On his return from the east he submitted to numerous public demonstrations, that were particularly displeasing and distasteful to him, simply to please the crowd and the first semblance of excuse they have they turn on him with fierce denunciations and scorn and insult. It is ever thus though. "To be great," as Emerson says, "is to be misunderstood." Dewey need have no fear, however. He is still enshrined in the hearts of the thinking nation. He is still the hero of Manila and ever will be.

St. Hilaire Spectator: The St. Hilaire Lumber Company shut down their mill last Friday for this season. They have been playing in the best of luck as they have run the entire season without an accident or breakdown. The night crew laid off early in the season for want of logs but regardless of that the little mill sawed a little over 3,000,000 feet. Next year's cut promises to be a large one as the company have now on hand 10,000,000 feet of logs that are ready for the saw and work will begin as soon as the river opens next spring.

GRAND FORKS.

Barney Haggarty spent Sunday at his Manvel farm.

C. P. Collins spent Monday in Crookston on business.

A number from this city will attend the Thanksgiving ball at Manvel.

Supt. Spoonheim is spending the week in the south part of the country.

M. H. McGowan and M. P. Murphy have purchased a valuable farm near Manvel.

Miss Bells McGilvich, of Minto, is the guest of her sister Anna, who is attending the "U."

John Purdy and daughter Florence left Sunday night for a visit with friends in Minneapolis and Milwaukee.

The Epworth League will entertain the young people of the M. E. church and congregation Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the church parlors.

The many friends of D. M. Holmes will be pleased to learn that a very marked improvement in his condition was noticed Monday evening.

E. N. Suites left Sunday night to accept the foremanship in the job printing office of Frank B. Winship at Spokane. Mrs. Suites will follow in the course of a week or ten days.

Drs. Fawcett, Western and Kirk performed a very critical surgical operation on Mrs. George Angus Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Angus is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

D. R. Sven left Sunday night for Ada, Minn., where he will give expert testimony in a suit against the Northern Pacific brought to collect damages on account of an overflow of water on some farming property.

Knots of people gathered on every street corner Monday night to discuss the sensations of the day—the shooting of Brakeman AnDyke and the murder of John McCabe. Numerous versions of each affair were afloat, some of them wild and woolly enough to meet all requirements of a yarn from the western plains twenty-five years ago.

CLIMAX.

Too late for last week.

C. F. Getchell is about to move his family to Crookston for the winter.

Gilbert Kittelsen and W. B. Mahland drove to Crookston on Saturday last.

Miss Bertha Saterno was visiting with her sister at Crookston the greater part of last week.

The young boy of Olof Tronness, of Neilsville, had the misfortune of losing one of his eyes last week. Dr. Johnson assisted by E. J. Eide of this place performed the operation. The boy is at present doing nicely remaining at the Commercial hotel under Dr. Johnson's care.

BEMIDJI.

W. H. Walker is visiting friends and relatives in Bemidji this week.

Will Brown, who was formerly employed in the hardware department of McCraig & Ledlington, has accepted a position as delivery man for Dudley & Graham.

Miss Annie McGrath, who was called to Fisher last week by the death of her father returned home Monday.

The brick block of J. W. White & Co., is almost completed and will be ready to move into next week.

Chas. Bartlett was up from Cass Lake Wednesday shaking hands with Bemidji friends.

The citizens of Bemidji are making preparations for a grand ball in the city hall Thanksgiving evening.

Mrs. J. I. Boyer has been ill for the last week with la grippe.

Miss Wanda Sprague gave a party last Saturday evening in honor of her sixteenth birthday. All who were present report a pleasant time.

George Young, of Eagle Bend, is visiting friends here this week.

Chas. Caster resumed work Saturday for the Great Northern as operator, after a two week's vacation.

Miss Nina Peterson, of Fergus Falls, is visiting Mrs. Fred Hazen this week.

George Brennan went to St. Cloud Friday to see his father, who is not expected to live.

Edward Glenn departed Monday for Fargo, N. D., after a two week's visit here.

George Stone has just moved into his new dwelling on Bemidji avenue.

Fred Chaudoir, of Deer River, was here Monday hiring men for his wood camps.

NEILSVILLE.

Henry Simon returned from Crookston Friday evening.

Miss Lucy Kolden returned Monday evening from Crookston, where she is attending school, to be home on Thanksgiving Day.

Alfred Wigen is just back from a business trip to Bemidji.

C. C. Melsness went up to Crookston Monday morning to have his chewing apparatus repaired which was done in a very satisfactory manner by Dr. Robertson.

Nils Muus did business at Crookston Tuesday.

B. Kolstad and L. Kolden, two of our most successful farmers returned from Gary Monday evening having for several days attended a missions conference there.

The stockholders of the Neilsville Farmers' Lumber Co. had a meeting Saturday after soon the object being to raise more money to carry on their increasing business to a better advantage. It was decided to recommend to double up shares and about six hundred dollars were subscribed at that meeting with a good prospect for much more.

A basket social will be given at the school house next Saturday evening for the benefit of supplementary reading for the school and the girls are now vying with one another in producing the prettiest and we hope the fullest baskets.

Karsten Otteson left for Fargo Tuesday, having a business position in sight.

K. S. Aker, Aslak Thompson, and Gunnar Olson left on their wheels for Park River, N. D., for a visit but whether they will return on their own wheels or Jim Hill's wheels is doubtful this time of the fall.

KITTSON.

Get your turkeys ready: Thursday is the day to invite your neighbors to to dinner.

Mr. Erwin and Fred Lofevor drove to Crookston Sunday. Fred returned in the evening on the train.

Carpenters have been putting the finishing touches on the new gasoline engine house the past few days, and are now preparing to put a new roof on the elevator.

H. C. Serthner has succeeded in jailing his latest thief. It is to be hoped the fellow will learn not to meddle with other people's property.

W. M. Sampson has been hauling home some seed wheat that he bought out in the sandy country east of Hazelo.

G. W. Hooper is still plowing. Mr. Hooper believes in doing all he can before the spring seeding.

ARGYLE.

Wm. Carrose, who has been sick for some time, left Tuesday night for St. Paul for medical treatment. His mother, Mrs. Z. Dion, accompanied him.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Griffin and children, of Grand Forks, have been visiting with Mrs Dion for a few days.

The Crookston Lumber company will soon run in a lumber yard here.

Rev. Father Guillaume, Albert Toullot and Wilfred Bertrand left Tuesday night for Oregon, where they intend to make their future home.

Sheriff Green and his deputy went out Tuesday to arrest three parties who are accused of committing rape on an old woman east of Stephen.

Our popular Station Agent Joe Hillaird has been on the sick list during the last ten days, but is now rapidly recovering.

BAGLEY.

Hans Nelby left Sunday for a visit with friends and relatives near Lake Park, Minn.

Thompson & Klnaston, our new blacksmiths, have got their shop ready for commencing business and invite the public to call and see them.

Otto Landeen, who has been working with Lee Bros. left last Sunday for his home near McIntosh.

Lewis Lohn and L. Soderberg came up from Fosston last Sunday to see what a live town looked like. It is unnecessary to say that they returned satisfied.

P. H. Pederson went to Crookston on a business trip the first part of the week.

Landlord T. T. Saterwas a visitor at Fosston last Sunday.

Miss Bernetta Perrun has been quite sick the last two weeks with typhoid fever, but is now improving.

J. H. Farris left last Sunday for Grand Forks where he will spend the winter.

B. F. Brown will put up a building 20x40 which will be occupied by J. M. Carey where he will put in a stock of drugs. A doctor will come here in the near future.

W. F. Street, our county attorney, was in town the first part of the week.

ERSKINE.

O. Narveson made a trip to Crookston Thursday.

Richard and Adolph Dorr visited at McIntosh Thursday.

Andrew Hole visited at Fosston Thursday.

B. Sampson, of Crookston, did business here Thursday.

Miss Emma Ostby visited at McIntosh Thursday.

M. E. Flom made a trip to the town of Lessor Thursday.

Editor Epley left for Crookston Friday to meet his wife and will go to Argyle to visit with friends and relatives.

G. Stenerson returned from Solway Friday.

A. Epley has rented rooms up stairs over the postoffice.

Rev. B. P. Fisher, of Crookston, held services here Thursday evening.

John Tuff and wife, of Fertile, visited here Saturday.

O. Narveson and daughter Emma returned from Crookston Saturday.

John Amundson visited at McIntosh Sunday.

John Rolum, Richard Rafter and John Rolum No. 2, visited at Fosston Sunday.

Gust Feising of Woodside, was seen on our streets Monday.

Rumor has it that we are soon to have a new livery and sale barn in our town.

John Rackstad was down from McIntosh Sunday and visited with Swan Ness. Rumor has it that he is soon to marry one of Erskine's fair sex.

F. E. LaPage of Mentor was seen on our streets Monday.

Erik Hamre visited at Fertile Monday.

A. F. Cronquist made a trip to Dagsale Monday.

Hans Carlson was at McIntosh Tuesday.

John Rolumn was at McIntosh Tuesday.

M. E. Flom drove to Fertile Tuesday.

Our editor returned home Tuesday after a pleasant visit at Argyle.

Willie Wicks returned from Moorhead Tuesday.

Mrs. G. Stenerson is very low.

Even Johnson is adding his place of business.

R. D. Childs, of Crookston, was out and looked over his wood lot, and found everything O. K.

Miss Jennie Hanson visited at McIntosh Monday.

Mr. Westerlund and daughter Barbara returned from Crookston Monday.

FOR SALE—First class restaurant outfit complete in all respects. Apply to W. W. Hoch.

—Sheet Music at 50 percent off regular price, at Stone's Mammoth Music House 110 and 112 Broadway, Fargo, N. D. Send for catalogue of latest up to date music. tf

Crookston Market.

Corrected Thursday morning, Nov. 30.

WHEAT—No. 1 Hard 56 No. 1 Northern 56 No. 2 Northern 51

OATS—32c.

BARLEY—27 to 30c.

FLAX—81½c

POTATOES—20 to 25c.

EGGS—20c.

BUTTER—20c to 25c.

ONIONS—35c

BEANS—1.35 to 2.00

HAY—Baled $5.00, loose $4.00.

HOGS—5½c.

CATTLE—2½ to 3¼ live weight. 3¼ to 6½c dressed weight.

SHEEP—3c.

CHICKENS—8c.

TURKEYS—10c

HIDES—5 to 6c.

WOOL—10 to 16

FLOUR—2.10 per cwt.

FEED—$10.50 per ton.

SHORTS—$12.50 per ton.

GREAT NOVEMBER SALE

Our Great November Sale of Winter Goods is now running. We are offering values that cannot be duplicated in any store in this part of the state. We have just received a large consignment of Men's, Youth's and Boys' Winter Clothing that will be a surprise and a pleasure to all bargain hunters. Here are a few samples:

Overcoats

50 Overcoats, lot 8236, all wool heaver, a good $10 value,...$4.98

50 Overcoats, lot 4880, all wool melton, a good $15 value,...$7.98

Ulsters

100 Ulsters, lot 2464, a good $10.50 quality for.....$5.50

75 Ulsters, lot 2424, all wool Irish frieze, a good $18 value for.....$9.98

Suits

100 worsted tweed Suits, a good $10 quality,.....$4.49

One extra lot of cassimeres, other stores' prices, $7.50, 8.8 and $10. Great Western price is.....$5.50

50 Suits in worsted and French clay, $16, $18 and $20 values, all go at.....$9.98

Duck Coats

10 dozen Duck Coats, $1.50 values, Great Western price..98c

One extra lot of 50 Duck Coats, black and brown, rubber lined, regular $3 value, Great Western price.....$1.98

Mackinaw Coats

5 dozen Mackinaw Coats, regular $3 values, Great Western price.....$1.50

5 dozen all wool Mackinaw Coats in a heavy brown and mixed colors, $6 values at..$4.00

Shirts

50 dozen shirts, regular 50c values, Great Western price 39c and upward.

Underwear

50 dozen of Underwear, wool fleece lined, $1.50 values at, per suit.....90c

Heavy lumbermen's underwear in all wool, double breasted, regular $3 quality, Great Western price.....$1.75

Gentlemen's fine all wool underwear, $4 value, Great Western price.....$2.48

10 dozen red flannel underwear, $1 values, Great Western price, 48c

Caps

10 dozen Caps, 50c values, our price.....39c

All wool melton and heaver caps, 50c and upward.

Sweaters

50 dozen worsted sweaters, $1 values, Great Western price, 45c

Pants

Heavy all wool kersey pants, $3.50 values, Great Western price.....$1.98

10 dozen worsted pants at 75c

Boys' Suits and Overcouts at the greatest reduction ever heard of in Crookston.

Boys' Overalls

Boy's good quality overalls, our price.....10c

Ties

25 dozen Ties, 50c quality, our price.....25c

..Great Western Clothing House..

Opposite the Post Office. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.

Going out of business....

...SUITS AT COST...

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $20.00, $18,00, $16.00

Closing out sale $11.65

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $15.00, $14.00, $12.00

Closing out sale $9.75

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $10.00, $9.00, $8.00

Closing out sale $4.95

Everything goes. Fixtures for sale. Store for rent.

Vanstrum Clothing Co.

The weather is out of sight but can't keep up to the special bargains at the

NEW YORK STORE

Big Clearance Sale

Goods must be sold even at a great sacrifice.

59c Warm Woolen Blankets for the winter that is coming. 11/4 Blankets at 59c

Ladies' nobby Cloaks and Jackets
Men's and Ladies' Shoes, all sizes
Dress Goods a Specialty.

25 per ct. off on Ladies' Hats

NEW YORK STORE

A. CHABOT, PROPRIETOR.

RAILWAY TIME CARD

CROOKSTON, MINN.

NORTHERN PACIFIC

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep't
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:27 pm	8:27 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	6:20 a m	6:20 a m

C. A. SHARKEY, Agt. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A.
Crookston, Minn. St. Paul, Minn.

GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE | *Daily †Except Sunday. | LEAVE

8.55 am * Grand Forks, Fort and West | 7.00 am
2.00 pm Mpls., St. Paul and points east | 6.00 pm
4.30 pm †St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls | 9.30 am
4.55 pm *Fosston, Bemidji, Duluth and Superior | 9.00 am
6.45 pm St. Vincent to Fargo | 7.15 pm
8.55 am Fargo to St. Vincent | 9.10 am

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block. Crookston. Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fontaine & Anglin's. Office hours—9 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 5 p. m.; 7 to 8 p.m

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW.
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR RELIABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice. Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday, Morning, 11:00, evening, 8:00. Holy Communion the First Sunday of every Month. Readers are welcome.
REV. H. H. OSSEN, R. Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

—Miss Lily Finlayson went to Argus Tuesday morning.

—Attorney H. L. Gaylord was up from Fertile last Thursday.

—Mrs. Montague and her daughter Miss Marie, are visiting in St. Paul.

—Mr. and Mrs. Christ Nelson, of Euclid, were in the city last Monday.

—The old water tank north of the Great Northern station is torn down.

—C. O. Renne, of Fertile, was the guest last Sunday of his brother P. L. Renne.

—Hugh Galbraith went out Tuesday morning to assist the Mentor ditch viewers.

—Editor C. L. Lamma, of the McIntosh Times, was in Crookston last Monday.

—Editor Arthur Egley and his wife spent last Friday night at the capital of Polk county.

—A manager for a large farm near Argyle is wanted. See the ad elsewhere in this paper.

—The station at Wylie has been closed for the present till business picks up at that point.

—Sylvester Peterson, register of the United States land office, transacted business at Ada last Monday.

—The Knights of Maccabees in a body attended the services at the Episcopal church last Sunday.

—Supt. R. W. Hitchcock and family have moved into John Moore's new eight room house at 213 Hoffman St.

—Andy Larson came home from Minneapolis yesterday morning where he has been visiting his sister, Mrs. J. Rickert.

—M. E. Harbin and Fred Shaw went out on the St. Vincent line Tuesday to look after business for the New York life.

—A delightful time was spent at the social of the Scandinavian M. E. church in the church parlors last Monday evening.

—Mrs. Brudish, who has been visiting with her sister Mrs. J.W. Wheeler for several weeks, left Monday night for her home in Springfield, Ill.

—Referee in bankruptcy, Ole Vaule, last Friday appointed Attorney Geo. A. E. Finlayson as trustee in the bankruptcy case of D. A. Finley, of Warren.

—A. H. Taylor, of Buffington, found his Newfoundland dog in Crookston last Monday. The animal strayed away from his home several weeks ago.

—The suit against members of the East Grand Forks Driving association, in which $700 is involved, will come up at the Decemberterm of court in Crookston.

—W. J. Murphy, of Minneapolis, president of the Crookston Waterworks, Power & Light company, was here Sunday casting his eye over the new waterworks building.

—The pastor of the Baptist will discuss the following subjects next Sunday Dec. 3: Morning "Eternity." evening "The True Gentleman," Visitors are cordially invited to attend these services.

—A number of the young friends of Miss Lelia Oliver spent last Saturday evening with her at the home of Percy Baker. The occasion was the young lady's birthday and the party was wholly a surprise to her.

—The New York Store has a special ad in this paper.

—Ladies' hats 25 percent off on them at the New York Store.

—Henry Nolan, of Fertile, was at the county seat last Tuesday.

—John Love, of Key West, started last week for the lumber camps with six horses.

—Philip McGuire came up from Fertile this morning to spend Thanksgiving with relatives in this city.

—The matters in dispute in the school district near Euclid will be settled at the next term of district court.

—FOR SALE, two quarter section farms near Mentor, on easy terms. M. R. Waters 502 Guaranty Loan Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

—If you contemplate purchasing a piano, organ, or any other musical instrument, write Stone's Music House, Fargo, N. D., for prices before buying. tf —Mat Gannon, proprietor of the Sherman House, is held, under $300 bonds, to the grand jury which meets Dec. 14, for attempting to shoot one C. J. Johnson.

—A donation surprise party was given to Rev. Kathan and wife at their home on East Third street, last evening. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all present.

—Next Sunday morning at the Congregational church the Communion will be administered. The pastor's evening subject will be "The Man who Gives Himself a Chance."

—See Fontaine & Anglim's two page advertisement in this issue. Great stock reducing sale of their entire winter stock from the dry goods, clothing and shoe departments.

—Nelson Rust, who was on trial at Bemidji charged with having purposely shot one Mullan a year ago in the woods, Rust claiming that he mistook Mullan for a deer, was acquitted.

—Archie Smith, who has been ably assisting Charley Misner in the latter's tonsorial parlors, has gone to Twin Valley where he will open up a shop of his own. He will succeed without question.

—Fontaine & Anglim have marked their large winter stock of goods away down and beginning next Tuesday and continuing for two weeks, will sell at greatly reduced prices. See their advertisement elsewhere in this issue.

—Two freight trains on the Great Northern collided last Friday night a mile or distance north of the city, one car was smashed and one engine somewhat damaged but no one was hurt and the debris was soon cleared away.

—J. C. Ide has been appointedby the probate court administrator in the estate of B. Jorgenson. The Barney Haggerty estate has been closed. In this last case there was considerable difficulty in deciding just what the will meant.

—The best toned instruments made. The Fratelli Mandolins and Guitars. C. R. Stone, maker. Sold by Stone's Mammoth Music House, Fargo, N. D.

—Now is the time to fix up for winter. We have quite an accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Co. Telephone 40.

—Dan McKinnon, who invented a fastner to prevent harness tugs from slipping off the whipple tree, applied for a patent and his received word from the government that the patent will be granted. Dan undoubtedly has a fortune in sight.

—E. D. Childs has about 100 tons of good corn fodder more than he will need for his own use, and will sell it at 82 per ton, delivered anywhere in the city, in quantities of one ton or more. This makes cheap feed and first class feed for anyone who keeps a cow.

—Union Thanksgiving services at the Methodist church this morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Kathan, in general charge of the services, reads the president's proclamation, opening prayer by Rev. Mr. Poole, scripture reading and Thanksgiving address by Rev. Mr. Fisher.

—Father Grandchamp, late pastor of St. John the Baptist church, Duluth, has been transferred to Crookston where he will have charge of St Ana's church. His Duluth parishioners were very reluctant to have him leave. He has been pastor of the Crookston church before.

—The A. O. U. W. last evening elected these men as officers: H. F. Martin, M. W.; R. G. Woodham, foreman; W. Waterstradt, overseer; S. L. Collins, receiver; C. Redsten, financier; C. D. Billing, receiver; A. Larson, guide; B. Wilson, I. W.; A. Weber, O. W.; Gus Johnson, trustee.

—Work on the Farley Sandsville drainage ditch has been stopped by the contractor before the work is completed and if left as it is now much land near where the water from the ditch should empty into the coulee will be considerably damaged. Some of the farmers from that section have laid their complaints before County Auditor Gleasoa.

—Mr. John Moore's new housecon Hulbert street is one of the handsomest in the city. It is two story with large attic and basement, the latter divided into three parts for the furnace, laundry and vegetables, etc., respectively. The first story has hardwood floors, in the kitchen are both cob and hard water pumps and the entire house is lighted by electricity.

—The trouble in the East Grand Forks schools is not over yet but new features are continually developing. It is now claimed on the best of authority that the teachers hired at East Grand Forks gave Mr. Crippen notes for $35, which money was supposed by them to have had its due influence in securing them their places. The admission on the part of the teachers that they gave this money to be used in this way will certainly not raise their standing as educators, even though it seems to implicate Mr. Crippen in a somewhat questionable transaction.

—The G. A. R. will give a dance at their hall this evening.

—Fontaine & Anglin are offering big bargains. See their ad in this paper.

—A. Chabot at the New York Store is having a big clearance sale. See his advertisemeat.

—A. Taylor, of Buffington, started for the lumber camps last Monday with four team of horses.

—The Degree of Hoaor and United Workmen give an entertainment in their lodge rooms this evening.

—Civil Engineer Geo. A. Ralph spent Tuesday and Wednesday at Ada on engineering business.

—Mrs. H. E. Cooke left Monday night for her home in Illinois. A large number of friends were at the train to say good bye.

—Miss Groesbeck, the stenographer, of the Ray Mercantile Company, fell through an open trap door last Monday, injuring herself quite severly.

—One Stapleton, who was released Saturday afternoon from the county jailfatter serving a sentence for larceny, had no sooner secured his freedom than he returned to his old trade and purloined an overcoat from Anderson's restaurant. He was caught, however, by one of Chief Gouyea's men, but was allowed to go provided he left town in half an hour.

—Thomas Johaston has been showing his numerous friends a photograph of his brother which was taken in India just previous to his brother's departure for the Transvaal. It is the picture of a sergeant in the 93rd Highlanders and if the rest of the regiment is like him the Boers will need to look sharp when the 93rd gets after them. The same mail also brought Mr. Johnstone a picture of the sergeant's favorite spaniel dog, the prize dog of India, the photo being taken just after the dog had returned from a fourteen days hunt in the Jungles.

—An aggregation of Crookston football enthusiasts, some of whom have never played football and none of whom have been playing this fall, challenged the first team of the North Dakota university to play either here or at Grand Forks on Thanksgiving Day. The challenge was declined declaring as their reason that the team had gone out of training. Bemidji Crookston team had never played together, still they would have given the "U" boys lots of work and doubtless if the university team wished to keep its record of no defeats this fall they did well to refuse to play the Crookston boys.

Unique Services.

An interesting and unique service was held at the Congregational church last Sunday evening. It was in charge of the Young Peoples' Society of Christian Endeavor. Greetings were read from all the states and territorial possessions of the United States. The Province of Quebec sent at international greeting. Among those who took special part were: Mrs. Just and Mrs. Loyd; Misses Miller, Pitkin, Clements, Stone and Fitzgerald; Messrs. Vaaum, Pudlor, Loyd and Fisher.

Some six weeks ago preparations for the service were begun, and the efforts to obtain a greeting from each state were entirely successful.

Cut This Out

And send it with $1 as a guarantee of good faith and we will send you one of our $2.75 guitars or Mandolins to your express office C. O. D. subject to examination. If you find it O. K. and the same as your local dealer would ask $6.50 for, pay the express agent the balance and the charges and the instrument is yours. If found otherwise return to us and we will pay all charges and refund the amount paid. S. Stone's Music House, Fargo, N. D.

Why Not Spend Christmas and New Years at Home?

The Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets to any point located in Central Passenger Association territory, at afare and a third for the round trip, account of Christmas and New Year Holidays, on December 23, 24, 25, 30 and 31, 1899, and January 1, with return limit to and including January 2, 1900. Students, upon presentation of proper credentials can obtain tickets at same rate with liberal return limit. Complete information may be secured by calling on or addressing the General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. 48

Students Returning Home

For holiday vacations, can, upon presentation of proper credentials, obtain tickets, to Central Passenger Association points, located on the Nickel Plate road, at a fare and a third for the round trip. Tickets will be sold on day school closes and day immediately preceding closing date, with return limit to and including day school reconvenes, but not later than January 2, 1900. For information as to train service to Ft. Wayne, Cleveland, Fostoria, Erie and other points, call on or address General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Chicago Passenger Station, Van Buren St. and Pacific Ave., on the Elevated Loop. 50

A Jewel

Yes that's just what N. K. Olson is, and he keeps all kinds of silver plated flat ware. Also all kinds of holiday ware, watches, jewelry, clocks, etc., etc. Give him a call.

N. K. OLSON.
120 Robert St. W.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....in the Northwest.

SPECIAL!
400
MEN'S ALL WOOL SUITS
Goods that are worth every cent of Ten Dollars---We are offering these at $6.90

The Legitimate Clothing House.

THE C. O. D.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss
LUCAS COUNTY.
FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE. FRANK J. CHENEY
Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.
A. W. GLEASON.
SEAL
Notary Public.
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, price 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Watch Bratrud
AND
He'll "WATCH" You

He has everything which a first class watchmaker and jeweler keeps in stock. Watches and clocks repaired and cleaned.

Low Prices and First Class Work

Repairing Guaranteed.

M. A. BRATRUD
Anderson & Olson Block.

Eureka Harness Oil is the best preservative of new leather and the best renovator of old leather. It oils, softens, blackens and preserves. Use on your best harness, your old harness, and your carriage top, and they will not only look better but wear longer. Soldeverywhere. Made only of pure oil. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

Eureka Harness Oil

S. L. Collins,
LIVERY AND FEED STABLES

Horses bought and sold on commission. Everything neat and sobby. Feeding a specialty.

Main and Fourth streets.
CROOKSTON — — MINNESOTA.

S. C. Johnson's
Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale	35c
Oats, per bushel	28c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs	75c
Shorts, 100 lbs	65c
Bran, 100 lbs	60c
Shelled Corn, per bu	40c
Condition Powder, per pkg	25c
Shorts, per ton	$12.00
Bran, per ton	10.00

Cedar Posts from 12½c to 15c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living,like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.
Crookston, Minnesota.

You'll be thankful

Without question if you call in at Tom Morris' and inspect his large stock of

Jewelry and Watches,

Diamonds, silver and silver plated ware
All kinds of Toilet Articles in sterling silver and ebony at

CUT GLASS AND POTTERY A SPECIALTY....

Tom Morris'
117 Broadway, opp. Hotel Crookston

COAL AND WOOD

VANCE AND STONE

ED. ERICKSON,
DEALER IN
All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...

Highest market price paid for all kinds of hieat and Hides. Stall fed Beef..... .....a Specialty

SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

[Copyrighted and published in book form, by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.]

CHAPTER VII.

He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness.

The body of Lorens Jay in state at the Page mansion on the avenue. It was Sunday morning, and the clear, sweet air, just beginning to breathe over the city the perfume of early spring blossoms in the woods and fields, swept over the casket from one of the open windows at the end of the grand hall. The church bells were ringing, and the people on the avenue going by to service turned curious, inquiring looks up at the great house and went on, talking of the recent events which had so strangely entered into and made history in the city.

At the First church Henry Maxwell, bearing on his face marks of the scene he had been through the night before, confronted an immense congregation and spoke of it with a passion and a power that came so naturally out of the profound experiences of the day before that his people felt for him something of the old feeling of prophecy once had in his dramatic delivery. Only this was a different attitude, and all through his impassioned appeal this morning there was a note of sadness and rebuke and stern condemnation that made many of the members pale with self accusation or with inward anger.

For Raymond had awakened that morning to the fact that the city had gone for license after all. The runes at the Rectangle that the second and third words had gone no license proved to be false. It was true that the victory was won by a very meager majority, but the result was the same as if it had been overwhelming. Raymond had voted to continue another year the saloon. The Christians of Raymond stood condemned by the result. More than a hundred Christians, professing disciples, had failed to go to the polls, and many more than that number had voted with the whisky men. If all the church members of Raymond had voted against the saloon, it would today be outlawed instead of crowned king of the municipality. That had been the fact in Raymond for years. The saloon ruled. No one denied that. What would Jesus do?

And the woman who had been bruised by struck down by the very hand that had assisted so eagerly to work her earthly ruin—what of her? Was it anything more than the logical sequence of the whole horrible system of license that for another year the saloon that received her so often and compassed her degradation, from whose very spot the weapon had been hurled that struck her dead, would by the law which the Christian people of Raymond voted to support open its doors, perhaps tomorrow, and damn with earthly and eternal destruction a hundred Lorens before the year had drawn to its bloody close?

All this, with a voice that rang and trembled and broke in sobs of anguish for the result, did Henry Maxwell pour out upon his people that Sunday morning, and men and women wept as he spoke. Donald Marsh sat there, his usual erect, handsome, firm, bright, self confident bearing all gone. His head bowed upon his breast, the great tears rolling down his cheeks, unmindful of the fact that never before had he shown outward emotion in a public service. Edward Norman near by sat, with his clear cut, keen face erect, but his lip trembled and he clutched the end of the pew with a feeling of emotion that struck deep into his knowledge of the truth as Maxwell spoke of it. No man had given or suffered more to influence public opinion that last week than Norman. The thought that the Christian conscience had been aroused too late or too feebly lay with a weight of accusation upon the heart of the editor. What if he had begun to do as Jesus would long ago? Who could tell what might have been accomplished by this time? And up in the choir Rachel Winslow, with her face bowed on the railing of the oak screen, found way to a feeling she had not yet allowed to master her, but it so touched her for her part that when Henry Maxwell finished and she tried to sing the closing solo after the prayer her voice broke, and for the first time in her life she was obliged to sit down sobbing and unable to go on.

Over the church in the silence that followed this strange scene, sobs and the noise of weeping arose. When had the First church yielded to such a hapless of tears? What had become of its regular, precise, cold, conventional order of service, undisturbed by any vulgar emotion and unmoved by any foolish excitement? But the people had lately had their deepest convictions touched. They had been living so long on their surface feelings that they had almost forgotten the deeper wells of life. Now that they had broken to the surface the people were convinced of the meaning of their discipleship.

Henry Maxwell did not ask this morning for volunteers to join those who had already pledged to do as Jesus would, but when the congregation had finally gone and he had entered the lecture room it seeded but a glance to show him that the original company of followers had been largely increased. The meeting was tender. It glowed with the Spirit's presence; it was alive with strong and lasting resolve to begin a war on the whisky power of Raymond that would break its reign. Since the first Sunday when the first company of volunteers had pledged themselves to do as Jesus would do the different meetings had been characterized by distinct impulses or impulselessness. Today the entire force of the gathering seemed to be directed to this one large purpose. It was a meeting full of broken prayers, of contrition, confession, of strong yearning for a new and better city life, and all through it ran the one general cry for deliverance from the saloon and its awful curse.

But if the First church was deeply stirred by the events of the week gone the Rectangle also felt moved strongly in its own way. The death of Lorens was not in itself so remarkable a fact. It was her recent association with the people from the city that lifted her into special prominence and surrounded her death with more than ordinary importance. Every one in the Rectangle knew that Lorens was at this moment lying in the Page mansion up on the avenue. Exaggerated reports of the magnificence of the casket had already furnished material for eager gossip. The Rectangle was excited to know the details of the funeral. Would it be public? What did Miss Page intend to do? The Rectangle had never before mingled even in this distantly personal manner with the aristocracy on the boulevard. The opportunities for doing so were not frequent. Gray and his wife were besieged by inquiries as to what Lorens's friends and acquaintances were expected to do in paying their last respects to her, for her acquaintance was large, and because of her recent converts were among her friends.

So that is how it happened Monday afternoon at the tent that the funeral service of Lorens was held before an enormous audience that choked the tent and overflowed beyond all previous bounds. Gray had gone to Virginia, and after talking it over with her and with Henry Maxwell the arrangements had been made.

"I am and always have been opposed to large public funerals," said Gray, whose complete, wholesome simplicity of character was one of its great sources of strength, "but the cry of the poor creatures who knew Lorens is so earnest that I do not know how to refuse the desire to see her and pay her poor body some last little honor. What do you think, Mr. Maxwell? I will be guided by your judgment in the matter. I am sure that whatever you and Miss Page think is best will be right."

"I feel so you do," replied Mr. Maxwell. "Under direct circumstances I have a great distaste for what seems like display at such times, but this seems different. The people at the Rectangle will not come here to a service. I think the most Christian thing will be to let them have the service at the tent. Do you think so, Virginia?"

"Yes," said Virginia sadly. "Poor soul! Ido not know but that some time I shall know she gave her life for mine. We certainly cannot end will not use the occasion for vulgar display. Let her friends be allowed the gratification of their wishes. I see no harm in it."

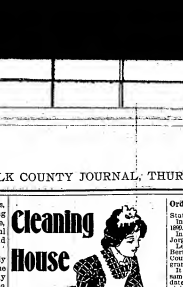
So the arrangements were made with some difficulty for the service at the tent, and Virginia, with her uncle and Rollin, accompanied by Henry Maxwell, Rachel, President Marsh and the quartet from the First church, went down and witnessed one of the strange scenes of their lives. It happened that that afternoon a noted newspaper correspondent was passing through Raymond on his way to an editorial convention in a neighboring city. He heard of the contemplated service at the tent and was present that afternoon. His description of it was written in a graphic style that caught the attention of very many readers the next day. A fragment of his account belongs to this part of the history of Raymond:

"There was a very unique and unusual fraceral service held here this afternoon in the tent of an evangelist, Rev. John Gray, down in the slum district known as the Rectangle. The occasion was the funeral of the killing of a woman during an election riot last Saturday night. It seems she had been recently converted during the evangelist's meetings and was killed while returning from one of the meetings in company with other converts and some of her friends. She was a common street drunkard, and yet the services at the tent were as impressive as any I ever witnessed in a metropolitan church over the most distinguished citizen.

"In the first place, a most exquisite anthem was sung by a trained choir. It struck me, of course, being a stranger to the place, with considerable astonishment to hear voices like those one attends expecting to hear only in great churches or concerts at such a meeting as this, but this most remarkable part of the music was also sung by a strikingly beautiful young woman, a Miss Winslow, who, if I remember rightly, is the young singer who was sought for by Crandal, the manager of National Opera, and who for some reason refused to accept his offer to go on the stage. She had a most wonderful manner in singing, and everybody was weeping before she had sung a dozen words. That, of course, is not so strange an effect to be produced at a funeral service, but the voice itself was one of ten thousand. I understand Miss Winslow sings in the First church and could probably command almost any salary as a public singer. She will probably be heard from soon. Such a voice could win its way anywhere.

"The service, aside from the singing, was peculiar. The evangelist, a man of apparently very simple, unassuming style, spoke a few words and he was followed by a fine looking man, the Rev. Henry Maxwell, pastor of the First church, of Raymond. Mr. Maxwell spoke of the fact that the dead woman had been fully prepared to go, but he spoke in a peculiarly sensitive manner of the effect of the liquor business on the lives of men and women like this one. Raymond, of course, being a railroad town and the center of the great packing interests for this region, is full of saloons. I caught from the minister's remarks that he had only recently changed his views in regard to license. He certainly made a very striking and yet it was in no sense an inappropriate address for a funeral.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]



Once or twice a year the good housewife has a thorough house cleaning. The house has been swept and dusted every day in the year, but the housewife knows that in spite of vigilance dust accumulates in cracks and corners, and is only to be removed by special effort.

It's the same way with the body. You look after it every day. You take all the ordinary precautions of cleanliness and health. Yet the body needs its special cleaning to rid it of the accumulations of waste and poisonous matter which invite disease. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, taken regularly once or twice a year, would save many a sickness. It purifies the blood, strengthens the stomach, and cleanses the body of poisonous accumulations.

"Last spring I had a severe attack of pneumonia, which left me with a bad cough, and also left my lungs in a very bad condition," writes John M. Russell, Esq., of Great Cherokee Nut, Hall Co., Ga. "I had no appetite and was so weak I could scarcely walk. I got two bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and 'Pellets.' I believe saved my life. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I am able now to do very good work."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, in paper covers, sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Storm Sash. Storm Sash.

We have a complete stock—and our prices are right. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 24, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of Bertil C. Jorgenson, deceased:
Letters of administration on the estate of Bertil C. Jorgenson deceased, late of the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, having been granted to J. J. Iha.
It is Ordered, That six months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the Probate Court office for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.
It is further ordered, That the 29th day of May, 1900
at ten o'clock a. m. as a special term of said Probate Court, to be held at the Probate Court room in Crookston in said county, be and the same hereby is appointed special time and place when and where the said Probate Court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.
Let notice of said time and place be given by publication in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.
Dated at Crookston this 24th day of November, A. D. 1899.
By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
[34-37] Judge of Probate.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 15, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of Hanken H. Nelsen, deceased.
Letters of administration on the estate of Hanken H. Nelsen, deceased, late of the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, having been granted to Andrew T. Hanson.
It is Ordered, That six months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the probate court of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.
It is Further Ordered, That the
22nd day of May, 1900
at ten o'clock a. m. at a special term of said probate court, to be held at the probate office in Crookston in said county, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said probate court will examine and adjust such claims and demands.
And it is Further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested in said estate by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.
Dated at Crookston this 15th day of November, 1899.
By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
[33-35] Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 45-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Isabella I. Chilbert and John Calchert, her husband, mortgagors, to George Q. Erskine, mortgagee, bearing date the 1st day of June 1895, and which a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota on the 16th day of June 1895, at 11 o'clock a. m. in book 64 of mortgages, on page 490-13 and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.
Now, therefore, notice is hereby given That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:
Lots numbered one (1) two (2) three (3) and four (4) of block number eleven (11) in Jerome's addition to the town (now city) of Crookston according to the recorded plat thereof on file in office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereto belonging, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston in said County and State, on the 8th day of December 1899,
at ten o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 45-100 dollars, with interest at 10 per cent per annum, said premises, and the attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.
Dated Oct. 28, A. D. 1899.
A. A. HELLEN, GEORGE Q. ERSKINE,
Attorney. Mortgagee.
Crookston, Minnesota. [29-34]

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota.
In the matter of Hanken H. Nelson, bankrupt.
To the creditors of Hanken H. Nelson, of Crookston, in the county of Polk, and district aforesaid, a bankrupt:
Notice is hereby given that on the 1st day of December, A. D. 1899, the said Hanken H. Nelson was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned, referee in bankruptcy, in said Crookston, on the 4th day of December, A. D. 1899, at 10 o'clock a. m. at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.
Dated Nov. 16, 1899.
OLE J. VAULE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.
DeFOREST BUCKLEY,
Attorney for Bankrupt.
Crookston, Minn.

Final Proof.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., November 6, 1899.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. on
December 15, 1899.
Viz: Anton N. Lasson, H. E. 11,836 for the se¼, section 30, township 149, range 47.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:
Ole P. Stodne, Charles Thuneson, Ole Simenson, all of Crookston, and Thor Thuneson, of Eldred.
SYLVESTER PETERSON,
[34-37] Register.

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture
AND Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a house... CROOKSTON, MINN.

PATENTS DESIGNS TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS OBTAINED

MUNN & CO. RECEIVE SPECIAL NOTICE in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without charge, and any person who has made a sketch or model of his invention can learn our opinion as to whether it is probably patentable. Notice in "Inventive Age." Book "How to obtain Patents" FREE

Charges moderate. No fee till patent is secured. Letters strictly confidential. Address, E. G. SIGGERS, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C.

LION COFFEE

Used in Millions of Homes!

Accept no substitute!
Insist on LION COFFEE, in 1 lb. pkgs.

Best Coffee for the Money!

Try LION COFFEE and you will never use any other. It is absolutely pure Coffee and nothing but Coffee.

These articles mailed FREE in exchange for lion heads cut from front of 1 lb. LION COFFEE pkgs.

Silk Umbrella (either Lady's or Gents).

Sent by express (charges prepaid), for 170 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

A very fine umbrella, made of union silk taffeta; its steel frame with nickel rod and silver steel and silver Congo handle. Would cost $2.00 at the stores.

STRENGTH, PURITY AND FLAVOR

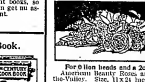
Fancy Gold Ring.

For 8 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Genuine Ruby Setting Gold Ring.

For 28 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

These rings are genuine rolled-gold plate, having the exact appearance and qualities of solid gold, and are warranted by the makers to last two years with ordinary usage. New patterns sent every season.



To Determine the Size

Cut a strip of thick paper so that the ends will just meet when drawn closely around the second joint of the finger. Lay one end on this diagram so the 0 end will come the center of the smallest circle.

Dress-Pin Set.

Mailed free for 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Three pins in these (larger than illustration) cluster rose, with beautiful pearl-colored heads. Suitable for waist-pins, cuff-pins, neck-pins or as a child's set.

"Knickerbocker" Watch.

For 90 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Size of watch 1¼ inch nickel-silver case, with a metal dial. Stem-wind and stem-set. Handsome nickel-plated chain. The famous "Knickerbocker" watch.

Pair of Lace Handkerchiefs.

Two cotton fine lawn handkerchiefs, with neat lace edge and Battenburg lace medallion insertion. Size 12 inches. Half-inch hem, making meeting hemstitched; ladies would pay fifty cents each for these handkerchiefs. Mailed free for 18 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2c. stamp.

Sash-Belt and Buckle.

Measure your waist-measure when sending.

Mailed free for 18 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp. Made of imitation leather, with fancy gros grain ribbon belting; stylish imitation enamel silver buckle; neat, strong and fashionable.

Silver Napkin-Ring.

For 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Size and material. Made of durable metal, beautifully silver-plated. Two different patterns.

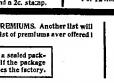
Coin-Purse.

For 18 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Color, dark brown. Made of fine kid leather; chamois lining; nickel frame, with strong snap-fastening.

Ladies' Watch Chain.

A double strand of best silk cord, united at intervals with colored beads; neat and pleasing. For 18 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Gent's Watch.



Mailed free for 90 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. The "Jaguar" gent's "stem-wind" watch; stem-set; open face; nickel case; double nickel-plated case; each watch accompanied by a guarantee of its durability and reliable time-keeper.

Children's Picture Book.

Given for 10 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Sixteen pages of No. 1 Bleached Muslin, with beautiful colored cover. We have different styles of cover, so you can get no assortment.

Art Picture, "Easter Greeting"

Given for 10 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Size of picture, 9x12 inches, suitable for framing. Also lion coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp.

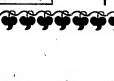
A highly artistic picture, printed in the finest drawing-room style. The subject is that of appropriate sentiment, a appropriate alternately to the little girl and her mother. Send for this picture at once.

Ladies' Pocket-Book.

Large size and latest style; fine enamel grain leather, with fancy separating divisions containing pocket for bills, pocket for coin and pocket for cards secure.

Given for 28 lion heads from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2c. stamp.

Table Cover.



Durable, handsome and useful; material used will wash and stand washing. 32 inches square.

Handsome fringed border. Mailed free for 25 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

Century Cook-Book.

500 pages of valuable recipes for cooking, also receipts for the toilet, the kitchen, the laundry, sick-room, nursery, parlor and reception-room, making a complete cyclopedia for the more common household duties.

Given for 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Flower Picture.

For 6 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Size, 11x14 inches. Bright and pleasing.

Boys' Pocket-Knife.

The "Boy-Scout" pocket-knife; strong, sharp blades; red-wood handle.

For 12 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

"The Dancing Lesson."

The green grass and trees, the little brown kitten and the girl's snow white dress form a pleasing combination of colors. Size, 15x21 inches. Mailed free for 8 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Ladies' Pen-Knife.

For 15 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2c. stamp. Large size; good material; handle nicely decorated and assorted colors.

Coin-Purse.

Given for 28 lion heads from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2c. stamp.

THE ABOVE ARE ONLY A FEW OF THE LION COFFEE PREMIUMS. Another list will shortly appear in this paper! Don't miss it! The grandest list of premiums ever offered!

You always know LION COFFEE by the wrapper. It is a sealed package, with the Lion's head in front. It is absolutely pure if the package is unbroken. LION COFFEE is roasted the day it leaves the factory.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

When writing for premiums send your letter in the same envelope or package with the lion heads. If more than 12 lion heads are sent, you can save postage by trimming down the margin. Ask your grocer for large illustrated premium list. Address all letters to the

WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

MET WITH HOT FIRE

BRITISH TAKE BOER STRONGHOLDS BUT SUFFER SEVERELY.

Artillery Fails to Dislodge and an Infantry Attack Is Ordered and Position After Position Carried—Loss at Gras Pan Nearly Two Hundred Dead, Wounded and Missing.

ORANGE RIVER, Monday, Nov. 27.—Another battle has occurred between the Boers and the British under General Methuen. The enemy, strongly entrenched, held a range of hills commanding both sides of the railway at Rooi Laagte, near Gras Pan. The Lancashires, under Lewis, reconnoitred in an armored train on Friday. The Boers shelled the train, killing Lewis and 2 privats. General Methuen then advanced. His column made a detour and bivouacked for the night at Simons Plains, three miles from the Boer position. At daybreak the advance began, the Guards forming the reserve. The Boer guns at once opened fire. Two batteries of British artillery posted on each side shelled the Boers, practice being good on both sides.

Infantry Assault Necessary.

The Boers stuck tenaciously to their positions, firing steadily and accurately. The duel, which constantly became hotter, lasted three hours. The Boer shells wounded several men of the naval brigade.

Finding it impossible to displace the Boers by artillery, General Methuen resolved upon an infantry attack. A brigade of infantry, including the Yorkshires, the Northampton, the Northumberlands and the Lancashires, with the naval brigade on the right, gallantly stormed the Boer positions in the face of a withering fire and carried hill after hill, the brigade under Colonel Money capturing the main position against a terrific fire, but suffering severely.

AT THE MODDER RIVER.

General Methuen Reports Still Another Bloody Battle.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The war office has received the following dispatch from General Buller, dated Tuesday:

"General Methuen reports: Modder River, Tuesday, Nov. 28.—Reconnoitered at 5 a. m., enemy's position on river Modder, and found them strongly entrenched and concealed. No means of outflanking, the river being full. Action commenced with artillery, mounted infantry and cavalry at 6:30, guard on right. Ninth brigade on left, attacked position in widely extended formation, at 6:40 and, supported by the artillery, found itself in front of the whole Boer force 8,000 strong, with two large guns, four Krappe, etc.

"The naval brigade rendered great assistance from the railway.

"After desperate hard fighting, which lasted ten hours, our men, without water or food, and in the burning sun, made the enemy quit his position.' General Pole-Carew was successful in getting a small party across the river, gallantly assisted by 300 sappers.

"I speak in terms of high praise of the conduct of all who were engaged in one of the hardest and most trying fights in the annals of the British army. If I can mention one arm particularly, it is two batteries of artillery."

HEAVY BRITISH LOSS.

Total Casualties at Gras Pan Nearly Two Hundred.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A dispatch has been received here from General Buller giving a list of casualties among the troops engaged in what was hitherto known as the battle of Gras Pan, but which is now officially designated the battle of Enslin. It proves, as anticipated, that the British success was heavily bought. The losses announced added the naval brigade casualties previously notified makes a grand total of 199 as the cost of General Methuen's second battle. The Yorkshires, apparently, bore with the naval brigade the brunt of the fighting, as there were, in addition to 3 officers, 48 of the rank and file killed, wounded and missing. The fact that the list contains the casualties of the Ninth Lancers seems to dispose of the fears that the cavalry was surrounded and captured, especially as none of the Lancers are reported missing.

THE MESSAGE IS READY.

Not Likely to Be Presented to Congress Before Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The president's annual message is practically completed and ready for transmission to congress when it is assembled next week. The message will be unusually long on account of the numerous and important topics it discusses. The portions of the message treating of different topics have been sent to the public printer as they have been finished, and proofs have been submitted for revision. It is not certain the message will be sent to congress next Monday. It is customary to send it on the day of the assembling of congress, but as the death of the vice president makes it certain that the senate will adjourn immediately out of respect to his memory, it is not unlikely that the message will be withheld until Tuesday. In the house the adjournment will only be delayed until that body is organized, when, upon announcement of the death of the vice president, it will also adjourn.

The cabinet meeting was devoted almost exclusively to the consideration of the message. A large portion of it was read by the president, after which the members entered into a long discussion of the policies and recommendations it contained. After adjournment several of the members expressed the opinion that it was an unusually strong and able document.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Minneapolis shoemakers will form an organization.

Winona county spent $20,000 on roads and bridges the past season.

Colonel Richard T. Flournoy died at his home in St. Paul, aged 59.

The Knox Presbyterian church at Hamline was dedicated Sunday.

The Hastings high school building has been completed. The cost was $30,000.

St. Paul leads American cities in the increase of building improvements for October.

The National Hereford association will hold its annual show at next year's state fair.

Charles Strong, an old resident of St. Paul and son of the late C. D. Strong, is dead, aged 67.

The postoffice at Lumberton, Leroy and Windor have been assigned to the presidential class.

A quarter of a million bushels of wheat left Duluth for Chicago during one day last week.

The work of laying rails on the Mankato and New Ulm branch has been practically completed.

Minnesota University football team was defeated Saturday by the Chicago University team, 29 to 0.

National Bank Examiner Simon R. Flynn has been selected for president of the Second National bank of St. Paul, to succeed D. A. Monfort, deceased.

The graduates of the Winona normal school for the first half of the year number eleven in the elementary course and five in the advanced course.

In the murder case of the state against Nelson Rust, charged with the murder of William McMullan, near Bemidji, the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty.

The Becker County bank has filed articles of incorporation with the public examiner. Chris Olson is president and F. M. Marsh is cashier. The authorized capital is $10,000.

Word has been received from Battle Creek, Mich., of the death there of Dee Norton, principal keeper of the St. Cloud reformatory. He had gone there two months ago for his health.

At the request of Warden-elect Reeve, Examiner Pope has detailed Deputy P. C. Keenan and W. P. Snow to go over the books of the state prison that will be turned over by Warden Wolfer.

Major George E. Pond, chief quartermaster of the Department of Dakota, has been instructed to ask for bids on clear timothy hay, baled, in lots of 1,500 tons, intended for shipment to the Philippines.

In 1895 there were 352,992 school children in the state and the population by the state census was 1,674,619. In 1899 the school population is 393,050, and the total population on the same ratio is 1,786,000.

The state grain department has seen its remittance covering receipts for the month of October to the state treasurer. The check was drawn for $30,000. In comparison with October of 1898, the month's receipts were $1,000 short.

Thomas Gillman of Minneapolis was fined $2 in the St. Paul municipal court for expectorating on the floor of a street car. The offense was committed on an interurban car. This is the first conviction under the street car sanitary ordinance.

It is said the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern will build from Albert Lea and Minneapolis, which the Rock Island will use to get into the Twin Cities, now that the Minneapolis and St. Louis will be used by the Illinois Central.

Captain Edwin V. Holcombe, of St. Paul, dropped dead on the street Sunday evening, of heart disease. Captain Holcombe was a famous river man in the old steamboating days. Of late years he has managed the Hotel Lafayette at Lake Minnetonka.

The St. Paul members of the Northwestern Scandinavian Sangerfest society met at the Windsor hotel to plan on arrangements for the sangerfest of the organization, which will be held in St. Paul July 5, 7 and 8, of next year. It is expected that 1,500 singers will visit the city for the event.

One of the biggest industries in Northern Minnesota this winter will be that of the sitting. The railroad tie crop will be about 3,000,000 in the Duluth district, or double that of last winter. One Duluth contractor alone, L. E. Kenaday, will put in 1,000,000 ties the coming winter.

There is talk in railway circles of the probability that the Chicago Great Western may extend from Mankato to St. Cloud, over an old route surveyed several years ago. Such a route would give the Great Western a valuable territory and a direct north and south connection with its main line from the central part of the state.

The state game and fish commission has completed its annual distribution of fish fry in the lakes and rivers of the state. The commission placed about 2,000,000 trout fry, nearly 1,000,000 pike, 275,000 crappies and 62,000 bass. It still has on hand over 1,000,000 trout eggs that are being hatched, and an equal number of other varieties.

A meeting of the special committee of the board of managers of the State Agricultural society was held at the Merchants' hotel Saturday afternoon to prepare a programme for the annual meeting of the association, to be held in the senate chamber at the capitol building on January 9-11. It is the intention of the managers to make this a strong educational meeting and to this end a number of prominent agriculturalists and stock breeders have been invited to participate.

TAKEN BY THE NAVY

PROVINCE OF ZAMBOANGA ACCEPTS AMERICAN AUTHORITY.

Comprises the Entire Southern Half of the Island of Mindanao, the Second Largest of the Philippine Group—Surrender Is Unconditional, Numerous Local Chiefs Daily'og Their Loyalty.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Secretary of the Navy Long has received a cablegram from Admiral Watson informing him that the entire province of Zamboanga, island of Mindanao, had surrendered unconditionally to Commander Very of the Castine. The surrender was made on the 18th inst. Admiral Watson's dispatch follows:

"Nov. 18 entire province Zamboanga surrendered to Very unconditionally. Delivery all guns promised. Numerous local chiefs declared loyalty."

The information contained in Admiral Watson's dispatch was received by the president and his advisers with unconcealed satisfaction. The surrender of the province of Zamboanga is regarded as of the revolution in the island of Mindanao, and, it is believed, will be a hard blow to those who are still endeavoring to maintain the insurrection in the island of Luzon. On the 21st inst. Admiral Watson cabled the navy department that Commander Very had captured the city of Zamboanga on the 18th. He was aided by friendly natives and Moros and was holding the town pending the arrival of reinforcements from Jolo. On the same day General Otis informed the war department that he had ordered two companies of infantry to be sent to Zamboanga from Jolo.

The Beginning of the End

Zamboanga is the principal city of the island of Mindanao, which is the second largest island of the Philippine group.

Advices from Admiral Watson indicate that the entire southern half of the island has yielded.

WHIPPED BY BELL.

Force of General Alejandrino and San Miguel Scattered by the Americans.

MANILA, Nov. 26.—Colonel Bell has defeated and scattered the brigades of General Alejandrino and General San Miguel. The engagement took place on the summit of a mountain. The insurgents being so confident of the impregnability of their position that they had their families with them. The Americans captured all the enemy's munitions and artillery.

FEARFUL EXPERIENCE.

Troops on the Transport Mannesse Narrowly Escape Disaster.

MANILA, Nov. 23.—The transport Mannesse, with Lieutenant Colonel Webb C. Hayes and three companies of the Thirty-first infantry on board, has arrived here. She narrowly escaped disaster. The officers and soldiers were for twelve days bailing water hourly. The steamer was unseaworthy, undermanned and short of provisions. Her engines broke down and she rolled three days in a typhoon.

HAVE AGREED TO SCATTER.

Filipinos Will Hereafter Follow Guerrilla Methods.

MANILA, Nov. 27.—The last Filipino council of war was held by the revolutionary leaders at Bayambang on the 18th in the house now occupied by General MacArthur. It was attended by Aguinaldo, Pio del Pilar, Garcia, Alejandrino and some members of the so-called cabinet. Information has reached General MacArthur from several sources to the effect that the council recognized the futility of attempting further resistance to the Americans with united forces and agreed that the Filipino troops should scatter and should hereafter follow guerrilla methods. The desperate situation of the generals will be their approximate forces is as follows:

General Concepcion, with 340 men, in New Ecija province; General Macabelos, with 325 men, at Biacan; General Pio Del Pilar, with 800 men, northeast of Malolos; General Aquino, with 600 men, at Arayat; General Mascardo, with 1,200 men, west of Angeles, and the largest force, probably under General Trias, in Cavite provinces.

Reports of ambuscades and skirmishes come from every section of the country along the railways. Those districts seem to be filled with small bands.

Friends of Americans Killed.

Five Filipinos ambushed an American surgeon near Capas. He shot one and the rest fled. At Malasqui the officials who welcomed the Americans were murdered. This was the only railroad town which the Americans did not garrison and on the night the troops withdrew a band of insurgents entered, dragged Antonio Mejia, president of the town, into the street and cut his throat. The murderers then assassinated the vice president and five members of the town council in the same manner and told the frightened natives who witnessed the slaughter to spread the news that a similar fate awaited all friends of the Americans.

The mayor of San Carlos, who rode in the carriage with General MacArthur and Colonel Bell when the Americans entered the town amid the cheers of the people, was murdered the next night.

Military activity continues in every section. Colonel Smith's command has advanced from Bayambang upon Mangatarem, where it is supposed there is a large insurgent force. Two battalions of the newly arrived Twenty-eighth infantry have been sent by escoon to Bacoor to reinforce the south line.

Dewey Will Celebrate at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Admiral Dewey has formally accepted the invitation to visit Chicago May 1, next year.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Nov. 23.

The National Grange, in session at Springfield, O., adopted resolutions condemning trusts.

The Marquis of Salisbury is suffering from an attack of influenza and is unable to attend to public business.

The navy department has awarded the contract for the dry dock at League Island navyyard, Philadelphia, to the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific company for $783,000.

It is learned from reliable authority that arrangements have practically been completed which will give the Illinois Central control of the Minneapolis and St. Louis.

Negotiations are now in progress looking to a meeting in California before the end of the year between the football elevens of the Universersities of California and Chicago.

At the annual meeting of the American Hereford Breeders' association, held at Chicago, an appropriation of $15,000 was voted to be used as prize money to be offered Hereford cattle exhibitors.

Friday, Nov. 24.

Sharp fighting has occurred in Panay. The Americans lost 4 killed and 29 wounded.

An anti-Bryan movement has been started by Maryland Democrats who hope to prevent the Nebraskan's nomination.

The wage question on the Wheeling and Lake Erie railway has been settled, a general advance equivalent to about 10 per cent being granted.

The British cabinet is said to have decided that the basis of settlement of the war will be a united South Africa modeled upon the Canadian plan.

The Jefferson county (Ky.) canvassers decided against Goebel, and the question of throwing out the vote of Louisville goes to the state election board.

The postmaster general has issued an order that all mail matter passing between the United States and its island possessions and among the latter is subject to the domestic United States classifications as to rates.

Saturday, Nov. 25.

The American Live Stock association has been absorbed by the National Live Stock association.

The Pollak-Virag rapid automatic cash railway has been used successfully in Chicago, 150,000 words being sent in an hour.

General Leonard Wood, whose appointment as civil governor of Cuba is looked for, has been summoned to Washington.

General Manager F. C. Hills of the Sioux City, O'Neil and Western railroad, died of arsenic poisoning, having eaten by mistake breakfast food in which the drug had been mixed for the purpose of killing rats.

Frank and George Bailey, prominent business men of Stockbridge, Mich., were found in the rear of their store, both shot through the head. George was dead and Frank was dying. It is thought that Frank shot his brother and then himself. Mental trouble.

Monday, Nov. 27.

Colonel George R. Davis, director general of the Chicago world's fair, is dead.

Baron Paul Veitinghoff, a representative of the Russian government, is in Chicago buying horses for the czar's army.

New light has been thrown upon the blowing up of the Maine, which is said to have been done with gun cotton torpedoes.

Goebel is credited with an intention to bring a mandatory injunction suit against the Kentucky state election board in order to exclude the votes of three counties.

Senator Hayward of Nebraska is gradually growing weaker, his pulse is accelerating and it is thought by those best acquainted with the case that he cannot survive the week.

Tuesday, Nov. 28.

Charles Coghlan, the actor, died in Texas Monday.

Prominent Turks have been arrested for conspiring to kill the sultan.

Serious trouble in Cuba is threatened if congress does not set a date for the independence of the island.

The Miller conveyor, for "coaling ship" while towing at sea, has been given a trial by the navy department and has proven a success.

General Israel C. Smith of Grand Rapids, Mich., aged 60 years, was instantly killed by the accidental discharge of his gun while hunting.

Governor Beadley and both the Kentucky senators may call upon President McKinley to declare martial law in that state if Goebel is given a certificate of election as a result of disfranchising whole counties.

Wednesday, Nov. 29.

Public Examiner Taylor of South Dakota has resigned.

Admiral Dewey is quoted as desirous of a second term for President McKinley.

The Silver Republicans conferring in Chicago decided to adhere to the Bryan Democracy.

A bill practically disfranchising colored voters was almost unanimously defeated in the Georgia legislature.

Mr. Balfour expresses the opinion that the Boers, in declaring war, made a bid for empire instead of merely striking for their liberty.

Harper & Bros., the New York publishers, are in enoh straits that a receivership is necessary. The liabilities are $5,000,000, $3,000,000 being unsecured.

The North China Daily News has a dispatch from Che Foo, province of Shan Tung, which reports a serious anti-Christian rising among the natives in the Nai Fu district.

Crookston Tannery

Aug. Miller & Co.
Proprietors.

Watch this Next Week

Spend the Holidays at Home

$40

Canadian excursion via Northern Pacific

Canadian Excursion

Tickets will be sold by the Northern Pacific from December 1 to December 31 inclusive, to principal points in.....

Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia.

Good for three months from date of sale, with liberal stop-over privileges. Limit will be extended upon payment of reasonable additional sums. Round trip tickets will be sold to points as far east as Montreal for $40.00, and at correspondingly low rates to points east of Montreal in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Call on agents of the Northern Pacific Ry., for detailed information.

CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. & T. A.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

To Prospective Investors in New Buildings

When laying out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have our architect include electric wiring in his specifications.

Call us up before letting your Contract.

We shall be pleased to give ou the benefit of our experience in laing out wiring plans.

It Will Cost You Nothing

to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want Us to Figure on your Wiring

We are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market.

Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

NORTHLAND.

John Fosmoe is laid up with rheumatism.

Miss Nora Knutson was visiting with friends here on Sunday.

Thos. Dalen left for the Forks Saturday on very pleasant business.

Thos. Pigneskan was visiting with Eggens last week. He was accompanied by Miss Lizzie Kleven.

H. Praschak has just completed drilling a well. A flow of 400 barrels a day was reached at the depth of 185 feet.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Emil Johnson and Alfrida Hillard, to occur Thanksgiving Day at the home of the bride.

Dan Johnson has just completed the grading of three miles in the town of Northland. Northland has been a little backward in the line of roads but is now rapidly taking the lead.

We are increasing; how is this for one week: Mr. and Mrs. John F. Anderson, a daughter; Mr. and Mrs. John Flatten, a twelve pound boy; Mr. and Mrs. A. Thompson, a daughter.

TWIN VALLEY.

O. S. Aasgaard visited with Rev. Lien at Strand Sunday.

Mrs. Kjellaud, of Ada, is visiting with her sister Mrs. Dahl this week.

Ole Moen has commenced a new restaurant beside the butcher shop.

A little girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Overgaard last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Waller drove to Ulen on Tuesday to attend the conference.

D. P. Waller returned last Saturday night from a two days' visit at Crookston.

Rev. Dale, Mr. Skaar and Mr. Moen left last Monday night for Ulen to attend the conference.

All accident happened up in the woods last week, a small boy shot a large deer with a 22-short rifle.

Mr. Moen, of Lake Park, has been here this week collecting for the orphans home of that place.

Rev. Aschim, who has been visiting with Rev. Dale a couple of days, left Monday night for his home at Duluth.

Rev. Batse, of Hitterdahl, came up this morning to preside over the three days' meeting at the Wild Rice church.

M. E. Dahl has had ten cords of rock delivered on his lot beside the postoffice to be used for the basement in the new drug store which he intends to build next spring.

Misses Julia Aamoth, Clara Hanson and Julia Bently and Messrs. Dohr, E. Bently and A. O. Waller went down to Syre last Saturday night to attend the dance given in the old hardware store.

The crowd of young people from this place who took in the dance at Syre last Saturday night might have had a sad accident had they tipped into something eleethan a soft slough.

BELTRAMI

John Gunder from Fertile was in town on Saturday transacting business.

H. B. Budd lost a very valuable horse last week, known by the name of Soapy.

Wilmer McIntosh has just returned from a business trip to Duluth. He says no place like home.

August Pearson from Ada was in town Tuesday looking after the interest of the Deering Harvest Co.

Any pleasant day you may see A. P. H. out on the road with his celebrated white roadsters for an airing.

Mrs. A. N. Midde and Miss Nettie Gleason drove to Crookston on Saturday combining pleasure with business.

Gust Sinder is building a large stock barn and expects to keep many cattle on his farm two and a half miles west of town.

Beltrami the great hay center of the Red River Valley has shipped near 200 carloads in the last 60 days. So reported by the railroad agent.

Mr. Ambros, the genial salesman representing the Ray Mercantile Company of Crookston, was in town on Saturday visiting our merchants.

F. R. Hallock, of Edna, is contemplating a business and pleasure trip to the east. He will visit Chicago, Washington, D. C. and other cities east.

St. Anthony and Dakota Lumber Company, of Beltrami, are doing a rushing business in the lumber trade which speaks well for our farmers who are the purchasers.

ULEN.

Dr. Gilmore from Lake Park called on the Ulen people Thursday.

Three carloads of choice baled hay were shipped from here Friday.

The Norwegian conference meets here this week, about twenty have arrived.

There have been great improvements made on the streets during the last week by filling up the pond in front of the City Drug store.

Hartness & Dahl, two of our leading merchants, are closing out their entire stock of general merchandise at cost.

Charlie Stebbins, who has been visiting in the Twin Cities for the last week, arrived home Sunday morning.

The funeral of Mrs. Peters took place last Saturday. The deceased had moved to town only a short time ago but had already made many friends who will greatly miss her.

SHELLY.

(Too late for last week.)

Dr. Douglas, from Hendrum, was here Wednesday.

Andrew Olson, of Hillshoro, transacted business here last Tuesday.

Ole Bye and D.Payne, of Nellsville, visited with friends here last Sunday.

Geo. Afritt went to Fergus Falls last Saturday returning Monday morning.

Mrs. Theo. Neyers and Miss Marie Olson made a short trip to Crookston Tuesday.

Dr. Los. of Crookston, was here on professional business Tuesday and Wednesday.

E. C. Onstad and Iver Braaten, of Nellsville, transacted business here Wednesday.

A. S. Olds, Great Northern Express auditor, was here last Saturday checking up Agent Olson.

Wm. Craig, superintendent Northwestern Elevator company, was here on business last Wednesday.

A. P. Mygaard, who has been carpentering with Jens Grinstad, returned to Halstad last Wednesday.

W. E. Cleveland hiked up from Fargo Saturday afternoon, and spent Sunday and Monday with his folks. He went back to Fargo Monday evening where he is attending the Fargo college.

FELTON.

A Modern Woodman lodge is being organized here.

A new hell arrived for our new school house last week.

Ole Sannan, wife and daughter made a trip to Ada Saturday.

F. A. Johnson and Wm. Scott drove to Georgetown last Saturday.

The Paranto Brothers have their new harness shop nearly completed.

Opsahl & Dahl have built an addition 16x30, to their two story building.

Dr. Stewart, of Ada, was here Friday night attending to some professional duties.

J. Bildon sold his house and lot here to Thos. Barry last week, consideration $200.

A. B. Kiergaard has erected a two story building 24x40 and has opened therein a grocery store.

C. L. Talnter, who keeps the meat market, has enlarged and improved his building on Main street.

Nelson A. Pardee is erecting a dwelling and barn on his farm, recently bought from Peter Aasved.

More than 110 cars of hay, averging from 10 to 15 tons per car, have been shipped this month to the lumber camps.

A new, four-room, handsome school house was put up last summer. Miss Opsall is in charge of the educational affairs.

W. P. Barry disposed of his quarter section of land northwest of town last week to the Wheeler Land Company for $13 per acre.

Mrs. J. R. Waters and children took the passenger south Sunday evening for an extended visit to Iowa, their former home.

M. T. Dahlquist has erected in the east part of town a large house 14x22 with three additions 14x18, 14x14 and 14x16, with 14 foot posts.

Fred Woech, the Great Northern section foreman, this fall s new two story house, 14x22, with two additions 10x14 and 14x14.

J. R. Waters has recently sold a quarter section of land situated three miles north of town, to Mr. McCoy, of Forest City, Iowa, at $15 an acre.

In this place like in all others in the valley there has been considerable building going on this year and the prospects are bright for still more in 1900.

McHugh & Garden erected last summer a large elevator capable of holding 20,000 bushels of grain. H. M. Braseth is the man who manages the business.

The Clay County bank, which put up, last May, a two story building 22x32, in the second story of which is a printing office, is doing a business much more extensive than was hoped for.

M. J. Paranto is putting up a building—it is not quite finished—16x28 with 14 foot posts. Here the proprietor has tonsorial parlors, a harness shop and a bicycle repair shop. Mr. Paranto formerly lived in Wadena. He expects his wife this week.

LENGBY.

Mrs. G. H. Calmer, of Crookston, was visiting with Mrs. Slatar last week.

Theodore Ralson, who has been working on a farm near Dundale all summer, returned to Lengby last Wednesday.

The business men of town had teamsnut work grading the street and putting in a bridge on First avenue last week.

C. Carlson has bought forty acres of land of Sonah Peterson west of town.

J. T. Wilson, who has had charge of a large crew of men here for the past two months, left last Wednesday for Larimore for a well earned rest. The crew is at present in charge of J. J. Bruce and commenced on the drainage ditch in the north part Tuesday last.

G. O. Strandrud called on Lengby friends last Wednesday.

L. Lobo, the Fosston broker, was here this week and sold a lot and house to Ole Lenberg.

Ole E. Haugstad has been in Fosston a few days this week on business.

Mrs. Jacob Olson, of Brundvold, left last Saturday for her home after a few days visit with her daughter Mrs. Nelson.

The season for shooting and hunting deer closed last week. Only a few were brought into town. The hunters claim the deer are hard to get this year.

Mr and Mrs. A. J. Olson, formerly of Lengby now of Fosston, paid their numerous friends here a visit last Sunday.

Carl Fredrickson, Martin Olson and John and Henry Furuseth were visiting in Fosston Sunday.

N. O. Nelson and Ole Lenberg made a trip to Ulen last Sunday.

Adolf Olson and Peter Vien reached here on the train from Fosston Tuesday.

FERTILE.

R. E. English has started a secondhand furniture store.

Dan Scott is again in town after having been out west all summer.

Hans Hendrie, who has been in Washington for the last two years, is back on a visit. He expects to go back there again.

The streets are full of farmers these fine days.

W. D. Ferguson and Sven Dyrlie from Emmetsburg, Ia., E. E. Jones and Homer Rogers, Windom, and R. S. Brown, Estherville, Ia., were in town Friday and Saturday looking up land.

R. S. Conkle came in from Gully Sunday and went to Ada Monday as witness in a lawsuit against the Northern Pacific railway, brought by Mr. Conard, of Ada, for damages alleged to have been done him by prairie fires set by as engines.

J. Walseth returned from Minneapolis Monday.

W. A. Case, the Woodman organizer, drove in from Betrumi Tuesday. He expects to start a camp here some day.

H. Peiss, of Mcintosh, N. D., was in town this week on business.

Mrs. C. Snyder has been quite sick for several days.

Martin Flom is in from Erskine on business.

Everybody is buying turkeys for Thanksgiving.

A big time at the hall Thursday evening. (Too late for last week.)

Nels Christianson is on the sick list.

Grand ball at the hall Thanksgiving night.

Weather is excellent for this time of the year.

N. J. Nelson was in town Monday and Tuesday,

The Y. L. society meet at Mrs. Sparby's this week.

Sheriff Lawrence paid us a visit last Sunday and Monday.

S. S. Kolden, Plano collector, is in town looking after collections.

Chas. Tschida's new brand "The Leader" is having a great run.

Ole Olson and Wm. Conklin, of Maple Bay were in town Tuesday.

Chauncy Ward is learning the barber's trade at Eagles barber shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Kaniel returned Tuesday from a visit to their son at Ulen.

Oscar Hage went to Halstad for a short visit last Thursday returning Wednesday.

Mr. Varty, of Spring Creek, last Saturday sold at auction his horses and machinery.

P. N. Bain left for St. Paul Monday with a car of stock. Mr. Bain is buying considerable stock.

The boys are trying to organize a Mandolin club, several having already purchased instruments.

Chas. Nier, who was taken to a hospital at Crookston some time ago, returned Monday night very much improved.

Chas. Tschida returned last night from Mclntosh and Fosston, where he had been in the interest of his cigar factory.

MENTOR.

J. L. Sletten went to Crookston Tuesday to transact business.

Andrew Ricke is building a residence on his farm west of town.

P. N. Bain is building an addition to the house of J. O. Sather here in town.

A. K. Austin is shipping a lot of live poultry these days to Eastern markets.

F. E. LePage received the seats for the school yesterday, also hooks and apparatus.

Dr. Foster, the Grand Forks dentist, was in town Saturday and Sunday, doing dental work.

Lewis Larsen received a consignment of fruits and cigars for his restaurant and fruit store Monday.

Drinkwine Bros. have got their engine in place in their feed mill, and are now ready to do all kinds of feed grinding.

Our G. N. Station Agent Frank Whiting, is going to leave us. He is going to Montana to take a position as operator.

Rev. Sorenson will hold services in the Congregational church Sunday Dec. 3, in the Norwegian language, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The county surveyor and the viewers on the Grove Park drainage ditch were here Monday and Thesday surveying the ditch.

Mr. Roberts has started a confectionery, cigar and stationery store in Ricke's Front. Choice cigars and candy always on hand.

Frank Bain is loading several carloads of wood every day. He is a hustler. He has got the contract to load all the wood for O'Brien, and it seems as though it is no trouble for Frank to get men to load.

J. L. Sletten received some of the sleds manufactured by the Felsing Gustafson Co., Maple Bay, yesterday, also one of their Dewey washing machines. The sleds are good heavy ones and the washing machine is a dandy. He is going to handle these for the Felsing, Gustafson Co.

SOLWAY.

School no commenced in the new school house.

Mr. Brasefield accompanied by his father has gone to Ohio for medical treatment.

The Sliters-hospital will open in a few days.

Mr. Smith has been united in marriage to a lady from Devils Lake. Judge Hildreth tied the nuptial knot.

A. Olberg, of Erskine, has located his saw mill about ten miles north of town, where he will cut and deliver at Solway a large quantity of lumber this coming winter.

Jas. Harry and Peter Carrel were arrested last Saturday by City Marshal Liddy and held over till Sunday, when the sheriff from Crookston took them into his custody. Handcuffed both of them together and returned to Crookston on the afternoon train. The charge against them was stealing wheat.

SOUTH CROOKSTON.

The writer wishes to state the improvements in the 5th ward since last Thanksgiving. One year ago Carman was anything but booming. In fact it is clear that is just past we have seen eleven new buildings erected here. In mentioning a few the attention of the readers of the JOURNAL is called to the new round house completed by the Railroad Magnet J. J. Hill, next comes the new school house, a large fine two story building, one that the people of the 5th ward can well feel proud of, then come two dwelling houses put up by L. Rivard, of Crookston, the new store building of C. A. Myers facing Main street and several others. Among our business places here is the Hotel Rustler, managed by Con Keyplin, one of the best restaurant men in the northwest and a man who has made a nice sum of money since coming here, and then we would not forget to mention Wm. Brown another first class hotel man. Mr. Brown is a good business man and has many friends here. Mr. Sullivan is another hotel man who is doing a nice business. E. D. Childs is also a live business man who has been engaged in the dairy industry here for years. Ucrams is certainly on the boom. A large force of railroad men is employed here and a good many railroad men have moved their families here and expect to make this their future home. We have also some first class tradesman, among them being G. W. Banks and T. C. Stewart, who handle the hammer and saw with skill. Sidewalks too have been built between here and the city beyond the bridge. All that is needed now is street cars.

Wm. Arnold has left again to buy cattle up the St. Vincent line.

Mr. McGregor has now got settled in his brand new house in Jerome's addition.

E. D. Childs has a fine new milk wagon on the road now in place of the old one.

Mr. Roberts has moved into the McGregor house here that was vacated by Mr. McGregor a few days ago.

J. G. Phillips has taken a position as night clerk in the new restaurant here just opened by Mr. Smith. Jim is all right and will get trade.

Mr. Smith an experienced restaurant man, has opened a nice, neat, clean place here and a first class meal you can get if you just call at Smith's.

[Too late for last week]

Steve Barlow has moved his family to Ada from Crookston and will make his home here in the future.

Mrs. Jef Lowry expects to leave soon for West Superior, where her husband is employed in railroad work.

Alex Gray has come in from Hixon where he has been buying wheat and he will make his home in the 5th ward for the winter.

Miss Annie Vennet of the Hotel Rustler is entertaining her sister who arrived here on Monday and will make an extended visit.

Dan Hughes, an old timer of the 5th ward, expects to return here to live about the 1st of December. We will all be glad to see Dan come back.

South Crookston young people all went out to John Hairon's last Tuesday evening and enjoyed themselves in dancing till the wee small hours of Wednesday morning. All report having a good time.

Mrs. Hayes and children left on Wednesday evening for St. Paul where she will join Mr. Hayes. They expect to make their home in St. Paul. Mrs. Hayes is a lady highly respected by all and will be missed in the 5th ward.

ANGUS.

J. M. Palmer spent Monday night in Grand Forks.

Mrs. J. M. Palmer returned home Tuesday from her visit to Grand Forks.

L. F. Montgomery and wife were in Tabor on Tuesday.

F. McLennan, J. F. Montgomery, A. T. Campbell and George Briggs were in Warren on Wednesday night.

Mr. Lemen drove to Warren on Wednesday.

Mrs. D. R. Perkins was in Grand Forks to visit her husband who is in the hospital at that place.

W. Lemen drove to the Red River on Thursday on business and on Friday took the train for Grand Forks.

J. M. Palmer and A. Strobie were in Grand Forks on Friday.

John Steele was in Tabor on Thursday.

Louis Osterloh and wife went to Grand Forks Saturday on business.

Mrs. D. H. Miller and son Robert drove to Grand Forks Saturday.

Mrs. J. L. Cowden drove to Warren Monday.

Fred Strobie, wife, son William and daughter Magzie were in Grand Forks Monday.

SHELLY.

Miss Sina Hawkins, of Halstad, visited with her brother Christ last week.

T. Sanderson and family made a visit to Fisher last Sunday.

A. O. Anderson and O. Oberson are attending court at Ada this week.

Geo. Hawkins came up on his wheel from Halstad last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Tucker, who have been staying here for some time, returned to their home at Minneapolis last Monday.

W. W. Marsh, of Caledonia, boarded Monday's train for Fisco.

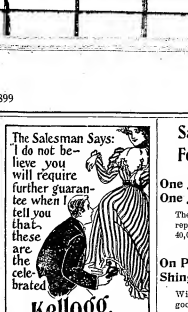
L. M. Odegaard, of Hillsboro, has opened up a restaurant in the Peter Smith building.

It is rumored that a fire from Caledonia intend putting in an exclusive farm machinery hall here. There is room for such an enterprise here.

Mrs. S. E. Berch, who has been visiting with her folks here returned to her home at Halstad Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Hurley, of Deane, N. D., were in town Tuesday.

The Thanksgiving ball to be given at Caledonia, N. D., this evening will no doubt be one of the grandest of the season and they have spared no expense to make it a success. The well known Bye's orchestra will furnish the music and Clerk of Court Kelly of Shelly has been secured as prompter. We shall all be there.



Saw Mill Machinery For Sale Cheap.

One 3-Saw Lath Bolter,
One 3-Saw Lath Mill,

The above machines are in good repair and capable of making 40,000 lath in ten hours.

On Perkins Hand Shingle Machine

With drop tilt attachment — in good repair.

A complete outfit of Saws and Collars goes with above machinery.

Write for Prices.

CROOKSTON LUMBER CO.,
Crookston, Minn

STONE'S Mammoth Music House.

The only exclusive Music House in the West.

Manufacturers and Importers of Musical Merchandise.

Most complete stock of Pianos, Organs, Brass and String Instruments, Trimmings, Music and Music Books west of Chicago. Violins, Mandolins, Guitars and Banjos from $2.95 to $125. Sheet Music at 50 per cent off regular price. Pianos from $150 to $1000. Organs from $20 to $650. Cash or easy payments. Old instruments taken as part payment.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

STONE'S MAMMOTH MUSIC HOUSE,
110-112 Broadway FARGO, N. D.

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

35 lbs Patent Flour for 1 bu. No. 1 Nor. Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

A "Love" of a Bonnet

Is frequently the cause of a quarrel in the family. Ours are not so expensive as to cause one. We have a large number of very lovely ones that are veritable family peace makers. Call and examine them.

Reckitt Block, and St. L. M. Bassett.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street CROOKSTON, MINN.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
Historical Society

Polk County Journal

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1899 No. 35

TEACHERS' MEETING

Educators of Northwestern Minnesota Gathered in Crookston High School last Friday.

MORE THAN 150 WERE PRESENT

Needs of Common Schools Discussed —Music by School Pupils—Lecture by Prof. Squires.

The Fifth Semi-Annual Session of the Northwestern Teachers' Association was held in this city last Friday and was attended by about 150 of the leading instructors of the Red River Valley and a number from North Dakota.

The program opened with music rendered by the Crookston high school, followed by an address by Prof. John Moore, the "Father of the Association." Mr. Moore took as his theme "The Teacher's Work" and spoke in his usual happy strain.

Individual Psychology was discussed by Prof. Hoey of the Moorhead Normal, after which Supt. Bennett of Marshall county told "What the Common Schools Need Most." In his estimation the schools have three great needs:

First—the repeal of the law passed by the last legislature taking the examination of teachers out of the hands of the county superintendent.

Second—A more local management of the Summer Training Schools.

Third—A closer articulation between the country schools and the Normals, so that the Normals may furnish at least a part of the common school teachers. The paper took some very radical views and called forth more discussion than any other.

Supt. Angus of Warren believed that the legislature made a serious mistake in failing to make an appropriation for the continuous sessions at the Normals and he secured the passage of a resolution urging that the matter be considered at the State Association.

Prof. Uhl. of Hallock, spoke upon "Animal Biology" while Supt. Hitchcock had as his theme Supplementary Reading.

The subject of the employment of teachers occupied most of the afternoon. Prof. Butler, of Ada, thought qualification should be the only standard in engaging a teacher and that no discrimination should be made either for or against non-residents. Mr. J. P. Mattson, secretary of the board at Warren, believed that appointments should be made by the superintendent and confirmed by the board and that while the board should always endeavor to secure the best possible teachers, a teacher should never be employed or retained against the wish of the superintendent. He would give the superintendent a very large amount of power in the management and control of the school and then hold him responsible for the results.

The evening session was taken up with an address upon "The Mission of Literature" by Prof. Squires, of the University of North Dakota.

HOME FROM ALASKA.

Messrs. Hawes and Cahoon Return Laden With Gold Nuggets.

W. S. Hawes and C. P. Cahoon returned last Friday morning from the gold fields in Alaska where they have been for the past nine months. They brought back with them several hundred dollars in nuggets to show their friends how successful they have been. The claims they have been working are on McKinley Creek about forty miles from the sea coast hence they can, if they make connections at all points, reach Crookston from there in six days. They are satisfied with their summer and fall work and feel sure that they have struck it rich. They will return early in the spring.

The Local Post Elects Officers.

The regular annual election of officers of Col. Cobham Post was held last Friday night and the following men were chosen:

John McLean, commander; Chas. H. Jefferson, Sr. vice commander; Nels K. Olson, Jr. vice commander; T. A. Harris, adjutant; Wm. Bell, surgeon; L. U. Jennings, chaplin; W. L. Davies, quartermaster; J. E. Greenhalgh, officer of the day; E. St. Pierre, officer of the guard; N. K. Olson, Chas. H. Jefferson, B. F. Zarracher, trustees; T. A. Harris, Chas. H. Jefferson, delegates; W. L. Davies, I. U. Jennings, alternates.

Wanted.

Your orders for anything in the music line. We can save you money. Special attention given to all mail orders. Stone's Music House, Fargo.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY

The Postmaster General Speaks Favorably of Free Delivery

In his annual report to congress Postmaster General Smith says with reference to free delivery:

The free delivery of mails in the rural districts has proved to be one of the most important among recent developments of the postal service, and presents in its possibilities a question of the largest proportions.

The benefits accruing from the extension of the postal facilities to the rural communities may be summarized as follows:

Increased postal receipts, making many of the new deliveries almost immediately self-supporting.

Enchancement of the value of farm lands reached by this service, and better prices obtained for farm products through more direct communication with the markets and prompter information of their state.

Improved means of travel, some hundreds of miles of country roads, especially in the western states, having been graded specifically in order to obtain rural free delivery.

Higher educational influences, broader circulation of the means of public intelligence, and closer daily contract with the great world of activity, extended to the homes of heretofore isolated rural communities.

Any general extension of the rural free delivery system will necessarily involve some reorganization of the present service in order to save needless duplication and to enforce practical economies

The 1,598 lines of traveling post-offices in operation on June 30, 1899, aggregated in length a distance of 177,747 miles. The services of 8,469 clerks were required to operate these lines, who, in crews, traveled 103,529,142 miles.

AMUSEMENTS.

"A Bachelor's Romance, "Miss Martha Morton's delightful comedy, which the Neill Company will present at the Grand Opera House Crookston, next Tuesday evening, Dec. 12, was originally produced two seasons ago by its popular actor, Sol Smith Russell. The Neill company has the exclusive western rights to present this famous success, paying the author for such privilege a very large royalty per week. In it Mr. James Neill will assume the role of David Holmes, the part originally played by Sol Smith Russell. The scenes of the comedy are laid in New York and New England and the characters are thoroughly American. The first and third acts occur in David's studio, the second in the fashionable home of Helen Le Grande, a fascinating widow, and the fourth act in a typical New England home.

Each stage setting will be true to the scene it intends to portray, most of the scenery, properties and general paraphernalia being carried by the Neill company.

Weddings.

BOLTON–PETERSON.

Married in the rectory of Christ church, Dec. 1, 1899, Mr. James Bolton of the province of Assiniboia, Canada, and Miss Hilda Peterson of Crookston. They will make their future home in Bemidji.

WEBER–HARDLEY

Arnold Weber and Miss Lena Hardley were married yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents in Andover. Rev. Mr. Poole performed the ceremony. The future home of Mr. and Mrs. Weber will be a few miles east of Crookston.

GOODWIN–EVANS.

At Grand Forks on Wednesday, Nov. 29, John B. Goodwin and Miss Martha Evans, both of Angus. Mr. Goodwin is one of the prominent young farmers of that section and Miss Evans, the accomplished daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Gomer Evans. The young couple have gone to housekeeping at Angus.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL

—R. H. Bryson of Fisher was in the city Monday.

—Lost. A Gordon Setter dog. Finder return to W. E. Rowe.

—The editor of the Bemidji News and his wife were in attendance at the educational meeting here last Friday.

—L. E. Rood of St. Hilaire returned home Tuesday after a two days' visit with Crookston friends.

—Mr. and Mrs. Peter Haley, of Devils Lake, were entertained during Thanksgiving time by Mr. and Mrs. L. Ellington.

—Ben Morgan, recently from Traill county, North Dakota, has purchased three quarters of section five in the town of Hammond.

—Ben Strawbridge, editor of the Cass Lake Times, spent Saturday last in the city. He rode the Masonic goat a third time Saturday night.

—M. Reil, Sr., is sick at his home about six miles east of Crookston. Mr. Reil is one of the early settlers of Polk county, having settled here in 1880.

—Miss Sue Low went to Minneapolis Monday night. She will enjoy a month's vacation visiting in that city, St. Paul, Sioux City, Iowa and Chicago.

—Miss Nora Fuller, who is attending the State University, spent Thanksgiving with her grandmother in Austin. She will come home for the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

—T. Amelander from Southern Polk was in the city last Saturday. He has a contract from the Beltrami Lumber Company to saw this winter 900,000 feet of lumber. He will have the saw mill at Bagley ready to run in 40 days.

—Last Monday morning Rev. Herman P. Fisher gave a lecture on the steam engine before the class in Physics in the high school. He had a little engine which was fired up, and which he kept running to illustrate the principles involved in the engine, while he explained by blackboard diagrams some of the more complicated parts of the valve, chest and the cylinder.

—Lieut. Monroe, of the 4th Cavalry, who recently in the Philippine islands with a command of fifty soldiers caused a force of 800 Filipinos to surrender without any blood being shed, is an officer from Minnesota, his home being at Lake City. He was a State University student from which institution he went to West Point where he graduated. He was in Crookston two years ago on a short visit, being well known to E. A. Webster, Dave Gordon and other Lake City people now in this city. His daring has won for him great renown. A 13th Regiment soldier in the city says that so many prisoners with arms have not up to this time been captured in the Philippines.

BEMIDJI.

Ted Smith made a business trip to Minneapolis Monday.

The Salvation Army have taken up quarters in Rolff's hall.

P. J. Millbach has been laid up for a few days with a sprained knee.

Winn McGuire was in town last week hiring men for his logging camp.

Chas. Blake of Staples was looking over our town Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mrs. James McNair has been visiting her husband here for the past week.

Edward French has accepted a position as clerk in A. Gilmour's drug store.

Services were held in the new Catholic church last Sunday for the first time.

Miss Winnie Sprague who has been ill for the last two weeks is recovering rapidly.

Prof. McLachlan will open his dancing school here next Friday evening in the city hall.

At the last meeting of the Volunteer fire department C. R. Martin was re-elected secretary.

Vernon Hartley went to Fosston Monday. He was looking over his claims here last week.

Allie Beanar has accepted a position from T. B. Walker to look after the cutting of his timber north of here.

The grand ball given by the citizens of Bemidji last Thursday night was a success both socially and financially.

Will Hazen, who has been visiting his brothers here for the past week, returned to his home at Alexandria, Monday.

Frank Newman, the young war hero who has been visiting his parents here for the last week, departed Saturday for Minneapolis where he will attend college.

THE STATE DAIRYMEN

Meet at Le Sueur Next Week—Important Topics to be Discussed by Experienced Men.

A PENNY APEICE FOR DEWEY

Subscribe at Once or it Will be too Late to Help Buy a Gift for the Naval Hero.

Next Tuesday afternoon a three days' session of the Minnesota state Dairyman's association will be opened at LaSueur. A most interesting and instructive program has been prepared and authorities on this important industry from all over the state will be present. Tuesday evening the Woman's Auxiliary will be in charge and numerous papers will be read, some of the subjects treated being "Dairy and Poultry," "Notes from a Dairy Farm" by Mrs. M. Currie, "Select Reading," "Home and School Education," etc. Prof. T. Shaw, of the School of Agriculture, will be there and give an address on "Breeding Dairy Cattle," John W. Scott, of Austin, will speak on "Ayrshire Cattle." On Wednesday and Thursday will be the buttermakers' and creamerymen's day when such subjects as "Creamery Management," "My Experience Feeding Dairy Cows on the Farm," etc., will be handled by experts.

Mention has been made of but a comparatively few of the themes that will be discussed but enough has been said to show that the meeting will be most helpful and as dairying is bound to be one of the chief industries on the farm here in the valley, as elsewhere, many representatives from this section ought to be at LaSueur next week.

DEWEY WATCH FUND

Will Soon be Closed so the Subscriptions Must be Made at Once.

The children of the Northwest are making contributions of a penny apeice to a fund that is in the hands of the Minneapolis Journal, and which will be used to purchase a watch for Admiral Dewey. The opportunity to assist in this commendable enterprise will not last very much longer. Those, therefore, who would like in this way to show their appreciation of the hero of Manilla had better leave their subscription at the office of the COUNTY JOURNAL within a day or two and receives therefor a certificate. The following are contributors to the Dewey fund:

Ethel Vance	Erskine Vance
George Murch	Charlotte Murch
Falk Rosenthal	Maurice Rosenthal
Gertrude Gordon	Ida Gordon
Morris Gordon	Anna Gordon
Orvill Greenslitt	Love Braley

High School Notes.

The new music committee for December has elected Lucius Miller chairman.

Grace Hawes and Jennie McAskill are taking turns this week playing for the classes.

Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Newberry express soon to lay before the school a new plan for self government and if favorable it will doubtless be adopted.

Now that the assembly hall presents a more respectable appearance than formerly, why not have more visitors? We are always glad to see people interested in our work.

The scholars hail the cold weather with delight, as it has already made skating possible. This will be the principal pastime until more snow falls to spoil the skating and make sleighriding possible.

Those who missed seeing the art display of the Beard Company last Friday and Saturday missed a rare treat. The door receipts, which were given to the High school, were expended for a portrait of Dewey.

The attendance at the High school for the month of November was 98 per cent of all pupils enrolled. This is a very good record and beats any of the grades. One week during the month there was not a boy absent which is something extraordinary for any school.

District Court.

The winter term of the district court in Crookston opens in this city next Tuesday. There is a large number of cases and the court is not likely to adjourn till after Jan. 1, 1900. County Attorney Holston and clerk of Court Lommen have been busy for sometime getting things in shape for the coming term. Of criminal cases there are likely to be from 12 to 15, the most important of which will be the trial of Bish Dorsey for murder.

ULEN.

Mr. Hall from Fargo reports having sold three pianos the last week.

O. Klemetsrad, the Twin Valley photographer, was in town on business Monday.

Very sorry boys, but the only typewriter we have in town is going to leave us.

M. Jacobson one of our promiscuous citizens left for Moorhead on legal business Monday.

O. H. Bruton, the Monarch wheat buyer of this place, spent Thanksgiving at Davenport, N. D. He reports having had a splendid time.

B. Rappe's little boy was accidentally shot in the right hand the other day with a 22 rifle, but is improving rapidly under the skillful care of Dr. Meighen.

The Ladies' Busy Bee held their annual auction in the school house on Thanksgiving, and they also gave a Thanksgiving dinner. The proceeds were about $70.

H. Rikkus had the misfortune Monday of getting his left foot run over by a 40-bushel load of wheat, which he was taking to town. The accident happened about two miles out of town.

There were a few disappointed farmers in Ulen Thanksgiving, because the grain buyers of Ulen believe in keeping their houses closed on legal holidays, so the farmers had to take their grain back home.

The village council of Ulen have lately passed an ordinance compelling temperance saloons to do business with the curtains down, also an ordinance compelling all places of business to be closed at 9 o'clock sharp.

ST. HILAIRE.

Miss Dora Sandmoen is visiting in Crookston.

Our feed mill has been doing a land office business lately.

Mr. Lund's little girls have been taken to a children's home in Minneapolis.

John Gjersvold died Saturday last from consumption, after an illness of more than a year.

A son of Chas. Sweason, of the town of Bray, has been very ill but is now on the road to recovery.

Mr. Gillette, sawyer at the Crookston saw mill, was in town last week, shaking hands with old friends.

We wouldn't a four mill at St. Hilaire be a good thing, not only for the town, but also for the farmers and parties controlling it?

Dr. Loe, of Crookston, was in town Wednesday of last week on his return from Thief River Falls, where he had been on professional business.

Dahlia, the royal Swede, who has been working at Thief River Falls for a couple of weeks, came down Saturday last to visit over Sunday with his family.

Why couldn't St. Hilaire take on a little of city airs, and be lighted by electricity? With two electric light plants one at the saw mill and another at the planing mill in town, it seems as though lights could be had at a comparatively small price. While the saw mill is closed down from November till in April, the planing mill is kept in operation the entire year with the exception of about two months during the winter time, and as we understand the milling company intends fitting up their plants with larger and better dynamos, it would no doubt be an easy matter to get them to put in machinery capable of furnishing power sufficient to lighten the village also. Why not make the attempt at least?

ROLETTE.

Very little wheat coming in these days on account of the low price.

H. Kollath's auction was well attended and high prices prevailed.

F. B. Dykeman has had a neat house built over his new artesian well.

Miss Hillman, of St. Paul, has been visiting in this vicinity since Thursday.

O. L. Taylor and party of St. Paul were looking over the Lockhart farm this week.

Miss Pearl Williams will spend Christmas with her parents at Stratroy, Ontario.

Dec. 1, the pay of the section men went down from $1.50 to $1.10 per day the old scale.

H. A. LeGear, Gordon Haskins and E. Bassett took the train for Crookston Wednesday morning.

G. W. Roberts, manager of the big Erskine farm, went to Lishon, N. D., last week and bought ten horses for use on the farm.

KEY WEST.

Too late for last week.

Miss Mary Wik expects to leave for her home at Maple Bay on Friday.

Miss Lottie Kelly, who has been visiting friends at Marais, returned home on Thursday.

Mrs. Brice, who recently returned from Canada, is visiting friends around this vicinity.

A Woodsman ball is being erected here. It will be quite an improvement to the looks of the village.

Quite a number of folks attended the dance at E. Thompson's on Friday night. A good time is reported by all.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Brown mourn the loss of their five months' old baby who died on Saturday at 11:30 a. m. Her remains were removed to the Marais cemetery on Sunday.

Literary Notes.

SATURDAY EVENING POST.

The Thanksgiving number of The Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, in its stories, poems, pictures and general articles, will be the most attractive number of the magazine yet issued.

In this number Robert W. Chambers has a seasonable out-of-door story, entitled "The Hunter"—the romance of a poacher's pretty daughter. Other features are: Edwin Markham's latest poem, "The Lyric Secret"; "An Electrical Transaction"—a tale of the Transvaal War by Robert Barr; "At Dawn," by Octave Thanet, and "The Soldier's Henhouse," a droll story by C. B. Loomis.

Two notable articles in this number are "Lincoln as Candidate and President," by his old friend and political ally, Colonel A. K. McClure, and "Our New Prosperity," by Frank A. Vanderlip, assistant secretary of the treasury.

The Thanksgiving number of The Saturday Evening Post will be on all news-stands Nov. 23.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

Three months ago the editor of The Ladies' Home Journal complained that his clientele would doubtless be glad to read a fresh article by the author of "In His Steps," and he wrote to the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, soliciting a contribution. But editors innumerable had sought the now-famous pastor's minister, and to Mr. Sheldon's request he sent the same reply as to the other editors. But the Philadelphia editor wrote again, a stronger and more urgent letter. Again the clergyman declined. He had written nothing since "In His Steps," and did not wish to write anything. Meanwhile Mr. Bok had gone to Europe and Mr. Sheldon's second refusal was cabled to him. Back came the response to Philadelphia: "Space an effort not time to secure Mr. Sheldon. but get him." The editor's private secretary then tried his hand on the Kansas minister, but again he refused. Mr. Bok returned from abroad, and calling one of his editors, directed him to see Mr. Sheldon, at Topeka if he were there, or wherever he might be. Upon reaching St. Louis the editor located Mr. Sheldon at Buffalo, and later learned that he had gone to Detroit. Starting at once for that place the editor learned at Chicago the minister had just left Detroit to rejoin his family at a summer resort in Upper Michigan. By more telegraphing, Mr. Sheldon's family was eventually located at Old Mission, a most inaccessible summer resort on Travers Bay, and by the first northbound steamer the editor hastened on his journey. A voyage of a day and a night brought him to the place where he had hoped to intercept the minister, but failing to do so, he embarked in a small boat for a day's sail toward his destination. At the nearest landing he pressed a farmer's steam into service and drove through an almost blinding sandstorm along the bay shore—seemingly half-way across the peninsula—reaching Old Mission a few minutes before the arrival of the minister. This was too much for Mr. Sheldon. The fight was won, and in the November issue of The Ladies' Home Journal the article appears. It occupies barely a page, and the venture cost the magazine several hundred dollars for traveling expenses alone. But the article contains Mr. Sheldon's first words since his "In His Steps" has become famous. It answers the question which every one asks after reading the book: "Is this theory practical?" and answers it forcibly. And the magazine is content.

The readers of the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL will appreciate the fact that this paper is the only one in the northwest that is publishing this new famous story "In His Steps."

FOR SALE—First class restaurauly outfit complete in all respects. Apply to W. W. Hoth.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THIS THE MESSAGE

President's Annual Communication Duly Delivered to Congress.

Gold Standard Should Be Formally Adopted at This Session.

Philippine Question One of the Large Ones Congress Must Deal With.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

At the threshold of your deliberations you are called to mourn with your countrymen the death of Vice President Hobart, who passed from this life on the morning of Nov. 21st last. His great soul now rests in eternal peace. His private life was pure and elevated, while his public career was ever distinguished by large capacity, stainless integrity and exalted motives. He has been removed from the high office which he honored and dignified, but his lofty character, his devotion to duty, his honesty of purpose and noble virtues remain with us as a priceless legacy and example.

Condition of Unusual Prosperity.

The Fifty-Sixth congress convenes in its first regular session with the country in a condition of unusual prosperity, of universal good will among the people at home, and in relations of peace and friendship with every government of the world. Our foreign commerce has shown great increase in volume and value. The combined imports and exports for the year are the largest ever shown by a single year in all our history. Our exports for 1899 alone exceeded by more than a billion dollars our imports and exports combined in 1870. The imports per capita are 20 per cent less than in 1870, while the exports per capita are 58 per cent more than in 1870, showing the enlarged capacity of the United States to satisfy the wants of its own increasing population, as well as to contribute to those of the peoples of other nations.

Manufactured Exports Exceed Imports.

Exports of agricultural products were $784,776,142. Of manufactured products we exported in value $339,592,146, being larger than any previous year. It is a noteworthy fact that the only years in all our history when the products of our manufactories sold abroad exceeded those bought abroad were 1898 and 1899.

Government receipts from all sources for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899, including $11,798,314.14, part payment of the Central Pacific railroad indebtedness, aggregated $610,982,004.35. Customs receipts were $206,128,481.75, and those from revenue $273,437,161.51.

For the fiscal year the expenditures were $700,093,564.02, leaving a deficit of $89,111,559,67.

The secretary of the treasury estimates that the receipts for the current fiscal year will aggregate $640,958,112, and upon the basis of present appropriations the expenditures will aggregate $600,958,112, leaving a surplus of $40,000,000.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899, the internal revenue receipts were increased about $100,000,000.

Strength of the Treasury.

The present gratifying strength of the treasury is shown by the fact that on Dec. 1, 1899, the available cash balance was $278,004,837.72, of which $239,744,905.36 was in gold coin and bullion. The conditions of confidence which prevail throughout the country have brought gold into more general use and customs receipts are now almost entirely paid in that coin.

The strong condition of the treasury with respect to cash on hand and the favorable showing made by the revenues have made it possible for the secretary of the treasury to take action under the provisions of section 3695, Revised Statutes, relating to the sinking fund.

BANKING AND CURRENCY.

Gold Standard and Enlarged Powers for National Banks.

Increased activity in industry, with its welcome attendant—a larger employment for labor at higher wages—gives to the body of the people a larger power to absorb the circulating medium. It is further true that year by year, with larger areas of land under cultivation, the increasing agricultural products, cotton, corn and wheat, call for a larger volume of money supply. This is especially noticeable at the crop harvesting and crop moving period.

In its early history the national banking act seemed to prove a reasonable avenue through which needful additions to the circulation could from time to time be made. Changing conditions have apparently rendered it now inoperative to that end. The high margin in bond securities required, resulting from large premiums which government bonds command in the market, or the tax on note issues, or both operating together, appear to be the influences which impair its public utility.

The attention of congress is respectfully invited to this important matter with the view of ascertaining whether or not such reasonable modifications can be made in the national banking act as will render its service in the particulars here referred to more responsive to the people's needs. I again urge that national banks be authorized to organize with a capital of $25,000.

Gold Standard Should Be Maintained.

I urgently recommend that to support the existing gold standard, and to maintain "the parity in value of the coins of the two metals (gold and silver) and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the market and in the payment of debts." the secretary of the treasury be given additional power and charged with the duty to sell United States bonds and to employ such other effective means as may be necessary to these ends. The authority should include the power to sell bonds on long and short time, as conditions may require, and should provide for a rate of interest lower than that fixed by the act of Jan. 14, 1875.

Our receipts now equal our expenditures; deficient revenues no longer create alarm. Let us remove the only remaining cause by conferring the full and necessary power on the secretary of the treasury and impose upon him the duty to uphold present gold standard and preserve the coins of the two metals on a parity with each other, which is the repeatedly declared policy of the United States.

In this connection I repeat my former recommendations that a portion of the gold holdings shall be placed in a trust fund from which greenbacks shall be redeemed upon presentation, but when once redeemed shall not thereafter be paid out except for gold.

The Merchant Marine.

The value of an American merchant marine to the extension of our commercial trade and the strengthening of our power upon the sea invites the immediate action of congress. Our national development will be one-sided and unsatisfactory so long as the remarkable growth of our inland industries remains unaccompanied by progress on the seas.

THE TRUST QUESTION.

Congress Should Thoroughly Investigate and Apply Remedies.

Combinations of capital organized to control the conditions of trade among our citizens, to stifle competition, limit production and determine the price of products used and consumed by the people, are justly provoking public discussion, and should early claim the attention of the congress.

The industrial commission, created by the act of the congress of June 18, 1898, has been engaged in extended hearings upon the disputed questions involved in the subject of combinations in restraint of trade and competition. They have not yet completed their investigation of this subject, and the conclusions and recommendations at which they may arrive are undetermined.

The subject is one giving rise to many divergent views as to the nature and variety or cause and extent of the injuries to the public which may result from large combinations concentrating more or less numerous enterprises and establishments, which previously to the formation of the combination were carried on separately.

It is universally conceded that combinations which engross or control the market of any particular kind of merchandise or commodity necessary to the general community, by suppressing natural and ordinary competition, whereby prices are unduly enhanced to the general consumer, are obnoxious not only to the common law but also to the public welfare. There must be a remedy for the evils involved in such organizations. If the present law can be extended more certainly to control or check these monopolies or trusts, it should be done without delay. Whatever power the congress possesses over this most important subject should be promptly ascertained and asserted.

Quotations are made from the annual message of President Harrison Dec. 3, 1889, and that of President Cleveland Dec. 7, 1896, the former recommending a law for the better control of such combinations, and the latter, commenting upon the law enacted in 1890, questioning whether the Federal jurisdiction in the matter is sufficient. Continuing the president says:

The state legislation to which President Cleveland looked for relief from the evils of trusts has failed to accomplish fully that object. This is probably due to a great extent to the fact that different states take different views as to the proper way to discriminate between evil and injurious combinations and those associations which are beneficial and necessary to the business prosperity of the country. The great diversity of treatment in different states arising from this cause and the intimate relations of all parts of the country to each other without regarding state lines in the conduct of business have made the enforcement of state laws difficult.

It is apparent that uniformity of legislation upon this subject in the several states is much to be desired. It is to be hoped that such uniformity, founded in a wise and just discrimination between what is injurious and what is useful and necessary in business operations, may be obtained, and that means may be found for the congress within the limitations of its constitutional power so to supplement an effective code of state legislation as to make a complete system of laws throughout the United States adequate to compel a general observance of the salutary rules to which I have referred.

FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Friendliness Has Characterized Dealings With Other Nations.

A review of our relations with foreign states is presented with such recommendations as are deemed appropriate. Many of the references are to minor incidents and events in states on this continent. Our increasing intimate relations with Germany are cited at considerable length, the history of Nicaragua canal negotiations during the past year is given, and the appointment of a new commission detailed Good progress has been made by this commission, but under the law a comprehensive and complete investigation is called for, which will require much labor and considerable time for its accomplishment. The work will be prosecuted as expeditiously as possible, and a report made at the earliest practicable date.

The great importance of this work cannot be too often or too strongly pressed upon the attention of the congress In my message of a year ago I expressed my views of the necessity of a canal which would link the two great oceans, to which I again invite your consideration The reasons then presented for early action are even stronger now.

Alaskan Boundary and Other Matters.

In my last annual message I referred to the pending negotiations with Great Britain in respect to the dominion of Canada. By means of an executive agreement a joint high commission had been created for the purpose of adjusting all unsettled questions between the United States and Canada, embracing twelve subjects, among which were the questions of the fur seals, the fisheries of the coast and contiguous inland waters, the Alaskan boundary, the transit of merchandise in bond, the alien labor laws, mining rights, reciprocity in trade, revision of the agreement respecting naval vessels in the Great Lakes, a more complete marking of parts of the boundary, provision for the conveyance of criminals, and for wrecking and salvage.

Much progress had been made by the commission toward the adjustment of many of these questions where it became apparent that an irreconcilable difference of views was entertained respecting the delimitation of the Alaskan boundary. In the failure of an agreement as to the meaning of articles 3 and 4 of the treaty of 1825 between Russia and Great Britain, which defined the boundary between Alaska and Canada, the American commissioners proposed that the subject of the boundary be laid aside and that the remaining questions of difference be proceeded with, some of which were so far advanced as to assure the probability of a settlement. This being declined by the British commissioners, an adjournment was taken until the boundary should be adjusted by the two governments. The subject has been receiving the careful attention which its importance demands, with the result that a modus vivendi for provisional demarcations in the region about the head of Lynn canal has been agreed upon; and it is hoped that the negotiations now in progress between the two governments will end in an agreement for the establishment and delimitation of a permanent boundary.

Apart from these questions growing out of our relationship with our northern neighbor, the most friendly disposition and ready agreement have marked the discussion of numerous matters arising in the vast and intimate intercourse of the United States with Great Britain.

This government has maintained an attitude of neutrality in the unfortunate contest between Great Britain and the Boer states of Africa We have remained faithful to the precept of avoiding entangling alliances as to affairs not of our direct concern. Had circumstances suggested that the parties to the quarrel would have welcomed any kindly expression of the hope of the American people that war might be averted, good offices would have been gladly tendered.

Violence Against Aliens.

For the fourth time in the present decade question has arisen with the government of Italy in regard to the lynching of Italian subjects. The latest of these deplorable events occurred at Tallulah, La., whereby five unfortunates, of Italian origin, were taken from jail and hanged.

Because of defective federal jurisdiction the president recommends legislation giving federal courts power of prosecution in similar cases.

The Pacific Cable.

Without repeating the observations of my special message of Feb. 10, 1899, concerning the necessity of a cable to Manila, I respectfully invite attention to it. I recommend that in case the congress should not take measures to bring about this result by direct action of the government, the postmaster general be authorized to invite competitive bids for the establishment of a cable; the company making the best responsible bid to be awarded the contract; the successful company to give ample bonds to insure the completion of the work within a reasonable time

OUR DUTY TOWARD CUBA.

Pledges of Congress Should be Faithfully Executed.

My annual message of last year was necessarily devoted in great part to a consideration of the Spanish war and of the results it wrought and the conditions it imposed for the future. I am gratified to announce that the treaty of peace has restored friendly relations between the two powers. Effect has been given to its most important provisions. The evacuation of Porto Rico having already been accomplished on the 18th of October, 1898, nothing remained necessary there but to continue the provisional military control of the island until the congress should enact a suitable government for the ceded territory. Of the character and scope of the measures to that end I shall treat in another part of this message.

The withdrawal of the authority of Spain from the island of Cuba was effected by the first of January, so that the full re-establishment of peace found the relinquished territory held by us in trust for the inhabitants, maintaining, under the direction of the executive, such government and control therein as should conserve public order, restore the productive conditions of peace so long disturbed by the instability and disorder which prevailed for the greater part of the preceding three decades, and build up that tranquil development of the domestic state whereby alone can be realized the high purpose, as proclaimed in the joint resolution adopted by the congress on the 19th of April, 1898, by which the United States disclaimed any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction or control over Cuba, except for the pacification thereof, and asserted its determination when that was accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people. The pledge contained in this resolution is of the highest honorable obligation and Must Be Sacredly Kept.

This nation has assumed before the world a grave responsibility for the future good government of Cuba. We have accepted a trust the fulfillment of which calls for the sternest integrity of purposes and the exercise of the highest wisdom.

On the 7th of August last an order was made for the taking of the census of the island, to be completed on the 30th of November. By the treaty of peace the Spanish people on the island have until April 11, 1900, to elect whether they will remain citizens of Spain or become citizens of Cuba. Until then it cannot be definitely ascertained who shall be entitled to participate in the formation of the government of Cuba. By that time the results of the census will have been tabulated and we shall proceed to provide for elections which will commit the municipal governments of the island to the officers elected by the people. The experience thus acquired will prove of great value in the formation of a representative convention of the people to draft a constitution and establish a general system of independent government for the island.

Partition of Samoa.

The recent troubles in Samoa are reviewed by the president, and the exchange of views leading up to the partition of the islands reviewed. Concluding the president says:

Our views commended themselves to the other powers. A satisfactory arrangement was concluded between the governments of Germany and of England by virtue of which England retired from Samoa in view of compensations in other directions, and both powers renounced in favor of the United States all their rights and claims over and in respect to that portion of the group lying to the east of the 171st degree of west longitude, embracing the islands of Tutuila, Ofoo, Olesonga and Manua. I transmit to the senate for its constitutional action thereon a convention which, besides the provisions above mentioned, also guarantees us the same privileges and conditions in respect to commerce and commercial vessels in all of the islands of Samoa as those possessed by Germany.

DOMESTIC AFFAIRS.

Medals for Volunteers, Postal Service, the Gallant Navy, Pensions.

The president details the reorganization of the army and recommends that congress provide a special medal of honor for the volunteers, regulars, sailors and marines on duty in the Philippines who voluntarily remained in the service after their terms of enlistment had expired.

The force now in Manila consists of 905 officers and 30,578 regulars and 594 officers and 15,388 of the volunteers, making an aggregate of 1,499 officers and 45,966 men. When the troops now under orders shall reach Manila, the force in the archipelago will comprise 2,051 officers and 63,483 men.

The operations of the army are fully presented in the report of the secretary of war. I cannot withhold from officers and men the highest commendation for their soldierly conduct in trying situations, their willing sacrifices for their country and the integrity and ability with which they have performed unusual and difficult duties in our island possessions.

Domestic Postal Service.

The domestic postal service continues to grow with extraordinary rapidity. The expenditures and revenues will each exceed $100,000,000 during the current year. Fortunately since the revival of prosperous times the revenues have grown much faster than the expenditure, and there is every indication that a short period will witness the obliteration of the annual deficit In this connection the report of the postmaster general embodies a statement of some evils which have grown up outside of the contemplation of law in the treatment of some classes of mail matter which wrongfully exercise the privilege of the pound rate and shows that if this matter had been properly classified and had paid the rate which it should have paid, instead of a postal deficit for the last fiscal year of $6,610,000 there would have been on one basis a surplus of $17,637,570, and on another $5,733,836 The reform thus suggested, in the opinion of the postmaster general, would not only put the postal service at once on a self-sustaining basis, but would permit great and valuable improvements, and I recommend the subject to the consideration of congress.

The Gallant Navy.

The navy has maintained the spirit and high service of efficiency which have always characterized that service and has lost none of the gallantry in heroic action which has signalized its brilliant and glorious past. The nation has equal pride in its early and later achievements. Its habitual readiness for every emergency has won the confidence and admiration of the country. The people are interested in the preparation and prestige of the navy and will justify liberal appropriations for its maintenance and improvement. The officers have shown peculiar adaptation for the performance of new and delicate duties which our recent war has imposed.

It cannot be doubted that congress will at once make necessary provision for the armour plate for the vessels now under contract and building. I heartily concur in the recommendation for the increase of the navy as suggested by the secretary of the navy.

Pensions of Widows.

Reviewing the report of the pension commissioner, the president recommends, following the request of the Grand Army of the Republic, that congress shall so amend the widows' pension act to permit the pension office to grant pensionable status to widows under the terms of the third section of the act of June 27, 1890, whose income aside from the proceeds of daily labor is not in excess of $250 per annum. I believe this to be a simple act of justice and heartily recommend it.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

President Reviews Their Acquisition and Subsequent Difficulties.

On the 10th of December, 1898, the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain was signed. It provided among other things, that Spain should cede to the United States the archipelago known as the Philippine islands, that the United States should pay to Spain the sum of $20,000,000, and that the civil rights and population of the native inhabitants of the territories thus ceded to the United States should be determined by the congress. The treaty was ratified by the senate on the 6th of February, 1899, and by the government of Spain on the 19th of March following. The ratifications were exchanged on the 11th of April and the treaty publicly proclaimed. On the 2d of March, the congress voted the sum contemplated by the treaty, and the amount was paid over to the Spanish government on the 1st of May.

Not Invaders or Conquerors.

On the 21st of December after the treaty was signed the commander of the forces of occupation was instructed "to announce and proclaim in the most public manner that we come not as invaders and conquerors but as friends to protect the natives in their homes, in their employments and in their personal and religious rights." On the same day while ordering Gen. Otis to see that the peace should be preserved in Iloilo he was admonished that: "It is most important that there should be no conflict with the insurgents." On the 1st day of January, 1899, urgent orders were reiterated that the kindly instructions of this government should in every possible way be communicated to the insurgents.

On the 21st of January I announced my intention of dispatching to Manila a commission composed of three gentlemen of the highest character and distinction, thoroughly acquainted with the Orient, who, in association with Admiral Dewey and Major General Otis, were instructed to "facilitate the most humane and effective extension of authority throughout the islands and to secure with the least possible delay, the benefits of a wise and generous protection of life and property to the inhabitants."

Ambition Created a Situation.

The character of the gentlemen composing this commission was sufficient guaranty of the beneficent purpose for which they were sent, even if they had not borne the positive instructions of this government which made their errand preeminently one of peace and friendship. But before their arrival at Manila the sinister ambition of a few leaders of the Philipinos had created a situation full of embarrassments for us and most grievous in its consequences to themselves. The clear and impartial preliminary report of the commissioners. which I transmit herewith. gives so lucid and comprehensive a history of the present insurrectionary movement that the story need not be here repeated. It is enough to say that the claim of the rebel leader that he was promised independence by any officer of the United States in return for his assistance, has no foundation in fact, and is categorically denied by the very witnesses who were called to prove it. The most the insurgent leader hoped for when he came back to Manila was the liberation of the islands from the Spanish control, which they had been laboring for years without success to throw off.

The prompt accomplishment of this work by the American army and navy gave him other ideas and ambitions and insidious suggestions from various quarters perverted the purposes and intentions with which he had taken up arms. No sooner had our army captured Manila than the Filipino forces began to assume an attitude of suspicion and hostility which the utmost efforts of our officers and troops were unable to disarm or modify. Their kindness and forbearance were taken as a proof of cowardice. The aggressions of the Filipinos continually increased until finally just before the time set by the senate of the United States for a vote upon the treaty an attack evidently prepared in advance, was made all along the American lines, which resulted in a temporary destructive and sanguinary repulse of the insurgents.

An Infamous Proclamation.

Ten days later an order of the insurgent government was issued to its adherents who had remained in Manila, of which General Otis justly observes that "for barbarous intent it is unequalled in modern times." It directs that at 8 o'clock on the night of the 15th of February the territorial militia "shall come together in the streets of San Pedro armed with their bolos, with guns and ammunition, where convenient, that Filipino families alone shall be respected; but that all other individuals, of whatever race they may be, shall be exterminated without any compassion, after the extermination of the army of occupation," and adds: "Brothers, we must avenge ourselves on the Americans and exterminate them, that we may take our revenge for the infamies and treacheries which they have committed upon us. Have no compassion upon them; attack with vigor."

A copy of this fell, by good fortune, into the hands of our officers, and they were able to take measures to control the rising which was actually attempted on the night of Feb. 22, a week later than was originally contemplated. Considerable number of armed insurgents entered the city by waterways and swamps, and in concert with confederates inside

Attempted to Destroy Manila by Fire.

They were kept in check during the night and the next day driven out of the city with heavy loss.

This was the unhappy condition of affairs which confronted our commissioners on their arrival in Manila. They had come with the hope and intention of cooperating with Admiral Dewey and Major General Otis in establishing peace and order in the archipelago and the largest measure of self government compatible with the true welfare of the people.

What they actually found can best be set forth in their own words: "Deplorable as war is, the one in which we are now engaged was unavoidable by us. We were attacked by a bold, adventurous and enthusiastic army. No alternative was left to us, except ignominous retreat.

"It is not to be conceived of that any American would have sanctioned the surrender of Manila to the insurgents. Our obligations to other nations and to the friendly Filipinos and to ourselves and to our flag demanded that force should be met by force. Whatever the future of the Philipines may be there is no course open to us now except the prosecution of the war until the insurgents are reduced to submission. The commission is of the opinion that there has been no time since the destruction of the Spanish squadron by Admiral Dewey when it was possible to withdraw our forces from the islands either with honor to ourselves or with safety to the inhabitants."

Rebellion Must Be Put Down.

The course thus clearly indicated has been unflinchingly pursued. The rebellion must be put down. Civil government cannot be thoroughly established until order is restored. With a devotion and gallantry worthy of its most brilliant history the army, ably and loyally assisted by the navy, has carried on this unwelcome but most righteous campaign, which richly deserve success. The noble self-sacrifice with which our soldiers and sailors whose term of service had expired refused to avail themselves of their right to return home so long as they were needed at the front, forms one of the brightest pages in our annals. Although their operations have been somewhat interrupted and checked by a rainy season of unusual violence and duration, they have gained ground steadily in every direction and now look forward confidently to a speedy completion of their task.

Government for Negros.

The unfavorable circumstances connected with an active campaign have not been permitted to interfere with the equally important work of construction. Again I invite your attention of the report of the commissioners, interesting and encouraging details of the work already accomplished in the establishment of peace and order and the inauguration of self-governing municipal life in many portions of the archipelago. A notable beginning has been made in the establishment of a government in the island of Negros, which is deserving of special consideration. This was the first island to accept American sovereignty. Its people unreservedly proclaimed allegiance to the United States and adopted a constitution looking to the establishment of a popular government. It was impossible to guarantee to the people of Negros that the constitution so adopted should be the ultimate form of government. Such a question under the treaty with Spain and in accordance with our own constitution and laws came exclusively within the jurisdiction of congress. The government actually set up by the inhabitants of Negros eventually proved unsatisfactory to the natives themselves. A new system was put into force by order of the major general commanding the department, which is partly military and partly civil.

Executive Officer the Military Governor.

The civil governor advises the military governor on all public civil questions and presides over the advisory council. He, in general, performs the duties which are performed by secretaries of state in our own system of government.

The advisory council consists of eight members elected by the people within the territorial limits which are defined in the order of the commanding general.

The authorities of the Sulu islands have accepted the succession of the United States to the rights of Spain and our flag floats over that territory. On the 10th of August, 1899, Brigadier General J. C. Bates, U. S. N., negotiated an agreement with the Sulu chief and with his chiefs, which I transmit herewith But by the article A the sovereignty of the United States over the whole archipelago of Jolo and its dependencies is declared and acknowledged.

Tagal Rebellion Near an End.

Everything indicates that with the speedy suppression of the Tagalo rebellion the archipelago will soon resume its ordinary course under the protection of our sovereignty, and the people of those favored islands will enjoy a prosperity and a freedom which they have never known before.

The future government of the Philippines rests with the congress of the United States. Few graver responsibilities have ever been confided to us. If we accept them in a spirit worthy of our race and our traditions, a great opportunity comes with them. The islands lie under the shelter of our flag. They are ours by every title of law and equity They cannot be abandoned. If we desert them we leave them at once to anarchy and finally to barbarism. We fling them, a golden apple of discord, among the rival powers, no one of which could permit another to seize them unquestioned. Their rich plains and valleys would be the scene of endless strife and bloodshed. The advent of Dewey's fleet in Manila bay. instead of being, as hoped, the dawn of a new day of freedom and progress will have been to begin an era of misery and violence worse than any which has darkened their unhappy past. The suggestion has been made that we could renounce our authority over the islands and giving them independence could retain a protectorate over them. This proposition will not be found, I am sure, worthy of your serious attention. Such an arrangement would involve at the outset

A Cruel Breach of Faith.

It would place the peaceable and loyal majority, who ask nothing better than to accept our authority, at the mercy of the minority of armed insurgents It would make us responsible for the acts of the insurgent leaders, and give us no power to control them. It would charge us with the task of protecting them against each other and defending them against any foreign power with which they chose to quarrel. In short, it would take from the congress of the United States the power of declaring war, and vest that tremendous prerogative in the Tagal leader of the hour.

It does not seem desirable that I should recommend at this time a specific and final form of government for these islands. When peace shall be restored it will be the duty of congress to construct a plan of government which shall establish and maintain freedom and order and peace in the Philippines. The insurrection is still existing and when it terminates further information will be required as to the actual condition of affairs before inaugurating a permanent scheme of civil government. The full report of the commission now in preparation will contain information and suggestions which will be of value to congress, and which I will transmit as soon as it is completed. As long as the insurrection continues the military arm must necessarily be supreme. But there is no reason why steps should not be taken from time to time to inaugurate governments essentially popular in their forms as fast as they are held or controlled by our troops. To this end I am considering the advisability of the return of the commission or such of the members thereof as can be secured, to aid the existing authorities and facilitate this work throughout the islands I have believed that reconstruction should not begin by the establishment of one central civil government for the island with its seat at Manila, but rather that the work should be commenced by building from the bottom and municipal governments and then provincial governments, a central government to last follow. Until congress shall have made known the formal expression of its will, I shall use the authority vested in me by the constitution and the statutes to uphold the sovereignty of the United States in those distant islands as in all other places where our flag rightfully floats. I shall put at the disposal of the army and navy all the means which the liberality of congress and the people have provided to cause this unprovoked and wasteful insurrection to cease. If any orders of mine were required to insure the merciful conduct of military and naval operations they would not be lacking; but every step of the progress of the troops has been marked by a humanity which has Surprised Even the Misguided Insurgents.

The truest kindness to them will be a swift and effective defeat of their present leader. The hour of victory will be the hour of clemency and reconstruction.

No effort will be spared to build up the waste places desolated by war and by long years of misgovernment. We shall not wait for the end of strife to begin the beneficent work. We shall continue, as we have begun, to open the schools and the churches, to set the courts in operation, to foster industry and trade and agriculture, and in every way in our power to make these people whom providence has brought within our jurisdiction feel that it is their liberty and not our power, their welfare and not our gain, we are seeking to enhance. Our flag has never waved over any community but in blessing. I believe the Philipinos will soon recognize the fact that it has not lost its gift of benediction in its worldwide journey to their shores.

HAWAII, ALASKA, PORTO RICO.

Some Legislation is Badly Needed in Each of These Territories.

Some embarrassment in administration has occurred by reason of the peculiar status which the Hawaiian islands at present occupy under the joint resolution of annexation approved July 7, 1898. While by that reason the republic of Hawaii as an independent nation was extinguished, its separate sovereignty destroyed and its property and possessions vested in the United States, yet a complete establishment for its government under our system was not effected.

It is manifestly important, therefore, that an act shall be presented as speedily as possible erecting these islands into a judicial district, providing for the appointment of a judge and other proper officers and methods of procedure in appellate proceedings, and that the government of this newly acquired territory under the federal constitution shall be fully defined and provided for.

A necessity for immediate legislative relief also exists in the territory of Alaska.

The time is also ripe for the adoption of a temporary form of government for Porto Rico.

Presented to this congress are great opportunities. With them come great responsibilities. The powers confided to us increase our weight of obligation to the people, and we must be profoundly sensitive of them as we contemplate the new and grave problems which confront us. Aiming only at the public good, we cannot err. A right interpretation of the people's will and of duty cannot fail to insure wise measures for the welfare of the islands, which have come under the authority of the United States and inure to the common interest and lasting honor of our country. Never has this nation had more abundant cause than during the past year for thankfulness to God for manifold blessings and mercy, for which we make reverent acknowledgement.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Executive Mansion, Dec. 5, 1899.

HAS NO SEAT FOR HIM

HOUSE TAKES ACTION UNFAVORABLE TO ROBERTS OF UTAH.

Tayler Resolution Providing for an Investigation by a Special Committee Passed by a Vote of 302 to 30—Impressive Presentation of His Own Case by Mormon Member.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—After an interesting debate of three hours the house, by a vote of 302 to 30, adopted the resolution offered by Mr. Tayler of Ohio for the appointment of a special committee to investigate the charges against Brigham H. Roberts, the Mormon representative-elect from Utah. Previously the house had rejected a substitute resolution offered by Mr. Richardson, the leader of the minority, to allow Mr. Roberts to be sworn in and to send the whole case to the judiciary committee. This substitute resolution, however, by no means commanded the full Democratic strength. Only 97 members voted for it. Of the 30 who voted against the Tayler resolution all were Democrats except two, Mr. Loud of California, Rep., and Mr. Newlands, Sil., Nevada. The vote was as follows:

Adamson, Allen (Miss.), Bailey, Ball, Brewer, Burlison, Carmack, Cooper, Davey, Dearmond, Dinsmore, Fitzpatrick, Fleming, Kitchen, Lester, Lewis, McClellan, McCulloch, Maddox, Norton (S. C.), Rhea, Richardson, Robbins, Slayden, Small, Snodgrass, Stephens, Turner, Democrats; Newlands (Nev.), Silverite; Loud (Cal.), Republican.

The speaker then appointed the following members as the special committee under the resolution: Republicans —Tayler (O.), chairman; Landis (Ind.), Morris (Minn.), Freer (W. Va.), Littlefield (Me.), McPherson (Ia.). Democrats—De Armond (Mo.), Lanham (Tex), Meyers (Ind.).

Result of the Action Taken.

By the terms of the resolution Mr. Roberts is not only excluded from all participation in the proceedings of the house until the committee reports and the house passes upon his case, but he is denied a seat in the hall. Whether this will be interpreted to deny him admission within the chamber pending the disposition of his case is yet to be decided.

The reading of the president's message was completely overshadowed by the dramatic proceedings which resulted in the action of the house. The galleries were thronged with spectators, mostly women, who sat patiently through the three weary hours that preceded the debate and that waited three hours more until it was concluded. The most remarkable feature of the debate was the fact that Mr. Roberts' presentation of his own case, which lasted almost an hour, became so impressive that he won the sympathies of many in the galleries and he was several times showered with applause. It was apparent he realized the house was overwhelmingly against him and at times he spoke fiercely and defiantly.

During the debate Mr. Grosvenor (Rep., O.) rose to indignantly repel an insinuation of Mr. Roberts that the president had knowingly appointed men guilty of polygamy to federal office in Utah.

HEARD THE MESSAGE ONLY

Senate Adjourns as a Mark of Respect to Moses Heyward.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The session of the senate lasted two hours and forty minutes, practically the same time being consumed in the reading of the president's message. The reading was largely perfunctory, few senators according it any attention.

Following are the chief recommendations contained in the message:

Legislation in support of the present gold standard.

More stringent laws for the regulation of trusts and combinations.

The early construction of a cable to Manila.

The prosecution of the preliminary work for an intercoastal canal.

Some form of law to take the place of chaos in Alaska.

Legislation providing for a government in Hawaii.

Self-government for Porto Rico to such an extent as is deemed practicable.

The independence of Cuba at the earliest possible moment.

Laws for the government of the Philippines when the insurrection shall have been stamped out.

Liberal appropriation for the navy.

Reorganization of the army.

Correction of the abuse in the classification of mail matter.

Liberal appropriation for the furtherance of agricultural investigations.

Legislation for the promotion of the merchant marine.

Laws defining the status of complaints of aliens.

Medals of honor for volunteers who fought in the Philippines.

Appropriation for the American exhibit in Paris.

The observance of law and order by would-be lynchers.

The extension and preservation of forest reserves.

Financial Bill Introduced.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The financial bill drafted by a special committee of Republican members was introduced in the house by Representative Overstreet of Indiana and accorded the distinction of being Bill No. 1 on the records of the house. The text is as given out last week, and members say this will be preserved as far as possible.

Great Flood of Bills.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The rush of bills in the house of representatives during the day was the greatest in the memory of house officials, the total being 881 bills, public and private, and 30 resolutions.

SENATE REORGANIZATION.

Caucuses of the Several Parties Held to Consider the Subject.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Three caucuses were held in the senate end of the Capitol during the day. They were under the auspices, respectively, of the Republican, the Democratic and the independent senators, the last named including the Silver Republicans and the Populists, and each considered the reorganization of the senate committees. In each instance the detail work was referred to special committees.

Senator Allison was empowered by the Republican caucus to select a committee of nine to confer with the opposition and make the apportionment of members. There was a suggestion that the Republican representation on committees should be in proportion to the Republican membership of the senate and in reply to a question Senator Allison said that the Republicans numbered about Five-Eighths of the Entire Senate.

After some discussion the suggestion was abandoned because of the effect that such a demand in the senate would have upon the house, where the Republicans have proportionately a much smaller majority. There was, however, a general understanding that the Republicans should have a clear majority on all committees.

The Democrats transacted no business beyond the unanimous selection of Senator Jones of Arkansas as chairman of the caucus to succeed Senator Turpie and the authorization of the chairman to appoint a committee to confer with the Republican committee on the reorganization of the standing committees.

The independents agreed to act with the Democrats in the organization of the senate and Senator Pettigrew was appointed to act as a member of the minority committee on committees.

CONSIDERED IN CAUCUS.

House Republicans Discuss the New Financial Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—A caucus of Republican members of the house of representatives was held during the evening to consider plans for reporting the house financial bill. About 160 members, including Speaker Henderson and all the prominent leaders on the Republican side, were present. Mr. Overstreet (Ind.), who presented the bill, explained it section by section. As he proceeded many questions were asked, mainly by Messrs. Hopkins (Ills.), Hepburn (Ia.), Hill (Conn.) and McCleary (Minn.), but they were not captious and indicated a desire to reach a clear understanding. Mr. Overstreet continued his explanations until 11 o'clock when, in response to a general sentiment, the caucus adjourned without taking action.

IS READY TO QUIT.

Hong Kong Advices Say Aguinaldo Has Enough.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—A special telegram from Hong Kong to The Evening World says that Filipinos there authorize that Aguinaldo is ready to surrender if Consul Wildman is ready to receive him at Manila. The dispatch says that the Filipino junta at Hong Kong was in communication with Aguinaldo last week and advised him then to throw himself upon the mercy of the United States.

A dispatch to the Herald from Manila says: Aguinaldo's mother says she desires nothing but peace. She is glad from the bottom of her heart that the insurrection is near an end. She adds that the women and officers' families are suffering fearful deprivations and hardships. She declares she does not know Aguinaldo's present whereabouts or his ultimate destination.

MONROE'S GREAT BLUFF.

The Lieutenant Took Bayonbong by a Clever Ruse.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—A dispatch to The Herald from Manila says: The surrender of General Conan and 800 insurgents at Bayonbong to Lieutenant Monroe, Second Cavalry, is considered the result of a remarkable display of courage and "bluff" on the part of the American officer.

Lieutenant Monroe had only 50 men with him and all possible reinforcements were far in his rear. He communicated by telegraph with the insurgent leader, stating that he was ready to move on Bayonbong at once with a large force unless he received the unconditional surrender of the rebels.

The lieutenant wired south for reinforcements, but 24 hours before they reached him he went to Bayonbong with his little escort of half a hundred and General Conan surrendered to him.

ATTACKED AT NIGHT.

American Garrison at Vigan Has a Hard Fight—Eight Killed.

MANILA, Dec. 6.—Tuesday night a force of insurgents, estimated at 800, attacked the American garrison of 200 at Vigan, province of South Ilocos. The American loss was eight killed and many wounded.

After very hard fighting the Filipinos were driven off and through the mountains, leaving 85 dead. Colonel Bisbee is now reinforcing the garrison.

Fears are entertained regarding various small bodies of General Young's in the province of Abra.

To Relieve Macrum.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The president has designated Adelbert F. Hay to proceed at once to South Africa as the representative of the state department and take the place of Mr. Macrum, the present United States consul to Pretoria. Mr. Hay is the son of the secretary of state.

Mines Filling With Water.

PRETORIA, Friday, Dec. 1.—The Standard says that Wednesday last Cecil Rhodes' dispatches, intercepted near Kimberley, said that the Deboers mines were filling with water and that Mr. Rhodes estimated the damage at £50,000 per day.

THE SIEGE RAISED

BOERS REPORTED TO HAVE RETIRED FROM MAFEKING.

Dispatch Received in London Also Indicates That Kimberley Has Been Relieved but This Is Unconfirmed—Boers Held Their Position at Modder River Until Night and Then Withdrew.

NEWCASTLE, Natal, Dec. 5.—The following dispatch has been received from Mafeking:

"General Cronje, with a large number of wagons and troops, has left his laager, raising the siege, although desultory firing can be heard."

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Evening News says it learns that a cable dispatch has been received from an officer of the guards saying simply "In Kimberley," which, it is added, may mean that General Methuen's vanguard has entered Kimberley.

LOSNOS, Dec. 6.—A Modder River special dated Thursday, Nov. 30, says:

"The Boers occupy a strong ridge about six miles north of this point. Today the Lancers came in contact with them."

TOLD BY A CORRESPONDENT

Battle of Modder River Described in a Newspaper Dispatch.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Daily Chronicle publishes the following dispatch, dated Wednesday, Nov. 29, morning, from its correspondent at Modder river camp:

"The severest engagement our column has yet had and probably the severest of the whole campaign was fought yesterday on the banks of the Modder river. The battle was waged fiercely for nearly 14 hours.

"The enemy occupied a strongly entrenched position, their front extending five miles along the bank of the stream. They were well supplied with artillery and fought desperately.

"Our force consisted of the Second battalion of the Coldstream Guards, the First battalion of the Scots Guards, the Third battalion of the Grenadier Guards, the First battalion of the Northumberland Fusiliers, the Second battalion of the Yorkshire light infantry, (the King's Own), a part of the First battalion of the Loyal North Lancashires regiment, the Ninth Lancers, the mounted infantry, three batteries of field artillery and the first battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (Princess Louise's).

"The latter were reinforced as from General Wauchope's brigade and arrived just in time for the fight. The battle started at daybreak, our guns shelling the Boer's left.

Awful Hail of Bullets.

"The enemy replied with artillery, Hotchkisses and Maxims, and the artillery duel lasted some hours. Then there was a brief lull in the enemy's operations, of which the general immediately took advantage. Our infantry advanced across the plain towards the river, in two brigades. The guards, on the right, were met by an awful hail of bullets from the enemy's sharpshooters, posted close to the river on the opposite bank. Ours had no shelter whatever, and were simply mowed down. It seemed impossible to live through the terrible fire, but the brave fellows did not retreat an inch. The Boer fire was horribly accurate, and they must have numbered at least 10,000.

"The Scots Guards advanced 600 yards before they were fired on. Then they had to lie down to avoid annihilation. Our losses were simply awful.

"The Highlanders made several attempts to force a passage of the river, but they were exposed to such a murderous enfilading fire that they had to retire after they had suffered terribly.

"Subsequently a party of the guards got over and held their own for hours.

"The general opinion of the staff is that there had never been such a sustained fire in the annals of the British army as that which our troops had to face yesterday. Our men fell in dozens while trying to rush the bridge.

"Night put an end to the terrible bloodshed. The infantry brigade was terribly cut up.

"The Boers retreated at night, taking their guns with them, and we are now occupying their position. The enemy's loss was tremendous."

THE BOER VERSION.

Battle at Modder River Resulted in Slight Boer Losses.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The following is a Boer version of the battle of Modder river:

"PRETORIA, Wednesday, Nov. 29.—Delarey's official report states that a large force of British yesterday morning attacked his commando at Modder river. Heavy fighting lasted for hours. Cronje and Delarey took up strong positions, the Free Staters being stationed on the left. Delarey had 17 killed and wounded, including his eldest son. The Free Staters losses are unknown. At dark the Boers retired slowly to their positions, having prevented the British from forcing their way to Kimberley."

CANVASS COMPLETED.

Kentucky Election Commissioners Will Now Try Contests.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 6.—The state board of election commissioners, sitting as a canvassing board, has finished its work and will now sit as a canvassing board to hear arguments in the cases of 11 contested counties. The first great fight will come up on the question of whether or not the board has the right to go behind the certified returns filed with the secretary of state by the different counties. On the face of the returns now on file with the secretary of state Mr. Taylor has a plur lity of 2,393. If the board decides that it has the power to go behind the returns, no one can tell exactly who will receive the certificate.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Nov. 30.

A national organization has been formed by managers of Chautauqua assemblies.

August F. Lutter, who, it is alleged, shot and dangerously wounded Mrs. Jennie L. Filkin at Minneapolis, has been captured.

Members of the executive committee of the Anti-Trust League will meet in Chicago, Dec. 11, to fix the date for the anti-trust conference.

Mr. Belfour expresses the opinion that the Boers, in declaring war, made a bid for empire instead of merely striving for their liberty.

Edgeley, N. D., is said to have an artesian well that supplies the city with a complete water system and also yields gas for illuminating purposes.

Harper & Bros., the New York publishers, are in such straits that a receivership is necessary. The liabilities are $3,500,000, $2,000,000 being unsecured.

Friday, Dec. 1.

The Chicago and Alton road has assumed control of the St. Louis, Peoria and Northern.

Ore prices for next year have been fixed a little more than double those at the beginning of last year.

The total coinage at the mint during November was $2,008,970, which represents 19,415,340 separate coins.

Thanksgiving foothall scores: Wisconsin 17, Michigan 0; Pennsylvania 29, Cornell 0; Carlisle Indians 45, Columbia 0; Chicago 17, Brown 6.

Aguinaldo's mother has arrived at Manila, and has been given shelter by Senor Legarde, a prominent amigo, who was secretary of the treasury before the outbreak and who resigned when it came.

Saturday, Dec 2.

Yerkes has sold a large portion of his Chicago street railway holdings.

The Molineux jury has been completed and the trial will begin Monday.

An industrial school for colored boys and girls was dedicated at Columbia, S. C.

Secretary Gage extends the date for the purchase of government bonds until Dec. 23.

Some of the crew of the American gunboat Urdaneta were killed by the Filipinos and others kept as prisoners.

It is stated Aguinaldo saved the lives of Lieutenant Gilmore and his fellow prisoners just as they were about to be executed by order of General Luna.

General MacArthur is now in Bayambang preparing to sweep the country on both sides of the Manila-Dagupan railway. General Wheaton is at San Fabian and General Lawton at Tayug.

Monday, Dec. 4.

The new treaty regarding Samoa was signed at the state department Saturday.

A. F. Hay, son of the secretary of state, succeeds Mr. Macrum as consul at the Transvaal capital.

The trunk railways are considering the adoption of the clearing house system and doing away with agencies.

Rev. Lee A. Brink of Iron River, Wis., has been found in Chicago, having mysteriously disappeared several weeks ago.

John J. Blair of Blairstown, N. J., a millionaire many times over, and one of the oldest railroad builders and owners in the country, is dead.

The high duty on woolen manufactured goods has had the result of determining several German mill owners who have customers in the United States to establish manufacturing plants in this country.

Tuesday, Dec. 5.

The Cuban census has been completed.

Senator Hanna's shipping bill has been introduced in the house.

England and Portugal are delimiting their boundaries in Africa.

Francis C. Cantine has been appointed receiver for Harper & Bros.

Colonel Henry A. Thomas, postmaster of Boston, has resigned because of ill health.

Exceedingly rough weather has been experienced on the Pacific ocean the past week.

It is proposed to send business letters by the Pollak-Virag telegraphic system at low rates.

An immense bed of high quality silica has been discovered at Dayton, Green county, Wis.

The Illinois Central Terminal facilities in Chicago have been leased by the Wisconsin Central road.

The president has appointed Peter Lieber of Indiana to be consul of the United States at Dusseldorff, Germany.

Wednesday, Dec. 6.

Senator Hayward of Nebraska is dead.

A portion of the troops in Cuba have been ordered home.

The Pullman-Wagner consolidation has been completed.

The gross earnings of railways the last fiscal year showed an increase of $60,000,000.

The Chicago board of trade is at the head of a crusade against the bucket shop system.

According to a late decision female postal clerks, when they marry, must quit the service.

Natives and Spaniards in Cuba united in an address expressing confidence in the United States.

Socialists elected two candidates for mayor in Massachusetts at Tuesday's election. Haverhill and Brockton are the towns.

Julia Marlowe Taber, the actress, has begun suit for divorce on the grounds of intolerable severity and neglect and refusal to support.

COAL AND WOOD
VANCE AND STONE

TO PROSPECTIVE
INVESTORS
In New Buildings

When laying out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have the architect include electric wiring in his specifications

Call us up

Before letting your Contract. We shall be pleased to give you the benefit of our experience in laying out wiring plans, it will cost you nothing to use us as consulting engineers, in that respect.

Should you want us

To figure on your wiring, we are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market. Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

A. G. ANDERSON....
Druggist and Pharmacist.
Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.
Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.
Anderson Block, Robert Street
CROOKSTON, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal,
BY N. S. GORDON.

☞ Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

THE republicans are now in full control of the national government and they may be expected to give a good account of themselves.

AMONG the most important matters to come before congress this winter are the Nicaraguan canal and Pacific cable projects. Both are deserving of the earliest consideration by all patriotic legislators.

THE threshing machine manufacturers of the United States have formed a trust, with a capitalization of $60,000,000. The combination includes seventy percent of all the threshing machine manufacturers. The J. I. Case Threshing Machine company, of Racine, Wis., is the largest company outside of the trust and they are preparing to fight the combine.

ONE of the great questions with which the congress just opened will have to deal is that of the government of Cuba and the Philippines. This is a matter that touches the future of these islands and will need careful study before any action is taken. Well is it for the peoples on those islands that the republican party is at the helm, for on this account they are sure to receive the treatment that will be for their best good.

NO particularly decisive engagement has taken place in South Africa during the past week. Judging from meagre reports the British are pushing forward forces to the relief of the several British garrisons that are besieged by the Boers, but the latter are making a stubborn and brave resistance. So far it has been a very bloody war and it seems evident that before the contest is concluded many thousands on both sides will be numbered among the slain.

WHEN Congressman-elect Roberts, of Utah, went to the speaker's desk to take the oath objection was made and pending an investigation of his eligibility, he will not be sworn in. The country has been roused over this question and Mr. Roberts' case will be treated non-politically, for though the protest against his taking the oath of office came from a republican, a democrat, voicing the sentiments of that party, said that "this issue was one involving the sacredness of the American home."

CHAS. A. TOWNE, one of the noted anti-expansionists, said recently that it was the wish of Senator Hanna and his co-workers to plant a monarchy in the place of the existing republican form of government in this country. Such wild and reckless statements brand Mr. Towne as a man who would make an unsafe leader. If he continues at this rate it will pay Mr. Hanna to keep him in the field for such talk will soon convince the people that Mr. Towne is very careless in his conclusions and not to be depended upon.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY in his annual message to congress reviews the important transactions in all departments of the national government during the year, states the present situation and makes some specific suggestions as to needed legislation, though for the most part he indicates to congress where legislation is needed, but refrains from dictating as to just what laws should be passed. It is a very long document, but it was necessarily so for much history has been crowded into the past year. At the very outset he refers in most fitting words to the recent death of Vice president Hobart. Attention is then called to the fact that the country is now in a condition of unusual prosperity, the surplus in the national treasury for the present fiscal year being estimated at $40,000,000. With regard to the money question he suggests that some definite action be taken as he consideres the "present as the most fitting time to make adequate provision to insure the continuance of the gold standard and of public confidence in the ability and purpose of the government to meet all its obligations in the money which the civilized world recognizes as the best." In the matter of trusts he carefully distinguishes between the legitimate and necessary combinations in the business world and "those combinations which control the market of any particular kind of merchandise necessary to the general community, by suppressing natural and ordinary competition whereby prices are unduly enhanced to the general consumer." These latter he considers "obnoxious" and the evils of such organizations should be rooted out. As to our commercial rights in China he says: "They have been maintained and will be in the future." Our pledges to Cuba will be fulfilled and when the Cubans are ready they will be given independence. It is clearly shown that the government could have pursued no other course in the Philippines than has been pursued, without injustice to the great mass of the Filipinos, in accordance with whose wishes and aspirations the islands were transferred to the United States, without neglect of duty and dishonor to our flag. It would be unwise to grant independence and establish a protectorate just now as this would involve endless trouble and misery not only to us but particularly to the Filipinos themselves. No recommendations as to the form of government that should be established in the islands are made. That question can only be finally settled when the insurrection is completely quelled, which will soon happen.

GENTILLY.

A few of our lumbermen leave for the Red Lake pineries Thusday.

We are having pretty cold weather, Monday the thermometer registered nine degrees below zero.

Michael Lance sold his farm, the ne¼ of ne¼ of section 23, to J. Julien. Mr. Lance will inhabit a house a short distance from his old farm.

The meeting held in this town last Thursday to discuss the question of discontinuing the county road running diagonally northeast and southwest through the town of Gentilly passed the following resolution: That said road will be discontinued but not at once. The officers decided that four years would be a reasonable time for the work.

The following note will be sufficient to show the prosperity of the Gentilly Cheese Factory during the past year. Milk received, 342,705 pounds; cheese made 36,342 pounds: average test, 4.007; milk to one pound of cheese, 9.42; cheese to one pound of fat, 2.68; money received $3,627.95; money given to farmers, $2,901.37.

LENGBY.

Hanf Sovik returned Monday from North Dakota where he has been working the past summer and fall.

The Lengby debating society will meet for the first time this winter at the Argall hall next Thursday.

John Nelson, of Fosston, a brother to N. O. Nelson, of Lengby, was visiting here between trains on Sunday.

John Brandt a son of I. O. Brandt, of Fosston, who has been staying with the Lomen family returned home on Sunday.

A. Argall, formerly of Lengby now of Hatten, N. D., came here on Saturday and after visiting with friends and looking after his interests here returned home on Sunday.

The Norwegian Ladies' Sewing society had their auction and basket sale at the Argall hall last Saturday night. There were many people present and a good sale netting about $35.

A Johnson, who has been running the temperance saloon in the Argall building has moved to Fosston where he will engage in the laundry business on Harrison avenue, opposite Central hotel. Louis Jenson arrived here last Thursday to take his place.

FERTILE.

Winter has come at last.

We need a good snow to make business lively.

There will be a basket sociable at the hall Tuesday evening.

P. Peterson, of Rindal, was in town over night Tuesday.

Ole Bolstad, of Rindal, went to Crookston Tuesday morning.

The Young Ladies Sewing Society meets at Mrs. Olson's this week.

The young folks are taking advantage of the fine skating on the river.

G. H. Wuhl, agent for the Crookston Lumber Company, spent Monday in town.

Geo. Kronschnabel has put an up-to-date sewing machine in his harness shop.

The Thanksgiving ball was a grand success. Quite a number were over from Beltrami.

T. H. Nesseth has put in a furnace in his house. He says it is a fine thing for these cold days.

The roads are so bad that it is almost impossible for farmers to come to town with heavy loads.

Sam Felsing, of Maple Bay, who has been to a specialist in Minneapolis, returned last week, very much improved.

Deputy Sheriff Losey was in town Tuesday summoning witnesses to appear before the grand jury, which sits on Dec. 12.

C. W. Russel, who is interested in the Blower factory, at Maple Bay, stopped off here Tuesday, on his way to Maple Bay.

Lost

A large Newfoundland dog, named Predro. Finder will return the dog to A. Chabot at the New York Store.

—Sheet Music at 50 percent off regular price, at Stone's Mammoth Music House 110 and 112 Broadway, Fargo, N. D. Send for catalogue of latest up to date music. tf

KEY WEST.

Church service was not very largely attended on Sunday on account of the cold weather.

Mrs. D. Brice left on Saturday afternoon for Grand Forks.

Miss Mary Wik, who has been residing with her sister of this place for some time, took the train Friday morning for her home at Maple Bay.

Miss Mary Casmey of Buffington spent Thanksgiving with friends at this place.

R. H. Walker came back to spend Thanksgiving among us.

Our telegraph operator, L. A. Gilphas and wife left Wednesday morning for Hitterdale, Minn., where they expect to spend the winter.

A ball will be held in the newly erected Woodman hall at Key West on Dec. 15. All are cordially invited to attend.

Cut This Out

And send it with $1 as a guarantee of good faith and we will send you one of our $2.95 guitars or Mandolins to your express office C. O. D. subject to examination. If you find it O. K. and the same as your local dealer would ask $6.50 for, pay the express agent the balance and the charges and the instrument is yours. If found otherwise return to us and we will pay all charges and refund the amount paid. S. Stone's Music House, Fargo, N. D. tf

Crookston Market.

Corrected Thursday morning, Dec. 7.
WHEAT—No. 1 Hard 53½ No. 1 Northern 52½ No. 2 Northern 49½.
OATS—22c.
BARLEY—20 to 26c.
FLAX—$1.18.
POTATOES—20 to 25c.
EGGS—22c.
BUTTER—20 to 22c.
ONIONS—60c
BEANS—1.35 to 2.00
HAY—Baled $5.00, loose $4.00.
HOGS—5¼c.
CATTLE—2½ to 3½ live weight, 5½ to 6½c dressed beef.
SHEEP—7c.
CHICKENS—8c.
TURKEYS—10c
HIDES—5 to 6c.
WOOL—15½c. to 16
FLOUR—2.10 per cwt.
BRAN—$10.50 per ton.
SHORTS—$12.50 per ton.

Report of the Condition
OF THE

Scandia-American Bank

AT CROOKSTON.

In the State of Minnesota, at the close of business on the 2nd day of December, 1899.

RESOURCES

Loans and discounts			$291,223 32
Other bonds, stocks and orders			11,800 00
Furniture and fixtures			1,000 00
Other real estate			6,200 00
Expenses paid			6,576 97
Taxes paid			1,692 70
Revenue stamps			1,018 13
Due from banks	$66,127 21
Checks and cash items	933 19
Currency	$20,292 60
Gold	8,750 00
Silver	1,781 85
Fractional	12 96	—$30,836 81
			97,897 21
Total			$417,438 33

LIABILITIES

Capital Stock		$50,000 00
Surplus fund		10,000 00
Undivided profits		18,823 57
Deposits subject to check	$125,958 24
Demand certificates	27,912 19
Due Banks	32,624 23
Total immediate liabilities	186,494 66
Time certificates	152,120 09
Total Deposits	338,614 75
		—$338,614 74
Total		$417,438 33

State of Minnesota } ss
County of Polk }

I. L. Ellington, cashier of the Scandia American Bank of Crookston, Minnesota, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief
(Signed) L. ELLINGTON,
Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 7th day of December, A. D. 1899.
ANDREW P. HANSON,
(SEAL) Notary Public

Order to Show Cause on Filing Petition to Sell Land.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Attix, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Nathan P. Stone, administrator of said estate, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead, of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be to him granted to sell a portion of said real estate; And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, and expenses of administration, and that it is necessary for the payment of said debts, and expenses to sell part of said real estate:

It is Therefore Ordered, That all persons interested in said estate, appear before this Court, on

Friday the 5th day of January 1900,

at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in Crookston in said County, then and there to show cause (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said administrator to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is Further Ordered, That this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston the 7th day of December A. D. 1899.
By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

Order for Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Mary Straka, deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of Martin Koteba, of the County of Polk, representing, among other things, that Mary Straka, late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the eighth day of November A. D. 1896, at the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this County at the time of her death, leaving goods, chattels, and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to John Stepan granted,

It Is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the

29th day of December A. D. 1899,

at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the City of Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston, Minn. the 7th day of December A. D. 1899. By the Court,
OLE E. Hagen,
Judge of Probate.

A. A MILLER,
Attorney for Estate.

HOW IS THIS?

While other stores are telling you they are going to quit business and such old worn out trade jokes, we are doing business at the old stand, and to prove to you we are right we will quote you a few of our revised prices that knock the wind out of the other fellows and will make them look up some other scheme.

BOY'S SUITS

Boys' all wool gray, long pant suits, just the thing for school suits, worth $5.50 for $2.75
Boys' all wool blue serge, long pant suits, single or double breasted, worth $8 for 4.50
Boys' fine all wool grey cashmere, long pant suits worth $12 for 6.50
Boys' fine grey two piece suits worth $1.25 for 85c
Boys' fine all wool tweed suits, sailor collar and trimmed with braid, worth $2.25 for 1.50
Boys' pants that are always sold at 50c we are going to give to you this week for 15c
Boys' overalls worth as high as 50c all go for 15c
50 doz. mittens worth as high as 75c, all go for 25c

MEN'S OVERCOATS

Men's fine all wool black frieze ulsters, heavy lined, worth $15 for ... 6.98
Men's fine all wool black Irish frieze ulsters, dressy and warm, worth $20 for 10.98
Men's black dog coats worth $17 for 9.50
Men's black dog coats worth $20 for 12.00
Men's all wool ulsters, large collars and heavy weights, worth $8.50 for 4.50
Men's fine all wool brown and black melton overcoats worth $12 to $15 for 6.75

MEN'S DUCK SUITS

Men's brown and black duck coats worth $1 for 75c
Men's heavy brown and black duck coats worth $2 for 1.25
Men's extra heavy brown and black duck coats worth $3 for 1.75
Men's sheepskin lined duck coats worth $5 for 3.25

MEN'S SUITS.

Men's all wool gray English whip cord suits, worth $18 for $9.75
Men's brown all wool tweed suits, neat fitting and well finished, worth $12 for 5.48
Men's brown all wool tweed suits, worth $15 for 7.48
Men's all wool clay worsted suits, in gray, brown and black, frock or sack coats, worth $20 for 10.98
Men's fine all wool black worsted suits, square cut coats, worth $18 for 8.48
Men's fine black all wool serge suits, all styles, worth $10 for 5.50
Men's all wool fancy tweed suits, latest styles and well made, worth $8 for 4.25
Two cases of underwear worth $1.25 per suit, we are going to give them to you this week for 58c
100 doz sweaters worth $1, we will close them out this week for ... 39c

These prices cannot help but prove to you that this is the only place in town to purchase this line of goods. Come and see us before buying

Great Western Clothing House

Opposite the Post Office. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.

Going out of business....

...SUITS AT COST...

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $20.00, $18,00, $16.00
Closing out sale $11.65
500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $15.00, $14.00, $12.00
Closing out sale $9.75
500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $10.00, $9.00, $8.00
Closing out sale $4.95

Everything goes. Fixtures for sale. Store for rent.

Vanstrum Clothing Co.

Big Clearance Sale of Winter Stock at the

NEW YORK STORE

During week of Dec. 11 to 16. Large reduction in all prices as everything must go.

Ladies' and Gents' Overshoes.
Fur and Cloth Capes.
Handsome are our Ladies' Cloaks and Jackets.

25 perct. off on Ladies' Hats

Warm Woolen Blankets for the winter that is coming.
11/4 Blankets at 59c

Big Sale on Shoes

A. CHABOT, PROPRIETOR.

RAILWAY TIME CARD

CROOKSTON, MINN.

NORTHERN PACIFIC

	Arr.	Dep't
SOUTH BOUND. No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	6:27 pm	6:32 pm
NORTH BOUND. No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	6:20 am	6:30 am

C. A. SHARNEY, Agt. Crookston, Minn. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A. St. Paul, Minn

GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE	*Daily	†Except Sunday.	LEAVE
(Ar 8:00 am)	Grand Forks, Fish and West		7:00 am
0.00 pm	Mpls., St. Paul and points east		0.00 pm
4.30 pm	St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls		9.30 am
4.53 pm	Fisher, Grandin, Dunseith and Superior		9.00 am
6.45 pm	St. Vincent to Pierre		7.15 pm
8.35 am	Fargo to St. Vincent		0.10 am

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block, Crookston. Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fortaine & Anglim's
Office hours—9 to 12 a. m; 1 to 5 p. m; 7 to 8 p.m

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets
Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR THE FAMOUS PEL-TOKAIDO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice, Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.

Services every Sunday, Morning, 11:00, even ing, 8:00. Holy Communion the First Sunday of every Month. Strangers are welcome.
Rev. H. M. GREER, B. D.
Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

—C. U. Webster was over from Fisher last Tuesday

—A. C. Richardson is the new clerk at Martin & Webster's.

—J. P. Montgomery was down from Angus last Monday night.

—Chas. Snyder, of Fertile, spent Tuesday at the county seat.

P. J. Carey, of Beltrami, was in the city on business yesterday.

—Harry Polk, of the Crookston C. O. D., made a trip to Ada last Monday.

—Robert Purvis, who has been quite ill for some time is reported as improving.

—The New York Store is clearing out its winter stock. Low prices and the best of goods.

—Alex. McKinnon, of Minneapolis, reached Crookston Monday morning on a business trip.

—C. B. March, manager of the Walker mills at Akely, spent Monday night in Crookston.

—L. J. Lake, one of the prominent farmers of Angus, spent last Tuesday night in Crookston.

—Prof. Higgs and his band of musicians will give their next concert in the opera house Dec. 18.

—Andrew and Eli Steenerson went out to Phœnix Tuesday to look after their lumbering interests.

—A final decree in the estate of Andrew E. Bjelland was issued by Judge Hagen last Tuesday.

—Remember that A. Chabot at the New York Store will sell all his winter goods next week at a great reduction.

—The New York Store has the best quality of overshoes and winter caps at the lowest prices. Special sale next week.

—Mrs. Paul Carpenter returned to her home at McIntosh last Tuesday. She has been visiting with relatives here and at Euclid.

—Two new orders, the Red Men and the Knights of Malta, are likely to have lodges established in Crookston in the near future.

—Mrs. Waldron, of Ada, has moved to Crookston where she will keep house for her son Frank who is working for the Finch-Smith company.

—A local branch of the National Association of letter carriers was formed in Crookston Tuesday by the city's gray-coated mail distributors.

—D. E. Gorton, who is engaged in the machinery and hardware business in Fosston, spent yesterday and part of the day before at the county seat.

—The Neill Stock Company will be at the Grand next Tuesday night. The Gopher club will form a large theatre party, seats being reserved in the parquet.

—James McFarland, who was found in possession of stolen goods was up before the justice of the peace Tuesday charged with petty larceny. He paid costs and $5.

—The New York Store has a special ad in this paper.

—Mrs. A. A. Olds has been at Fisher visiting friends.

—Ladies' hats, 25 percent off on them at the New York Store.

—W. Lemen from Angus has gone east to Virginia for the winter.

—Miss Ella McKinnon was at home to her young friends last Friday evening.

—Will Rosh and Wm. Munch, Jr., have gone out east to visit their chums.

—A large number of the business buildings in Roseau were burned last Saturday.

—Miss Blanch Fitzgerald of Alexandria is visiting with her sister, Miss Fitzgerald.

—A. Chabot at the New York Store is having a big clearance sale. See his advertisement.

—More than 15,000 acres of land in Polk county changed hands during the month of November.

—Aunt Polly's slough is the best patronized place in the city these days, as the ice is thick enough for skating.

—Little Byron Leek had several of his fingers severely injured last Saturday by the explosion of a toy cannon.

—Thos. Nesbit of Western Polk was appointed last Monday by Judge Hagen as administrator in the estate of Patrick Cox.

—A pleasant social time was spent last Friday evening by a large number of the young folks at the home of Miss Julia Lewis.

—FOR SALE, two quarter section farms near Mentor, on easy terms. M. R. Waters 502 Guaranty Loan Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

—The entertainment given by the United Workman on Thanksgiving evening was a decided success. Later in the evening dancing was indulged in.

—If you contemplate purchasing a piano, organ, or any other musical instrument, write Stone's Music House, Fargo, N. D., for prices before buying. tf

—No prisoner, once he gets inside Jailer Lawrence's bastile, need hope to escape, for the McKinnon Bros. have put a second covering over the only weak points in the cells.

—G. M. Berg, boiler inspector, of Euclid, starts for a trip to England, Norway and Sweden Dec. 15. He will spend two or three months on a visit across the water among the scenes of his childhood.

—The Valley Roller Mill was obliged to shut down as soon as the river froze and did not run for a few days till the water supply adjusted itself from the loss of volume exhausted by the ice formation.

—See Fontaine & Anglim's two page advertisement in this issue. Great stock reducing sale of their entire winter stock from the dry goods, clothing and shoe departments.

—The first meeting of the Crescent Literary society in connection with the Crookston college will be held in the college chapel tomorrow night. Supt. R. W. Hitchcock will speak on some educational theme.

—Rev. F. W. Fraser sends word from Columbus, Ind., that he expects to reach Crookston tomorrow or Saturday. He will occupy the pulpit at the Presbyterian church next Sunday, and conclude the series of sermons on Genesis iii.

—Mrs. L. S. Hancock, of Euclid, mother of Mrs. George Carpenter, had her shoulder dislocated last Saturday evening. She slipped and fell just as she stepped from the train at the Great Northern station. She is in the city at the home of her daughter.

—Attorney Vaule has been kept busy of late looking after cases in Polk county. The latest to present a petition before this court to be adjudicated bankrupt is Benjamin Walker, a farmer from Marshall county. He finds that he is more than $1,000 behind.

—The Modern Woodmen, Tuesday night chose the following as their officers for the ensuing year: P. L. Renne, V. C.; F. R. Hamel, W. A.; O. Merell, S. B.; A. H. Hillard, clerk; N. Bray, escort; L. E. Gossman sentry; M. C. Malone, watchman; A. Lytle, manager.

—"Miss Fenton's Happy Day" is the title of a story written by Miss Ruth Childs, of Crookston, and published in the Minneapolis Journal of last Sunday morning. Miss Ruth's pen has won her honor before, the prize which she received in one instance being presented by her to the high school.

—The winter term at the State University at Minneapolis began last Tuesday. Word has been received that the Crookston students in attendance at that institution successfully passed the examinations covering the fall term. These students expect to reach Crookston for the Christmas vacation Dec. 23.

—The Knights of Pythias last Thursday night elected thescas their officers for the next 12 months: J. E. O'Brien, C. C.; R. L. Farr, V. C.; C. A. Hitchcock, master of work; John R. Rasmussen, prelate; C. F. Mix, K. of R. and S; John Cromb, M. of finance; L. Ellington, M. of exchequer; A. Braley, M. at arms: W. E. McKenzie, trustee.

—Oscar Blink, of St. Hilaire, was a visitor here over Sunday.

—John B. Bren, of Tabor, spent last Friday in the city on business.

—The Sherman House on Robert street closed its doors to the public last Friday.

—Fred Harris concluded his work for the Fosston Telephone company last Thursday.

—Mr. and Mrs. L. Sargent returned Saturday from Grand Forks, where they visited relatives.

—L. M. Olson, of Warren, treasurer of Marshall county, was in town Sunday, returning home Monday.

—Miss McKercher's music pupils gave a rehearsal last Friday evening at the home of Judge Watts.

—F. R. Youngren, who has been spending a few weeks on the St. Vincent line, was in town over Sunday.

—Pete Larson left Saturday for Cass Lake, where he will take charge of the construction of the Cass Lake mill.

—Miss Anna Wilson, who is teaching school in the vicinity of Benoit, spent Thanksgiving at her home in the city.

—The Gopher Club had an informal dance in the club rooms Thanksgiving evening that was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

—Mrs. C. W. Latta returned Sunday from Grand Forks, where she visited a short time with her uncle, A. J. AnDyke.

—Philip McGuire, who has been visiting relatives and friends for a few days, left for his Fertile home Monday night.

—L. W. Clark went to Cass Lake Saturday, where he is employed in the construction of the new saw mill now being built at that place.

—The best toned instruments made. The Farstone Mandolins and Guitars, C. R. Stone, maker. Sold by Stone's Mammoth Music House, Fargo, N. D.

—Rob Crumm, who has been practicing near his old home in Pembina for several months, has returned to Crookston and is already hard at work.

—Word has been received that Mr. Cooper, father of Mrs. F. W. Fraser, of Crookston, died last week at Chicago, whither Mr. and Mrs. Fraser had gone.

—An Epworth League social will be held tonight at the home of J. W. Wheeler, Houston avenue. A cordial invitation is extended to all, to be present.

—Editor C. C. Knuppen, of the Turtle River Pine Tree, says that surveyors are working cross-sectioning the railroad survey between Turtle River and Bemidji.

—Ed. AnDyke, of Wahpeton, N. D. who spent Monday in the city visiting friends, returned to Grand Forks the same evening where he is visiting his brother A. J. AnDyke.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—Miss Mayme Vannet, a teacher in the East Grand Forks schools was the guest of her brother W. L. Vannet while she was attending the educational meeting here last Friday.

—Next Sunday morning at the Congregational church Rev. Mr. Fisher will preach on "The Reasonableness of Religious Decision." His evening subject will be, "The Blessing which the Holy Spirit Bestows."

—Reynold Johnson, who has been in the employ of E. D. Childs for some years, purchased a steamship ticket from John Carlson, Saturday and left the same day for Gutenburg, Sweden, where he will visit during the winter.

—Now is the time to fix up for winter. We have quite an accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Co. Telephone 40.

—Bish Dorsey, the murderer of John McCabe, had his preliminary examination at East Grand Forks last Saturday. County Attorney A. R. Holston examined four witnesses, but the prisoner's attorney offered no evidence, so Dorsey was bound over to the grand jury which meets next Tuesday in Crookston.

—The will of Mrs. Hanna H. Reed was contested in the probate court last Tuesday. By the will the two sons, Jas. C. and Wm. N. Reed, and the daughter, Evaline Cheney, were left but little of the property and now seek to have the will set aside on the ground that the mother, when the will was made was ill and unable to understand fully what she did.

—A month ago the members of the church and congregation of the Congregational church were invited to each earn a dollar in some peculiar way and to write up their method in rhyme for an Experience Social which will occur Dec. 14 at 8 o'clock, in the church parlors. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Come everyone and enjoy the fun. Refreshments will also be served, all for ten cents. Don't forget the date.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....in the Northwest.

"Special Sales Day" Every Day.

Our regular prices are lower than other dealers' "Closing Out" "Reduction" sales, and other "fake" sale prices. We guarantee a saving on every sale made in our store.

The Legitimate Clothing House.

THE C. O. D.

Storm Sash. We have a complete stock—and our prices are right. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company.

Storm Sash.

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.
Crookston, Minnesota.

Watch Bratrud AND He'll "WATCH" You

He has everything which a first class watchmaker and jeweler keeps in stock. Watches and clocks repaired and cleaned.

Low Prices and First Class Work

Repairing Guaranteed.

M. A. BRATRUD
Anderson & Olson Block.

Cordova Wax Candles

Nothing else adds so much to the charm of the dressing room or boudoir as the soft radiance of Cordova Wax Candles. Nothing else contributes more to the artistic success of the luncheon, tea or dinner. The best grocers sell them. Send 2c. stamp for the Cordova booklet telling how to make over 50 delicious dishes. Sherry's recipes and the most delicate Chile by and sold everywhere.
STANDARD OIL CO.

You'll be thankful

Without question if you call in at Tom Morris' and inspect his large stock of

Jewelry and Watches,

Diamonds, silver and silver plated ware
All kinds of Toilet Articles in sterling silver and ebony at

CUT GLASS AND POTTERY A SPECIALTY....

Tom Morris'

117 Broadway, opp. Hotel Crookston

S. C. Johnson's Feed..Store

Baled hay, per bale	85c
Oats, per bushel	28c
Ground Feed, Oats and Barley, per 100 lbs	75c
Shorts, 100 lbs	65c
Bran, 100 lbs	60c
Shelled Corn, per bu	30c
Condition Powder, per pkg	25c
Shorts, per ton	$12.00
Bran, per ton	10.00

Cedar Posts from 12c to 15c.

Cor. Fletcher and Main Sts. Crookston, Minn.

A Jewel

Yes that's just what N. K. Olson is, and he keeps all kinds of silver plated flat ware. Also all kinds of holiday ware, watches, jewelry, clocks, etc., etc. Give him a call.

N. K. OLSON.
120 Robert St. W.

Aug. Miller & Co.,

Tanners. Fur Dressers and Hide Dealers.....

We make a specialty of Tanning Harness and Shoe Leather, Dressing Beef and Horse Hides for Coats and Robes, also Sheep Pelts and all kinds of Furs for Customers. First class work Guaranteed.

All kinds of Hides and Skins Purchased.

Crookston, Minn.

LONGVIEW STOCK FARM

SECTION 15, LOWELL.

Short Horn Cattle and Poland Chiua Hogs—

FOR SALE.

Herd headed by Imp. Bonnie Scotland 135,225

R. A. WILKINSON, Prop., Crookston, Minn.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

[Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.]

"Then followed what was perhaps the queer part of this strange service. The women in the tent, at least a large part of them up near the coffin, began to sing in a soft, tearful way. 'I was a wandering sheep.'

"Then, while he singing was going on, one row of women stood up and walked slowly past the casket, and as they went by each one placed a flower of some kind on it. Then they sat down, and another row filed past, leaving their flowers. All the time the singing continued softly, like rain on a tent cover when the wind is gentle. It was one of the simplest and at the same time one of the most impressive sights I ever witnessed. The sides of the tent were up, and hundreds of people who could not get in stood outside, all as still as death, with wonderful sadness and solemnity for such rough looking people. There must have been a hundred of those women, and I was told many of them had been converted at the meetings just recently. I cannot describe the effect of that singing. Every man sang a note, all women's voices, and so soft and yet so distinct that the effect was startling.

"The service closed with another solo by Miss Winslow, who sang 'There were ninety and nine,' and then the evangelist asked them all to bow their heads while he prayed. I was obliged, in order to catch my train, to leave during the prayer, and the last view I caught of the scene as the train moved by the shops was a sight of the great crowd pouring out of the tent and forming in open ranks while the coffin was borne out by six of the women. It is a long time since I have seen such a picture in this unpoetical republic."

If Lorcen's funeral impressed a passing stranger like this, it is not difficult to imagine the profound feelings of those who had been so intimately connected with his late life and death. Having had over entered the Rectangle that had moved it so deeply as Lorcen's body in that coffin, and the Holy Spirit seemed to bless with special power the use of this senseless clay, for that night at the meeting he swept more than a full score of lost souls, mostly women, into the fold of the Good Shepherd.

It should be said here that Henry Maxwell's statement concerning the opening of the saloon from whose window Lorcen had been killed proved nearly exactly true. It was formally closed Monday and Tuesday while the authorities arrested the proprietor, charged with the murder, but nothing could be proved against any one, and before Saturday of that week the saloon was running as regularly as ever. No one on the earth was ever punished by earthly courts for the murder of Lorcen.

So, too, did Raymond, leading the Rectangle, felt Lorcen's death more keenly than Virginia. It came like a distinct personal loss to her. During the week while Lorcen had been in her home had opened Virginia's heart to a new life. She was taking it to the end, Rachel the day after the funeral. They were sitting in the hall of the Page mansion.

"I am going to do something with my money to help these women to a better life." Virginia looked over to the end of the hall where the day before Lorcen's body had lain. "I have decided on a good plan, as it seems to me. I have talked it over with Rollin. He will devote a large part of his money to the same plan."

"How much money have you, Virginia, to give in this way?" asked Rachel. Once she would never have asked such a personal question. Now it seemed as natural to talk freely about money as about anything else that belonged to God.

"I have available for use at least $450,000. Rollin has as much more. It is one of his bitter regrets now that his extravagant habits of life before his conversion practically threw away half that father left him. We are both eager to make all the reparation in our power. "What would Jesus do with this money?" We want to answer that question honestly and wisely. The money I shall put into The News is, I am confident, in line with Jesus' probable action. It is a necessary that we have a daily Christian paper in Raymond, especially now that we have the saloon influence to meet, as it is to have a church or a college. So I am satisfied that the $500,000 that Mr. Norman will know how to use so well will be a powerful factor in Raymond to do as Jesus would do.

"About my other plan, Rachel. I want you to work with me. Rollin and I are going to buy up a large part of the property in the Rectangle. The field where the tent now is has been in litigation for years. We mean to secure the entire tract as soon as the courts have settled the title. For some time I have been making a special study of the various forms of college settlements and resident schools of Christian work and institutional church work in the heart of great city slums. I do not know that I have yet taken a full plan in detail, as is the wisest and most effective kind of work that can be done in Raymond. but I do think as much—my mean what (I mean God's, which he wants me to use) can build wholesome lodging houses, refuges for poor women, asylums for shopgirls, safety for many and many a lost girl like Lorcen. And I do not want to be simply a dispenser of this money. God help me! I do want to put myself into the problem. But do you know, Rachel, I have a feeling all the time that all that limitless money and limitless personal sacrifice can possibly do will not awful enemies at the Rectangle as long as the saloon is legally established there. I think that is true of any Christian work now being carried on in any great city. The saloon furnishes material to be saved faster than the settlement or residence or rescue mission work can save it."

Virginia suddenly rose and paced the hall. Rachel answered sadly and yet with a note of hope in her voice:

"It is true; but, oh, Virginia, what a wonderful amount of happiness and power can come out of this money! And the saloon cannot always remain here. The time must come when the Christian force in the city will triumph."

Virginia paused near Rachel, and her pale, earnest face lighted up.

"I believe that too. The number of those who have promised to do as Jesus would is increasing. If we once have, say, 500 such disciples as Raymond, the saloon is doomed. But now, dear, I want you to look at your part in this plan for capturing and using the Rectangle. Your voice is a power. I have heard many times lately. There is one of them. You could organize among the girls a musical institute. Give them the benefit of your training. There are some splendid voices in the rough there. Did any one ever hear such singing as that yesterday? Is those women? Rachel, what a beautiful opportunity! You shall have the best of opportunity in the way of organs and equipment that money can provide, and what cannot be done with music to win souls there into higher and better and purer living?"

Before Virginia had ceased speaking Rachel's face was perfectly transfigured with the thought of her life work. It flowed into her heart and mind like a flood, and the torrent of her feeling overflowed in tears that could not be restrained. It was what she had dreamed of doing herself. It represented to her something that she felt was in keeping with a right use of her own talent. "Yes," she said as she rose and put her arms about Virginia, while both girls in the excitement of their enthusiasm paced the hall—"yes, I will gladly put my life into that kind of service. I do believe that Jesus would have me use my life in this way. Virginia, what miracles can be not accomplish with humanity if we have such a lever as consecrated money to move things with!"

"Add to it consecrated personal enthusiasm like yours, and it certainly can accomplish anything," said Virginia, smiling, and then before Rachel could reply Rollin came in. He hesitated a moment, and we going out of the hall into the library when Virginia called him and asked some questions about his work.

Rollin came back and sat down, and together the three discussed the new plans. Rollin was apparently entirely free from embarrassment in Rachel's presence while Virginia was with them; only his manner with her was almost precise, if not cold. The past seemed to be entirely forgotten in the wonderful conversion. He had not forgotten it, however, and was to be completely caught up for this present time in the practice of this new life.

After awhile Rollin was called out, and Rachel and Virginia began to talk of other things.

"Tell me more, what has become of Jasper Chase?"

Virginia asked the question innocently enough, but Rachel flushed, and Virginia added, with a smile: "I suppose his re writing another book. Is it going to be put into the form, Rachel? You know I always suspected Jasper Chase of doing that very thing in his first story."

"Virginia"—Rachel spoke with the frankness that had always existed between the two friends—"Jasper Chase told me the other night that he—in fact he proposed to me. I would if"—

Rachel stopped and sat with her hands clasped on her lap, and there were tears in her eyes.

"Virginia, I thought a little while ago that I loved him, as he said he loved me, but when I refused my heart felt repelled, and I said what I ought to have said. I told him no, I have not seem him since. That was the night of the first conversions at the Rectangle."

"I am glad for you." said Virginia quietly.

"Why?" asked Rachel. a little star tled

"Because I have never really liked Jasper Chase He is too cold and—I do not like to judge him, but I have always distrusted his sincerity in taking the pledge at the church with the rest."

Rachel looked at Virginia thoughtfully.

"I have never given my heart to him I am sure. I have never had any emotions and I admired his skill as a writer I have thought at times that I cared a little for him, but I have always felt he had spoken to me at any other time than the one he chose I could easily have answered myself that I loved him but not now." Rachel paused suddenly and when she looked up at Virginia again there was something on the face Virginia came to her and put her arm about her tenderly

"Rachel, you have told left the house. Virginia sat in the hall thinking over the confidence her friend had just shown her There was something still to be told. Virginia felt sure from Rachel's manner, but she did not like to hurt that Rachel had kept back something She was simply conscious of more on Rachel's mind than she had revealed.

Very soon Rollin came back, and he and Virginia, arm in arm, as they had all formerly walked, went to doing walked up and down the long hall

It was easy for their talk to settle finally upon Rachel because of the plans she was to occupy in the plans which were being made for the purchase of the property at the Rectangle.

"Did you ever know a girl of such really gifted powers in vocal music who was willing to give her whole life to the people, as Rachel is going to do?" said Rollin, after some lessons in the city. have private pupils to make her living and then give the people in the Rectangle the benefit of her voice."

"It is certainly a very good example of self sacrifice," replied Rollin. a little stiffly

Virginia looked at him a little sharply

"But don't you think it is a very unusual example? Can you imagine"—here Virginia named half a dozen fashionable singers—"doing anything of this sort?"

"No; I can't." Rollin answered briefly "Neither can I imagine Jesus"—he spoke the name of the girl with the red parasol who had begged Virginia to take the girls to the Rectangle—"doing what you are doing, Virginia."

"Any more than I can imagine Mr.' —Virginia spoke the name of a young society leader—"going about to the clubs doing your work, Rollin."

The two walked on in silence for the length of the hall

"Coming back to Rachel.' began Virginia. "Rollin, why do you treat her with such a distant, precise manner? I think. Rollin—pardon me if I hurt you—that she is annoyed by it. You used to be on easy terms." I think Rachel likes this change."

Rollin suddenly stopped. He seemed deeply agitated. He took his arm from Virginia's and walked down to the end of the hall. Then he returned with his arms behind him, and, stopping near his sister, he said

"Virginia, have you not learned my secret?"

Virginia looked bewildered. Then over her face the unusual color crept showing that she understood.

"I have never loved any one but Rachel Winslow Rollin spoke calmly enough now "That day she was here. when you talked about her refusal to join the concert company, I asked her to be my wife, out there on the avenue She refused me, as I knew she would, and she gave as her reason the fact that I had no purpose in life, which was true enough. Since that I have had a purpose. now that I am a new man. don't you see. Virginia, how impossible it is for me to say anything? I owe my very conversion to Rachel's singing, and yet that night while she sang I can honestly say that for the time being I had no thought of her voice except as God's message. I have put all my personal love for her was for the time quenched in personal love to God and my Saviour' Rollin was silent Then he went on with more emotion. "I am still in love with her. Virginia. but I do not think she could ever love me." He stopped and looked his sister in the face with a sad smile.

"I don't know about that." said Virginia to herself She was noting Rollin's handsome face, its marks of dissipation nearly all gone now, and the fine figure showing manhood and courage. the clear eyes looking into hers frankly, the form strong and graceful Rollin was a man now Why should not Rachel come to love him? Surely these last two were well fitted for each other especially now that their purpose in life was moved by the same Christian source

She said something of all this to Rollin, but he did not find much comfort. When they closed the interview, Virginia carried away the impression that Rollin meant to go his way with his chosen work, trying to reach the fashionable men and the clubs and the saloon, avoiding Rachel. seeking no occasion for meeting her. He was distrustful of his power to control his feelings, and Virginia could see that he dreaded even the thought that his love was still the same

The next day she went down to The News office to see Edward Norman and arrange the details of his plan for the establishment of the paper on its new foundation. Henry Maxwell was present at this conference, and the three soon agreed that, whatever Jesus would do in detail as editor of a daily paper, he would be guided by the same general principles that directed his conduct as the Saviour of the world.

"I have tried to put down here in concrete form some of the things which it has seemed to me Jesus would do," said Edward Norman He read from a paper lying on his desk. and Henry Maxwell was reminded again of his effort to put into written form his own conception of Jesus' probable action and also of Milton Wright's attempt in his business

"I have headed this 'What Would Jesus Do as Edward Norman. Editor of a Daily Newspaper In Raymond.

"1. He would never allow a sentence or a picture in his paper that could be called bad or course or impure in any way

"2 He would probably conduct the political part of the paper from the standpoint of nonpartisan patriotism always looking upon all political questions in the light of their relations to the welfare of the people, always on the basis of 'What is right?' never from the basis of 'What is for the best interests of this or that party?' In other words, he would treat every political subject from the standpoint of the advancement of the kingdom of God on the earth."

Edward Norman looked up from the reading for a moment "You understand that is my interpretation of Jesus probable action on political matters on other newspaper men who may have a different conception of Jesus' probable action from mine I am simply trying to answer honestly. 'What would Jesus do as Edward Norman?' and the answer I find is what I have put down."

"3 The end and aim of a daily paper conducted by Jesus would be to do the will of God. That is, his main purpose in carrying on a newspaper would not be to make money or gain political influence, but his first and ruling purpose should be so to conduct his paper that it would be evident to all his subscribers that he was trying to seek first the kingdom of God by means of his paper This purpose would be as distinct and unquestioned as the purpose of a minister in a missionary or any other unselfish martyr in Christian work anywhere.

"4. All questionable advertisements would be impossible.

"5 The relation of Jesus to the employees on the paper would be of the most loving character."

"So he is here gone," said Norman. again looking up, "I am of the opinion that Jesus would employ practically none of the present corps of men. He might press which had become so largely degraded to the base uses of man's aversion and ambition

Two months went by They were full of action and results in the city of Raymond and especially in the First church In spite of the approaching heat of the summer season. the after meeting of the disciples who had made the pledge to do as Jesus would do continued with enthusiasm and power Gray had established his work at the Rectangle. and an outward observer going through the place could not have seen any difference in the old conditions, although there was an actual change in hundreds of lives but the saloons. dens, gambling houses. still ran. overflowing their vile mess into the lives of fresh victims to take the place of those rescued by the evangelist. and the devil recruited his ranks very fast

Henry Maxwell did not go abroad Instead of that he took the money he had been saving for the trip and spent it in building a summer vacation for a whole family living down in the Rectangle who had never gone outside of the foul district of the tenement The pastor of the First church will never forget the week he spent with this family making the arrangements. He went down into the Rectangle one hot day and before the close of the terrible heat of the tenements was beginning to be felt and helped the family to the station and then went with them to a beautiful spot on the coast. where. in the home of a Christian woman. these bewildered city tenants breathed for the first time in years the cool salt air and felt blow about them the pure, sweet fragrance of a new lease of life

There was a sickly baby with the mother—three other children, one a cripple The father. who had been out of work until he had been, as he afterward confessed to Maxwell. several times on the verge of suicide. sat with the baby in his arms during the journey, and when Maxwell started back to Raymond after seeing the family settled the man held his hand at parting and choked with his utterance and finally broke down, to Maxwell's great embarrassment. The mother, a weather worn woman. who had lost three children the year before from a fever scourge in the Rectangle, sat in the car window all the way and drank in the delights of sea and sky and land. It was all a miracle to her. and Henry Maxwell, coming back into Raymond at the end of that week, felt that the scorching, sickening heat all the more because of his little taste of the ocean breeze he had enjoyed for the day. He witnessed and entered upon his discipleship with a humble heart, knowing for almost the first time in his life the special kind of sacrifice, for never before had he denied himself a regular summer trip away from the heat of Raymond. whether he felt in any great need of rest or not

"It is a fact. he said in reply to several inquiries on the part of his church. "I do not feel in need of a vacation this year I am very well and prefer to stay here It was with a feeling of relief that he announced on the morning after every one but his wife what he had done with this other family He felt the need of doing anything of the sort without display or approval from others. So the summer came on, and Henry Maxwell, for any true knowledge of his Lord. The First church was still swayed by the power of the Spirit Maxwell marveled at the constant power of his stay, He knew very well that from the beginning nothing but the Spirit's presence had kept the church from being torn asunder by this remarkable testing it had received of its discipleship. Even now there were many of the members among those who had not taken the pledge who regarded the whole movement as Mrs. Winslow did, in the nature of a fanatical interpretation of Christian duty, and looked for a return of the old normal condition Meanwhile the whole body of disciples was under the influence of the Spirit, and Henry Maxwell went his way that summer doing his parish work in great joy, bearing, in addition, with the railroad men, as he had promised Alexander Powers, and daily growing into a better knowledge of the Master

Early one evening in August, after a day of unusual coolness, a welcome and long period of heat. Jasper Chase walked to the window of his room in the Winslow house on the avenue and looked out.

On his desk lay a pile of manuscript Since the evening when he had spoken to Rachel Winslow he had not met her in his singularly sensitive nature, send tive to the point of irritability when he was thwarted. seemed to thrust him into isolation that was intensified by his habits as an author

All through the heat of the summer he had been writing His book was nearly done now He had thrown himself into its construction with a feverish strength that threatened at any moment to desert him and leave him helpless He had not forgotten his pledge with the other church members at the First church It had forced itself upon his notice all through his writing and ever since Rachel had said no to him He had asked a thousand times. "Would Jesus do?" If so we ask it we also try his story?' It was a society novel. written in a style that had proved popular It had no purpose except to amuse Its moral teaching was not bad. but neither was it Christian in any positive way Jasper Chase knew that such a story would sell He was conscious of powers in his way that the social world petted and admired. What would Jesus do? The question obtruded on him at closed his door and. alone with the Divine presence, asked like a child for help from his all powerful Father He through his prayer as he kneeled before his desk ran the promise. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not and it shall be given him." Surely his prayer would be answered and the kingdom be advanced through this new department of God's power. this mighty press which had become so largely degraded to the base uses of man's aversion and ambition

Two months went by They were full of action and results in the city of Raymond and especially in the First church In spite of the approaching heat of the summer season. the after meeting of the disciples who had made the pledge to do as Jesus would do continued with enthusiasm and power Gray had established his work at the Rectangle. and an outward observer going through the place could not have seen any difference in the old conditions, although there was an actual change in hundreds of lives but the saloons. dens, gambling houses. still ran. overflowing their vile mess into the lives of fresh victims to take the place of those rescued by the evangelist. and the devil recruited his ranks very fast

Henry Maxwell did not go abroad Instead of that he took the money he had been saving for the trip and spent it in building a summer vacation for a whole family living down in the Rectangle who had never gone outside of the foul district of the tenement The pastor of the First church will never forget the week he spent with this family making the arrangements. He went down into the Rectangle one hot day and before the close of the terrible heat of the tenements was beginning to be felt and helped the family to the station and then went with them to a beautiful spot on the coast. where. in the home of a Christian woman. these bewildered city tenants breathed for the first time in years the cool salt air and felt blow about them the pure, sweet fragrance of a new lease of life

There was a sickly baby with the mother—three other children, one a cripple The father. who had been out of work until he had been, as he afterward confessed to Maxwell. several times on the verge of suicide. sat with the baby in his arms during the journey, and when Maxwell started back to Raymond after seeing the family settled the man held his hand at parting and choked with his utterance and finally broke down, to Maxwell's great embarrassment. The mother, a weather worn woman. who had lost three children the year before from a fever scourge in the Rectangle, sat in the car window all the way and drank in the delights of sea and sky and land. It was all a miracle to her. and Henry Maxwell, coming back into Raymond at the end of that week, felt that the scorching, sickening heat all the more because of his little taste of the ocean breeze he had enjoyed for the day. He witnessed and entered upon his discipleship with a humble heart, knowing for almost the first time in his life the special kind of sacrifice, for never before had he denied himself a regular summer trip away from the heat of Raymond. whether he felt in any great need of rest or not

"It is a fact. he said in reply to several inquiries on the part of his church. "I do not feel in need of a vacation this year I am very well and prefer to stay here It was with a feeling of relief that he announced on the morning after every one but his wife what he had done with this other family He felt the need of doing anything of the sort without display or approval from others. So the summer came on, and Henry Maxwell, for any true knowledge of his Lord. The First church was still swayed by the power of the Spirit Maxwell marveled at the constant power of his stay, He knew very well that from the beginning nothing but the Spirit's presence had kept the church from being torn asunder by this remarkable testing it had received of its discipleship. Even now there were many of the members among those who had not taken the pledge who regarded the whole movement as Mrs. Winslow did, in the nature of a fanatical interpretation of Christian duty, and looked for a return of the old normal condition Meanwhile the whole body of disciples was under the influence of the Spirit, and Henry Maxwell went his way that summer doing his parish work in great joy, bearing, in addition, with the railroad men, as he had promised Alexander Powers, and daily growing into a better knowledge of the Master

Early one evening in August, after a day of unusual coolness, a welcome and long period of heat. Jasper Chase walked to the window of his room in the Winslow house on the avenue and looked out.

On his desk lay a pile of manuscript Since the evening when he had spoken to Rachel Winslow he had not met her in his singularly sensitive nature, send tive to the point of irritability when he was thwarted. seemed to thrust him into isolation that was intensified by his habits as an author

All through the heat of the summer he had been writing His book was nearly done now He had thrown himself into its construction with a feverish strength that threatened at any moment to desert him and leave him helpless He had not forgotten his pledge with the other church members at the First church It had forced itself upon his notice all through his writing and ever since Rachel had said no to him He had asked a thousand times. "Would Jesus do?" If so we ask it we also try his story?' It was a society novel. written in a style that had proved popular It had no purpose except to amuse Its moral teaching was not bad. but neither was it Christian in any positive way Jasper Chase knew that such a story would sell He was conscious of powers in his way that the social world petted and admired. What would Jesus do? The question obtruded on him at

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Final Proof.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., November 8 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. on December 15, 1899.

Viz: Anton M. Lassen, H. E. No. 3236 for the west, section 31, Township 149, Range 47.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole P. Stokke, Charles Thygeson, Ole Simonson all of Crookston, and Thor Thompson, of Eldred.

[30-37] SYLVESTER PETERSON, Register

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of fifteen hundred forty-seven, and 40-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by George Q. Hoskins and Mary Hoskins, his wife, to George G. Erskine, mortgagee, bearing date the 8th day of June 1895, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 16th day of December, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m., in book 60 of mortgages, at page 30, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

Lots numbered one (1) two (2) three (3) and four (4) of block number eleven (11) in Jerome's Addition to the town site of Crookston, according to the recorded plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County and State of Minnesota, which is Polk County and State of Minnesota, at the front door of the court house in Polk County and State of Minnesota, where the Circuit Court is held by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston in said County and State, on the

8th day of December 1899

at ten o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of fifteen hundred forty-seven and 40-100 dollars, and interest, taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars, attorney's fees stipulated for in said mortgage in case of foreclosure by advertisement and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated this A. D. 1899.

A. A. MILLER, GEORGE G. ERSKINE, Attorney, Mortgagee. Crookston, Minnesota. [28-35]

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term. Nov. 15, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Haaken B. Netteland, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of Haaken B. Netteland, deceased, late of the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, having been granted to Andrew P. Hansen.

It is Ordered, That six months be and the same are hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the probate office of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

And it is Further Ordered,

22nd day of May, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m., at a special term of said probate court, to be held at the Probate Court room in said county, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where said probate court will examine and adjust such claims and demands.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested, in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston, this 15th day of November, 1899.

By the Court,

OLE J. HAGEN, Judge of Probate.

[37-39]

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 20, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Bernt C. Jorgenson, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of Bernt C. Jorgenson, deceased, late of the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, having been granted to

It is Ordered, That six months be and the same are hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the Probate office of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is further ordered,

That

28th day of May, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m., at a special term of said Probate Court, to be held at the Probate Court room in said county, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said Probate Court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested, in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston this 20th day of November A. D. 1899.

OLE J. HAGEN, Judge of Probate.

[34-37]

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

The St. Paul Retail Liquor Deale.s' association will try to abolish the free lunch.

A Merchants' Protective association has been organized at St. Paul to repress shoplifting.

Mrs. A. B. Stickney, wife of the president of the Chicago Great Western, is dead at St. Paul.

The Diamond knitting works at Avon street and University avenue, St. Paul, have been totally destroyed by fire.

Robertson Howard, a well known St. Paul attorney, died in a carriage on his way to the city hospital to have an operation performed.

Daniel Bassett, who settled at Minneapolis in 1859, and who has since been prominent in that city's affairs, is dead, at the age of 81.

The railroad and warehouse commission, as the results of a conference held with the grain commissions men of Minneapolis, have received 25 applications for licenses under the Grindelaand law.

C. Z. Dressel, a revenue collector, took his own life at La Sueur. From remarks he made it is supposed that his accounts were not straight with the government, but nothing definite is known.

While out hunting near South Ridge Gus Bolt accidentally shot William Cradler in the stomach, from which injuries he died. Bolt was going to shoot in the air when Cradler suggested shooting at a fence post. Bolt's bad aim resulted in Cradler's receiving the fatl charge.

Thorough examinations of butter colorings will be made by Dairy Commissioner Bovlter. Recently he received a letter from the dairy commissioner of Ohio calling attention to the fact that some families in that state had been poisoned by eating butter colored with a compound containing coal tar and other ingredients. Experiments with the coloring proved that four drops of it would kill a cat.

A hont one-third of the business portion of Roseau has gone up in smoks. The fire originated in the Hotal Rosean from a lamp. The fire consumed the general merchandise store of Sjoberg Bros., Hotel Roseau, J. M. Ringlund's tailor shop and residence and Pioneer drug store, which also contained the postoffice. The contents of all the buildings were partielly saved.

The state examination of candidates for professional teachers' certificates will be conducted at the state capitol be conducted at the state capitol Dec. 27, 28 and 29. The programme for the examination is as follows: Wednesmorning, general history, psychology, rhetoric; afternoon, school law, solid geometry. Thursday morning, English litteratnre, zoology, logic; afternoon, school economy, astronomy, political economy. Friday morning, history of edncation, chemistry, geology and moral philosophy.

The requirements for admission at the university have been made more elastic. An ironclad rule has been in vogne for several years in which students entering ware required to have taken certain studies and specifying for what length of time. In some high schools several of the subjects were not taught and the freshman was hindered by a condition. The faculty hae now consented to changes which will give those desiring to enter an opportunity to prepare themselves in those particular studies.

MINNESOTA RAILWAYS.

Remarkable Increase in Net Earnings. Considerable New Mileage.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 6.—Advance sheets of the 15th annual report of the state railroad and warehouse commission, hearing on the growth and business of the railroads of Minnesota, show a remarkable increase in all branches of railroad operation and financering. The report shows that while gross earnings have increased nearly $1,500,000, the operating expenses have increased hut little over $350,000.

The total nnmber of miles of main line of railroad in Minnesota, not including local transfer lines, union depot tracks and private logging roads, on June 30, 1899, was 6,328.37 miles, being an increase of 372.68 miles over the previous year. This increase is chiefly in the mileage of the Eastern Railway of Minnesota, the Great Northern and the Brainerd and Northern Minnesota; the Eastern Railway of Minnesota has completed ite line from the terminne of the former Duluth and Winnipeg road at Deer river to Cass Lake, from Cloquet to West Superior, and from Coon Creek to Brook Park; the Great Northern has leased the new line from Park Rapids to Cass Lake and from Cass Lake to Fenston, and incorporated the same in its system. The Brainerd and Northern has completed its line from Walker to Bemidji. The mileage of the Dnluth, Mississippi River and Northern is incorporated in the mileage of the Eastern Railway of Minnesota, having been purchased by the latter.

The Chicago and Northwestern and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha companies are building several branch lines in the sonthwestern part of the state, nnder separate articles of incorporation and distinct names, but none of these lines were in operation on June 30 last.

Taxes Paid on Gross Earnings.

The total amoont of taxes paid by the railroads in Minnesota for the year ending Dec. 31, 1898, was $1,201,535.27, for the previons year the same was $1,128,620.53, showing an increase for last year of $132,931.84.

The total gross earnings for the entire lines of roads reporting to this commission were for the last year $167,614,324, the total amount of taxes paid by the same in all the states through which they pass is reported at $5,408,360, thus showing a rate of 2.22 per cent npon gross earnings; the maximum in this state is 3 per cent.

FOR THE COMING YEAR.

Treasury Department Transmits to the House the Usual Estimates.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The secretary of the treasnry transmits to the house of represeutatives estimates of appropriations required for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901. The aggregate of the appropriations estimated for is $631,081,994, an increase over the estimates for the present fiscal year of $98,063,816, and an increase over the appropriations for the present fiscal year of $54,235,024. Following is the total recapitulation by departments of the estimates for next year, including appropriations for the present fiscal year, cents omitted:

Estimates For 1901.

Legislative	$ 6,938,297
Executive	237,140
State department	1,138,278
Treasury department	160,171,443
War department	190,113,851
Navy department	76,489,009
Interior department	174,660,641
Postoffice department	4,841,825
Department of agriculture	4,406,257
Department of labor	172,080
Department of justice	6,279,670
Grand total	$631,081,994

Appropriations for 1900.

Legislative	$ 10,423,152
Executive	215,708
State department	2,069,618
Treasury department	163,891,410
War department	152,098,028
Navy department	51,925,200
Interior department	107,502,515
Postoffice department	1,530,851
Department of agriculture	5,720,094
Department of labor	172,080
Departmens of justice	3,323,077
Grand total	$590,840,970

Among the estimates for the next fiscal year are these: Army and navy pensions, $144,000,000; expenses of pension examining surgeons, $700,000; all other expenses, $350,333, making the total on account of pensions, $145,230,-333. This is $5,380 less than the appropriations for the current year.

UNLAWFUL COMBINATION.

Federal Supreme Court Knocks Out the Iron Pipe Trust.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—In the United States supreme court the Addiston Pipe case was decided. This case involved the constitntionality of the combination of pipe manufactures to manufacture pipe which it was charged was a trust. The decision was handed down by Justice Peckham and was adverse to the combination. It was, therefore, in opposition to the trust.

The opinion of the court of appeals for the Sixth circuit was affirmed.

The decision draws a clear distinction between combinations affecting interstate commerce and those applying to one state only. The opinion attracted very general attention because it is the first opinion on the subject of trosts which has been handed down since the subject of trusts has come into great prominence.

Warships Bound for Manila.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The Brooklyn has sailed from Colombo, Ceylon, for Manila, her next stop being at Singapore, 1,270 miles distant. From that point she will have to travel 1,586 miles to complete her journey. She will require at least 10 days to make the trip. The New Orleans is at Colombo taking coal.

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

DUTUTH, Dec. 6.

WHEAT—Cash, No. 1 hard, 68¾c; No. 1 Northern, 64¾c; No. 2 Northern, 63¾c. To Arrive—No. 1 hard, 69¾c; No. 1 Northern, 64¾c; December, 64¾c; May, 68¾@68¾c.

FLAX—To arrive, $1.80; December, $1.80; May, $1.83½.

Minneapolis Grain.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 6.

WHEAT—In Store—No. 1 Northern, December, 64¾c; May, 68¾c. On Track—No. 1 hard, 69c; No. 1 Northern, 64c; No. 2 Northern, 63c.

Sioux City Live Stock.

SIOUX CITY, Dec. 6.

CATTLE—Market slow, steady. Sales ranged at $4.75@5.35 for beeves; $3.00@3.60 for cows, bulls and mixed; $3.75@4.25 for stockers and feeders; $3.50@3.60 for calves and yearlings

HOGS—Market steady, strong. Range of prices, $5.75@5.90.

Receipts: Hogs, 3,000; cattle, 1,000.

St. Paul Union Stock Yards.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Dec. 6.

HOGS—Market firm and active. Range of prices, $5.60@5.75.

CATTLE—Good demand for cattle. Market strong; common about steady. Range of prices, stockers, $3.40@4.25; cows, $3.25@4.05; bulls, $3.75@3.90; heifers, $3.70@4.20.

SHEEP—Good demand for fat sheep and lambs.

Sales ranged at $3.25@3.85 for sheep, $4.00@4.90 for lambs.

Receipts: Cattle, 1000; calves, 600; hogs 800 sheep, 2,300.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.

CATTLE—Market firm.

Sales ranged at $4.75@7.30 for beeves; $3.00@5.40 for cows and heifers; $3.00@4.50 for stockers and feeders; $3.90@5.50 for Texas steers; $4.00@5.50 for Westerns.

HOGS—Market steady.

Sales ranged at $5.80@4.07½ for mixed and $5.90@6.10 for good heavy; $5.85@5.90 for rough heavy; $5.80@6.05 for light. Bulk of sales, $5.90@6.00.

SHEEP—Market steady to shade lower Sales ranged at $4.00@5.75 for sheep, $4.00@5.50 for lambs.

Receipts: Cattle, 4,000; hogs, 32,000; sheep, 7,000.

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.

WHEAT—December, 61⅝@63¾c; May, 65¼@65¾c; July, 70¾c.

CORN—December, 36¾c; January, 36¾ 36¼c; May, 39½@39¾c.

OATS — December, 29⅝@29¾c; May, 34c.

PORK—December, 8.00; January, $9.05; May, 9.85.

FLAX — Cash, Northwestern, $1.69; Southwestern, $1.68; December, $1.68; May, $1.41¼.

BUTTER—Creameries, 19@26c; dairy, 16@23c.

POULTRY—Dressed, chickens, 7@ 8c; turkeys, 9½c.

EGGS—Fresh, 19½c.

Springtime

Is the sweetest season in human life, as it is in Nature generally. It is the time of promise. As the young girl draws near to that mysterious line "Where womanhood and girlhood meet," her whole destiny in a measure being determined. How often the sweet young girl, under the influence of the change, withers and droops like some blighted bud. Nature generally needs some little help at this critical period, and this help in its best form is contained in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, and gives the vigor of perfect health to the womanly organs. It contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor other narcotic.

Miss Emma Lee, of Williford, Sharp Co., Ark., writes: "I was suffering severely and tried several doctors' remedies, but found no relief. Then I wrote to you for advice, and therefore, I feel it my duty to write and let other sufferers know what your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' have done for me. I took in all seven bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' four vials of the 'Pellets,' also one bottle of your 'Compound Extract of Smart-Weed.' As soon as I had taken the first bottle I could see that the medicine was helping me. I had disease of internal organs with bronchitis and catarrh. I also used the local treatment you suggested."

The sluggish liver can be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

PATENTS DESIGNS TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS OBTAINED

ADVICE AS TO PATENTABILITY FREE Notice in "Inventive Age" Book "How to obtain Patents" Charges moderate. No fee till patent is secured. Letters strictly confidential. Address, E. G. SIGGERS, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C.

S. L. Collins,

LIVERY AND FEED STABLES

Horses bought and sold on commission. Everything neat and nobby. Feeding a specialty.

Main and Fourth streets.

CROOKSTON — — MINNESOTA.

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture

.....AND.....

Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a house... CROOKSTON, MINN

CARY SAFE CO..

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

.....Manufacturers of.....

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

Spend the Holidays at Home

$40

Canadian excursion via Northern Pacific

Canadian Excursion

Tickets will be sold by the Northern Pacific from December 4 to December 31 inclusive, to principal points in.....

Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia.

Good for three months from date of sale, with liberal stop-over privileges. Limit will be extended upon payment of reasonable additional sums. Round trip tickets will be sold to points as far east as Montreal for $40.00, and at correspondingly low rates to points east of Montreal in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Call nn agents nf the Northern Pacific Ry., for detailed information.

CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. & T. A.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Agt. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON.....PRE H. STENERSON.....VICE-PRESIDENT.
N. S. GERVAIS.....2d VICE-PRESIDENT. L. ELLINGTON.....CASHIER
A. P. HANSON, ASST. CASHIER.

Subscribe Now

And get the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL from now till January 1st, 1901, for $1.50.

This offer includes the handsome Christmas Editions for the two years. The JOURNAL is the best paper in this Congressional district and is improving with each issue.

++++THE JOURNAL++++

CROOKSTON, MINN.

To Eastern Canada

FOR THE

Christmas Holidays.

VIA THE

Burlington Route

ONLY $40.00 TO Montreal and return

Going by way of St. Paul and Chicago

This amount will buy a ticket good for a three months' visit to any point in Ontario or Quebec west of Montreal. Between St. Paul and Chicago there is only one best line, and that is the Burlington. Ask your neighbors who have traveled by that line what they think of it.

Your home ticket agent has tickets for sale via our line. Ask him for a Burlington ticket.

Dates of sale every day from December 4 to December 31 inclusive

Or write to A. L. EIDEMILLER, Trav. Pass. Agt., care Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, Man., or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 24.

GEO. P. LYMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., C. B. & Q. R. R., St. PAUL, MINN.

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

A Liberal Exchange of Flour for Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS, CROOKSTON, MINN.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. EDELINE, President. W.M. ANGLIN, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits. Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS;

GEORGE B. ERSKINE, A. A. MILLER, WM. ANGLIN, J. E. EDELINEN, E. M. WALSH, L. FONTAINE J. F. FOOTE, W. H. CROSBY, J. W. WHEELER.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

GRAND FORKS.

Chas. Hutchins was a Sunday visitor in the city.

C. C. Cooper was suddenly called to Chicago on business Saturday.

Martin Walsh left last night for Moorhead on a brief business trip.

J. W. Ross is preparing plans for Mundan's elegant new school house.

R. L. Hayford, of the Crookston Tribune was a Sunday visitor in the city.

Dan Mullen, the grain machinery man of Langdon, was in on business Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerrish have moved from the Gotzian block to apartments in the Bartholomew block.

D. W. McCanna, of Cando, was a business caller in the city while on his way home from the East Monday.

The Mercantile company's gripmen scattered to the four winds yesterday to hustle additional Christmas trade.

Tom Edison was an over Sunday visitor in the city. He came in Saturday evening and took in the Elks blowout.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Shapleigh, of Moorhead, spent two days visiting in the city, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Jenks.

Miss Lida Barh, who was the guest over Sunday of the Misses Annie and Minnie Quigley, has returned to her home in Crookston.

W. L. Wilder came home from Chicago Sunday night. When he left Chicago the weather was mild and balmy, and merchants had their doors open.

Edward VonEnde, of Minneapolis, has been looking over the situation in this city for the past few days with the intention of opening up a dry goods store.

ARGYLE.

Frank Barsalous has been installed as manager of the Frisco Farm west of town.

A. D. Dion and Ida Barsalous were married at the Catholic church last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Axel Ekblom mourn the loss of their little girl—their only child. She died last Monday and was buried on Tuesday.

A new bank is being organized at Kennedy with H. L. Melgaard of this place as president and J. F. Brown of Hallock as cashier.

BELTRAMI

John Daulenhaugh was in town Tuesday from Norman county on his way to the pineries.

Johnson & Tallefson, two of our merchants, have in a new stock of goods in their store and also a fine new office and desk.

Joseph Nerue, one of our Beltrami boys, has just returned from a trip to Bemidji. He says he was glad to get back with his shoes on.

Johnson & Ellwood have put in a fine supply of holiday goods which are attracting considerable attention especially the toy department.

C. H. Ogard, of Beltrami, starts west in a few days. He will visit States of Washington and Oregon, combining business with pleasure.

The annual turkey raffle held in this place Thanksgiving eve was well attended and many birds were disposed of. Martin Lydon, the champion, hauled in six and then gave up disgusted.

The ladies and gentlemen belonging to the new hand whose instruments arrived yesterday, had their first meeting Monday evening at the home of the leader Mrs. J. J. Carey and were greatly pleased to see what amount of wind they had. J. J. C. was out early Tuesday morning looking at the house roof to see if it was all there yet.

KITTSON.

Mrs. J. Erwin was at Crookston Friday.

Elevator Agent Price drove to Russia Tuesday.

Will Lemon was down Saturday evening calling on the Samson's.

Mr. Roberts and family ate Thanksgiving dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ross.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Price took dinner on Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Smith.

Section Foreman Erwin has bought himself a carriage. Mr. Erwin is now independent of the hand car.

The carpenters succeeded in putting the new roof on the elevator regardless of the severely cold weather.

Superintendent Sheffield was down Tuesday looking after the interest of the St. Anthony and Dakota Elevator.

Miss Winnie Samson's schoolcolosed a week ago out in the town of Lowell. Miss Winnie is now at home enjoying her vacation.

TWIN VALLEY.

A. O. Waller is on the sick list this week.

C. P. Waller transacted business at Gary last Monday.

P. A. Pressing, of Syre, transacted business at Twin Valley on Monday.

A. A. Waller, of Home Lake, is here taking care of his son Albert who is sick.

Miss Julia Aamoth visited with her parents at Fulth last Saturday and Sunday.

Dr. S. J. Froshang went to Ulen Tuesday morning on professional business.

Rev. Pederson, of Lishon, Ill., is visiting with Rev. Dale's congregation this week.

Ole Hattleberg indulged in too much fire water last Tuesday and landed at last in the city coop.

M. J. Nelson, of Crookston, is here again this week looking after the interest of the Piano Co.

H. H. Kleinsorge, our expert photographer, went to Ulen on Monday on professional business.

A large number of young folks from Gary took in the grand ball at Hinn son's hall last Wednesday evening.

S. M. Calking and A. H. Froshang bought P. B. Olson's 1 section of timber land last week. Real estate is on the boom around here.

E. Westland, who has been running the Home Lake creamery for the last year, has severed his connection with that institution and left on Monday evening for Duluth.

Rev. Opsahl, who on account of sickness has been unable to support his family, has been here the last week seeking aid in Rev. Dale's congregation. He left last Monday evening for his home at Minneapolis.

ELDRED.

This weather feels like winter.

Andrew Shusten has moved out on his farm.

A. P. Dyrud is visiting friends at Bemidji.

A. P. Moen went to Crookston Friday on business.

Ole Bastlend is now installed as landlord of the Eldred hotel.

J. M. Gaynor will leave soon for medical treatment at Hot Springs.

J. C. Fleming went to Crookston Friday morning to attend the Teachers meeting.

Miss Pauline Gilbert came down from the Queen City to attend the dances here Thanksgiving.

Section Foreman Olson is now doing the railroad work alone—Jim Hill being too poor to afford him a man.

Both the merchants here report trade very quiet. This is no doubt caused by poor price paid for wheat.

ERSKINE.

Henry Hanson visited at home Monday.

Mrs. Geo. Chase is on the sick list.

Jens Rude, of Fertile, was seen on our streets Monday.

Miss Emma Narveson went to Crookston Monday.

John Roisum was at Fosston Friday to see Dr. McMahon.

John Distad, of McIntosh, did business here Saturday.

Martin Haugen, of Fertile, took in the sights here Tuesday.

I. I. Stenerson took the cars and went to Fosston Tuesday.

R. H. Rafter took the cars and went to McIntosh Wednesday.

A council meeting was held Monday but nothing of importance was done.

Ernest Egley, of Argyle, came to visit his brother Arthur, Wednesday.

I. I. Stenerson and Miss Jennie Hanson visited at McIntosh Wednesday.

Dr. Warninger, of Fosston, was called here on Saturday by C. C. Nass.

Everybody that has skates or money to buy them is skating nowadays.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Narveson visited at Crookston Friday and returned Sunday.

The Women's Senoda Sewing Society meet at Thos. Fargerson's Wednesday.

Nels Erickson had the misfortune to sprain his ankle while skating Tuesday evening.

Sheriff Lawrence was here Saturday summoning witnesses on the Gundy and McKusich trial.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Holmhoe and son, of Crookston, visited with Mr. and Mrs. O. Narveson for Thanksgiving.

W. J. Dargan was called to Red Lake Falls Saturday as his mother is very sick. At last report, however, she was improving.

Casper Clauson and Paul Paulson, of Pelican Rapids, after visiting with friends and relatives for the last ten days returned home Monday.

Helmar Johnson, of Lessor, was killed on Saturday by a tree falling on him while he was working in the woods near Grand Rapids. The remains reached here Monday.

GARY

Winter is with us again.

H. W. Thompson was in Ada last Friday.

Dr. Froshang, of Twin Valley, was in town Tuesday.

We all read the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL. Subscribe boys.

A. G. Runden, the city carpenter, was in Ada on business last Monday.

We understand our bank will be ready for business about Jan. 1, 1900.

H. J. Vaugen drove out west last Sunday and returned home all alone.

Quite a number of Gary boys took in the Masquerade ball at Twin Valley last Wednesday.

A Masquerade ball was given at the hall at Twin Valley Wednesday last week. They all report a good time.

Mrs. Oliver Ellefson, of Waukon, died last Sunday after a long illness. Funeral took place Wednesday.

Miss Clara Figenskun, of Grand Forks, visited with her sister Mrs. Theo. Johnson last Thursday, returning Friday.

Granberg Bros., hauled their lumber from Fertile for their new harness shop, which will be completed the last part of this week.

Last Saturday Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Moen, of Sundal, were surprised by a lot of their friends, who presented them with a nice rocker.

BAGLEY.

Ole G. Lee was doing business in Shevlin Tuesday.

A number of our town people ate Thanksgiving turkey at the Bagley House.

Hans Melby returned last Sunday from a week's visit with his friends at Lake Park.

Ole G. Lee, our hustling merchant, has shipped four carloads of wood in the last week.

The Landstnd Lutheran parsonage is now completed and Rev. Thorsen has just moved into it.

A wedding is going to come off in the near future. The contracting parties are Ole Hays and Miss Emma Larson, both of this county.

The Thanksgiving dance at Hotel Northern was well attended. The music was excellent and a good time was reported by all who were present.

H. H. Sapseth, of Sletten, Minn., is here looking after his business interests. He has a few hundred cords of wood that he is going to ship this winter.

Thoen & Davids are going to put up a sawmill about nine miles north of town. They have made a contract with Solberg & Erickson to saw 1,200,000 feet of lumber.

The attendance at the village school has been so large that the directors found it necessary to employ another teacher. Miss McHoff has been engaged to teach the primary department.

ANGUS.

John Staska spent Friday in St. Paul.

J. A. Stroble was in Crookston on Friday.

W. L. Davies was in town on Wednesday.

Mrs. J. M. Palmer spent Friday in Warren.

George Been went to Crookston on Thursday.

John Staska spent Wednesday in Crookston.

Wm. McLennen was in Grand Forks on Tuesday.

Fred Flanders of Warren was in town on Saturday.

C. R. Perkins returned to Grand Forks on Thursday.

Hans Salstad and wife spent Thanksgiving in Crookston.

Anton Shernek took the train for Crookston on Thursday.

C. R. Perkins returned home from Grand Forks on Saturday.

H. C. McBride attended the teachers meeting in Crookston on Friday.

R. Casmey of Euclid was in town on Tuesday looking for a stray horse.

Miss Lillian Finlayson and brother arrived from Crookston on Tuesday.

Miss Cosy MacVoy of Crookston is visiting her sister, Mrs. Montgomery.

John B. Goodwin and Miss Martha Evans eloped last Wednesday and were married in Grand Forks.

W. Lemen, J. F. Montgomery, A. T. Campion and Geo. Briggs attended lodge in Warren on Wednesday night.

Messrs. Powell and Slee of Warren were in town on Tuesday on a hunting expedition. They bagged four geese.

W. Lemen started for Virginia on Friday evening to spend the winter. He will attend the Washington memorial services to be held on the 13th and 14th. Mr. Lemen will have charge of the Masonic apron worn by Gen. Washington in laying the corner stone of the capitol. It was made by Madam Lafayette and is the property of the Mt. Nebo lodge of Shepperdstown, W. Va.

EIGHTH ANNUAL VISIT.

Now at the Palace Hotel, Crookston, Minn. until and including Saturday, Dec. 16th. Take the Elevator. Room 128.

Prof. F. W. Whittier

EYE SPECIALIST

OCULIST

OPTICIAN

OF MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

GRADUATE OF CHICAGO OPHTHALMIC COLLEGE AND HOSPITAL.

OFFICE HOURS FROM 9 A. M. TO 8 P. M.

He can be consulted free of charge, whether it be for spectacles or otherwise. Don't fail to consult him about your eyes. He is able to tell on the first examination any ailment of your eyes and strengthen the eyesight of the young and old. All errors of refraction, defects of sight of the eye treated. Obtaining more correctness and engaging more attention of our most scientific results. He has made the correction of spectacles a specialty.

Consulting Eminent Opticians in Large Cities

Certain forms of eye trouble, which were formerly looked upon as diseases of the lence covering the eye, are relieved by scientific testing, and by using such glasses to correct the errors of refraction and accommodation as the examination will prove.

In many eyes, on careful examination, a combination of different forms of it is found necessary that such eyes shall be fitted by a competent optician as a guarantee with an ophthalmic scope as the ordinary tests with the optometer or test lenses can give relief upon in such cases.

The Most Difficult Cases and Children a Specialty

Lenses properly adjusted according to the dioptric system in the most difficult and complicated cases of presbyopia, and myopia (near sight), hyperopia, simple, compound and mixed astigmatism, diplopia (double vision), inequality of sight whether inherited or acquired.

NO EXPERIMENTS! NO GUESS WORK! NO FAILURES! SCIENTIFIC! SUCCESSFUL! EXACT!

Artificial Eyes Inserted Without Pain. If you have lost an eye by accident or disease, be sure to call and see what he will insert an artificial eye which will move and look like the natural eye and follow its looks.

The terms of $100,000 personally given away wearing his Spectacles can be given for reference. Twenty years in the business and testimonials at our office.

CAUTION—No agents employed. As his time is limited by other engagements, and the pressing demands of a select Minneapolis practice, he will remain but a short time in this city. Letters of inquiry must enclose stamp for reply.

MINNEAPOLIS ADDRESS, 1503 HAWTHORN AVENUE.

STONE'S Mammoth Music House.

The only exclusive Music House in the West.

Manufacturers and Importers of Musical Merchandise.

Most complete stock of Pianos, Organs, Brass and String Instruments, Trimmings, Music and Music Books west of Chicago. Violins, Mandolins, Guitars and Banjos from $2.05 to $125. Sheet Music at 50 per cent off regular price.

Pianos from $150 to $1000. Organs from $20 to $650.

Cash or easy payments. Old instruments taken as part payment.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

STONE'S MAMMOTH MUSIC HOUSE,

110-112 Broadway. FARGO, N. D.

STORM SASH

STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

ED. ERICKSON,

DEALER IN

All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...

Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides.

Stall fed Beef..... & Specialty

SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

An Invitation To Women

All the world knows of the wonderful cures which have been made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, yet some women do not realize that all that is claimed for it is absolutely true.

If all suffering women could be made to believe that Mrs. Pinkham can do all she says she can, their suffering would be at an end, for they would at once profit by her advice and be cured.

There is no more puzzling thing than that women will suffer great pain month after month when every woman knows of some woman whom Mrs. Pinkham has helped, as the letters from grateful women are constantly being published at their own request.

The same derangements which make painful or irregular periods with dull backaches and headaches, and dragging-down sensations, presently develop into those serious inflammations of the feminine organs which completely wreck health.

Mrs. Pinkham invites women to write freely and confidentially to her about their health and get the benefit of her great experience with the sufferings of women. No living person can advise you so well. No remedy in the world has the magnificent record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for absolute cures of female ills. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Three Letters from One Woman, Showing how She Sought Mrs. Pinkham's Aid, and was Cured of Suppression of the Menses and Inflammation of the Ovaries.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have been in bed a year. Doctors say I have female weakness. I have a bad discharge and much soreness across my ovaries, bearing-down pains when passing urine, have not menstruated for a year. Doctors say the menses will never appear again. Hope to hear from you."—MRS. J. F. BROWN, Holton, Kans., April 1, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I received your letter. I have taken one bottle and a half of your Vegetable Compound, and used two packages of your Wash, and feel stronger and better. I can walk a few steps, but could not before taking your Compound. I still have the discharge and am sore across the ovaries, but not so bad. Every one thinks I look better since taking your Vegetable Compound."—MRS. J. F. BROWN, Holton, Kans., Aug. 24, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I think it is my duty to let you know the good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound has done me. After I took three bottles, menses appeared, since which I feel stronger and all my pain was gone. Yours is the only medicine that ever helped me. I am able now to work around the house, something I did not expect to do again. I am still taking your medicine and have recommended it to others."—MRS. J. F. BROWN, Holton, Kans., Jan. 25, 1899.

Three More Letters from One Woman, Relating how She was Cured of Irregular Menstruation, Leucorrhœa and Backache.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I am suffering and need your aid. I have pains in both sides of the womb and a dragging sensation in the groin. Menstruation irregular and painful; have leucorrhœa, bearing-down pains, soreness and swelling of the abdomen, headache, backache, nervousness, and can neither eat nor sleep."—MRS. CARRIE PHILLIPS, ANNA, ILL., July 19, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I want to thank you for what you have done for me. When I wrote to you I was a total wreck. Since taking your Vegetable Compound, Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, my nerves are stronger and more steady than ever before, and my backache and those terrible pains are gone. Before I took your medicine I weighed less than one hundred and thirty pounds. I now weigh one hundred and fifty-five pounds. I feel better than I have for a great many years. Your medicine is a God-send to poor weak women. I would like to ask you why I cannot have a child. I have been married nearly three years."—MRS. CARRIE PHILLIPS, Anna, Ill., Dec. 1, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I did just as you advised me, and now I am the happy mother of a fine baby girl. I believe I never would have had her without your Vegetable Compound."—MRS. CARRIE PHILLIPS, ANNA, ILL., Jan. 27, 1899.

Still More Proof that Irregularity is Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I am troubled with irregular menstruation, and have begun the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Would like your advice."—CORA L. PATTON, Ogontz, Pa., May 19, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I have a bad discharge and write to ask if I had better not use your Sanative Wash also? Your medicine is helping me."—CORA L. PATTON, Ogontz, Pa., July 1, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I write to tell you of the benefit I have received from the use of your remedies. Before using them I was feeling very bad. I used to go to the hospital, but it did me no good. Your remedies have done wonders for me."—CORA L. PATTON, Ogontz, Pa., Feb. 25, 1899.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY
Historical Society

Polk County Journal.

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1899 No. 36

THE DISTRICT COURT

Convenes Tuesday With Judge Watts Presiding-Suit of Nordblad vs. Stephens is Being Tried.

DORSEY MURDER IN IST DEGREE

Grand Jury Meets in City Hall—Seven Indictments Already Brought in —Out of Town Lawyers Here.

The winter term of the district court was opened at the court house last Tuesday morning, Judge Watts presiding and Chas. Lohn on hand to take the evidence. The Judge, after excusing a few of the grand jurors for various reasons charged, the grand jury, and they were then placed in charge of Henry Schurmer and Chas. Latta, deputies specially appointed, and taken to the city hall where the firemen's assembly hall had been secured for them from thesity authorities by County Attorney Holston. Anthon Lindeen of the town of Bygland, was chosen foreman but on account of ill health asked to be excused, so A. R. Amber, of Fosston, was elected. The grand jury have been hard at work and already have turned in quite a print of indictments. Bish Dorsey, of East Grand Forks, was indicted for murder in the first degree. Wednesday he was arraigned before Judge Watts and plead not guilty. His trial will come during this term of court. George Gundy, of Erskine, was indicted for assault in the second degree for striking a woman with a revolver. An indictment of larceny in second degree was returned against Roy Young, of Fertile, for stealing money from an elevator at that place and also one against George Combs, a Chippewa Indian, who while working on E. D. Childs farm last June stole $11 from one Peter Johnson. Mat Gannon has been indicted for assault in the second degree for using a revolver too freely upon the person of C. J. Johnson. James Harvey, who stole the wheel from H. C. Scribner, was indicted for grand larceny in the first degree, and Chas. Benson and Sven Olson for assault in the Second degree, they having attacked with a stone one A. H. Anderson of the town of Queen.

In the court several cases on the calendar were stricken off after having been settled out of court, and dates were set for the hearing of many cases. Yesterday was occupied with the case of Constance Nordblad vs. A. D. Stephens, Attorneys Halvor Steenerson and Ole Vaule appearing for the plaintiff and DeForest Buckham for the defense. Plaintiff sues to recover damages suffered in consequence of certain goods having been taken from a place of business on Broadway and stored elsewhere.

In chambers Tuesday night Judge Watts listened to pleadings in the case of Addie Runt vs. C. T. Hunt.

Among prominent attorneys from out of town who have been attending court are T. R. Brownlee, of McIntosh, E. J. Grover and J. A. Sorley, of East Grand Forks, L. Guthre, of Grand Forks, H. W. Lee, of Thief River Falls, J. R. Hendricks and B. S. Bennet, of Fosston, Thos. Keefe and H. L. Gaylord, of Fertile.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

Transacts Routine Business—Paving Question was not Discussed.

A regular meeting of the city council was held last Tuesday night and considerable business of a routine nature was transacted.

The pay roll for November, aggregating $282 was presented and allowed.

The question of giving Andrew Olson the money still held back on his sewer contract was considered and the city attorney was instructed to take such action as he thought best. The council voted to pay $100 to the towns of Andover and Fairfax and improvements to this amount will be made on the roads leading into Crookston from the south.

Alderman McGregor late of the Fifth ward formally informed the council that he had taken up his residence in Jerome's addition. He, therefore, ceases to be a councilman. His place will be filled later.

No action was taken on the paving question, though J. H. Killmar was up from Iowa and at the meeting. The council will meet again on Dec. 26.

For Sale

One lot in Jerome's addition and two lots in Sampson's addition. If you want a good lot at a low figure, ask to see them. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

FOR SALE—First class restaurauly outfit complete in all respects. Appat to W. W. Hoch.

FARGO COLLEGE

Will Soon Have an Endowment Fund of $100,000.

President H. C. Simmons of Fargo College, spent last Sunday in the city, occupying the pulpit of the Congregational church in the morning, and that of the Presbyterian church in the evening. His report of the struggles and successes of the college was of great interest and very encouraging. Dr. Pearsons of Chicago has offered to give the college $25,000 toward an endowment, provided another $75,000 is raised, thus giving the college a permanent endowment of $100,000. Already $40,000 have been raised. The citizens of Fargo are making a special effort at this time to do their part. The churches of North Dakota are pledging their loyalty and help. Fargo College is really the college of the Red River Valley. Its location is most fortunate, being in the centre of the Valley. which has a rich soil and is certain to be the dwelling place of a larger population, whose young men and young women will soon demand, and, in this college, will be supplied with the facilities of a liberal Christian education. President Simmons has been in this city several times before, and whenever he comes, his earnest, scholary words are gratefully heard.

Dame Rumor Says.

That Aguinaldo is still running.

That felt boots and overshoes are in demand.

That St. Paul will have a season of winter sports.

That Santa Claus will need more spow for his Christmas sleigh ride.

That Minneapolis will have comparatively few poor people this winter.

That the boys and girls should not venture on the river too soon with their skates.

That Hubbard county will have a new court house to be built at Paric Rapids, the county seat.

That the Christmas number of the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL will be a paper that everybody will want.

That some of the messes of "Chopped Feed" as published in the Farm Stock, and Home, would give even the most ardent Referendumer the hog cholera.

Election of Officers.

The annual election of officers of the Masonic lodge took place last Monday night. Tom Morris was again elected Worshipful Master, the others being L. H. Judson, S. W.; DeForest Buckham, J. W.; H. R. Robertson, secretary; E. M. Walsh, treasurer; E. J. Willis was appointed S. D.; C. Wilde, J. D., Rev., H. M. Green chaplain; F. D. Bell, S. S.; A. F. Geeng, J. S.; A. H. Pitkin, Tyler. Some work in the Third degree was done after which a luncheon was served.

Fatal Accident.

Last Sunday afternoon Otto Larson and Elias Ellefson were out hunting, when young Larson while trying the ice with the butt of his gun accidently discharged the piece and the ball entered his lung near the heart. His companion was going to see what his friend had shot found him badly wounded. Medical aid was summoned from Fosston, a distance of 11 miles, as soon as possible, but the unfortunate lad died before the doctor arrived.

Knights of Pythias.

The visit of Grand Chancellor Stobhart, of the Knights of Pythias, to Crookston last Thursday was the occasion for a grand meeting of the members of that lodge and merely those in this city but in several towns in this vicinity, Fosston, McIntosh and Argyle being well represented. Considerable work in the "rag" of initiation was done after which a luncheon was served and eloquent speeches made by the Grand Chancellor and others.

They Entertained

Misses Johnson and Chandler organized a skating party last night and after gliding over the smooth ice the young people repaired to Mrs. Harbins' home where oysters and other delicacies were served and entertaining games played. A most enjoyable evening was spent by all.

Births.

MILLER.

To Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, a son.

STRANDER.

To Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Strander, a daughter.

For Sale

A desirable house and lot with barn This house is in first class condition and well located. The price is $1,700 and it is a bargain. Call at the JOURNAL office for particulars.

EDDY IN CONGRESS

Introduces Two Bills Dealing With Questions of Indian Affairs.

In accordance with the provisions of a bill, H. R. 998, introduced by Frank M. Eddy in congress, the secretary of the Interior will be authorized to make rules for the sale of timber on the White Earth and Red Lake reservations, at not less than $3 per thousand fees. The timber is to be bank scaled and not removed until paid for. All timber cut on the reservation is to be banked, and the annual cut is not to exceed 10,000,000 feet. Only Indian labor is to be employed in the work. The proceeds of the sales, of course, are to be deposited for the benefit of the Chippewas. Mr. Eddy also has a bill providing for allotments to Indians on the White Earth reservation.

High School Notes.

Miss Della Mohn is playing for the classes this week.

Nana Tarrant, who left school to teach, returned this week.

Clara Steenerson favored the school with a piano solo Tuesday morning.

The council met last night and chose the following officers: Arthur Kirsch, president, and Ralph Childs, secretary.

The storm windows were put on last week. This will save the coal and give the janitor less work in heating up in the morning.

The junior class, after several stormy sessions have failed to select colors to suit everybody. Another meeting will be held soon.

The pupils are anxiously waiting for the snow as they are getting tired of skating. Sleigh riding is a good substitute although there is not as much exercise in it.

The special music of late has consisted of a violin solo by Prof. Riggs, a mandolin solo by Miss Blanche Fitzgerald, piano solo by Miss Bertha McIntyre, piano duet by the Misses Fleckenstine and a vocal solo by Miss Elva Bates.

The self government plan is already started. On Tuesday occurred an election at which 18 members of the high school were chosen to act as council. It will be their duty to look after the welfare of the school. Pupils who think it best that any regulation now holding should be changed have the opportunity to place their wishes in the hands of said council. It will be talked over, then voted upon, and if thought by the council and teachers to be for the advantage of the school, will be changed.

KEY WEST.

Jas. McVesty of Marais visited relatives around here on Saturday.

G. A. Diefenbaugh rode to Bufflington on his new wheel on Saturday.

Our merchant, R. P. Skarstad, transacted business in Grand Forks on Friday.

Mr. Skarstad's brother-in-law arrived here last week where he expects to spend the winter.

A bouncing baby boy came to brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Wagner on Sunday last.

The Modern Woodmen of this place initiated a candidate. Mr. John McDonald, on Wednesday night last.

C. Horton of Red Lake Falls, a brother of F. G. Horton of this place, came to pay him a visit on Saturday.

A basket social will be held at Lee's school house of this place on Thursday, Dec. 21. All are invited to attend.

D. Crain, who has been working in the woods for some time, returned on Saturday. He expects to go back again soon.

Mr. McDerman, Miss Hattie Davidson and Miss Josie Olson of Marais, wheeled out to attend church service on Sunday.

Quite a number from around here attended the entertainment at the Marais school on Wednesday night. A very good time is reported.

S. Olson, who has been in the employ of his uncle of this place, expects to leave soon for Michigan where he will spend the winter.

Notice

The Annual meeting of the Scandia American bank, of Crookston, Minn., will be held at its office on Tuesday, January 9, 1900, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., for the election of a Board of Directors for the ensuing year, and such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

L. ELLINGTON,
Cashier.

NEW FIELDS FOR TRADE

Queensland Extends an Invitation to the United States to Extend Their Trade Relations.

SUREST WAY TO EXTEND THE TRADE

Openings in Australia for Mercantile Relations—One Large American Contract.

Director W. P. Wilson opened the other day's session of the international commercial congress at Philadelphia. The first speaker was Sir Horace Tozer, general agent for Queensland in London, says the New York Sun. He said that although Queensland has not yet entered on its fortieth year of separate existence and has a population of only 500,000 its trade already reaches $75,000,000 a year. The whole of this trade is with England.

"But Queensland," he said, "has always shown a practicable appreciation of American worth and methods and would always have gladly welcomed closer trade relations with the United States.

"I sent a special envoy to the United States with a view to the expansion of trade, and only this year contracts have been placed by myself with an American dredging engineer for dredging to cost a quarter of a million sterling. I have also placed on my list of London traders for government supplies the names of several American firms which expressed a desire to supply the junior class, after several the London traders for government supplies the names of several American Queensland government, and before I leave I hope to remove the difficulties and other local objections which have been the principal barrier to successful business negotiations. But I regret to say that from a country which is almost exclusively a producer of raw products often purchased by the States from other nations, the share Queensland received of these purchases was last year just $120.

"I have the opinion that the surest way for the United States to extend its foreign trade with Queensland is to secure an entrance on the ground floor of her industries by expending part of the surplus wealth and scientific energy of its people in the development of Queensland's many resources, and in this direction judicious enterprise is likely to meet with a rich reward."

A paper on the mining interests of Queensland was read by William Grant Clark. He said there were 1,300 miles of territory taken up with tin and gold mines. Nearly all the labor in the mines is done by white men, although the temperature in many places is 120 degrees in the shade.

Mr. A. J. Cockburn, delegate from South Australia, said that South Australia had a territory of 900,000 square miles and a population of 304,000. He said: "The government of South Australia, through the agricultural department, has a system of forwarding small consignments of the farmers to the seaboard and the world of making advances of 60 per cent upon the value of such shipments to the producer. Other colonies have been at first objected to as an interference with private enterprise, but the success of the scheme has closed the mouths of the critics, and the state has advanced in another direction in the assistance of the farmer by the establishment of a state bank, which makes loans of money to small farmers and thus prevents much of the evils of usury.

"The system of government is such that the people rely entirely upon all public questions, and women also have the franchise. It has been extended to them in its fullest extent, and no one in South Australia would suggest a return to the old system.

"The husband and wife get along very well together with it. They usually vote together, and men are sometimes persuaded, lightly and gently, of course, but none the less persuaded, by the women to vote properly."

The New Government Printing Office.

Uncle Sam is to have a new government printing office. It will cost about $2,000,000, and it is said that even after its completion it will not be large enough to meet the demands upon it. The new building will be eight stories in height, and its floor space will be about nine acres. The floors will sustain a load of 85,000,000 pounds. The building will be constructed in such a substantial manner that nearly the entire space can be filled with paper and books without injuring its stability in any degree. Access to the various floors will be made by twelve electric elevators. The building will be lighted with 7,000 incandescent lights. A refrigerating plant will furnish cold filtered water on every floor for drinking purposes. A large crematory will destroy all the refuse material, and this will aid in heating water, etc. It is hoped in time that congress will appropriate the money for modern typesetting machines, but it is probable that when the census is complete and the reports published, the equipment of the census printing office will revert to the government printing office.

Value of Eggs and Poultry Marketed.

Some time ago a paper read before a farmers' institute at Princeton contained the statement that the number of chickens marketed in the United States last year amounted to 3,300,000,000 and of eggs 13,000,000,000. The total value of chickens and eggs produced was $200,000,000.

By way of showing the comparative importance of the poultry industry it was further stated that the value of our tobacco crop has rarely been as much as $43,000,000. The value of our potato crop is less than $80,000,000 on the average, the value of our barley crop is not often as much as $30,000,000. An oat crop worth $200,000,000 is unusual. Our annual output of pig iron has rarely exceeded $130,000,000 in value. Coal, by far the most valuable of our mineral products, gives a total annual output of some $200,000,000.—San Francisco Call.

Married.

TORGERSON-CORNELIUS

December 9, at the Baptist parsonage, by C. B. G. Poole, Albert Torgerson to Miss Anna Cornelius, both of Crookston.

FRASER-LINDERSON.

On Wednesday, Dec. 6, Miss Margaret J. Anderson, of Western Polk county, was married to M. M. Fraser of Ontario, Canada.

DESCHENAUT-MOLAN.

In Crookston, Tuesday, Dec. 12, E. Deschenaux and Miss Sadie Molna of this county were united in marriage by Judge McLean.

American Horses In Germany.

Importations from America have caused the horse raisers of Holstein to suffer much of late. A stock company has just been formed in Berlin for the express purpose of importing horses from the United States. The Americans have succeeded in breeding a horse which compares very favorably in every way with the Holstein animal, especially in those points so highly prized in a work horse—namely, broad hips and large build generally. The best market for Holstein horses has always been the provinces of Saxony, Thuringia and Brunswick. The demand is created by the large sugar factories. This market has been decreasing of late, owing to American horses being purchased in Berlin. A few days ago this Berlin company shipped a drove of 80 through Hamburg en route for Milan, Italy, where they are to be used on the tramways. Almost every week a long freight train filled with American horses leaves the Berliner Bahnhof for various parts of Germany. In spite of expensive freight charges, of $7 per head, the American cans have built up a very respectable competition in the German market.

Deaths.

LEDUC.

On Saturday, Dec. 9, the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi LeDuc died in this city.

BAUMGARTEL.

On Tuesday morning, Dec. 12, the twelve year old daughter of Chas. Baumgartel.

HAWKINS.

Lillie, the two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hawkins died Sunday Dec. 10. The funeral services were held from the family residence at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. H. M. Green officiating.

GLYNDON.

A new lumber yard is to be started here soon.

E. P. Story, of Minneapolis, was here Wednesday afternoon.

Misses May and Alice Swarts made a trip to Moorhead yesterday.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society met at Mrs. L. Osborns Wednesday.

Hale Mumford went to Tower City, N. D., and drove back his brother's team.

C. G. Tracy and wife spent Sunday in Moorhead with Mr. and Mrs. Huntson.

H. C. Dermey, the popular Dawsonian Murphy and Co.'s collector, spent the day in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaver, of Rochester, are visiting their daughters, Mrs. H. C. Goodrich and Mrs. David Johnson.

Chas Anderson is serving his 120 day sentence for "blind pigging", refusing to pay the $200 fine imposed by Judge Surals.

Cut This Out

And send it with $1 as a guarantee of good faith and we will send you one of our $2.25 guitars or Mandolins to your express office C. O. D. subject to examination. If you find it O. K. and the same as your local dealer would ask $6.50 for, pay the express agent the balance and the charges and the instrument is yours. If found otherwise return to us and we will pay all charges and refund the amount paid. S. Stone's Music House, Fargo, N. D. tf

A Kansas Stockwoman.

The leading woman stock raiser of Kansas is Miss Mary Best of Barber county. She came from England and settled in Medicine Lodge ten years ago and soon after engaged in farming and stock raising. With the possible exception of ex-Congressman Jerry Simpson, Miss Best owns the finest farm in Barber county. She owns and controls 3,000 acres of land, 700 acres of which are in cultivation. She is dealing extensively in cattle and now has on her ranch near Medicine Lodge about 2,000 head, of which 700 head are her own, and the rest she is holding for other parties. Miss Best handles from 2,000 to 3,000 head annually and has always made money. She has made a contract with the United States government to grow 450 bushels of sorghum seed. The seed is furnished by the agricultural department and is without doubt the finest grade in the world. Miss Best is a young woman of more than average intelligence and is known all over Barber county for her good business sense and her ability to manage a large farm.

MISS MARY BEST.

Permanent and Profitable.

Not only is stock farming the most profitable system of agriculture in all civilized countries, but it is the most permanent, says Farm and Ranch. Nowhere has it ever been adopted and abandoned. We have heard the opinion expressed that land is becoming too dear for raising cattle or hogs or sheep. This is a broad, flat mistake. The richer the land the better it is adapted to the feeding and developing of live stock. No one will dispute this proposition. As the productiveness of land, other things being equal, regulates the price, it will be seen that the dearer the land the better for raising stock, as a general rule. Beef, pork, mutton and dairy products are gradually produced in the older states and in Europe on lands worth from $100 to $300 per acre. The most valuable farming lands in the world are the stock farms of this country and Europe, because the fertility is maintained, and even improved, and the intelligent labor and thought required to unite stock farming successful are reflected on every feature of farm life, and the civilizing influences cluster around it, and comforts and luxuries of life are made to abound. Texas farmers alone should produce at least 1,000,000 fat hogs and mutton sheep by the square acre. It can be done, and in course of time it must be done or these figures exceeded. Then will prosperity take up her abode on the farm.

Horses In Large Cities.

The great cities of the world use up an enormous number of horses every year, and these must constantly be resupplied by horses from the country or from foreign parts. It is stated that in the suburbs of London alone there are 250,000 horses in use and that 100,000 horses must every year be sent into these suburbs to take the place of those worn out. The city of Berlin takes 100,000 new horses every year. A large number of the horses used in omnibuses and on tram lines both in England and on the continent are imported from the United States. The horses from the United States are shipped from the ports of New York and Boston to the ports of London, Liverpool and Glasgow, and quite a large number are transshipped at London for the ports of Antwerp and Havre. The ocean rates on horses from New York and Boston are from £5 to £6 per head, including feed and attendance, insurance for the voyage and for ten days after landing and dock charges.—Horsehold Words.

How Rape Grows.

Rape will do well in any country where corn, oats, barley and cabbages are grown. It is home for ages past, since Abel fed his flock, has been in a climate which provides or permits of perennial pasture without intermission on account of winter and cold weather Thus it is the sheep of all sheep suited to the southern states.—Sheep Breeder.

The Merino For the South.

The Merino is the oldest race of sheep, and is home for ages past, since Abel fed his flock, has been in a climate which provides or permits of perennial pasture without intermission on account of winter and cold weather Thus it is the sheep of all sheep suited to the southern states.—Sheep Breeder.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Dr. Albert E. Senkler, one of the old time physicians of St. Paul, is dead.

The state interest charge on daily balances has been raised to 2 per cent.

Chas. A. Bilter, sentenced for life for the Ging murder, has applied for a pardon.

The people of Bemidji are arranging to give Admiral Dewey a bear as a Christmas present.

Samuel S. Eaton, known as "the father of insurance in St. Paul," is dead. He came to St. Paul in 1855.

The Mississippi Valley Lumberman gives the lumber shipments since Jan. 1 at 404,490,000 feet, against 354,413,000 for the first 11 months of 1898.

Bank Examiner Popemakes the statement that the accounts of Warden Wolfer were found to be correct, with the exception of a few clerical errors.

George C. Power of St. Paul is said to have been agreed upon by Senators Davis and Nelson for national bank examiner for the Minnesota district, to succeed S. R. Flynn.

The State Horticultural convention at Minneapolis has closed. The old officers were re-elected, with the exception of treasurer, O. M. Lord was elected in place of C. W. Simpson.

The State Forestry association has re-elected officers as follows: President, Judson N. Cross; secretary, George W. Strand, Taylors Falls; treasurer, R. S. MackIntosh, St. Anthony Park.

August Henaan, while crossing Lewis lake, near Mora, on the ice, broke through. Harry Hesser, a companion, went to his assistance and both were drowned. They were young unmarried men and formerly lived near Glencoe.

About 2,500 persons attended and enjoyed a concert given at the Swedish tabernacle, Minneapolis, for the benefit of the Norwegian fishermen who suffered by recent storms. It is thought fully $1,000 will be forwarded to Norway.

Later developments relative to the brokerage firm of Ward & Wyman indicate that they cleaned up at least $20,000 through the energetic operation of their "arbitrage" system in Minneapolis during the two months they were there.

Five state conventions will meet in Winona next year. The Y. M. C. A. Feb. 15 to 18, the grocers Feb. 21 to 23, the firemen June 12 to 14, the German Methodists the end of September, and the state board of corrections and charities in October.

C. E. Thayer of Minneapolis, who purchased a site for a grain elevator on Rices Point, Duluth, last spring, near the site of the big new Pevey, will at once begin the work of putting in the piling and foundation for a 3,000,000 bushel steel elevator to be erected this winter.

Cyrus W. Brown, convicted at Wabasha two weeks ago two weeks ago of murder in the second degree, has been granted a new trial by Judge Snow. Lack of evidence to sustain the verdict and statements made out of court in the presence of the jury are the grounds.

A gentleman named Blihnaulle of La Crosse, Wis., has purchased land east of Pine City and proposes to cultivate tobacco plants on five acres next summer. He has studied the soil and climate and says they are well adapted for the culture of the weed, in which he has had considerable experience.

Officers of the State Association of Beekeepers: President, J. P. West, Hastings; first vice president, Gideon H. Pond, Bloomington, second vice president, W. H. Putnam, Hudson; third vice president, Frank Moeser, Minneapolis; executive committee, H. G. Acklin, St. Paul; William Russell, Minneapolis.

Ex-Governor Alexander Ramsey celebrated his 84th birthday Friday. In Governor Ramsey's sense, although he dropped out of active public affairs about 20 years ago, he has been governor, elector, senator, secretary of war, secretary of the navy, and, besides, has occupied a large number of local positions of honor and trust.

The New Payaesville Tribune, heretofore published by A. H. Carlisle, has sold its subscription list and good will to Jno Bryaildeau, who lately purchased the New Payaesville Press. The publication of the Tribune will be discontinued, but Mr. Carlisle, its editor, is making arrangements to move his plant to Belgrade, where he will publish the Belgrade Tribune.

The three cases standing against Louis F. Menage, of Minneapolis Guaranty Loan fame, have been nolled on motion of the county attorney. The written motion states that the evidence against Mr. Menage is the same as that against W. F. Streeter, who was not convicted after two trials, that four material witnesses are dead and that others are out of the state.

Adjutant General Lambert is preparing a general order that will call the First regiment back into state service, after having been on a furlough for 18 months. A meeting of the officers will likely be held in St. Paul in a few days, when reorganization will be effected. One or two of the companies are expected to drop out of the guard. In such case companies from the Fourth regiment will be substituted.

Health officers in villages throughout the state are reporting to Secretary Jackson of the state board of charities on the condition of lockups. There are about 300 in Minnesota, of which but a few are fire-proof. The reports indicate that a decided improvement has been made in their condition during the past year. New lockups are being constructed in many villages. A large number, however, are in bad shape, and action is likely to follow on the part of the state board.

HIS FAMILY SPECTER

"By Jove, Gordon, I don't know what to make of you!" exclaimed Tom Fairleigh, drawing on his gloves, with considerable show of vexation. "Amy Hepburn's happiness is dear to me. In fact, I came here tonight to tell you that I love her"—

"To tell me!" broke in Gordon. "Why don't you tell her?"

"Well, can't you? Let me finish. I have told her, and she has declined me. It was done very gently and with the greatest possible regard for my feelings, but nevertheless I was declined. Don't think me a fool because I come here and make a confession which can be nothing less than mortifying. I'm doing it for Amy's sake."

"For Amy's sake!" echoed Gordon.

"Yes; I want to see her happy, and you are the man to make her so. She declined me on your account. Of course I knew long ago that you were my rival, but did not know until two hours ago that you were the successful one. You aren't worthy of her and don't deserve her, but don't think for a moment that I believe myself more worthy or more deserving." Fanning suddenly, Fairleigh walked to his friend's side and laid a hand on his shoulder. "I can't understand what you mean by leading Amy to believe that you care for her while all the time dividing your attention with Nell Forthlyke. Would you be inhuman enough to break a heart as loyal as Amy's?"

"Don't get tragic, Tom. I'm not going to break anybody's heart. Nell is rich, you know"—

"And so are you," sneered Fairleigh, walking hurriedly to the door and laying his hand on the knob. "But Amy Hepburn is poor. Society dares you to wed with poverty. If you love Amy, are you man enough to take the dare? Dismiss into the financial wreckage of the Hepburns, reflect upon the cause of their downfall in fortune and then let me see if you are strong enough to leap this Brahminical barrier of caste."

With this parting shot Fairleigh passed quickly out of the room and slammed the door behind him. Harry Gordon gave vent to a long whistle, settled himself back in a chair and thoughtfully lighted a cigar.

"That was quite a jolt," he muttered, looking upward through the curling wreaths of smoke. "How long, pray, could I be with either were Nother dear charmer away! It's as sure as can be that I love one and fancy the other. But who will marvel the Gordian knot? Which is it to be—Amy or Nell?"

A knock fell on the door, not on the outside door, but on a door leading into a closet. Harry Gordon stirred uncomfortably in his chair, a vexed look coming into his eyes as he fixed them upon the closet door. After a brief interval of silence the knock was repeated.

"Now, what in the world aroused you?" cried Gordon.

"Business is business," came a hollow voice from the other side of the closet door. "I'm here for a purpose, and if I do not make that purpose manifest once in awhile you'll forget all about me."

This remark was followed by a clanking, cachinnatory outburst that seemed to grate harshly on Gordon's ears.

"Well, what do you want?" he asked.

"I want to come out and show myself. You know I'm here, but a little ocular demonstration won't come amiss. I take it. Remember, I'm showing consideration for you. I might have kicked open this door and stalked out into the room. But I didn't. I rapped."

"Can't you put it off? Come out tomorrow. I've got something else to think about now."

"The high and mighty order of humility skeletons are not in the habit of playing second fiddle or taking back seats for anybody. I'm coming at once."

"All right, then," groaned Gordon, squaring himself about in his chair. "Come on."

The closet door flew open and a well developed skeleton strode out and dropped with a rattle into a chair. The cavernous eyes were blankly expressive—to Gordon. For him also there was something sarcastic in the grin of the noiseless jaws.

"Dust me off," said the skeleton. "I want to show up as frightful as possible tonight."

The request presented itself to Gordon as commanded which was nonetheless to disobey. Picking up a feather duster, he plied it vigorously about the gleaming white bones.

"Achoo!" he sneezed, dropping the duster and falling into his chair.

"You ought not to neglect me," said the skeleton. "I'm one of the family and should be treated as such. Now, then, let's have a chat."

The skeleton crossed its bony legs and settled back comfortably.

"What is it one may good to have a chat with you?" queried Gordon.

"That remains to be seen. It need to do your father good. Why, it was my custom to visit him every night. As he sat before that light there writing I'd sneak out of that closet, come quietly up behind him and put an arm caressingly about his neck." The skeleton laughed, working its bony jaws with a succession of crackling sounds that made Gordon shiver. "How it used to startle him! He would turn white as a sheet as he looked up into my face. Once he sprung to his feet in desperation, and we had a wrestle all about the room, overturning chairs, tables and everything else that came in our way."

"You succeeded well in shortening my father's life," returned Gordon gloomily. "Under your tyranny he sank into his grave long before his time."

"So he did, so he did, and he passed me on to you with the rest of his property, real and personal. It was a rich inheritance, my dear boy, even though I had to be dragged at its heels. Yet don't accuse me of my responsibility for your father's taking off. He was the author of my existence. Like Frankenstein, he built me up, bone by bone, and was not content until he had made a gigantic monster and had breathed into my bony breast the breath of life. Then, in order that I might not affect his sight, he stowed me away in that closet. Suppose I became the instrument of his own undoing. Is it not true that he was nevertheless the author of his own downfall?"

"Your logic seems to be as merciless as it is correct," answered Gordon, with knitted brows. "Still, there are some points relative to your history on which my mind is a trifle obscure. What possessed my father to call into being a creature of your disagreeable character?"

"The almighty dollar, young man. He created me in order that you might inherit a little more wealth. He did not think, then, how I should one day set astride his shoulders like an Old Man of the Sea, nor did he think that it was possible for me to afflict his son. For obvious reasons, my relations with you are not so intimate as they were with your worthy father. I was evolved out of the wheat pit of the board of trade. Your father was a bull, and he mercilessly gored both life and fortune out of a certain bear who was not nimble enough to get out of his way."

"And who was this bear?" asked Gordon.

"A man named Hepburn."

"Amy Hepburn's father?" murmured the young man, rubbing his hand across his brow in an effort to remember.

"Yes. Hepburn lost every penny he had in the world through that disastrous wheat deal. He was forced into bankruptcy and, unable to bear the disgrace, took his own life. His money went to increase the store your father left you, my boy, and it is now possible for you to live in luxury while Hepburn's wife and children must struggle on as best they can. However," and the skeleton got up and started back to its closet, "it is not for me to moralize. Now that I've caught myself deliver ing a homily, I'll just take my departure. Au revoir, my dear fellow."

Halting at the closet door, the skeleton waved its sinewless right hand at Gordon, who sat in his chair, deep in thought, while his cigar burned itself out between his fingers.

At last he got up and shook his broad shoulders as though freeing himself of a disagreeable burden.

"Society has dared me," he muttered, "but I know my heart, now, and I'll do it. I plunge!"

* * * * * * *

After Harry Gordon and Amy Hepburn had been married and had returned from their honeymoon Harry brought his bride up stairs to his old bachelor's den and seated her in a chair.

"My dear," he said, "I have a confession to make to you. My father once did your father a grievous wrong, and I have made myself the happiest fellow in the world by making it. However, as we are not to have any secrets from each other, you must know about this."

A look of astonishment came into Amy's blue eyes as she watched her husband proceed to the closet, throw open the door and go rummaging about inside.

"What in the world are you looking for, Harry?" she asked as he returned to her side.

"I'm looking for something that does not seem to be there—the Gordon family skeleton, Amy. For the first time in 15 years it is not to be found in that closet."

Just then a clanking trend was heard in the hallway without, the door was pushed slowly ajar and the skeleton limped in, supporting itself on a crutch and looking very much the worse for wear.

"There it is!" cried Gordon. "What's the matter with you, old chap? Here, sit down. I want to make you acquainted with my wife."

The family skeleton dropped into a chair and shook until it rattled like a score of castanets.

"I'm done for," it groaned. "You've fixed me, young man. I just dropped in to say goodby forever. But don't introduce me to your wife. We've met before."

"That's so, Harry," said Amy. "I know all about this family skeleton of yours. Don't let it worry you, my dear," and she threw her soft arms about his neck. "Let the dead past bury its dead. If we are happy, isn't that enough?"

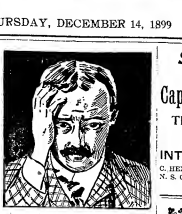
"Enough, yes!" And he pressed a rapturous kiss upon her fair cheek.

That kiss pronounced the doom of the Gordon family skeleton. Forthwith it began to fade into thin air, finally vanishing and leaving not a wrack behind.

Playing Poker by Wire.

Few outside the brotherhood of the key are aware that operators often play poker over the wire. It is, nevertheless, a fact, and the diversion is fairly common.

"When I was working on the Blankety-blank line at a little railroad station in Illinois," said an ex-operator the other day, "business was very slack toward early morning, and we used to get up a four handed game regularly. The players were myself and three other operators at different points along the line. We would call each other up, and then every man would deal himself a hand, making his discards and 'helping' as desired. Of course, we had to trust to mutual honor as to cheating, but I think everybody was on the square. All played freeze out, and the loser had to treat when we got together at headquarters, which was about once a month. I must confess that the action was a little slow, but the game was more exciting than one might imagine. Almost all the old operators have played cards by telegraph at some time or another." — Chicago Chronicle.

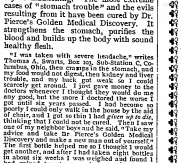


Hopeless and Helpless.

The consequences of a diseased condition of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system are most disastrous to the whole body. One by one every organ may become involved. The misery is maddening. The most extreme cases of "stomach trouble" and the evils resulting from it have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood and builds up the body with sound healthy flesh.

"I was taken with severe headache," writes Thomas A. Sparks, Esq., of Columbus, Ohio, then cramps in the stomach, and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble, and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. I just gave money to the doctor whenever I thought they would do me good, but got no relief. Finally I thought I'd quit all my years passed. I had become so poorly I could only walk in the house by the aid of chair, and I got so thin I had given up all, thinking that I could not be cured. Then I saw one of my neighbor boys and he said, 'Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and don't take anything else.' I took the first bottle before me as I thought nothing could get another, and after I had taken eight bottles I was about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds. I have been well ever since, and I have taken more than I did in two years before, and I am as stout and healthy today, I think, as I ever was."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness.



Saw Mill Machinery For Sale Cheap.

One 3-Saw Lath Bolter,
One 3-Saw Lath Mill,

The above machines are in good repair and capable of making 40,000 lath in ten hours.

On Perkins Hand Shingle Machine

With drop tilt attachment -- in good repair.

A complete outfit of Saws and Collars goes with above machinery.

Write for Prices.

CROOKSTON LUMBER CO.,
Crookston, Minn

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

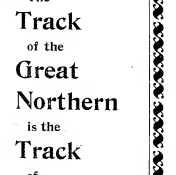
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.



The Track of the Great Northern is the Track of Empire.

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,
OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON.....Pres H. STEENERSON.....Vice-President.
N. S. GREVAIS.....2d Vice-President. L. ELLINGTON.....Cashier
A. P. RANSOM, Asst. Cashier.

Subscribe Now

And get the Polk County Journal from now till January 1st, 1900, for $1.50.

This offer includes the handsome Christmas Editions for the two years. The Journal is the best paper in this Congressional district and is improving with each issue.

THE JOURNAL
CROOKSTON, MINN.

LONGVIEW STOCK FARM
SECTION 15, LOWELL.

Short Horn Cattle and Poland China Hogs
FOR SALE.

Herd headed by Imp. Bonnie Scotland 135,225

R. A. WILKINSON, Prop., Crookston, Minn.

FRANK BROWN....

is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

A Liberal Exchange of Flour for Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guarnteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. ERSKINE, President. W.H. ASHLEY, Vice-President.
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $26,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:
George B. Erskine, A. A. Miller, Wm. Ashley, J. H. Eckinson, E. M. Walsh, L. Fontaine J. F. Foote, H. E. Crosby, J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the interests of our Customers

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

A SERIOUS DEFEAT

BRITISH UNDER GATACRE MEET A REVERSE NEAR STORMBERG.

Boer Position Found Impregnable and a Retreat Is Ordered After Three Hours Fighting—British Loss Over Six Hundred Killed, Wounded and Missing—General Rising of Cape Dutch Likely.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The war office publishes the following dispatch from General Gatacre: "Deeply regret to inform you that I met with a serious reverse in the attack on Stormberg. I was misled as to the enemy's position by the guides and found impracticable ground. Casualties so far as known at present are:

"Royal Irish Rifles—Six officers wounded.

"Suffolk Regiment—One officer and 12 men wounded; 3 officers and 280 men missing.

"Seventy-fourth Battery—One officer and 5 men wounded.

"Seventy-seventh Battery—One man killed, one officer wounded.

"Northumberland Fusileers—Six officers missing.

"Dorsetshire Regiment—Three hundred and six non-commissioned officers and men missing.

"Royal Berkshire Regiment — One private killed.

"The remainder of my casualties will be wired as soon as ascertained."

STILL ANOTHER ONE.

Methuen Reports a Bad Reverse to the War Office.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Gen. Methuen's report from Modder river shows that he met with a serious check Monday and suffered great losses:

"Our artillery shelled a very strong position held by the enemy on a long, high kopje, from 4 p. m. until dusk Sunday. It rained hard last night. The Highland brigade attacked at day break on Monday the south end of the kopje. The attack was properly timed but failed. The guards were ordered to protect the Highlanders' right and rear. The cavalry and mounted infantry, with a howitzer artillery battery, attacked the enemy on the left and the guards on the right, supported by field artillery and howitzer artillery. They shelled the position from daybreak, and at 1:15 I sent the Gordons to support the Highlands brigade. The troops held their own in front of the enemy's entrenchments until dusk, the position extending, including the kopje, for a distance of six miles towards the Modder river. Today I am holding my position and entrenching myself. I had to face at least 12,000 men. Our loss was great."

GATACRE'S EXPLANATION.

Supplementary Account of the British Defeat at Stormberg.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The war office has received the following from General Forestier Walker:

"Cape Town, Monday, Dec. 11.—Gatacre reports as follows:

"The idea to attack Stormberg seemed to promise certain success, but the distance was underestimated by myself and the local guides. A policeman took me round some miles and consequently we were marching from 9:30 p. m. to 4 a. m., and were landed in an impossible position. I do not consider the error intentional. The Boers commenced firing from the top of an unscalable hill and wounded a good many of our men while in the open plain. The Second Northumberlands tried to turn out the enemy but failed. The Second Irish Fusileers seized a kopje near and held on, supported by the mounted infantry and Cape police. The guns under Jeffreys could not have been better handled. But I regret to say that a gun was overturned in a deep nullah and another sank in quicksand. Neither could be extricated in the time available.

"Seeing the situation I sent a dispatch rider to Molteno with the news. I collected and withdrew our force from ridge to ridge for about nine miles. The Boer guns were remarkably well served. They carried accurately 5,000 yards. I am holding Bushman's Hook and Cyphergat. Am sending the Irish Rifles and Northumberlands to Sterkstroom to recuperate. The wounded proceed to Queenstown. The missing Northumberlands number 305, not 206, as previously reported.'"

WILL DELAY ADVANCE.

Gatacre and French Must Await Reinforcements.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—No further news has been received to smooth the mystery overhanging General Gatacre's retreat from Stormberg. He has not yet forwarded the promised additional message and the censorship has prevented the correspondents from explaining the matter. Until General Gatacre has given his explanation it is felt that considerable allowance must be made for the extreme difficulty of getting intelligence in a country whose inhabitants are in strong sympathy with the enemy.

Stormberg is described as a stronger position than Laings Nek. The only road winds through lofty hills and flanking is impossible. Colesburg is also said to be an almost impregnable position and as no troops are available to reinforce the columns acting in those directions it becomes evident that will delay the invasion of the Free State perhaps some weeks. It is exceedingly probable that he will be compelled to retire on Queenstown and to wait for reinforcements which can hardly reach him until Sir Charles Warren's division arrives at the Cape. The first detachments will sail Saturday next. Even if General French is not called to retreat he will be obliged to pause in his advance.

Gatacre's Misfortune or Error

CURRENCY DEBATE ON.

Speech of Dolliver of Iowa the Feature of the Day.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The feature of the opening day in the debate on the currency bill in the house was the speech of Mr. Dolliver of Iowa. It was characterized by all the wit and eloquence for which the Iowan is noted and held the members without regard to party for more than two hours.

Mr. Dolliver declared that the last doubt of the Republican party as to the wisdom of enacting the gold standard into law had been dissolved by the experiences of the business world during the past three years. He scored Mr. Bryan and generally ridiculed the alleged prophecies of the Democrats in 1896.

Mr. De Armond (Mo.) was the heavy gun on the Democratic side. He warned the Democrats from the West that they could not deceive their constituents in the coming election that they had yielded to the judgment of their colleagues in caucus.

Mr. Overstreet opened the debate for the Republicans and Mr. Maddox (Ga.) replied to him. Mr. McClellan (N. Y.) was the only other speaker. He announced his opposition to the bill on the ground that it would contract the currency, extinguish the bank notes and enhance the value of coin bonds.

THOSE TISSUE BALLOTS.

Kentucky Court of Appeals Decides They Are Illegal.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 11.—The tissue ballot case from Ohio county has been decided and the decision is concurred in by four of the seven judges of the court. The court held that all ballots should be printed on white paper sufficiently thick that the printing cannot be distinguished from the back, and if ballots are used at an election which do not substantially comply with the law, the election is not conducted as required by law and is invalid. The opinion of the court comes too late to affect the decision of the state election commission, but sets a precedent for the state contest board.

Another decision announced by the court of appeals has an important bearing upon the late state election in Kentucky. The decision was a ruling making perpetual the writ of prohibition issued against Judge Toney of Louisville, restraining him from interfering with local elections by writ of mandamus. He was charged by the Democrats with arbitrarily issuing the writs.

IT SHIFTS THE ISSUE.

Democratic Opinion of the Effect of Gold Standard Legislation.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Judge Johnson, chairman of the Democratic executive committee, says:

"The introduction of the Republican monetary bills shifts the issue before the country. The decision will be for or against the single gold standard instead of for or against silver as it was in 1896.

"The Democratic party will maintain its stand in favor of free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, independent of the consent of any foreign nation—in short, independent bimetallism. The discussion in congress over the Republican caucus gold standard measures will be the beginning of the discussion which will be carried on throughout the campaign."

CRITICIZED THE KAISER.

Remarkable Incident During the Debate on the Naval Bill.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—The event of the day has been Dr. Lieber's criticism in the reichstag of Emperor William's speech at Hamburg. The spectacle of this cautious leader of the most important group in the reichstag—the section which will decide the fate of the naval bill—thus severely blaming the kaiser, is almost without parallel in German parliamentary history. It was all the more remarkable because Count von Ballestrem, presidens of the reichstag upheld the dignity of the chamber and maintained freedom of speech against the protest of the imperial chancellor. Parliamentary circles are all agog over the incident and it has not improved the chances of the naval bill.

JURY DISAGREED.

Second Trial of the Alton School Case Results in No Verdict.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—A special to The Record from Alton, Ills., says the jury in the famous Alton school case has been discharged by Judge Burroughs. The jury was out 65 hours and failed to agree. This is the second time the case has been tried. The first trial was a victory for the whites, but the verdict was reversed by the supreme court and the case remanded for retrial.

FIFTY-MILE GALE RAGING.

Detroit Feels the Fury of the Storm Now Sweeping Across the Lakes.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 13.—A southwest wind is sweeping up the river at the rate of 50 miles an hour. Heavy winds are reported from all parts of the lake region, while at St. Joseph, Mich., a snow storm raged. Fears are entertained for the government piers there. But vessel captains have remained in port and no disasters have been reported as yet. The weather bureau predicts much colder weather for the next 24 hours, with high winds continuing.

Heavy Gale on Erie.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 13.—One of the heaviest gales of the year prevails on Lake Erie. The wind blows at the rate of 50 miles an hour. Very few vessels ventured out, the weather bureau having sent out warning. Telegraph and telephone lines are prostrated.

In the Upper Peninsula.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Dec. 13.—A heavy snow from the northwest began during the night and still continues. Almost a foot of snow has fallen. The storm is reported general throughout the Upper Peninsula.

IS NOW A FUGITIVE

AGUINALDO IN THE HILLS WITH A HANDFUL OF FOLLOWERS.

General Tino, Conveying American Prisoners, Hastening North Hotly Pursued. Roving Bands of Outlaws Becoming Numerous and the Question of Their Suppression Is a Serious One.

MANILA, Dec. 13.—General Young reports the rescue of Brutus of the Nevada regiment and Edwards of the gunboat Yorktown, who have been held prisoners by the Filipinos. General Tino, conveying the American prisoners north, is hotly pursued. Aguinaldo is a fugitive in the mountains. His body guard has been destroyed and Gregorio del Pilar killed. General Concepsion has surrendered.

The Lepanto provinces has been cleared of insurgents. The navy cooperated with the army on the west coast.

Two Thousand eight hundred released Spanish prisoners are coming to Manila.

WORSE THAN INDIANS.

Problem of Suppressing Filipino Bandits Not Easy of Solution.

MANILA, Dec. 13.—Colonel Smith, with a detachment of the Seventeenth infantry, surrounded and captured in a village near Malaqui a party of guerrillas who had made their headquarters there. The party included the band which assassinated seven officials at Malaqui for friendliness to the Americans.

All are insurgents who became bandits when disintegration of the Filipino army began. They kept the country around Malolos quite in a state of terror for several weeks and committed 25 murders in less than that number of days. When they were caught they were promptly sent to General MacArthur's headquarters at Bayambang by train. It is expected that they will be speedily tried and shot or hanged as an example, if convicted.

The whole country north of San Fernando and between San Fernando and Manila, except within the protecting lines of troops around the city and the closely patrolled stretches of railroad, is Swarm With Such Bands.

Probably they will be increased by General Pilar's army, many of whom are making their way south to Cavite provincia.

These people, for the most part, succeeded in dodging General Grant, Colonel Bell and Colonel Hood's troops, who are scouring the country for them. They devote their energies to ambushing commissary wagons and to picking up soldiers who leave their commands. Every day some wagon train is fired upon or some soldier disappears. The policy of these ruffians is to make the country uninhabitable for Americans and to frighten natives into refraining from giving assistance to the Americans, as well as to compel the inhabitants to support the insurrection. Only a small proportion of the insurgent army have been surrendered and the problem of suppressing this guerrilla warfare is anything but easy of solution. Some of the American officers think it worse than fighting Indians.

TAKEN BY MACARTHUR.

Reported That Filipino General Ale Jandrino Has Surrendered.

MANILA, Dec. 11.—An expedition headed by the battleship Oregon left Manila for Subig Saturday night.

It is reported that the Filipino commander, General Alejandrino, with his staff, has surrendered to General MacArthur, and there is also a rumor that Alejandrino is at Algar, suffering from a wound received in a fight between insurgents and bandits, and that he will be given an opportunity to surrender and will be properly cared for.

The records of the treasury of the so-called Filipino government, together with a quantity of paper money and another Mauser outfit, have been found at Mangatarem.

GENERAL PILAR KILLED.

Commander of Aguinaldo's Bodyguard Dies Fighting.

MANILA, Dec. 11.—General Gregorio del Pilar, commanding Aguinaldo's bodyguard, was killed by Major Briton C. March of the Thirty-fourth infantry in a fight 18 miles northwest of Cervantes Dec. 8.

According to reports which General Young obtained from escaped Spanish prisoners at Vigan several days ago, Major March left the coast, where he was pursuing Aguinaldo, and encountered General del Pilar on a fortified train. They fought for four hours, during which time 70 Filipinos were killed. The American loss was 3 killed and 6 wounded. The Spaniards report that Major March is still pursuing the insurgents.

OLANGAPO OCCUPIED.

Naval Station in Subig Bay in the Hands of Americans.

MANILA, Dec. 12.—The advance guard of General Grant's command, under Major Spence, arrived at Olangapo, Subig bay, during the night of Dec. 8 which place was occupied with little resistance, the enemy fleeing. Major Spence had an arduous march over the mountain trails from Dinalupian.

TWO THOUSAND MORE.

Otis Cables Another Large Batch of Spanish Prisoners Released.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The war department has received the following dispatch from General Otis:

"Two thousand additional Spanish prisoners secured in Northern Luzon, making over 3,000 released within a month. Seven hundred now en route from Vigan, and transports will be sent for remainder."

THIRTY-TWO DEAD.

Catastrophe in Carbonado, Wash., Mines Causes Severe Loss of Life.

CARWONDO, Wash., Dec. 11.—The accident in shaft No. 7 of the Carbon Hill coal fairns, 40 miles east of Tacoma, although not so serious as first reported, caused a loss of 32 lives. There were 76 men at work at the time of the explosion and 44 have reached the surface alive. Five of these are in a serious condition. Governor Rogers and a relief train were early on the scene.

The origin of the accident is yet unknown, but it is supposed that miners working between the 300-foot and 600-foot levels broke into the old mine workings, which are filled with gas. An explosion followed as soon as this outpouring gas came in touch with the first miner's lamp. The concussion was sufficient to blot out the lives of nearly half the miners in shaft No. 7.

Governor Will Investigate.

Governor Rogers will conduct a searching examination as to the cause of the explosion. He telegraphed State Mine Inspector Owens, now at Spokane, to attend the inquest and examine witnesses himself. The question of insufficient ventilation of the mine in accordance with the state law will be thoroughly gone into.

The Carbon Hill mines are owned by the Pacific Improvement company, an offshoot of the Southern Pacific Railway company. The output of 100 tons a day is shipped to Tacoma by rail, and thence to San Francisco and Oakland. The mines are the second largest in the state and have been in operation for nearly 20 years.

Most of the victims were Finns, Poles and Welsh.

WORK OF OUR MINTS.

Annual Report of Director Roberts Made Public.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Mr. Roberts, the director of the mint, in his annual report, says:

The mints and assay offices operated upon more bullion in the aggregate and a greater coinage was executed during the last fiscal year than in any previous year. Original deposits of gold were slightly less than during the previous year, amounting in value to $148,497,-100 against $147,609,194 in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1898. Domestic deposits were the largest in our history, amounting to $76,326,000 against $68,-881,120 in the preceding year, but there was a falling off in foreign coin and bars. The coinage of gold was the greatest in our history, amounting to $108,177,180. The coinage of silver dollars from bullion purchased under the act of July 14, 1890, was $18,254,709, against $10,002,780 in the preceding year, and the coinage of subsidiary silver $9,468,977.65 against $6,482,804.

Commander Howell Dead.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Commander Charles P. Howell, chief engineer of the United States battleship Maine when that vessel was blown up in Havana harbor, is dead at his home in this city. He died of an apoplectic stroke. He was 59 years old and was born in Goshen, N. Y. He was graduated from the United States naval academy in June, 1868, fourth in his class.

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

DULUTH, Dec. 13.

WHEAT—Cash, No. hard, 64½c; No. 1 Northern, 64c; No. 2 Northern, 62½c; No. 3, 57½c. To Arrive—No. 1 hard, 64½c; No. 1 Northern, 62½c. December—No. hard, 65¾c; May, 67½c; July 69c.

FLAX—To arrive, $1.42½; December, $1.42½; May, $1.46¼.

Minneapolis Grain.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 13.

WHEAT—In Store—No. 1 Northern, December, 63¾c; May, 66½c; July, 67¼@67¾c. On Track—No. 1 Northern, 66¾c; No. 2 Northern, 63c; No. 3, 61¾c.

Sioux City Live Stock.

SIOUX CITY, Dec. 13.

CATTLE—Market dull.

Sales ranged at $3.40@3.75 for beeves; $2.00@3.00 for cows, bulls and mixed; $3.30@4.40 for stockers and feeders; $4.50@4.80 for veal calves and yearlings.

HOGS—Market shade higher. Range of prices, $3.80@3.90.

Receipts: Hogs, 3,000; cattle, 900.

St. Paul Union Stock Yards.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Dec. 13.

HOGS—Market steady with yesterday. Range of prices, $3.80@3.90.

CATTLE—Butcher cattle firm and active good stockers and feeders steady and active.

Range of prices, stockers, $3.75@4.35; cows, $2.50@3.35; heifers, $3.00@3.85; bulls, 12.85.

SHEEP—Firm and active.

Range of prices at 3.75@4.00 for sheep; 4.30@5.00 for lambs.

Receipts: Cattle, 1002; calves, 600; hogs 2,200; sheep, 300.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.

CATTLE—Market steady to slow.

Sales ranged at $3.90@4.30 for mixed; 4.10@4.45 for cows and heifers 3.90@4.75 for stockers and feeders 3.45@5.35 for Texas steers; $7.70@8.50 for fancy Christmas steers.

HOGS—Market steady, shade higher.

Sales ranged at $ 3.85@4.1.½ for mixed and packers, $4.00@4.10 for assorted, $3.80@ 3.75@ for rough heavy, $ 3.95@4.1.½ for light. Bulk of sales $ 4.00@4.10.

SHEEP—Market steady; sales at 3.60@4.60 for wethers. Sales ranged at $4.30@5.00 for range $4.00@5.00 for lambs.

Receipts: Cattle, 11,000 hogs, 38,000; sheep, 18,000.

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13

WHEAT—December, 63¾; May, 66¾; July, 66⅝.

CORN—December, 36½; January, 31 @36¾c.

OATS—December, 29¼@29¾c May, 31c.

PORK—December, $8.75; January $10; May, $10.22½.

FLAX—Cash, Northwestern, $1.51; Southwestern, $1.51; December, $1.51; May $1 46¾.

POULTRY—Dressed, turkeys, 9c; chickens, 7@7½c

BUTTER—Creameries, 16@23c; dairy, 15 @20c.

EGGS—Fresh, 20c.

COAL AND WOOD
VANCE AND STONE

TO PROSPECTIVE
INVESTORS
In New Buildings

When laying out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have the architect include electric wiring in his specifications

Call us up

Before letting your Contract. We shall be pleased to give you the benefit of our experience in laying out wiring plans, it will cost you nothing to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want us

To figure on your wiring, we are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market. Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

A. G. ANDERSON....
Druggist and Pharmacist.
Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.
Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.
Anderson Block, Robert Street
CROOKSTON, MINN

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal.

By N. S. GORDON.

Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

MARY ELLEN LEASE, of Populist fame, has followed the example of Ex-speaker Reed and landed in a New York flat.

THE Kentucky election contest came to an end last Saturday when the election commissioners signed the certificate of William S. Taylor as the Republican governor-elect of Kentucky.

A bill has been introduced into the United States senate giving a pension of $100 per month to the widow of the brave Captain Gridley. The senate may now fire whenever it is ready.

THE Red River Tidende, published at Fergus Falls, has been sold and consolidated with the Nordvesten at St. Paul. E. G. Mellen, of the Tidende, will be associate editor of the Nordvesten.

THE JOURNAL is in receipt of a large volume entitled Minnesota Plant Life which has been prepared by Conway MacMillan, professor of the botanical department at the Minnesota State University. Prof. MacMillan is an authority on botany and all students of that science ought to have this book in their library. It contains, in addition to the reading matter, almost 400 excellent illustrations.

IT is rumored that Dr. A. B. Cole, of Fergus Falls, is after the republican nomination for congressman from the Seventh District, or at least that his friends are grooming him for that position. This is probably the outcome of the Fergus Falls public building muddle, but a candidacy started for such reason would not have much strength. Dr. Cole is a staunch republican and a man of ability, still Frank M. Eddy has made such a record in congress that he will in all likelihood succeed himself if he wishes to do so.

"ORGANIZED rebellion no longer exists. Our troops are actively pursuing robber bands". Such is one of the latest dispatches from General Otis in the Philippines and it marks the beginning of the end. Long before the next presidential election peace and order will be established in the islands and such forms of self governement as the natives are fitted for. As soon as they all see the beneficent effect of our administration, and this will be shown them as soon as they will permit, they will eagerly welcome us all over the islands.

THE question whether or not Judge Collins will be a candidate for the republican nomination for governor will be settled, it is said, next Saturday. The Collins men met in St. Paul last Monday night and after long deliberation decided to appoint a committee of five who will further canvass the situation throughout the state and recommend to their favorite by next Saturday what they think he would better do. Judge Collins is certainly a strong candidate and would lead the republican hosts to victory next year if nominated.

Elsewhere.

A Swedish college has been located at Fergus Falls.

The Cripple Creek gold mines produced $2,515,500 in gold in November.

The Fergus Falls volunteer fire department has been disbanded and the city council have taken steps to organize a paid department.

The will of the late vice president, Garret A. Hobart, filed at Paterson, N. J., leaves an estate of $2,800,000 mostly to his widow and son.

President McKinley has designated Adelbert F. Hay, the son of Secretary Hay, to succeed Mr. Macrum as consul in Pretoria, South Africa.

Wolves are reported to be quite numerous in the vicinity of Shevlin. Only a few nights ago a settler near that place was attacked in broad daylight and would have been eaten up bodily had it not been for the great skill in which he used a cudgel.

Ignatius Donnelly has just published another new book, entitled "The Cipher in the Plays and on the Tombstones." As the author of "Atlantis", "Ragnarok", and the Great "Cryptogram" Mr. Donnelly is known all over the world. His new book will undoubtedly have a large sale.

Louis F. Meagge, who gained considerable notoriety in connection with the failure of the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, located at Minneapolis, and who after years of hiding in Central America, returned to Minnesota to stand trial under three indictments, is free, all indictments being nullified.

Wanted.

Your orders for anything in the music line. We can save you money. Special attention given to all mail orders. Stone's Music House, Fargo.

MAYOR-GENERAL LEONARD WOOD, U. S. A., formerly commander of the Rough Riders and since the war civil governor of Santiago and vicinity, has been appointed military governor of Cuba to succeed General Brooke. General Wood has proved himself an unusually able man and the president has certainly noted wisely in selecting him for this responsible position.

Literary Notes.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

Hamilton W. Mabie contributes to the December Atlantic Monthly, a brilliant and searching review of Edgar A. Poe's Place in American Literature, showing how unique and unexpected Poe's genius was at its uppearance, and how he still remains our most distinctive and individual writer, holding with Hawthorne the primacy in American literature.

The December Atlantic might in some senses almost be called a Chicago number, for three of the most striking and salient articles are by Chicago authors. Harriet Monroe's "The Grand Canon of the Colorado" is a brilliant and effective sketch of nature and natural scenery; Mrs. Ella W. Peattie's lively "The Artistic Side of Chicago" pictures the aesthetic, artistic, educational and literary features of the great city, while the short story "The Detectives," by Will Payne, is a capital example of the power of Chicago writers in romantic fiction. Chicago has reason to be proud of her contributions to this number of the representative magazine of American.

NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

The leading interest of the day—the South Africa War—is treated in the December North American Review with unapproachable fulness and authority, no less than six articles by writers of world-wide distinction, from as many different points of view, being devoted to it. The Rt. Hon. James Bryce, whose paper is accompanied by a colored map of the seat of war, writes of "The Historical Causes of the War;" Earl Blind, an intimate friend of President Kruger, treats of "The War and European Opinion;" Francis Charmes, a representative French publicist, discusses the question, "Will the Powers Intervene?" Max Nordau deals with the "Philosophy and Morals of War" in the light of the present conflict; Andrew Carnegie analyzes the "South African Question," and Demetrius C. Boulger, a well-known specialist of international questions, examines the possibilities as to the formation of an Anti-British Alliance of Continental Powers.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

In the December number of the American Monthly Review of Reviews there is an editorial summary of the results of the elections, with a discussion of their import as an indorsement of the administration's policy. The editor also describes the progress of the Philippine campaign, the war in South Africa, and many other matters of international interest.

In the Review of Reviews for December Dr. Albert Shaw writes on "The School City—A method of Pupil Self-Government." This is a system now in operation in many public schools throughout the country by which training is given in the practical duties of citizenship. Dr. Shaw sets forth the working principles on which the system is based and gives many interesting facts of actual experience in the schools which have developed these principles in practice. The article is illustrated.

NEW LIPPINCOTT.

It was one of the charms of Dickens as editor that he had a hearty love of the Christmas season. This is too little felt by the business-like editor of today, but the "New Lippincott," among its many new devices, has resorted to the celebration of the Christmas spirit, and the December number gives evidence of this in many features. The "Complete Novel," called "The Whistling Maid," is a romance to be read by the yule log. It is by Ernest Rhys, a master of weird adventure and mystery. "The Real Star of Bethlehem," by Julia MacNair Wright, speaks for itself; Mr. Howells contributes one of his amusing tales and Mary Hamilton writes of holidays, called "The Magic of a Voice." There are Xmas poems by Albert Bigelow Paine, "The Little Child," and by Thomas Walsh, "An Nazareth." Two important contemporaries are celebrated in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," by Conan Doyle, and Washington's Death and the Doctors, December, 1799." Flora Annie Steel has a matchless love-story of India called "The Perfume of the Roses," and in "Daudet and His Intimates," the painter Raffaelli gives many reminiscences of his great friend. The finest and most timely of all the poems by Markham since "The Man with the Hoe," opens the number. It is called "The End of the Century."

For Sale

A good farm of 320 acres, well cultivated, has a good house and barn and close to Crookston markets. Can be bought right. For particulars call at the JOURNAL office.

The Cart Before the Horse.

The Waterville Advance has the following. It shows up the situation well:

As soon as my field of grain is grown,
Said the farmer sore in need,
As soon as my field of grain is grown,
I am going to sow the seed.

As soon as my vessel reaches port,
Said the shipper with a will,
As soon as my vessel reaches port
I am going to set my sail.

As soon as the man is well and strong,
Said the doctor, drawing close,
As soon as the man is well and strong
I will give him a curing dose.

As soon as my colt can beat sixteen,
Said the breeder lightly trained,
As soon as he cuts in two-sixteen
I'm going to have him trained.

As soon as my trade picks up a bit,
Said the merchant looking wise,
As soon as my trade picks up a bit
I am going to advertise.

BEMIDJI

Ted Smith returned Saturday, after week's visit in Minneapolis.

Nat Campbell, of Crookston, was here on professional business Monday.

John Ryaa, of Fergus Falls, is visiting his cousin Chas. Nangle, this week.

John Goodmon went to Bagley Saturday, looking up his interests there.

Miss Mary Maricele is here this week visiting her sister, Mrs. George Stone.

The hand has organized under the management of Prof. Ghell, of Minneapolis.

The Binkeman Hotel has been improved by the addition of a hot air furnace.

Merritt Devro, of Park Rapids, was the guest of Chas. Casler Sunday and Monday.

D. D. B. Newman is moving into his new residence on Bemidji aveaue, this week.

Shotwell Henderson, of Alexandria, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hazen this week.

Miss Mamie Villeman arrived from Bagley Saturday, where she has been teaching school.

Dick Bass, of Grand Forks, N. D., was here Monday shaking hands with his many friends.

Miss Lulu Woodward has accepted a position as clerk in McCuaig & Ludington's store.

Jim McDonald, night operator here, went to Staples Tuesday to spend the holidays.

Mrs. Hattie Bean, of Ashland, Wis., is visiting her son, A. L. Bean, of this place, this week.

Harry Peterson, the well known barber, of this place, has been laid up the past week with la grippe.

H. C. Huebner arrived from Coacord, Montana, Monday, where he has just completed a railroad contract.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sprague arrived from Brule, Wis., last week. They will visit their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Sprague, here this winter.

ERSKINE.

Dr. Olsoa returaed from Crookston Wednesday.

Miss Rena Saadley returned home Wednesday.

Martin Haugen, of Fertile, did business here Tuesday.

The Woodmen had aaother victim Wednesday evening.

Odegaard & Rolsum gave their floor a new coat of oil Monday evening.

Bob Westercott, of Grand Forks, was here Thursday looking after his interest.

Dr. McAcheran, of McIntosh, was called to Louis Anderson's Wednesday morning.

Mrs. A. E. Anderson went to Alexandria Friday to visit with friends and relatives.

Miss Tena Markusen had the misfortune to sprain one of her ankles while skating Friday.

Mrs. Weuer was in town Wednesday looking after the interest of the Children's Home in St. Paul.

Robert Olson, of Crookston, took in the sights here Wednesday, and on the side sold quite a few cigars.

Business is very dull for this time of the year. The roads are very rough so that the farmers can not haul any loads.

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address, F. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggest, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Crookston Market.

Corrected Thursday morning, Dec. 7.

WHEAT—No. 1 Hard 65½; No. 1 Northern 62½; No. 2 Northern 49¾.
OATS—32c.
BARLEY—20 to 26c.
FLAX—$1.35.
POTATOES—20 to 25c.
TURNIPS—20c.
BUTTER—20@ 22c.
ONIONS—40c.
BRANS—$12 to 2.00
HAY—Baled $5.00, loose $4.00.
HOGS—6½c.
CATTLE—2½ to 3¼ live weight, 5¼ to 6½c dressed beef.
SHEEP—3c.
CHICKENS—8c.
TURKEYS—10c
HIDES—5 to 6c.
WOOL—16½c. to 18
FLOUR—$3.25 per owt.
BEAN—$2.00 per bu.
SHORTS—$11.00 per ton.

HOW IS THIS?

While other stores are telling you they are going to quit business and such old worn out trade jokes, we are doing business at the old stand, and to prove to you we are right we will quote you a few of our revised prices that knock the wind out of the other fellows and will make them look up some other scheme.

BOY'S SUITS

Boys' all wool gray, long pant suits, just the thing for school suits, worth $3.00 for..... $2.25

Boys' all wool blue serge, long pant suits, single or double breasted, worth $6 for..... 4.50

Boys' fine all wool grey cashmere, long pant suits worth $12 for.... 6.50

Boys' fine grey two piece suits worth $1.25 for..... 85c

Boys' fine all wool tweed suits, sailor collar and trimmed with braid, worth $2.50 for..... 1.50

Boys' pants that are always sold at 50c we are going to give to you this week for..... 15c

Boys' overalls worth as high as 50c all to for..... 15c

50 doz. mittens worth as high as 35c, all go for..... 25c

MEN'S OVERCOATS

Men's fine all wool black frieze ulster, heavy lined, worth $15 for... 6.98

Men's fine all wool black irish frieze ulsters, dressy and warm, worth $20 for..... 10.98

Men's black dog coats worth $12 for..... 9.50

Men's black dog coats worth $20 for..... 12.00

Men's all wool whipcord, large collars and heavy weights, worth $8.50 for..... 4.50

Men's fine all wool brown and black melton overcoats worth $12 to $15 for..... 6.75

MEN'S DUCK SUITS

Men's brown and black duck, worth $1 for..... 70c

Men's heavy brown and black duck coats worth $2 for..... 1.25

Men's extra heavy brown and black duck coats worth $3 for... 1.75

Men's sheepskin lined duck coats worth $4 for..... 3.25

MEN'S SUITS.

Men's all wool gray English wide cord suits, worth $15 for..... $9.75

Men's brown all wool tweed suits, neat fitting and well finished, worth $12 for..... 8.48

Men's brown all wool tweed suits, worth $15 for..... 7.48

Men's all wool clay worsted suits in gray, brown and black, frock or sack coats, worth $20 for..... 10.98

Men's fine all wool black worsted suits, square cut coats, worth $18 for..... 8.48

Men's fine black all wool serge suits, all styles, worth $10 for..... 5.50

Men's all wool fancy tweed suits, latest styles and well made, worth $8 for..... 4.25

Two cases of underwear worth 75c per suit, we will give while they last, them to you this week for..... 58c

100 doz sweaters worth 75, we will close them out this week for..... 39c

These prices cannot help but prove to you that this is the only place in town to purchase this line of goods. Come and see us before buying

Great Western Clothing House

Opposite the Post Office. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.

Going out of business....

...SUITS AT COST...

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $20.00, $18,00, $16.00
Closing out sale $11.65

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $15.00, $14.00, $12.00
Closing out sale $9.75

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $10.00, $9.00, $8.00
Closing out sale $4.95

Everything goes. Fixtures for sale. Store for rent.

Vanstrum Clothing Co.

PATENTS DESIGNS TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS OBTAINED

ADVICE AS TO PATENTABILITY FREE
Notice in "Inventive Age"
Book "How to obtain Patents"

Charges moderate. No fee till patent is secured. Letters strictly confidential. Address, E. G. SIGGERS, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C.

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term Dec. 7, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of Michael Gruver, deceased.
On reading and filing the petition of Annie M. Gruver of the county of Alleghaney, and state of Pennsylvania, representing among other things, that Michael Gruver, late of said county of Alleghaney, on the 21st day of May, 1898, at the said county of Alleghaney, died intestate being at the time of his death a resident and having his domicile in the county of Polk in the state of Minnesota, and that said petitioner is the widow of said deceased, and praying that letters of administration of said estate be to J. P. Stone, granted:

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court on Friday, the 5th day of January, 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the Probate office in the city of Crookston. in said Polk county.

Further ordered, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minnesota, the 7th day of December, 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

50-29

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture
.....AND.....
Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a house.... CROOKSTON, MINN

To Eastern Canada
FOR THE Christmas Holidays.
VIA THE
Burlington Route

ONLY $40.00 TO Montreal
Going by way of St. Paul and Chicago
and return

This amount will buy a ticket good for a three months' visit to any point in Ontario or Quebec west of Montreal. Between St. Paul and Chicago there is only one best line, and that is the Burlington. Ask your neighbors who have traveled by that line what they think of it.

Your home ticket agent has tickets for sale via our line. Ask him for a Burlington ticket.

Dates of sale every day from December 4 to December 31 inclusive

Or write to A. L. EIDEMILLER, Trav. Pass. Agt., care Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, Man., or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 24.

GEO. P. LYMAN,
Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., C. B. & Q. R. R.,
St. PAUL, MINN.

RAILWAY TIME CARD

CROOKSTON, MINN.

NORTHERN PACIFIC

SOUTH BOUND.	Ar.	Dep's
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:27 pm	8:37 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	6:30 a m	6:50 a m

C. A. SHARRET, Agt. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A.
Crookston, Minn. St. Paul, Minn

GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE	DEPART
*Daily. †Except Sunday. ‡ Leave
8:30 am *Grand Forks, North and West	7:00 am
3:00 pm Minneapolis, St. Paul and points east	3:05 pm
5:30 pm Hallock, Thief River Falls	8:30 am
and Red River Valley
4:55 pm †Moorhead, Bemidji, Duluth and Superior	8:00 am
8:45 pm St. Vincent to Fisher	7:15 pm
8:35 am Fargo to St. Vincent	9:10 am

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block, Crookston, Minn.

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fontaine & Anglin's Office hours—9 to 12 a. m. 1 to 5 p. m. 7 to 8 p.m.

Dr. C. E. Dampier,
Surgeon Great Northern Railroad,
Surgeon Northern Pacific Railroad.
Secretary Board Pension Examiners.
Office, Fournet Block. Crookston, Minn.

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets
Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENCIE FOR RELIABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice. Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday. Morning, 11:00 evening, 8:00. Holy Communion, the First Sunday of every Month. Readers and Welcome.
REV. E. H. GREEN, B. D. Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

—George Roberts, of Lockhart, was in the city Monday.

—Attend the big reduction sale of the Strawbridge Co.

—The Misses Blanche and Alma Fontaine are home from St. Paul.

—Attorney L. H. Bailey of Bemidji is attending district court in the city.

—The Royal Neighbors had a pleasant social at their lodge rooms last night.

—George Carpenter wants a good, gentle, family cow, fresh or soon to become fresh.

—E. D. Childs is attending the State Dairymen's convention at Le Sueur this week.

—Mrs. George Bunzey and son of Mentor visited Crookston friends Monday and Tuesday.

—The board of county commissioners will meet at the court house next Thursday, Dec. 21.

—J. T. Welsh and Thos. Tweed, of Bemidji, were Crookston visitors Tuesday and Wednesday.

—Mrs. M. J. Abrahams and Mrs. John Reynolds, of Grand Forks, were at the Crookston Monday.

—Mrs Campbell returned last Monday afternoon from Bemidji where he had two cases in the district court.

—Henry Allard has gone to Solway near where he will spend the winter working for Lumbers Brothers.

—The Modern Woodmen initiated three new members last Tuesday night. Ten more have made application for membership.

—L. G. Larsen came in from his claim out in the Black Duck country and remained a couple of days, returning Tuesday.

—Attorney B. S. Bennet of Fosston, late lieutenant of the Fifteenth regiment, is taking part in the proceedings in district court.

—Evidences of the near approach of Christmas may be seen on every side, not the least of which are the evergreen trees.

—Mrs. H. A. LeGear, of Lockhart, after visiting for several days in this city at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. T. Carlisle, left last Tuesday for her home.

—N. K. Olson, the jeweler, has just received a new stock of diamonds for the Christmas trade. By reading his advertisement you will see that he carries a complete stock of jewelry.

—Possession of the Bloom real estate, and collection business together with the office fixtures was given to Marin & Webster Saturday, they having recently purchased the business.

—Martin P. Lieknes, of Roome, bought a half section of land Monday through Christianson & Strander, which added to his present land gives him one of the best farms in this valley.

—Mrs. Emma Geroy is reported on the sick list.

—Attend the big reduction sale of the Strawbridge Co.

—Capt. Rhinehart, of Grand Forks, is in the city to attend court.

—Ben Strawbridge was in from Cass Lake last Sunday and Monday.

—C. P. Cahoon and wife and boy leave next week to spend the winter in New York.

—Miss Grace Chilbuck left yesterday morning on the north-bound train for her school.

—Mrs. G. C. Wilde has gone to her old home in Canada where she will spend the winter.

—Selection from Robin Hood Opera will be played at the band concert by the band Monday evening Dec. 18.

—The next band concert will be given Monday night Dec. 18. Seat sale opens Saturday at ten o'clock.

—Attorney G. A. R. Finlayson made a professional trip to Warren and also one to Erskine during the past week.

—The New York Store has the best quality of overshoes and winter caps at the lowest prices. Special sale next week.

—Messrs. Cahoon and Hawes have placed their fine collection of gold nuggets in Anderson's drug store on Robert street.

—The best toned instruments made. The Farstone Mandolins and Guitars. C. R. Stone, maker. Sold by Stone's Mammoth Music House, Fargo, N. D.

—The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church, met at W. H. Amos' Tuesday evening last. Officers for the coming year were elected and a social hour enjoyed.

—Sheet Music at 50 percent off regular price, at Stone's Mammoth Music House 110 and 112 Broadway, Fargo, N. D. Send for catalogue of latest up to date music. tf

—Rev. S. Currie, of Euclid, has been invited to represent Minnesota at a meeting of the State Dairy Association of Connecticut that will take place in the near future.

—W. H. Amos is just now taking a two weeks' lay off from his work in the office of the Crookston Lumber Company. Next week he will visit relatives in Grand Forks.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, sash, doors, mouldings, and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

—W. J. Hilligoss, a Klondike prospector from Polk county, was in the city last Saturday on his way out east where he will look after wood land owned by the Great Northern.

—Next Sunday Rev. Herman P. Fisher will complete five years of pastoral service with the Congregational church of this city. He will give his anniversary sermon in the evening.

—Next Sunday morning at the Congregational church a Forefathers' Day service will be held, and Pastor Fisher will speak on the home life and the home influences of the Pilgrims and Puritans.

—Merton Hewitt began work for Geo. A. Ralph last Tuesday. Mr. Hewitt has been for some time in charge of the Northwestern collection agency, which concern Marin & Webster have bought.

—Now is the time to fix up for winter. We have quite an accumulation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumber Co. Telephone 40.

—The Crookston Board of Underwriters elected officers on Friday last. E. M. Walsh, president; J. P. Foote, vice president; E. A. Webster, secretary and treasurer; rating committee, W. A. Lanctot, C. C. Strander and J. P. Foote.

—In the case of Ofelie vs. the Town of Hammond the Supreme Court gave a decision last week upholding the decision of the district court. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney Ole Vaule and sued for damages caused to his land by the overflowing of an artificial ditch.

—The pastor of the Baptist church will speak on the following themes next Sunday: In the morning he will preach on "Duty—Truthfulness," and in the evening on "Popular Amusements." Visitors are cordially invited to attend those services. A hearty welcome will beextended to all.

—Judge Becker, supreme organizer of the Knights of Malta, called a meeting in Odd Fellows Hall Monday, to found an organization of that order in Crookston. Officers were nominated and as soon as sufficient membership can be obtained they will be installed. W. H. Amos was named for commander.

—"Now you must go, we don't want them any longer, and in order to run a lot of them off before Christmas, will make a big reduction of from 20 to 40 per cent. Everything in stock will be included in sale." This is the heading of a big sale notice, the Strawbridge Co. have out, and the bargains they offer are far in advance of any similar sale ever given in Crookston.

—P. Brady was down from Warren last Monday night.

—Dr. Olson, of Erskine, spent Monday night in the city.

—H. B. Laughlin, of Fisher, was in the city Monday night.

—Gomer Evans and wife, of Angus, spent last Thursday in Crookston.

—Editor George, of the Fertile, Journal, spent Tuesday at the county seat.

—F. E. LePage was in from Mentor and spent Monday night at the county seat.

—The seat sale for the band concert opens at ten o'clock Saturday morning.

—Fred Stevens, one of the prominent farmers of Angus has gone south to spend the winter.

—Miss Alma Fontaine has consented to sing one song at the band concert Monday evening Dec. 18.

—Harry M. Rudd, the new photographer, will play a cornet solo at the band concert Monday evening Dec. 18.

—The Ladies' Quartette will give great assistance to the band by singing at the band concert Monday evening Dec. 18.

—Wm. Davidson, of Keystone, was excused from serving as a grand juror as his health would not permit of his doing the work.

—Miss Lizzie Miller entertained the members of the Christian Culture class of the Baptist Young People's Society at her home Monday evening.

—Mr. Rish, the popular clarionetist in Riggs' orchestra, will play a solo with orchestra accompaniment at the band concert Monday evening Dec. 18.

—The Saturday Shopper published by P. H. McCollough, of Austin, Minn., comes to our table a special number for Thanksgiving. The work is very creditable.

—Mrs. Wright, formerly a Crookston resident, after visiting for a week at the home of A. M. Childs, left Tuesday for Akely where she will visit with her daughter, Mrs. Ford Pray.

—The society ladies of the city will receive on New Year's Day. The custom has not always been observed but 1900 will thus be ushered, several ladies receiving at the one home.

—Jas. McDonald, a farmer from near Fisher, was in the city Tuesday searching for a hired man and a horse. The horse was Mr. McDonald's and the hired man had absconded with the animal.

—The Ladies' Industrial Society of the Methodist church will hold a sale of fancy goods at the church, corner of Fletcher and Broadway, the afternoon and evening of Thursday, Dec. 21, and will serve supper from 6 to 9 o'clock.

—Tonight in the parlors of the Congregational church the members will tell in verse how they earned a dollar which is to be used in church work. At this Experience social refreshments will be served and a pleasant time is anticipated by all.

—The hand numbers at the concert Dec. 18 will be the best effort the band has ever made, among which are Robin Hood selection by DeKoven, Algonquin Overture by Sherman, Nocturne by Pfleg and Willow Grove March by Sorrentino.

—Jacob Sharpe, of Falstad, who for forty years has had something of an impediment in his speech had an operation performed by Dr. Loe last week and an artificial roof for his mouth put in so that he expects soon to be able to talk the same as other folk.

—A crowded house greated the Neill company at the Grand Tuesday evening and unstinted praise was bestowed by all the theatre goers upon the play and the actors. The members of the gopher club and their ladies met at the club rooms and attended the theatre in a body.

—Isolated tracks of pine lands out east, each track about 40 acres, were bought at the U. S. land office Tuesday by the Crookston Lumber Company and John O'Day, the latter acting for the Thief River Falls Lumber Company. The bids on some pieces were as high as $15 per acre, the total amount invested aggregating about $2,800.

—The Degree of Honor have elected the following officers for 1900: Mrs. Warneke, P. C. of H.; Mrs. S. L. Collins, C. of H.; L. of H., Mrs. Gus Johnson, C. of C. Mrs. Chapin; Recorder, Miss Emma Clark; Financier, Miss Amelia Page; Receiver, Mrs. C. D. Billings; Usher Mrs. Berthiaume; Inside Watch, Mrs. J. W. Clark; Outside Watch, C. D. Billings; Trustee, H. P. Marten.

—The Foresters have elected these officers for 1900: L. E. Grossman, chief ranger; J. E. Starkey, vice chief ranger; M. Losey, recording secretary; G. S. Chesterman, financia l secretary; O. E. Hagen, court deputy; W. H. Smith, physician; W. H. Lawrence, treasurer; W. H. Robertson, chaplain; M. L. Ronne, asst; J. Jacobson, woodwards; W. E. Rowe, headle; W. H. Lawrence and N. G. Engstrom, trustee.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....In the Northwest.

We sell Good Merchandise for less money than any other store in the Northwest. "Closing Out" "Reducing Sales" and other "Fakes" to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Legitimate Clothing House.

THE C. O. D.

A Jewel

Yes that's just what N. K. Olson is, and he keeps all kinds of silver plated flat ware. Also all kinds of holiday ware, watches, jewelry, clocks, diamonds etc., etc. Give him a call.

N. K. OLSON.
120 Robert St. W.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.
Crookston, Minnesota.

S. L. Collins,

LIVERY AND FEED STABLES

Horses bought and sold on commission. Everything neat and nobby. Feeding a specialty.

Main and Fourth streets.
CROOKSTON — — MINNESOTA.

You'll be thankful

Without question if you call in at Tom Morris' and inspect his large stock of

Jewelry and Watches,

Diamonds, silver and silver plated ware
All kinds of Toilet Articles in sterling silver and ebony at

CUT GLASS AND POTTERY A SPECIALTY....

Tom Morris'
117 Broadway, opp. Hotel Crookston

Watch Bratrud AND He'll "WATCH" You

He has everything which a first class watchmaker and jeweler keeps in stock. Watches and clocks repaired and cleaned.

Low Prices and First Class Work

Repairing Guaranteed.

M. A. BRATRUD
Anderson & Olson Block.

CARY SAFE CO.,
BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.
....Manufacturers of....
Fire and Burglar Proof Safes
Vaults, Locks, Etc.
CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING

The Household Magazine,

an authority on all topics connected with home-making and home keeping—articles embodying the best methods of preparing, cooking and serving food. Departments devoted to Mothers and Children, Education, The Flower Garden, Entertainments, etc.

Note the reduction in price—from $2 to $1 per year.

Sample copy on receipt of postal if you mention the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL.

A Family Magazine

Conducted in the interests of the Higher Life of the Household. Published Monthly by George D. Chamberlain, Springfield, Mass.

AGENTS WANTED.

ED. ERICKSON,
DEALER IN
All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ... Season ...
Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides. Stall fed Beef..... Specialty
SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

[Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.]

CHAPTER VIII.

What is that to thee? Follow thou me.

When Rollin started down the street that afternoon that Jasper stood looking out of his window, he was not thinking of Rachel Winslow and did not expect to see her anywhere. He had come suddenly upon her as she turned into the avenue, and his heart had leaped up at the sight of her. He walked along by her now rejoicing, after all, in a little moment of this earthly love he could not drive out of his life.

"I have just been over to see Virginia," said Rachel. "She tells me the arrangements are nearly completed for the transfer of the Rectangle property."

"Yes, it has been a tedious case in the courts. Did Virginia show you all the plans and specifications for buildings?"

"We looked over a good many. It is astonishing to me where Virginia has managed to get all her ideas about this work."

"Virginia knows more now about Arnold Toynbee and east end London and institutional church work in America than a good many professional slum workers. She has been spending nearly all summer in getting information." Rollin was beginning to feel more at ease as they talked over this coming work for humanity. It was safe common ground.

"What have you been doing all summer? I have not seen much of you," Rachel suddenly asked, and then her face warmed with its quick flush of tropical color, as if she might have implied too much interest in Rollin or too much regret at not seeing him oftener.

"I have been busy," replied Rollin briefly.

"Tell me something about it," persisted Rachel. "You say so little. Have I a right to ask?"

She put the question very frankly, turning toward Rollin in real interest.

"Yes, certainly," he replied, with a grateful smile. "I am not so certain that I can tell you much. I have been trying to find some way to reach the men I once knew and win them into more useful lives."

He stopped suddenly, as if he were almost afraid to go on. Rachel did not venture to suggest anything.

"I have been a member of the same company to which you and Virginia belong," continued Rollin, beginning again. "I have made the pledge to do as I believe Jesus would do, and it is in trying to answer this question that I have been doing my work."

"That is what I do not understand. Virginia told me about the other. It seems wonderful to think that you are trying to keep that pledge with us. But what can you do with the clubmen?"

"You have asked me a direct question, and I shall have to answer it now," replied Rollin, smiling again. "You see, I asked myself after that night at the tent, you remember"—he spoke hurriedly, and his voice trembled a little—"what purpose I could now have in my life to redeem it, to satisfy my thought of Christian discipleship, and the more I thought of it the more I was driven to a place where I knew I must take up this cross. Did you ever think that of all the neglected beings in our social system none are quite so completely left alone as the fast young men who fill the clubs and waste their time and money as I used to? The churches look after the poor, miserable creatures like those in the Rectangle, they make some effort to reach the workingmen, they have a large constituency among the average salary earning people, they send money and missionaries to the foreign heathen, but the fashionable, dissipated young men around town, the clubmen, are left out of all plans for reaching and Christianizing, and yet no class of people needs it more. I said to myself: 'I know these men, their good and bad qualities. I have been one of them. I am not fitted to reach the Rectangle people. I do not know how. But I think I could possibly reach some of these young men and boys who have money and time to spend.' So that is what I have been trying to do. When I asked, as you did, 'What would Jesus do?' that was my answer. It has been also my cross."

Rollin's voice was so low on the last sentence that Rachel had difficulty in hearing him above the noise around them, but she knew what he had said. She wanted to ask what his methods were, but she did not know just how to ask him. Her interest in his plans was larger than mere curiosity. Rollin Page was so different now from the fashionable young man who had asked her to be his wife that she could not help thinking of him and talking with him as if he were entirely a new acquaintance.

They had turned off the avenue and were going up the street to Rachel's home. It was the same street where Rollin had asked Rachel why she could not love him. They were both stricken by a sudden shyness as they went on. Rachel had not forgotten that day, and Rollin could not forget it. She finally broke a long silence by asking him what she had not found words for before.

"In your work for the clubmen, with your old acquaintances, what sort of reception do they give you? How do you approach them? What do they say?"

Rollin was silent when Rachel spoke. He answered after a moment.

"Oh, it depends on the man! A good many of them think I am a crank. I have kept my membership up and am in good standing in that way. I try to be wise and not provoke any unnecessary criticism, but you would be surprised to know how many of the men have responded to my appeal. I could hardly make you believe that only a few nights ago a dozen men became honestly and earnestly engaged in a conversation over religious questions. I have had the great joy of seeing some of the men give up bad habits and begin a new life. 'What would Jesus do?' I keep asking it. The answer comes slowly, for I am feeling my way along. One thing I have found out—the men are not fighting shy of me. I think that is a good sign. Another thing—I have actually interested some of them in the Rectangle work, and when it is started up they will give something to help make it more powerful, and, in addition to all the rest, I have found a way to save some of the young fellows from going to the bad in gambling."

Rollin spoke with enthusiasm. His face was transformed by his interest in the subject which had now become a part of his real life. Rachel again noted the strong, manly, healthful tone of his speech. With it all she knew was a deep, underlying seriousness which felt the burden of the cross even while carrying it with joy. The next time she spoke it was with a swift feeling of justice due to Rollin and his new life.

"Do you remember I reproached you once for not having any purpose worth living for?" she asked, while her beautiful face seemed to Rollin more beautiful than ever when he had won sufficient self control to look up. "I want to say I feel the need of saying, in justice to you now, that I honor you for your courage and your obedience to your promise. The life you are living now is a very noble one."

Rollin trembled. His agitation was greater than he could control. Rachel could not help seeing it. They walked along in silence. At last Rollin said: "I thank you. It has been more than I can tell to hear you say that." He looked into her face for one moment. She read his love for her in that look, but he did not speak.

When they separated, Rachel went into the house, and, sitting down in her room, she put her face in her hands and said to herself: "I am beginning to know what it means to be loved by a noble man. I shall love Rollin Page, after all. What am I saying? Rachel Winslow, have you forgotten"—

She rose and walked back and forth. She was deeply moved. Nevertheless it was evident to herself that her emotion was not that of regret or sorrow. Somehow a glad, new joy had come to her. She had entered another circle of experience, and later in the day she rejoiced with a very strong and sincere gladness that her Christian discipleship found room for this crisis in her feeling. It was indeed a part of it, for if she were beginning to love Rollin it was the Christian man who had won her heart. The other never would have moved her to this great change.

And Rollin as he went back treasured a hope that had been a stranger to him since Rachel had said no that day. In that hope he went on with his work as the days sped on, and at no time was he more successful in reaching and saving his old acquaintances than in the time that followed that chance meeting with Rachel Winslow.

The summer had gone, and Raymond was once more facing the rigor of her winter season. Virginia had been able to accomplish a part of her plan for "capturing the Rectangle," as she called it, but the building of houses in the field, the transforming of its bleak, bare aspect into an attractive park, all of which was included in her plan, was a work too large to be completed that fall after she had secured the property. But a million dollars in the hands of a person who really wants to do with it as Jesus would ought to accomplish wonders for humanity in a short time, and Henry Maxwell, going over to the scene of the new work one day after a noon hour with the shopmen, was amazed to see how much had been done outwardly.

Yet he walked home thoughtfully, and on his way he could not avoid the question of the continual problem thrust into his notice by the saloon. How much had been done for the Rectangle, after all? Even counting in Virginia's and Rachel's work and Mr. Gray's, where had it actually counted in any visible quantity? Of course he said to himself that the redemptive work begun and carried on by the Holy Spirit in his wonderful displays of power in the First church and in the tent meetings had had its effect on the life of Raymond, but as he walked past saloon after saloon and noticed the crowds going in and coming out of them, as he saw the wretched dens, as many as ever apparently, as he caught the brutality and squalor and open misery and degradation on countless faces of men and women and children, he sickened at the sight. He found himself asking how much cleansing could even a million dollars poured into this cesspool accomplish? Was not the living source of nearly all the human misery they sought to relieve untouched as long as these saloons did their deadly but legitimate work? What could even such unselfish Christian discipleship as Virginia's and Rachel's do to lessen the stream of vice so long as the great spring of vice and crime flowed as deep and strong as ever? Was it not a practical waste of beautiful lives for these young women to throw themselves into this earthly hell when for every soul rescued by their sacrifice the saloon made two more that needed rescue?

He could not escape the question. It was the same that Virginia had put to Rachel in her statement that, in her opinion, nothing really would ever be done until the saloon was taken out of the Rectangle. Henry Maxwell went back to his parish work that afternoon with added convictions on the license business.

But, if the saloon were a factor in the problem of the life of Raymond, no less were the First church and its little company of disciples who had pledged themselves to do as Jesus would do. Henry Maxwell, standing at the very center of the movement, was not in a position to judge of its power as some one from the outside might have done, but Raymond itself felt the touch of this new discipleship and was changed in very many ways, not knowing all the reasons for the change.

The winter had gone, and the year was ended, the year which Henry Maxwell had fixed as the time during which the pledge should be kept to do as Jesus would do. Sunday, the anniversary of that one a year ago, was in many ways the most remarkable day the First church ever knew. It was more important than the disciples in the First church realized. The year had made history so fast and so serious that the people were not yet able to grasp its significance, and the day itself, which marked the completion of a whole year of such discipleship, was characterized by such revelations and confessions that the immediate actors in the events themselves could not understand the value of what had been done or the relation of their trial to the rest of the churches and cities in the country.

It happened that the week before that anniversary Sunday the Rev. Calvin Bruce, D. D., of the Nazareth Avenue church, Chicago, was in Raymond, where he had come on a visit to some old friends and incidentally to see his old seminary classmate, Henry Maxwell. He was present at the First church and was an exceedingly attentive and interested spectator. His account of events in Raymond, and especially of that Sunday, may throw more light on the entire situation than any description or record from other sources. Dr. Bruce's statement is therefore here given.

[Letter from Rev. Calvin Bruce, D. D., of the Nazareth Avenue church, Chicago, to Rev. Philip S. Caxton, D. D., New York city.]

"MY DEAR CAXTON—It is late Sunday night, but I am so intensely awake and so overflowing with what I have seen and heard that I feel driven to write you now some account of the situation in Raymond as I have been studying it and as it has apparently come to a climax today. So this is my only excuse for writing so extended a letter at this time.

"You remember Henry Maxwell in the seminary. I think you said the last time I visited you in New York that you had not seen him since we graduated. He was a refined, scholarly fellow, you remember, and when he was called to the First church of Raymond within a year after leaving the seminary I said to my wife, 'Raymond has made a good choice. Maxwell will satisfy them as a sermonizer.' He has been here 11 years, and I understand that up to a year ago he had gone on in the regular course of the ministry, giving good satisfaction and drawing a good congregation to his morning preaching service. His church was counted the largest, most wealthy church in Raymond. All the best people attended it, and most of them belonged. The quartet choir was famous for its music, especially for its soprano, Miss Winslow, of whom I shall have more to say, and, on the whole, as I understand the fact, Maxwell was in a comfortable berth, with a very good salary, pleasant surroundings, not a very exacting parish of refined, rich, respectable people, such a church and parish as nearly all the young men in the seminary in our time looked forward to as very desirable.

"But a year ago today Maxwell came into his church on Sunday morning and at the close of his service made the astounding proposition that the members of his church volunteer for a year not to do anything without first asking the question, 'What would Jesus do?' and, after answering it, to do what in their honest judgment he would do, regardless of what the result might be to them.

"The effect of this proposition as it has been met and obeyed by a number of the members of the First church of Raymond has been so remarkable that, as you know, the attention of the whole country has been directed to the movement. I call it a 'movement' because from the action taken today it seems probable that what has been tried here in the First church in Raymond will reach out into the other churches and cause a revolution in church methods, but more especially in a new definition of Christian discipleship.

"In the first place, Maxwell tells me he was astonished at the response made to his proposition. Some of the most prominent members in the church made the promise to do as Jesus would. Among them were Edward Norman, the editor of The Daily News, which has made such a sensation in the newspaper world; Milton Wright, one of the leading merchants in Raymond; Alexander Powers, whose action in the matter of the railroads against the interstate commerce laws made such a stir about a year ago; Miss Page, one of Raymond's leading society heiresses, who has lately dedicated her entire fortune, as I understand, to the Christian daily paper and the work of reform in the slum district known as the Rectangle, and Miss Winslow, whose reputation as a singer is now national, but who, in obedience to what she has decided to be Jesus' probable action, has devoted her talent to volunteer work among the girls and women who make up a large part of the city's worst and most abandoned population.

"In addition to these well known people has been a gradually increasing number of Christians from the First church and lately from other churches in Raymond. A large proportion of these volunteers who pledge themselves to do as Jesus would comes from the Endeavor societies. The young people say that they have already embodied in their society pledge the same principle in the words, 'I promise him that I will strive to do whatever he would have me do.' This is not exactly what is included in Maxwell's proposition, which is that the disciples shall try to do what Jesus would probably do in the disciples' place, but the result of an honest obedience to either pledge, he claims, will be practically the same, and he is not surprised that the largest numbers have joined the new discipleship from the Endeavor society.

"I am sure the first question you will ask is, 'What has been the result of this attempt, what has it accomplished, or how has it changed in any way the regular course of the church or the community?'

"You already know something from reports of Raymond that have gone over the country what the results have been, but one needs to come here and learn something of the changes in individual lives, and especially the change in the church life, to realize all that is meant by this following of Jesus' steps so literally. To tell all that would be to write a long story or series of stories. I am not in a position to do that, but I can give you some idea perhaps of what has happened here from what has been told me by my friends and Henry Maxwell himself.

"The result of the pledge upon the First church has been twofold—it has brought about a spirit of Christian fellowship which Maxwell tells me never before existed and which now impresses him as being very nearly what the Christian fellowship of the apostolic churches must have been, and it has divided the church into two distinct groups of members. Those who have not taken the pledge regard the others as foolishly literal in their attempts to imitate the example of Jesus.

"Some of them have drawn out of the church and no longer attend, or they have removed their membership entirely to other churches. Some are an internal element of strife, and I heard rumors of an attempt on their part to force Maxwell's resignation. I do not know that this element is very strong in the church. It has been held in check by a wonderful continuance of spiritual power, which dates from the first Sunday the pledge was taken a year ago, and also by the fact that so many of the most prominent members have been identified with the movement.

"The effect on Henry Maxwell is very marked. I heard him preach at our state association four years ago. He impressed me at the time as having considerable power in dramatic delivery, of which he himself was somewhat conscious. His sermon was well written and abounded in what the seminary students used to call 'fine passages.' The effect of it was what the average congregation would call pleasing. This morning I heard Maxwell preach again for the first time since then. I shall speak of that further on. He is not the same man. He gives me the impression of one who has passed through a crisis of revolution. He tells me this revolution is simply a new definition of Christian discipleship. He certainly has changed many of his old views. His attitude on the saloon question is radically opposite to the one he entertained a year ago, and in his entire thought of his ministry, his pulpit and parish work I find he has made a complete change. So far as I can understand, the idea that is moving him on now is the idea that the Christianity of our times must represent a more literal imitation of Jesus, and especially in the element of suffering. He quoted to me in the course of our conversation several times the verse from Peter, 'For hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow his steps,' and he seems filled with the conviction that what our churches need today more than anything else is this factor of suffering for Jesus in some form.

"I do not know that I agree with him altogether; but, my dear Caxton, it is certainly astonishing to note the results of this idea as they have impressed themselves upon this city and upon this church.

"You ask how about the results on the individuals who have made the pledge and honestly tried to be true to it. Those results are, as I have said, a part of individual history and cannot be told in detail. Some of them I can give you, so that you may see that this form of discipleship is not merely sentiment or fine posing for effect.

"For instance, take the case of Alexander Powers, who was superintendent of the machine shops of the L. and T. R. R. here. When he acted upon the evidence that incriminated the road, he lost his position, and, more than that, I learn from my friends here his family and social relations have become so changed that the family no longer appear in public. They have dropped out of the social circle where once they were so prominent. By the way, Caxton, I understand in this connection that the commission, for one reason and another, postponed action on this case, and it is now rumored that the L. and T. R. R. will pass into a receiver's hands very soon. The president of the road, who, according to the evidence submitted by Powers, was the principal offender, has resigned, and complications which have arisen since point to the receivership. Meanwhile the superintendent has gone back to his old work as a telegraph operator. I met him at the church yesterday. He impressed me as a man who had, like Maxwell, gone through a crisis in character. I could not help thinking of him as being good material for the church of the first century, when the disciples had all things in common.

"Or take the case of Mr. Norman, editor of The Daily News. He risked his entire fortune in obedience to what he believed was Jesus' probable action and revolutionized his entire conduct of the paper at the risk of a failure. I send you a copy of yesterday's paper. I want you to read it carefully. To my mind, it is one of the most interesting and remarkable papers ever printed in the United States. It is open to criticism, but what could any mere man attempt in this line that would be free from criticism? Take it all in all, it is so far above the ordinary conception of a daily paper that I am amazed at the result. He tells me that the paper is beginning to be read more and more by the Christian people of the city. He is very confident of its final success.

"Read his editorial on the money question; also the one on the coming election in Raymond, when the question of license will again be an issue. Both articles are of the best from this point of view. He says he never begins an editorial or, in fact, any part of his newspaper work without first asking, 'What would Jesus do?' The result is certainly apparent.

"Then there is Milton Wright, the merchant. He has, I am told, so revolutionized his business that no man is more beloved today in Raymond. His own clerks and employees have affection for him that is very touching. During the winter, while he was lying dangerously ill at his home, scores of clerks volunteered to watch or help in any possible way, and his return to his store was greeted with marked demonstrations. All this has been brought about by the element of personal love introduced into the business. This love is not mere words, but the business itself is carried on under a system of co-operation that is not a patronizing recognition of inferiors, but a real sharing in the entire business. Other men on the street look upon Milton Wright as odd. It is a fact, however, that while he has lost heavily in some directions he has increased his business and is today respected and honored as one of the best and most successful merchants in Raymond.

"And there is Miss Winslow. She has chosen to give her great talent to the poor and wretched of the city. Her plans include a musical institute where choruses and classes in vocal music shall be a feature. She is enthusiastic over her life work. In connection with her friend Miss Page she has planned a course in music which, if carried out, will certainly do much to lift up the lives of the people down there. I am not too old, my dear Caxton, to be interested in the romantic side of much that has also been tragic here in Raymond, and I must tell you that it is well understood there that Miss Winslow expects to be married this spring to a brother of Miss Page, who was once a society leader and clubman and who was converted in a tent where his wife that is to be took an active part in the service. I don't know all the details of this little romance, but I can imagine there is a little story wrapped up in it, and it would be interesting reading if we only knew it all.

"These are only a few illustrations of results in individual lives owing to obedience to the pledge. I meant to have spoken of President Marsh of Lincoln college. He is a graduate of my alma mater, and I knew him slightly when I was in the senior year. He has taken an active part in the recent municipal agitation, and his influence in the city is regarded as a very large factor in the coming election. He impressed me, as did all the other disciples in this movement, as having fought out some hard questions and as having taken up some real burdens that have caused and still do cause that suffering of which Henry Maxwell speaks, a suffering that does not eliminate but does appear to intensify a positive and practical joy.

"But I am prolonging this letter possibly to your weariness. I am unable to avoid the feeling of fascination which my entire stay here has increased. I want to tell you something of the meeting in the First church today.

"As I said, I heard Maxwell preach. At his earnest request I had preached for him the Sunday before, and this was the first time I had heard him since the association four years ago. His sermon this morning was as different from his sermon then as if it had been thought out and preached by some one living on another planet. I was profoundly touched. I believe I actually shed tears once. Others in the congregation were moved like myself. His text was 'What is that to thee? Follow thou me.' And it was a most unusually impressive appeal to the Christians of Raymond to obey Jesus' teachings and follow in his steps, regardless of what others might do. I cannot give you even the plan of the sermon. It would take too long. At the close of the service there was the usual after meeting that has become a regular feature of the First church. Into this meeting have come all those who made the pledge to do as Jesus would do, and the time is spent in mutual fellowship, confession, questions as to what Jesus would do in special cases and prayer that the one great guide of every disciple's conduct may be the Holy Spirit.

"Maxwell asked me to come into this meeting. Nothing in all my ministerial life, Caxton, has so moved me as that meeting. I never felt the Spirit's presence so powerfully. It was a meeting of reminiscences and of the most loving fellowship. I was irresistibly driven in thought back to the first years of Christianity. There was something about all this that was apostolic in its simplicity and Christ imitation.

"I asked questions. One that seemed to arouse more interest than any other was in regard to the extent of the Christian disciples' sacrifice of personal property. Henry Maxwell tells me that so far no one has interpreted the spirit of Jesus in such a way as to abandon his earthly possessions, give away all his wealth or in any literal way imitate the Christians of the order, for example, of St. Francis of Assisi. It was the unanimous consent, however, that if any disciple should feel that Jesus in his own particular case would do that there could be only one answer to the question. Maxwell frankly admitted that he was still, to a certain degree, uncertain as to Jesus' probable action when it came to the details of household living, the possession of wealth, the holding of certain luxuries. It is, however, evident that very many of these disciples have repeatedly carried their obedience to Jesus to the extreme limit, regardless of financial loss. There is no lack of courage or consistency at this point. It is also true that some of the business men who took the pledge have lost great sums of money in this imitation of Jesus, and very many have, like Alexander Powers, lost valuable positions owing to the impossibility of doing what they had been accustomed to do and at the same time doing what they felt Jesus would do in the same place. In connection with these cases it is pleasant to record the fact that many who have suffered in this way have at once been helped financially by those who still have means. In this respect I think it is true that these disciples have all things in common. Certainly such scenes as I witnessed at the First church at that after service this morning I never saw in my church or any other. I never dreamed that such Christian fellowship could exist in this age of the world. I am almost incredulous as to the witness of my own senses. I still seem to be asking myself if this is the close of the nineteenth century in America.

"But now, dear friend, I come to the real cause of the letter, the real heart of the whole question as the First church of Raymond has forced it upon me. Before the meeting closed today steps were taken to secure the co-operation of all other Christian disciples in this country. I think Henry Maxwell took this step after long deliberation. He said as much to me one day when I called upon him and we were discussing the effect of this movement upon the church in general.

" 'Why,' he said, 'suppose that the church membership generally in this country made this pledge and lived up to it. What a revolution it would cause in Christendom! But why not? Is it any more than the disciple ought to do? Has he followed Jesus unless he is willing to do this? Is the test of discipleship any less today than it was in Jesus' time?'

"I do not know all that preceded or followed his thought of what ought to be done outside of Raymond, but the idea crystallized today in a plan to secure the fellowship of all the Christians in America. The churches through their pastors will be asked to form disciple gatherings like the one in the First church. Volunteers will be called for in the great body of church members in the United States who will promise to do as Jesus would do. Maxwell spoke particularly of the result of such general action on the saloon question. He is terribly in earnest over this. He told me that there was no question in his mind that the saloon would be beaten in Raymond at the election now near at hand. If so, they could go on with some courage to do the redemptive work begun by the evangelist and now taken up by the disciples in his own church. If the saloon triumphs again, there will be a terrible and, as he thinks, unnecessary waste of Christian sacrifice. But, however we differ on that point, he has convinced his church that the time has come for a fellowship with other Christians. Surely, if the First church could work such changes in society and its surroundings, the church in general, if combining such fellowship, not of creed, but of conduct, ought to stir the entire nation to a higher life and a new conception of Christian following.

"This is a grand idea, Caxton, but right here is where I find myself hesitating. I do not deny that the Christian disciple ought to follow Christ's steps as closely as these here in Raymond have tried to do, but I cannot avoid asking what the result will be if I ask my church in Chicago to do it. I am writing this after feeling the solemn, profound touch of the Spirit's presence, and I confess to you, old friend, that I cannot call up in my church a dozen prominent business or professional men who would make this trial at the risk of all that they hold dear. Can you do any better in your church? What are we to say—that the church would not respond to the call, 'Come and suffer?' The actual results of the pledge as obeyed here in Raymond are enough to make any pastor tremble and at the same time long with yearning that they might occur in his own parish. Certainly, never have I seen a church so signally blessed by the Spirit as this one. But am I myself ready to take this pledge? I ask the question honestly, and I dread to face an honest answer. I know well enough that I would have to change very much in my life if I undertook to follow his steps so closely. I have called myself a Christian for many years. For the past ten years I have enjoyed a life that has had comparatively little suffering in it. I am—honestly I say it—living at a long distance from municipal problems and the life of the poor, the degraded and the abandoned. What would the obedience to this pledge demand of me? I hesitate to answer. My church is wealthy, full of well to do, satisfied people. The standard of their discipleship is, I am aware, not of a nature to respond to the call to suffering or personal loss. I say, 'I am aware.' I may be mistaken. I may have erred in not stirring their deeper life. Caxton, my friend, I have spoken my inmost thought to you. Shall I go back to my people next Sunday and stand up before them in my large city church and say, 'Let us follow Jesus closer; let us walk in his steps, where it will cost us something more than it is costing us now; let us pledge not to do anything without first asking, 'What would Jesus do?' If I should go before them with that message, it would be a strange and startling one to them. But why? Are we not really to follow him all the way? What is it to be a follower of Jesus? What does it mean to imitate him? What does it mean to walk in his steps?"

The Rev. Calvin Bruce, D. D., of the Nazareth Avenue church, Chicago, let his pen fall on the paper. He had come to the parting of the ways, and his question, he felt sure, was the question of many and many a man in the ministry and in the church. He went to his window and opened it. He was oppressed with the weight of his convictions, and he felt almost suffocated with the air of the room. He wanted to see the stars and feel the breath of the world.

The night was very still. The clock in the First church was striking midnight. As it finished a clear, strong voice down in the direction of the Rectangle came floating up to him as if borne on radiant pinions

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone
And all the world go free?
No! There's a cross for every one,
And there's a crown for me."

It was the voice of one of Gray's old converts, a night watchman at the packing house, who sometimes cheered his lonesome hours by a verse or two from some familiar hymn.

The Rev. Calvin Brace turned away from the window, and after a little hesitation he kneeled down. "What would Jesus do? What would Jesus do?" Never had he yielded himself so completely to the Spirit's searching revealing of Jesus. He was on his knees a long time. He rested and slept fitfully with many awakenings. He rose before it was clear dawn and threw open his window again. As the light in the east grew stronger he repeated to himself "What would Jesus do? What would he do? Shall I follow his steps?"

The sun rose and flooded the city with its power. When shall the dawn of a new discipleship usher in the conquering triumph of a closer walk with Jesus? When shall Christendom tread more closely the path he made?

It is the way the Master trod.
Shall not the servant tread it still?

With this question throbbing through his whole being the Rev Calvin Brace went back to Chicago and this great crisis of his Christian life in the ministry suddenly broke irresistibly upon him

CHAPTER IX.

Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

The Saturday matinee at the Auditorium in Chicago was just over, and the usual crowd was struggling to get to its carriages before any one else. The Auditorium attendant was shouting out the number of different carriages, and the carriage doors were slamming as the horses were driven rapidly to the curb, held there impatient by the drivers, who had shivered long in the raw east wind, and then let go to plunge for a few minutes into the river of vehicles that toiled under the elevated railway and finally went whirling off up the avenue.

"Now, then, 6241" shouted the Auditorium attendant. "Six hundred and twenty-four!" he repeated as the latter dashed up to the curb a splendid team of black horses attached to a carriage having the monogram "C. R. S." in gilt letters on the panel of the door.

Two girls stepped out of the crowd toward the carriage. The older one had entered and taken her seat, and the attendant was still holding the door open for the younger, who stood hesitating on the curb.

"Come, Felicia! What are you waiting for? I shall freeze to death!" called the voice from the carriage.

The girl outside of the carriage hastily unpinned a bunch of English violets from her dress and handed them to a small boy who was standing shivering on the edge of the sidewalk, almost under the horses' feet. He took them with a look of astonishment and a "Thank ye, lady!" and instantly buried a very grimy face in the bunch of perfume. The girl stepped into the carriage, the door shut with the insistent bang peculiar to well made carriages of this sort, and in a few moments the coachman was speeding the horses rapidly up one of the boulevards.

"You are always doing some queer thing or other, Felicia," said the older girl as the carriage whirled on past the great residences already brilliantly lighted.

"Am I? What have I done that is queer now, Rose?" asked the other, looking up suddenly and turning her head toward her sister.

"Oh, giving those violets to that boy. He looked as if he needed a good hot supper more than a bunch of violets. It's a wonder you didn't invite him home with us. I shouldn't have been surprised if you had. You are always doing such queer things, Felicia."

"Would it be queer to invite a boy like that to come to the house and get a hot supper?" Felicia asked the question softly and almost as if she were alone

"Queer isn't just the word, of course," replied Rose indifferently. "It would be what Miss Blunc calls entre—decidedly. Therefore you will please not invite him or others like him to hot suppers because I suggested it. Oh, dear! I'm awfully tired."

She yawned, and Felicia silently looked out of the window in the door.

"The concert was stupid, and the violinist was simply a bore. I don't see how you could sit so still through it all," Rose exclaimed, a little impatiently

"I liked the music," answered Felicia quietly.

"You like anything. I never saw a girl with so little critical taste."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Butter Prospects.

Looked at from almost any standpoint, it is a healthy situation. Stocks here are less than last year, exporters having taken out the surplus, and the condition of the country generally suggests an improved trade and higher range of values than we have been having for some years past. Other commodities are higher, and there is every reason to believe that butter will share in the improvement. The only dark cloud in the horizon is oleomargarine. It is expected that our state laws will give ample protection in New York city, but if the counterfeit article is sold so largely in the west and south as it was last winter the chances are that New York will have to take care of more than her share of the butter product of the country.—Produce Review.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Dec. 7.

A negro murderer was burned at the stake in Kentucky.

Ignace J. Paderewski, the pianist, and Mme. Paderewski have arrived at New York.

Emperor William expresses gatification with President McKinley's attitude toward Germany.

Reports from Costa Rica indicate that yellow fever has appeared in the interior of the country.

An earthquake was felt at several South Dakota points at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Another advance in crude petroleum has been made by the Standard Oil company, the Pennsylvania product being pushed up 3 cents to $1.64 a barrel.

A shipment of $1,500,000 American gold has arrived for the Costa Rican government. It is to be put into circulation when the change to gold standard goes into effect.

Friday, Dec. 8.

It is again currently reported that Wood will succeed Brooke in command of Cuban affairs.

The Republican leaders of the house have decided upon Dec. 18 as the date for the final vote on the financial bill.

General Dalton and staff have reached the front and are supposed to have completed arrangements to advance to the relief of Ladysmith.

The president has sent to the senate the names of 294 census supervisors appointed during the recess of congress, and also many army appointments and promotions heretofore announced.

Mrs. C. A. Boeling, mother-in-law of Rear Admiral Sampson, died at her home in Rochester, N. Y. She had been in feeble health for some time past and her death was not unexpected.

Saturday, Dec. 9.

Samuel Gompers is seriously ill at Washington, the result of a fall from a bicycle.

It is now believed Aguinaldo has reached Cavite province from the Northern portion of Luzon.

The Kentucky state election board has completed its canvass and finds Taylor's plurality on the face of the returns to be 2,382.

An explosion of gasoline in a Reading (Pa.) hosiery factory set fire to the building. Many of the employes were seriously injured by jumping, and at least two perished.

The postmaster general has issued an order announcing the reclassification of the department to provide for the registration of valuable letters, or first class matter, by letter carriers on their routes, in free delivery cities.

Monday, Dec. 11

Chicago defeated Wisconsin, 17 to 0, in Saturday's football game at Madison.

Charles R. Graves of Omaha, member of the Republican national committee, was murdered Sunday.

Gold coinage the past year was unprecedentedly large, according to the mint director's report.

The Union Reform party will put up a presidential ticket, with the initiative and referendum the sole plank.

A scheme is on foot to make Montreal the seaboard terminal for an all-water route for grain from the West.

It is announced that the Bull hotel, at Rochester, England, so much associated with the late Charles Dickens, is to be sold at auction during the present month. It contains a quantity of Dickens' furniture. One little sitting room is entirely furnished with things formerly used by the novelist.

Tuesday, Dec. 12.

Senator Morgan has introduced an anti-trust resolution.

The American Federation of Labor is in annual convention in Detroit.

Six Democrats, it is understood, will vote for the Republican financial bill in the house.

During the fiscal year just ended 49 men were killed through accidents in Montana mines, according to the annual report of the state mine inspector, John Byrne.

The Northern Pacific contemplates the erection of a warehouse at Tacoma which will be the largest on the Pacific coast. Plans are now being prepared for such a structure.

It has been practically decided that the holiday recess of congress will be from Thursday, Dec. 21, to Wednesday, Jan. 3. That day, however, there has been no formal action.

Commander E. P. Wood, U. S. N., died of typhoid fever at his residence in Washington, Monday morning. He was in command of the gunboat Petrel in the battle of Manila bay.

Wednesday, Dec. 13.

Canadian banks are withdrawing money from New York to loan in London.

St. Paul has secured the National Republican league convention, to be held in July.

A Chicago man has been arrested and has confessed having grown rich through silk swindling operations.

At Crown Point, Ind., Judge Gillette decided that a non-union workman, discharged at the behest of the union, had no redress in law.

President McKinley is expected to send a message to congress asking that a satisfactory form of government be provided for Porto Rico.

The president of the German reichstag upholds the right of that body to discuss the emperor's speeches. The ruling caused a great sensation.

A statement evidently issued by the Filipino junta at Hong Kong says General Lawton is missing and that the rebel "government" will be changed to a dictatorship.

Order to Show Cause on Filing Petition to Sell Land.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Attix, deceased.
On reading and filing the petition of Nathan P. Simon, administrator of said estate, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come to his hands, the debts that have been and how much remains undischarged, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, so far as the same can be ascertained and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead, of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value thereof, and the names, ages and residence of the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be also granted to sell a portion of said real estate; and it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, and that it is necessary to sell a part of the real estate for the payment of said debts and expenses to sell part of said real estate:
It is Therefore Ordered, That all persons interested in said estate, appear before this Court, on Friday the 5th day of January 1900,
at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in Crookston in said County, then and there to show cause if any there be why license should not be granted to said administrator to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, expenses and charges.
And it is Further Ordered, That this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.
Dated at Crookston, Minn. 5th day of December A. D. 1899.
By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

Final Proof.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., November 8, 1899.
Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver at the U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on
December 18, 1899.
Viz: Anton M. Larson, H. E. 6682 for the W½, section 34 Township 149, Range 47.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:
Ole F. Stolte, Charles Thronson, Ole Samuson, all of Crookston, and Thor Thronson, of Eldred.
SYLVESTER PETERSON,
[46-52] Register

—FOR SALE, two quarter section farms near Mentor, on easy terms. M. R. Waters 502 Guaranty Loan Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 24, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of Berth C. Jorgenson, deceased.
On reading and consideration on the estate of Berth C. Jorgenson, deceased, late of the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, being granted to Z. J. Ide.
It is Ordered, That six months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the probate Court of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.
It is further ordered, That the 25th day of May, 1900
at ten o'clock a. m. at a special term of said Probate Court, to be held at the Probate Office in Crookston in said County, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said Probate Court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.
And it is Further Ordered, That notice of said hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested, in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.
Dated at Crookston this 24th day of November, 1899.
By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
[46-52] Judge of Probate.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 15, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of Hanken B. Nesthus, deceased.
Letters of administration on the estate of Hanken B. Nesthus, deceased, late of the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, being granted to Ole E. Hagen.
It is Ordered, That six months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the probate court of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.
It is Further Ordered, That the
22nd day of May, 1900
at ten o'clock a. m. at a special term of said Probate Court, to be held at the probate office in Crookston in said county, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said probate court will examine and adjust such claims and demands.
And it is Further Ordered, That notice of said hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested, in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.
Dated at Crookston this 15th day of November, 1899.
By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
[46-52] Judge of Probate.

Order for Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of Mary Straka, deceased.
On reading and filing the petition of Martin Kaszka, of the County of Polk, representing, that one Ondrej, that Mary Straka, late of the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 6th day of November A. D. 1899, at the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of said County at the time of her death, leaving property within this County, and within the state, and that said petitioner is another of the said deceased and praying the appointment of said estate be to John Steran granted.
It is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the 29th day of December A. D. 1899,
at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the City of Crookston in said County.
And it is Further Ordered, That notice of said hearing be given to all persons interested in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.
Dated at Crookston, Minn. the 7th day of December A. D. 1899.
By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
A. A. MILLER, Judge of Probate.
Attorney for Estate.

—If you contemplate purchasing a piano, organ, or any other musical instrument, write Stone's Music Houses Fargo, N. D., for prices before buying. tf

Order for Hearing Proof of Foreign Will.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of George P. Glover, deceased.
Whereas, Certain writing purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the Last Will and Testament of George P. Glover, late of Allegheny County, Penn., deceased, and the probate thereof and the letters of the Register of Wills of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, granted thereon, have been filed:
And Whereas, Josephine M. Glover has filed therewith her petition, representing among other things that said George P. Glover lately died in said County of Allegheny testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, and praying that said Will and the probate thereof and the said instrument may be duly admitted to probate, and that letters of administration with will annexed be to Jay C. Foote issued thereon:
It is ordered, That the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this Court, at the Probate Office in said County on Friday, the 5th day of January, A. D., 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the prayer of said petition.
And it is further ordered, That notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.
Dated at Crookston, Minn., the 7th day of December, A. D., 1899.
By the Court.
OLE E. HAGEN,
3-53 Judge of Probate.

Aug. Miller & Co.,

Tanners. Fur Dressers and Hide Dealers.....

We make a specialty of Tanning Harness and Shoe Leather, Dressing Beef and Horse Hides for Coats and Robes, also Sheep Pelts and all kinds of Furs for Customers. First class work Guaranteed.

All kinds of Hides and Furs Wanted.

Crookston, Minn.

LION COFFEE

Used in Millions of Homes!
Accept no substitute
Insist on LION COFFEE, in 1 lb. pkgs.

Best Coffee for the Money!
Try LION COFFEE and you will never use any other. It is absolutely pure Coffee and nothing but Coffee.

These articles mailed FREE in exchange for lion heads cut from front of 1 lb. LION COFFEE pkgs.

Gold Collar Button.
Mailed free for 5 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp. Made of solid gold plate, with picture of Liberty's head; patriotic motto for ladies and gentlemen; this stamp is handsomely popular.

Daisy Neck-Pin.
Genuine Hard-Enamel and Gold.
For 10 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. The Illustration is only two-thirds actual size. Color a delicate pink, with petals outlining and gold trimmings. Best enamel finish, stylish and durable.

"The Lion's Bride."
Mailed free for 12 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp. An unusually interesting book, the length of an ordinary novel. Contains initial, Colonial Dame, It is founded on Chivalric Days. "The Lion's Bride." The story is interesting, and we could tell you about it, but then some feeler, mentioning copy of the yarn and telling all about it. Shh, there's hints.

"Dorothy and Her Friends."
A bright, cheery picture.
For 8 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.
A bright, cheery picture, representing a little girl playing with her chickens and kittens. The pen-handwriting is in black and white, and covers about 16x20 inches.
Or if 10 lion heads and 2c. stamp are sent we will send a finer copy for hanging.

STRENGTH, PURITY AND FLAVOR

Stylish Belt-Buckle.
Handsomely gold-plated, with fine engraving and set with ruby colored jewel in the center. This will be welcomed for "dressed-up" occasions by the ladies who like to wear different colored sashes. The gold-plate is guaranteed with ray of them given for 20 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Box of Colored Crayons.
For 10 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.
Five wax crayons, in seven different colors, accompanied by eight new fine pictures for coloring. Each crayon is wrapped in paper, to prevent soiling your hands.

Mantel Clock.
By express, prepaid, for 110 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.
This is a handsomely enameled black gilt, metal clock, 10 inches high. A beauty and good timekeeper.

Alarm Clock.
Sent by express, prepaid, for 80 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. When ordering either clock, please answer nearest Express Office. If there is no express office located in your town.

Ladies' Apron.
Made of good quality linen, with alternate revering and tucks; band across bottom, and is neatly gathered at waist. A very pretty garment for child size, 32x24 inches.
Given for 20 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Ladies' Scissors.
Length, five inches, suitable for cutting, trimming and general household use. Given for 12 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

Child's Drawing Book.
A collection of nice outline pictures for children to color, with blank spaces between the pictures on which to draw. Once the pictures beneath, thus affording a pleasing task for the little one's idle hand and eye. Time during which the box of crayons on very well together. There are six different kinds, and each drawing book requires 6 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Razor.
Given for 35 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. A first class razor, made of best English steel, and extra bulbous ground.

Rubber Dressing Comb.
For 10 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Length, 7 inches, full size and neatly finished. Appropriate for a holiday dressing case or for use in the household.

Fruit Picture.
Size, 16x24 inches. Given for 8 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

50-Foot Clothes Line.
Given for 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Made of closely twisted cotton threads, strong, and will give the best of satisfaction.

Naval Box Kite.
See it Fly!
The cele-brated box kite now so popular. Thirty inches long and when neatly folded, but can quickly be spread to fly. Every American boy wants one, and this is the premium he is interested in.
Mailed free for 40 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp.

Game "India."
Similar to "Pastimes," which this house has already given away by the thousand, but better in many respects. Has a map of India in the centre, with a compass to each corner. Is a game for the whole family, and will never tire of playing. Given for 20 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Every time you buy a pound package of LION COFFEE you have bought something else, too. Don't overlook it! You have bought a certain portion of some article to be selected by you from our new Premium Lists!

THE ABOVE ARE ONLY A FEW OF THE LION COFFEE PREMIUMS. Another list will shortly appear in this paper! Don't miss it! The grandest list of premiums ever offered!

You always know LION COFFEE by the wrapper. It is a sealed package, with the lion's head in front. It is absolutely pure if the package is unbroken. LION COFFEE is roasted the day it leaves the factory.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.
When writing for premiums send your letter in the same envelope or package with the lion heads. If more than 14 lion heads are sent, you can save postage by trimming down the margin. Ask your grocer for large illustrated premium list. Address all letters to the WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

AROUND THE COUNTRY

Weekly Reports From the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

SOUTH CROOKSTON.

S. W. Vance has purchased one of L. Rivard's houses here.

C. A. Myers is selling apples cheaper than any merchant in the city.

Mrs. B. J. McLaren has been laid up with an attack of la grippe, but is able to be around again.

Mr. Smith has been making a change in his restaurant. It is now more homelike for his boarders.

Miss Cornelia Smunk is quite ill with a severe attack of rheumatism. Dr. Dunlop was the attending physician.

T. S. Hutchens and family have returned from St. Vincent where they have been visiting for the past two months.

Mrs. Lavalley has sold her property here to Mr. LeDuc and will leave shortly for the east where they will make their home in the future.

H. Sizer is able to be out again after being confined to his bed for a week with a sprained ankle. Harvey has had bad luck lately on the road.

H. R. Phillips came in and spent Sunday at home, returning Monday to Mr. Fuller's where he is running a hay press. Harry is a wonder and is never idle.

G. W. Hanks has a very hard cold, can hardly speak above a whisper. We hope he will soon be better. G. W. is a favorite among us all and we miss his voice very much.

Mr. Stotlar, our old operator, has returned from Minot to take charge of the office here and Mr. Lamay who had charge during his absence has gone to Devils Lake. We are glad to welcome Mr. Stotlar back. He is a jolly, good boy.

Last Friday Joe Venn's horse became frightened, and with Mrs. Venn and Mrs. Roy in the buggy, ran away, throwing the two ladies out, hurting both quite severely and smashing the buggy to atoms. They called Dr Farley to dress the wounds and both ladies are improving.

KITTSON.

Messrs. Robert Rosa and Ingheam each shipped a car of baled hay last week.

Mr. Larrere killed a fine two-year-old steer last week which he is selling out in quarters.

T. Samson and daughter, Bertha, were up and spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Erwin last Friday.

Charlie, Mr. Craft's hired man, went to Red Lake Falls Tuesday to look at some land which is offered very cheap.

Mr. DeMars of Minneapolis came to Kittson last week from North Dakota to get the gasoline engine in running order at the elevator.

Mr. Rosa has finished his building which he was putting up on his farm and will soon be moving into town for the rest of the winter.

ULEN.

Hans Mobeek was in Moorhead last Tuesday.

Dr. Gilmore called on professional business Monday.

G. C. Stebbins spent Thursday in Detroit on business.

Peter and Freddie Knutson were up from Hawley Monday.

Casper Martinsen of Lake Park called on friends here Monday.

S. Asleson from Spring Grove, Minn., is visiting with friends here this week.

Dr. Prosdug spent Friday at the cheese factory, putting in a switch for the Lake Park Telephone Co. of which he is a large share holder.

DUGDALE.

Camp & Rickey have a good thing and they are pushing it along.

A. C. Pike thinks he is the warmest baby in the bunch because he is sporting a pair of five dollar shoes.

Herman Camp makes a first class deputy. He is so bad he is afraid of himself, especially when there are any tramps around.

Messrs. Camp & Rickey, hardware merchants of Dugdale, are going to give a grand dance in their new building Friday night, Dec. 8.

Mr. Herman, recently employed as assistant bottle washer and all around man at the Dugdale, is now employed transporting travelers to and from the neighboring towns.

M. P. Cuthbertson of Dugdale has a scheme on hand and is trying to convince the people of Dugdale of their opportunity to earn a five dollar pair of shoes for twenty-five cents.

Mr. Johnson was called out Thursday morning to see the fight in front of the postoffice. On inquiry as to what the fight was he was told some fellow had licked a postage stamp.

The Great Northern signal tower on the Northern Pacific crossing at Tilden is nearly completed and it will be a matter of but a short time when Prof. A. C. Pike will be assigned the most elevated position.

GARY.

Christmas is coming soon.

T. Rishoff, of Strand, was a Gary visitor Tuesday last.

Frick Gunderson, of Bear Park, was in town Tuesday.

Miss Laura Mohn, of Waukon, is working at Hotel Dewey.

Our school superintendent Miss Bradley was in town Monday.

Miss Laura Mohn, of Sundal, left for Grand Forks last Thursday.

A lot of new furniture just arrived at Ole E. Assen's. Call and see him.

Grasberg Bros. harness shop is finished and will be ready for business soon.

Gary has made an improvement with about eighteen new buildings this summer.

John Boyer made a flying trip to Audubon last Saturday returning Tuesday.

Jacob Milsten was in town during the first part of the week looking after some business affairs.

Clarence Natwick made a flying trip out west last Sunday. So did H. J. V. When they returned we don't know.

G. E. Pindsen, our hardware merchant, and Tom Erickson, of Burr Oak, Iowa, went to Pertile for a visit.

The plasterers arrived here Tuesday to complete the bank which will be open for business about the first part of the new year.

A. G. Runden finished his successful carpenting work last Friday for this season. Mr. Runden is a first class man in that line and is doing well.

John Thavaldson, who has been staying with Overgaard, our livery man, for the last year, took a couple of weeks vacation. We understand John has accepted the position again for the coming year.

About two weeks ago Andrew T. Lee, a farmer living three miles west of here, lost his house by fire. The fire was cause by a lamp being tipped over and exploding. Nearly all the household goods were saved.

ANGUS.

Fred Flanders was in town on Tuesday.

L. J. Lake spent Tuesday night in Crookston.

Collie Keeley, of Euclid, was in town on Tuesday.

G. Evans and wife spent Thursday in Crookston.

Harry and Ed. Stevens spent Wednesday at home.

J. F. Montgomery spent Monday night in Crookston.

Louis Watten was down from Warren on Saturday night.

J. F. Montgomery drove to South Euclid on Thursday on business.

William Stevens spent Thursday with his brother Ed in Crookston.

W. L. Davies passed through town on Thursday enroute home from Argyle.

George Barnard, of Warren, was in town Wednesday selling oil for the Garland Oil company.

Miss Cosy McAvoy returned to her home in Crookston on Tuesday after a week's visit to her sister.

BELTRAMI.

Dr. James' right hand man was in town Saturday looking after those round fellows that soon fill the pocket.

W. J. Hermond from Fargo was in town on Wednesday looking after the interest of the Dowagia Drill Company.

F. O. Hilstrom, general agent for the Deering Harvester Co., made the boys a call on his way from Pertile to Ada.

John Torgerson, our hardware merchant, is doing a lively business in his line, especially coal, wood and stoves.

Mrs. Qilke of Lockhart was in town Saturday calling on friends and doing some Christmas shopping at Johnson & Ellwoods.

Wm. Langhman from Kansas City was in town on Friday calling on his old friends and looking after the Lightning Hay Press business.

Mrs. J. O. D. Madland and daughter from Ashley, Minn., Joseph Holt of Ashley and Miss Gunderson of Crookston, spent two days visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Torgerson.

The new firm of Hill & Ogard are proposing to put in waterworks in town. Laying the mains will be commenced at an early date. It will fill a long felt want of this place and will be a safeguard against fire as well as make it very handy for each family to get water.

A church social was held at the home of Mrs. J. J. Carey on Thursday afternoon and all present had a pleasant, social time. Mrs. F. B. Dykman and her sister, Miss Williams, were among the happy party and were highly entertained in the evening by the Ladies' Zobo Band which is the talk and life of the town.

ADA.

Mrs. C. J. Lofgren entertained Thursday evening.

Ray Ahlers' new residence is about ready for occupancy.

Senator Myran spent Sunday and Monday in the Twin Cities.

Frank Hopkins has moved into his new residence on the east side.

Dr. Meighen, of Twin Valley, greeted Ada friends Saturday.

The improvements on A. C. Gerber's residence are about completed.

Mrs. C. J. Ward entertained several lady friends Saturday evening.

Jim Douglas, of Hendrum, transacted business in Ada during court week.

Ada business men are talking electric lights pretty strong. They are on the right track.

The Junior League of the M. E church gave an interesting entertainment Friday evening.

Charles John and Charles Stetten, of Crookston, attended the club dance given here Friday evening.

Under the new charter, Ada's next village election will take place in March instead of April as formerly.

Ed Desehesne and Miss Sadie Molan were married at Crookston Tuesday. Congratulations are in order.

The Ladies Aid of Rev. Krogstads' church held their annual fair and supper at Court House hall Saturday evening.

Bosworth Bros. have moved their large barn from the fair grounds to the lot just north of the Christ. Weidner blacksmith shop.

D. C. Lightbourn has been elected president of the fair association with Elmore Jenkins vice president and Julius Prigge secretary.

Joe Evans, Twin Valley's taxidermist, brought over a wagon load of curios Saturday for Julius Pleth of the John Grove Land company. Mr. Pleth, with this last addition, has one of the finest collections of birds and animals in this part of the state.

Court adjourned Thursday and the most interesting case, that of the Hegne-Hendrum ditch, was decided in favor of the ditch. People in general are very much pleased over the result of the first battle, though we are informed that an appeal will be taken and the good work delayed as long as money can play the game.

GRAND FORKS.

C. R. Elgus left for Mayville Monday night.

W. C. Andrews was slightly improved Monday.

Capt. John F. Brandt left for the Twin Cities Monday evening.

E. Arneson drove to the farm of Ole Bang Monday on business.

C. U. Webster Jr. and father came in from Fisher Monday on business.

N. D. Campbell, of West Superior, is the guest of Conductor J. E. Nelson.

Prof. Hall went to Northwood Monday to take charge of his dancing class.

Miss Lizzie Coulter left on the Flyer Tuesday morning for the Twin Cities.

J. D. Bacon and wife left Monday night for a brief visit with relatives in Iowa.

Ed. Florence and wife, of Northcote, Minn., are visiting at the home of Dr. Davidson.

David Gorman and S. A. McCanna were in from McCanna on court business Monday.

Officer Will Doty went to Crookston Tuesday morning to testify before the grand jury in the Dorsey case.

The Neills played to a packed house Monday evening and each part was well and artistically taken.

Jessie McVesty returned Monday night to her home in Mallory after a brief visit with friends in the city.

James Murray, one of the Herald's linotype operators, left Monday night for a visit at Seaforth, Ont.

Capt. A. C. Rhinehart left for Crookston Monday night, where he will appear as a witness in a divorce case.

W. W. McCurdy is in Crookston, where he is busy getting several branch telephone lines properly rounded up.

J. B. Sprague, formerly of Forest River, now of Bemidji, is registered at the Griggs House and renewing old acquaintances.

Tom McCoy and Billy Hanrahan returned Monday night from a trip to the Bottineau country, where they both filed on claims.

Deputy Sheriff Losey was over from Crookston between trains Monday night to subpœna some of the witnesses in the Dorsey case.

Lost

A large Newfoundland dog, named Predro. Finder will return the dog to A. Chabot at the New York Store.

Storm Sash. Storm Sash.

We have a complete stock—and our prices are right. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company.

TWIN VALLEY.

A. O. Waller is around again after his sick spell.

John Ryding, of Bemidji, was here on business last Tuesday.

Mrs. Sather, of Ulen, is visiting with Mrs. Dale this week.

Miss Estenson, of Gary, spent last Thursday visiting with Miss Dale.

Mrs. P. E. Aamoth, of Faith, is visiting with her sister Mrs. Dahl this week.

Miss Noreson, of Waukon, visited with friends here last Sunday and Monday.

I. H. Aamoth bought S.B. Thorpe's livery barn last Saturday. The consideration was $1,800.

C. P. Waller has been around looking up the finneiul standing of some of his friends this week.

Mrs. Evert Halvorson, of Valley City, N. D., is visiting with his brothers Hans and Julius this week.

Rev. Dale and R. Syvertson went to Ada to close a deal on a quarter section of land last Monday.

A number of the common schools in the eastern part of the county are closed on account of diphtheria.

Rev. Pederson, of Illinois, invested $2,000 in a quarter section of land in the town of Waukon while he was here.

Ole Stangeland entertained the parson and a number of friends Sunday evening in honor of his son Paul who was confirmed that morning.

Miss Ada Asker was very agreeably surprised last Thursday evening by the Syuod congregational who handed her a purse of $12.50 for playing in the church.

Mrs. M. E. Dahl entertained a number of the young folks last Thursday evening in honor of her neice, Miss Aamoth, who had completed her twentieth year.

FELTON.

Jas. H. Lang visited at home a few days last week.

Geo. Seifert visited out in the country last Sunday.

Wadly Shurey drove over from Twin Valley Sunday.

A. B. Klevgaard received a beautiful show case last week.

F. M. Byerly returned from Devils Lake Saturday morning.

E. F. Murphy and D. Dempsy are courting in Moorhead this week.

G. W. Gardner of Duluth looked after his business interests here Tuesday.

H. Hogelton, the man with the long hair, was over from Georgetown last week.

Rev. G. W. Rowson of Fargo held services in the school house last Sunday evening.

M. T. Dahlquist is visiting with friends and relatives in Forest City, Iowa, this week.

F. M. Byerly has accepted a position as cashier for the Great Northern at Havre, Montana.

At the recent meeting of the town board Geo. Seifert was appointed justice of the peace and Otto Dahl for town clerk, to fill vacancies.

BAGLEY.

P. H. Pederson is on the sick list this week.

Ole G. Lee and S. G. Lee are going to put up a sawmill this winter in this vicinity.

Miss Nellie Brewster, of Fisher, is spending the week visiting with her sister Mrs. A. R. Butler.

The young people of this place are enjoying themselves skating on Sundy lake these moonlight evenings.

A. J. McArty is at Shevlin this week doing a job of painting and paper hanging for Dr. F. A. Blakeslee.

A special election will be held on the 18th of this month for the election of a mayor and a justice of peace.

The Big Four Specialty company had a show at the hall Friday night. A social dance concluded the affair.

A Christmas tree and entertainment will be given by the ladies of the Lanstad Lutheran church on Christmas eve.

A mass meeting began at the hall yesterday noon and will continue till today noon. A large attendance is expected.

S. G. Lee and Al. Langaard left last Tuesday for Grand Forks where they are going to buy an engine for the new sawmill.

Ketil Leer, the celebrated violinist of this state, gave a concert at the city hall Saturday night to a large audience who enjoyed having him play his old Norwegian tunes.

The ladies of the Congregational church are going to give an entertainment and a basket social at the city hall on Friday night Dec. 15. Don't forget to be there and have a good time.

R. B. Rogers, of Minneapolis, came here last week to take charge of Hotel Northern. Mrs. Rogers is expected to arrive sometime this week. The above parties are recommended hotel people and we hope to see them make a success of it in our new town.

ROLETTE.

J. L. Lusian returned to Crookston Monday.

The section men went to Ada Tuesday to help clear up a wreck at that place.

G. W. Roberts, manager of the big Erskine farm, went to Crookston Monday.

August Maass is selling lots of goods these days, if the price of wheat is way down.

W. J. Hilligoss was appraising Great Northern railway land east of here the past week.

Harry Gands has left the farm and expects to have his name on Jim Hill's pay roll before many months go by.

GENTILLY.

H. T. Gendron was in town on business Tuesday.

Mrs. Mary Haven is visiting Mrs. E. Little at Gentilly.

Many lumbermen are coming home owing to soft weather.

Arthur Benoit and family are much better, after a long illness of typhoid fever.

Miss Florence Columbus of Badger returned home Monday after paying a short visit to her friends at Gentilly.

James Flun and son, Walter, are still hauling stone to town. Their contract of 50 tons is nearly complete.

A young lass came to the home of Mrs. David Corban Thursday morning. The young visitor came with the intention of staying.

—Lost. A Gordon Setter dog. Finder return to W. E. Row.

LENGBY.

Mr. Fogelberg, of Fosston, paid us a visit on Thursday.

Miss Gunda Hinden died at the home of her parents, Dec. 7.

We advise our friends to subscribe for the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL.

An addition is being made to the Lindell House in the Lengby grove.

John Rise, of Tiskle, is shaking hands with Lengby friends today.

Mrs. Hinden and her son, Henry, came in on the passenger from Fosston Friday.

A. J. Saterstrom went to Ebro, Thursday looking after their wood business at that place.

Miss Lena Olson, of Fosston, a sister to Mrs. Nelson was visiting here between trains on Sunday.

Pat Glynn, who has resigned as section foreman, left Saturday for Solway. His successor arrived on Thursday.

Mrs. Dove, widow of the late John Dove, returned on Friday from a pleasant visit with relatives and friends Iown.

Work has begun on the Norwegian Synod church. The members had teams at work Monday hauling stone for the foundation.

Nils Olson has moved his engine to a place near Lengby, where he will assist W. Hillard in sawing lumber. The mill is expected to start next week.

John Newton leaves next week with his family for a well earned holiday in the east. They go to Elkwood City, Pennsylvania, Mr. Newton's old home, and will remain away three months.

Spend the Holidays at Home

$40 Canadian excursion via Northern Pacific

Canadian Excursion

Tickets will be sold by the Northern Pacific from December 4 to December 31 inclusive, to principal points in.....

Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia.

Good for three months from date of sale, with liberal stop-over privileges. Limit will be extended upon payment of reasonable additional sums. Round trip tickets will be sold to points as far east as Montreal for $40.00, and at correspondingly low rates to points east of Montreal in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Call on agents of the Northern Pacific Ry., for detailed information.

CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. & T. A.

STONE'S Mammoth Music House.

The only exclusive Music House in the West.

Manufacturers and Importers of Musical Merchandise.

Most complete stock of Pianos, Organs, Brass and String Instruments, Trimmings, Music and Music Books west of Chicago. Violins, Mandolins, Guitars and Banjos from $2.95 to $125. Sheet Music at 50 per cent off regular price. Pianos from $150 to $1000. Organs from $20 to $650. Cash or easy payments. Old instruments taken as part payment.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

STONE'S MAMMOTH MUSIC HOUSE, 110-112 Broadway. FARGO, N. D.

STORM SASH STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

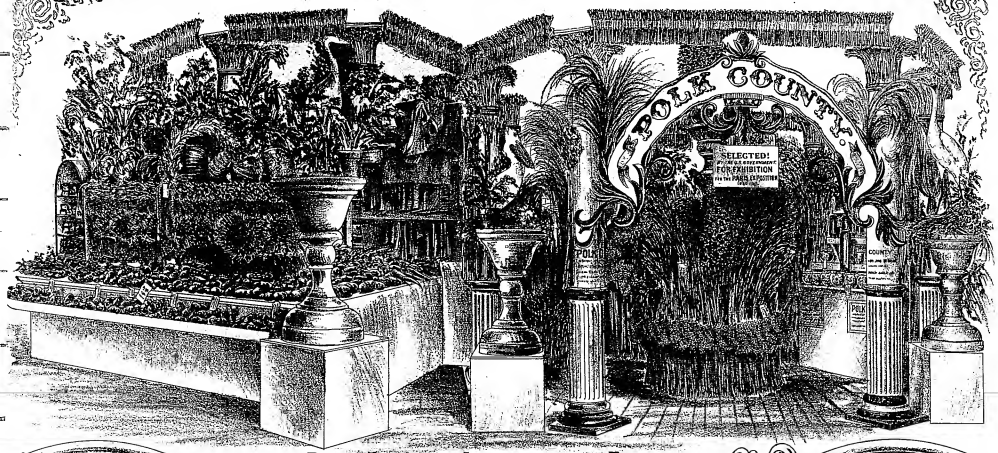
...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

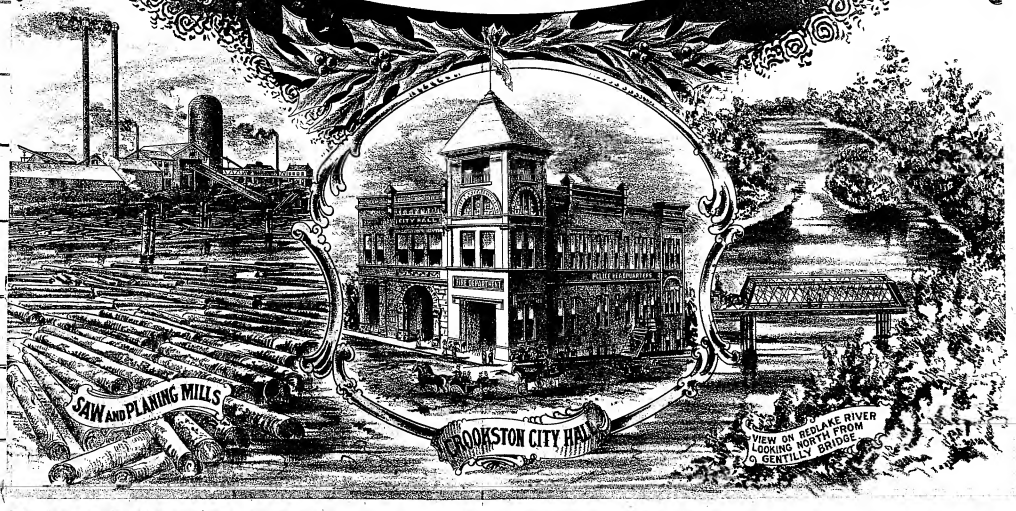
Polk County Journal.

VOL. XXIII. CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1899. NO. 28.

STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY



POLK COUNTY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT AT MINNESOTA STATE FAIR 1899.



DEFECTIVE PAGE | COLORED INK

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

A Volunteer Company of 38 Members, who Furnish Protection to Crookston Property.

FIRST ORGANIZED 20 YEARS AGO

Quarters in City Hall — Firemen's Dances Favorites—Team and Hose Wagon Needed.

The Crookston Fire department is an organization of which the city is well proud and to which the citizens are greatly indebted. It is a volunteer company, composed at present of thirty-eight members in good standing, the quota beyond which they may not go being forty. Most of them are young men, and for celerity in running, skill in coupling hose, reckless ness in climbing ladders, during to seeking the burning places of fire and proficiency in quenching the flames they cannot be beaten by any like organization.

Fire is one of the most destructive elements with which man has to contend but. thanks to the activity and efficiency of our fire laddies, Crookston has suffered comparatively little from this redhanded monster. When an alarm is given sounded those protectors of the city's property may be seen dashing out of their various places of business with speeding toward the city hall where is kept all their apparatus, and headed in the same direction as full gallop may also be seen numerous teams. Soon "the fire king's wild battalions" and Tom Morris' protegees, armed cap-a-pie with rubber, are ranging desperate battle with each other, and unless the battalions are already in complete possession of the fort, so to speak, one may depend that victory will rest with their opponents. But it has taken the firemen many years to attain to their present superb state and much hard and even dangerous practice has been undergone that they might fit themselves to contend successfully with the ruthless destroyer.

TOM MORRIS.

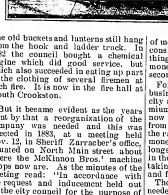
It was in 1879 that the first organization, whose avowed purpose was to furnish protection from fire to the property of the citizens, was formed with E. B. Ellsworth as chief. Mr. Ellsworth, however, resigned from the position within two weeks and Tom Morris was chosen in his place, with J. K. Arnold as secretary. Members of the company during the first year to recall that, in addition to fighting fires, they had the esteemed pleasure and privilege of escorting through the city General Sherman, when he stopped off here on his tour of inspection of the forts in the state, for even at that time, though few and far between, the boys were one of the leading institutions of the city. Their equipment consisted of two or three axes, four buckets, a lantern or two and a ladder, and as considerable trouble was experienced in securing a room in which to store these articles, a chain was finally bought by Mr. Morris and the apparatus was fastened to an old elm tree on North Main street, a short distance south of Olds' bicycle shop.



The old buckets and lanterns still hang from the hook and ladder track. In 1882 the council bought a chemical engine which did good service, but which also succeeded in eating up part of the clothing of several firemen at each fire. It is now in the fire hall at South Crookston.

But it became evident as the years went by that a reorganization of the company was needed and this was effected in 1883, at a meeting held Nov. 12, in Sheriff Zarracher's office, situated on North Main street in what where the McKinnon Bros.' machine shops now are. As the minutes of the meeting read: "In accordance with the request and inducement held out by the city council for the purpose of causing to be organized a Fire Department, the following members met at the city hall for the purpose of organizing a Fire Company: A. C. Cowing, Archie McKinnon, A. C. Schmidt, John W. Hack, S. T. Markham, John H. McKinnon, L. A. Nobles, Delos Jacobus, Dunc Morris and M. B. Hayes." "this chief engineer of this company!" M. B. Hayes was chosen and the name "Crookston Fire Department" was adopted. Other officers were, Foreman, A. C. Schmidt.; First Assistant foreman, Dunc Morris; Second Assistant Foreman, John McKinnon; J. W. Hack, secretary and A. C. Cowing, treasurer. Within two weeks ten more names were added to the list and a requisition made upon the council for 20 rubber coats and caps and suitable badges.

The custom of holding a firemen's ball was early inaugurated, for at the meeting on January 5, 1884, John McKinnon, L. A. Nobles and J. W. Hack were appointed a committee to make arrangements for a Grand Firemen's dance to be held Wednesday night, Jan. 23. The Grand Forks fire department were invited over and the ball came off in due time, the floor managers being M. B. Hayes, D. Morris and James O'Brien.

When the waterworks were first put in in 1882 there were three hydrants, and 1,000 feet of hose and two hose carts were furnished the city by K. D. Lee, who had become engaged in laying the water mains. As the city grew more apparatus was needed and the city council has almost invariably bought what the fire department asked for, so that today they have 4,500 feet of hose, five hose carts, one hook and ladder truck equipped with extension ladders and other necessary appurtenances, the latest acquisition being the Eastman nozzle.

For fifteen years the firemen kept their apparatus in the old city hall on Main street and used, during about the same length of time, a room in the McKinnou block as an assembly hall. This year they moved into their quarters in the new city hall where, on the first floor, is the large room in which their apparatus is kept, and back of this the harness and storage room, feed room and place for horses, and on the second floor is the assembly room, carpeted and otherwise appropriately furnished, and a bedroom where several firemen sleep. In this latter room is a brass pole running directly down into the apparatus hall and down this the firemen slide when an alarm is turned in at night.

With a view to securing greater efficiency among firemen in this part of the state through competition with one another and the friendly contests to create more public interest in so important a matter as fire protection, the Northwestern Firemen's Tournament association was formed, chiefly through the instrumentality of the department of this city, and the first tournament was held here in 1893. Since then a tournament has been held annually and at these yearly contests the Crookston boys have won the most of the prizes. This is a fact that the city should and does appreciate for it assists in keeping Crookston before the public eye in an enviable light.

But not only do they fight the fire fiend and win laurels at the tourneys but in society realms they are not without honor. The Grand Annual Promenade given under the auspices of the firemen is a function that all pleasure loving people, not merely in Crookston but in the neighboring country, fondly look forward to, and as they glide over the waxed floors, amid a profusion of flowers and other appropriate decorations, to the spirited music that is always furnished on such occasions, many a kind word is spoken of the Crookston fire laddies through whom this pleasure was possible.

This ball did indeed fill a large part in the life of any city, but when it is remembered that the Crookston Fire department is a volunteer one, all the more credit is due them. True, the city pays a little something whenever there is a fire, but this will hardly pay for the wear and tear on the firemen's clothing, furnished by themselves, save the rubber coat, rubber cap and boots, which are the only articles furnished by the general treasury and seldom does even these except to pay for furnishings for the firemen's room and other expenses in connection with the service, which the firemen themselves bear. It is, in fact, a very cheap fire department in existence to the city that during the year ending Oct. 3, 1899, only $864, which is about the largest sum that has ever been paid. Compare this with Grand Forks where the firemen are kept on salary and the expense runs up in the thousands and the value of one fire department to the city will be seen. And it may be added that during the firemen's fiscal year, mentioned above, only $620 were paid for losses by fire.

The requests, then, of such a body as this, should be given the utmost consideration and they ask for two things: First, certain insurance money that accrues to the city and second, a team and hose wagon.

Foreign insurance companies doing business in the city have to pay to the city a certain per cent. of the premiums that they receive. There is now in the city treasury $300 received from this source and it comes in at the rate of about $150 a year. This money, the firemen claim, rightly belongs to them and ought to be applied in their general fund, which is used in healing grave of injured or sick firemen and for other philanthropic purposes.

The team and hose wagon are much needed. The city has grown so rapidly within the last two years and the inevitable property has increased to such an extent that the situation demands that the firemen be so equipped as to enable them to get to the scene of any fire as rapidly as possible. At present they are not so equipped, but with a team and a hose wagon nothing will be in the way of the utmost promptness on their part in reaching the place threatened with destruction.

At the meeting of the State Firemen's Association last summer at Austin, Tom Morris, Crookston's efficient fire chief, was elected second vice-president, which means that in 1902 he will be president and the state meeting will be held in the Queen City of the Red River Valley. From 500 to 600 firemen will be here at that time, but even as large a company as that Crookston will be able to entertain, though, in order to do so, many of the citizens will have to open their homes to the visitors. A grand ball and banquet will be held here in honor of the visiting firemen and it is expected also that the Northwestern Firemen's Tournament Association will have their annual contest in this city then. All this will entail great expense, but the hospitality of the citizens of Crookston is proverbial and the pocketbook of our firemen is such that there will be little difficulty in meeting all demands of the fire department.

The present officers are, Chief, Tom Morris; Assistant Chief, A. G. Harris; Secretary, Thos. Johnstone; Treasurer, Jas. E. O'Brien; Foreman, J. Arrogant; Assistant Foreman, George Loganfield; Sergeon, D. A. H. Dunlop; Executive Committee, J. E. Montague, A. A. Glenn and Archie Hilliard.

W. A. Lanctot.

When an institution has a competent, reliable man in charge of its business office, things run smoothly with it. This is especially so with a municipality, where every citizen is a stockholder in the firm and entitled to know the state of the affairs connected with running expenses, profit and loss, etc. In this respect Crookston is indeed fortunate, having in this important position the subject of this sketch. Mr. Lanctot, is a Canadian by birth, and 1858 is his natal year. He come to Crookston in 1881 and accepted a position in the United States land office a position he held for three years during which time he made a large circle of friends and laid the foundation for a successful career in our city. In 1885 he retired from the land office to accept a position with A. D. Stephens, which he has since held with continued success. When his name was mentioned as a candidate for the position of city clerk his popularity at once blocked the way for all competitors and he was elected by a handsome majority which has never decreased during his several years incumbency. He now devotes the most of his time to the city's affairs and his handsome office in the new city hall is one of the most business-like in the city, and it is safe to say no city in the state can boast of a more efficient city clerk.

Ole H. Bjoln.

The Robert street livery man, takes a pardonable pride in possessing speedy horses and easy rolling rigs. His large carriage or sleigh room, as the case may be, is filled with single, double and three-seated vehicles, any one of which would be if all the rigs were in at one time, but this seldom ever occurs, whether it is for a spin around the city, a pleasant drive in the country or a business trip to an outlying town, the people always freely patronize Ole Bjoln. His teams can always be depended upon to go at a lively gait and yet they are not of the runaway kind. Fashionable turnouts, too, he has, and to drive "Pedro," the dashing boy horse, is to enjoy an unusual pleasure.

OLE H. BJOLN.

But besides owning a large number of horses and hiring these out to his numerous customers, he does a big business in taking care of transient teams. He has several dozen stalls in the basement of his barn where both his own horses and those of others are quartered and carefully tended.

W. E. Slocum.

Live, hustling business men are what make a town. Men who are at the same time careful and aggressive, who grasp every opportunity to keep the ball of progressiveness rolling along its journey. A writer of the history of our town will find many such but none would be higher in the list than W. E. Slocum, our popular cash grocer. Mr. Slocum has been identified with the business interests of Crookston for a number of years and has worked his business up from a small beginning till now he unquestionably owns the largest and most up-to-date establishments in the northwest. He at present occupies the double store in the Chase block on Broadway, which gives him a floor capacity of 50x120 feet, which is set off to his business requirements in such a way as to give him the most good out of this space, and he has used every foot to advantage. His stock consists of the well assorted, fresh line of staple and fancy groceries, provisions, crockery and glass ware. His stock of crockery and glass ware is one of the finest in the northwest and he enjoys a handsome trade in that line. He has lately put his business on a cash basis, and claims the change has been beneficial in every respect. He has a large trade among the best farmers in this district, many of whom receive all their supplies in this line through him, and some of the orders he fills for this class of his trade would be a surprise even to those who have long been in the business.

He does not, however, confine his abilities entirely to his private affairs, but is one of the foremost in pushing Crookston's interests to the front.

PAST AND FUTURE.

George Purvis Writes of the Great Progress of the Red River Valley Country.

IDEAL COUNTRY FOR FINE STOCK

Farmers Grow Rich, Lands More Valuable, With Comfortable and Happy Homes.

From "the great lone land" of millions of acres of trackless prairie, practically unoccupied, to the busy hives of population, if the region be one and the same, it might reasonably be supposed that a long period of years would elapse: but from the time that the Red River Valley of Minnesota was the stamping ground of the bison and marauding Indians until today, when the country is full of happy homes, one generation has not passed away. Where 25 years ago stood the sod shanty of the pioneer, now stand flourishing cities, possessing all the elements of an higher civilization. Where the buffalo roamed over the plains now graze herds of Short horns, Herefords and Angus, where the skulking wolf sneaked by the dark lees of woods now the collie basks a faithful shepherd of flocks of Shropshires, Cotswolds and Southdowns and the wigwam of the Red Man is replaced by the mansion of the prosperous farmer. And in every direction, as far as the eye can reach, are rich grain fields and grass pastures and the whole country is intersected by a network of railways, giving greater facilities in regard to transportation than any other region in the United States.

POLK COUNTY SCENERY.

By Emma R. Gary of Boston, Mass., from the original painting in the possession of Comrade Purvis.

About 25 years ago the great agricultural possibilities of the Red River Valley first began to attract homeseekers in any considerable number and those who succeeded in escaping the net of the fishermen's spread by the boomers of the west and settled in the counties of the valley, instead of drifting towards the Pacific coast, are now independent and many of them wealthy. At that time the most attractive points of the valley were Fargo and Grand Forks, North Dakota. The territory which is now South Dakota had for some years previously been receiving a gradual immigration of the best class of settlers from the western states and a great amount of eastern capital was invested in the building up of the towns of that region which was further stimulated by the opening of the rich mines of the Black Hills country and the establishment of extensive cattle ranches in the Bismarck district and westward. Settlement overlapped from South Dakota into the Red River Valley of North Dakota and when people began to understand the richness of the soil a veritable boom took place and immigration rolled northwards as far as the international boundary, filling up the North Dakota counties of the valley, not only with hard working homesteaders, but among them broken down politicians and impecunious adventurers who hoped in this new El Dorado to feed at the public crib, and many of the carpetbaggers, as they were commonly styled, succeeded in obtaining public office and for years controlled municipal and legislative affairs. A community such as this could not produce results which would lead to continued prosperity in a new country, however rich in natural resources, and after a few years of reckless expenditure and reckless investments by outside capitalists, the country received a check and experienced years of depression, during which time, however, an exodus of the carpetbagger took place, to the country's great gain and with increasing good crops the state of North Dakota as a whole has recovered from the reactive period following the boom and now it is no difficult to find an investment for money as it once was to borrow it because the farmers are now in easy circumstances and the towns are growing on the substantial basis of hastening slowly.

The Red River Valley of Minnesota was fortunate in escaping the boom which was experienced by her sister state, on the west side of the "Ruby," so that the Minnesota counties of the valley have had a gradual but steady growth. Now, however, the growth is very rapid and the vacant lands are being rapidly bought and occupied.

The towns and villages are having their streets paved and most of them have an electric light plant. All of them have excellent school, the school fund of Minnesota being the largest per capita of any state in the Union. With cheap fuel, cheap lumber, brick and stone and abundance of pure water in every county in the valley, together with the best land in the world and a genial climate, the Red River Valley of Minnesota prosperity will become more influential year by year.

In the early settlement of the valley the pioneer had much to discourage him. Every commodity was at a high price and he had to have everything a considerable, distance. Now all that is changed. For example, 25 years ago the price of a self binding harvester was $620 and it declined at that to-day the same machine (but much better) is perfect in all its parts) is only $110 and all other farm machinery is proportionately reduced in price. Everything a man wants can be procured within a short distance from the farm and the railroad facilities always enables the farmer to market his produce in most cases on a haul of a very few miles.

POLK COUNTY SCENERY.

By Emma R. Gary of Boston, Mass., from the original painting in the possession of Comrade Purvis.

The Red River Valley of Minnesota has immense prairies of the best wheat land, besides extensive districts of timber, never failing streams of pure water, which afford boundless grass parks and where there is an abundance of timber for protection. All together the surrounding country combine to make it an ideal farming country for stock raising, because the land seems peculiarly well adapted for grasses of all kinds, including clovers and although it may never become a great corn region, wherever corn has been tried it has done remarkably well. Everything that can be grown in the temperate zone including roots and vegetables of all kinds can be grown here and few districts offer such advantages to the young farmer beginning life or to anyone wishing to better his opportunities.

POLK COUNTY SCENERY.

(Sketched from life)

By Emma R. Gary of Boston, Mass., from the original painting in the possession of George Purvis, Crookston.

My experience has shown that wherever the farmer settles down to business in the Red River Valley and has not worried himself by reading the moonshine theories of the Bonton statisticians—paper farmers, who know nothing of practical farming—as to the cost of producing wheat, has gradually grown rich in money, in herds and flocks, while his land has increased and is increasing in value and at the same time he and his family have had a good living and comfortable and happy home —"white peace with sunny cheeks of ruth, walks over his free tended soil."

GEORGE PURVIS.

Louis Gonyea.

Public order is one of the essentials to the prosperity of any community. A business town or state not only loses self respect but the respect of all others. Witness the recent outrage of torturing to death with flames a negro in Kentucky! But nothing of that nature ever happens in Minnesota and within this state there is no more peaceable, quiet and orderly city than Crookston. Perhaps, if the attempt to harbor themselves here, are either out-spoken on public highways or told that they would better begin practicing for a foot race and they carry out the suggestion with alacrity. Disorderly conduct on the streets is not permitted and violence is at quickly detected that the gentleman whose name is here become somewhat notorious in other words the "crooks," find little grain and less safety here. Lawbreakers are promptly arrested and punished, and he must be an unusually smooth city scoundrel who escapes detection even for a short time. This being the condition one naturally would ask who deserves credit for this and the answer would promptly be given, Louis Gonyea and his force of policemen. Mr. Gonyea has been chief of the police department in this city for twelve years and is well known to the police and detective force all over the state and throughout Minnesota. His work is required his services are called for.

Martin O'Brien.

This popular lawyer is, by his native ability and natural aptitude, also a large clientage, pushing himself to the top rung of the professional ladder. He was born in Belvidere, Ill., in 1857 and came to Crookston in 1880. For several terms he held the office of city attorney. He is always prominent in political matters and has the confidence of all his co-workers for the ability he displays in such matters and where proficiency is supposed only to come with age and large experience. He has a large and lucrative law practice, his office in the McKinnon block being consulted by all of such those in need of legal advice. He is known as one of the most successful and representative young lawyers in the northern part of the State, and is identified with some of the most important cases that are tried in the courts. His clients are always sure that their interests are in safe hands and will have every confidence that a conscientious lawyer can give them.

Schmidt & Bowen.

The world would indeed be a barren and dreary waste were it not for the beauty that is scattered everywhere and Crookston vicinity would be much less attractive did Schmidt & Bowen live and work elsewhere. But fortunately they are here and visible the imprint of their skilled and trained hands is everywhere visible. It is a fact that if a man will once get his business before the public there is no trouble with his getting trade. Now Schmidt & Bowen, Mr. Business Man, can fix you up such a sign that crowds will gather to behold its beauty and before you know it they will pour into your shop or store and begin to make purchases. But this is not all they do. They will take a dingy, weather beaten, positively ugly appearing building and make it look like a palace and as for interior decoration in the way of frescoing, the new Masonic Temple shows what they can do and if you have never seen that work you have missed seeing one of the greatest sights in the city. Mr. Schmidt is one of the old standbys, having been in business in the city, well nye ever since Adam was a small boy, but dating back for several years. He is one of the firemen and no matter how precise the flames the boys would not consider it the genuine thing if "Cos" were absent. Mr. Bowen came to the city a year ago and since then has been making friends and turning out artistic pieces of interior work and it were hard to judge which he had been the faster.

H. F. Brown.

"Hank" Brown, "Harry" Brown, "Henry" Brown, "Brownie" "Select" Brown, all mean the same man in Crookston. They each and severally refer to H. F. Brown, the popular pioneer cigar man who manufactures the famous "Select" cigar and has a full first-class places that handle smokers' goods. He makes a number of brands of good cigars, and has a large salesroom in connection with his factory, where he carries a large line of all kinds of tobacco users' goods, including pipes, tobaccos, snuffs and accessories. In his factory Mr. Brown employs none but the highest class workmen, his being a union factory and uses only the best grades of tobacco in all parts of the cigars he makes. He confines his attention to strictly first class cigars, his cheapest grade being a "ten center." By strict attention to the requirements of the consumer and through his natural ability as a hustler he has built up a trade that is a credit to himself and this city.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

CITY OF CROOKSTON

Situated on the Banks of the Red Lake River—Lively Business Place, Many Pleasant Homes—Progressive, Intelligent People.

RAILWAY AND JOBBING CENTER

Considerable Manufacturing—Free Mail Delivery—Splendid Public School System—Churches, Fraternities, Hotels.

Crookston is situated in the valley of the Red Lake river amid woods of many varieties of trees which skirt the river on either side for a considerable distance as it meanders through the city. Large areas of rolling prairie, that present a green, yellow, black or white appearance, according to the time of year when one looks at them, stretch out for miles in all directions, save that to the east and west of the city there is a comparatively narrow strip of woods following the course of the river.

MUCH BUSINESS ACTIVITY

In this spot, favored of nature so highly, stands one of the handsomest, most thriving, prosperous, business-active cities in Minnesota. While, since its founding, it has been continuously advancing and improving, within the last two years it has had an unusual boom and has fairly leaped forward. The large business portion of the city has many handsome, solid brick structures of two and three stories high and some frame buildings, and none of these is vacant. Indeed, in business blocks and the amount of business done, no city of its size in the state can compete with it,—with its dozen or more grocery stores, dry goods establishments to about the same number, wholesale business houses, eleven shoe stores, close to thirty hotels and restaurants, candy shops nine of them, marble works, saw mill, tea dressmaking establishments, three millinery shops, carriage manufactories, sash and door factory, foundries, meat packing establishment, flour mills, oat meal mill, feed mills, brick yards, grain elevators, land offices, banks. In fact, it were almost an endless task simply to enumerate the places where business is carried on, to say nothing of describing the various business operations.

PRIVATE RESIDENCES

But while there is much business activity here, it is also a city of fine residences. Some business blocks, it is true, have been built this year, still building operations in the line of private dwellings have been the more extensive, bow extensive, may be learned elsewhere in this paper from an article dealing almost exclusively with that subject. There are some few brick houses but for the most part the residences are frame buildings. One feature that is especially noteworthy is that the houses are not crowded together. Each residence has about it a good-sized plat of ground that is used either for a garden or a lawn or in some cases for both. This gives a certain air of freedom to the city and cannot but exert its due influence in broadening and expanding the minds of the residents.

SCANDIA AMERICAN BANK BUILDING

PROGRESSIVE CITIZENS

And certainly the city is to be congratulated upon the character of those who dwell within its borders. With a population of more than 6,000, composed of people of many different nationalities, the Scandinavian, the French and the native American predominating, it can boast of a class of citizens who will compare most favorably with those in other towns, either in business ability, hustling qualities in general, native intelligence and common sense, skill in the professions and trades, or education. They are a live, energetic, progressive people, of which fact the life and institutions of the city which are the expression of their thought, give abundant evidence.

RAILWAY AND JOBBING CENTRE

Crookston, lying as it does at about the central point of the Red River Valley, has unquestionable advantages from a commercial and business point of view and its railroad facilities, it being the railroad centre of the region, are exceptionally fine. Branch lines run in all directions and residents in outlying towns, on this account, make Crookston their Mecca for pleasure and business. To get to other parts of the state and beyond its borders the people throughout a large part of the Red River Valley have first to come to the Queen City and thus the city's floating population is kept large all the time. Moreover, on account of its being the hub of a wheel, so to speak, it is becoming more and more of a jobbing centre. A large wholesale grocery house and a wholesale fruit house are now doing an extensive business not merely in the towns in the valley on the Minnesota side of the Red River, but even far into North Dakota and at places away east on the Duluth line. The former though established only about twelve months ago already finds it hard to fill all orders and the latter opened up two years ago, more than doubled its business in 1899. But not only groceries and fruits are secured at Crookston by the retail merchants in the northwest, but carriages and wagons manufactured here have obtained a reputation and a sale far beyond the city's limits, as have also our home manufactured sash and doors, works wrought in iron, etc. Here too are several large machinery emporiums which furnish thousands of dollars worth of farm implements to the agriculturists who till the soil tributary to Polk county's capitol. In consequence of such large business transactions the volume of trade done by the railways has greatly increased. The year 1898 was a boom year for the Great Northern because of the opening of the Duluth line, but notwithstanding that fact the amount of business transacted at this point during 1899 was greater than during the previous year.

RECIPROCITY.

Extensive retail business in the city, however, is made possible, to a great extent, by the agriculturists. They are a thrifty, industrious class of citizens and their number is constantly getting larger, for new settlers come with every season. On the other hand the increasing size and prosperity of Crookston reacts upon the country, for here is the market where most of the farmer's produce is sold and hence the more thriving and flourishing the county seat of Polk is and the larger its population, the better prices the farmer will get for most of what he has to sell. The grain market here, too, is an especially good one, for the keen competition between the elevators and the flour mills tends to make the price of wheat higher than in adjoining places.

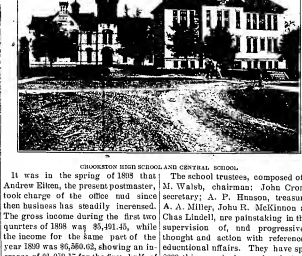
TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH.

The telephone facilities are the very best. There is a local exchange and the long distance phone, the latter connecting Crookston with Grand Forks late in 1898. But this year new lines have been built so that Crookston can now talk with the important towns in Red Lake county, with Fosston and intervening places, with Fertile and neighboring towns and with St. Paul by way of Winnipeg Junction. The line has been run to Tilden and thence branches out in these three directions. The city is thus in close touch with the outside business world than ever before. The local business has increased a good deal and the long distance phone has been kept quite busy.

Excellent telegraph service is given and this year a new and better messenger service was introduced. It is expected soon to establish the call box system under which the better patrons of the company will have their messages called for. The office will be moved to the first floor of some business block as soon as a suitable room can be procured.

POSTOFFICE BUSINESS.

In getting at the total volume of business done in a town many matters have to be taken into consideration but were one confined for his information to one source he would find no other source more fruitful than the postoffice. During the past two years the amount of business done has aggregated more than $40,000 yearly and in consequence free delivery was established a few months ago, so that the city has assumed a metropolitan air, with street signs at all corners, numbers on the houses, the red mail boxes located at convenient places and the gray-suited mail carriers, and the citizens enjoy the advantage of a free delivery of letters, papers and parcels once a day, and in some parts twice a day.



CROOKSTON HIGH SCHOOL AND CENTRAL SCHOOL

It was in the spring of 1898 that Andrew Eiken, the present postmaster, took charge of the office and since then business has steadily increased. The gross income during the first two quarters of 1898 was $5,491.45, while the income for the same part of the year 1899 was $6,560.62, showing an increase of $1,039.17 for the first half of the year and the indications are that the amount will go considerably over $2,000 before the year is completed. The total figures for 1898 were $1,944.87 more than for the previous year, so that within the last two years the postoffice receipts have increased more than $4,000.

November 3, Mr. Eiken began the weighing of the outgoing and incoming mails and continued to do so for thirty-three days and the result showed that 1,114 pounds of first class matter consisting of about 45,000 letters, 3,600 pounds of second class matter, 200 pounds of third class matter and 64 pounds of government free matter, besides 4,112 pounds of equipments were sent out and at least 60,000 letters received.

To handle this mail there are, besides Mr. Eiken, four clerks and the three mail carriers. They begin the distribution at 6:30 in the morning and the office is not closed up till ten o'clock at night. The service given is the very best and the people are perfectly satisfied with the way in which Postmaster Eiken and his efficient corps of workers manage the postoffice.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Nothing so gives weight and character to a town as progressive educational institutions and these Crookston has. Within the four walls of the school room the boys and girls who make the future citizens of the nation, receive the training and discipline and acquire the knowledge which, in most cases, determine their future careers, for as the poet Pope says:

Education enobles the human mind.
As the twig is bent the tree inclines.

There are now five school buildings, two of which are large brick structures. One of the latter is the high school building, which is one of the most conveniently arranged, roomy and well-lighted edifices of its kind in the state. The faculty is composed of the superintendent, the principal and three assistants. Several courses of study are offered and it is likely that these will be increased in the near future, for as the number of students increases it is easier to offer elective studies, as then a sufficient number can be secured for each class, and before the present school year closes the enrollment in the high school will reach nearly if not quite 150. It is becoming more and more the custom for the small towns around here to send every year several representatives to the high school in this city. This is building up the high school and the high school is building up them and all other students in attendance. Indeed no parent will make a mistake in sending his boy or girl to the Crookston high school.

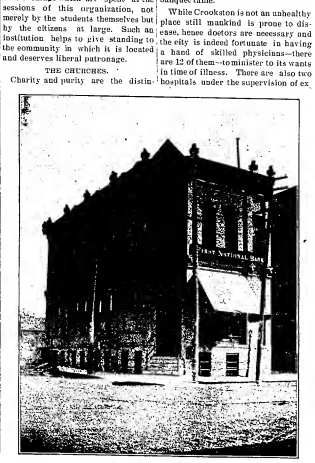
But the grades prepare the pupils for the high school and if the teaching here is not conducted along well approved educational lines no skill in the upper room can ever completely remedy the defect. In Crookston, however, efficiency is the watchword in the grades and progress is being continually made in these rooms. Almost all the grade teachers have been graduated from a Normal school and where such training has not been received other scientific training has taken its place. Crookston's corps of grade teachers will certainly compare favorably as to ability with that of any other public school in the state.

R. W. Hitchcock became superintendent of the city schools last September. He came to Crookston with several years of experience in superintending educational work and the wheels of the school machinery, so to speak, have been running smoothly during the past four months. Upon his recommendation the board of education has purchased $300 worth of supplementary reading for the grades, which English books were selected after a careful examination of many different courses and volumes. An extra primary teacher was also hired to relieve the first grade which was over crowded.

practical matters occupy most of the student's time, the element of culture is not wanting. The Literary Society is one of the features of the college and many are the pleasant and profitable evenings which are spent at the sessions of this organization, not merely by the students themselves but by the citizens at large. Such an institution helps to give standing to the community in which it is located and deserves liberal patronage.

THE CHURCHES.

Charity and purity are the distinguishing tenets of the Christian religion or perhaps it were better to say, the characteristics which especially belong to the followers of the man of Nazareth. Now while other factors or forces in civilization aid in producing these qualities in man—pre-eminently the schools, if rightly taught—it is commonly considered an undoubtedly is the peculiar province of the church to arouse and foster in man the higher life. That community where churches are numerous—there is such a thing as having too many in proportion to the population—and well supported, and church work is active, is on a higher plane of civilization than the place where such conditions do not obtain. Crookston is a veritable Brooklyn in the number of its churches, there being fifteen, namely, the Episcopalian, the Presbyterian, the Methodist, the Synod, the Hungee, the Congregational, the Baptist, St. Paul's German Lutheran, two United Lutheran churches, the Norwegian Lutheran, the Norwegian Methodist, St. Mary's church, St. Ann's church and the Swedish Mission. Each of these institutions has quite a large membership and Sunday usually finds the pews well filled. Besides the distinctively religious work each society enjoys a pleasant social life and the literary element is not wanting at these social gatherings. The young people's societies in connection with the churches have many departments of work in which they engage. The church buildings though not cathedrals in size and appointments are yet fairly large and appropriately furnished.



FIRST NATIONAL BANK BUILDING

FRATERNITIES

To attempt to enumerate the various fraternal organizations or civic societies of the city, with the membership, characteristic purpose, equipment, etc., of each, would require several pages of this paper. Suffice it to say the number of these orders is legion and new ones are constantly being organized, their purpose is philanthropic, social or financial, as the case may be, their lodge rooms are handsomely furnished. Their membership is not confined to residents of the city but includes many of those living within a radius of from twenty-five to fifty miles of here. Many are the men and women whose circumstances are made more comfortable and whose lot is made less difficult by the unostentatious ministrations of their fellow lodge men and many are the evenings during which the young people, and the old people as well, have forgotten the drudgery and anxiety of the work-a-day world, under the influence of the social entertainment furnished by these societies.

PROFESSIONAL MEN.

The legal profession is well represented here, there being in all about 20 lawyers. Starting with the judge of the 14th judicial district, who took his seat on the bench last January and has gained within the year an enviable reputation by his impartiality and sound judicial decisions, and going through the entire list, it will be found that they are an unusually bright and clever lot of men, who can pick out the salient points in a case from a mass of evidence, expound the law or make an eloquent plea before a jury. Many of them, indeed, have such a standing in the community at large that they are ranked among the leading members of the bar in the state. A bar association has been formed and once a year the legal lights of the Valley assemble in Crookston around the banquet table.

While Crookston is not an unhealthy place still mankind is prone to disease, hence doctors are necessary and the city is indeed fortunate in having a band of skilled physicians—there are 12 of them—to minister to its wants in time of illness. There are also two hospitals under the supervision of experienced matrons and trained nurses, whither the sick and the wounded are brought and where they receive sympathetic care. These skilled dentists also have offices in the city.

This is an age when the demands for the civil engineer are becoming greater all the time and Crookston, up to date in this respect as in all else, has men who are competent to work in this line and who have, in fact, done much of the surveying that the national government and the state have had done in this region.

THE CITY'S HOTELS.

Crookston, as has been said, always has a large floating population—farmers passing the day here, citizens from surrounding towns and villages, visitors, prospective residents and numerous other classes of people not the least among whom are the commercial travelers who make this city their headquarters while serving their customers throughout the Valley. These men and women, who are continually coming and going, must put up at the public places of entertainment, hence our hotels have much to do in producing the impression which the country at large has of the city, and that impression, it need hardly be said, is a favorable one. Hotels and restaurants to the number of thirty are located here and while no town, perhaps, is entirely free from poor establishments, Crookston happily has so many good ones that the other kind have no excuse for living. No traveler, no matter what the condition of his finances may be, will have cause to complain of the accommodations he receives. From the luxuriously furnished and expensive house to the modest, low-priced establishment, they are all here. "Costly as thy purse can buy" there is yet respectability with each.

A CONVENTION CITY.

Crookston, because of its railways, its being the metropolis of the northwestern part of the state, its ample hotel accommodations, unbounded hospitality and large assembly halls, is well adapted for the entertaining of conventions of different kinds. The county conventions of all political parties assemble here, as likewise did the populist congressional convention of 1898, and an effort will be made to have the next republican congressional convention meet in this place. The state W. C. T. U. meeting was held in the city last fall, next fall it is expected that the Northern Minnesota Methodist conference will convene here, and the State Firemen's association is slated for Crookston for 1902. The fact that such assemblies gather here shows the importance and equipment of the city and on the other hand those who do come, when they return to their several homes, become so many heralds proclaiming to all around them of the prosperity of Crookston and the geniality of its citizens.

MACADAM PAVING.

The streets in the business portion of the city will be paved with macadam, but the question as to when this work will be done has not yet been decided. The council have been discussing and examining into this matter for the past six months and it has been the general hope and expectation that next year would see the work completed. The macadam, which is made of crushed stone rolled till it is one solid mass, is a most serviceable and durable paving and the streets will have a handsome appearance when the contemplated improvement is an actual fact.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Woman's Page.

The Meaning of Christmas.

"Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, goodwill to men." That is what the angels sang on that memorable, blessed morning, and the humble illiterate shepherds understood and believed it, and went with glad hearts to see the Holy Child. They both understood and believed, not with the head but with the heart, and it is in the same manner that we would celebrate this day. Their acceptance of the message led them to action and to worship, and so should ours, today, till with glad hearts we shout and sing "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, goodwill to men."

From the time of the birth of Christ, nineteen hundred years ago, the years have unrolled as a scroll, whereon is written the progress of peace and goodwill among men. Many people laugh because the Peace Congress amounted to so little, and was quickly followed by so general a state of war. But the nations of the earth, in this congress, publicly and unitedly entertained the idea of universal peace—the veritable idea that the angels proclaimed so long ago. If we have been reading down the history of nineteen hundred years to first find that idea widely held, that state sincerely wished for, and that end concertedly sought for, are we not asking too much of the first effort when we revile it for not annihilating war?

Fortunate it was for mankind that the message of the angels was for the heart and not for the mind, for the mind of the first recipients would have been staggered, would have been paralyzed with the conception of all the labor and sorrow, all the turning and over-turning of the institutions and destinies of men that was to take place before the idea of universal peace could so much as take root in the social world. Fortunate for us too, that this message of peace is still preeminently one for the heart, and that we cannot comprehend what lies between the first peace congress and the consummation of its hopes.

We can apprehend with the heart what we cannot comprehend with the mind, and sing once more the angel song, "Glory in God in the Highest." And we can put into the celebration of this day the highest conception of a day of peace of which we are capable. By our custom of giving gifts, we make it an assurance to our loved ones that we love them still, and love them well. We put off for the day the contemplation of our own needs and wants, our own tastes and pleasures, and contemplate the needs and wants, the tastes and pleasures of others. Through this door, we enter into sympathy with those of other natures, other conditions, other ages, and other sex than our own, and this in itself is a mighty agency for peace. Not that we make peace by the offering of a gift, but in studying to give intelligently and acceptably we come to know others better. Way back in the history of civilization a stranger—an unknown person or tribe—was an enemy, and as that history progresses we see that peace advances as knowledge advances, and that the present condition of world-wide intercourse and comity are largely conditioned upon the increase, in modern times, of the means for getting acquainted. So, then, to come to know, to understand one another makes mightily for peace.

People complain, sometimes, that Christmas takes so much time and money. Not that they begrudge either, but feel it an indulgence which their circumstances will not warrant: and that in order to live up to what they think they ought to do and give, Christmas becomes a burden to them. Possibly it is a case of that kind one allows himself to become the slave of custom instead of remaining master of it, and instead of using custom, allows it to use him. One must do nothing that will not produce and promote peace, else he destroys the spirit of the day.

Christmas presents a golden opportunity to have one day in the year when the rules that obtain on the other three hundred and sixty-four are set aside, and it is worth while if only for the sake of variety. So let us try to live one day each year in the complete assurance that dearest and best are friendly to us, and that destiny and man are favorable to all our fellows, and in so far as we are a part of that destiny of others, let us give them as gracious and bountiful a destiny as we wish for ourselves throughout all the year to-come, ere Christmas comes round again.

And let us make Christmas a day different from the rest in that, whereas, on other days we may have a friendly feeling with no time nor opportunity for its expression, on Christmas it shall have expression to the fullest possible extent. We celebrate this day because unto it God gave expression of His peace and goodwill by act and word, not because He first upon that day felt thus toward all the world. Then, let us make it essentially a day of expression, and make a Merry Christmas in every way we can, by all the means we can, and to all the people we can, and so shall we enjoy ourselves, the very Merriest Christmas we have ever known.

AGNES L. WILKINSON.

Appreciation of Small Things.

Among the earlier recollections of our childhood is grandmother's soft voice-saying "Thank you dear" to the small boy or girl who has picked up the ball of yarn just rolled upon the floor, or grandmother is hunting for her spectacles, when the child looking up says "Why grandma, they are on the top of your head," and the aged grand parent laughingly says, "Bless your bright eyes I should have hunted ever so long for them had you not seen them" and the little one returns to his or her play, well satisfied with grandmother's appreciation of their little thoughtfulness.

How many of the little things go toward the brightening of the lonely hours of some one—would we but stop to think. We may have a grief, a sorrow, or anxiety which tempers our joys, or perhaps, we almost feel as if the sunshine of life is not to be so bright for us as for others, for then look to have few trials, or sadness life seems so bright and full of sunshine for them.

There are those to whom so many of the joys are denied: yet they lead such happy and helpful lives, for themselves and all around them, that we would like to know more of them, and learn the secret of their innermost life. With a still diligence in their every day duties, they ever find time to appreciate little courtesies from others—are thankful for the bright sunshine of summer days, the fragrant flowers blooming by the road side, the hum of the busy insect world, the melodies of the happy birds, the whisperings of the leaves of the trees, and the soft voices of the grasses, sounds sweet to the ears of one who loves things in nature. Each one doing his own appointed work designed for him by an all wise Creator.

And, when the stormy days of winter come, we each, the busy housemother, whose home in the town or broad prairie, the toil worn mother living in the crowded house in the dark alley way of the large city, the busy worker in the factory, the office, or behind the counter, would feel that life had but little sunshine in store for us, were it not that there are in that store house of memories, recollections of the brightness and the happiness of the summer days long past. They are small things and the enjoyment of these gives a new life, hope and a desire to help others to find the brighter side of life.

JULIET LUMAN.
Noble Grand of Rebecca Lodge.

So we forgetting the monotony of the daily toil, thank our Heavenly Father, that we can work, otherwise we would not know how to appreciate the humblest blessing, did we not fill our mission on earth to work, or toil if need be, so that we can be better to others of the little things blended together to make up a useful and helpful life.

The little every day courtesies, the sympathetic thoughts written by some one who seems to have known just our desires, the lead our thoughts out from ourselves—out from the cares of the every day toil, to a higher plane—thoughts in the book world of the lives and the doings of others—to the beautiful things in nature. Thus are we lifted up to our better selves, and become more able to guide, direct and assist the daily lives of those precious to us, entrusted to our special care.

Not forgetting, that in the faithful doing of our daily duties, with these higher and broader purposes in view of working not alone for ourselves, but for others, we try to follow the example of our Lord and Master "who went about doing good."

MARY E. GREEN.

Country Life.

We so often see statements made to the effect that many of the female inmates of our insane asylums are farmer's wives, and that over-work is the cause of the trouble. If this is true how can it be remedied? I fear the work can not be made much less. If the women of the country in the country the long and hard, and there seems no way of avoiding it. But it seems to me that if, instead of letting the daily toil grind and crush, we knew how to take care of ourselves and could realize and use the opportunities about us for relaxa-

ENSAY, CHRISTMAS,
Commandress of Lady Maccabees.

tion and diversion, we would never go insane from over-work.

It is time we looked out and our homes that we get all we possibly can out of every day to lift us up to and make us happy. Our resources are without number if we only can see them. In the first place we must try to provide needful things for the body, food properly cooked, clothing that is comfortable and that is put on so as not to interfere with the free play of every muscle, and especially comfortable foot wear, broad soles and low heels being the first requisite of our shoes. And then we must have an abundance of fresh, pure air. Morning, noon and night, and all the time, whether sleeping or waking, we must provide for pure air, for upon this much of our vigor depends. The body well cared for, the mind is in a better condition to discover the good things of life which are to be had for the seeking.

We can learn to make much out of even the necessities of our condition. For example, we must rise early in the morning, often before the dawn. But instead of complaining let us look up. In the East, the glorious curtains of the morning are rising to let in the day. Above us hangs the moon, a thin silver crescent attended by the lovely morning star. Every thing looks pure and sweet, and the few sounds from bird and beast tune from a note of ease. Well may we pause and look up, and repeat aloud, if we will, one of the beautiful nature psalms. "The heavens declare the glory of God, the firmament showeth his handiwork." In such an hour the soul is fortified for the adversities of the day, which as yet have not appeared.

Robert Louis Stevenson, a great and constant sufferer almost all his life, yet full of brightness, has left as such a beautiful prayer: "The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, and bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonored; and grant us in the end the gift of sleep, Amen." With a prayer like this the language of our hearts, we may well go forth to meet each day as it comes, as "conquerors." Our work may be hard and long, but there will be a buoyancy of spirit to keep us above them. When we have taken "time to be holy" in the sweet morning hour, we have indeed secured the day for happiness and we will find ourselves in harmony with the pleasant things about us.

Our children can be to us companions and helpers, and we in turn may be their playmates. While they help us, in such duties as their strength and knowledge will allow, we can "pretend" with them, and turn work into play. Talk with them of your affairs and of our own, this establishing a mutual interest. In the country children depend upon mother and upon each other for companionship which the town child usually seeks outside of home. If we encourage and foster this in them, home ties and love, as the years go on, and they grow towards manhood and womanhood, will be the sweetest place in the world.

MARY WARNER,
Chief of Honor, D. of H.

In the summer a little flower garden will afford us many hours of delight, and if possible we should take pains to have a few good plants in the winter. In raising for them we will forget that we are tired. At this happy Christmas season let us "count up our mercies" and keep the feast in a truly joyous spirit. We live very close to nature, and when we will we may learn wonderful things from her hand. In the country we may study her without any intervening shingles or mortar. Our children are peculiarly our own to love and train and enjoy without interference from outsiders, and notwithstanding long hours, there are times we can find for flowers and books and other things that give beauty to the home life, to our souls. Surely there is enough to feed mind and heart, of the very best things there are to be found.

MARY CURRIE.

Miss Mary Crocker is as present one of the most talked about young women in this country. A short time ago she was at school in Paris. Recently she has assumed the control of $4,000,000 "in cash," so to speak, which she can spend in a day if she so desires, and rumor has it that she is very extravagant. Since coming back to America she has lived with her grand-parents in San Francisco and will this year make her debut into Washington society, chaperoned by Mrs. Ogden Mills, who is her cousin.

Instead of an engagement ring the romance lover gives his sweetheart a piece of beautiful silk for her sash.

Mrs. Spendley, Mrs. Rosental. Mrs. Wats.

OFFICERS OF THE WOMAN'S CLUB.

Mrs. Vance. Mrs. Miles. Mrs. Stewart.

WHAT WE SHOULD EAT.

Relative and Comparative Values of Different Foods.

"Go to the ant * * * consider her ways and be wise."

It seems unnatural the awaking to great truths touching the vital life of man have oft come from his study of problems related to animals. This has been the case in the investigation of the food question.

The dollar was undoubtedly the first incentive. It was found that a knowledge of the principles of feeding animals could be made to greatly increase the profit thereof. Such accurate and valuable information was gained by experiments in this line that finally the thought came: If the food of animals has so much influence upon their being, has not the food consumed by man as great an influence on his being? This was the beginning of that great wave of interest that now exists in human foods.

For so many centuries we have been so grossly ignorant of the simple laws that affect life, that one fails to wonder-ing how the human race ever survived until the present time.

The other day while studying the feeding of poultry, variety seemed to be the fundamental principle. Man's sense of taste has led him to eat a variety of food, and undoubtedly this has been a factor in overcoming the evil consequences of ignorance of dietetic laws.

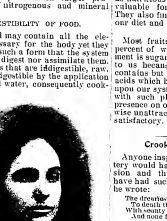
Nevertheless, a close study of the conditions that exist, makes it clear that many ills of life, are directly due to over-eating and many others are more indirectly due to the same cause. So it is well for us to exercise some knowledge in the consumption of our daily food.

Food chemists have ascertained that the system appropriates the elements of our food to different uses, consequently they have classified food as to the use the body makes of it.

WASTE.

In our thought of food we seldom consider waste, yet about three-fourths of our body is water. Beside drinking enough to maintain this proportion we consume a large amount daily.

As in the outside world, water is used as a solvent and a cleanser, so in the human economy water is the cleansing agent and also holds in solution much valuable material which is conveyed thereby to the various parts of the system.



IDA E. MEYER,
Grand Royal Matron, O. E. S.

ing has become an essential factor in the preparation of our food.

The digestibility of food should be considered in two ways, viz: as to the length of time required for its digestion, also as to the completeness of its digestion.

MEAT.

Meat contains all the elements except starch and sugar. The chief difference in meats is the proportion of fat. Lean meat of all animals is very nearly alike in chemical composition and lean meat is usually considered a nitrogenous or flesh-forming food. Do not forget that parts of pork principally the portion salted, is fat and that fat is a heat-giving food and not a flesh former.

The digestibility of different kinds of meats varies greatly as also different parts of the same animal. I mention, a few, among them in the order of their digestibility, the first mentioned being the most easily digested: Oysters, sweet-breads, game, veal, broiled (wild) fish, poultry, lamb, mutton, beef. Boiled pork are difficult of digestion, eggs are very similar to meat as to analysis and may be used as substituted for it. Eggs are a valuable nitrogenous food for the farmer who cannot supply himself at all times with fresh meat. It is too economy for the farmer to exchange his eggs for sugar, rice, coffee, etc., to the extent of depriving himself of the free use of them on his table while he lives on salt pork, potatoes, rice, bread, etc.

Milk is a food that contains all the elements of nutrition and in a proportion adapted to the child. Cheese which is milk with its water removed is an important nitrogenous food. As much of the sugar and mineral matter of the milk is lost in its manufacture we must look upon it principally as a nitrogenous food. As it contains a small proportion of water it yields a much larger percent. of nutritious food, pound for pound, than meat. It is an inexpensive food compared with meat and can always be substituted for it in a ration. The only objection to it is the very common free use in that it is somewhat difficult to digest.

ADELAIDE BARNES,
President W. C. T. U. and W. R. C.

CEREALS.

The grain foods contain some of all the different elements with a very slight per cent. of fat. Wheat is said not only to contain all the elements of perfect nutrition but to contain them in nearly the correct proportion. Wheat flour has an analysis very nearly like wheat but with a smaller per cent. of mineral water.

Oats or oatmeal has an analysis similar to wheat but with a much larger percent of mineral matter. It is, in consequence, a most valuable food especially for children but in order to be digestible it requires long continued steaming.

Corn, rye, barley, buckwheat and rice all have analysis similar to wheat but with a smaller percent of nitrogenous elements and a correspondingly larger percent of starch. Rice must be considered almost wholly starch and is consequently properly combined with meat or eggs, usually with the latter. It is served in form of puddings.

VEGETABLES.

Ripe peas and beans contain all elements of nutrition with a very large percent of nitrogenous food. As they are exceedingly cheap they are a very valuable food, especially where economy must necessarily be studied.

Potatoes contain such a very small percent of nitrogenous food that they are considered decidedly as a starch food. By combining meat with potatoes in a diet you secure a balance ration.

Cabbage, turnips lettuce, tomatoes, celery, etc., contain a very large proportion of water, as much as 90 or 95 percent. They cannot be considered nutritious foods, yet they are very valuable for their mineral salts. They also furnish a great variety to our meals and give the necessary bulk.

FRUIT.

Most fruits contain a very large percent of water. Their chief nutriment is sugar. Fruit is not valuable to us because of the nutrition it contains but because of the vegetable acids which have a wholesome effect upon our system. Fruit is possessed with such pleasing flavors that its presence on our table make an otherwise unattractive meal enjoyable and satisfactory.

MARY T. HOVERSTAD.

Crookston Cemetery.

Anyone inspecting Crookston's cemetery cannot leave a feeling of depression and think that Whittier must have had such an one in mind when he wrote:

The dreariest spot in all the land
To death they say, appears
With saintly grace from nature's hand,
Set free from dust of Ages.

To be sure there has been some sodding and grading on private lots, but yet there is a woeful lack as a whole in the general appearance of the cemetery. From May 1st to early autumn there is work enough to keep one man at least, constantly employed. Who is to pay for this work?

Let there be a meeting of the public called, a society organized, officers elected, committees appointed and get to work to devise ways and means to raise a cemetery fund. and do it this winter, so that with the opening of spring there will be no delay.

Such a movement ought, and will have the earnest co-operation of the Cemetery Association, and all the citizens, for there are few families but have some relative or dear friend laid away there, and have hoped and hoped for a beautiful cemetery. Who will make a beginning? There will be a ready response. Crookston should have a cemetery that is not a silent reproach, one that shall not impress strangers that she soon forgets and neglects the narrow beds of her dead.

Among old soldiers there has long been a conviction that there should be a plot of ground in our cemetery set apart and dedicated to the soldiers and marines who fought to preserve our union. Will not the Cemetery Association set aside such a plot? The children of our public schools, properly supervised, would take pride in planting it with flowers, shrubs and annuals. Thus inculcating a spirit of patriotism and fostering a love of country and the old flag.

What more fitting place to erect a monument to the memory of Archie Patterson, a bugler in the 13th Minn. Volunteers, Crookston's and the first Minnesotan to give up his life in the cause of Manila in the Spanish-American war!

ELSIE SPENDLEY.

Gratitude.

The grace of gratitude is one of the greatest ornaments of life. Yet it seems a confessed fact that it is often wanting, even in persons who possess many other excellent qualities. Some persons are seemingly touched by acts of kindness shown them, and a due exhibition of gratitude is manifested, while some good people seem never to experience the feeling of thankfulness either toward God or man. It may be they have an inner sense of gratitude, and in their hearts really feel thankful to those who perform love's ministries for them, but fail to give expression to the feeling. They see every day of their lives many one, however deeply they appreciate the favor received. Many of us are altogether too chary of our thanks, too careless in recognizing what others do for us, too prone to accept every favor, every kindness done by whomsoever, without a sign of recognition. It would seem, too, that this fault becomes more marked in proportion to the closeness of human relationship. Many of us who are always careful to thank strangers for every favor they show us, fail almost entirely in speaking grateful words to the loving ones of our own home.

We have grateful thoughts for the stranger,
And smiles for the passing throng,
But oft for our own the bitter tone,
Though we love our own the long.

But there is a higher phase of the lesson,—gratitude toward God. The beloved disciple tells us that "he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, cannot love God whom he hath not seen." The same is true of gratitude. "He who is ungrateful to his brother whom he hath seen, is ungrateful to God whom he cannot see." But though no thankfulness toward men is expressed, we should never fail to thank God for all the mercies, for every good gift from him, whosoever have been willing it to us. Perhaps, lest that we are so accustomed to receiving mercies from God, that we are in danger of taking them as a matter of course as if nature brought them to us. If there were an interruption now and then, we should learn better to appreciate what God is doing for us, and should be more grateful to him. It is well that we train ourselves to think habitually of our mercies, lest we forget, and lest gratitude decay in our hearts.

Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Woman's Page.

The Practical Side of Home Life.

When we think of the practical side of any question the thought of work, in some form, rises in our minds especially if housework be the theme before a busy housekeeper. And so it should, for when we stop to consider, for a moment, our surroundings, we find in all are the expressions of labor of some kind.

The book, magazine and daily paper, which come to us, with rich thought, or news of the latest happenings across the seas, expresses hours of tireless energy and expense of nerve force of many minds. Or, take the commonest articles of an every-day meal. The merchant ship has plunched the ocean deep, to bring our coffee and spices, nearer we get our sugar and salt, nearer still in this fleet River Valley, we get our oat-meal and flour, but they all mean labor done by many, in many places.

We need not travel far to find a diversity of labor—each home provides that, and it is of this home life we would particularly speak. The humdrum work is apt to become irksome, the constant repetition of the same duties a weariness to us, unless a cheerful, willing spirit is with the worker, and that is apt to become clouded if the body grows too weary. But how meet the many tasks which much be done, prepare the food to nourish brain and muscle, keep the house and clothing in order, without overstaining the strength, and still have time left for mental development and for the opportunities to help the little ones in their growth of mind.

It will be easy to impress upon the mind of such a young child the necessity for labor, that each one should lend a helping hand. Then we would say systematize and simplify. Each home has its own peculiar conditions and tastes, but work systematically done is better in any place. Give each one his regular tasks to be well and promptly done, cultivate a spirit of mutual helpfulness. Plan to economize work, a little forethought and carefulness, on the part of each member of the household will lessen the labor surprisingly. When we cannot have plenty of help would it not be often better to simplify our home life? Adapt it to our means and strength. Really it seems as if a large share of what is bought is because some one else has it, more than because we really care for it. Let us get what we can afford, and what is for our own comfort and taste, not cumber our homes with unnecessary articles, only enough to cultivate a taste for the true and beautiful.

In every day life encourage observation, study nature with the children even while the household duties are going on. The birds and flowers are always a source of interest. The sun and rain have served for various object lessons on industry. Our winter sunrises are glorious in this northern clime. In fact, as Mrs. Hemans beautifully says:

There is beauty all around us,
Of tint, our watchful eyes
Can trace in countless tokens
And through their lovely colors.

A mother who thinks only of satisfying the physical needs of her family fails in great measure.

We want our children well developed, well rounded characters, religiously, morally and intellectually, to get the most of life; make the most. Do not confine the horizon to the four walls of home. This is such a stirring, active age, that every person should feel its influence. Give good reading, fill the minds with the best thoughts of the day. Around the table, all are gathered, discuss the current events of the day. Think, and teach the boys and girls to think and express their thoughts. Soon the children of today will be the actors in the world's drama. It behooves us then to teach them, that all have a responsibility in helping

The ruler that needs assistance
The wrong that needs resistance.

We all exert an influence, no matter what we are, even if we say not a word.

When we think of the vast amount of influence that is, and will be emanating from the many homes inside a radius of fifty miles, shall we not do our best to have that a power for the right. Do our best to send forth into the world, strong, sturdy men of principle, and pure, womanly women, with high ideals of life.

A woman's best field of labor is her home. Here she wields a power, a scepter far reaching. If as, Oliver Wendell Homes says, "A child's education should begin a hundred years before it is born," then the foundations of character today should be strong and true, for a benefit to the generation a hundred years hence. Never a better time for a commencement. Feeling this, will not our every day practical duties assume a truer proportion, and will we not think more of the possible grand results than of the petty details, which for a time are burdensome, and make our whole lives broader and brighter.

ADA L. STONE.

Moral and Religious Idea of Christmas.

A Merry Christmas! We are glad to receive the happy greeting whether from members of the household, friends or a passer-by on the street who, infused with the spirit of the day would fain give expression to the kindly wish that, you too, may share in the joys of the season.

We forget, awhile care and toil, that we may enter the more heartily into the joys of the first greatest festival of the Christian year.

It should be a time of great rejoicing, for do we not read in St. Luke, Chap. 2, 10th, 11th and 14th verses—"And the angel said unto them, fear not for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior which is Christ the Lord. Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace good will toward men." What an inspiration to keep the day with a reverent joy, could we but realize the music the heavenly host when they sang these words of praise.

Who would deprive the children of the anticipated pleasure in receiving the list of gifts called for in the labor-lously written letter to Santa Claus, or check the merry laughter and expressions of delight, as the unfolding of each package brings to view the much wished for gift.

Sad as tears indeed is the man or woman who is not able to lay aside for a brief season for a time and rejoice with those little ones so full of glee. The Christmas greeting brings a smile of pleasure to the careworn face of the aged husband and wife, who may have but little to cheer the every day life. But this is Christmas time. And it would seem to the close observer of the better side of humanity that there is a tacit understanding, an unconscious law, if we may call it so, to make some one else happier on Christmas Day. We not always may be able to give gifts. Yet the cordial grasp of the hand of friendship, the cheerful greeting leaves a pleasant memory with some lonely one.

The spirit of Christmas festivities dates back from the first days of Christianity, and doubtless was kept with a joyful reverence. While for a period in the middle ages people forgot the true meaning of the great festival and spent the time in wild revelry, such conditions were not to remain long. There were those who arose to the spiritual needs of the times, and did not forget why we should keep the joyous festival with the singing of carols and anthems of praise in the house of God.

Let us not forget to tell our little ones why they receive "Good Gifts From Men." For the Christ came to bring as a greater gift, that through the life of self denial and the making of the one great sacrifice, all men of us, who will receive it, on the one condition, if we but do the will of our Heavenly Father, who through the self-sacrifice of glory and honor left His Father's throne to come to the earth as a little child, to grow as a child and be our Lord and Savior in the life everlasting. It was a great gift—a life—that our sins might be forgiven, that we could know how to live a just and noble life as our Lord and Savior has us. Let us keep our Christmas festivities well seasoned with spiritual truth.

"Christmas, awake, salute the happy morn
Whereon the Saviour of mankind was born."

MARY A. GREEN.

Christmas Music.

From the time when "Shepherds watched their flocks by night," until the present, music has formed one of the chief means by which our happiness could be expressed. When the wise men saw the star in the East and followed it, bringing their rich gifts to one whom they loved, we are told the angels sang that grand chorus "Peace on Earth. Good Will to Men." At Christmas time our hearts are filled with a happiness which finds its best utterance in song. If the angels were pleased to assist in expressing their great joy, why should not we employ the same happy way to show our love and joy. Churches throughout the country are preparing for weeks the music by which they will help to gladden the Christmas time. There seems with every song to sound a note remote as not to have some special Christmas association with melted butter. Bake 30 minutes on grate of oven.

Shave, not chop, cabbage very fine, cover with water and set aside. For the dressing, cook together without browning a tablespoonful of butter and one of flour. Add three-fourths of a cup of rich milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly.

RESIDENCE OF AUGUST P. GEORGE.

mas morning for the waking of parents and other friends. Dressed in the chorister's white vestments they make a pretty picture going across the house in the dark winter morning singing "Awake, Glad Heard" to get up and shout of the birthday of the King."

Children never forget their early Christmas days. The music will linger in their memories, and in after years the dear old hymns will seem like an echo of their mother's voice. The spirit of song seems to penetrate the heart of mankind and unite us all in a brotherhood for "Don't you know always at Christmas time our hearts with warm and loving thoughts fill. And those clear child angels really come, and sing through all the world, "Good will, Good will."

Our hearts seem lifted above the common expressions of speech, we can only sing for joy of the warm, glad happiness that fills our lives.

ALICE MILLER.

The Christmas Dinner.

In planning the Christmas dinner it may be well for us to remember that our stomach has the same capacity on that day as on others and perhaps we may not be tempted to arrange so elaborate a meal as we otherwise would. We so enjoy preparing for the Christmas feast that we are oft tempted to make a meal of the things we particularly like. Instead of having so great a variety, give greater attention to the perfect preparation of the dishes selected, the daintyserving of the meal and the decoration of the table. Here is a suggestion for a pleasing yet very simple decoration. In the center of the table place a wreath of holly tied with a large bow of red ribbon. If you have a pretty low potted plant, a fern perhaps, mask the pot with red crinkled tissue paper and place in center of the wreath. Lay a sprig of holly on each napkin. In molding the cranberry jelly, mold in individual molds, ten cups will do. Arrange the jelly on individual plates or sauce dishes and place one to each person.

It is difficult to plan a meal for others especially as we do not know the stock on hand. In the following menu nothing is given but what every farmer may have, save oysters and cranberries. Usually on Christmas we wish to indulge ourselves in some luxury and so I have mentioned oysters.

Serve the oysters as you enjoy best. Raw, of course, with a little horseradish and a thin wafer would be the correct thing, but perhaps your family might enjoy them better in a soup. Perhaps you would enjoy them better at the evening meal.

Perhaps you will feel that this year you will break away from the conventionality of the Christmas turkey, after considering this meat and that there is none so generally satisfactory as the turkey. I have given turkey in this Christmas menu.

The vanilla mousse is a form of ice cream. Everyone may have this delicious cream whether they have a freezer or not as it is easily prepared and should be made the day before. It helps simplify the meal.

I HRISTMAS MENU.

Oysters

Celery Pickles
Roast Turkey Gravy
Potatoes Escalloped Tomatoes
Cranberry Jelly
CABBAGE SALAD.
Vanilla Mousse

Cake Coffee
Nuts Bonbons

ROAST TURKEY.

Do not over-roast the turkey. Two hours and a quarter is time enough for a seven pound turkey; two hours and three-quarters for a twelve pound. There is a point of perfection. It is when the turkey is cooked yet is full of juice and flavor delicate. If the cooking is continued after this point is reached the turkey becomes dry and flavor not so delicate.

CRANBERRY JELLY.

Select berries and over-ripe. Add a pint of boiling water to each quart of berries. Cook covered until quickly. Drain through a cheese-cloth without squeezing. Measure the juice. Let it boil ten minutes after it has come to the boil then add as much sugar as you had juice. Let it return to the boiling point skin carefully and turn into molds. It should stand over night.

The berries left after draining juice should be rubbed through a sieve, sweeten and may then be served as a sauce.

ESCALLOPED TOMATOES.

Cut crust of bread into tiny dice, moisten with melted butter, season with salt and pepper, a little cayenne. Put in baking dish, add the tomatoes, season with salt, pepper and a little sugar. Cover the whole with bread crumbs, moistened with melted butter. Bake 30 minutes on grate of oven.

CABBAGE SALAD

Serve while dressing is hot. Add to cabbage.

VANILLE MOUSSE

Arrange to have some cream that will whip. It may be whipped with an egg beater. After whipping let it stand that it may drain to two quarts of the whipped cream. Add threefourths of a cup of powdered sugar and vanilla. Turn in a mold and set where it will freeze solid. A generous time dip the mold in cold water until it loosens from mold, then it may be turned out.

MARY T. HOVERSTAD.

SANTA CLAUS IS COMING.

How to Teach the Children the True Christmas Idea.

Year by year the meaning of Christmas is becoming more and more clear, more and more do we think of it as the Children's Day. They are now coming to comprehend the full meaning of the coming of the Christ-child, but they know about birthdays, and what happy times they have celebrating their own and their little friends' birthdays.

But there is a peculiar joy in keeping this birthday, a joy that belongs to no other. In this not the time, then, to teach them that the Christmas thought is giving and doing? That this is the best time of all the year to do all we can to make others happy? They respond so readily and willingly when there is anything they can do, giving their sympathy as freely as their gifts.

RESIDENCE OF R. N. WAISH.

The coming of Christmas is a time of rejoicing among the little folks in our schools. It is not necessarily a time for them to be in our homes, but a time of happy anticipations, glad songs and delightful stories. If the little Child of long ago is brought into every day life as a living, helpful presence, it will not be forgotten as a story told for the amusement of the hour.

Let us, as teachers, in giving them

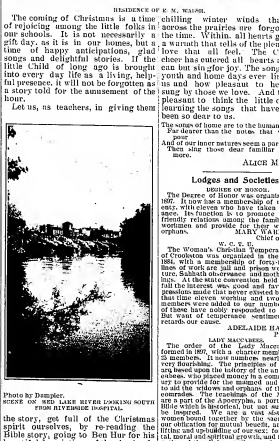

Photo by Dempler.
SCENE ON RED LAKE RIVER LOOKING SOUTH FROM RIVERSIDE PARK.

the story, get full of the Christmas spirit ourselves, by re-reading the Bible story, going to Ben Hur for the beautiful descriptions of the shepherds and the wise men—then to Dickens for Christmas fun and merry-making; perhaps these will be an abundant supply of good stories which the children love to hear and from which they will get the best of helpfulness.

That teacher needs great preparation and much wisdom, who attempts to give the children the thought of the Christ of the Bible, as once being a little child like themselves, and then ascending their reverence for the divine Christ.

We all want to make Christmas a force for good in the lives of the children entrusted to our care, therefore let us do our best, and never fear, for we know all we can offer for good can be lost. We will teach the little ones that they are serving the Christ-child when they try to make everyone happy and follow these words of good cheer by some deed of kindness.

To Christmas good times belong Santa Claus! What would the children do without their dear, old Santa? There is such a charm in the name, that even listless children are on the alert to hear all that is said. Watch their happy faces as you talk of the probable visits of Santa Claus. I think it would be cruel to rob them of that beautiful dream of their childhood. My sympathy is with the little girl who went home crying because her playmate said, "Santa Claus is an oldhumbug, there is no suchthing." I would do my best to keep that little Santa until they had outgrown the pleasure in it and merged into the idea of being a Santa Claus, then they will be just as happy in giving pleasure to those who otherwise would have had no Christmas.

ANNIE HAYES.

Music in the Country Home.

The country needs music in its homes. At the happy Christmas time when all are planning for each other's happiness and pleasure, how much the homes in the country need music! Those living in towns and villages are not so dependent upon what the family can give, for there are churches, the places of amusement and to these homes for what may be lacking in our own home. But when people are isolated on the prairie and's each family is largely dependent on the resources of its own members for its pleasure and amusements, how much enjoyment may be obtained if one or all are musically inclined. Parents living in the country ought to strive to give at least one child in the family the opportunity of studying music even though it be but a little. If one child in a family has had the advantage of musical instruction that one can assists the others and all may use their abilities together in making home pleasant and attractive. What an added pleasure in thecountry home at Christmas time is present. On Christmas day when the uncles, aunts and cousins have all enjoyed the hospitality and bounty of their hosts and the little ones have grown weary of the many games that the fruitful minds have provided; when the lamps are lighted, how pleasant for all to gather around the organ and sing the dear old songs, familiar to all! They never grow old for they tell how "Once in Royal David's City, Jesus Christ, the Child, Was Born." The coming of winter winds that sweep across the prairies are forgotten for the time. Within, all hearts glow with the warmth that tells of the pleasure and love that all feel. The Christmas time has entered all hearts and they can but sing for joy. The songs of our youth and home days ever linger with us and the memory of a mother's song by those we love. And too how pleasant to think the little ones are learning the songs that have always been dear to us.

The songs of home are to the human heart
Far dearer than the notes that song hath learned
And of our inner natures most a part
Then sing those dear familiar lays once more.

ALICE MILLER.

Lodges and Societies.

ORDER OF HONOR.

The Dearee of Honor was organized Oct. 14, 1897. Now has a membership of nearly seventy, with a good list of applicants for membership. Its function is to promote union and friendly relations among the families of the members and provide for their widows and orphans.

MARY WARNEKE,
Chief of Honor.

W. C. T. U.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of this county was organized December 17th, 1884, with a membership of forty-four. Our lines of work are all given work. Heretofore, Sabbath observance and mother's meetings. At the annual meeting in October we had the interest was good and favorable impressions made. Our membership is now 75. Sabbath observance meetings are not held, but members were added to our number. Some good work is being done along all lines. But want of temperance sentiment greatly retards our success.

ADELAIDE HARRIS.

LADIES OF THE MACCABEES.

The order of the Lady Maccabees was formed in 1892, with a charter membership of 25 members. It now numbers nearly 70 and is very flourishing. It is a fraternal and beneficiary based upon the history of the ancient Maccabees. Its motto is "Live to benefit others." Its aim is to provide for the mutual support of the old the widows and orphans of their fallen members. The ritualistic of the Maccabees are a part of the Apocrypha, a portion of the Old Testament which is rejected, but not supposed to be inspired. We are a vast sisterhood of women, bound by the ties of fraternity, for the mutual protection and assistance, the uplifting and up-building of our race, for the development of social and spiritual growth, for a full realization of the divine attributes of charity and love, which is the foundation of the happiness of the world.

ENNA T. CHESTERMAN,
Lady Commander.

HERMANS.

Crookston North Star Hekmans, No. 32, was duly organized June 1, 1895, with sixteen charter members. The growth since then has been slow but steady, the idea of the members being to secure a few good members rather than a large membership. The present membership is looked for before winter is over.

WALLACE R. ROSSETTER,
Worthy Noble.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS.

Golden Rod Camp, No. 96, Royal Neighbors of America, was organized in November, 1897, with twenty-one charter members, of which ten were beneficiary. At present it has twenty-seven beneficiary and forty-three honorary members. The organization has a two fold object: First, to provide a home for the orphans of deceased members, and second, social and fraternal relationships. All of which is being much toward having members meet upon a common level and in making this order one of the most popular orders now in existence and the benefits of its kind in northern Minnesota.

IDA E. MISSNER,
Oracle.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS.

Col. Colman Relief Corps, No. 92, was organized Dec. 29, 1891. Has enjoyed a very harmonious work in so far as the ability to perpetuate the memory of its heroic dead. Has been helpful to its members in the hours of sickness and trouble. Is doing a work in our lives with undiminished force. Financially the corps is solid and stable the present membership is looked for before winter is over.

MOLLIE F. ROSSETTER,
Worthy Matron.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS.

Golden Rod Camp, No. 96, Royal Neighbors of America, was organized in November, 1897, with twenty-one charter members, of which ten were beneficiary. At present it has twenty-seven beneficiary and forty-three honorary members. The organization has a two fold object: First, to provide a home for the orphans of deceased members, and second, social and fraternal relationships. All of which is doing much toward having members meet upon a common level and in making this order one of the most popular orders now in existence and the benefits of its kind in northern Minnesota.

IDA E. MISSNER,
Oracle.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS.

Col. Colman Relief Corps, No. 92, was organized Dec. 29, 1891. Has enjoyed a very harmonious work in so far as the ability to perpetuate the memory of its heroic dead. Has been helpful to its members in the hours of sickness and trouble. Is doing a work in our lives with undiminished force. Financially the corps is solid and stable the present membership is looked for before winter is over.

MOLLIE F. ROSSETTER,
Worthy Matron.

FASHION, FACT AND FANCY.

—GEO. ELLIOTT.

A woman lives in her affections.

The woman that deliberates is lost.
—ADDISON.

The hand that rocks the cradle,
Is the hand that rounds the world.

"To change her mind, is a woman's prerogative."
—POPE.

Fashion wears out more clothes than women do.

It is said that many model women earn a living by trying on cloaks.

Baroness Bleseh has given over $5,000,000 to charity since the death of her husband.

And yet believe me good as well as ill
Woman's at best a contradiction still
—POPE.

Because, the ninety-ninth time might fail when the hundredth would succeed, she replied.

Japanese women have produced a large and important part of the best literature of their country.

The path of a good woman is strewn with flowers, but rose bud her steps not before them.

Why do not all those boys do the same thing so many times John Wanamaker asked of his wife.

Pencil workis all the rage now. Our grandmothers' old time employment is decidedly the fashion.

Velvet and velveteen will be much worn and not only in combination with lace and fur but clothes and silk goods.

Mrs. Caroline Hazzard, of Rhode Island who has just been honoured as president of Wellesley colleges, is not a college graduate.

A new stock is made of two yards of wide velvet ribbon which passes twice around the neck and ties in front in a bow with long ends.

Mrs. Hattie Jester, a sister of Bethale Bill, is said to be the only female press agent on the road. She left the newspaper business to go into this new field.

Emma Goldman the anarchist, has come back across the ocean. She says she does not find American girls corrupted by the prevailing pestilence of atheism as the "disciples of Ingersoll" would have us believe—decidedly not decidedly.

The craze for machine stitching seems to be on the increase in this natural boundary and even invaded the domain of fur, the very newest short fur neckpieces are made of stitched velvet at the edge and reverse of the same.

Some women ladies are trying to do away with the envelope. They wish to take the letter out of the side of the plain. They say the red wafers and the sealing wax and the mucilage never were all that could be demanded or knew.

Women journalists will do well to avoid Japan. The new press law of the empire of the Mikado prohibits the publication of newspapers or others as the "obedience of the people" can be better accomplished hereafter.

The lack of encouragement for the makeovers discovered in the return of the cuirass bodice, which is to be worn with a separate bodice, the cuirass and sleeves are alike, never a very pretty fashion it is true, but at times extraordinarily unbecoming.

Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker has opened a campaign in Connecticut against the Platt plan, war, and a petition is being circulated for signatures of women opposed to that war. Mrs. Hooker proposes to circulate the petition throughout the whole country and present it to congress.

Tom Stanton makes one of his characters say, "Mothers are just the biggest invention ever sent into the face of the earth, or ever will be, till the whole business is wound up. They are infinitely better than we are. We have never felt good, for we knew that He could never have made us, and be perfect."

Miss Clara B. Wright, formerly of San Diego, but now living in Denver and publishing the Liberal Advocate, says: Speaking of the Rampant City Whitecaps, was sent to her by a subscriber in Indiana, a number of stitched papers. It has already doubled in size and has a correspondence in 31 states and in the entire population of the town, so many papers are sent home to relatives.

In default of a new spirit of heroes, here is a chance for the women of Illinois to history as the Maid of Altoona. There was a strike planned on the railroad, but the militia there was already stationed at her town, so she of the railroad, and the strike was broken before it had really begun. Now she is a heroine, and has thoroughly justify herself.

In favor of the new pouch, of course, the sleeve, that has been going through the same process of evolution as the corsage, and the question on which the skirts are now entering. There is no doubt about that fashion has come back again to the tight sleeve, and now that the sleeve is tight enough to show the curve of the arm, there is to be no concealment of the arm, as there is to having a shirt if absolutely smooth over the hand, but the plain sleeves are not becoming, puff or some elicit trimming must be used.

CLUBS.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB.

If a man aspires to be not elevated:

If a man aspires to be not elevated:
If a man aspires to be not elevated:

A club for the cultivation of the power to express thoughts clearly and well. The club met and decided to form a club limited to twenty members, to discuss current topics, each member pledged herself to take active part monthly and to prepare to speak without notes. A constitution was adopted and pointed each month to outline a program and appointed the members. Now has club believes that great benefit and much pleasure will be derived.

LADIES' AUXILIARY CLUB.

The Ladies' Auxiliary Club was organized in the fall of 1898 with a membership of twenty-five. Meets every Friday afternoon. They discuss any topic they choose and endeavor to acquire proficiency in the national game and for social enjoyment.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB OF CROOKSTON.

Although our woman's club
Is not very large and old,
After only a little debate
It decided to have a club.
It sprang into being
Like Venus from the wave teeming
With hopes of freeing
Our sex from ignorance, seeming.
We meet with minds congenial
And talk of things material
Which some we love and treat
And some who is always "dust."
Which to one who will do good.
But she has a better choice.
For she long ages knew how
And we need no wonder now.
We have a motto, "Lend a hand"
Which is carried out in deeds not mouth:
We appreciate her worth
And she is loved the earth.
We all like Mrs. Frazer,
For she does not overwhelm her
For fear it would dim her.
Mrs. Nelson has all ways a say
Though modest for diversity,
Yet she knows her way.
Across the ocean to our eyes
To entrap them all like mice.
Though the truth will sometimes fall
Not for lack of being stale.
For the fact of not being newsfully
Of the things that are told
Of the time and of the nation
That occurred yesterday.
We shall fail to do our duty
If we fail to mention a beauty
In our answer from the study
Of the man who are renovated
And some women all profound
Who are in the world renowned.
I may be that some day soon
Perhaps New Year's afternoon—
That our male friends we'll receive
If it don't cost more than five
And we'll have a time
Now I've told you all in rhyme
How I found myself after a time
Just what I should do or think,
But we are not hard to please
For we're in the city hall
And surely this is all.

—HELEN A. STEWART.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SILO AND CORN CROP

Average Wheat Crop in England Over Double That in Valley—More Animal Husbandry Needed—Forage Plants can be Raised Here.

CORN PLANT MOST IMPORTANT

Silo Preserves Succulent Qualities of Forage Plants—Circular in Form with Tight Base and Sides—Cattle Have Green Food in Winter.

EDITOR OF THE JOURNAL:

I have just read in one of the leading farm journals that the average yield per acre of England's wheat crop for 1899 is 31 bushels as against 13 for the state of Minnesota. The price of No. 1 hard wheat as I write is 54 cents in our local market.

The lowering of our average yields per acre, as will be seen by the comparison of a term of years, and the continued low price of wheat, notwithstanding the sharp advance in nearly every other item of farm or dairy product, as well as of nearly every item the farmer has to purchase, are, or should be, "Guide boards," warning the thoughtful and thrifty wheat producer to turn from the highway of financial ruin over which he is now traveling, to find safety and success in the green pastures and beside the still waters of that more profitable occupation—"Animal Husbandry."

The greater fertility of the English wheat fields, which have been in constant cultivation for centuries, as against a decade or two for the Red River Valley farm, gives convincing proof of the value of a mixed husbandry, wherein wheat raising holds a secondary place; and the sooner this fact is not only recognized but acted on by the great mass of our farmers, the better it will be for all. The greatest obstacle in the mind of most wheat producers to this change is the mistaken idea that it is too expensive to raise for farm animals on our cultivated lands. This idea has found lodgment and taken root in their mind from the fact that our vast stretches of virgin prairie—before it passed into the hands of private ownership and under cultivation—bore year by year, luxurious crops of the most nutritious grasses, which were to be had for the taking, and the early settlers became so accustomed to this order of things, it is hard for them to realize that equally cheap forage can be raised by cultivation and that it is not profitable to buy "wild grass stumpage" where they must go a very considerable distance from their homes to make the hay and haul it home.

FORAGE PLANTS

There are many forage plants suited to our soil and climate, all of which are destined to have a place in our crop rotation, but among them all is destined to take the lead, and become a factor of prime importance in advancing the growth of animal husbandry throughout the whole northwest.

THE CORN PLANT

Until within the past few years, the expense of harvesting and the difficulty experienced in preserving it, prevent in a great degree its being extensively cultivated as an exclusive forage crop. But the advent of the corn harvester and the silo, almost simultaneously, will be found to have marked an epoch in our agriculture as clearly as did the introduction of the wheat harvester when railroad development had opened to settlement the fertile plains of the Red River Valley and the Dakotas.

I have been often asked to give your readers something concerning my experience in raising fodder corn, and with our silos.

The first question always is: "Do you raise your own seed, and what variety is best?" To this the answer must be that we have not found it convenient or profitable to raise our own seed. While there are specially favored localities about us where the early varieties will grow luxuriantly and mature almost every year, yet it remains as a general proposition for the whole Valley that corn raising—especially the larger varieties—for the seed, is an uncertain occupation, and we have found it more profitable to patronize some reliable seed firm than to trust to that of our own raising. In regard to variety, there are many good ones, each having its special friends and advocates. It should be some variety which will produce a good sized ear and have it about ready to glaze before the corn is cut, and if a large sized stalk can be secured with this stage of development of the ear, so much the better. Taken one year with another, my choice has settled on the

IMPROVED LEAMING

Nebraska grown. It gives a very large stalk, in which there is a large amount of nutrition; and in all ordinary years the ear will be sufficiently matured in 85 to 90 days from planting, for ensilage purposes.

Conditions of unusual wet weather continued until late into June of this year preventing our commencing to plant until the 22d of June, and yet we raised one thousand tons of fodder corn from one hundred and ten acres, beginning to feed it, as a soiling crop, to our cows about Aug. 15, and beginning to fill our silos Sept. 12, although there was not as much development of ears at that time as desirable. In regard to the most commonly accepted method is to sow in drills with an ordinary wheat drill, closing up as many of the seed apertures in the bottom of the box as may be necessary to give the desired distance between rows.

MANNER OF PLANTING

I have a shoe drill which sows in rows eight inches apart, and I close four holes, leaving every fifth. This spaces the rows three and one-half feet apart, which is plenty thick enough.

The people at the Minnesota Agricultural Station advocate sowing two rows six inches apart and then a space of three and one-half feet and then two more rows six inches apart and so on, but with the larger varieties of corn and in our rich soil I have not dared to try the experiment, fearing that it could not be cut, two rows at a time, with either the McCormick or Deering harvester; and again in our old wheat fields there is so much of foul seed that this narrow space between two rows which could not be cultivated would harbor enough weeds to retard the growth of both rows.

E. D. CHILDS.

As to amount of seed required taken one variety with another sixteen quarts per acre will furnish enough seed to drop a kernel every eight inches apart in rows three and one-half feet apart, and this is the distance I prefer.

CORN CULTIVATION.

As soon as the seed is planted work should be begun, with the drag or Breed's weeder, to keep down or kill all the weeds possible while they are young and tender; after the corn is well up out of the ground, say two inches, change to a wheel cultivator, and continue until the corn is too high to work with without breaking down the rows. In our 110 acres this year I kept two wheel cultivators going continuously until the rows were too high and then with an old-fashioned one-horse cultivator which works one row at a time until it was above the horse's head.

Too much importance cannot be attached to the matter of commencing before the corn is up and cultivating the crop continuously.

Taken one year with another in this climate, Sept. 1 is about the right time to begin cutting for the silo. If cut and bound with a harvester, it can be readily loaded on to wagons and hauled to the cutting box; or if preferred it can be allowed to lie a day or two and will, and then be hauled. One advantage of putting in shocks is that, unlike wheat, threshing, wet weather need not stop work longer than while the rain is actually falling. Indeed if the corn has been frosted and become dry, the water would be a positive advantage.

THE SILO.

In regard to the "silo", what it is, how built, how filled, what its advantages, what stock can be fed with ensilage, all these and many other questions, come to me daily.

In regard to the first question silos have been so long used and so often discussed in dairy conventions and farm papers, that one would think all were informed on this point, but I am so often asked the question that it may not be amiss to answer it again.

A silo is a receptacle in which green forage plants may be stored so as to be impervious to the air except at the top, and so preserved for an indefinite period without losing their succulent qualities; on the same principle as the thrifty housewife preserves her fruit in air tight cans. It may be almost any form but should have much greater depth than width or thickness.

Its prerequisites are, first, a good foundation, second, air-tight base and sides, success depending on these two points. When they first came into use they were built square or nearly so, but the corners were found to be objectionable and experiments were tried with other forms, and at the present time the consensus of opinion seems to favor the round tank built of two inch staves, held together with iron hoops. In the southern part of the state I understand there are many in use with only a rough board roof without shingles, and without any outside shell, but in our climate I think an outside shell of some matched lumber is very desirable; this should be built eighteen inches from outside the silo proper.

In depth it is better to build from 24 to 30 feet high, to give greater pressure to exclude the air more thoroughly. In diameter we must be governed by the number of cattle to be fed, and whether all ensilage or part hay will be fed.

We are using as high as eighty pounds per head per day, for a few of our deepest milkers, and with a herd of about 130 head above six months old, average about 50 pounds per day, or approximately seven tons per head for nine months' feeding.

In estimating the

CAPACITY OF A SILO

thirty feet deep calculate every fifty cubic feet to hold one ton.

In the fall of 1898 we filled a silo 24 feet in diameter and 32 feet deep, let it settle for two weeks and then filled the vacant space, left to settle again for one week and again filled. We opened this silo on the tenth day of January and continued using it until the seventh day of the next July, feeding one feed a day to an average of about 120 head of cattle, about 85 of which on an average, were giving milk. We had milked about the same number the preceding year, and aside from the ensilage had fed about the same amount of grain per head for both years, but in comparing receipts for the time we had been feeding from the silo were $942.00 greater than for the same time the year previous without ensilage, but with good prairie hay in place of it. As a result of this fact we have this year built a second silo of the same size as the first one, giving us a capacity of 600 tons of ensilage for our dairy.

HOW CONSTRUCTED

In the construction of these silos we lay the foundation, a circular wall two feet thick and commencing ten inches below the surface of the ground and rising eighteen inches above it, below the surface wall, built without mortar, but above it, with motor to exclude the air; the material used is cobble stones found on the prairie east of the city. We also fill the circular place eighteen inches deep, where the wall rises above the ground, with loose stones. This gives a base four foot foundation of solid stone. The object of building the wall two feet thick is to form a base for the two inch staves of the silo and for the thin shell eighteen inches outside with a bearing outside of each. On the inner side of this wall are laid pieces of 2x10, cut in the arc of a circle to conform to the circular form of the wall; these for silo, also the same on the outer side for sills for the shell.

On these are first set up the staves of the silo, which have previously been grooved to received a tongue 1 inch by one inch which is bedded in with coal-tar and pitch; in the case of the silo built this summer these staves were of Washington fir 32 feet long. During the process of erection these are kept in place by false works on the inside for this silo we had thirteen hoops—four at the bottom of 1 inch iron and nine above of 1 iron; each hoop in three pieces joined by cast lugs so they can be tightened the same as a railroad tank. Outside of these staves we set up a frame work of 2x4, for the shell, and covered with this siding, but another time should take 1 inch boards of the same thickness both edges, and double. Siding, thicker at one edge than the other, does not fit evenly on a circular building. Having erected both the silo and its shell we then put in an octagon roof and cornice, with one dormer window, into which the end of the carrier is thrust while filling the building. Above this roof is placed an octagon ventilator for purposes of ventilation, and to give a finished appearance to the structure.

HOW TO FILL SILO

In filling this we used a cutting-box with an eighteen inch cylinder, and a chain carrier forty-five feet long, the machine being driven by an agricultural engine. With this machine we cut and threw into the top of the silo ninety-one and one-fourth tons of corn fodder, by actual weight on the scales, in ten hours time, and while we did not weigh it other days, are confident there were days when we cut as high as 100 tons. In filling care must be taken to keep the whole surface thoroughly packed down so as to exclude the air at every point. It can be cut from one-fourth to two inches in length. After various experiments we prefer the one inch length.

ADVANTAGES OF SILO

The advantages of preserving fodder in this form are various; among them we would mention, that nearly nine-tenths of the value of corn fodder lies in the stalk and about one-tenth in the blade or leaf; under the old system of feeding whole, after drying, the leaf was about all the animals would eat, as ensilage it is all eaten alike. Again if it is cut up and fed dry the hard pieces of heavy stalk are liable to hurt the cattle's mouths, although this last evil can be partially modified by using a "shreader" in place of a cutting box. Again of the greatest importance is the fact that with ensilage the dairyman has a succulent food for his stock in all seasons and one which is always enjoyed by the cattle, and lastly it retains all the nutritious qualities of the green corn, much of which is wasted where the fodder is left to stand in the field to be fed as wanted through the winter.

I thought when commencing this article to show your readers the cost of building and filling a silo and our expense in raising over 110 acres of corn this season but time and space will not permit at this time.

E. D. CHILDS.

Cordova Wax Candles

Nothing else adds so much to the elegance of the dining room or hostelry as beautiful white wax candles. Cordova Candles will not cost more to use than ordinary candles. The best grocers handle them, for the simplest or the most elaborate dinner. Ask your grocer for Cordova Candles. Made in all colors and the most delicate tapestry STANDARD OIL CO. and sold everywhere.

Watch Bratrud

AND

He'll "WATCH" You

He has everything which a first class watchmaker and jeweler keeps in stock. Watches and clocks repaired and cleaned.

Low Prices and First Class Work

Repairing Guaranteed.

M. A. BRATRUD

Anderson & Olson Block.

S. L. Collins,

LIVERY AND FEED STABLES

Horses bought and sold on commission. Everything neat and nobby. Feeding a specialty.

Main and Fourth streets.

CROOKSTON — — MINNESOTA.

A Jewel

Yes that's just what N. K. Olson is, and he keeps all kinds of silver plated flat ware. Also all kinds of holiday ware, watches, jewelry, clocks, diamonds etc., etc. Give him a call.

N. K. OLSON.

120 Robert St. W.

JOHN CARLSON

Headquarters for Staple and Fancy

GROCERIES

Fresh and Canned Fruit

Butter and Eggs

Taken in Exchange

Corner Main and Fletcher Streets

LONGVIEW STOCK FARM

SECTION 15, LOWELL.

Short Horn Cattle and Poland China Hogs

FOR SALE.

Herd headed by Imp. Bonnie Scotland 135,225

R. A. WILKINSON, Prop., Crookston, Minn.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER

SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO

ROBBINS & WARNER

GRAIN COMMISSION

Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.

A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office.

Duluth and Minneapolis.

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought.

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON.....Pres H. STRENERSON.....Vice-President.
N. S. GERVAIS.....2d Vice-President. L. ELLINGTON.....Cashier
A. P. HANSON, Asst. Cashier.

Spend the Holidays at Home

$40

Canadian excursion via Northern Pacific

Canadian Excursion

Tickets will be sold by the Northern Pacific from December 1 to December 31 inclusive, to principal points in.....

Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia.

Good for three months from date of sale, with liberal stop-over privileges. Limit will be extended upon payment of reasonable additional sums. Round trip tickets will be sold to points as far east as Montreal for $40.00, and at correspondingly low rates to points east of Montreal in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Call on agents of the Northern Pacific Ry., for detailed information.

CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. & T. A.

CARY SAFE CO..

BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.

.....Manufacturers of.....

Fire and Burglar Proof Safes

Vaults, Locks, Etc.

CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE G. EISKINE, President. WM. ANGLIN, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

George B. Eiskine. A. A. Miller. Wm. Anglin. J. R. Eskinon. E. M. Walsh. L. Fontaine J. P. Foote. W. R. Crosby. J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE CITY WATER SUPPLY.

Extensive Improvements Made this Year.—New Infiltration Gallery.—Over a Mile of Pipe Laid.—Splendid New Building.

ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER.

Complete Machinery Equipment.—Steam Heating Plant.—Most Competent Employes.—Company Deserves Patronage.

Beneath the power house and eight feet lower than the level of the river below the dam, are four turbine wheels. Water, with a vertical fall of nine feet, impinging on the buckets of these water wheels, transmits to them some of its energy, the wheels revolve on their vertical axes, and the turbines being connected with the shafting by a coupling, the energy is thence conveyed by pulleys and belts to the machinery above. The result is that water is forced through the mains and is on tap in the different houses throughout the city, night is made almost as day by the arc and incandescent lights that hang at the streets corners and in the business blocks and residences, and motive power is furnished by which machinery, that is needed in carrying on different kinds of business, is run. Water, incessantly dropping upon a huge granite, will eventually wear the granite away, but here, in consequence of the fall of a small volume of water through a few feet of space, property is protected, maa's living is made easier and more convenient and his work less burdensome. As one stands and beholds the immense volume of water that flows smoothly over the dam and, tumbling against the rocks below, is dashed into foam and spray, he cannot but exclaim, "what an immense amount of power is here wasted"! And why this waste? It is because that part of the stream is unbridled; man has not yet harnessed it for his use, so that water power and machinery, though powerful and even necessary aids in the working out of the destiny of humanity, would be useless without the mind of man to control them.

EDWARD PETERSON, SUPT.

SECOND TO NONE.

The Crookston Waterworks, Power and Light Company own this water power, and in addition thereto the waterworks system, the city steam heating plant, and the electric light and motor power plant. Extensive improvements have been made during the year in the waterworks, so that Crookston now has a system second to none in this state or, for that matter, in many other states. The water is filtered through a natural bed of sand, absolutely pure. A huge reservoir, with a capacity of a quarter of a million gallons, holds in reserve enough water to supply the wants of the city for twenty-four hours in case anything goes wrong with the intake pipe.

The company is now prepared to furnish steam to many of the business blocks and the system will in the near future be extended to include the entire business portion of the city. The quality of the electric lighting is all that the people can wish and they appreciate the fact that there is no other town of the same size in the United States that has the advantage of a metropolitan all-day service. Elsewhere this service is given only in cities with a population of twenty-five thousand and upward. The company also makes a specialty of furnishing electric power which has been and is one of the factors in building up the business interests of the county seat of Polk county.

EARLY HISTORY.

Small indeed were the beginnings of this now extensive business. It was in the year 1882 that the first water mains were laid. The city decided that it would own and operate its own waterworks system and the contract for getting this system in working order was given to K. D. Chase, now of Faribault, Minn., but then a resident of Crookston. Not long afterward Mr. Chase bought out the city's interest. In the meantime D. Jacobus had established an electric light plant at the power house. These two interests—the waterworks system and the electric light plant—and also Mr. Chase's interest in the dam site, were, in 1886, bought by the Crookston Water Works, Power and Light Company, of which company Mr. Jacobus was president and general manager. In 1890 the entire business was sold to the present owners, W. J. Murphy, of Minneapolis, being the president and general manager, Edward Peterson, superintendent and local manager, Leonard Peterson assistant, collector and bookkeeper.

WATER MAINS EXTENDED.

The small power house, or pumping station, was situated near Sampson's addition bridge, and the water was pumped directly out of the river as was the case until the new intake pipe was put in. There was one water wheel and the Jumbo water power pump that is still in use. The water mains extended from the power house up Robert street to Broadway and north on Broadway to Second street, and there were three hydrants. In 1890, at a cost of several thousand dollars, a franchise to lay water mains was purchased from the city by the Jacobus company, and at once the system was extended. New water pipes were laid on Broadway from Sixth street to Broadway bridge, around Houston avenue, on Ash street from Bessis street to the Central school buildiag, and on Main street from Loring to Seventh. The next year the system was extended into both Sampson's and Jerome's additions and the city paid ten thousand dollars for the laying of the mains from Seventh street one mile north and west to the stock yards. The city, however, did not derive the benefit from this outlay that was expected—the stock yards were removed to Larimore in 1897. Along this line there are now five taps, and one hydrant near the place formerly owned by E. C. Davis. In 1892 the mains were extended to the county hospital. There are now laid in the city 20,000 feet of pipe, exclusive of what the city owns, the pipe varying in diameter from four to twelve inches.

FIRST ELECTRIC APPARATUS.

The equipment of the original electric light plant, which was located at the city pumping station, consisted of one Van Depoele, forty-lights, arc machine, a full supply of poles and lamps, and one sixty-six inch Leffel water wheel. D. Jacobus, in 1889, added one Westinghouse alternating dynamo.

NEW POWER HOUSE.

As the old power house was situated near Sampson's addition bridge, several hundred feet below the dam, a canal was built from the dam to the power house and it was by means of the water that ran through this canal that the power was secured at the power house. But as the river was seven or eight feet higher than the canal and the soil was sandy, the canal after a time was washed out and the water power, of course, gave out at the same time, so that in 1892 it was found necessary to buy a 250 horse power engine. The same year the old power house was demolished and a new building—the one at present in use by the company—erected right alongside the dam. This building, 50 x 65, is built mostly of cut stone. There are two stories above ground and two submerged stories, with a wheel discharge pit eight feet under the river below the dam.

SHOWING DAM AND OLD POWER HOUSE OF CROOKSTON LIGHT AND POWER COMPANY.

The water wheels from the old pumping and light station were transferred to the new power house. At present the company has four water wheels. The largest of these, a new Morgan & Smith turbine, was put in last summer. This is a 300 horse power wheel under a nine foot head and has a capacity double that of any of the other wheels.

TWO NEW SETS OF DYNAMOS.

The old dynamos, also, were used for a short time, but later new machinery was put in, so that the company now has two sets of dynamos, one with a capacity of 2,000 sixteen candle power incandescent lights and the other with a capacity of 3,000 lights. The armature of the former dynamo, which is belt driven, istwenty-two inches in diameter and makes 850 revolutions in a minute. Twelve brushes pick up the current generated in the armature and send it out on the lines. The latter dynamo, which is the duplex dynamo, has two armatures, both of which are run on the main shaft. It stands about six feet high, rests on one base, is made of cast iron and weighs thirteen tons. There are eighteen brushes to pick up the current and twelve electro magnets.

EDISON THREE WIRE SYSTEM.

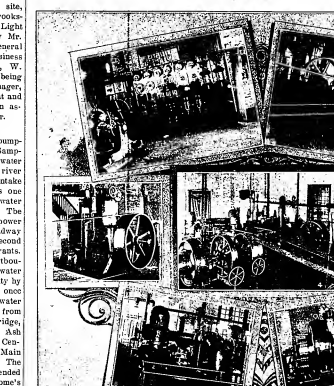
In 1895 new transmitting machinery was bought and a change made from the 1,000 volt alternating system to the Edison direct current three wire system. In the alternating system the current darts back and forth over the wires as the rate of 16,000 alternations per minute, while in the Edison three wire system there is a steady stream of electricity.

CHEAP MOTOR POWER.

For the past three years there has been a twenty-four hour service of electric current. No other town in the United States with a population less than 25,000 can boast of being favored with an all-day metropolitan service. During this time the company has worked up considerable business by furnishing electric power at rates that are low as compared with ordinary rates. Old steam and gasoline plants are disappearing and electric motors are being substituted, for the latter are cheaper and it is much less trouble to run them. Besides there is no smoke or dust connected with them. They take up less room and are always ready for use. The object which the company has in offering to furnish electric motor power at a low price is to draw small investors to the city. One of the reasons why Minneapolis is forging ahead of St. Paul is that the former city has cheap motor power and Little Falls, Minnesota, and Great Falls, Montana, have been built up in the same way.

SOME OF THE MACHINERY.

The Westinghouse compound steam engine, 290 horse power, which was purchased in 1892, is eight feet high. The shaft is of steel and the fly wheels, sixty-eight inches in diameter, make 300 revolutions a minute. This engine, which is located in the engine room in the new waterworks building, is run independently when the water power fails, or in case some of the water power machinery needs repairing. It is run in connection with the water power



1. Switch board. 2. Two general electric generators of 1500 lights capacity. 3. Westinghouse compound steam engine, 290 horse power.
4. Line shaft clutch pulleys. 5. Main driving belt, 36-inch 7-ply leather. 6. Triple water power pumps, capacity 1,000,000 gallons daily.
7. Duplex dynamo, capacity 3000 16-candle power lamps per hour.

pump only during the time of a heavy load which occurs most frequently when there is a fire.

The triple water power pump recently placed in the pump room of the new waterworks building is the same one that was purchased years ago by the city. Three cylinders, about eight feet high, stand, as it were, at the points of an equilateral triangle, the distance between the points being about six feet. Two hollow rings of iron, about a foot in diameter, join these cylinders in a circle, the one ring being a foot and a half from the floor, the other five feet. The water is drawn from the reservoir by suction into the lower ring or pipe, is forced thence into the cylinders and from there into the upper ring and thence to the city mains. All the water from the waterworks that is used throughout the city first passes through this pump. It works ordinarily under a pressure of sixty pounds but by the slight turning of an insignificant looking wheel the pressure is doubled. It is made of cast iron and has a capacity of from 1,000,000 to 1,200,000 gallons every twenty-four hours.

The main shaft or pulley in the power house is a huge wheel forty-eight inches in diameter and fourteen in width.

One is never in any part of the power house long before he hears the ring of an electric bell that is on the switchboard. This is a note of warning to the attendant and calls his attention to the fact that the pressure needs adjusting. If the pressure is too high, the lamps will burn out, if too low, the light will be rather dim. The device of this alarm bell was invented by one of the employees and enables the one in charge, with very little trouble, to keep the motor going at a steady speed.

The switch board referred to is an important piece of machinery, for from here the motors and electric currents are regulated. It is eight by fourteen feet and is made of Vermont blue marble, the highest grade of marble on the market. There are four Ampere-meters which register the volume of the electric current and two volt-meters which show the pressure. All the machinery and wires of the electric light plant are made to conform to a certain pressure—110 volts for each dynamo—and hence the system does not work well if the pressure changes. When, for any reason, it is thought necessary to change from one set of dyanmos to another—both sets do not ordinarily run at the same time—the change is effected by the manipulation of switches on the switchboard.

THIS YEAR'S IMPROVEMENTS.

Extensive as have been the improvements made, during the past years, by the Crookston Waterworks, Power & Light Company, in the way of new high grade machinery and extension of the waterworks system, the putting in this year of the new intake pipe and the consequent laying of several thousand feet of new water mains, the building of a huge reservoir and the erection of a new waterworks building and up-town office, are of more importance, indeed are of inestimable value to the city for many reasons.

CHEAPER SEWERAGE.

The city sewerage problem, which has been a somewhat serious one, is thus solved. The new intake pipe is located one mile above the pumping station. The city, accordingly, will be enabled to put in a sewer system which, if had the original plan for severing the city been carried out, it would have been necessary to locate all sewer outlets below the dam, as otherwise the water supply of the city would have been contaminated, and this arrangement would have been very costly. As it is now these outlets can be located anywhere along the river bank and the city is thus saved considerable expense.

INFILTRATION GALLERY.

A large excavation, ten feet below the river level, was made on the river's bank one mile in an air line east of the new waterworks building and more than two miles, by way of the river, above the power house. In this excavation was placed a strong white pine box, ten feet deep, by twelve feet wide, by 120 feet long, capable of holding 100,000 gallons of water, and upon the box are ten feet of earth, raising it to the level of the river bank. The bed of the river here is gravel and sand. The water filters through this strata of sand by force of gravity and comes up into the box from below, the bottom of the box being open. This system of filtering is called the infiltration gallery, and one and is the best in existence. Itcan, of course, be used only where the conditions are favorable, that is, where the bed of the river for several feet is sand, which is the case at Denver in Colorado, Lyons in France, Genoa in Italy, Indianapolis in Indiana, and DesMoines in Iowa. Water passing through this sand bed filter is absolutely pure and wholesome.

NEW WATER MAINS.

New pipes have been laid from the infiltration gallery, which is located in Jerome's addition, down Bridge street to the river at the head of Fletcher street, across the river—the pipes being laid some distance below the bottom of the river so that logs or any debris coming down the river can not injure them—and up Fletcher street past the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL building to the west of the Great Northern railway tracks, at which point they are turned north and brought up to the

HUGE RESERVOIR

which is underneath the new waterworks building, situated at the corner of Front street and Robert. This water tank is cylindrical in form, twenty-five feet deep, forty feet in diameter, with a brick wall two feet thick, and has a storage capacity of 250,000 gallons. A little more than one-half of the front part of the wall is built eighteen feet higher than the back part. Superintendent Peterson performed quite an engineering feat in its construction. Though the reservoir is only twenty-five feet deep, the bottom of it, made of concrete with a smooth cement surface, is more than forty feet below the level of Robert street, so that the work of excavating, as can be readily seen, was very great. In order to prevent the earth from caving in as the digging went on, the building of the walls began shortly after the digging commenced and when thecenter of the reservoirwas dug several feet below the bottom of the walls, the workmen were placed at regular intervals and the underpinning of the walls began, the idea being to have all parts of the walls'sink at the same time.

As the bottom of the reservoir is twenty feet below the end of the pipe into which the water from the infiltration gallery flows and as the water main at the reservoir end is carried over the side of the reservoir and down to within a few inches of the bottom of thetank a siphon isestablished and it is by means of this that the water is brought from the infiltration gallery to the reservoir, filling the latter to a depth of twenty feet. The elevation over which the water has to be carried is on Fletcher street, beginning at the river bank at the end of Bridge street in Jerome's addition. Right at this point is situated a pump house in which is a centrifugal pump operated by an electric motor. When everything was in order this pump was used to drive the air out of the pipes and to start the flow of water which since, by force of gravity, has continued, and it may, in case of an emergency, be used at any time.

THE NEW WATERWORKS BUILDING.

This is a large, handsome, imposing brick structure, the main part 52x110, and rises to an elevation of twenty-four feet above the level of Front street. There is a semi-circle glass front projecting from the corner of the building like a large bay window. This is simply an extension of the front half of the walls of the reservoir and enables visitors from the outside to see the water in the tank, the working of the pumps in the pump room and the interior of the display room and office.

The pump room is on a level with the back part of the reservoir, being ten feet below the floor of the main part of the building. It was placed lower in this way as the maximum height which a pump can lift water by suction is twenty-four feet and the depth of the water tank is twenty-five feet. Around the edge of the reservoir is a semi-circular railing.

The building is handsomely trimmed, the window and door sills and casts, a water table running along the Front street side one foot above the sidewalk and a belt course around the entire edifice above the windows, being of Kittle River sandstone.

On either side of the glass front on Robert street is a front entrance. The one to the left, as one faces the building, leads into the electrical display room where all kinds of electric goods are kept in stock. From here one enters the office on the northwest corner of the building, the two rooms being practically one and merely separated, to a certain extent, by railings. A truss, running across the reservoir at the extreme front of these two rooms, supports the floor on that side and the outer edge of the floor is a railing overlooking the tank.

Back of the display room and office is the engine and dynamo room, 38x58. To this room was transferred all the steam apparatus that was formerly in the power house and one set of dynamos.

THE STEAM HEATING PLANT.

The boiler room, 40x75, is in the rear of the building. There are now in it two boilers of 200 horse power each and room enough left for four more of the same or larger capacity.

LEONARD PETERSON.

Here, now, enough steam can be generated to heat all the buildings in the main central block of the city.

The Crookston Waterworks, Power & Light company is now the owner of the franchise granted to the American District Steam Heating company. The company proposes to lay so much pipe and then sell this pipe and franchise to the former company, which exchange has been effected. About 1850 feet of pipe have been laid. Starting at the corner of Main and Second streets pipe were laid 300 feet on Second street to within twenty-four feet of Broadway, down South Main 380 feet, from Main on Robert street to within twenty-four feet of Broadway and west on Robert to the waterworks building.

COMPANY DESERVES PATRONAGE.

The Crookston Waterworks, Power & Light company furnish the city with pure water, with the best arc and incandescent lights, with steam, at reasonable rates, to heat their buildings and with cheap motor power, and for these reasons are deserving of the patronage that the citizens are now giving them and entitled to more in the future.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

STATE UNIVERSITY

Bruce F. Harris writes of the Benefits to be Derived From College Life at Minneapolis.

THREE THOUSAND FIFTY STUDENTS.

Much interest in Athletics, Oratory and Debating—Moral Tone of Institution the Best.

The University of Minnesota, organized in 1868, has advanced in size and character until at the present time in point of attendance it ranks third among the great Universities of the country. Fourteen handsome buildings dotting a spacious and beautiful campus, show its rapid growth and bear testimony to the liberality of the state in furthering her educational interests. Minnesota owes much to Dr. Cyrus Northrup, our beloved president, a skilled educator, a man among men. It is through his untiring efforts that our University has been raised to her present proud position among the higher institutions of learning. Flattering offers from leading educational institutions attest his worth but his refusal of them evidences his loyalty and devotion to the Minnesota University.

The University comprises a graduate department, the colleges of science, literature and arts, of engineering and the mechanic arts, of agriculture and of law: the department of medicine, composed of the colleges of medicine and surgery, of homeopathic medicine and surgery, of dentistry and of pharmacy; the school of mines. All of these have buildings or parts of buildings especially designed and equipped for their use. The attendance this year in all departments is 3,050. Courses in each of the above colleges or departments are of four years duration, with the exception of the three year courses in law, dentistry and pharmacy, and successful work in any of the courses leads to a degree.

The University year covers a period of thirty-eight weeks and is divided into three terms. Sessions are held during five days of the week, Monday being taken as the holiday. Each day is divided into eight, fifty-minute periods, with ten minutes interim. The first hour begins at 8:30 a. m. and the eighth closes at 5:50 p. m. Chapel exercises are held at 10:35 in the morning. These consist of music, reading from the Bible and a short prayer. The president reads the notices and makes the announcements for the day, interspersing such wit and humor that the plainest notice is a feast for the mind. Attendance upon these exercises is not compulsory, but the Chapel hall, which has a seating capacity of 800, is always filled.

In the high school, a student had his desk assigned him in a general assembly room and more or less stringent rules as to his conduct were imposed. He was responsible for his presence in the school room during the entire session of the day and was under the eye of the teacher at all times. At the University he is free to come and go and attendance is only required upon the classes for which he is registered. There he was a school boy, here he is a college man, though it must be confessed that in many cases the transformation is by no means complete.

Hard and persistent study is required to master the subjects in any line of work and outside of books, there is much to be gained from a University course. College spirit runs high and there is considerable though friendly class rivalry, both of which have a broadening influence. The class rivalry is shown in the annual cane rush between the Freshman and Sophomore classes to decide which shall have the privilege of carrying canes during the year. It is always interesting and causes considerable fun. College spirit was magnificently demonstrated this season in the loyal manner in which foot ball was supported.

Athletic interests in the fall of the year center about football—the king of sports—and both faculty and students give it hearty encouragement. Minnesota's present prosperous condition in that line of athletics argues well for a return of her old-time prestige. Basket ball, baseball and lawn tennis command deserved attention and in season are very popular.

But all the interests are not athletic, for when the cold weather discourages out-door sports, the competition and support of the students turn to debating and oratory and the literary societies, of which there are nine, contest for honors. These nine societies are united in a Federal society to promote general literary and rhetorical work and for the management and support of the inter-state and inter-society debates. Each society elects an orator and two debators to the Federal society and from among these delegates a team is selected to represent our University in the inter-state debates. In addition to the literary societies there are various clubs and societies, as the Dramatic club, Engineers' club, Pedagogical society and societas Latina, organized for the advancement of learning and general culture among students in the different departments. Membership in all of these societies is limited and elective.

Libraries, aggregating 196,000 volumes, in both Minneapolis and St. Paul, are accessible to University students and in addition the University maintains a library containing 86,000 volumes, besides many thousand volumes of magazines, pamphlets and reports. All of these libraries afford excellent opportunities for research and graduate work.

As is natural from the number of students and the variety of classes represented at the University, the social life is not what it is in smaller colleges. The absence of anything like a dormitory system and the situation of the University in a large city, where the outside attractions are many, work against social unity. The Greek letter fraternities and societies counteract these influences to a certain extent, although their aim is not entirely social development. Some of the chapters own houses, some rent them. All are loyally supported by their members and to a greater or less extent afford social advantages and a means for development of character that is of great value.

The Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. are doing a grand and good work in fostering social and religious life. Through these organizations the student is enabled to enter a social sphere at once uplifting and helpful.

Intellectually, the best opportunities are afforded. The student comes in contact with professors who are recognized leaders in the line of work which they represent, whose eagerness and zeal are sure to spur him on to greater effort and whose broad personalities exert a far-reaching influence for character development.

His knowledge makes him the heir of all the ages, but his training develops a quality of mental fiber that counts most for success. And further, the whole moral tone of the institution is such that no mean or questionable action is countenanced and unconsciously, perhaps, the moral character of the student is strengthened against the forces that assail it in every day life.

The educational advantages at the University are indeed manifold. To students who go to college with the express purpose of deriving from the course all possible benefits, socially, intellectually and morally and who in an ensuing vocation's expression are "self centered," that is able to stand alone, the University presents a grand opportunity for full and perfect development.

BRUCE F. HARRIS,
Class of '02.

STOCK BRED IN THE PURPLE.

This is the Class of Animals Kept by R. A. Wilkinson.

The men in the valley who are making a specialty of animal husbandry and are raising herds of well bred stock are the men who are looking out for the future welfare of the country and one of these men is Col. R. A. Wilkinson. The Colonel is a fancier of animals both in the purple and on his farm a few miles north of the city he has a splendid herd of high class cattle. Farmers wishing to improve their herds and get new blood into their stock will do well to look over what Col. Wilkinson has before they make a purchase.

The Longview herd of Short Horns owned by Col. Wilkinson consists of about thirty head. The foundation was laid a few years ago by selections from the best herds in the country and will compare favorably with any herd of like number in the state.

The imported bull Bonnie Scotland 135235 now heads the herd. He is a thick fleshed, low down, blocky animal with a velvety coat and is a worthy representative of his Sire Scottish Victor and his Grandsire Scottish Archer.

The females of this herd and their offspring show individual merit as well as breeding. Christine of Fair Oaks by the Marquis of Kirklivington 87997 is a fine specimen of the Bates family and her calves by a Cruickshank bull show that the Bates and Cruickshank can be crossed with good results. The cow is the dam of Ole Bull 130965 one of the best calves ever raised in the state of Minnesota —now owned by Chris Houston of Fairfax.

Alice K 10th by Royal Victor 2nd 110901 is a grand cow and a good breeder as is shown by the fine heifer calf at her side. She is descended from Imported Josephine and is a worthy representative of the Josephine family. The other cows in this herd are fine animals of the best Bates blood imported into the Northwest, and their condition shows that good stock can be raised and kept in the Red River Valley as well as in any other part of the state.

The young bulls are all promising animals of Bates stock with Cruickshank crosses. This makes them good general purpose bulls fit to head any herd of cattle bred for milk and beef as they are all four good milking strains.

The aim of the owner is to breed a type of Short Horns that are good millers as well as good beef cattle and judging from results so far, he will achieve a distinct success in this line.

Hugh Robertson.

Any position in a bank is a responsible one but that of assistant cashier is particularly responsible. Hundreds and thousands of dollars commonly pass through his hands in a day and it is an easy matter to make costly errors. Moreover one has constantly to be on the alert for counterfeit money, both bills and silver, and too, every day, when a large number of customers is lined up before the window and eager to do business and get away. Then is the time when a skilled man comes into play, one who can dispatch the business rapidly and yet accurately. When, therefore, bank authorities find a man who is reliable and painstaking and withal competent to fill such an important position they retain him and if there is danger of losing him offer special inducements to remain. Such a man the First National bank has in Hugh Robertson. He has been with that financial institution for ten years and if the bank officials and customers have their wish he will remain at his present post for an indefinite period.

HUGH ROBERTSON

Mr. Robertson was born in old Scotland. He crossed the ocean and in 1879 took up a claim near Necke in North Dakota. The first winter he spent on his homestead was one of the most severe ever experienced in the northwest and when it was over he concluded that farming on the Dakota prairie was not his forte, so he pulled up his stakes and came to Crookston in 1881. Here he soon secured a position as clerk in the United States land office where he stayed till he entered the First National bank as teller, being later promoted to be assistant cashier. During the past year he enlarged and improved his residence, which is situated in the southeastern part of town in the midst of trees and green sward, so that he now has one of the ideal homes in the city.

S. L. Collins' Livery.

"Can any pleasure in life compare with a charming drive in the fresh air?" Well, that's a question it were perhaps difficult to settle, but it is undoubtedly true that there is keen enjoyment when one is seated in a buggy, with springs whose resistance you scarce can feel, and holds in his hands the reins by which he guides over the highway a spanking team of fleet-footed horses. Now there are some men in town who furnish to the citizens an unusually large equipment of this kind of delectation and one of these men is S. L. Collins. He has been in this business so long that he has really got it down to a science and as a consequence the number of his patrons has so increased that he has been obliged to enlarge his business establishment. He now has on the corner of North Main and West Fourth streets a handsome, large, roomy and conveniently arranged livery barn, built of brick. It is two stories high and has stalls for 40 horses, harness and storage rooms, office, etc. Of its equipments and size one may judge from the fact that it cost almost $5,000.

But not only does Mr. Collins supply his customers with fancy rigs and and fast driving horses, but his barn is the headquarters for farmers' teams and those of others who view from the city to remain here a day or more. Comfortable and warm quarters are furnished the animals and the utmost pains taken in feeding and grooming them. Mr. Collins also handles machinery of all kinds.

S. Bisazza.

His establishment is the People's Store in very truth, for large numbers of the people trade there, the people are pleased with what they get there and the people's welfare is carefully looked after, the people are treated most courteously and the people find there everything that heart can wish, from a tin cup, a pail of paint, a dinner set of china, to groceries, clothing and even the latest in furs. This store, carrying large quantities of goods of all kinds, is situated on Robert street and though opened but three months ago has already secured a large trade, people having repeatedly to be turned away from the door because there was no room for them inside. The proprietor, S. Bisazza, is an experienced man in this line of business as might be judged from the successful way in which he has handled the People's Store during its brief history, even if nothing were known of his previous business career. Formerly he was in business in Thief River Falls but a dissatesou fire a little over a year ago destroyed his entire stock and he decided then to reopen in a larger place, where he would have a more extensive field and be able continually to enlarge his mercantile business and hence he came to Crookston where he has already begun to realize his ambition. Mr. Bisazza is also a large owner in mines in Montana from which he has bright prospects of acquiring wealth.

Going out of business....

...SUITS AT COST...

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $20.00, $18,00, $16.00

Closing out sale $11.65

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $15.00, $14.00, $12.00

Closing out sale $9.75

500 MEN'S SUITS WORTH $10.00, $9.00,*$8.00

Closing out sale $4.95

Everything goes. Fixtures for sale. Store for rent.

Vanstrum Clothing Co.

Marin & Webster.

W. A. Marin and C. A. Webster, two of the city's most capable and promising young business men, formed a partnership the first of last June and during the past seven months they have demonstrated by their painstaking and strict attention to business that they are deserving of a large share of the business in their line in this section. Indeed the business that they have done within the last seven months has far exceeded their highest hopes. During the first few weeks of the existence of the firm they occupied rooms in the Wallace block but as these became inadequate for the demands of their business they moved to the more commodious rooms immediately east of the postoffice which have been transformed into convenient and comfortable offices. They make a specialty of law, collections, insurance and loans. Lands are bought and sold, property of all kinds handled, taxes paid and rents collected for non-residents.

Mr. Marin is a graduate of the law department of the State University and had been practicing here for more than a year before the above mentioned partnership was formed. He has grown to manhood in this city and has been in the employ of several of the leading business firms here. Mr. Webster is a native of Pennsylvania and though a young man has traveled extensively through many of states of the Union. He graduated from the Curtiss Business College in Minneapolis more than five years ago and a short time afterwards came to Crookston and entered the employ of Miller & Fosnes with whom he remained till he launched out for himself.

In starting out Marin & Webster purchased the large insurance business so long conducted by M. E. Kirsch, thus acquiring the agency for some of the oldest and most reliable insurance companies in the world. There is one of these in which the farmers are particularly interested, and that is the St. Paul, Fire & Marine Insurance company. This company insures the farmer against possible damage to his crops by hail and is the only one that paid up losses in full this year. More than $200,000 was paid to farmers who had the misfortune to lose their crops by hail storms. Marin & Webster will thoroughly canvass their territory, Polk and Red Lake counties, so that farmers wanting good insurance can be accommodated.

Two weeks ago this firm bought out the large business of the North-western Collection Agency which has long been established in this city.

Larsen & Carpenter.

Farmers cannot get along nowadays without a great deal of machinery. They must have everything from a plow and harrow to a self-binder and threshing machine. They also need wagons and sleighs with which to bring their grain and produce to market and the young men, those that are still living in single blessedness, positively require single buggies for their driving. But the boss' buggy wagon would be hard on the horses. It must be a sulsfaction, also, to these horny-handed tillers of the soil, when they contemplate making these necessary large purchases that Larsen & Carpenter deal in farm implements, for this is a firm upon whose record of long low in prices, considering the quality of the goods they furnish, and reasonable in their arrangements with reference to payments. "Here's Always Wins" is their motto and they have exemplified the truth of the saying, by their growing business in the year. lay has compelled them to establish branch houses at McIntosh and Fosston, managed respectively by Paul Carpenter and David E. Gorton who are members of the firm at those places. They have also had to add to their quarters in this city till they now have a group of buildings joined with one another that may fairly be called a magnificent machinery emporium.

They are also large dealers in fuel of all kinds and have made this a large and important part of their business by their careful attention to orders placed with them, prompt delivery, etc.

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

A Liberal Exchange of Flour for Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

STONE'S Mammoth Music House.

The only exclusive Music House in the West.

Manufacturers and Importers of Musical Merchandise.

Most complete stock of Pianos, Organs, Brass and String Instruments, Trimmings, Music and Music Books west of Chicago. Violins, Mandolins, Guitars and Banjos from $2.25 to $125. Sheet Music at 50 per cent off regular price. Pianos from $150 to $1000. Organs from $20 to $650. Cash or easy payments. Old instruments taken as part payment.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

STONE'S MAMMOTH MUSIC HOUSE,
110-112 Broadway. FARGO, N. D.

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...

A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

IMMEDIATE CONNECTIONS.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

FLYER

Makes close connections at

St. Paul and Minneapolis

With Chicago Limited and Fast Mail Trains

EVERY MORNING.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

CITY MANUFACTORIES

Crookston's Railway Facilities and Water Power Make it a Good Place for Manufactures.

LUMBER INTERESTS AND FLOUR MILLS

Foundries, Bike Shop, Brick Yards, Marble Works, Tannery and Sash and Door Factory.

Some towns depead wholly upon the agricultural communaity for their support, others are given up entirely to manufacturing, while still others have numerous manufactories and at the same time secure the trade of the farmer. To the latter class belongs Crookston, and on this account is the more prosperous, for though there is considerable inter-dependance of the fields and the factories upon each other, still the business concerns of a town other than the manufactures do not need to feel hopeless in case

FRANK R. BROWN.
Manager Valley Roller Mills.

the crops partly fail for they still have the support of those engaged is working in the manufacturing institutions to fall back on.

Crookston's central location, excellent railway service and extensive water power give the city unusual advantages from a manufacturing point of view. Every year sees several new institutions of this kind established here and it is only a question of a short time until this city will rival, in the number of its factory employees, all but the largest manufacturing centers.

VALLEY ROLLER MILLS.

No. 1 hard wheat is grown in the Red River Valley as it is no where else and Crookston is in the central part of the Valley, hence much of this grain is marketed here. As the water power is almost unlimited it naturally follows that some large flour mills are located here. The Valley Roller mills have a capacity of 300 barrels per day and the flour that is manufactured by this large institution is first class and not merely supplies the trade of the city and this section of the Northwest but vast quantities of it are shipped to eastern points and a great deal of the time it has been impossible to fill orders. Frank Brown has again assumed charge of these mills which is a sufficient guarantee that only the best kind of material will be turned out and that all customers will receive courteous and fair treatment.

The Valley Roller mills, which employ a considerable number of men and are equipped with all the latest kind of machinery, are run by power furnished by the Waterworks, Power & Light Company. The mills being near the power house the power is conveyed from the latter to the former place by means of a cable.

The genial managor of the Valley Roller mills, is one of the representative home-grown citizens. He has grown up here and is a fair example of the typical Minnesotan. His hustling disposition coupled with an honest up-right character, has placed him in the front ranks of our younger generation of business men. He has been for some years manager of the mills here and has conducted the business in a very able manner. The mills have lately established a custom grinding department and now do all kinds of grinding for farmers, giving the best there is in the deal. This is a very important move and will be beneficial both to the mill and its customers. The mill is one of the largest in the valley and its products have a national reputation. Their leading brand of flour, "Gold Heart" is the standard by which all other flours are judged in this district, and it is needless to say they have a very large trade in that brand. Their second grade "Silent Heart" has also a very extensive sale both at home and abroad.

THE CROOKSTON BREWERY.

This is another industry that consumes considerable of the product of the fertile fields hereabouts. The plant has recently been purchased by the Jack Kiewel company who have made alterations in the building property and put in new machinery throughout. They employ a large force and run to their full capacity.

CIGAR FACTORIES.

One of the great industries of the day into which much capital and labor is put is the manufacture of cigars. To assist in supplying the great demand for this article Crookston has two cigar factories each of which employs quite a force of men and produces yearly thousands upon thousands of cigars which supply not only considerable of the local trade, but the demand from the neighboring towns and villages.

ERSKINE BRICK YARDS.

Fortunate indeed are the localities that possess clay beds, the material in which is used in the manufacture of brick, and here again Crookston is among the favored ones. The Erskine Brick Company, one of the most solid manufacturing industries of the city, have their yards in South Crookston, located on as fine a deposit of brick clay as was ever put into a mould and the supply is unlimited. Skilled workmen are employed, and a goodly number of them at that, and the utmost pains taken to manufacture a brick that when put on the market will satisfy even the most exacting. More than three millions of brick are yearly burat in the large kilns which run full blast during the entire season and yet the demand for this commodity has so increased that the company, in order to fill their numerous orders, have found it necessary to keep continually adding new machinery to their outfit and to build new sheds. The market for the pressed brick turned out from the Erskine brick yards is not merely the Red River Valley and the rest of Northern Minnesota, but this building material is shipped to all places in the state and the Dakotas. Sheldon W. Vance, of the firm of Vance & Stone, is proprietor.

FOUNDRIES AND MACHINE SHOPS.

In a place like this city, where so much machinery is in constant use, shops for its manufacture and repairing are needed and what Crookston needs she soon gets. Consequently there are in this burg two institutions of this kind and they are doing a profitable business. Their field of usefulness, however, is not confined to the animals whose skins and fur are valuable makes it a desirable place in which to locate an industry where these skins and furs may be put in marketable condition. August Miller & Co., realized this fact and have erected in the city a large tannery where they employ several men in handling the product of the trap and gun. They manufacture all kinds of leather and have a profitable trade with the dealers in the surrounding country besides shipping considerable goods to the open market.

SASH AND DOOR FACTORY

Cheap raw material and easy access to railroads are factors that combine to strengthen any manufacturing institution. These advantages the Crookston Sash and Door Company has and when to these are added the fact that first class machinery is used and workmen thoroughly conversant with the requirements of their business employed, it is no wonder that this industry is flourishing. J. F. Hawkins secured the old Walker Planing Mills property a few months ago, renovated the old machinery, put in some new and has ever since kept this splendid plant buzzing and humming in his efforts to manufacture sash, doors and anything pertaining to factory work with which to fill the orders that he has already received from local dealers and from outside towns.

NORTHWESTERN MARBLE WORKS.

The contrast between the forgotten and the remembered graves of the departed ones.

Were one disposed to study merely the beautiful, this aesthetic taste can be satisfied by a visit to the Crookston Marble Works. Here, in the glass front, large show room, may be seen a perfect forest of tombstones, monuments, etc., of all designs and shapes, the workmanship and finish of which are of the best. During the past year the company have enlarged their property by the addition of an office, and workshop storage room. Their business, too, has been increased to a great extent inasmuch as they now have ten salesmen on the road continually. In fact they handle the trade in their line of business for the whole northwest. Marble works elsewhere there undoubtedly are but few towns can boast of such a mammoth industry as can Crookston. They have extended their territory as far west as Minot, as far south as Brocknvridge and to the boundary line on the north.

M. R. Brown.

For 21 years M. R. Brown has been a resident of the Red River Valley and is therefore one of the old settlers. During these years he has been one of the city's prominent citizens, holding numerous public offices and ever taking a great interest in the progress of Crookston.

He was born in Madison county, New York, Jan. 23, 1839. While he was still a boy he came west to Wisconsin and several years later settled in St. Paul where he engaged for a tithe in railroading and also in the real estate business. In the early seventies he owned and ran a steamboat on the Mississippi for five or six years, getting thence the official title of captain. In July 1878 he came to Crookston and has all along been identified with the city's public and business life. He always prophesied a bright future for Crookston and none is more pleased than he at the present prosperous condition of affairs. For the last 14 years he has had charge of stock yards at different points on the Great Northern and that railroad considers him one of the ablest men they have doing this work.

Last winter he began the cutting of ties and telegraph poles in the woods out east of here near Gull and Turtle lakes. On Cass Lake he put a boat which he has used in towing the ties and logs to a point near the railroad. This winter he is engaged in the same business though his logging operations will be more extensive this winter than last.

Mr. Brown has been mayor of the city twice, and it was during his administration that the present city hall was built. For four years he was a county commissioner and for five years Master of the Crookston Masonic lodge, being the first Master elected after the organization of the lodge.

Miller & Foote have their office located at the corner of Broadway and Robert streets. They do a law business, handle real estate, write insurance and make loans. No bonus is charged in making a loan but if good collateral is offered deals are promptly closed.

THE SCIENCE OF BUSINESS

Is the study of the best methods of advertising. Our method is to tell the truth about our goods and prices. Our goods are the best and our prices are the lowest. Our business is increasing every day. Why? Because we tell the truth.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment .....in the Northwest.

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

We sell Good Merchandise for less money than any other store in the Northwest. "Closing Out" "Reducing Sales" and other "Fakes" to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Legitimate Clothing House.

THE C.O.D.

Tom Morris.

Time is his watchword. He is always on time and if you bring your timepiece to him and have it cleaned and fixed, or if you buy from him a new watch, you also will be a timely man and it is this kind of man that succeeds. "Silver and gold have I none" could not be said by Mr. Morris for his show cases are filled with silverware of every description and of the richest and rarest kinds, and gold rings, lockets, watches, etc., are spread out in profusion before the eyes of the numerous customers who frequent the jewelry store in Wallace's block opposite Hotel Crookston. Indeed there is a charm about this bedimmonded and bejeweled establishment that draws like a magnet. This isn't the watch charm alone, but the personal charm of the proprietor and his popular clerk, Mr. Lancioni.

But while Mr. Morris is highly successful in pleasing the people by furnishing them with first-class wares he serves the public in other ways. In the social world he is a prime favorite and always enlivens the evenings for others wheresoever he may be. He is Grand Master of the Masonic lodge and has been for some time and it is due more to him than to anyone else that the Masons now have a magnificent temple in this city. He was the first chief of the fire department, many years ago, he is now and has been for more than four consecutive years, the leader of the firemen, and through his executive ability the department has been put in a most efficient condition, and because of his able generalship few fires gain much headway here. He is also second vice-president of the State Firemen's Association.

It was 21 years ago last Saturday that Mr. Morris started in the jewelry business in Crookston and during his long residence and business career he has established for himself a record of square dealing.

Larsen & Espe.

Larsen & Espe are one of Crookston's new business firms having come here within the year, but already they have made many friends and are carrying on an extensive business. As early as the spring would permit they began work on a large building on North Main street and about May 10, they were ready for work. The building is 42x68, the front part being two stories high. It is a machine shop in the rear, and the pattern making being done on the second floor of the front half. Messrs. Larsen & Espe are skilled mechanics and can mead a break or create a new piece of machinery to the entire satisfaction of any one, and manufacturers or farmers who need say work done in this line will do well to give this firm a call.

In addition to their regular business they have secured for this coming year the contract for the manufacture of one hundred Dunston wind stackers nr blowers. This piece of machinery was last year manufactured at Hillsborough, N. D. and an effort was made to have the industry located at Fosston, but the special inducements held out by Larsen & Espe in the way of skilled workmanship and yet reasonable prices prevailed and the work on these threshing machine attachments will be done in Crookston.

An order has also been filed with them for nine turret hand punches for blacksmith shops. These punches are among the most needful and useful pieces of machinery in a blacksmith shop. Mr. Larsen was for several years the state boiler inspector for Northern Minnesota.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Coro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Crookston, Minnesota.

You'll be merry...

And pass the happiest Christmas of your life if you call in at Tom Morris' and buy a part of his large stock of

Jewelry and Watches,

Diamonds, silver and silver plated ware

All kinds of Toilet Articles in sterling silver and ebony at

CUT GLASS AND POTTERY A SPECIALTY....

Tom Morris'

117 Broadway, opp. Hotel Crookston

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $18,000.

TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.

Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

C. HENDRICKSON,.....Pres. H. STEENERSON,.....Vice-President.
N. S. GERVAIS,.....2d Vice-President. L. ELLINGTON,.....Cashier
A. P. HANSON, Asst. Cashier.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. ERSKINE, President. WM. ANGLIN, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

George Q. Erskine, President, A. A. Miller, Wm. Anglin, J. R. McKinnon, R. M. Walsh, L. Pontaine J. F. Foote, W. B. Cristy, J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the interests of our Customers

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE NEW CITY HALL

A Magnificent Piece of Architecture and Conveniently Arranged for the Transaction of the City's Business.

COST WAS TWENTY THOUSAND

All Woodwork Finished in Natural Wood--Antique Oak Furnishings--Shows City's Artistic and Utilitarian Tendencies.

Architecture is one of the forms in which human thought is expressed. Study the history of this art and one may learn of the deeds, the emotions, the ideas and the characters of the men of the earth from the earliest times. Men have written, for the most part unconsciously, what they are, in that which they have builded. The difference between the graceful Ionic column and the unadorned Doric column is just the difference between the Athenian and the Spartan. The sky scrapers of New York bear witness to the tremendous business push and activity of the present age, to the high price of land in the business portion of that city, and to the spirit of concentration that is prevalent. A bird's eye view of the White City as Chicago in 1893 impressed one with the thought of unity in the midst of diversity, of harmony wrought out of apparently opposing elements, and this, assuredly, was the spirit of the World's Fair. So it is in the case of Crookston. The character of her people may be judged from the kind of private residences and public buildings that they have erected and weighed in this balance the Queen City of the Red River Valley will not be found wanting.

ITS GENERAL APPEARANCE.

The City Hall, situated on the northeast corner of Broadway and Fletcher streets, is a representative building, planned by the city fathers, the representatives of the commonwealth, after they had consulted the wishes and tastes of the people. Viewed from the opposite corner, where the Methodist church stands, it is indeed a thing of beauty and magnificence, with its three deep-vaulted front entrances wherein, after the sun has left the meridian, light and shadow play hide and seek with each other, with its superior brown stone arch over the middle doorway that gives to the front of the building a massive appearance with its galvanized iron lettering,—"City Hall" and "Fire Department" on the front, and "Police Headquarters" over the side entrance on Fletcher street: with its cornices resembling cut stone: its Twin City pressed brick, which lie in straight lines or in graceful curves; with its fifty foot front and one hundred and thirty foot depth, the south side being broken by two rows of windows: with its parapet, now high, now low, running around the roof, and leaning upon which one can view the smoke curling up from a thousand and one chimneys, which, read aright, would tell a thousand and one tales; and with its tower on the southwest corner, eighty feet from the ground, from the center of which hangs the fire bell whose iron tongue almost always speaks the language of terror and alarm.

NEW CITY HALL.

CORRIDOR AND FIREMEN'S HALL.

Entering by the door on the extreme left of the front, as one faces the building, he finds himself in a corridor, eight feet wide by eighty-four feet long. At its farther end and elevated three steps above the main floor is the police lobby. More than half way down this hallway and opening on the right hand is the winding stairway that leads to the second floor.

To the south of the corridor is the firemen's apparatus hall, a large room 39 x 56 feet, with ceiling 14 feet high, as, indeed, are the ceilings in all parts of the building save in the basement where the height is twelve feet. There is a two-inch plank floor, radiation by coils, sealed walls of olive color and two truss beams overhead as support. Two double doors on the west or front end form the entrance to this hall from the outside. At the back end are two small rooms, one used for hose storage and the other intended for a harness and feed room.

In front of the feed room and next the outer wall is a kind of alcove, with three arches and at the corners three huge pillars. The ceiling of this alcove is of arched brick and is fire proof. This is directly under the vault which is on the second floor in the city clerk's office. In this recess and in the open space between it and the hose storage room four horses may be kept. The fire department hope to have the council furnish them with a team in the near future. Along the north side of the hall are five hose racks, each having a capacity of drying 200 feet of hose.

POLICE HEADQUARTERS

Leaving the apparatus hall and passing down the long corridor one comes to the police lobby, where at almost any hour of the day or night may be found some police officer. Looking around the room one's eye lights upon what appears to be a small vault in the north wall. The accommodating chief of police takes out his keys and unlocks the half dozen cubby-holes wherein are stored some dangerous looking instruments, such as revolvers, knives etc., which have been taken from prisoners.

Directly east of this room are the men's and the women's departments of the city lock-up. The doors are iron grated and the wall between the two departments is ironsheeted. There are two cells in the men's side and one in the other. These cells are 5½ x 8 x 8 feet and are made of regular jail steel plate, the open work being of crucible steel.

On the southeast corner of the building is the room where the Commercial Union of the city meets. It is 20 x 22 feet with panel wainscoting in Norway pine. All the wood work is finished in oil.

Just west of this room is the office of the chief of police, Louis Gouyea. a room 15 x 17 feet, which is finished in the same way as are the quarters of the Commercial Union. It is furnished with a wardrobe, a leather topped couch, four chairs and a roll top desk.

The hall leading from the police headquarters' entrance on Fletcher street, is in the form of a right angle running along the west end of the chief's office and between it and the police lobby.

THE BASEMENT.

A stairway leads from this hall into the basement where there is a large boiler room and two other rooms that may be used for lodgers. Somewhere about forty of these gentlemen of leisure may here find quarters if they are worthy of them. In the southeastern corner of the basement are two rooms reached by an out side entrance on Fletcher street. Here the firemen have fitted up a gymasium.

FISHING SCENE ON RED LAKE RIVER, NEAR HOSPITAL.

OFFICES ON SECOND FLOOR.

In the center of the second story is a hallway, 14x48 feet, lighted by a skylight. At the east end of this hall are the council chambers, at the west end the firemen's assembly hall and the office of Judge McLean, justice of the peace. On the south side of the building and next the council chamber is the city clerk's office wherein are a desk, a cabinet case of drawers, a large finely finished table for the clerk's assistant, and a counter the interior of which is arranged for books and blanks. This counter has a panel front with swinging gate. Next this room is Judge Holt's justice court and just west of this the sleeping room of the firemen, capable of accommodating six men. Here there is a trap door which opens by touching an electric button and the firemen may then slide down the brass plated pole into the apparatus hall below. Along the north side of the hallway are the bath rooms, lavatories and the baad room. The bath rooms are a great convenience to the firemen when they come in after having waged battle with the fiery elements. The band room is nicely carpeted and fitted up with furniture, lockers, music racks, pictures, etc., and here Professor Riggs and his musicians practice the music which afterwards delights Crookston audiences.

THE COUNCIL CHAMBER.

The conncil hall is a spacious room, 47x55 feet. Running across the center of these chambers, from north to south, is an oak railing in which there are two swinging gates. Within this railing the city fathers hold their deliberations, and without are settees for the publie. In the northeast corner is a committee room and in the southeast corner is the office of the city engineer. An oak moulding runs around the four walls.

RESIDENCE OF A. A. MILLER.

THE FURNISHINGS.

For the council a handsome set of furniture has been provided. The desks and tables were made in Minneapolis, the chairs in Chicago. It was the Crookston Furniture company, however, that planned and superintended the work It usually pays and it has in this case paid to patronize home industry. The set is all antique quartered oak, highly polished. In the extreme eastern end of the council chamber has been placed the hardwood platform and on this platform are the desks of the president of the council and of the city clerk. the latter being a little lower than the president. There are two low, roll-top desks, one each for the aldermen—desks made particularly for aldermen. With each of these desks goes a leather swivel chair. The committee room is furnished with a large table and several chairs, and within the railing are also tables for newspaper reporters and one for the city comptroller. With such surroundings and equipment, if the city fathers cannot do extra good work, the city is not to blame.

ELECTRIC LIGHT AND STEAM HEAT.

The panel wainscoting on the entire second floor is of Norway pine and this with the other wood work including the floors is finished in natural wood. The entire building is plastered with flint plaster, is well lighted and the steam heating plant put in by James E. Morrisey, of Crookston, works to perfection.

THE COUNCIL DESERVES PRAISE.

The corner stone of the building was laid on Wednesday afternoon, September 20, 1898, Mr. R. Brown, then mayor of the city, acting as master of ceremonies. The work was completed in about four months at a total cost of $20,000. Frank Magnan, who has grown to manhood in Crookston, was the contractor, and this edifice stands as a monument to his excellent workmanship. E. Strassburger, who has since opened an office in this city was the architect. M. R. Brown, and the members of the council during that time are also deserving of praise for the successful way in which this large enterprise was managed.

WHAT IT TEACHES.

The City Hall shows the artistic and utilitarian tendencies of Crookston. It happily combines beauty and convenience. No citizen or citizen's child can look at this magnificent structure without being reminded that stability, usefulness and beauty are among the noblest characteristics of life.

THE BURNS' CELEBRATION.

Annual Gathering of Scotch Clans in the Valley Next Month.

Last winter the Scotchmen of Crookston bestirred themselves with a view to properly celebrating the anniversary of the birth of the greatest Scotch poet. As there were many of this nationality not only in the city but throughout the valley, the idea of organizing a Burns' club and at least once a year doing public honor to the greatest of lyric singers at once became popular and by the 25th of January every Scotchman, who was notified of the proposed meeting and who could possibly come to Crookston at the time, had signified his intention of being present on that occasion. The result was that from 100 to 150 of those native to the land of the heather assembled at Hotel Crookston on the 25th of January, ate many of the old time Scotch dishes, listened to the singing of songs that were first heard in old Scotland and to witty and eloquent toasts that dealt with the life and writings and influence of the bard of Ayrshia. This banquet was one of the most successful ever held in the city, the sharp shivering storm raging outside at the time seeming only to increase the warmth and sociability within.

When the last song was sung and the last toast drunk, and in the wee sma' hours the company reluctantly broke up, it then seemed a long time till the next anniversary of Burns' birthday, but time has rolled along rapidly and it is only about a month till the clans will again assemble to feast upon the haggis, the scone, the bannock, etc., to weep at the recitation of some of the pathetic passages in Burns' poems or laugh at witty and humorous ones. Even now preparations have been begun for the great gathering of those in whose hearts the world's greatest song writer will ever be enshrined.

And deservedly is the ploughman poet revered and beloved by his fellow countrymen, however far from their native heath they may wander, for in ploughman phrase he sang of the joys and sorrows of the peasant class, and revealed his intense sympathy for the suffering, whether it was a human heart, a mountain daisy or a wounded hare. He spoke with genuine sincerity and appealed to the deepest in man. He was natural in a rare degree. As in life smiles follow tears, so when one is reading the lines of the immortal Robbie he is wont to greet and then go he merry.

COAL AND WOOD

VANCE AND STONE

TO PROSPECTIVE

INVESTORS

In New Buildings

When laying out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have the architect include electric wiring in his specifications

Call us up

Before letting your Contract. We shall be pleased to give you the benefit of our experience in laying out wiring plans, it will cost you nothing to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want us

To figure on your wiring, we are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market. Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

The Riverside Dairy

Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.

E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery, Paints, Oils and Glass.

Anderson Block, Robert Street

CROOKSTON, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

RAILWAY TIME CARD
CROOKSTON, MINN.

NORTHERN PACIFIC

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep'r
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:20 a.m	8:27 p.m

NORTH BOUND.

No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	8:20 a.m	8:20 a.m

C. A. SHARKEY, Agt. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A.
Crookston, Minn. St. Paul, Minn

GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE	*Daily	Except Sunday	LEAVE
6.55 am			Grand Forks, North and West	7.00 am
9.00 pm			Mpls., St. Paul and points east	5.05 pm
6.30 pm			St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and East Lake Park	9.20 am
4.35 pm			Fosston, Bemidji, Duluth and Superior	9.00 am
6.45 pm			Fr. Vincent, Pembina	7.15 am
8.35 am			Fargo & St. Vincent	9.10 am

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMŒOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McKinnon Block, Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Foreman & Ainslie's Office hours—9 to 12 a. m.; 1 to 5 p. m.; 7 to 8 p. m.

Dr. C. E. Dampier,
Surgeon Great Northern Railroad.
Surgeon Northern Pacific Railroad.
Secretary Board Pension Examiners.
Office, Fournier Block. Crookston, Minn.

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW.
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets
Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTION AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR RELIABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice. Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday, Morning, 10:30, even ing, 8:00. Holy Communion the First Sunday of every Month. Sunday-school 12:00 noon.
REV. H. N. GREEN, B. D. Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

Grand jury adjourned this morning.

—The city council meets next Tuesday night.

—A Happy Christmas and a glad New Year!

—The county commissioners met this morning.

—Dr. Spence will spent Christmas at his home in Chicago.

—A baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Berger, last Friday.

—Money to loan on easy terms; no bonus charged. Miller & Foote

—Mrs. Fred Busch is spending the holidays at her old home in Alma, Wis.

—E. J. Keating will join his wife at St. Cloud and there spend Christmas.

Dawes Howe and his family will spend the Christmas holidays at Sauk Centre.

—Mrs. C. C. Knappen will spend Christmas at her parents' home in Northfield.

—East Grand Forks is to have a new Great Northern railway passenger station.

—A lodge of the order of Red men has been organized in Crookston with 75 members.

—Mrs. E. J. Keating is spending the Christmas holidays at her old home in St. Cloud.

—In the East Grand Forks school muddle the grand jury failed to bring in any indictments.

—Have Miller & Foote write your insurance. They represent reliable insurance companies.

—Supt. T. A. Hoverstad and family leave tonight for Minneapolis where they will spend the winter.

—Miss Ada Packard, stenographer for Finch & Smith, will join her folks at Wadena for Christmas.

—"Too much Johnson," a farce comedy, will be presented at the Grand Thursday evening, Dec, 28.

—Wealthy Widow Wiggles, a three-act comedy, will be given at the opera house Saturday evening Dec. 23.

—These are the days when Sheriff Lawrence and his deputies are kept busy bringing in witnesses to court.

—Tom Shaughnessy, has gone to Solway where he will assist John Kirsch in publishing the Solway Press.

—Miss Katharine Roney, science teacher in the high school, will spend the holidays at her home in Independence, Iowa.

—T. E. Clysdale will leave after Christmas for the east on business. While away he will visit his old home at Peterboro, Ontario.

—Miss Blanche Smith teacher of civics and mathematics in the high school will spend the holidays at her home in Minneapolis.

—The Congregationalists hold their Christmas service Saturday evening. They are to have a tree, fire place and a short literary exercise.

—Miss McKercher, one of Crookston's popular music teachers, has gone to Minneapolis where she will spend the holidays at her home.

—Louis Larson, of Eastern Polk, was indicted by the grand jury for too free use of firearms, and a fine was imposed. Not long after he left the city he acted rather strangely and was taken in charge by the authorities, but Judge Bagen decided that the man was not a fit subject for Fergus Falls asylum, so he was sent home.

—Miss Ella Hanson, a freshman at the Minnesota State University, will spend the Christmas vacation at home.

—The ladies of St. Mary's church will give an entertainment in the Grand opera house Friday evening, Dec. 29. Miss Tillie Fortier will sing at this concert.

—Marcus Stephens and Bruce Harris returned home yesterday morning, the former from the Shattuck schools at Faribault, the latter from the State University.

—Miss Tillie Fortier, who has been studying vocal music in Chicago for the past year, reached Crookston last Monday morning and will remain in the city for some time.

—The Modern Woodmen will hold a dance at their lodge rooms on New Year's night and a royal time will be had by those who have the good fortune to be able to attend.

—Fred Severson, Lindsey, Hans Jacobson, Hill River, Mr. Gustafson, Dr. McEachran, Ole Thompson and Nels Jepson, of McIntosh, were in the city yesterday in regard to a land case.

—E. E. Lommen's new house in Jerome's addition was damaged by fire and water last Sunday night to the extent of about $300. The fire started from one of the hot air flues and was hard to locate.

—W. D. Scott, formerly landlord of Hotel Crookston, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Cascade division of the Great Northern railway. His headquarters will be at Everett, Wash.

Miss Dewars, of the high school corps of teachers, will spend Christmas at her home in St. Thomas, N. D., after which she will attend the meeting of the State Educational Association at St. Paul, Dec. 26 to 28.

—Special Christmas exercises in connection with the Sunday schools will be held at the Episcopal church, Saturday evening, at the Methodist church Sunday morning, at the Baptist church Monday night and at the Presbyterian church Tuesday night.

—The following have been elected officers of the Pierson Chapter No. 41, R. A. M.: Jos. Smith E., P.; DeForest Bucklen K.; C. H. Mix scribe; A. Bixley C. of H.; S. Peterson P. S.; W. G. Lytle R. A. C.; C. E. Dampier Tres.; E. M. Walsh, Sec. The appointive officers are C. F. Mix 3rd veil; Thos. Rowin 2nd veil; Geo. C. White 1st veil; W. Lemen sentinel.

Deaths.

EBBIGHAUSEN

In Crookston, Dec. 15, H. L. Ebbighausen died, aged 91 years. He was buried at Oakdale cemetery Sunday afternoon. Mr. Ebbighausen was born in Germany, July 13, 1808. In 1859 he came to America and settled at Madison, Wis. For the last 15 years he has resided in North Dakota and in Crookston. He leaves four daughters, Mrs. Miller, of Alabama, Mrs. Rettig, of Chicago, and Mrs. Haefner and Mrs. Kronke of Madison, Wis., and two sons, Charles who lives at Crafton N. D., and H. G. Ebbighausen who makes his home in this city.

CURRENCY BILL PASSED.

Eight Democrats Voted With Republicans in Its Favor.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The currency bill, which was debated all last week, was passed during the day by the house by a vote of 190 to 150. It had the united support of every Republican in the house, and of 8 Democrats, Messrs. Clayton, Driggs, Fitzgerald, Levy, Sappert, Sendder, Underhill and Wilson of New York. After the Pennsylvania, Denny of Maryland and Thayer of Massachusetts, all the other Democrats voted against the measure or were paired against it except Representative Smith, governor-elect from Maryland. Mr. Sterlings of Alabama and General Joseph Wheeler. When the speaker announced the result the Republicans cheered lustily.

After the vote the speaker rather unexpectedly announced the committee selections and the reading of the lists was followed with intense earnestness by the members whose opportunities for distinction depend so largely upon their committee assignments.

MR. HENDERSON'S LIST.

Chairmen and Northwestern Members of Important Committees.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The following are the chairmen and Northwestern members of the more important house committees as announced by the speaker:

Ways and Means—Payne (N. Y.), Dolliver (Ia.), Tawney (Minn.).

Appropriations—Cannon (Ills.), Barney (Wis.), McCleary (Minn.).

Judiciary—Ray (N. Y.), Jenkins (Wis.).

Banking and Currency—Brosius (Pa.), Lane (Ia.).

Interstate and Foreign Commerce—Hepburn (Ia.), Fletcher (Minn.).

Coinage, Weights and Measures—Smith (Ill.), Adner (Mo.), Dyke (Wis.), Hedge (Ia.).

Rivers and Harbors—Burton (O.), Morris (Minn.), Davidson (Wis.).

Merchant Marine and Fisheries—Grosvenor (O.), Milner (Wis.), Severance (Ia.).

Foreign Affairs—Hitt (Ills.), Cousins (Ia.), Heatwole (Minn.).

Military Affairs—Hull (Ia.), Stevens (Minn.), Esch (Wis.).

Naval Affairs—Boutelle (Me.), Pacific Railroads—Powers (Vt.), Hepburn (Ia.).

Labor—Gardner (N. J.), McCleary (Minn.).

Invalid Pensions—Sallows, (N. H.), Miner (Wis.), Hedge (Ia.).

Reform in the Civil Service—Gillett (Mass.), Lacey (Ia.).

Ingwersen—Chestnick (O.), Campbell (Minn.).

Census — Hopkins (Ills.), Babcock (Wis.), Heatwole (Minn.).

Postoffices and Post Roads — Loud (Cal.), McPherson (Ia.)

Public Lands—Lacey (Ia.), Eddy (Minn.), Burke (S. D.), Esch (Wis.).

Territories—Knox (Mass.), Fletcher (Minn.), Spalding (N. D.), Lacey (Ia.).

Insular Affairs—Cooper (Wis.), Hepburn (Ia.), Tawney (Minn.), Babcock (Wis.).

Railways and Canals—Chickering (N. Y.), Davidson (Wis.).

Levees and Improvement of Mississippi River—Burchiett (Mo.), Morris (Minn.), Jenkins (Wis.), Hedge (Ia.).

District of Columbia—Babcock (Wis.), Jenkins (Wis.).

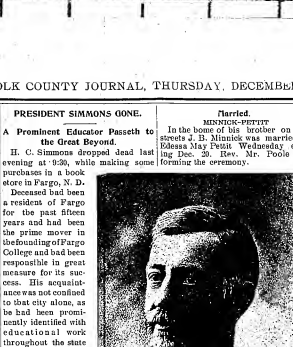
Printing—Heatwole (Minn.).

PRESIDENT SIMMONS GONE.

A Prominent Educator Passeth to the Great Beyond.

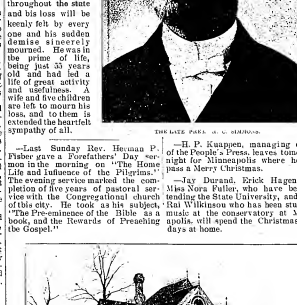
H. C. Simmons dropped dead last evening at 9:20, while making some purchases in a book store in Fargo, N. D.

Deceased had been a resident of Fargo for the past fifteen years and had been the prime mover in the founding of Fargo College and had been responsible in great measure for its success. His acquaintance was not confined to that city alone, as he had been prominently identified with educational work throughout the state and his loss will be keenly felt by every one and his sudden demise sincerely mourned. He was in the prime of life, being just 53 years old and had led a life of great activity and usefulness. A wife and five children are left to mourn his loss, and to them is extended the heartfelt sympathy of all.



THE LATE PRES. H. C. SIMMONS.

—Last Sunday Rev. Herman P. Fisher gave a Forefathers' Day sermon in the morning on "The Home Life and Influence of the Pilgrims." The evening service marked the completion of five years of pastoral service with the Congregational church of this city. He took as his subject, "The Pre-eminence of the Bible as a book, and the Rewards of Preaching the Gospel."

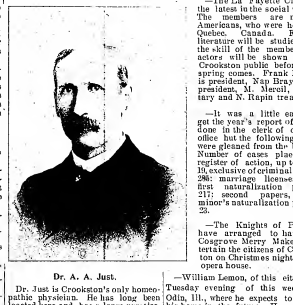


RESIDENCE OF HON. P. STEENERSON.

—M. L. Shriveth, of Cummings, N. D., was a caller at the JOURNAL office this morning. He has recently purchased Chas. Duvall's 160 acre farm a mile and of Ras-sia and 280 acres of railroad land adjoining. He will reside at Cummings till March when he will move to his new house near Russia.

Dr. A. A. Just.

Dr. Just is Crookston's only homeopathic physician. He has long been located here and has a large practice. Last spring he spent two months in Chicago at a graduate college, making a special study of the eye, ear, throat and nose.



RESIDENCE OF S. S. GORDON.

—A detailed account of court proceedings is unavoidably crowded out this week. The grand jury have returned as many as sixty indictments.

Married.

MINNICK-PETTIT

In the home of his brother on Ash streets J. B. Minnick was married to Edessa May Pettit Wednesday evening Dec. 20. Rev. Mr. Poole performing the ceremony.

LEADING HIM MEN

GENERAL LAWTON DIED AS HE ALWAYS FOUGHT.

Officers Warned Him of His Danger but He Laughed at Their Fears and Remained on the Firing Line—Battle Continued Three Hours and the Insurgents Were Driven From San Mateo.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The war department has received the following official confirmation from General Otis of the killing of General Lawton near San Mateo, Luzon:

"General Lawton, engaged in driving insurgents from San Mateo, section of country northeast of Manilla, killed instantly during battle. A great loss to us and his country."

THREE HOURS' FIGHT.

Description of the Battle in Which General Lawton Was Killed.

MANILA, Dec. 20.—General Lawton left here Monday night, having returned from his northern operations Saturday, to lead an expedition through Mariquina valley, which has been an insurgent stronghold throughout the war. General Garcina was supposed to have there the largest organized force north of Manila and General Otis wished to capture Mariquina.

The night was one of the worst of the season, a terrific rain prevailing. Accompanied by his staff and Troop I, Fourth cavalry, General Lawton set out at 9 o'clock in advance of the main force, consisting of the Eleventh cavalry and one battalion each of the Twentieth and Twenty-seventh infantry, which started from La Loma at midnight. With a small escort he led the way through an almost pathless country, a distance of 16 miles over hills and through canebrake and deep mud, the horses climbing the rocks and gliding down the hills. Before daybreak the column had reached the head of the valley. San Mateo was attacked at 8 o'clock and a

Three Hours' Fight Evened.

This resulted in but few casualties on the American side, apart from the death of General Lawton, but the attack was difficult because of the natural defenses of the town.

General Lawton was walking along the firing line within 300 yards of a small sharpshooters' trench, conspicuous in his white helmet he always wore and a light yellow rain coat. He was also easily distinguishable because of his commanding stature. The sharpshooters directed several close shots which clipped the grass near by. His staff officers called General Lawton's attention to the danger he was in, but he only laughed with his usual contempt for bullets. Suddenly he exclaimed: "I am shot," clutched his hands in a desperate effort to stand erect and fell into the arms of a staff officer. Orderlies rushed across the field for surgeons, who dashed up immediately, but

Their Efforts Were Useless.

The body was taken to a clump of bushes and laid upon a stretcher, the men troops rushing into San Mateo were mingling with the rifle volleys. After the fight six stalwart cavalrymen forded the river to the town carrying the litter on their shoulders, the staff preceding with the escort and a cavalry escort following.

The troops filed bareheard through the bushes where the body was laid and many a tear fell from the eyes of men who had long followed the intrepid Lawton. The entire command was stricken with grief as though each man had lost a personal friend. Owing to the condition of the country, which is impassable so far as vehicles are concerned, the remains could not be brought to Manila during the day. Mrs. Lawton and the children are living in a government residence here formerly occupied by a Spanish general.

WHAT FILIPINOS ASK.

Former Adviser of Aguinaldo on the Future of the Islands.

MANILA, Dec. 20.—Mabini, formerly a member of the Filipino cabinet and considered the strongest and most intellectual of such ministers, said to a representative of the Associated Press:

"The future peace of the Philippines depends altogether upon the style of government the United States sets up. We are vanquished because we lacked for funds and munitions of war and because to mismanagement of our affairs, int the craving for independence still exists. If the government eventually adopted be one which gives satisfaction and contentment of the people will result and there will be no trouble. If it is otherwise there will be

People Will Be Dissatisfied

and will add every revolutionary movement, which will surely occur sooner or later. Without the people's support such a movement is impossible. Everything depends upon what the Americans do. The subsequent guerrilla warfare will be easily terminated if the people do not support it, which they will not do if they are satisfied. Otherwise it will be possible to prolong it indefinitely. I believe the Filipino people should be consulted as to the nature and details of the government to be established. If the war results in the recognition of our desires and the necessities as a people to be governed it will not have been in vain."

Mourning in Santiago.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Dec. 20.—The report of the death of Major General Lawton made a profound impression here, many of the officials now in this military department having served with him. A social function, which had been arranged at the officers' club for the evening, was postponed and the flags on the government building and the American club were lowered to half mast.

—The Laurel Glee club is the latest in the social world. The members are most; Americans, who were born in Quebec. Canada. French literature will be studied and the skill of the members as actors will be shown to the Crookston public before the spring comes. Frank Benoi is president, Ney Bray, vice president, M. Mercil, secretary and N. Rapin treasurer.

—It was a little early to get the year's report of work done in the clerk of court's office but the following items were gleaned from the books: Number of cases placed on register of action, up to Dec 19, exclusive of criminal cases. 286; marriage licenses, 259; first naturalization papers 215; second papers, 104; minor's naturalization papers 23.

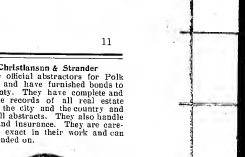
—The Knights of Pythias have arranged to have the Cosgrove Merry Makers entertain the citizens of Crookston on Christmas night at the opera house.

—William Lemon, of this city, left Tuesday evening of this week for Odin, Ill., where he expects to make his home in the future. He will receive the JOURNAL each week to keep him posted as to the doings of his many friends here, who regret his departure.

—The annual business meeting of the congregation meeting for hearing reports and election of officers will be held on Wednesday evening Dec. 27.

Christianson & Strander

Are the official abstractors for Polk county and have furnished bonds to the county. They have complete and accurate records of all real estate both in the city and the country and make all abstracts. They also handle loans and insurance. They are careful and exact in their work and can be depended on.



O. O. CHRISTIANSON.

O. O. Christiansonwas born in Allamakee county, Iowa, in 1856. He was raised on a farm and in 1879 came to Polk county and took up a homestead east of Fertile. While working this land he clerked off and on in a merchant's store in that village. From 1883 to 1886 he was in business in Norman county. Since 1886 he has been in Crookston, first in partnership with his brother C. O. in the loan, real estate and insurance business and since 1895 with C. C. Strander. Mr. Christianson has been city treasurer for six years.

C. C. STRANDER.

Mr. Strander was born in Norway in 1870. He reached America in 1886, spent a few years in Minneapolis and in 1887 located in Crookston. He worked for four years in the register of deeds office and then went out C. O. Christianson and became a partner in the firm of Christianson & Strander.

The Scandia Hotel.

This much frequented hostelry is under the able management of Charles Westerberg, who is also the proprietor. Mr. Westerberg is a genial whole-souled fellow, who really enjoys seeing people made happy and as the best means of realizing this inclination of his he has taken to hotel keeping. His hotel, located just south of the JOURNAL office, is in splendid condition, having the past summer he largely refurnished it, built a large addition and otherwise much improved the entire premises. The building is heated by steam and lighted by electricity throughout and has all the up-to-date conveniences necessary in a first-class establishment. Mr. Westerberg gives his patrons the best the market affords, spares no pains to make those who seek accommodations under his roof feel all the conveniences of a home. Comfort is the motto of the establishment and he and his estimable wife are untiring in their efforts to make this motto a reality. The kitchen and dining room are under the personal supervision of Mrs. Westerberg and her long experience in this work and her sincere desire to satisfy her guests guarantee only the best treatment and service.

C. WESTERBERG.

SENATE FINANCIAL BILL.

Debate on the Measure Will Begin After the Holiday Recess.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Discussion in the senate of the financial measure drafted by the majority of the committee on financial affairs will begin on Thursday, Jan. 4, the day after the holiday recess. This announcement was made in the senate during the day by Mr. Aldrich (R. I.), chairman of the financial affairs committee. Mr. Aldrich declared his purpose to press the measure to a passage as soon as possible.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal,
BY N. S. GORDON.

Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second class matter.

OUR FIRST YEAR.

We wish our readers a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year and as a holiday gift we present them with our special Christmas edition, with the hope that it may bear a part in bringing gladness at this season of the year, into the many homes in Polk county and adjacent districts. The lithographs on the front cover page, with the exception of the center one, are from photographs taken by the JOURNAL'S staff photographer and by the Rev. H. M. Green and are representatives of Polk county's industries and beautiful scenery. A photograph of the center illustration was kindly furnished us by George Purvis, who together with his daughter, Miss Agnes Purvis, designed and arranged this complete and artistic exhibit.

With this issue the first year of the JOURNAL under the present management closes, and as we look back over the past twelve months and note the progress which the paper has made and the increasing patronage which has been ours and recall the kind reception which we have everywhere received we are indeed gratified and profoundly thankful. We have striven to merit this treatment and will continue so to strive. One year ago we said that it would be our constant aim to make the JOURNAL better and we enter our second year with the same purpose in mind. The world is moving upward and onward and we do not propose to be left behind. The people of this section demand the best and as far as it lies in our power to give it to them they shall have it.

In ten days we enter upon the last year of the nineteenth century, a century that has seen more advancement and development in political, social, educational, scientific, religious and artistic lines than any other century in the world's history, and it is undoubtedly true that we are only at the dawn, so to speak, of progress.

TRUE to our usual policy the villages and towns in Polk and adjoining counties are well represented in this issue. We present our readers with special write-ups from almost every quarter of the Valley. The JOURNAL proposes to let every township know what every other township is doing. This has been our aim in the past and it will be in the future. Progress is evident every where and as the story is told by our bright and energetic corps of correspondents the people in the Valley will enter upon the New Year in a most optimistic mood.

THE Republican National committee met at Washington last Friday and decided that the next National Republican Convention would be held in Philadelphia, the opening day being Tuesday June 19. While many cities from different states competed for the honor of being the convention city the thought of all was expressed by a representative from Chicago, when he said that if the convention was not to be held in a state that did not have a candidate, it could not come to Illinois for that since half a candidate from the neighboring state of Ohio. The sentiment of the party is unanimous that William McKinley should be renominated and it goes without saying that he will be reelected. He has shown himself possessed of judiciousness and statesmanlike qualities and the people will do themselves and him honor by giving him a second term as president.

WHILE none can be too thankful over the advent of the Christ upon earth nineteen hundred years ago, certainly woman has no less reason to be thankful than man, for her emancipation, her greater freedom begins with the birth of the Virgin Mary's child in the lowly manger at Bethlehem. Since the day heralded in by an angelic choir, woman has been steadily developing till today she stands side by side with man, no longer regarded as his inferior as in the days before the tidings of great joy were brought to earth. Our Christmas gifts should, therefore, would have been incomplete did it not contain the written expression of some of woman's thoughts upon Christmas, life and home. Our readers, we feel sure, will appreciate the articles written for the JOURNAL by representative women of Crookston and to these same women we ourselves are indebted for their kindness in furnishing material for our woman's page.

CROOKSTON has indeed surpassed herself in the building improvements that have been made, and in no city that did not have the brightest prospects would keen, sagacious business men invest $300,000, which are conservative figures for the building operations of 1899. How this money was expended and for what purpose is worthy of consideration. The number of homes in the city has been largely increased, home surroundings have been improved and the comforts and conveniences of the home life added to. As the home is the basic element in society Crookston is looking well after her foundations. The number of her industries has increased and old ones have been renovated and re-equipped. This adds to the possibilities of men securing work and where no idleness abounds there is higher life. In the waterworks improvements the city's sanitation has been bettered and pure water will now be furnished for drinking and other purposes. In this the health of the citizens has been looked after. The traveling public, which in Crookston is large, has been accommodated by the erection of the new Great Northern railway station. Better health, brighter, cheerier homes, greater business activity, more employment for workmen and better accommodation for railroad travelers have been the watchwords in Crookston during the year now drawing to a close.

THE large increase in the high school art collection is the way of reproductions of famous paintings, photographs of landscapes and of noted buildings representative of different styles of architecture, pieces of sculpture etc., as well as the institution of a plan for self-government among the pupils are two events in the history of the high school during the last four months that are worthy of note. Refinement, with all that implies of gentleness, fine feelings, love of the good and the beautiful, is cultivated by studying the work of the masters, nay even by one's having these specimens of art near one and occasionally looking at them. To be in the presence of mighty and beautiful thoughts painted on canvass, wrought into buildings or chiseled in marble is to be uplifted even though one is not always conscious of the influence. And the self government plan is deserving of equal praise. "The man who can wield be must rule the empire of himself" and the earlier he acquires self control the more he will be able to accomplish in the world. In fact were a pupil to leave the high school with a taste for art, a liking for the beautiful and the habit of self command his life there had indeed been fruitful.

SEVERAL prominent farmers and agricultural experts have contributed to this issue interesting, able articles upon farming in the Red River Valley. There is one distinctive note running through all of these papers that cannot help but impress itself upon all readers and that is that the growing of grain alone will not pay anything like as well as diversified farming, in fact that wheat raising will soon cease to pay at all, as it has in some cases, through the impoverishment of the soil. Coming as this advice does from practical and in the same time well posted farmers and from those who are making a special business of experimenting on agricultural matters, it should receive the careful consideration of every farmer By the raising of stock the land is enriched and the weeds destroyed, so that half as much land can be worked before with twice at least as much grain and the stock comes in extra. This is the financial side of the question while on the other hand the social advantages of diversified farming are far-reaching, and as citizens of a great commonwealth we ought to look at all questions not merely from the standpoint of self-interest but also from the standpoint of the betterment of society.

Minnesota News.

A decision of the supreme court upholds the law requiring teams to keep off public cycle paths.

The German-American Central Society of Minnesota, at its monthly meeting at Monarch hall, St. Paul, passed resolutions of sympathy with the Boers, and contributed $50 to their cause.

The state insurance department has refused a license to the Commonwealth Provident Association of Philadelphia, formerly the Sexennial League, the reason assigned being that, although an assessment concern, the association offers a contract which provides for a paid-up policy.

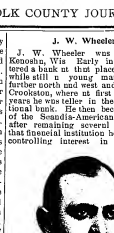
The state insurance department has been notified by the Home Insurance company of New York, a strong member of the National Union, that it will withdraw its circular of Oct. 31 requiring all agents to sever their connections with non-union companies in order to receive graded commissions.

Chief of Police Murphy of Moorhead was shot Sunday afternoon while attempting to arrest Collins, a burglar, on the Fargo side of the Red river. Collins shot and ran but fell, dropping his revolver, which Murphy secured and shot Collins in the head. Both men are in the Moorhead hospital at the point of death.

Manager Theden of the St. Louis Park beet sugar factory has filed a report with the secretary of state, showing the manufacture of 5,000,000 pounds of sugar during the season just closed. Of this amount, 4,048,000 pounds was manufactured from beets grown in this state. The amount of sugar manufactured from home-grown beets was sufficient to entitle the company to the full $20,000 bounty allowed by the state.

J. W. Wheeler.

J. W. Wheeler was born near Kenosha, Wis. Early in life he entered a bank at that place and later while still a young man, he came further north and west and located in Crookston, where at first for several years he was teller in the First National bank. He then became cashier of the Scandia-American bank and after remaining several years with that financial institution he secured a controlling interest in the First



J. W. WHEELER.

National bank and returned there, this time as cashier, which position he still holds.

Mr. Wheeler, it may thus be seen, has slowly, round by round, climbed the ladder, so to speak, of finance, until today he is one of the prominent bankers of the State and one of Crookston's leading citizens. Since he took charge of the money concern that is located at the corner of Broadway and Second street, its business has wonderfully increased necessitating as addition to the force of employees who most efficiently assist in transacting with dispatch the large amount of business that pours into this money centre

Mr. Wheeler is a genial, polished gentleman, in no unusual degree matter in mode and fortiter in re. It is indeed a pleasure to do business with him both because of the courtly manner in which it is done and because one may rest assured that he is dealing with a man of uprightness and honesty.

But Mr. Wheeler does not confine his energies to the banking business. Political, social and church affairs receive a great deal of his attention. He is a true blue republican, active in the primaries and county conventions and more than once has been one of the representatives from this section to the State republican convention. No social function of any kind is complete without Mr. Wheeler absent, in church work his energy and enthusiasm count for much, while he has ever ready to entertain with his much appreciated bass solos.

H. C. Misner.

Was born Jan. 9, 1864, in Sheboygan county, Wisconsin. He remained on the farm till he was 15 years old when he moved with his parents to Pond du Lac in the same state. Here he gained his first experience in business being connected with several business firms in that city. In the spring of 1885 when he was 20 years old, he came north to Euclid and formed a partnership in the mercantile business, the firm name being Misner & Lindsay.

H. C. MISNER.

Three years later Mr. Misner became a partner in the new firm of D. Taylor & Co. which continued the old business. In 1894 Mr. Misner bought out Mr. Taylor and shortly afterwards A. H. Pitkin joined him in the business. One year later the firm became Misner, Chapin & Pisk. They carry on a general merchandise business and also deal in lumber. Ever since he went to Euclid up to a year ago Mr. Misner also bought and sold grain at that place.

Mr. Misner has has always taken an interest, being postmaster for some time, a member of the school board and town clerk for 15 years. He is also an active member of the Woodmen's lodge, Euclid camp of which he is one of her most prominent citizens.

Teachers Home for Christmas.

With the close of school tomorrow night many of the teachers will leave the city to spend their vacation elsewhere. Principal Newbery goes to his home in Milwaukee, Wis.; Miss Fitzgerald to Alexandria, Miss Still to Moorhead, Miss Morgan to St. Cloud, Miss Emery to Pine Island, Miss Pargemen to Fergus Falls, Miss Crookshanks to Euclid, and Misses Gilpatrick and Woodall to their claims she former near Warroad, the latter north of Bemidji.

Mrs. C. B. March, of Akley, is spending the Christmas season in Crookston at her old home.

WORD FROM LIEUT. DECKER

In Philippines Shows he is Right on the Firing Line.

Crookston has one representative in the Philippines, First Lieutenant Decker of the 34th Volunteer Infantry, a letter from whom the JOURNAL has the pleasure of publishing herewith.

Lieutenant Decker is a native of Pennsylvania in which state he was admitted to the bar. When Oklahoma was opened to settlement in 1889, he located at Guthrie, the capital, and was admitted to practice in the Supreme court of the territory. In 1896 he came to Crookston and opened an attorney's office. When the Spanish war began and volunteers were called for Governor Clough appointed S. M. Decker captain and the latter soon raised a company here and later joined his regiment, the 13th, at St. Paul This regiment did not go to Cuba and when the war was over was mustered out. When more soldiers were needed for the Philippines Crookston's gallant officer was offered a first lieutenancy which he accepted and it was not long until he reached the seat of war. Lieut. Decker was the recipient on one occasion of a military silk sash and when he left for Manila his friends presented him with a handsome gold watch and chain.

SAN ISIDRO, LUZON, P. I.
65 miles north Manila.
NOV. 6, 1899.

To the Editor:

DEAR SIR: I have no doubt but that many of my friends in Crookston and Polk county would be pleased to hear from me, but it is an impossibility for me to write them, so I take the liberty of writing you and requesting that this letter be put in to fill up space. The 2d Battalion of the 34th Inf., of which Co. G is a part, are on the banks of the Rio Grande De la Pampanga awaiting their turn to be ferried across in order to join the movement soon to be inaugurated; what it is you will know long before this letter is read by you.

We have not yet met the enemy, but the work being done by us is just about as hard and hot 2 of 108 are at all sick.

My company has for four days been stationed on outpost duty at San Antonio, about four miles from this point, and on the other side of the river. Aguinaldo had been there about a month ago and took all the money, rice and sugar that could be found. We succeeded the Macabebebes scouts, two battalions of whom are enlisted and doing good work for us, and the people of the town liked our company even better than they liked the Macculebebes. We were given good quarters in houses, wood hauled for us, our quartermaster and commissionary staff transported on bull carts and everything done for us that could be expected. We treated the people kindly and respected their rights and property and in his crude English the president of the town said, "Desire very much, you stay long time." But orders came to go forward and away we went. The leading men fenced to remain and rents take place until it was certain that the insurgents would not return.

We had seven outposts of eight men each, and since the Macabebes have been fired on from the bushes only two days before our arrival it was to be expected that it would be our experience also. I took the men to their posts and selected night positions for the double sentries which they did not occupy until hidden by darkness. Until the rounds at 11 p. m. and 3 a. m. each night and found every one following out instructions. I cautioned them against firing and nervousness and with very good results, for which only one shot fired in four nights. The hog who refused to stop when challenged barely escaped. I believe with his life. We usually work two hours on and four off was the usual way to lay and the daily grass for we had to cross a swamp and ride double and when the boys came in from a "hike" of 10 or 12 miles were wet to the waist. But soon the grass was covered with Kehki suits, leggins, shoes and stockings scrubbed and the men looked fine.

One day it rained four hours and we had nothing to do but stay in our tents until night. Soaking and tired we were glad to hear mess call sound. Hathaway, the Crookston boy who enlisted there, is also now our cook and to my mind he never prepared a finer supper. It consisted of beans, hard tack and coffee

Our regiment is being pushed rapidly to the front and it is almost time for us to go, so will close for this time. I am feeling fine and am certain that I can outwalk Willis, of the Great Northern, very easily.

Yours truly,
S. M. DECKER,
1st Lieut. 34th Inf., U. S. V.

The officers of the Caledonia Club have made arrangements for a grand celebration on the anniversary of Burns' birthday, Jan. 25, 1900. The Woodmen's lodge rooms will be used and a most enthusiastic meeting is anticipated by all.

A. P. Hanson.

Of all the positions of trust in our city none is more ably filled than that of assistant cashier of the Scandia-American bank. Mr. Hanson, the accommodating ways and correct methods are always sure to make friends of all who come in contact with him. Mr. Hanson is a public spirited citizen, always taking an active interest in all questions coming up in which the city's interests are at stake and he carries the same integrity into his political dealings that characterizes him in business life. Last spring he was elected as a member of the board of education by an overwhelming majority and the city certainly exercised wise judgment in his selection. Mr. Hanson has always been interested in school affairs, but he is now in a better position than ever before to realize some of his progressive idens with reference to education.

A. P. HANSON.

MANY PLUMS RIPENING.

Goodly Batch of Appointments to Be Made by Lind After Jan. 1.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 18.—Governor Lind has still a number of important places to fill at the beginning of the year. The state board of health will have six vacancies, three of the members of the board having held over.

The death of Governor Barto has left a vacancy on the board of regents. Three drainage commissioners are to be appointed, but these positions bring work and not money. Two members of the board of charities and correction are to be named. All the members of the lunacy commission retire on the first of the year. Ex-Senator Dunn retires from the prison board, Charles Kelly represents in the governor, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston in said county, in one parcel, the premises and real estate described in said Judgment and Decree as follows, to wit: That part of the south half of lot lying and being in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to wit:

Lots twenty-four (24) and twenty-five (25) in block one (1) Jerome's addition to Crookston, Minnesota, according to the recorded plat thereof on file in the Register of Deeds and for record.

Dated Dec. 14, 1899.

THOMAS LAWRENCE,
Sheriff of Polk County.

A. A. MILLER,
Plaintiff's Attorney. 51-13

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Michael Carlson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Annie M. Graves praying that letters of administration of the estate of said deceased may be issued to some other fitnes, that Michael Carlson, late of the county of Alleghany, on the 23rd day of May, 1888, at the said county of Alleghany, died intestate, being an inhabitant of said county, and leaving estate in the county of Polk, in the state of Minnesota, which said petitioner prays may be granted to her, and praying that letters of administration of said estate be to J. F. Powers issued.

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court on Friday, the 5th day of January, 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the probate office in the city of Crookston, in said Polk county.

It is further ordered, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minnesota, the 7th day of December, 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

50-29

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota.

In the matter of Martin Wold, bankrupt.

To the creditors of Martin T. Wold, of East Grand Forks, in the County of Polk, and district aforesaid, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 28th day of December, 1899, the said Martin T. Wold was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned, referee in bankruptcy, in the City of Crookston in the County of Polk in said district on the

30th day of December, A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Dated Dec. 18 1899.

OLE J. TAYLE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

MCPHERSON & MCPHERSON,
Attorneys for Bankrupt.
Grand Forks, N. D.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 15, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Haaken H. Nistuen, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of Haaken H. Nistuen, late of the county of Polk county of Polk and state of Minnesota, being granted to Andrew Peterson.

It is Ordered, That the matter be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, by which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the probate court of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is further Ordered, That

22nd day of May, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m. at a special term of said probate court, to be held at the probate office in Crookston in said county, be and the same is hereby appointed as the time and place when and where the said probate court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested, in said estate by causing this publication order once in each week for three successive weeks in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston, this 15th day of November, 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[33-35]

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PREScRIPTION
IS A FOUNTAIN OF HEALTH FOR WEAK AND NERVOUS WOMEN.

M. MAGNUSSEN :::
New and Second Hand
Furniture
.....AND.....
Hardware
Everything you need..... CROOKSTON, MINN
to furnish a house.....

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate Under Judgment of Forclosure.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss. District Court.

A. A. Myres, plaintiff vs. Edith M. Robertson, Sheldon Robertson, Sheldon W. Vance and N. E. Ives, defendants.

Notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of a Judgment and Decree entered in the above entitled action on the 14th day of December, 1899, a certified transcript of which judgment was filed in the undersigned, sheriff of Polk county, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, on Friday the 2nd day of February, 1900,

at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston in said county, in one parcel, the premises and real estate described in said Judgment and Decree as follows, to wit: That part of the south half of lot lying and being in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to wit:

Lots twenty-four (24) and twenty-five (25) in block one (1) Jerome's addition to Crookston, Minnesota, according to the recorded plat thereof on file in the Register of Deeds and for record.

Dated Dec. 14, 1899.

THOMAS LAWRENCE,
Sheriff of Polk County.

A. A. MILLER,
Plaintiff's Attorney. 51-13

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Michael Carlson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Annie M. Graves praying that letters of administration of the estate of said deceased may be issued to some other fitnes, that Michael Carlson, late of the county of Alleghany, on the 23rd day of May, 1888, at the said county of Alleghany, died intestate, being an inhabitant of said county, and leaving estate in the county of Polk, in the state of Minnesota, which said petitioner prays may be granted to her, and praying that letters of administration of said estate be to J. F. Powers issued.

It is ordered, That said petition be heard before said court on Friday, the 5th day of January, 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the probate office in the city of Crookston, in said Polk county.

It is further ordered, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minnesota, the 7th day of December, 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

50-29

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota.

In the matter of Martin T. Wold, bankrupt.

To the creditors of Martin T. Wold, of East Grand Forks, in the County of Polk, and district aforesaid, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 28th day of December, 1899, the said Martin T. Wold was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned, referee in bankruptcy, in the City of Crookston in the County of Polk in said district on the

30th day of December, A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Dated Dec. 18 1899.

OLE J. TAYLE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

MCPHERSON & MCPHERSON,
Attorneys for Bankrupt.
Grand Forks, N. D.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 15, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Haaken H. Nistuen, deceased.

Letters of administration on the estate of Haaken H. Nistuen, late of the county of Polk county of Polk and state of Minnesota, being granted to Andrew Peterson.

It is Ordered, That the matter be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, by which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the probate court of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is Further Ordered, That

22nd day of May, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m. at a special term of said probate court, to be held at the probate office in Crookston in said county, be and the same is hereby appointed as the time and place when and where the said probate court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested, in said estate by causing this publication order once in each week for three successive weeks in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston, this 15th day of November, 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[33-35]

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PREScRIPTION
IS A FOUNTAIN OF HEALTH FOR WEAK AND NERVOUS WOMEN.

M. MAGNUSSEN :::
New and Second Hand
Furniture
.....AND.....
Hardware
Everything you need..... CROOKSTON, MINN
to furnish a house.....

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Around the County.

Weekly Reports from the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

ST. HILAIRE.

One of the thriving villages in Red Lake county, is located about 20 miles northeast of Crookston on the Great Northern railroad branch from the latter place to Thief River Falls. The upper and original town was started by Geo. Crocker in the year of 1880. This was intended to become the second Chicago, but through some unforeseen streak of bad luck Mr. Crocker's plans failed to materialize, and in the space of a few years the buildings were moved to the lower and present St. Hilaire and to Thief River Falls. Mr. Crocker was also engaged in the mercantile trade in company with a Mr. Kandy. The other merchants of the upper town were Hans Nelson, now of Thief River Falls and Faulk & Langseth.

In the year of 1893 the lower town was started by Mr. Ives and the Great Northern railroad company, and the railway was then changed through Crookston. This virtually wiped out the upper town, as most of the buildings were moved down to the lower town, the merchants following, with the exception of Mr. Nelson, who remained—he being interested in land at the old townsite—till Thief River Falls was started, when he removed to that place. The merchants of the new town were Bjerke Bros., Faulk & Langseth, Rupp & Holmes. Since then the Bjerke Bros. have gone out of business: Faulk & Langseth dissolved, Mr. Langseth being now in business at Thief River Falls: Mr. Holmes died, and the firm name is now Rupp & Post, who carry on not only a dry goods and grocery, but also a hardware business. Mr. Rupp is also postmaster. Besides the above named firm, we now have engaged in the mercantile trade: E. M. Hoff, dealer in dry goods and groceries; M. A. Hall, dealer in dry goods and groceries; E. J. Holmes, dealer in furniture); A. H. Weygant, dealer in hardware, etc; M. Rosenberg, clothing dealer; Chas. K. Kolstad, dealer in boots and shoes; Nelson & Thorkelson, drugists. We also have three confectionery and fruit stores: two barber shops, with J. Penno and J. L. Johnson proprietors: three blacksmith shops, with Messrs. Amor, Olson and Dahl proprietors: two livery stables with D. Patterson and C. Johnson proprietors: one meat market, L. M. Roland proprietor: three elators, Messrs Holmes, Jones and Sorsolie: wheat buyers: one bank, J. K. Haunay cashier: A. P. Blomburgh, physician and surgeon, one second hand store: also two machine depots. In the line of hotels and restaurants we are well supplied. The Hotel Markham is a first class house, steam heated, etc., Mr. McAndrew is landlord, and a better man in a like position is hard to find: the American house is conducted by Mrs. Abrahamson; the Hoffman House (not of New York) is conducted by S. M. Hoff; Mrs. Shelton conducts the only restaurant the town can boast of. Of saloons we have five. In the newspaper line we have the Spectator, Messrs. Ives & Soll proprietors. We also have one class hand turning out work from which cannot be beaten by any laundry in northern Minnesota.

If there is any one thing St. Hilaire can be proud of it is the sawmill, with planing mill in connection, erected here three years ago, by Arpin, Sherlin & Carpenter. It is beyond doubt the largest sawmill in this section of the state, with all the latest improved machinery. Their mill has done much to bring this town into prominence. While up to three years ago the existence of St. Hilaire was comparatively unknown, now it is known to all working classes, at least to those engaged in any lumbering business. The mill here gives employment to about 300 persons each year. It is an immense affair, and a great advertisement for the town.

We have four churches, the English Methodist, Rev. Mr. Vernon, pastor: two Norwegian Lutheran churches, Revs. Lunde, of this place, and Aastad, of Thief River Falls, pastors: Swedish Lutheran, Rev. Mr. Matson, of Black River, pastor.

We have one school house containing four rooms. The educational advantages afforded the pupils here are as great as in any town of its size in Minnesota. Mr. O'Brien, the principal, is a gentleman well qualified to fill the position, as has been proven by work done in the past. He is ably assisted by Mrs. O'Brien, Miss Betts and Miss Kyle.

The land in the vicinity of St. Hilaire is good farming land, not only for wheat raising, but also for stock. In the past six months more land around St. Hilaire has been sold to outside parties than ever before. The principal draw-backs to this country are the lack of good roads and proper drainage. The farmers are awakening to the fact, however, that in a few years this section will no doubt be well drained and have as good roads as any in the state.

RED LAKE FALLS.

The new school house was finished Monday.

Mrs. La Bissonniere is rapidly recovering.

Albert Brunelle has gone to Chicago on a wedding trip.

Skating is spoiled by the snow until the river over-flows again.

Wm. Krueger and Adlor Lemieux drove to St. Hilaire Sunday.

J. B. Armstrong went to St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls, Monday, on business.

The Red Lake Falls Lumber Co. will put in a dam at Cook's Rapids this winter.

Joe Riendeau and mother are up from Little Falls on a visit with his brother-in-law.

Red Lake Falls is surrounded by considerable farming lands, not all of which is taken up. A good chance for industrious people.

Eugene Gervais was up in the woods for Hert Gray, and while working a tree fell on him and broke his shoulder blade and two ribs.

EAST GRAND FORKS.

The old settlers who can remember back as far as the 60's must see a wonderful change in our little well-organized city of today. Very few, however, are now residents of the county after the Civil war, so we will cast our glance back to the 80's, when our little hamlet was experiencing its first "boom." Great changes have been wrought since then. Our city schools are numbered among the finest in the state, our fine bank building we look upon with great pride, our general stores with their well stocked counters and shelves, two line depots, our very newsy, bright daily paper (The Courier), and last but not least the large sawmill erected this spring by Messrs. McCoy & Rickard, quite one feel that this has indeed made a great change. Granted that nature did quite a great deal in helping to build up a town, but much credit is due to enterprising, bright business men the growth would be slow. Our town has been fortunate in securing the right kind of men to place at the helm and hence our progress. We have had a number of reverses in the way of fires, but "it is an ill wind that blows no good" and the result is that finer buildings have replaced the old ones. Mr. Duffy, editor of the Courier, assures us that the newsy block in the spring on the corner of De Mers avenue and Third street, costing some $15,000 or $20,000. Messrs. Rickard and Mr. Adams have found it necessary to make several improvements in their hotels in order to keep pace with the steady improvement of the town. The Central and Adams are very popular resorts for the commercial people and have given very good hotels we have a number of very good cafes. The large saw mill erected this spring has given employment to from a 150 to 200 men and these men have been compelled to build or rent houses, hence the increase in price of household property is very noticeable. Not many cities of its size can boast of as fine a city hall, as well equipped a fire department and as modern lights, the city having finished last spring a fine line for the use of their firemen. We are looking forward to the near future to paved streets and other improvements that come with a growing city as progressive as we are. The Northern Pacific have their depot yards but a few depot and Dunn Rumor whispers not only are to have a new depot in the spring, but a Y, also a round house. Northern,—where the citizens of East Grand Forks can welcome the coming and speed the parting guest."

Miss Cora Larimore spent Monday in the city.

It is thought that W. C. Andrews will soon be removed to his home in Minneapolis.

J. Murphy, a prominent farmer of Brandt McCanna, has been spending the past few days in the city.

Freddy Nash has been quite sick with a sore throat and cold, but is able to be up and around again.

D. G. Swertz, of Detroit, arrived in the city Sunday evening, and transacted business Monday with the local merchants.

Walter Lindsay left Tuesday evening for Chicago, from where he has accepted a position with one of the big wholesale houses.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Smith departed Sunday evening for Chicago, from where they will proceed to a southern state to spend the winter.

Thursday and Friday of last week were somewhat dull days for the county schools. The papers are beginning to come in to the superintendent's office for marking.

Mrs. H. Taylor, of Little Falls, Minn., has been visiting for the several days in the city, left Monday morning along the north line of the Great Northern, where she will visit for a few days.

SHELLY.

Shelly, is a prosperous little town in the county of Norman, situated on the Great Northern railway and has a population of about 400 inhabitants. It is one of the principal towns of its size in Minnesota. Mr. O'Brien, the principal, is a gentleman well qualified to fill the position, as has been proven by work done in the past. He is ably assisted by Mrs. O'Brien, Miss Betts and Miss Kyle.

The land in the vicinity of St. Hilaire is good farming land, not only for wheat raising, but also for stock. In the past six months more land around St. Hilaire has been sold to outside parties than ever before. The principal draw-backs to this country are the lack of good roads and proper drainage. The farmers are awakening to the fact, however, that in a few years this section will no doubt be well drained and have as good roads as any in the state.

CLIMAX.

Merry Christmas to you all!

J. A. Ralston was a Crookston visitor today (Thursday).

Quite a number of sleighs have been seen on the streets already.

J. B. Meyers lost his valuable cow valued at $50, last Saturday night.

Ed Evenson made a business trip to Crookston Saturday and returned the same evening.

Gunder Swenson returned from Posston Saturday night where he has been visiting his sister.

Miss Hopkins is preparing for a big school entertainment and Christmas tree next Friday evening.

The Woodmen are preparing for a grand mask ball on the evening of Dec. 26. Supper will be served at Hotel Climax.

J. A. Ralston last week moved into his new elegant tonsorial parlors where he invites all to a first-class shave or hair cut.

Winter is at last come and the ground has again assumed its white garment. Jack Frost has made his appearance with his sharp "How do you do."

A number of the young people took in the mask ball at Neby Friday evening. They all report a good time, so say Neby is just the place to go to if you want some fun.

Miss Nellie Solverson, a sister to Mrs. J. B. Messner, and Libbie Henning, both working at the Wyford Hotel, Fargo, visited with the Messner's a few days last week.

J. B. Messner took a car load of stock down to St. Paul last week. He reports the stock prices good and said he made more money on this car load than he ever did on what he shipped before.

The merchants all complain of the business being dull the last couple of weeks. There would be a good business if the wheat prices were higher, as there is a large amount of wheat left around in the country, but as long as the prices are so low, the farmers hold their wheat.

Climax can now boast of having an orchestra and a band. The orchestra is composed of five members and the band of six pieces. The band was started about Nov. 1, and has already made its appearance before the public. Monday next Friday evening they are giving a dance for the benefit of Miss Hopkin's school entertainment.

Christ T. Stjern left Monday of last week for Grand Forks, N. D., where he intends to spend Christmas with his sister. From there he proposes to go to Norway. Mr. Stjern has been in the barness business here, but has sold out to his partner, Silas Sojtun. His health was failing him and he intends to go to the old country for a change of climate.

ULEN.

Mercy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Ole Aaker was down from Twin Valley Sunday.

Christ Larsen and P. Odegaard from Flom were Ulen visitors Monday.

Dentist Davenport from Hawley will be in town relieving people of toothache.

O. K. Clemetsrud, the Twin Valley photographer, was in town Monday delivering his photographs.

Holmberg & Anderson bought a whole load of Christmas trees today which was brought from the Wild Rice reservation.

The public schools will close Friday for a two weeks vacation. A very nice program and entertainment will be given by the scholars.

New settlers are arriving almost every day from the southern part of the state, locating on their farms here and north of town, which they have purchased lately.

Gust Ferig, a prominent farmer living near town, had the misfortune Friday, while loading a load of wheat at the Great Western elevator, to rupture himself so badly that an operation bud to be performed, the operation being Drs. Meigher and Froshang. Mr. Ferig is doing very nicely under their skillful care.

We have to announce the sad event of the death of D. A. Pratt, on Saturday the 16th, of cancer of the stomach. The M. W. A. took charge of the remains and conducted the services at their hall Sunday at 3 o'clock, after which the procession formed and proceeded to the depot. All that is mortal of Neighbor Pratt was interred at Big Lake, Minn., on the Monday following. A committee of two Neighbors, C. L. Stebbins and Percy Solmasson, accompanied Mr. Pratt's wife and their daughter to assist in the last sad rites. We join the many friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved ones in this their hour of sorrow.

GLYNDON.

School will close Friday for the usual Christmas vacation of two weeks.

Annual election of officers of Glyndon Lodge, No. B. A., next Tuesday evening, Dec. 26.

Mrs. Wilde of Minneapolis arrived Tuesday evening for a somewhat lengthy visit with the Ogden family.

H. Hattebuhn and family leave Friday night on the N. P. for their old home in Newton, Iowa, where they will spend the Christmas holidays with relatives and friends.

Everybody is cordially invited to be present at the Christmas entertainment at the church Saturday evening, Dec. 23. Programwill begin promptly at 8. Santa Claus is expected to headed this way and without doubt will make his appearanceabout evening. Be sure and bring the children.

A very pleasant feature of the Modern Woodmen meeting Thursday evening was the presentation through W. E. Tate of a fine fur overcoat to the Venerable Consul O. G. Farsdale, the same being presented to him by members of Glyndon Camp No. 3001, in recognition of his faithfulness in attending to the duties of his office and his watchfulness over the affairs of the camp generally.

O. G. Thortvedt, living northwest of here about four miles, had the misfortune to lose his dwelling house by fire Sunday morning. The fire started up stairs and when discovered was so far advanced as to be impossible to put it out. With the exception of what furniture was taken out from down stairs it was a total loss, there being no insurance on the property whatever.

The new postmaster is putting in his time nowadays "getting posted." In the course of a few weeks it will be necessary to visit the front room of the "News" office to secure your mail, as we understand that in case the new administration will hold forth. Judging from inquiries made at Tracy's sometimes as to where the postoffice has gone, we think it would be well to paste this item in your hat for ready reference.

FOSSTON.

Attorney D. H. Fisk is attending court at Bemidji.

Attorney Peter Johnson returned from Bottineau, N. D., Saturday.

Mrs. D. H. Fisk and daughter Clare returned from Minneapolis Tuesday.

Hon. Israel Bergstrom has spent the week here in the interest of the American Life Insurance Company. He made many friends, and pronounces Fosston one of the best towns in the state, both socially and in a business way.

Fosston is steadily forging ahead. Our business men report a larger volume of business than ever before. The extension of the railroad has demonstrated that those who bought it would be detrimental to the business interests of the city were mistaken.

FERTILE.

Sleighing has come at last, but in order to be good, a little more snow is needed.

Everybody is busy buying Christmas presents.

A number of the boys were summoned to Crookston this week, to appear before the grand jury.

Chas. Lates, of Crookston, was in town Monday.

Emil Lang, violinist, gave a concert at the Hull Monday evening.

Miss Amanda Schultz and Miss Ella Geraldine, left for their home at Paynesville last Friday on a visit to friends and relatives.

Dr. Niven, dentist, was in town three days this week. He was kept very busy while here.

Nels Christianson is going to spend New Year's with his parents at Mcleod.

It is reported that Fertile is to have a creamery in the near future.

O. W. and Gust Gustafson are expected home from school next Sunday morning, to spend the holidays.

Dr. Foster, dentist, was in town last Friday and Saturday, busy as usual.

LENGBY.

Cora Hillard returned Monday from a few days visit with friends at Bagley.

Ole Linberg and George Nelson made a pleasure trip to Bagley Sunday.

Ole K. Ringstad and Hans Sovik went to Fosston Sunday and returned Monday.

A. J. Olson and wife, of Fosston, visited their friends here Sunday between trains.

The boys and girls have a fine time skating on Bagley lake during the light evenings.

The Lengby saw mill is in full blast. Mr. Hillard, the manager, is known to be a good sawyer and good work will undoubtedly be done.

BELTRAMI.

Sam Scott, H. B. Budd and J. J. Cary were up to Crookston on Friday and Saturday on business.

Martin Lydon, of Beltrami, started for Bemidji on business Monday and will spend some time there.

H. B. Budd is having a new artesian well put near his house and will probably pipe it to his stable.

There was a traveling Minstrel troupe visited this place and had a show in the school house Thursday evening. It was well attended.

Prof. Burns, from Nellie Hale, has organized a singing class in the Norwegian Lutheran church at this place. The first meeting Saturday night was well attended notwithstanding the storm.

Mrs. James J. Cary was in Crookston Friday and Saturday, where she got the little folks Christmas tree for the Sunday school in the new church on Christmas night. Everybody is anticipated by both young and old.

The post office account has been one of general prosperity throughout our township. The farmers have had an extra supply of jobs during the fall and an abundance of hay was gathered in. This being shipped to different points on the Great Northern railroad where prices are realized by the farmers for it. Stock raising has become more and more of a settled question among our farmers lately, from the number of cattle that has been shipped from this point and prices have been fair. Taking things altogether it has been a good year for the farmers in general. Farmers are buying lumber and building larger barns, more granaries and new houses which speak of prosperity. There have been several farms sold to actual settlers and some of our larger farms are being sold out in quarter sections to settlers. The price of land is rising higher prices having been realized this year more than ever before. The village of Beltrami has had a little boom for the last year. The St. Anthony company have built a large lumber building in connection with their yard and are doing a good business in the lumber trade. They have a large machinery hall with all kinds of farm machinery, new and commodious hotel, besides several other new buildings built for business purposes and all are occupied. New business is coming in and the outlook is good for another year. Our merchants have greatly enlarged their stock and judging from appearances they are doing a good business. The elevator companies have had their usual grists of grain. Our railroad agent reports increases in freight traffic from and to this point. Altogether it seems as though we have nothing to complain of in this part of Polk county.

FISHER.

H. P. Solstad of Bygland was' on our streets Monday.

A Merry Christmas and a happy New Year to one and all!

M. P. Leikness of Eldred was in town Monday on business.

Anthon Lindem returned from Crookston Saturday evening, where he has been for the past week.

C. B. Merrill went to Crookston Monday evening to serve his county as a member of the grand jury.

The German Lutheran church will have Christmas tree and entertainment at the Lindem Christiania hall.

Albert Tofte returned from the University of Minnesota Monday morning and spend the holidays with his parents here.

Alfred Anderson and wife of Thompson, N. D., have rented a house and will make Fisher their home the coming winter.

The ball given by the Royal Neighbors Wednesday evening was well attended and all report a very enjoyable time.

Carl Thraldson and W. S. Bryson have started a skating rink here and it is hoped that it will be well patronized, so they can keep it in good condition.

FELTON.

Merry Christmas!

N. I. Braaflat was at Ada Sunday.

M. I. Dahlquist returned from Iowa last Saturday morning.

A. B. Kleygaard received a new safe last week. It is a beauty.

Joseph Lindberg came up from Lake Park Sunday to visit with friends.

Postmaster Windseth has just received a new cabinet for the postoffice.

Superintendent of Schools Thorson of Moorhead visited our schools Thursday.

Louis Horn took the train Monday morning for Iowa with relatives at Red Wing during the holidays.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational church had their yearly sale and sociable Friday evening. The proceeds of the evening amounted to about $12.

A Camp of the Modern Woodmen of America was instituted here Monday night by Deputy Head Counsel F. A. Johnson, 16 members being initiated. The boys of Ada Campcame down and did the degree work. An oyster supper in the parlors of the Wellington Hotel and real good time was had all around.

Our station agent informs us that over 300 cars have been billed out of this station so far this season, and the town is growing. Two years ago there was no more than a depot and a postoffice. Now stores have been built, hotels, blacksmith shops, lumber yards, etc. Land is growing in value and is being bought up right and left. More sales have been made this year than ever before. Next year more sales will be built, church spires will be erected and there is a good boom for a time will, and quite a few dwellings will be put up next spring. Felton has a splendid outlook.

BEMIDJI

Mrs. McCunig returned Friday after a two weeks' visit at Princeton, Minn.

The Volunteer firemen of this city will give a grand ball Christmas night.

Mrs. J. I. Boyer, who has been sick for the past two weeks, is almost well again.

Robt. English and Harry Young started to build an ice skating rink Monday.

Fred Brinhunan is down to Cass Lake this week looking up a business location.

The Jolly Fellows Club which was organized here last week is building two ice boats.

Miss Pansy Olle returned home Friday night after visiting in Forest River all summer.

Rhaw Woodward of Long Prairie was visiting his uncle, C. C. Woodward, here this week.

Mrs. Edwards, John Pratt and Clarence Cottrell of Verndale are visiting here this week.

W. H. Walker went to Cass Lake Saturday where he will accept a position as clerk in a store.

The postoffice was moved Sunday one block south into the new building recently erected by W. J. Street.

The Bemidji Townsite & Improvement Co. sold six lots Saturday for business locations. Bemidji is still moving to the front.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bailey gave a party last Saturday night in honor of their daughter, Maude. About 50 young people were in attendance and all report a very pleasant time.

ELDRED

Trade is very quiet.

Merry Christmas to all.

About four inches of snow have fallen since Friday.

The JOURNAL is a welcome visitor to numerous homes here.

About 100,000 bushels of wheat have been marketed here this season.

Ole Bouklund reports trade very good in the hotel and livery business.

Quite a number of the young folks attended the dance at Neby Friday.

Miss Pauline Gilbert, of Crookston, came down to enjoy the Mask dance at Neby.

SOUTH CROOKSTON.

In this part of town are located the city's great lumbering interests, the roundhouse, coal shed and oil house of the Great Northern besides the railway yards where hundreds of freight cars may be seen every day. E. D. Childs also carries on here his extensive creamery and dairying business. Nor are business establishments wanting. C. A. Myers, two years ago, opened up a grocery store in the McLaren block and has since bought a lot and put up a building of his own. Messrs. Kepple, Smith and Brown are each engaged in the restaurant business and Mr. Sullivan keeps a hotel. Joseph Veau, the blacksmith, came here 14 years ago and he now has enough business to warrent him in employing five men. George W. Banks is the Fifth ward's capable carpenter and contractor and B. J. McLaren our harness maker. South Crookston also has a building where religious services are held and a new four room school house. Between the Great Northern railroad and business concerns things are kept pretty lively in this part of Crookston.

LOCKHART.

Mrs. S. B. Palmer has been quite ill this week.

Miss Deal Ford was visiting her aunt Sunday.

Mrs. Barnes who has been sick is improving now.

Mrs. Rourke, of Red Lake Falls, is visiting her daughter here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, of Ada, visited relatives here Sunday.

Lee Palmer has been ill but is now able to attend school again.

Gordon Hankins has moved into his little home and is enjoying exceedingly good health.

Mrs. Clark will have a Christmas tree at her school with reading and speaking by her scholars.

Snow fell the other evening and covered our little town in a mantle of purity. We now have good sleighing.

Charley Gaudo who has been at Ada attending school has returned home. Ill health is the cause of his return.

Miss Della Franklin expects to spend the week after Christmas with her sister Mary, who is teaching a school near Ada.

The platform commenced by the Great Northern Railway company last autumn, has now been done completed and will not be this year.

The school house of district 72 has been closed and the children will enjoy a more comfortable winter than the total enrollment nine. Not so very bad.

Those who are in doubt as to what would make a nice Christmas present should send their friends a year's subscription to the JOURNAL. It is only $1.50 and will give them 52 bright, newsy papers.

Next Friday evening Miss Caldwell and Miss Bullock will have their schools unite at the school house where Miss Bullock teaches and will have entertainment, reading and speaking being the main attraction. Don't forget the date and don't forget to attend.

MALLORY.

Jas. Cummings transacted business in Crookston Monday.

Miss Lillian Coulter is visiting friends in Grand Forks today.

Messrs. J. Gordon and E. C. Playfair were in Crookston last week on business matters.

Miss Clara Pearse, of St. Thomas, N. D., spent several days in town the guest of Mrs. Adelaide.

Duncan Bain took the Great Northern west bound for a prolonged visit with many friends at St. Charles, Minn.

About 40 Woodmen witnessed the adoption of R. J. Bain last Wednesday night. All members including the candidate report a good time.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. D. H. McDonald, Dec. 16, a daughter. Mr. McDonald wore a very pleasant smile last Wednesday when he was passing around the customary cigars to the Modern Woodmen of American boys.

William Gaudo returned Sunday morning from Utica, Minn., where he has been spending several months visiting friends. He reports a very heavy snow fall just before leaving here, this country is good enough for him.

ARGYLE.

Measles are quite prevalent here just now.

The Argyle postoffice has been raised to a Presidential office.

Argyle has a new glass hotel, the only brick hotel north of Crookston.

C. M. Spannuth left for the east Tuesday and will be absent some time.

The Orlin Beaudry farm west of town was recently sold to J. J. Sutton for $2,000 cash.

A large Catholic school will be one of the additions to our beautiful village next summer.

Several large brick business blocks are to be erected here and business ability of our merchants.

J. J. Sutton, the handling Wisconsin lawyer, horse dealer, farmer, money loaner, politician is among us again.

The $90,000 new bank of Thompson & Merchants bank is a good indication that Argyle is a live, prosperous town.

Wm. Curress is under medical treatment at St. Joseph Hospital in St. Paul. No improvement in his condition yet.

Our stores are doing a rushing business these days. Few towns in the state can boast of such large, up-to-date stores as Argyle has.

Otto Mankel, who has been visiting here with his sister, Mrs. P. J. Medgard, for the last two weeks, left for his home at Wilmar Tuesday.

Ildege Labine, one of our prosperous farmers, has commenced to haul out brick for a fine, solid brick dwelling to be erected on his farm west of town next spring.

Argyle has a population of 800. Six large grain elevators and a flouring mill demonstrate that Argyle is in the center of one of the finest farming countries in the whole Red River Valley.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Around the Country.

Weekly Reports from the Journal's Staff of News Gatherers.

THIEF RIVER FALLS.

L. P. Stranahan is in Minneapolis.

John O. Day has gone to Mercer, Wis.

The dedication of the I. O. O. F. hall was a complete success.

The planer of the Lumber Co. is fast nearing completion.

C. L. Dobner was a passenger on the out-bound train Monday.

Geo. Cooney was called to Red Lake by the illness of his brother.

The past year has been perhaps the most prosperous in the history of Prof. M. Simons gave an elocutionary exhibition to a good sized audience last Saturday night.

We need just a little more sleighing to make things the most pleasant for the approaching holidays.

The recent snow has spoiled skating for the present, though there is talk of sweeping up a skating pond or rink.

Our "Pumpkin Pie" case promises to become quite famous, however good citizens of this place do not wish to be judged by such cases.

W. B. Fuller, a late member of the 13th Minn. and a former resident of Thief River Falls, has accepted a position with the Thief River Falls Lumber Co.

Among those who will spend their Christmas vacation abroad are the Misses Stockfield, Richardson and Frank, Mrs. C. A. Tuller and Messrs. Wood and Cooney.

Thief River Falls. Our famous lawsuit has been settled. Our city has obtained one of the finest sawmills in the Northwest. New buildings have been built among which are the residences of C. G. Richards, L. P. Stranahan and Wm. Herron, all a credit to the city and the new brick block built by the I. O. O. F., which marks the advent of brick blocks in our town. Our electric and flour mill are handling more wheat than ever before and in every store business is better than in previous years. Last but not least there have come to our city a host of energetic, prosperous people who are a credit to our community and who seem anxious to help us build up our institutions. A new dock on the river notes the increase of traffic in river trade. In fact we are a city to stay and our "Sun is a rising and not a setting sun."

ERSKINE.

N. C. Lilleuoe did business at Fosston Sunday.

Mr. Raymond, of Crookston, transacted business here Monday.

Misses Vinni Narveson and Katie Zinn visited at McIntosh Sunday.

W. J. Dargon was called to Crookston Friday as his boy Bert was sick with diphtheria.

Miss Emma Narveson and Oliver Twedten, of Fosston, passed through here Sunday to McIntosh.

John Rolsen returned from Fosston Sunday where he has been under Dr. McKinnon's care for the last week. John says he is improving fast.

Theodore Espeland, of McIntosh, while trying to jump a freight here Friday evening got some way speed and his foot caught and was smashed. One of his big toes was completely severed and another toe crushed.

ANGUS.

John Staska was in Tabor on Thursday.

A. E. Brush was in Crookston on Thursday.

John Wolhaupt spent Wednesday in Crookston.

Frank Klasak was in from Tabor on Saturday.

Mrs. Wm. Campion spent Thursday in Crookston.

G. Evers drove to Grand Forks Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Montgomery were in Crookston Wednesday.

Wm. Stroble and sister Maggie were in Grand Forks on Friday.

Some of the Angus boys attended lodge in Euclid on Wednesday night.

Mrs. C. R. Perkins, left on Monday night for a visit at her old home at Morris.

The elevators of which there are four have handled about 200,000 bushels of wheat.

Cliff Melennen, Ole Tauzan and Robert Shannon attended the Woodmen ball at Key West on Friday night. They report a good time.

The improvements in Angus for the year are Hotel Angus built by H. C. Clark, blacksmith shop and dwelling house by W. Eckhouse, lumber shed 30x80 by C. Winchester and run in connection with his store.

GENTILLY.

Our cheese factory built five years ago has been a source of prosperity to this farming district. Raising cattle, money derived from the cheese, better farming, etc., are the results of this dairy business.

W. Carlyle, formerly a noted member of the Farmers' institute of this state, is the father of our association. A few visits at his old home will be long remembered. The building was erected at this suggestion and a happy fate gave to at the time an expert in cheese maker, in the person of W. H. Verity. Yes, if Mr. Carlyle is the father of our institution, Mr. Verity is the father of our cheese, Gentilly brand.

The following statement shows the amount of business done by the factory since it was started: In 1896 397,020 pounds of milk were received 38,040 of cheese were made and patrons were paid $1,782.48; in 1897, 333,-870 pounds of milk, 35,744 pounds of cheese, paid out $1,941.15; in 1898, 254,-981 pounds of milk, 25,860 pounds of cheese, paid out $1,338.57; in 1899, 342,703 pounds of milk, 36,342 pounds of cheese, paid out $2,001.39.

SOLWAY

The lumbermen are busy hauling out logs.

A number of cars of wood are being shipped out by Frank Logjer.

We are having fine weather. It makes the loggers smile.

The boys are hustling about making preparations for a Christmas tree.

There was a grand masquerade ball Monday night in our new schoolhouse.

P. O. Sibley on Wednesday had a runaway up Lamers avenue and Jones Garland was thrown out of the wagon and badly hurt about the head and face.

EUCLID.

Euclid was first settled in the spring of 1876. It is a rectangular lot, good farming lands much of which is vacant, but is now being brought up and made into good farms. There probably is no railroad town on this side of the valley where as good lands can be had at so low a price as right in and around Euclid. Much of this land was held as indemnity land for years and was not on the market. Euclid is a thriving little village with excellent school, church and society advantages. It is 14 miles south of Crookston, the county seat. It has about fifty miles of good graded roads and all the coulees are well bridged. The following is a complete directory of Euclid; Misner, Chapin & Fisk, general merchants, drugs, lumber and machinery; Mrs. C. Nelson, hotel and livery; E. C. Murray, blacksmith; J. S. Chapin, physician; Peter Stahl, T. E. Hiever and T. Hunter, grain business; H. D. Misner, notary public, real estate; Dorcas Teal, livery and jobing; G. A. Coverdale, principal of schools; Miss Nellie Chapin, primary teacher; Engle & Grubs and Andrew Anderson, contractors; Lewis Jones, Temperance saloon; E. B. Ballou, express and station agent; E. A. Fisk, town clerk; M. P. Casey, justice of the peace. Churches: Presbyterian, Y. P. S. C. E. Society and Roman Catholic. Lodges; Modern Woodmen of America and Order of Foresters. Prairie View cemetery is a beauty spot located two miles north of Euclid.

Christmas exercises will be held in the church at Christmas eve.

A. E. Hinds calls on friends in town Monday. He will move his family to Manitoba this week.

Mrs. J. S. Chapin and Mrs. E. B. Ballou went to Grand Forks Saturday with Mr. W. C. Currie as escort.

Monday evening the Catholic society will give a dance and supper, the proceeds to go towards finishing their new church. A big time is assured.

Mrs. D. W. Hunter presented our friend Dan, "Dan is her better half," with a brand new baby last week, weight nine pounds. Dan sets 'em up like a man.

Rev. S. Currie left on Monday night for a two months trip to eastern cities. He will visit his parents, Edith and Fay at Fairbault where the young ladies are attending school.

The Young People's Threatrical company are hard at work on the play which they will give on New Year's night. It promises to be a great success. We bespeak a full house for them.

A party of young people consisting of Mr. Cornwall, Ed Berg, the Misses Nelson, Misses Nellie Chapin and Ida Teal attended the M. W. A. dance at Key West on Friday night. It was one an all night dance till broad daylight, six o'clock in the morning.

ROLETTE.

James J. Hill named this station after his old friend, Joe Rolette—Indian trader, guide, scout, etc.—who "trekked" over the valley in days when Red River carts and dog trains. Owing to the area and unoccupied railroad land on all sides it has not grown to very large proportions. The future, however, looks brighter. The Fisher farm of 3,500 acres has been cut up into small farms and sold. The Lockhart farm of 4,500 acres has changed hands and the new proprietors will dispose of most of it in small tracts. Very little railroad land remains unsold. There is a good opening now for more stores, another elevator, blacksmith shop, etc.

Ben Holst is now night operator at Hillsboro, N. D.

Archie Johnson went to Crookston Saturday morning to remain during the winter.

George Wolf, another of the Rolette boys, is cashier for the C. B. & N. R'y at Galena, Ill.

Chas. Krause and Mrs. W. J. Krause, of Euclid, are visiting their mother south of here.

J. D. McPhee, after buying several additions to the city of Crookston the past season, has started in on farms and will soon have a township all to himself.

Andrew Olson drove to Crookston Friday and we surmise he left a small fee with the clerk of court. Anyway it does not look quite so lonesome around his house since he returned.

Frank Gaske, one of the best wheat buyers in the valley, came here from Adams '94 and has bought for the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Co. since that time. His long term of service is good evidence of the satisfaction he has given.

KITTSON.

Mrs. R. E. Smith spent last Thursday with Mrs. Price.

Louise Smith visited in Crookston several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hooper visited with Mr. and Mrs. Price Sunday afternoon.

Art DeLaace was down from Crookston last week on business at the elevator.

Will Lemon, the boy R. E. Smith took to raise some ten years ago from the Children's Home, has been released from all claims at the Home. Will left last night for his mother's home in Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin enjoyed a very pleasant evening at Thomas Samson's last Wednesday.

The section men found a broken rail as they were going over the road Monday morning.

Clean out your chimneys and get ready for Santa Claus. He is coming sure next Sunday night.

John Greenwall returned from Red Lake Falls last week with a very poor impression of that country.

Rumor has it that we are soon to have a teacher again in the Stony district. A lady teacher this time.

Mr. De Marsh took the Great Northern last Friday morning for Angus to work in the elevator there a few days.

Fred Laferor drove to Crookston one day last week on business returning in the evening on the Great Northern.

Mr. Erwin took Mr. Regan up town Saturday. Fred Laferor was left in charge of the section during Mr. Erwin's absence.

John Greenwall went to Hemlaji Monday morning to stay on his claim a few days and from there he goes to his home in Wisconsin.

Mr. Price hired Mr. Craft to haul the old elevator office across the track to his dwelling house where it will be used as a summer kitchen.

Old Spot, the elevator horse which has done good service at the elevator for years, was taken to Crookston last week and from there he is to be taken to Euclid to work on the horse power at the elevator.

LEESTON.

Winter has come at last.

A Happy Christmas to all.

Quite a few have gone to the woods from here this fall.

About 30,000 bushels have been received at the elevator this fall.

John Strom was in Crookston Thursday and Friday on business at the court house.

Mrs. T. G. Lee and her son Albert are visiting at Portland, N. D., with relatives and friends.

Last Tuesday Hans Grone was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Miss Ingeborg Sorley.

Miss Raddy Lee has returned from North Dakota where she has taught a two months term of school.

They are paying one cent over market price for wheat now, making market price 32c for No. 1.

Asle Lairvold is stopping at Norstad this winter, but expects to return to North Dakota in the spring.

John Ringquist killed a wolf the other day and he is doing considerable bragging about the matter.

Knell Leer gave a concert at the Woodmen hall at Maple Bay on Saturday. Mr. Leer is quite a musician.

John Kilvik is building a new addition to his big house. When it is ready it will be one of the largest in this locality.

The postmaster has to climb the fence with his mail nowadays as the fence of Olbert Lee is between the track and postoffice.

Albert and Bertile Bertils have been away for a week cutting timber on their father's place out in the woods some 11 miles from here.

Miss Alice Hunter has taught two months of her school in district No. 93 and has three months left. She is considered to be a good teacher.

A surprise party was given on Mr. and Mrs. John Hansen last Saturday. All enjoyed themselves in playing games and dancing till early daylight.

The new school house in district No 86 is now ready and school is now being held there instead of at the old one. The latter was sold last Saturday for $10.75 to T. A. Hagen.

RUSSIA.

Within the last three weeks Peter Wermager located, not more than two miles from this station, Thorn Sivertset of Buxton, N. D., who bought the half of section 8 paying for it $3,040, the set of section 6, at $1,175 cash and the nes section 7, at $1,700 cash. Jl. A. Sivrsvet, brother of Thorn, who paid $3,520 cash for the west section 7 and $2,700 for sec section 12; Ole Eagen of Climax, Minn., paid for the swl section 6, 82,000; Mrs. J. Skrevset of Mayville bought the set of section 7 for $1,700; E. Engelvalson of Buxton, N. D., paid $1,620 for the nwl section 26 Hammond township; Peter Wermager himself paid $1,800 cash for the swl of section 18 adjoining his east half of the same section; Feliz Rauenbeehler bought a 200 foot lot near the station platform for $50 and built a new $800 store building; also moved $400 worth of old buildings on to this lot. Peter Wermager has in prospect more new settlers who are anxious to buy and locate in this vicinity as soon as possible.

John Derosier is back again from Maple Lake.

John Bants is putting on style having invested in a fancy buggy.

The Russia farm, as dame rumor has it, is to be sold in small tracts.

Most of the farmers are securing firewood from the Crookston camp.

J. A. Mineaux, nephew of F. H. Mineaux is with the later for an extended visit.

Ole J. Jorgeeson, of Hammond, is shipping a carload of pressed hay to eastern parties.

P. Wermager intends to go up to Bemidji to buy a big lot of more lumber for a large granary.

Thomas Welsh, of Smyth & Welsh, is back from Crookston after spending a few days in the city.

Chas. Duval has not decided, since he sold out, whether to buy again here or to leave for some other state.

There are quite a few thousand bushels of oats, flax and clean seed wheat wanted by all the new settlers hereabouts.

A very good driveway to get near the freight cars, has been made by Erick Craft, of Kittson, for the Great Northern railroad company at this station.

Ole Engen, of Climax, who has been visiting P. Wermager, and Th. Generoux, foreman on the Russia farm, nearly lost their lives in a runaway. One of Ole Engen's horses got scared and the buggy slipped toward their hitch. The Generoux jumped and caught the lines which act saved lots of damage.

Many thousand dollars worth of lumber will be wanted in this neighborhood by next spring, as every one of the new settlers will need to erect large buildings.

The Russia farm bought a road grader for their own use, more roads more has been done this year by the above firm and others than for the last ten years.

Messrs. John Bantz and M. A. Wendelboe sold to Larsen & Carpenter the north half of section 25, which they had bought last spring. The price was $2,560 for the whole half section.

As there are so many new settlers coming in here, there is a great need of a good first-class blacksmith. The Great Northern railroad company also should build a good sized station at this place, and more crossings are also much needed.

F. H. Mineaux intends to sell all his farm and machinery, after which he will move to Crookston to take life easy, because he thinks he and his wife are getting too old for hard work. He has already disposed of a big number of his cattle.

P. Wermager has since last spring invested in his buildings $2,500 and has bought land with the proceeds. He got everything finished in tip top shape. He has got one of the handsomest barns in this county. He has also bought a new bus. He has engaged John Anderson, one of our former neighbor farmers and John Hoffman of Hammond.

NEILSVILLE.

Neilsville is a thrifty little town located in the southwestern corner of Polk county on the Crookston-Moorhead branch of the Great Northern, two miles from the county line on the south and 800 miles west from Red River on the west, right in one of the best farming sections of the Red River Valley.

Old Neilsville was situated two miles to the northwest, close to the river and comprised the general store of Mr. Neilson. It was a typical old-time ware store and the Norwegian Lutheran church. But when the railroad was completed in the fall of 1899 the said gentlemen moved their respective buildings to their present location and on the land of Henry Simon, and consequently as the village is now incorporated we reckon him as our ex-officio mayor. The same fall Andrew Tronnes built the "Neilsville Hotel," and the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Co. erected an elevator and commissioned as their agent Mr. Warner who is still with us. The church was moved over the next year, Nils Muus, then of Crookston, built a large general store and the partnership of Roy & Tallhelm was changed to Bye Bros. Another elevator was also built here that year by the Northwestern Elevator Co. with Mr. Hanson as agent, which position he still holds.

Our town has all the time continued to prosper. It is now a good population of more than a hundred and in addition to the establishments spoken of we have the following business men and their various business: Peder Wigen, butcher shop; Andrew Wigen, livery; Eugene Howland, harness shop; E. C. Ramsey, land, agent, loans and shoemaking; Benson Bros., furniture, framing and frame mouldings; Martin Sandi, feed mill; John Sweningson, painter; L. Spokkle and W. S. Brekke each have shops (they call a temperance saloon); E. C. Oustad has a harness shop and repairing shop; Thomas J. P. Skalet, our village blacksmith, "with large and heavy hands," also S. Brekke has a blacksmith shop at Oland owned and run from his farm to work at his old grade whenever he feels like it.

Last year a large two story school house was built in town in place of the old log school house, a mile south. It is up to date in every respect, being well lighted and ventilated, well supplied with books and apparatus, and has been heated by hot air furnaces. We this year employ two teachers, Mr. H. A. Howe being principal and teacher of the higher grade and Miss Mary Waisted teacher of the primary grades. So it will be seen that Neilsville looks well after the good of the young folks in the matter of education. It should also be said here to the credit of the Neilsville Farmers' Lumber Company they voted down a proposition licensing saloons, and at the same time voting above 80 at the last township election the whole vote being nearly unanimous on that side.

Although Neilsville will hardly ever be able to measure itself with the larger towns of the county in size, still it has a bright future in store.

Rev. O. H. Brodland has been doing good work among us since he came about two years ago. He uses either language in his ministerial work.

In the way of recreation and amusement we have a band under the leadership of Mr. Howe, singing practices every week lead by Mr. Howe and a large hall operated by W. S. Brekke, which comes in handy for a variety of assemblies.

Our station agent, David Payne, must not be forgotten. Although he can not boast of much room in which to display his shack being only about 7 x 10 feet, he still does much more than sufficient business to justify our getting a depot, which we should have had long ago if the Railroad and Warehouse Commission had done their duty.

Last but not least must be mentioned the elevator of the Neilsville Farmers' Elevator association, where C. C. Melaasen is to be found doing business, and the lumber yards of the Neilsville Farmers' Lumber Company, under the able management of A. P. Johnson. Both institutions speak well for the progress and the unity of the farmers of this vicinity. Other residents of the town are John Hestad, O. G. Fossos, O. A. Paulsrud and E. Tronnes.

—We are making special prices on storm sash, doors, sash, mouldings and short lumber. Call and see us before purchasing. Crookston Lumber Company, Telephone 40.

KEY WEST.

Mrs. R. Morrison called on Mrs. R. Buchanan on Saturday afternoon.

F. G. Horton and his brother, of Maple Bay, drove to Euclid Sunday afternoon.

The Woodman ball was very largely attended on Friday night. A good time is reported.

A. Dieffenbaugh went over to Maple Bay on Wednesday to see Robert Bain ride the Woodman goat.

Mr. C. Folstad, who has been visiting his friends at Maple Bay, returned home on Friday morning.

Mrs. Hanley, who has been visiting Mrs. P. Sullivan for the past week returned to her home at Grand Forks on Saturday evening.

Quite a few from around here expect leave to soon for Canada among them are William Clint, D. Geddes, Mrs. Robert Gaston and Mrs. Robert Morrison.

McINTOSH.

This booming little city has for a long time held an envious place in the grain-raising and commercial interests of Polk county. As a result of its excellent location it has enjoyed a steady and quite rapid growth ever since its incorporation. Many handsome residences have been constructed during the past summer, and several new streets opened. Some new business concerns have also been organized this year, among which are G. Erickson, general store; Hanson & Reishus, harness shop; besides a few new restaurants and a feed store. A fine city hall, of brick, has just been completed.

A high official of the Great Northern road made a statement last summer to the fact that McIntosh is one of the most important freight stations along the line between Crookston and Duluth. It is second only in mail and freight delivery station for business on the Red Lake respondation, among which are Lambert, Wanze, Lindsay, Espetvedt, Gully, and Grit; and for points south, Stetson, Winger, Bryan City, and Gregg. Among the merchants of McIntosh most deserving of mention, J. P. Johnson, proprietor of the big hotel and fire house, while the upper part is to be used as an opera house and assembly room. The opera house, though small, will be found in every respect. It will have a gallery.

MOUNTED INFANTRY.

Ten Thousand Ordered Mobilized for South Africa.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The government has at last consented to mobilize a force which General Buller has declared as having demanded all along as essential to success in South Africa, namely, 10,-000 mounted infantry. The men must be between 20 and 35 years of age and of equal physique to the ordinary cavalry soldiers. Officers and men are to provide their own horses and to wear neutral tint cloth and leggings, not necessarily uniform, felt hats, light haversacks and gutters. The order invites every volunteer regiment that is linked with a regular battalion serving at the front to supply a full company, which will take the place of mounted infantry regiments. These arrangements are expected to result in a considerable force. The enthusiasm of volunteers continues and promises to give the government powerful material.

Reports Severely Censored.

Special reports regarding the fighting at Colenso are severely filtering through, but all the newspapers complain that these are severely censored and it is still impossible to get an accurate idea of the battle.

A correspondent of the Associated Press at Cleverly camp says the Boers excuse themselves for firing on the stretcher bearers and ambulances of companies of the Connaught Rangers took cover under civilian bearers of the Red Cross and this set fire to the floor fire, three being killed and several wounded.

BANKING BUSINESS.

The following table shows the condition of the First National, Scandia American and Merchants National banks of Crookston, on Dec. 2, 1899, and is evidence of the solidity of these institutions and the growth of business in the city:

	First National.	Scandia American	Mer. Nat'l.
Loans and discounts	$286,710 66	$301,429 12	$202,315 59
Stocks and bonds	1,810 71	1,600 00	2,240 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	11,250 00	7,200 00	10,450 00
Due from banks	90,233 60	97,807 21	62,845 82
Capital stock	50,000 00	50,000 00	75,000 00
Surplus fund	10,000 00	10,000 00	3,000 00
Undivided net profits	10,000 00	10,553 01	1,913 29
Total Deposits	$ 340,172 04	$ 338,614 73	$ 320,943 37

Slocum's...

Is the place to go if you want to get the very finest things in Crockery and Glassware

DINNER SETS, TEA SETS,

CHAMBER SETS,

FANCY PIECES FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS IN LARGE ASSORTMENTS.

Most complete line of

HANGING LAMPS, VASE LAMPS,

STAND LAMPS,

Ever displayed in the city.

LARGEST STOCK. LOWEST PRICES.

113 Broadway, Crookston, Minn.

Slocum's

DEFECTIVE PAGE

FARMING IN THE VALLEY

Free Farms, Fertile Fields and Healthy Climate With Easy Access to Markets Have Produced a Wonderful Growth in Agriculture.

ROTATION OF CROPS IS NEEDED

And More Live Stock--Vegetable Gardening is Profitable and Fruit Growing is Increasing--Houses Protected by Trees.

When the history of the development of farming in the Red River Valley is written, it will be a very interesting chapter. The growth and progress has been almost phenomenal. At few places, if indeed at any place in the world, have the opportunities been so good, and the conditions in general so favorable.

OPPORTUNITIES AND ADVANTAGES.

The very fertile soil was the first drawing card. Not only was the soil of a fertile nature but of such a character that the fertility could be retained. The supply of plant food was enormous. The capacity of the soil to hold moisture during a dry season was also another characteristic of great value. The climate on the whole was very favorable to the best development of agricultural products. The clear skies afforded a great deal of sunshine which not only made the days pleasant but greatly influenced the general health of the population. The free circulation of air was also beneficial, though at times disagreeable. The winters, though cold, were less penetrating than in milder climates where more moisture was in the atmosphere, and there was usually enough snow to cover the ground for protection and for good sleighing. Moisture was seldom lacking during the growing season, and the autumns were usually dry enough to harvest and secure the crop in good order.

T. A. HOVERSTAD,
Superintendent Crookston Experimental Station.

The fertile soil and the healthy climate, however, could not alone have caused this development. The soil being uniform in character, level, free from rocks, sandy knolls, hills, ravines, etc., would be worked in a wholesale way and large areas devoted to the same kind of crop. This gave an excellent opportunity to do everything on a large scale. Large machinery was in demand, which demand was soon supplied, and large fields were cultivated at a surprisingly low figure. When the crop was harvested it was no easy matter to take it to the market. Owing to the absence of hills to climb, or valleys and ravines to cross, or timbered land to clear, wagon roads and railroads were easily constructed and kept in repair, and great loads could be hauled with less power than in countries more varied in contour.

The land could be obtained free from the government, or if purchased, could be had on very easy terms. The railroad companies owned large tracts of land and sold it at very low figures. These lands, occupying every alternate section, would often be close to farms where homesteads were located. This made it very tempting to buy land and add to the homestead, thus enlarging the farms. It is not at all surprising that people streamed in from all directions. The great opportunities could not help but stimulate people to come and look for "new openings."

THE POPULATION.

English, Scotch, Irish, French, Germans, and Scandinavians, besides Canadians and native Americans form the bulk of the population. Each contributed ideas and methods that became useful in their way. The population was mainly divided into four classes. First may be mentioned the PROFESSIONAL PIONKERS.

These helped to open up the country and to do a great deal of the pioneer work. When the country was well settled they moved on to other sections and "pioneered" over again.

LAND SPECULATORS.

These land speculators usually had enough money to buy larger or smaller tracts of land. Their purpose was not to farm, but to hold the land until it should rise in value at which time they would sell. They farmed their lands occasionally, but usually made only the most necessary improvements on those that might bring good returns. Another large class was the

BONANZA FARMERS.

These bought large areas of land for the purpose of farming. Their main object was to draw interest on investments, and have a sure and permanent income. These farmers often did not make their homes on the farms but lived in cities, and all work on the farm was done by "proxy." The last class was the ACTUAL SETTLERS.

They obtain only the amount of land they can take care of. They do not intend to speculate, but to make homes for themselves and their families and to contribute their mite to the general good of the community. All these classes are found in the Red River Valley at the present time, and all contribute to the general development and welfare of the country.

METHODS OF FARMING.

It is natural and necessary and even wise, when a country is new, to raise only such crops as can be easily raised, and for which cash can be obtained at any time. A large number of the settlers are poor, and all are in need of equipment, etc., which money alone can bring. Such cash crops of course are grains. In a new country grain is more certain to produce a good crop than when the land becomes older. The soil is then fertile, and there are fewer insects and plant diseases to damage them. In the course of a few years one often hears the remark that "grain is not the crop it used to be."

In a country like the Red River Valley grain will and ought always to be an important product. It should be the main factor in the crop rotations. It is very doubtful whether it will be wise to continue to make it an exclusive crop. From the experience of older countries it seems unwise, and the practice is very risky. A person should not risk too much on a crop that is so dependent on wind and rain, which are beyond man's control.

ROTATION OF CROPS.

To begin a change in the plans from the single crop system to one based on a system of rotations experience has taught to be wise.

This rotation can be very simple. Only three classes of crops are necessary. This will furnish material to sell in the market and also to feed the stock. Grain could be raised as is done at present. Grain is followed naturally with grasses, clovers, timothy, bromus inermis, red top, slender wheat grass and others grow well and give fair to good returns. On the temporary meadows clover should be sown, partly to fertilize the land and partly to furnish forage. If clover fails at first try again. On permanent meadows and pastures bromus inermis is the most promising.

The last step in the rotation is the cultivated crop or annual forage crops. These are of great value in cleaning the land from weeds, in improving the mechanical condition of the soil, and in furnishing a large yield of excellent fodder. Corn must here be given the first place. As a plant for producing good forage for feeding purposes, and for producing a large crop on a field the Indian corn has no competitor. It can be sown in rows with the grain drill, cultivated with the two horse cultivator, harvested with the corn binder and, if siloed, cut up with the feed cutter. Very little hand work is connected with it. Rape, Sorghum, Millet and roots grow well and are worthy of extensive trials.

It will be seen that the above rotation takes for granted the farmer has on his farm. He can not dispose of his hay, pasturage, forage crops and roots unless they are first pastured or fed to the stock on the farm. It is absolutely necessary to successful farming in the northwest that more live stock be introduced. The better condition of the soil can not economically be brought back or retained without it. It will not be the least interfere with grain growing but rather help it. Smaller areas of it may be raised, but this is an advantage if gain as many bushels can be produced.

LIVE STOCK

A man from Southern Minnesota expressed it to the writer recently, "I make my money out of wheat, but my cattle make it possible. I raised wheat before I had cattle, but I raised it at a loss. Now I raise it at a profit." Probably his statement would have been just as accurate if he had stated that his profit was derived both from his grain and cattle and that each helped to make the other profitable.

THE FARMSTEAD.

Many things on the farm are produced at a great profit no matter if they are not turned into cash. Such is the case with vegetables, and often with fruit. To these might be added the forest plantation and flower garden. To make the vegetable garden as complete as possible it will be necessary to make use of the hot bed at one end of the season and the cellar at the other. A hot bed is constructed for almost nothing. The lining that will cost most will be the labor expended in taking care of it. If the garden is small it can largely be attended to at odd hours. All kinds of garden produce can be raised here and the quality is good to excellent. A garden will materially reduce the cost and increase the comforts of living. No farmer should be without a small one at least.

Another line of products in which success has been partly attained is

FRUIT GROWING.

There is no reason why we should not be as successful in raising fruit here in course of time as they are in Southern Minnesota at present. The fruit for this country must be developed here and it is only a question of time when it will be done. Some varieties of apple trees are hardy now. Plums grow in a wild state and good crops of cultivated plums have been raised successfully. Small fruits need a good soil and rain. The rest can be supplied artificially. A good winter protection can be furnished the fruit bushes by laying them down and covering with soil. Some fruits, like the strawberry, need only straw to protect them. If the farm be made to look homelike and be comfortable it will be necessary to plant trees both for shelter and for ornament. Such a

MAKING HAY ON A VALLEY FARM.

FORESTRY PLANTATION

needs some attention at the start. In a country naturally adapted to the growth of grass and less so to the growth of trees, the balance between the two will seriously injure and often destroy the latter. Here man's intervention will be necessary. Here is the proper place for "the man with the hoe." Cultivation will be needed only when the trees are young. Later they will be able to take care of themselves. Box Elder, Green Ash, White Elm, Linden, Hackberry Willow, several varieties of Cottonwood, European Birch form sufficient variety for a mixed plantation. White Spruce, Red and White Cedar are also worthy of thorough trial. For ornamental purposes the forest trees are much improved in appearance, very much indeed, if they are grouped in clumps here and there with an occasional planting of SHRUBBERY.

Several varieties are hardy here which are also very pretty. Lilacs, Honeysuckles, Buffalo Berry, Sand Cherry, Tamarisk, High Bush Cranberry, Spiraea and many others can be safely recommended. An occasional flower will also add much to the beauty of the scenery.

WINTER LIFE ON FARM.

That farming in the Red River Valley has its drawbacks all will admit. The winters are long and often cold, the summers are short. A season of excessive rain may seriously injure the crop on land so nearly level, but where is the country without its drawbacks? When the obstacles are such that they can easily be overcome then no one need have any fear of them. During the short summers the plant growth is very rapid. While the season for growth is short the days are long and the sunshine bright so the plant makes up for it in rapid development. Many crops can be better produced than in countries further south where the season is longer but the days shorter. The long winters have their days short and nights long. The farmer can work during the day feeding and caring for his stock. This is his factory. He converts the products of the harvest during the summer into beef, mutton, bacon, eggs, etc., and the machines run at full speed during the time when the farmer and his family are gathered around the fireside. The income is not at a standstill. That which is necessary for the material life is produced. But what is of the greatest importance is the family gathering where the father, the mother, the children, the employed and others form a circle whose intellectual, social and moral influences cannot be over-valued. The long winters contribute greatly to the welfare of the greatest earthly institution, the home, and if they did nothing else they would indeed serve a noble purpose.

T. A. HOVERSTAD.

ARE FARMERS PROSPEROUS?

Past Conditions Compared with those of the Present.

The Farmer says: It is not easy to define prosperity. There are always people who are not prosperous, in good times as well as in hard times. Some of these are lazy, some are bad managers, and some, after doing their best, still find themselves struggling against the tide. There is such a thing as "bad luck," which is not chargeable to neglect, laziness or lack of intelligence and good judgment. When most people are making money, all these may be in the list of the "hard up" and unthrifty.

A few years ago, when the panic was on, few farmers were getting ahead. Of course, those who were out of debt were all right and could live without the gaslips, but the majority had a hard struggle to keep even and pay taxes. What they had they could not sell for money, unless it was a necessity of life, like wheat. It seemed as if the whole world was economizing and buying as little as possible. If a man became due, the creditor was crazy to get his money. Hard cash seemed to be the only desirable thing on earth. These conditions were charged to various causes, which possibly had a remote influence or possibly not say, the real cause being a reaction from too free investments of money in properties that were not worth the price paid.

All these conditions have changed. If a farmer has anything to sell there is a market for it at some price. Buyers for all his live stock come to his door. His produce is all wanted. Prices are not startling, but they average large enough to pay a profit to the farmer who farms well. Land is rapidly advancing in value. In the older states where farms have been neglected or abandoned and prices have fallen to half what they were thirty years ago, lands are now looked upon as the best investment in sight, and prices are getting back to their old level. Values of property depend on public opinion largely, and the conviction is spreading that land has a real and solid value, while city property is fictitious and unsubstantial, subject to great speculative changes in market value: but like all speculative property, dangerous to buy for permanent investment.

Corn Crop and Live Stock.

One of the favorable conditions this season is the excellence of the corn crop in those parts of the Northwest where wheat has been the nearest a failure. The corn crop must be fed to live stock if it is made to yield a profit to the farmer, and some people go so far as to say that a country that cannot grow corn is a long way from being a stock country. This is not strictly true, because there are substitutes for corn, but a full corn crib is handy to have on a farm where there is stock. The horses like an ear once in a while as achange from oats; the cow will do a little better with some corn meal in her ration; the sheep keep more and thrive better when they get a nibble of it; and the pigs seem to think corn was made for them and they for corn. Besides, the fodder, if well cured, is great stuff for roughage and a substitute for hay, and when there is plenty of it, the run of the stock do not get very near the outside during the long winters. A good corn crop means more live stock, and both together mean prosperity.

SYSTEM WORKS WELL

W. R. Hoag Reports Recommendations in Regard to Drainage that Will be Made to Governor.

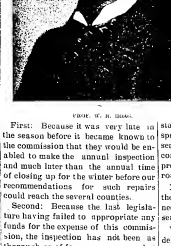
ROAD DITCHES A GREAT AID.

Work of Inspection Hampered by Lack of Funds--J. J Hill Gives Commission Transportation.

The JOURNAL publishes herewith the results of the inspection of the state ditches and the recommendations in regard to this work which will be made to the governor. It will be seen that the State Drainage Commission have been hampered considerably by the fact that the last legislature failed to make any appropriation to cover the expense of the commission and that had it not been for the generosity of President Hill of the Great Northern, who furnished the transportation, and Prof. Hoag, who made the inspection, it would have been impossible to inspect the state ditches.

OFFICE OF STATE DRAINAGE COMMISSION, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. Nov. 29, 1899.

This commission is making very few recommendations for specific repairs to the ditches this year.



PROF. W. R. HOAG.

First: Because it was very late in the season before it became known to the commission that they would be enabled to make the annual inspection and much later than the annual time of closing up for the winter before our recommendations for such repairs could reach the several counties.

Second: Because the last legislature having failed to appropriate any funds for the expense of this commission, the inspection has not been as thorough as of former years nor what would be needed to justify us to make definite recommendations for minor repairs.

Third: The unusual frequence of rains during the season has kept a fair stage of water in most of the ditches which always tends to improve them in keeping an open channel. Thus as a system, it is more efficient at the close of this unusual season than at the time of our inspection in 1898.

Scarcely a ditch in the valley furnishes any conspicuous example to this rule. We consider that the small oppositions to the ditches is comparatively disarmed which maintained that a few seasons would fill them up, and make them practically worthless, necessitating a complete re-excavation. With possibly two or three exceptions the ditches are enlarging as designed and are improving with each season's use.

To economise in the present inspection the individual members of the commission have, when possible, visited the ditches lying in their home counties. The secretary has visited the others except two, though in some cases he could not take the time to get the full length of the ditch as heretofore. The two ditches not inspected were short, efficient ditches and known to be among the most perfect of the system.

A number of the counties are supplementing the work of the state by the construction of other main ditches as well as intercepting ditches. We respectfully urge upon your county the great desirability of carrying forward this work so well begun by the state.

GENERAL RECOMMENDATIONS.

We also desire to call attention to the very substantial aid the road ditches (especially the north and south) may become and in many cases have already become, by proper treatment with special attention to securing a continuous channel to a state ditch or other sufficient outfall.

This might require a few dollars to be expended for engineering services both in making a study of your territory to determine where such road-ditches would do the greatest good as well as some engineering superintendence during the progress of the work but it would be money well invested.

We regret that we have no funds which would enable us to at least make a study as to what road-ditches would do most to free the land from excessive storm water. The maps of the original topographic surveys have all the data needed to make such study. This report would be seriously incomplete if it did not record the very substantial aid, without which no inspection would have been possible this season, which has been rendered this commission by Mr. James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad.

Mr. Hill has cheerfully furnished the commission what transportation was needed for the entire inspection this season.

We desire to acknowledge our indebtedness to the Red River Valley Drainage commission for their generous aid in the issuing of our last published report. Mr. Bern C. Valentine, president of the commission, has given an added proof of his great loyalty to this cause.

Yours very truly,

W. R. HOAG,
Secretary State Drainage Commission.

Next to the common schools, good roads will benefit the people as much as any other one thing they can have.

Subscribe Now

And get the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL from now till January 1st, 1901, for $1.50.

This offer includes the handsome Christmas Editions for the two years. The JOURNAL is the best paper in this Congressional district and is improving with each issue.

++++THE JOURNAL++++
CROOKSTON, MINN.

ED. ERICKSON,

DEALER IN

All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...

Highest market price paid for all kinds of Meat and Hides.

Stall fed Beef..... .....a Specialty

SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

COL. COBHAM POST

The G. A. R. Formed to Keep Alive Memories of Civil War and for Mutual Benefit of Members.

COMMODIOUS HEADQUARTERS

Owned by Local Post—The W. R. C. Composed of Energetic Members is an Efficient Auxilary

Most organizations of value sad note grow larger and stronger with age, lobeel perseuence is commonly coasidered as as essential characteristic of an institution of any standing, but there is one order in the United States, dear to the hearts of all Americans, which is destined within a few years to cease to exist and that is the order of the Grand Army of the Republic. Its membership made up of those who fought long and gallantly in the sixties to preserve the Union is now rapidly decreasing and the second decade of the next ceatury will aumber very few of the old soldiers among the living. On many may be seen the scars of battle, others are diseased from the effects of the army and the prison life, while even now some carry in their bodies bullets that have been there for nearly forty years.

The veterans of many a field have handed together that they may keep alive memories of the Civil War, and in any vindictive or unforgiving spirit, but those were stirring times and too much of their life's energy was put into the struggle for them lightly to forget it. At their reunions often one may see a veritable picture, as Goldsmith gave it us, of the old soldier shouldering his crutch and showing how fields were won. Furthermore they are enabled through organization to help one another and this is aa important part of their work.

Wherever even a few of those scarred and veteran legions live comparatively near one another there has a Post been formed. It was in the spring of 1884, April 16, that an orgaaization was effected in Crookston, the name of Col. Cobham Post No. 99 belag taken. It is the custom in the G. A. R. to name the Posts after aa old officer of one of the members, an old officer who had passed to the Great Beyond, and in this case Col. Cobham was chosen as he was aa officer in a Peaasylvania regimeat to which B. F. Zarracher belonged. The charter members were K. D. Chase, D. Jacobus, B. F. Zarracher, G. H. Holt, I. U. Jenaing, Chas. Homan, V. D. Carruth, M. B. Hayes, E. C. Davis, John McLean, W. H. Jenaings, J. Nesters, C. A. Chiniquy, C. H. Mix, A. M. Childs, C. H. Jefferson, C. W. Dippie, W. H. Starr, S. P. Norton, C. W. Barnes, John Kevil, A. W Dawley, W. D. Duaa, J. O. Milea, W. F. Zwicker, W. H. Topping, A. W. Hopkins, P. Jerome, C. A. Jenkins, Chas. Pence, Wm. Kertson, H. E. Cooke, L. B. Tooley, G. W. Penke William Kistermacher, T. A. Harris and J. E. Greenhalgh.

JOHN M'LEAN, CONSABLE

The building that was first used as a G. A. R. hall used to stand where the Ray Mercantile Company's warehouse now is, but this hall was only a temporary one, so they had to move from place to place. It was not till 1896 that they were able to get a building of their own. At that time they bought the old agricultural building on Fletcher street, which is the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL block. Two years later they moved it to its present location on South Main street. Subsequently they added a kitchen and this past fall they built a dining room addition, so that they are now comfortably housed and have lots of room in which may be prepared and served those delicious and wholesome dinaners and suppers for which the G. A. R. and their auxiliary have become famous and to which the public are always glad of an opportunity to go. The same year, 1897, in which they made their headquarters where the G. A. R. Hall now is, they incorporated under the laws of the state so that the organization as such might be enabled to buy and sell property. The building and land which they now own is valued at $2,500 and it is free from debt.

The hall is draped with flags and on the walls hang pictures of noted Civil war generals and the photos of deceased comrades of Col. Cobham Post. But aothing that the old soldiers have do they prize more highly than the silk flag that was presented to them at the Memorial Day exercises held in the Opera House in 1897. The presentation was made by Mrs. Phoebe Streeter in behalf of the Womea's Relief Corps. The act was a most graceful one and the efforts of the ladies were and are much appreciated.

The W. R. C., aa auxiliary to the G. A. R., was organized in the early nineties and has been a valuable aid to the old soldiers. These women not only do a great deal of charitable and relief work but they help to build up and sustain the post as an organization, and on Memorial Day when civilians and soldiers alike seek to do honor to the country's dead, it is their hands that twine the wreaths of flowers that bedeck the graves beaath whose sod lies buried many a hero. All honor and undying fame to the Women's Relief Corps and the Grand Army of the Republic!

Lumber Interests.

A town's aame is not often made by any one business concern however extensive that concern may be, for even the smallest store and the smallest manufactory contribute their share to the life and activity of the place where they are located. Still it often happens that one interest is paramount. In Crookston's case nothing, aside from the rich land and persevering farmers of this vicinity, has contributed so much to the progress of the city as have the lumber interests. Crookston lumber is shipped to all points in Minnesota and adjoining states and the name of the city is thus noised abroad and its reputation as a great lumbering centre has become wide-spread. Millions upon millions of feet of timber are cut every year in the huge forests to the east and aorthaast of here and with the first weakening up of the ice in the rivers and lakes in the spring time large gangs of men start the drive of logs on their way aad to this city.

The milling plant is located on the west bank of the Red Lake river in South Crookston and, including the yards where the lumber is piled and the ground where the saw mill and the planing mill stand, covers about twenty-five acres.

The mills are the best equipped in the northwest, during the last season alone from twenty to twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of improvements having been made in the way of new machinery, a new refuse burner, new sheds, etc. Beginning about May 1, the mills run day and night for a period of about six months, cutting, within that time, some 30,000,000 feet of lumber and furnishing employment to between 250 and 300 men. The facilities for shipping such large quantities of lumber, which ranks among the best as to quality and the lowest as to price, are most excellent. The main line of the Great Northern Railway runs along the west side of the milling plant and has a long line of loading platforms that are always the scene of activity. The Northern Pacific Railroad, also, has a spur track running into the lumber yards from the east and carries away its due proportion of the mill's products.

An institution, doing such a vast business and employing so much labor, thus distributing within the city large sums of money, is a great aid in the upbuilding of a town and in the maintaining of the town's solidity and the citizens of this city and surrounding country are assuredly greatly indebted to the Crookston Lumber Company, of which Thomas Shevlin, of Minneapolis, is president and E. C. Shevlin, of this city, vice-president and manager, for investing so much capital here and carrying on such an extensive industry.

This concern and its connections is one of the largest and wealthiest in the northwest, owning endless stretches of the primeval forests in Northern Minnesota and heace controlling to a large extent lumbering operations in that region and the public in this state and other sections has alreadly learned that in doing business with this firm fair dealing is always received.

W. E. Rowe.

Of the young attorneys of Crookston practicing outside of W. E. Rowe, the junior member of the law firm of Stevenson & Rowe. His native home was in Grays, S. D. After receiving his academic education he entered the law school of the Minnesota State University at Minaeapolis from which department he was graduated in 1893. After practicing law for a year in one of the smaller towns of the state he came to Crookston and formed a partnership with Halvor Steeaerson. This firm still exists and has one of the largest law practices in Northern Minaesota. Having received a good law training and grounding in the great principles of law at the University, Mr. Rowe set himself to the task of masterlng, by further study and actual practice, this comprehensive subject, and judging from the record he has made in the courts he has been succeeding admirably. His clients have found that he takes the utmost pains in working up a case, is keen, sharp and searching in his cross-questioning of witnesses and clear and forceful in summing up and presenting a case to a jury. Many, indeed, are the compliments which he has received for his eloquent pleadings before juries.

But Mr. Rowe finds that some recreation is necessary that his law work may be pursued to the best advantage and this recreation he takes with gun in hand. Numerous, indeed, are his friends in the city whom, particularly early in the spring and late in the fall, he has favored with fine fat birds. Mr Rowe is also one of the leading members of the Crookston Gun Club and an expert in shattering the blue rocks. During the past summer he won much honor for himself and this city by his skill in bringing down the clay pigeons.

TO-DAY--TO-MORROW

In the Red River Valley—Rev. S. Currie of Euclid Discusses This Interesting Question.

FARMERS MORE PROSPEROUS

If More Stock Were Raised—Cows and Sheep will eat weeds that Choke the Wheat.

Any person who thoughtfully considers things as they are, and the changes that are sure to come in the agriculture of the Red River valley, must feel a little impatient at the slow progress of events. We hear it said, and echoed from all sides, that prosperity is here and surely it must be here for some classes, as is evidenced by the rapid advancing prices of so many commodities, but do the farmers of this great northwest gather their proper share of the fruits of prosperity with their small average crops of wheat and low prices for the same? Or to put the question in another way, are they on the right road to permanent prosperity? The great mass of our farmers are giving almost their entire attention to small grain raisings. Now let me ask, has that course of agriculture ever led to permanent prosperity in any state or territory of our union? Wheat is certainly one of the few settlers best friend, but she will not stand by him when all others are deserted.

S. CURRIE.

What is the condition of things in our portion of the state today? That our soil, climate and other natural advantages are all right we are bound to admit, but that we are largely in debt and unable to improve our farms and homes as we would wish to do, we are also compelled to admit. It is also true that interest is higher and land is lower here than in most any other section of like natural advantages. Is this condition of things due to climate, or to our wrong system of farming? The history of all of our western states testifies that it is due to our system, for in every climate where grain raising has been exclusive, the same conditions have followed sooner or later. The history of different sections of our country also shows that conditions have improved upon the adoption of a more diversified husbandry. We are not uttering prophesy but simply showing that history repeats itself. When we say that as dairying, beef raising, chicken feeding and sheep and swine husbandry become generally associated with our grain raising, our lands will decide la value, our debts will diminish, our buildings will improve and, if we do our duty as citizens, prosperity will surely come our way. The only question is, shall we do these things and reap the reward; or shall we wait and let some one else come in and take our birthright? I know that it is a serious undertaking for us to change our system of farming, but it can be done and it must be done. If we do not do it voluntarily, the great army of noxious weeds that are spreading over our fertile prairie will compel us to change our system. To grow rich by growing wheat, to labor in summer and loaf in winter, may be the farmer's pleasant dream, but, with most men, it will end in nightmare.

A BUNCH OF CATTLE ON THE CURRIE DAIRY FARM.

A farmer from Southern Minnesota, visiting this section last summer, made the remark, that the farmers here were asleep. He was impressed with the richness and cheapness of our lands, by our splendid opportunities and the comparatively small benefits we are deriving from them Wheat raising seems to hold people to it as by some fatal spell, until necessity compels them to changetheir methods. It partakes largely of the nature of the lottery and lotteries are always demoralizing. The farmer's interest on his mortgages is growiag every day and night of the year, he must eat every day in the year and his horses must he fed every day and there are a thousand and one expenses that come any and every day, but his wheat can only grow ahout one quarter of the time and it is an uncertain growth at that. His wheat has also to contend with grass and weeds, which cows and sheep will feed and fatten upon. It is evident that the Creator never intended man should live by bread alone, or raise wheat alone for any great length of time. It is a process by which man robs nature and also robs himself. If our farmers would devote one-half of their land to stock raising they would soon raise as much grain from half, as they now do from the whole, and double their profits.

Diversified farming would surely prove as antidote for some of the great evils with which the farmers of this section have to contend. It would relieve him of the nuisance of tramp labor by giving employment for men all of the year. It would do away with the credit system by producing a daily or weekly income, it would shorten the long winters by giving interesting and profitable employment for the winter months. It would give him an opportunity to clean his land of weeds that sap the soil and crowd the grain and above all it would enable him to constantly improve instead of impoverishing his soil.

Some I know will raise objections to all this and say we cannot raise stock profitably because home grasses are not more abundant, but there is nothing that will compare with corn fodder as a rough feed and this we can grow in any quantity. Others tell us that we cannot fatten cattle or hogs profitably because we have not the corn. We do not need the corn as barley is quite as good and this we can raise with less labor and expense than our southern neighbor can raise his corn. Still others tell us that we are too far from markets to make butter profitably, but we h ve wipsy to pay freight on the finished product whereas the shipment of the far east have to come here for their feed stuffs. But the greatest objection of all is it requires too much trouble and labor and care. This we must admit but is also through much tribulation that we must eater into the kingdom of heaven and so excellence is attained without great labor, and so weara it is simply a matter of choice. The present generation may or may not reap the fruits of our golden possibilities, but the rising generation is certainly will.

S. CURRIE.

New Railway Station.

The Great Northern railway has about completed a new passenger station and freight depot on the site of the old station. It was intended originally to erect one building, but the convenience of the public a narrow passage-way has been made to run between the station and the depot. Both are of white brick with stone facings, one story high, with basement under the northern part. The combined length is 328 feet. The passenger and baggage departments is on the end toward Second street, the freight department to the south. In front of the former is a platform 16 feet wide. It is a commodious, solid edifice that furnishes ample accommodation for the heavy passenger and freight traffic at this point.

Ben Clements.

Do you wish to buy something truly delicious, something so sweetly tooth some that it will melt in your mouth like ice before a July sun? Then just step into Ben Clements' confectionery store in the Wallace block on Second street and buy some of his home made candy, fresh every day. Countless kinds and yet these sweetmeats sell so fast that Mr. Clements is compelled to make fresh every day. What a fund of delight such delicacies furnish your friends! Then buy some for a Christmas present.

Mr. Clements is also branching out into the wholesale business and expects in a short time to be furnishing candied goods to all the retail dealers in Northwestern Minnesota.

Money to Loan.

Miller & Foote have money to loan on good security—no bonus exchanged Business dispatched without delay.

CROOKSTON COLLEGE

Excellent Business Training Given Here—Teachers Prepared for First Grade Examinations.

GRADUATES SECURE POSITIONS

Commodious and Well Furnished Quarters—Able Corps of Teachers —Cheap Room and Board.

A school suited to the wants of young men and young women seeking short, practical and complete courses which will prepare them for work in the many vocations of life. Such is the announcement which Professors Sathre & Malm make with regard to their Crookston College and both the students who have attended that institution only for a short time and those who have remained long enough to be graduated will acknowledge that this claim is made good. While, in judging of the standing of a school, the different courses offered and the character and attainments of the teachers must necessarily be considered, yet there is another way by which one may learn of the merits of an institution of learaing and that is by the kind of young men and young women it turns out. What is the proficiency of those who have been taught at a certain school? Do they hold larger and broader views of life as a result of their having attended a certain college? These questions if asked with reference to the students who have been working under Professors Sathre & Malm and other members of the Crookston College faculty can be answered in manner that will reflect credit upon those educators and the college of which they form the teaching force. All the graduates who desired to secure positions have secured them, and five or six are even now drawing a salary of $75 a month. Those who came for culture have returned to the work on the farm or to other avocations with a wider outlook and with their intellects sharpened and brightened by reasoa of their residence at this school. These facts speak eloquently la behalf of the Crookston College and tell in a most emphatic manner of its high grade and worthy qualities.

P. V. MALM.

The Crookston College was opened four years ago last fall in the room over the Fair Store and instruction was given there for a year. In the fall of 1896 the school was moved to the McKinnon block where larger quarters were secured. Here the institution flourished for two years at the end of which time the managers, finding their quarters too small for the increasing number of pupils and desiring to have a building of their own which they could fit up to suit themselves and to accommodate the growing patronage of the school, bought the old St. Louis Hotel which they have partitioned off and arranged in an admirable manner. There are eight rooms including the office and a large chapel hall that seats 200 comfortably. Chairs, desks and tables are furnished and the entire building lighted by electricity.

J. C. SATHRE.

The following departments are in constant operation: Preparatory, Teachers', Commercial, Stenography and Typewriting, Elocution and Oratory, Instrumental and Vocal Music, Plain and Ornamental Penmanship. The commercial course aims to fit one for any business position, but particularly that of bookkeeping, if one takes the teachers' course he will be enabled to secure a first grade certificate, the preparatory course meet the demands of foreigners. The Pitman system of shorthand is taught, a system which has been pronounced by experts to be the most facile, most legible, the simplest yet the most comprehensive in use. Legible penmanship is a necessity in business life, as well as a desirable accomplishment and this skill with the pen can be acquired at the Crookston College. Intelligence and ease in reading is a charm few possess. Music is a joy forever. If you would gain instruction in both these arts attend the Crookston College. Remember, too, that you can enter at any time and take up such studies as you wish, either elementary or advanced, and also bear in mind that board and room—that means everything furnished—in private families may be secured at $2.50 a week.

GEO. T. CHURCHILL.

J. C. Sathre, who teaches Grammar, History and Theory and Practice of Teaching, was born at Adams, Mower county, Minnesota, on Sept. 23, 1867. He worked on the farm until 16 years of age and attended such country schools as those days afforded. He then entered Augsburg Seminary at Minneapolis. He attended this college for four years, working his way through by teaching in the summer and attending school in the winter. In the fall of 1889 he entered the Northern Indiana Normal school and was graduated from the scientific department of the same in 1891 with the degree of bachelor of science. The same year he was elected principal of the Grand Meadow schools.

MISS NELLIE SIMMONS

In the fall of 1894 he took up the study of law at the State University of Minnesota, was graduated from that institution, and was admitted to the bar on the 6th day of June, 1896. The same month he came to Crookston and entered into partnership with P. V. Malm, and is sole charge of the Crookston Normal College.

P. V. Malm in charge of higher Mathematics, Physiology and Penmanship, was brought up in southern Minnesota near St. James. He was a student at the Mankato Normal and after leaving that institution attended the Dixon, Ill. College being graduated from that school in the scientific course. Afterwards he taught in Minneapolis, in Sauk Center for two years, one year in Mankato, after which he came to Crookston, where he has ever since been engaged in work in connection with the College. The summer he taught in the State Summer School at St. Cloud.

Geo. T. Churchill, of the Shorthand, Typewriting and Bookkeeping department, is a native of Michigan. He was graduated from the Coastantine high school, Valparaiso, Ind., attended the business college at Ypsilanti, Mich., and the Globe Business College at St. Paul. He was bookkeeper and stenographer for a large business house in Saginaw, Mich., for one year, taught rural and village schools for four years, was a member of the faculty of the Grand Forks College, taught in the Minneapolis Normal College for a year, was bookkeeper for Prosser & Sernagard, of Devils Lake, N. D. and came to the Crookston College last fall.

Miss Nellie Simmons, in charge of the musical department, has pursued her favorite study at Minneapolis and Chicago, and has taught music in Crookston for four years, during which time she has given satisfaction. The College authorities were indeed fortunate in securing her as a member of their faculty.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

NORTHERN MINNESOTA

A most Resourceful Territory Including the Red River Valley, Park Regions and Mineral Lands—1500 Miles of Railway.

CROOKSTON THE LAND CENTER

Over Two-Thirds of Land Taken—Towns Look After Sauitation, Education and Comforts of Life—The People Progressive.

There are few stretches of territory of equal extent that can boast of so many and varied resources as can Northern Minnesota. Men from every land who have trained themselves in the many different pursuits of life may come here and continue each one his particular line of work. The raw material for manufactures and the water power, primeval forests, farming lands, mineral lands, fishing advantages, etc., with all that these include, taken together with the unusually favorable climatic conditions of a clear, dry atmosphere and pure fresh air blown from off the prairies through the woods and across the lakes—the climate is unquestionably growing warmer and less suffering is experienced here than in states farther south—makes this region a veritable El Dorado.

TERRITORY INCLUDED

Within this district, roughly speaking, are included the Red River Valley, the Park Regions and the Mineral Lands. There is on the continent no richer agricultural lands than those found in the Red River Valley. It is a prairie country, rolling in some places and in others more level, the soil of which is a rich clay and black sandy loam particularly adapted to the raising of all kinds of grain, though diversified farming is coming more into vogue. This fertile valley is situated on the western border of Northern Minnesota, extending from St. Vincent on the north to the southern boundary of Clay county, its eastern limits being from 40 to 50 miles east of the Red River of the North. The Park Regions are in the central southern portion and include Beltrami, Becker, Hubbard, Cass, Itasca, Aitkin, Douglas and Wadena counties. Here there is great diversity—woods, prairies and lakes, here it is proposed to establish a great National Park. South of Red Lake and around Cass, Winnibigoshish and Leech lakes, there still remain, notwithstanding the enormous quantities that have been cut, from two to three billion feet of timber. Cass Lake has two saw mills. Akely one, and in addition there are numerous portable saw mills situated at different points which furnish lumber to outside trade and also to the already large number of settlers located here. It is, indeed, picturesque and beautiful, dotted as it is with countless large and small lakes, all of which, with an exception or two, have dry, saady or rocky shores and in which abound all manner of fish. The water is pure and fresh, a characteristic of the water in general in Northern Minnesota, very little alkali water being found here. The woods and the lakes taken together furnish for the hunter and sportsman all the delights imaginable. The mineral lands of Itasca, St. Louis, Lake and border-ing counties are unlimited. The iron mines are the most extensive, their products being larger than those from any other state. Gold and copper are also found there in large quantities. So extensive is this mining industry that three railroads find it all they can do to carry out the ore.

DRAINAGE AND DEVELOPMENT.

This whole territory is well drained. In all but the Red River valley there are countless streams that carry off all the surplus water, thus producing a most healthful condition of affairs, while in the valley wherever natural streams are wanting their place has been taken by artificial canals that cut the country in every direction.

Within the last thirty to thirty-five years the development all over this section of the state has been truly wonderful. Before that time this region was given over to the Indians and fur traders, today it is a civilized, prosperous community where business of all kinds is carried on and whence are sent out men and women who are capable of taking a place among the nation's and the world's rulers.

FOSTON WOOLEN MILLS.

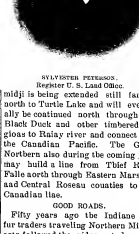
THE RAILROADS.

In the opening up of this region to civilization the railroad played no unimportant part. Usually the iron horse follows settlement but in this case the railroads were really ahead, and emigration followed. The Northern Pacific reached Fargo in 1871, the Great Nothern in 1879 and both shortly afterwards came north. Not in older settled states are they as well equipped with transportation facilities as are the people here. There are now in Northern Minnesota more than 1,500 miles of railway. The Duluth line that was completed last year opened up the territory lying between Crookston and Duluth, and now most of the grain raised in the valley and North Dakota is shipped via this line to the land of the lakes and lumber is brought back to Western Minnesota and North Dakota. But the track laying is not yet completed. Even now the Brainerd & Northern which has been built north from Brainerd by Leech Lake to Be-



SYLVESTER PETERSON.
Register U. S. Land Office.

midji is being extended still farther north to Turtle Lake and will eventually be continued north through the Black Duck and other timbered regions to Rainy river and connect with the Canadian Pacific. The Great Northern also during the coming year may build a line from Thief River Falls north through Eastern Marshall and Central Roseau counties to the Canadian line.

GOOD ROADS.

Fifty years ago the Indians and fur traders travelling Northern Minnesota followed the ridges, today, beside the hundreds of miles of steel track, there are good roads all over the valley and the Park region. Much labor and money has been expended on the public highways so that one may travel for days and days without getting off a graded road. The necessity of providing drainage at different points has materially assisted in the matter of good roads. This section is indeed everywhere accessible and for its age is well furnished with public thoroughfares.

CROOKSTON A LAND CENTRE.

The distributing point for a large share of the land included in the map which the JOURNAL publishes on the outside back cover page of this issue has been Crookston and most of the land still unoccupied, or cultivated land that is for sale, must be secured at this city. This is because the United States land office is situated here, as well as the Great Northern land office and because there are numerous real estate dealers who handle considerable property for outside parties and buy and sell a good deal for themselves as well as for local owners.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE.

The United States land office, now located at Crookston, was first established at Oak Lake, Becker county, and the first homestead entry was made by Wm S. Thompson, June 18, 1872, the land being in Otter Tail county, near Gresham. The first preemption entry was made by John O French, on a piece of land near Detroit in Becker county.

At Oak Lake 375 homestead entries were made before office was removed, on Nov. 3, 1873, to Detroit. At that office 1,651 homestead entries were made before the business headquarters for government land transactions in this section were transferred to Crookston, which happened May 5, 1879. This office has charge of all government lands covering a territory 165 miles from north to south and 125 miles at its widest, within which is included about 500 townships. Bounded on the west by the Red river and extending from the Canadian line as far south as Baraesville, it goes east to the Chippewa Reservation, including four townships in that, and thence goes north to the Lake of the Woods, taking in, besides, Becker county, and one tier of townships in Otter Tail. Beltrami county was given to the Crookston office April 27, 1896, as this land is more accessible from this city than from St. Cloud.

21,000 HOMESTEADS.

The government did have 10,143,440 acres and of these 7,000,000 have been taken, including the reservation lands. The bulk of the vacant land now lies in Kittson, Roseau, Marshall and Beltrami. There have been 21,000 homestead entries and the Reservation lands in 1896 were thrown open to entry. Before the repeal in 1891 of the preemption and timber culture laws there were 13,000 pre-emption claims taken and 4,000 timber culture. Now the only way in which land may be obtained free from the government is by homestead. During the present year—December estimated—1,200 homestead entries were made at the Crookston office, 300 final proofs filed, $30,000 worth of pine lands sold, the total receipts being $65,000.

EFFICIENT OFFICIALS.

The land office officials are register, receiver, and clerks, varying at different times from two to five. W. A. Newton was register in 1873, probably the first one to hold this position. Since then the officials have changed quite frequently. Hugh Thompson and William Anglim have served terms as receivers and the late Captain Dunlavy and Joseph Smith as registers. The present force are Sylvester Peterson, register, who took office April 17, 1897, August George, receiver since June 10, 1897, and Frank Montague and Maurice Malone, who have been assistants in the office for four years, and a more efficient lot of officials it would indeed be hard to find. Government Inspector A. R. Green, in 1898 reported to the United States commissioner that the work in the Crookston office was "eminently satisfactory in every particular," and in September, 1899, Mr. Peterson and Mr. George received word from Washington that Mr. Green had reported the business at Crookston to be large, but by faithful and diligent application of yourselves and clerks it is kept well up and no work is in arrears. He (the inspector) particularly recommends your methods and prompt and accurate keeping of your records and dockets and expresses his unqualified approval of the whole office and the efficient and able manner in which it is conducted". This is the government side of it, on the other hand the public find these officials one and all most courteous and accommodating at all times, and ever ready to answer any questions and give helpful information.

CHARACTERISTIC AND PICTURESQUE DEAD IN THE RED LAKE RIVER.

SETTLERS OUT EAST.

The land office reports that during the last year settlers have been pouring into the Black Duck country south and east of Red Lake and also into Roseau county. Many of the citizens of Crookston have taken up claims out near Bemidji, Cass Lake, Turtle Lake and Black Duck Lake. Some of this land is rolling prairie, the rest is timbered. The pine lands when cleared will be adapted to the raising of stock, the soil wherever the White pine grows being unusually good. East of Thief River Falls there is land in the reservation that will undoubtedly be opened to entry soon and will give that town as much more tributary territory as it has now.

North of Red Lake there is considerable swampy land. Travelers, however, say that within the last 20 years such a transformation has taken place there that the bog is dry the best part of the summer and it is, hence, not unreasonable to suppose that 25 years from now this land will be cultivable—and as it is vegetable formation it will be very rich soil—for the transformation in parts of the Red River Valley has been no less wonderful.

COUNTIES IN VALLEY.

Kittson county is situated in the ex-

AUGUST GEORGE.
Receiver U. S. Land Office.

treme northwestern corner of Minnesota. It is an agricultural county the eastern portion being well adapted to sheep raising. Marshall county is south of Kittson, and includes twice as much land as the latter. Here the drainage canals begin and many acres have thus been reclaimed, every foot being suitable for cultivation. Both counties are well settled.

ROSEAU COUNTY.

Roseau county to the north and east of Kittson and Marshall was first settled in 1886. The most of the land is now taken up, the population numbers about 8,000. For the most part it is rolling prairie suited to diversified farming, but particularly well adopted to stock raising. Many streams traverse the country and rich grasses grow in abundance. Wild fruits in large quantities and of a fine quality, such as plums, grapes, cranberries, etc., thrive there.

Roseau, the oldest town, is an enterprising village of several hundred inhabitants which supplies the wants of the surrounding country in the way of newspapers, necessaries of life, professional advice and care, etc. It is eagerly awaiting the extension of the Great Northern from Thief River Falls, as that line will pass through Roseau and the town will then without doubt enjoy a boom.

Another Roseau county town is Warroad, of recent birth, situated on the western shore of the Lake of the Woods. It is an entry port and on the line of the railroad which is being built from Winnipeg south of Lake of the Woods through United States territory to Port Arthur on Lake Superior. Steamers from Rat Portage touch at all points on the lake including Warroad and may go down Rainy river as far as St. Francis.

Fishing on the Lake of the Woods is quite an important industry. Fishing companies from all over the United States fish their during the summer. Each company has certain exclusive rights along particular parts of the shore and they take out what are called pound net fishing licenses. Thousands of tons of fish are caught here annually and shipped thence all over the country.

The caviar industry is also carried on extensively here. Caviar are the roes or spawn of the sturgeon that are prepared and salted. They are used as a relish especially in Russia. Even in Shakespeare's time caviar was considered a delicacy, hence Hamlet says of a certain play "'twas caviar to the general," meaning by that that the common people could not understand it. Large quantities of these eggs are prepared and this industry, the only one in the United States, competes with the Russian industry.

NORMAN COUNTY.

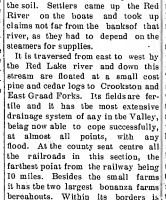
Norman county to the south of Polk county is more than half included in the Red River valley. Its eastern portion takes in White Earth Reservation or will do so when that land is, as most of it soon will be, opened to settlement. As there is no richer land anywhere than that on the White Earth Reservation, Norman has, or will have, the largest amount of rich agricultural land, for the size of the county, in the valley. Its principal river is the Wild Rice which meanders through the county and which has large water power at different places.

RED LAKE COUNTY.

The principal feature of Red Lake county is its large number of streams. Of these the largest are the Red Lake river and the Clearwater, flowing from Red Lake through the timbered regions from the east toward the west. These streams are large enough for navigation, steamers running on the Red Lake river between Thief River Falls and Red Lake. Clearwater is the principal outlet for the log drives from the timber country. The county is at present, through their county commissioners, building bridges, grading the roads and making preparations for county drainage. The saw mill interests at Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire are extensive and the flour mills at Red Lake Falls do a large business. Much manufacturing may be done, for along the two rivers there are numerous and easy developed water powers. The surface varies from the level prairie to high rolling lands and over it are spread numerous groves, meadows and lakes so that it would seem to be well adapted for both wheat and stock.

POLK COUNTY.

Polk county occupies a central position in the Valley and takes for all in all is the most resourceful. It was the first land north of Fargo and



A STREET SCENE AT WINTONA.

Moorhead that was settled. This was due chiefly to the excellent quality of the soil. Settlers came up the Red River on the boats and took up claims not far from the banksof that river, as they had to depend on the steamers for supplies.

It is traversed from east to west by the Red Lake river and down this stream are floated at a small cost Norway and cedar logs to Crookston and East Grand Forks. Its fields are fertile and it has the most extensive drainage system of any in the Valley, being now able to cope successfully, at almost all points, with any flood. At the county seat centre all the railroads in this section, the farthest point from the railway being 10 miles. Besides the small farms it has the two largest bonanza farms hereabouts. Within its borders is situated one of the state experimental farms, an institution that, through the able management of Supt. T. A. Hoverstad, is disseminating scientific knowledge of agriculture and giving to the farmers the results of most careful experiments. Here, too, is a magnificent system of country schools and to crown all Polk county's capital with its commercial, manufacturing and educational advantages.

SOME IMPORTANT TOWNS.

Scattered all through the Valley are numerous thriving and prosperous towns and villages, all of which are supported by agricultural communities. Along the St. Vincent line are St. Vincent, Hallock, the county seat of Kittson, Stephen, Argyle and Warren, all three in Marshall county, the latter the county seat, East Grand Forks and Fisher between Crookston and Grand Forks. St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls to the northeast, Erskine, McIntosh and Fosston on the Duluth line, Fertile on the Northern Pacific, and Ada in Norman county, besides a host of smaller places. Almost all the above mentioned towns have graded schools and high schools, waterworks, sewerage and electric lights, improved streets, substantial brick blocks and neat looking, homelike residences. They are all, save the towns on the St. Vincent line, joined with the outside world by the long-distance phone, and these excepted towns soon will be within talking distance of St. Paul and Chicago. Newspapers flourish in every one of them, in some places two, and in several villages not mentioned by name. The Valley towns are not without their manufactures, as witness, the blower factory at Maple Bay, the cheese factory at Gentilly, the Fosston Woolen Mills, the Fertile brick yards and others referred to before. Sanitation, education, the comforts of life as well as business affairs are matters that receive careful attention.

Beyond the Valley, east on the Duluth line, are several flourishing towns that have risen rapidly within the last year, notably Bagley, Shevlin, Solway, Bemidji and Cass Lake. Bagley, Shevlin and Solway have great lumbering interests and settlers are fast taking up the lands in that vicinity. Bemidji, located on the shores of a beautiful lake, has put up some fine buildings, and put in electric lights, waterworks and sewerage. In fact this town is fast becoming the favorite summer resort of Northern Minnesota. Cass Lake beyond Bemidji is the division headquarters of the Great Northern between Crookston and Duluth. The citizens there are an unusually plucky and persevering class for they have rebuilt the town after a disastrous fire, and forced the secretary of the interior to change completely his plans about moving the town, and now that section 15 is being platted they are on the high road to greater prosperity.

FOSTON FLOUR MILL.

THE PEOPLE.

The resources of this vast region are many, the transformation within the last thirty years wonderful, but the distinguishing feature is the class of people who dwell here. The predominating nationality is Scandinavian, with the German next, besides French, native Americans, Bohemians, Poles, Canadians, Scotchmen and many others. This heterogeneity is an element of strength, for these will resolve themselves into a greater people than would have been the case if only one nationality were here represented. They are an industrious and progressive people, most of whom are fairly well-to-do, and contentment is one of the characteristics that can easily be read on their faces. Recognizing of what value a school education is, they have scattered throughout the length and breadth of this land school houses of all sizes and grades, so that the rising generation, surrounded by the most beautiful environments that nature weaves and with all the advantages that the best of educational institutions afford, have the opportunities, which if rightly used, cannot help but produce in them a superior manhood and womanhood.

A Celebrated Percheron.

Emil Himmelsbach, one of the prominent farmers of Polk county, is the owner of the celebrated Percheron stallion, Voltgeur, which was imported by M. U. Dunham, of Fort Wayne, Ill.

Corn Cultivation.

Corn can be grown in the Red River Valley for it has been done. Herrick Scribner, an enterprising farmer living about nine miles south of the city had ripened corn on his place before September 10 this year, and Mr. Berg, one of the old settlers near Mentor, has had great success in growing corn of both the yellow dent and the King Philip variety, of the latter having raised as much as 100 baskets to the acre.

FIRST HOUSE IN THIRTEEN TOWNS.
Property of Conductor S. H. Withey.

A Boston judge decides that when a newspaper publishes statements that are true, in good faith without malice, there is no ground for damages for libel.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

DRAINAGE IN VALLEY.

Millions of Acres of the Most Fertile Soil Have Been Reclaimed by the Drainage Ditches Built by the State.

POLK COUNTY SPENT $100,000.

J. J. Hill Began the Work—Convention At Crookston Orders Survey—State Drainage Commission Exercise Supervision.

A broad, open valley, containing over two and a half million acres of fertile soil: a good climate; ample railroad facilities; naturally competing routes to both oceans for its grain and stock products; an intelligent, industrious people. What more could the gods have bestowed upon this region to make the ideal agricultural section of the state? Yet but a fraction of its soil produces other than a bountiful crop of choice hay, which passes bare to the elements each fall, either in the form of smoke to the air or mould to the soil.

Such were the conditions and facts obtaining in the Red River Valley ten years ago.

But why this seeming disregard of nature's bounties? A visit to the valley during the late summer or fall season would not guide to an explanation.

The few farmers along the rivers and coulees are harvesting good crops, the bountiful grass is maturing hay where it grew, the few, main, well turn-piked roads are hard and dry.

Where and what, then, is the repellant force keeping settlers from this naturally profitable field for farming? The answer appears at once upon seeing this country at the time of the spring freshets or heavy June rains. Then the broad, dry acres give place to vast sheets of water, and the roads to a strip of dirt between two canals.

During the past ten years a great change has come to this region and in a general way the term drainage expresses the cause.

HOW RIVERS ARE MADE.

It differs, however, so widely from the common system of land drainage in attendant conditions, cost of construction and method of treatment that the general term is not applicable and is likely to be misleading. Ordinary land drainage means a local benefit—relief to a part of a farm or to a few neighboring pieces of land. River-making is quite nearly expressed in what is being done in the Red River Valley by the state in developing the so-called drainage system. To appreciate thoroughly the difference between this river-making and common drainage we must first glance at the usual natural conditions producing rivers and then note how one of the fundamental conditions is wanting in a large tract of land in this valley.

ADA STATE DITCH. NORMAN COUNTY.

In general, rivers represent the process of rainfall over evaporation and infiltration. This excess flows off the surface of the land and collects in small streams in the ravines. Many of these will unite and as a river convey this accumulated excess to a remote outfall. All of this takes place if the slope of the country channels to be such as to enable the water to maintain its channel, by the purely mechanical action of erosion. This power of erosion is determined wholly by its velocity which is determined largely by the slope of its bed. When this slope is great the consequent velocity produces deep gorges, chasms or canyons. When it is medium, fifteen to thirty feet per mile, we have the well defined streams so common throughout the state. But when the land lies very flat, having from one to five feet per mile slope, what happens? The small velocity produced in an open channel with this slope is not sufficient to carry off the sediment brought to it by the summer rains and a gradual filling up of the channel takes place. This process is further aided by the growth of flags and rushes which serve the double purpose of impeding the water, thus diminishing its carrying capacity, and collecting grass and other debris which further contribute to the obstruction of the water' channel. It is needless to say that these latter conditions prevail to a very marked extent in the Red River Valley. A word as to the general lay of the land in this valley will bring us to a better understanding of the real situation and show at once the entire feasibility of a complete system of river construction such as is now being carried out. It will also show just how this river-making process has heretofore failed through the working of well recognized natural laws and how man must assist nature here if he would escape the evils otherwise sure to be visited upon this great valley. The Minnesota side of the valley is made up of three planes of one water-shed—called so by courtesy, since it fails in an important particular to shed. All these have a slight drainage toward the north, the same as that of the Red River valley itself, which is about three inches to the mile on the lower 300 miles of its length along our Minnesota border. These planes are distinguished by the difference of their slopes toward the Red River, and are about ten miles wide and of the same length as the valley. Now, the western plane, that adjacent to the Red River, has, for the most part sufficient slope to the west to rid itself of its excess stormwater. As might be expected, its watercourses are ample and well defined, and damage from overflow of these streams is uncommon and not at all serious. The eastern plane has even better drainage, being the slope of the bed of old Lake Agassiz, and its streams deliver the stormwater easily to its own western boundary. But the middle section—what of it? This strip of land, seventeen miles wide by 295 miles long, is truly between the deep sea and the devil. Its natural slope is from a few inches to a foot or two per mile. This is practically nothing, since small streams cannot maintain their course with this slight fall. The small velocity developed is not sufficient to keep the channel open by the natural action of erosion; and the counter action of sedimentation, aided by vegetation, soon obliterates all traces of the water-course. It is just this that has resulted in this unfortunate middle-third area. No small streams cross it, and the few large ones that do are a menace rather than a safeguard in time of flood: for the small available slope is consumed in bends and a consequent longer route so that when the extra demand comes, disastrous overflow is the result.

SAND HILL RIVER STATE DITCH. POLK COUNTY.

SNAKE RIVER STATE DITCH, MARSHALL COUNTY.

Being thus deprived of this usual method of speedy removal of excess water, this middle section must dispose of it by the slow process of infiltration and evaporation. This it is able to do to a great extent, since the somewhat lighter rainfall than in other parts of the state, and the depth and quality of its rich soil, each contributes to that end. But this is not half of the real difficulty. It receives, in addition to its own storm-water, that from an equal or even larger area lying to the east, through numerous small streams which, upon approaching its eastern border, literally lose themselves by spreading out over the prairie. After weeks of aimless wandering they finally collect their remaining waters and join the Red river by streams through the western belt. It will thus be seen that we have here all the external conditions suited to make our common marsh land or swamp. But to conclude that even a small part of this region was swamp, would be far from the truth. This land is more properly called bottom land, and the analysis of the soil contained therein proves that it is of the finest quality for all-round agricultural purposes, being composed of an alluvium deposit over a clay sub-soil.

The state is here seeking to supply the one deficient condition for adequate storm-water drainage. It cannot actually supply the necessary slope to produce natural rivers across this level tract of land but it can do the engineering equivalent. It can cut deep, straight canals across this territory which will offer the least possible resistance to the flow of water and thus render the two or three feet per mile, usually available, quite sufficient to pass the water from the eastern slope to the Red river.

FIRST DRAINAGE WORK.

The first attempts to lessen the damage from storm water in the Red River Valley, of which we find any record, were made about 1879 by James J. Hill. From the earliest working of the highways, the side ditches to the east and west turnpikes have doubtless been helpful, in some small degree lessening this evil. And some energetic owners of large farms dug private drains prior to this date. These were, however, from their small size and lack of continuity, of but small local benefit. At the time of the spring freshets, or severe rains, they were wholly inadequate to the demands made upon them. There were about fifteen of these Great Northern ditches scattered through Kittson, Polk, Norman and Clay counties. Their aggregate length was about forty-five miles, the individual ditches being from a half mile to three miles in length, except one ditch in Polk county, which extended from Euclid, a town on the Great Northern, to the Grand Marais river, a distance of about sixteen miles.

Without doubt much good was done by these small pioneer ditches, not the least of which was the object lesson they furnished to the farmers of what service even small drains could be. From the working of these they could easily see of what incomparable good larger ditches would be, if they were of adequate size and were to begin somewhat to the east of the track and extend to a sufficient outlet. Most of these ditches have now become filled up—some by natural process, while others have been filled by the hand that made them. This was done to prevent further litigation; on account of real or imagined damage done to the land along the line of the ditch, especially at its lower end, from water brought to it by the ditch.

DRAINAGE DITCH CONSTRUCTION.

The first practical move toward a solution was made in July, 1886, when a convention washeld at Crookston to formulate a plan of action. It was attended by delegates from Marshall, Polk, Norman, Clay and Wilkin counties, and the proceedings were characterized by earnest and intelligent discussion and wise action. It was decided that an accurate topographical survey was first needed, and $10,000 were raised at once to meet the expense of such a survey. J. T. Fanning, the well known hydraulic engineer, of Minneapolis, was consulting engineer, and C. C. Elliott was given immediate charge of the field work. The survey was completed and an exhaustive report submitted, which established the feasibility of the plan and defined what ditches were needed, and indicated in general their location. It called for about 275 miles of main ditch, costing about $270,000. Efforts were made with the legislatures of 1887, 1889 and 1891 to secure an appropriation for this work, but they were unsuccessful. In 1893 the legislature passed a bill creating the Red River Drainage Commission and made an appropriation of $100,000 with which to begin the work. Ezra G. Valentine, of Breckenridge, was made chairman of the commission, and O. H. Hoffman, of Minneapolis, was after the first year, given engineering charge of the work. Up to date, about 125 miles of ditch have been dug, costing about a quarter of a million dollars. The Great Northern railroad contributed $25,000 of this, the remainder having been raised by state appropriation.

HOW THE SYSTEM WORKS.

The system as a whole is working with great satisfaction, yet certain ditches have already developed tendencies which if allowed to continue unchanged would soon lead to a complete obstruction of the ditch.

The choking up of the channel by the growth of flags and reeds is not likely to be augmented by the gradual drying up of the swamp lands feeding such ditches or by the conversion of the grass land alongside into cultivated fields. A very dry season, however, would completely drying out the ditch might lead to a partial or even complete destruction of this aquatic vegetation.

These same conditions, however, especially the presence of cultivated fields, will bring conditions favorable to the filling up of the ditch with sedimentary deposit. This action, it is believed by the commission, is that requiring the closest attention as it is most likely to finally limit the usefulness of the whole system.

To provide a mild supervision and to look after small repairs, the evident need of which soon developed, the legislature of 1895-7 created the state drainage commission and charged it with this responsibility.

The present board consists of George R. Roberts of Stephen, chairman of the commission; E. D. Childs, of Crookston, and Professor W. R. Hoag, secretary and engineer.

During the past three seasons Engineer Hoag has inspected each of these twenty ditches and reported their condition to the county commissioners, together with recommendations for certain needed repairs.

This commission serves without pay except for actual expenses, provision having been made to meet such expenses for the two seasons of 1897 and 1898.

Notwithstanding that no funds were provided by the last legislature for the work of inspection, Professor Hoag has visited each ditch this season from a desire to complete certain studies in connection with flow of water in open channels and to observe the effect of certain vegetable growth on the efficiency of the ditch. President Hill, of the Great Northern, has furnished transportation for this inspection.

The following are the opinions of residents of the valley who have observed effects of drainage on the increased value and productiveness of the land:

OPINION ON THE DITCHES.

"I have carefully watched these lands which have come latterly under the drainage influence of many of these state ditches and find, without exception, that they are rapidly coming into the same fertile condition as those along the rivers. I have seen whole sections of marsh land at once upon the completion of the ditch converted into splendid hay land, the cutting privilege on which, for a single season, selling as high as $150 per section."—George R. Roberts, Chairman State Drainage Committee.

"Through the increase of taxes alone, coming from the increased valuation of these Red River lands, the state itself is the richer, to say nothing of the much greater benefits to the land as a crop producer. The results of their work has awakened our county authorities to activity along this same line, especially in our county of Polk, and as a result they have taken up the work and are annually expending large sums for the building up of a system which is in its turn being supplemented by new and individual farm drains."—E. D. Childs, Crookston.

"A large portion of two or three townships have become good and tillable lands, fit for cultivation and farming, by reason of the drainage afforded by these ditches. Will say further that in my opinion an extension of the present ditches and the construction of new ones is needed to further improve lands which in some instances are not affected by the present ditches. The work and supervising of the present commission has been of great value and a continuation of the work in the improvement of the present ditches and the construction of new ones needed I deem of vast importance to Traverse county."—Edward Rustad.

"The work already done in this county has demonstrated that large tracts of land, heretofore considered worthless, can and have been made quite valuable by drainage. Though to accomplish the complete reclamation of many tracts the work should be continued and many closed waterways should be opened so that lateral ditches could be made by settlers owning land adjacent thereto.

"The ditches already built have reclaimed thousands of acres of heretofore worthless land that is now settled upon and in cultivation."—Samuel Cruikshank, Ed. Jennings, James Strachan, F. E. Kaiser and A. D. Pederson, County Commissioners of Wilkin County, Minnesota.

"I sincerely hope that the drainage work now being carried on will not be delayed for want of funds to carry on the work. The benefits to be derived from this work are of vital importance to many residents of the valley. The general benefits to accrue to the state are far-reaching, and the proportion demands at this time the candid consideration of every person interested in the development of the richest part of the state."—George A. Bigelow.

"Even from a financial standpoint it is a good investment, as the enormous influx of settlers after these ditches had been commenced plainly shows."—E. Carlson, Chairman County Commissioners, Clay County.

These ditches are but in part ditches and it is designed that the counties shall organize drainage districts, as provided by a state law, and construct the smaller intercepting ditches.

In this work many of the counties have expended considerable money. Polk county having spent over $100,000.

The great floods of last season and the wonderful saving the state ditches were to the land immediately adjoining them has resulted in a great activity in many counties in the valley. Hundreds of miles of intercepting ditches will be dug next summer. The land is so even that the side ditches for the wagon roads are very helpful in carrying water to these main ditches.

With a few exceptions the ditches are enlarging as was planned, are fulfilling all expectations of the projectors and are constributing their full share to increasing the wheat yield and the general productiveness of the already famous Red River Valley.

THE COUNTY OFFICIALS

An Accommodating Class of Men—a New Court House Much Needed.

The management of the affairs of Polk county is no unimportant task as the volume of business done in all departments is very large. Great care must be exercised by the county officials in the discharge of their duties and only those who are particularly efficient can hope to do successfully what their office demands of them. Three of those who now hold office are serving their first terms, the others have been in office longer. They are an accommodating class of officials and no one ever received anything but the most courteous treatment at their hands. Their labors would be much lightened and it would be possible to put the records and papers where they would not be in danger of being destroyed if a much needed county court house were built.

The following is a complete list of the county officers and their assistants:

Register of deeds, John Fayer, deputy register, Martin Rouns, clerk, Miss Lydia O'Brien, and usually during November, December, January and February an extra clerk; county surveyor, O. L. Hamery; county superintendent, I. I. Kaasa, assistant superintendent, L. A. Coller; clerk of court, E. E. Lommen, deputy clerk, O. K. Berger, and sometimes an extra clerk in January when the delinquent tax list is being put out; county auditor, John Glesson, deputy auditor, N. O. Hoffard, clerk, Henry Welte, and an extra clerk during December and January; county treasurer, M. G. Peterson, deputy treasurer, W. L. Vannet, clerk, Jacob Morck; county commissioners, Chas. McCarty, of First district, O. N. Eastman, of Second district, Remi Fortier, Chairman of Third district, E. O. Bratvold, of Fourth district, and Hugh Thompson, of Fifth district; judge of probate, Ole Hagen, county attorney, A. T. Holston, coroner, Ole Miller, deputy coroner, G. S. Chesterman.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

An Invitation To Women

All the world knows of the wonderful cures which have been made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, yet some women do not realize that all that is claimed for it is absolutely true.

If all suffering women could be made to believe that Mrs. Pinkham can do all she says she can, their suffering would be at an end, for they would at once profit by her advice and be cured.

There is no more puzzling thing than that women will suffer great pain month after month when every woman knows of some woman whom Mrs. Pinkham has helped, as the letters from grateful women are constantly being published at their own request.

The same derangements which make painful or irregular periods with dull backaches and headaches, and dragging-down sensations, presently develop into those serious inflammations of the feminine organs which completely wreck health.

Mrs. Pinkham invites women to write freely and confidentially to her about their health and get the benefit of her great experience with the sufferings of women. No living person can advise you so well. No remedy in the world has the magnificent record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for absolute cures of female ills. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Three Letters from One Woman, Showing how She Sought Mrs. Pinkham's Aid, and was Cured of Suppression of the Menses and Inflammation of the Ovaries.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have been in bed a year. Doctors say I have a female weakness. I have a bad discharge and much soreness across my ovaries, bearing-down pains when passing urine, have not menstruated for a year. Doctors say the menses will never appear again. Hope to hear from you."—MRS. J. F. BROWN, Holton, Kans., April 1, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I received your letter. I have taken one bottle and a half of your Vegetable Compound, and used two packages of your Wash, and feel stronger and better. can walk a few steps, but could not before taking your Compound. I still have the discharge and am sore across the ovaries, but not so much. Every one thinks I look better since taking your Vegetable Compound."—MRS. J. F. BROWN, Holton, Kans., Aug. 13, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I think it is my duty to let you know the good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound has done for me. After I took three bottles, menses appeared, and I began to feel stronger and all my pain was gone. Yours is the only medicine that ever helped me. I am able now to work around the house, something I did not expect to do again. I am still taking your medicine and have recommended it to others."—MRS. J. F. BROWN, Holton, Kans., Jan. 25, 1899.

Three More Letters from One Woman, Relating how She was Cured of Irregular Menstruation, Leucorrhœa and Backache.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I am suffering and need your aid. I have pains in both sides of the womb and a lingering sensation in the groin. Menstruation irregular and painful; have leucorrhœa, bearing-down pains, soreness and swelling of the abdomen, headache, backache; nervousness, and cannot rest nor sleep."—MRS. CARRIE PHILLIPS, Anna, Ill., July 19, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I want to thank you for what you have done for me. When I wrote to you I was afflicted. Since taking your Vegetable Compound, Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, my nerves are stronger and more steady than ever before, and my backache and those terrible pains are gone. Before I took your medicine I weighed less than one hundred and thirty pounds. I now weigh one hundred and fifty-five pounds. I feel better than I have for a good many years. Your medicine is a God-send to poor weak women. I would like to know why I cannot have a child. I have been married nearly three years."—MRS. CARRIE PHILLIPS, Anna, Ill., Dec. 1, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I did just as you advised me, and now I am the happy mother of a fine baby girl. I believe I never would have had her without your Vegetable Compound."—MRS. CARRIE PHILLIPS, Anna, Ill., Jan. 27, 1899.

Still More Proof that Irregularity is Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I am troubled with irregular menstruation, and have begun the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's VegetableCompound. Would like your advice."—CORA L. PAYTON, Ogonts, Pa., May 10, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I have a bad discharge and write to ask if I had better not use your Sanative Wash also? Your medicine is helping me."—CORA L. PAYTON, Ogonts, Pa., July 1, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I write to tell you of the benefit I have received from the use of your remedies. Before using them I was feeling very bad. I used to go to the hospital, but it did me no good. Your remedies have done wonders for me."—CORA L. PAYTON, Ogonts, Pa., Feb. 25, 1899.

NUMEROUS NEW BUILDINGS

Have Been Erected in the City During the Year, More than 125 New Buildings and Improvements on Almost as Many.

TOTAL AMOUNT SPENT $300,000.

Some Business Blocks, but Most of the New Buildings Are Handsome Private Residences Fitted up in the Most Modern Style.

The building record in Crookston during the year just closing is one of which the city can well be proud. Few towns indeed of the population of Crookston can report 126 new buildings, extensive improvements on 100 more, with a total expenditure of $300,000. The year 1898 witnessed the erection of a large number of imposing business blocks, but during 1899, though there have been some business houses put up, the building operations have been largely confined to the construction of new private residences and the remodeling and repairing of old dwelling houses. The consequence is that the residence portion of the city is now filled with handsome, modern dwelling houses, of the most approved style, many of them furnished with all the modern conveniences, such as furnaces, electric lights, waterworks, etc., and very few of them, indeed, without some of these aids to comfortable living. This gives Crookston a homelike appearance and no other characteristic that it has can outweigh this excellence.

Notwithstanding this large increase in the number of residences there is scarcely one of them vacant, and with the coming of spring the demand bids fair to be such that the good work of this year will of necessity continue.

The following is a detailed account of what has been done with the trowel, the hammer and the saw:

M. Kelley, 239 Houston Ave., improvements ..... $ 500

John Moore, 213 Hurlbut St., east, a conveniently arranged 8-room private residence, hardwood finish, large basement and attic 1,800

Miss Bessie Larson, 413 S. Main St., a new seven-room residence, 22x36, with addition 18x16 1,200

F. H. Hillard, 514 Cowing St., remodeled his house and filled in lot 800

M. E. Haebh, 431 Bridge St., a nine room, two story house, 20x40, with all modern conveniences 2,500

Louis Roy, 411 N. Broadway, brick veneered house and cement sidewalk 400

John Gleason, 602 and 604 Hunter St., two new houses, 24x26, each containing seven rooms, with kitchen addition 12x16 and 14 foot posts 2,400

O. K. Berget, 421 Bridge St., a seven room, private residence, 20x46, with kitchen addition and modern conveniences 1,500

E. E. Lommen, 114 Lincoln Ave., a new seven room house 20x36, addition 18x24, 16 foot posts, modern conveniences 1,500

Henry Burkhardt, W. Fourth St., new barn 14x30 500

Chas. Misner, 405 East Robert St., Jerome's addition, improvements in way of raising house, new brick foundation, filling in lot, etc. 250

F. Reyer, on North Main St., a new blacksmith shop, 22x36 250

Northwestern Marble Works company, 422 North Broadway, addition 14x30, glass front to storeroom, new storage room and other improvements 700

Waterstrath block, 206 North Main St., is a two-story brick edifice, 28x70 5,225

L. E. Larsen, 212 North Broadway, a new large warehouse, raised main building and other improvements 500

Espe & Larson, North Main St., a large business establishment, 42x86, the front half two stories high 1,000

J. P. Marcum, North Broadway opposite the court house, a two story ten room house, 30x29, with kitchen addition, 10x24 2,500

Koeppe block, 112 North Main St., is a three story brick structure, 20x25, with glass fronts and seven rooms on second and third stories 3,300

A. K. Austin, 324 S. Ash St., a new two story, seven room house 16x28, with two large additions 1,500

John Levis, a new house on Seventh St. 400

The Northern Pacific railway, a new three inch plank platform around the station, long bridge repaired 200

Carl Riedesel, Second St., opposite postoffice, improvements on store building 100

The Gopher Club have refitted their club rooms in the Reckitt block 1,000

Judge McLean, 112 South Main St., improvements on store building 250

Frank Montague, 518 Hunter St., improvements 100

Ole Pelling, East Manitoba St., a new two story house, 16x26, wing 6x12, kitchen addition 14x14 900

Wm. Jack, in North Crookston a two story four room house 14x22 400

C. E. Lindberg, 118 Johnson St., a new 16 foot house, 20x28, with addition 14x16... 750

Henning Peterson, 122 Johnson St., a new five room house, 10x24, fourteen foot posts... 450

The Gun Club in north part of town, a club house 10x24 with porch six feet wide 100

Frank Erickson, in McKinley Park, a new five room house, 14x24, kitchen, 12x12, barn, 16x20 400

Fred Carlstrom, in McKinley Park, a cottage twenty-four foot square 200

Z. Riendeau, First Ave. North in South Crookston, a new house, 16x24, and barn..... 400

The South Crookston four room commodious and well lighted school house..... 4,000

Chas. Deressier, 603 Polk St., improvements 200

Mrs. Johnson Erickson, 102 College Ave., South Crookston, improvements..... 200

N. Swanson, 116 College Ave., remodeled his house..... 350

Ole Erickson, 126 College Ave., a new three foot brick foundation under his house..... 400

Vance & Stone, East Robert St., an addition 8x18, twelve foot high, to their coal shed near Northern Pacific tracks 300

Peter Bleeth, in South Crookston west of Great Northern tracks, a 20x24 cottage with addition 13x14..... 800

John Wyand, on Manitoba St., across the Northern Pacific tracks, a fine large two story ten room house, 30x36, also a large barn and granary..... 3,000

Frank Boutin, 354 Spendley St., a new 18x20 house..... 250

Joe Barlow, on Hamre St., a new house 16x24..... 250

Joseph Boisselle, 618 Ash St., S., a second story to his house..... 100

The school buildings, improvements 650

New sidewalks laid in different parts of the city..... 2,752

Chas. Greenhalgh S. Lincoln Ave., in Jerome's addition, a new house 18x28, with an L 10x14 and a kitchen addition 12x18..... 1,000

A. J. McGregor, 117 Wash. Ave. Jerome's addition, a two story seven room house 22x28, with kitchen addition 10x18..... 1,000

George Carpenter, corner of Ash N. and Fifth St., improvements on residence..... 150

Martin Mosselle, 211 S. Main St., a kitchen addition to his house 12x24..... 125

Louis Morin, Grand Central Hotel, enlarging the office, put in a glass front and made other improvements..

Barney Peterson, E. Manitoba St., a private residence 14x30, 12 foot posts and kitchen addition 12x12 400

John Viz, in N. Crookston, a new barn 20x25..... 100

John Crawford & Son, 110 N. Broadway, improvements... 500

Mrs N. Whitney, 201 S. Ash St., addition 10x10 to house 80

John Frost, 342 Cromb St., a new barn..... 100

Mrs. F. Blais, 633 Hunter St., addition 12x14 to her house 250

John A. Johnson, corner of Hunter and Cromb, a new 14x24 house with two additions..... 1,100

G. A. Amundson, 211 Hurlbut St., two additions to his house..... 650

Mrs. A. O. Tweeten, 521 Cowing St., a two story house, 20x30, addition 14x10..... 1,700

The house on 707 Cowing St., James McGrain, tenant, improvements..... 150

Olaf Martinson, 721 Cowing St., a brick foundation under his house..... 125

G. A. R. Hall, South Main St., an addition 18x30..... 200

Allen Braley, Second St., opposite Wallace block, a solid brick foundation, eight feet deep, under the east wall of his building and other improvements..... 200

Jake Andelat, 603 Sixth St., W., a two story house, 16x24 with addition 16x18..... 400

W. F. Andrist, 610 Sixth St., W., a new six room cottage, 24x32..... 1,000

T. E. Clydesdale, South Main St., improvements on business establishment and residence property..... 400

St. Paul's German Lutheran church, N. Broadway between Fifth and Sixth Sts., is a new frame building 28x60, with a seating capacity of 200..... 2,000

Miller and Foote, improvements upon the old McDonald property, corner of Pine and Seventh Sts..... 450

Fontaine & Anglin put in new fixtures in their grocery and shoe department in the way of new shelving, new counters, etc., in quartered oak, and new electric fans..... 2,400

Joe Winfield, 218 Eighth E. St., one story to his residence... 350

W. E. McKenzie, 109 20th S., improvements upon the office at present occupied by Marin & Webster..... 100

Louis Gonyea, 313 Main St., N., improvements on property..... 150

Hugh Robertson, 439 Hunter St., rebuilt house, raised it one story and added 8 rooms 1,100

Oscar Nelson, on Woodland Ave., a five room cottage... 800

E. J. Nicholson, moved house from N. Broadway to 616 Ash St., N. and practically rebuilt..... 500

Mrs. Shelley, 120 Houston Ave., a two story, nine room house, 16x20, addition 12x20 1,600

Mrs. J. R. Barb, 188 Huribut St., improvements on her property..... 200

W. A. Lancelot, 520 S. Ash St., remodeled old Freehorn property..... 600

J. R. Hare, 183 Hurlbut St., improvements..... 100

Joseph Beooy, 512 Stewart Ave., Sampson's addition, a new house with kitchen addition..... 600

E. J. Regan, Great Northern roadmaster, 303 Washington Ave., a two story 18x32 house, addition 14x16..... 1,000

E. J. Regan, Jr., section foreman, 117 Jackson Ave., a 24x28 cottage..... 600

Wm. Munch, Sr., in Riverside Park, a handsome two story, nine room private residence, 18x40, with addition 12x20 and 18 foot posts, a foundation of solid rock is under the entire house, the floors are hardwood, it is finished in pine and has all the modern conveniences. Besides, a large barn, a poultry shed and a bee hive have been erected, and a bicycle path, three laps to the mile, begun 3,000

The Great Northern railway, a new passenger station and freight depot, 328 feet long, of white brick with stone facings, one story high. 20,000

Mrs. R. Johnson, 120 Front St., improvements to her house..... 300

Ole Gulick, on Stewart Ave., a new house, 14x16..... 100

J. W. Wheeler, 203 Houston Ave., improvements on house 800

A. G. Sandberg, 504 N. Main St., remodeled his house.... 500

John Helm, on South Gorges Ave., a new 16x24 cottage.. 300

Chris Svisdal, 124 Front St., improvements on his house 250

Halvor Steenerson, 308 Houston Ave., improvements on his house..... 1,000

N. S. Gordon, 318 South Broadway, a new barn 20x22, sixteen foot posts and improvements on JOURNAL building 400

A. D. Stephens, 247 Houston Ave., a two story addition to the back of his house, a portico in front and other improvements 2,500

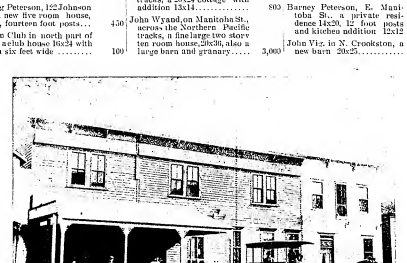
Frank Magens, 504 South Ash St., a new house 16x30, addition 14x12..... 1,300

August George, 208 South Ash St., a handsome two story private residence, 30x38, with large basement. It is finished in hardwood and fitted up with all modern conveniences..... 4,500

Small barns, sheds, and other improvements costing $75 or less..... 1,835

The Shevlin-Carpenter Lumber Company, South Division, new machinery, new refuse burner, new shed and other improvements..... 25,000

The Crookston Waterworks, Power & Light Company have built a new infiltration gallery, laid more than a mile of watermains, erected a new waterworks building and large reservoir, and put in a steam heating plant and pipes..... 100,000



SCANDIA HOTEL.

Wm. Bloom, 612 Front St., added a story to his house..

Chris Eikhoff, 510 Front St., raised his house one story, thus adding four rooms.....

E. M. Walsh, the northeast part of town, a handsome 10 room house with large basement and veranda on three sides, hardwood finish and all modern conveniences, and also a large barn.....

D. F. Peterson, 114 Hubbard St., Sampson's addition, a two story, seven room house 18x26.....

Henry Haroldson, Peter Johnson and Haus Antonson in South Crookston west of Great Northern railway, each a cottage costing respectively $400, $400 and $800

Ole Nearland, 823 Polk St., South Crookston, remodeled his house.....

Louis Rivard, Marshall St. South Crookston, a new house.....

E. D. Childs & Co., in South Crookston, a new silo, 24 feet in diameter, 32 feet high, also improvements on residence.....

C. A. Myers, on Main St. in South Crookston, a two story store building, 14x18, addition 12x24.....

Ernest Ehinehart, in N. Crookston, a new four room two story house.....

Andrew Pradhomme, 314 Central Ave., E., a five room cottage, 24x30.....

John W. Lewis, 324 Central Ave., E., new six room residence, main part 16x30 with kitchen addition 12x12

Henry Allard 318 Central Ave., E., a two story country residence.....

Ole Wick, in N. Crookston, new barn.....

Larsen & Carpenter, a repair shop 20x24, 12 foot posts, to their machinery emporium on Broadway.....

J. W. Risch, 615 Sixth St., W., a five room cottage 24x30.....

C. J. Rideout, 117 E. Robert St., a six room house 24x28, addition 14x24.....

Homer Truesdell, Cromb St., a six room house, 22x22...

Jack Klevel, on Front St. N., a large barn.....

Andrew Eiten, 221 Houston Ave., a new barn 16x18...

John Waterstrath, 811 N. Main St., a new barn 16x22

M. McAskill, 513 North Broadway, an addition 10x18 to his house.....

Aug. Miller & Co.,

Tanners. Fur Dressers and Hide Dealers.....

We make a specialty of Tanning Harness and Shoe Leather, Dressing Seal, Coat Horse Hides for Coats and Robes, also Sheep Pelts and all kinds of Furs for Customers. First class work Guaranteed.

All kinds of Hides and Skins Purchased.

Crookston, Minn.

RESIDENCE OF HERMAN MARTEN.

B. Roy, east end of 1st Ave. N., a new house 14x22, L 12x14, 16 foot posts.....

Mr. P. A. Dufour, on Washington Ave. S., a new seven room, two story, house

A Hince, on Hunter St., a new house 14x22, addition 14x14..

Ed. Flem, 521 Hunter St., a 16x22 house.....

W. E. Smith, 800 Pleasant Ave., a new 24x26, six room cottage.....

Thos. Hunt, 803 N. Main St., a second story to his house

O. C. Rood, 540 Hunter St., improvements on his property

Victor Billedeau, 624 Hunter St., a new house 14x22.....

G. L. Matson, 509 Hunter St., improvements on property

Andrew Simpson, on Spendley St., a new house 16x22.....

August Schouler, 131 Lincoln Ave., a veneered house 24x38.....

John Harper, 314 Lincoln Ave., a new house 20x20.....

Paul Brunelle, 224 Lincoln Ave., a new cottage 16x30 with kitchen 12x12.....

Ira Bradshaw 234 Lincoln Ave, a six room private residence 14x24, addition 14x14.....

Andrew Albar, S. Lincoln Ave., a new house 18x20...

George McNicholas, 216 Lincoln Ave., a cottage, 22x24

The Erskine Brick Company, South Crookston, a drying shed 30x150, 16 feet high; and also 10,000 feet of track and three new cars for carrying brick between brick racks.....

To Eastern Canada FOR THE Christmas Holidays.

VIA THE

Burlington Route

ONLY $40.00 TO Montreal and return

Going by way of St. Paul and Chicago

Dates of sale every day from December 4 to December 31 inclusive

This amount will buy a ticket good for three months' visit to any point in Ontario or Quebec west of Montreal. Between St. Paul and Chicago there is only one best line, and that is the Burlington. Ask your neighbors who have traveled by that line what they think of it.

Your home ticket agent has tickets for sale via our line. Ask him for a Burlington ticket.

Or write to A. L. EIDEMILLER, Trav. Pass. Agt., care Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, Man., or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 24.

GEO. P. LYMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., C. B. & Q. R. R., St. PAUL, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE CROOKSTON BAND

An Organization In Which the People of the City Take Pardonable Pride.

IS COMPOSED OF 25 PIECES

Prof. G. O. Riggs is the Leader—A Series of Six Indoor Concerts This winter.

This splendid musical orgaaization was started about one year ago. In Sept. 1898 Manager O. D. Dahl decided that Crookston should have the best baad in the northwest aad realizing that the first absolute necessity was a director who was an accomplished and experienced band master, as well as a man of good morals and business ability, he set out to fiad the right man for the place, and after some correspondence with different parties, G. Oliver Riggs, the preseat director, was eugaged. Prof. Riggs has studied music at Oberlin, Ohio, Chicago and other musical centers, and has taught in the couservatory of music at Mount Pleasant, Iowa. He is both a violinist and cornetist aad his solos on both these instruments are always well received wherever he plays.

PROF. G. O. RIGGS

He came to Crookstoa from Illinois and at once begun work. At the time he came the baud was divided into two bands, each under local iastruction. They contiuued in this way for a few weeks, but were finally brought together under the direction of Mr. Riggs, and at this time is when the baud commeuced forging to the front. F. M. Browu was chosen president and Mr. Dahl retained as manager. A proposition was presented to the husiness men und prominent citizens, which would place the hand on a business basis and remuaerate the business men and citizeus fully for their public spirit. The proposition was accepted and the success of the haad has been somethiag remarkahle. At the end of the first year a aew proposition was presented and accepted aad uew officers elected as follows: A. P. Kirsch, president: H. L. Falk, manager; Lucius Miller, treasurer; Arthur Kirsch, secretary and G. Oliver Riggs, director.

The band during the last summer filled many engagements, among the more important oaes of which were the Winaipeg Industrial Exposition, Crookston Street Carnival, Firemen's Tournament at Bemidji and McKinley day at Fargo Oct. 14. At the latter city they were the only band from Minnesota that was engaged.

The band consists of 25 young men from the best families in the city, and most of them have lived here since childhood. A year ago they could play but the easiest grade of music and now their repertoire consists of such standard overtures as Pique Dame, Turcor in Italy, Light Cavalier, Schubert Overture (songs of Schubert,) etc., also selections from Faust, Robin Hood, Fra Diavolo besides many other overtures, selections, medleys, waltzes and popular marches by the hest composers.

During the winter of 1898 the hand assisted by Riggs' Orchestra and the best local talent, gave a series of five concerts in the opera house which were much appreciated by the people of Crookston. This year, they expect to give six, the first of which came on December 18. These coacerts are a great success in every particular, the band heing seldom greeted with an audience of less than 500.

The band room on the second floor ia the city hall is one of the most neatly furnished rooms in the building and makes excellent headquarters. The uext year should see still greater improvement in this orgaaization. More reed instruments will be added thus giving Director Riggs still greater opportunity. The Crookston people take pride in their band, aad as long as it is conducted on business principles aud maiatains as high a musical standing as at present, the people will continue their iaterest in it and eacourage the members in their ambitious efforts.

A. R. Holston.

The present couaty attoraey, A. R. Holston, whose office is on the second floor of the Wallace block, is now serving his third term as the legal adviser of Polk couaty. He was horn in 1858 aear Paris, Illinois, and attended a law school near his old home. In 1881 he came aorthwest aad settled in Wright county, Mianesota. After remaiaing there six years he weat to Red Lake Falls aud took up the practice of law. In 1890—at that time Red Lake couaty was a part of Polk—he was elected couaty attorney. At the end of his second term of office he went to Colorado where he was entered at the har and there he remained for a year aad a half. He returned north and opened a law office in Crookston where he has remained ever since. Mr. Holston is well read in the law as his success in securiag clieats and getting verdicts for them in the court would show. He is now engaged in vigorously prosecuting before the district court a dozen or more criminals and is thus using his efforts to preserve law and order in the county.

But aside from his law practice Mr. Holston speads part of his time in discussiag politics. He is a populist and during more than one campaign has stumped the county and outside districts in behalf of his party's candidates. He is, indeed, a regular western cyclone and when he gets on the rostrum everything goes down before him.

Vance & Stone.

When it comes to selling real estate, writing fire insuraace, making farm loans, delivering coal or wood, the firm of Vaace & Stoae stand in the foremost ranks of our up-to-date active business mea.

In the moath of January 1896 the partnership was formed, the doors of their present office, at the coraer of South Broadway and Fletcher streets, were thrown opea to the public aad today, judging from what caa he seen through their large plate glass wiadows and the hurryiag to aad from of their coal and wood wagoas they are one of the husiest firms in Crookston.

Mr. Vance, a native of Toronto, Canada, is a maa of wide husiness experieace, speaks French and German flueatly, having studied these languages in European Colleges and Universities.

Mr. Stone, the junior member, a aative of New Hampton, Iowa, is a progressive business man having received early training in a Minneapolis Commercial College and is careful and attentive especially to fire insurance matters to which fact their many policy holders will testify.

Vance & Stone are exceptionally well known in our city and widely through the northwest both having spent several years in the employ of the First National hank here before launching their own ship.

They represent nothing but first-class and reliable Fire Insurance companies who adjust and pay promptly all legitimate loses. There can he no better commeudation as to their ability to successfully negotiate the sale or purchase of lands than is evidenced by their numerous well pleased customers.

The quality and quauity of coal and wood found in their yards is always good aud large and their trade in this line increases daily.

We learn that one day in 1897 during the snow-blockade and almost wood famine which struck this city, their teams delivered wood to over one hundred cold and shivering families. Since then their efficient services in the wood and cold traffic need no comment as everybody knows just where to go when in ueed of fuel.

Judge Montague.

Judge Montague, whose law office is in the Fournet block, came to Crookston 20 years ago. In his younger days he studied law in the office of Thos. Wilson, who was for years congressman from the First Congressional district of Minnesota, and later he was graduated from a law school. During his long residence here he has held several positions of trust, having beea judge of prohate, county attorney and city attorney. He is a strong and active republicaa and during every campaiga takes the stump and strikes telling blows for his party.

—Now is the time to fix up for winter. We have quite an accumlation of odds and ends and short lumber on which we are making surprisingly low prices. Call and see us before you buy. Crookston Lumher Co. Telephoae 40.

Halvor Steenerson.

Halvor Steenerson is one of the citizeas of Crookston of whom the city has every reason to feel proud. As a lawyer and puhlic man he holds a position equalled hy few men in the state. He has been a resident of this city siuce the spring of '80 and during this time has built up a reputation in the legal profession that has made his name honored in all legal circles of the state. In politics he has always heen identified with the republicau party and his name has heen amoag his party's nominees on numerous occasioas.

Ia the fall of his first year's residence in this county he was elected to the office of couaty attorney. In 1882 he was elected to the state senate by a handsome majority, aad served two terms. While attending to the duties of this office he was one of the most prominent members of the senate and won state fame as an able orator aad wise legislator, showing great ability and clear-headed judgment on all occasions. In 1884 he was one of the Minnesota delegates to the Republican National Conventioa that nominated James G. Blaine for the presidency, and he was also a delegate at the convention of 1888, which nominated Benjamin Harrison for the same office He took a prominent part in hoth these assemblages and won the admiration of the great leaders of his party. He was kept busy with convention work in 1888 for in that year he was also a delegate to the state convention at St. Paul and made the speech placing in nomination the name of William R. Merriam for governor. This speech was greatly applauded on all sides as a masterpiece of oratory. He has in later years devoted the greater part of his time and attention to his law practice but has never beea allowed to drop entirely out of politics, having heen city attorney, alderman, school trustee, etc.

HON. HALVOR STEENERSON

In 1893 he instituted before the State Railroad and Warehouse Commissioa on behalf of the farmer, a proceeding to compel the Great Northern Railway Company to reduce grain rates from northwestern Minnesota to the termiaal. This was the first case under the state law giving the railroad commissioners the right aad power to reduce rates aad was bitterly aad stubbornly fought. After a loag struggle the case was decided against the railroad company and a reduction ordered. The case was afterwards taken to the courts and was twice decided hy the Supreme Court both times adversely to the railroad company. This case was known as the Steenerson Grain Rate Case, and was considered of the utmost importance as it determined conclusively the right of the state to regulate transportation charges. Mr. Steeaerson's views on these questions were vindicated at every point.

Nat Campbell.

Possibly no attorney in the aorthwest has a larger acquaintaace than has Nat Campbell, our genial land aad claim attorney. His extensive and successful practice before the land office here and before the interior departmeat have given him a reputatioa that many older members of the legal frateruity might have reason to envy. His office iu the Reckitt block immediately across the hall from the United States land office is always the scene of activity and many a prosperous farmer in this and neighboring districts owes his present afluent position to Mr. Campbell's untiring efforts to see that a settler in the wilds of Northern Minnesota got the rights accorded him hy the government. His coatinuous practice in land cases has given him a vast amount of experience in that particular liae and this experieace coupled with an exceptional ability gives him more than ordinary advantage, and his success in the past gives every promise of a very bright and prosperous future. Business does not, however, keep him so continuously employed but that he finds time to keep himself in touch with the politics of the day. He is a democrat and thinks that the salvation of the country lies in the election of Bryan as president.

"I think the first virtue is to restraia the toague: he approaches nearest to the gods who knows how to be silent, even though he be in the right."

The Gopher Club.

Some thirty of the society youag men of the city, about two months ago, organized a social club that they might while away some of the hours of the long wiater evenings. Their rooms they furnished handsomely and already they have established for themselves a great reputation as entertainers. Their dances, held every few weeks, have become the feature in society circles. The social hop that was given laet Friday evening was a great success, the large number present thoroughly enjoying themselves.

MANY REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

Old Settlers Buy More Land—New Settlers—Lower Rate of Interest.

Real estate in Polk county has been in active demand the last two years and a large amount of the land has heen changing hands. The value, too, has heen steadily and gradually increasing. Old residents who came came here practically empty handed have yearly improved their coaditioas and are now quite generally huying additioaal laads. About one-half of the transfers made the last few years have been of this kind. The rest of the laad has been sold to people chiefly from Wisconsin, Iowa, Illiaois, Ohio and the counties ia Southern Minaesota, who have moved here, purchased improved or wild lands and established their homes. Most of the later settlers, particularly those who came this year, have come with ample means. Some of them have sold their farms in Dakota and with their families moved to our county, while others have bought simply with the idea of holding the lands until the natural increase iu value will net them a handsome profit.

The following statement, furnished by Christiaason & Strauder, abstractors, of the total transfers of real estate within the county for the last few months will give aa idea of the volume of property changing hands and the avervge prices paid:

In August of this year the total number of acres sold under deed, which were placed on record, was 4,359.32 acres at a total price of $39,957. In September 4,029.90 acres were sold at the total amount of 23,205. In October the number of acres was 8,662.55 and the amount paid $87,859 and in November it increased to 5,712.27 acres for which were paid $14,807.41. It must be remembered that these figures only represent the transfers that have been placed on record and do not include the large number of transactions under contracts for deeds aad which have not yet been made matter of record.

Another fact that has materially helped to increase the value of real estate is the notable reduction of the rate of interest on farm and city loans. Where the farmers formerly had to beg for loans and never thought of getting it for a less rate than 10 per cent and were glad if they were not compelled to pay a bonus besides, they are aow offered loaas by differeat agents aad money men, who are competing with each other ia placing Eastern aad home money on this kind of security. It has proven a desirable field for farm loans and the rates have beea reduced to the same rate of interest as prevails in the southern part of the state.

Work In Register of Deeds Office.

The records of the register of deeds' office showed the total number of instrumeats filed up to aad inclusive of Monday, Dec. 18, as 5,035 and the total receipts, $5,121.08, the latter exceeding the eatire year of 1898 hy $1,062.78. The number of mortgages was 1,273; satisfactions, 985: deeds, 1,541; assigameats, 356, pateats, 164; miscellaaeous instrumeats, 714.

GOVERNMENT BUILDING.

Likely to be Located Here—Eddy Working for This.

Congressman Frank M. Eddy is taking steps at Washington to have an appropriatioa made for a public building ia this city. Last Friday Postmaster Eiken received a letter from the postoffice department at the Nation's capital making eaquiries as to the husiness done in the different government offices in Crookston, the room required for such work, the prospects for business in the future, etc. The informatioa that can and will be furnished on this matter will certainly he evidence favoring the location of a public building at this place. Half of the sessions of the federal court, all of which are now held at Fergus Falls, ought to he held in Crookston, for a large part of the business coming hefore that court comes from this section of the state, therefore the location of a government huilding here would have its influence in bringing the court here. Taking everything into consideration Crookston ought to have and undoubtedly will have this magnificent new edifice.

The McKinnon Brothers.

It was in the spring of 1878 that Alex. and Allan McKinaon came to Crookston and opened up a hlacksmith and carriage shop at the coraer of what are now Robert aad Main streets. Not loag after they were joined hy John, Dan and Archie McKinaon. Their business increased aad their success was such that in 1887 they built the McKinaon hlock oa the site of their old hlacksmith and carriage shop. This hlock is oae of the largest and handsomest in the city and has played its due part in convinciag the outside world of the solidity aad future prosperity of Crookston. When this hlock was put up their place of business was transferred to North Main street where John R. McKiaaoa is now located. In 1887 Archie and Allan McKianon hought out the manufacturing department and started in for themselves. This new partnership goes hy the name of

A. J. & A. MCKINNON.

They bought at the corner of Main and Third streets, but the first structure was hurned down ia the fall of 1895. Nothing daunted they at once began, on the same sight, the erection of a large brick structure which now stands there, a monmeat to their enterprise. They have one of the largest manufacturing institutions in the Northwest, employing 12 men most of the time. They do a wholesale business in blacksmiths' supplies, manufacturing these as well as carriages, wagons, sleighs, tents, awaiags, etc. All cells for jails that are needed in this section come from the workshop of A. J. & A. McKiaaoa, as also the heavy drays in the city and the faacy delivery wagoas. Everythiag that is turaed out by this concern is strictly first-class and the houadaries withia which they do business are growing larger every year. Allan McKinnon is at present city councilman from the Third ward and the interests of his constituency and the welfare of the city are beiag well looked after by him. Archie McKianoa, though a practical mechanic himself, is still the traveling man of the firm and the large orders which the shop is constantly filling hear witness to his ahility as a salesman. He is a member of the fire department, was for two years its efficient chief and was last year the captain of the runniag team. In society circles he is a prominent memher, but his delight is ia a noble horse aad he drives a handsome, dashing team of hlacks than which turnout there is nothing fancier in the city.

JOHN R. M'KINNON.

JOHN R. MCKINNON.

When Archie and Allan McKinnon branched off John R. and Alex. McKianoa coatiaued the implement husiness at the old stand. Two years ago they dissolved partnership, the business going on under the sole maaagement of John R. McKinnon. Improvements have been made, till today Mr. McKinnon does an exteasive trade in farm machinery, carriages, huggies, cutters, harnesses of all kinds, etc. As he deals only in the most modern implements aad his prices are as low as any profit at all in the business will allow he has won great and merited success. His right hand man is Thos. R. Johnstone, a genuine Scotchman with the fragrance of the heather in his speech, who can tell you of the merits of a hinder, a buggy or a whip as well and as readily as he can expatiate in glowing terms of the winning and lovable aature of Robbie Burns.

Mr. McKinnon has always taken an interest in puhlic affairs, aot only of the city but of the nation. He has been honored with the office of mayor of the city aad is aow presideut of the Caledonian Club, a city school trustee aad a member from the Seveath Congressional district, of the state democratic ceatral committee.

ALEX. MCKINNON.

When he went out of partaership with his hrother, John R., Alex. McKinnon weat iato real estate and insurance where he soon worked up a large husiness. During his Crookston resideace Mr. McKinnoa was twice elected mayor of the city, which important post he filled in an acceptable manner. He was also from 1885 to 1890 postmaster here. He is a stroag democrat and has taken a great interest in state politics. Twice has he received the nomiaation of his party for the office of state treasurer. He is recognized as one of the leading democrats of the state and was a few months ago appointed by Governor Lind as a member of the State Board of Appeals, of which body he was elected chairman. He is now living in Minneapolie though he still counts Crookston as his home and makes frequent husiness trips up here to look after work on his large 1,400 acre farm four miles from this city.

DAN MCKINNON.

The popular hotel, of which Dan McKinnon is the proprietor, is well named the Palace, for indeed it is palatial in all its appointments. Situated a hlock and a half from the Great Northern railway station, right in the heart of the city, it is in a most convenient place for all travelere. The rooms are large, the entire huilding is heated hy steam and lighted by electricity, there are elegantly furnished parlors and the elevator takes one up to any of the floore. The office is conveniently furnished with settees, and writing tables, and all the latest newspapers are constaatly on hand. The clerks are accommodation itself aad the slightest wish of the guests is cheerfully granted.

But what shall he said of the laadlord himself, Daa McKinnoa? Over all he presides with the ease horn only of great familiarity aad loag experience. He has made the art of entertainment and hotel accommodations a study and all who are at all conversant with his methods aad their results must allow that he has not studied this question in vain. He recognizes that the way to wia a man's heart is hy furaishing him delicious viands and if there is one departmeat of hotel management in which he excells more than in another it is ia the dining room. The service is excellent, the food is the richest and the best and the cookiag is of such a high grade that aoae hut words of praise ever escape from the lips of those who receive the staff of life at the McKinaon caravansary.

Mr. McKinnon is oae of the old settlers, coming here years ago whea the town was small indeed. For a number of years he kept a restaurant next door to where the Palace is situated. Later he was manager of the Commercial Hotel and whea he changed most of his boarders followed him. About two years ago he became proprietor of the Palace aad since then the business of that hotel has been steadily iacreasiag.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court. Special Term, Nov. 24, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Bertil C. Jorgenson, deceased:

Letters of administration on the estate of Bertil C. Jorgenson deceased late of the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, being granted to J. J. Ide.

It is Ordered, That six months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the Probate Court of said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is further ordered, That the

28th day of May, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m., at a special term of said Probate Court, to be held at the Probate Office in Crookston in said County, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said Probate Court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested, in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Crookston this 24th day of November A. D. 1899.
By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.
[34-37]

Order to Show Cause on Filing Petition to Sell Land.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Attix, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Nathan P. Stone, administrator of said estate, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of: the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead, of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions oa lots thereof: the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be to him granted to sell a portion of said real estate; And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, and expenses of administration, and that it is necessary for the payment of said debts, and expenses, to sell part of said real estate:

It is Therefore Ordered, That all persons interested in said estate, appear before this Court, on

Friday the 5th day of January 1900,

at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in Crookston in said County, then and there to show cause (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said administrator to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is Further Ordered, That this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston the 7th day of December A. D. 1899.
By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

Order for Hearing Proof of Foreign Will.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.
In the matter of the estate of George P. Graver, deceased:

Whereas, Certain writing purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the Last Will and Testament of George P. Graver, late of Alleghaney County, Penn., deceased, and the probate thereof in the office of the Register of Wills of Alleghaney County, Pennsylvania, have been delivered to this Court:

And Whereas, Josephine M. Graver has filed therewith her petition, representing among other things that said George P. Graver lately died in said County of Alleghaney testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in the County of Polk, State of Minnesota, and that said petitioner is widow of said deceased and praying that the said Instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters of administration with will annexed be to Jay P. Foote issued thereon:

It is ordered, That the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this Court, at the Probate Office in said County, on Friday, the

5th day of January, A. D., 1900,

at ten o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument:

And it is further ordered, That notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., the 7th day of December, A. D., 1899.
By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.
36-39

Order for Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk.—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Mary Straka, deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of Martin Koteha, of the County of Polk representing, among other things, that Mary Straka, late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the eighth day of November A. D. 1896, at the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this County at the time of her death, leaving goods, chattels, and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to John Stepan granted,

It Is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the

29th day of December A. D. 1899,

at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the City of Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston, Minn. the 7th day of December A. D. 1899. By the Court,
OLE E. Hagen,
Judge of Probate.

A. A MILLER,
Attorney for Estate.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

POLK COUNTY JOURNAL

The Pioneer Newspaper of Northern Minnesota established 1877, late H. E. Cooke Editor 21 Years.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS THIS YEAR

Office Equipped With Everything Modern—More than 1000 New Subscribers this Year.

The men who followed the advice to go west and grow up with the country have, in the large majority of cases, been successful, and the statement is true with reference to newspaper men as well as in regard to those in other walks of life. Now the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL is the pioneer in newspaper-dom in northern Minnesota. It was the first newspaper published in Minnesota north of the main line of the Northern Pacific. It has grown up with the country and has seen and recorded most of the history of this part of the globe. Horace says that the choicest wine is to be found in the remotest corner of the cellar, thus giving the palm to age. so the long established newspaper, the one that has suffered the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune and by opposing has ended them, is to the long run the reliable one.

THE LATE H. E. COOKE.

It was in the spring of 1876 that H. E. Cooke, the late editor of this paper, entered as an employee, the office of the JOURNAL, a newspaper published at Audubon, Becker county, and it was but a short time till he assumed full charge. In the spring of 1877 he established the CROOKSTON JOURNAL in this city. For a year John McLean, now a judge in the municipal court, edited the paper, doing the writing in Crookston and sending the manuscript to Audubon, where the paper was printed and thence sent back to this city. This state of affairs continued a year at the end of which time Mr. Cooke discontinued his Audubon paper, moved to Crookston, changed the name of the paper from the CROOKSTON JOURNAL to the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and assumed personal charge himself.

The original JOURNAL printing office was located at the corner of Main and Fletcher streets and this paper is still issued from the same place, though the building has since that early time had two additions built to it. And had this old landmark a tongue what a tale in could unfold of "jobs," of "stalemates," of "heavy" weight editorials"—destined to revolutionize the world—that were crowded out by advertising, of the doings of the "devil," what "proofs" it could furnish of "cases" that would positively create an "impression," what "rules" of conduct it could give that were given to the editor, some of them possibly "lended!" Indeed such a wealth of lore would be in the possession of the narrator that were the story once begun the hour of "thirty" would be long in striking.

Mr. Cooke remained the proprietor of the JOURNAL till his death in NOvember 1898. During all those years the JOURNAL was devoted to the interests of Polk county in particular and the Valley in general, and steadily increased its influence which was always used for the welfare of the people. It had its share in helping to build up and expand this region and it had the second story added to the building, it was remodeled throughout, the stock room and the job printing department, while the press room and the main office are on the first floor. In equipment too there has been improvement. A new Columbina Optimus press has been put in with which the finest kind of work can be turned out, as is clearly evidenced by the appearance of the JOURNAL during the last four months. There is no blurring of the pages and consequent straining and injury of the eyes when one reads the JOURNAL, for the words are printed in good-sized type, clearly and distinctly. But this model press is not the only new equipment. There have been added to the press rooms a new folding machine, that will paste and trim newspapers of eight, ten or twelve pages in size, a new Gordon job printing press and a complete new outfit of type, superior copper mixed, with the newest faces. This office, therefore, has the means with which to do the best kind of work and the best is always the cheapest. But besides the best of machinery the JOURNAL has the best of workmen. R. H. MARSH, the foreman of the office, is a man of 25 years experience in the printing business and for neat and quick work is among the leading members of his craft.

N. S. GORDON.

The progress of the JOURNAL during the past year has been most gratifying. Though only a small part of the territory round about here has been canvassed, more than a thousand new subscribers have been added to the JOURNAL'S subscription list and still they keep coming.

The number of other patrons, too, of this paper, in the advertising and job printing line has largely increased, so that the first year of the JOURNAL'S present management closes with the brightest of prospects, thanks to kind friends.

Jas. E. Morrisey.

The Crooston Iron Works, of which Jas. E. Morrisey is the proprietor, is one of the oldest machine foundry in the city, having been established seventeen years ago. It is a foundry and machine shop combined, and can do work that no other similar institution north of the Twin Cities can do. In the foundry say size of cast, as a brass or iron, can be made. The machine shop is equipped with first class machinery, fitted to turn out work as large as six feet in diameter, in the shape of pulleys, rears, etc., or as long, in the shape of shafting, as 20 feet. There are lathes both for wood and iron, a large iron planer, key-seating machines, pipe screwing machines, a band saw, mortising machine and circular saws for every kind of wood working shop. There is on hand a large number of patterns of the different kinds required for saw mills, flour mills, etc., and patterns for steam engines and gasoline engines. Mr. Morrisey also makes a specialty of beating pivots, either steam or hot water, and has put in the plants in some of the most important buildings in the city, as for example, in the City hall, the Scandia Hotel, the Wallace block and outside the city in the Pacific Hotel, Birdlock, O'Day and Richards houses, Thief River Falls and others. The Iron Works are located on Robert street near the Great Northern station.

Mr. Morrisey was born in Nova Scotia, Canada, in 1840 and came to Crookston in 1882 where he has been in business ever since. He was a member of the city council for eight years where he made an enviable record for himself, being one of those who exerted their influence to secure the Northern Pacific for Crookston. He inspects the Scandinavian language fluently.

M. McAskill

Among the representative establishments of Crookston none are more progressive or up-to-date than their business that owned and managed by Mr. McAskill, the merchant tailor. His skill as a tailor is well known and appreciated by the residents of the city, the county, a good stock of fabrics from the most noted looms of America and British Isles and the continent. He makes suits or any garments in the best style of the tailoring art, perfect workmanship and fashionable and accurate fit. His range includes also a large number of our leading business and professional men as well as many regular customers from the surrounding towns. Mr. McAskill, while he does not trouble himself to any great extent in the line of politics, takes a deep interest in all good citizens, is nevertheless one of our most go-a-head townsmen. His beautiful residence on North Broadway is a credit to the locality and shows him to be an ideal home man.

Congregational Social.

Last Thursday evening an enjoyable social was held by the Congregational ladies. Several weeks ago each member of the Ladies' Aid society undertook to earn a dollar for church expenses. They accomplished their work, and at the social gave their experience in the form of rhyme. Some of the "poetical effusions" were very witty and well written. The men who appeared showed themselves equal to the women in poetic pathos and earning ability. The receipts of the social were $30. Light refreshments were served. The attendance was large, and all greatly enjoyed the evening.

County's Finances.

The following report of the county's auditing board shows the state of the county's finances on Dec. 9, 1899:

REPORT OF AUDITING BOARD.

Currency	$ 7 00
Silver and pennies	52 10
Drafts and checks	10 72
Deposit in First National Bank	28,071 27
Deposit in Secretary' National Bank	21,221 07
Deposit in Scandinavian American Bank	1,000 00
Deposit in First Nat'l Bank, E. G. F.	5,000 14
Deposit in Bank of Fosston	7,043 13
Deposit in State Bank of Fosston	4,262 10
Deposit in Citizens' Bank of McIntosh	5,693 14
Deposit in Bank of Fisher	3,262 21
Deposit in State Bank of McIntosh	6,987 10
Deposit in Farmers' Bank of Fertile	7,225 00
Deposit in Citizens' Bank of Fisher	3,812 00
Interest	12 08
Total	$153,794 80

Royal Neighbors' Officers.

These will be the officers of the Royal Neighbors for the ensuing year: Mrs. Fred Walker, oracle; Miss Flora Couvrette, vice oracle: Mrs. Geo. Logenfeli, chancellor; Miss Henrietta Couvrette, escort; Miss Anna Edmundsen, recorder; Mrs. M. Palen, receiver; Mrs. A. Munn, inner sentinel; Mrs. Owens, outer sentinel; Mrs. R. F. Leick, Mrs. A. J. DeLong and C. E. Misner, managers.

Lewis Ellington.

Banks are not merely a great convenience to the business man, farmer, tradesman and others but a positive necessity. So familiar have men become with these financial institutions and so dependent on them for all in the ordinary affairs of life that due credit is perhaps not given to the acumen, courage and foresight displayed by those who successfully manage such concerns. When, however, a panic overtakes the land, then it is that the people begin to do more thinking, then it is that they see more clearly than before the value to a community of a banker of known integrity and ability in handling money. Such a financier is Lewis Ellington, cashier of the Scandinavian-American bank, and the city is to be congratulated upon having among its money changers a man in whom full confidence can be placed and who has shown, by his wise administration of the affairs of his bank and the able manner in which he has handled large money transactions, that he has marked ability in this particular field. Though a very busy man the utmost courtesy is shown by him even to the smallest depositor, and those who seek his advice with regard to business men always receive considerate treatment.

LEWIS ELLINGTON.

Mr. Ellington comes from the Southern part of the state where for several years in his younger days he was engaged in general merchandise and grain business at Booming Prairie. While he made a success of this, his ambition was to be a banker. Accordingly in 1887 he came to Crookston and on November 1, of that

Robert Ball. Palmer. Marsh
Miss Elliott. Gordon. Dewart.
Miss McGuire. Clark

THE JOURNAL WORKING FORCE.

year, became cashier of the Scandinavian American bank. Associated with him in this enterprise were C. Hendrickson of Grafton, N. D., a lumber and business men in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Crookston. And as evidenced by the fact the undertaking has been a success it may be stated that the banks has declared dividends of eight and ten per cent. every year.

But though busy with private affairs he is not entirely engrossed with them. He believes in using his influence for the betterment of the condition of the city and county. The citizens too are of the opinion that his large experience and business intelligence ought to be utilized in the management of municipal affairs and hence last spring they elected him a member of the city council on which body he has served with entire satisfaction to his constituents.

George A. Ralph

Is a graduate of a civil engineering school in Indiana and has lived in Crookston since 1886, during which time he has been county surveyor, city engineer, N. P. location and construction engineer and for 12 years government surveyor. In almost all surveying for drainage in the Valley he has had a hand. As a map drawer he is an expert.

RELIGIOUS LIFE IN THE COUNTY

Many Churches Assist in Maintaining Pure Homes and Honest Living.

Of the 54 townships of Polk county all but about sixteen have at least one church edifice. As an illustration of the progress of the people, during the last two years 16 churches have been built within the county. Another year the county seat quite a number of the towns are well supplied with churches, among them being Fertile, Fisher, McIntosh, Fosston, Mentor, Euclid Fabor, Maple Bay and others. These are for the most part along the lines of railroad.

This is certainly creditable when it is remembered that this county is quite frontier in its population and pioneering, as it does, on two Indian reservations to the east and south: on Dakota to the west and on a county to the south which is rapidly filling up with an incoming population. Quite a large proportion of which came directly from the states of Europe, while some have come from east of the Mississippi.

The soil being rich and the land prices reasonable, these people are fast building homes, and having inherited religious convictions, will soon show their loyalty thereto by erecting and maintaining churches.

Some of the churches of the county, among them being the French church in Gentilly, and the Scandinavian church in Roome, are located in the country, but are in the midst of a large and prosperous constituency, and around these churches the social life of the community centers.

Among the marked features of a few of these churches are their beautiful surroundings. The Scandinavian church two miles northeast of Fertile is an illustration. Partly surrounded by a beautiful oak grove, with a sloping country over which the site of the church affords a fine prospect—it is certainly a choice location for any public building. Outside of Crookston, the principal denominations represented in the county are Lutherans, Presbyterians, Catholics, Congregationalists and Methodists. Earnest and faithful missionary work is being done wherever there seems to be need. A marked feature of all church work is the loyalty of women who see the best religious surroundings for maintaining pure homes and honest living.

Notice

The Annual meeting of the Scandinavian bank, of Crookston, Minn., will be held at its office on Tuesday, January 9, 1900, from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m., for the election of a Board of Directors for the ensuing year, and such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

L. ELLINGTON, Cashier.

The Telephone Exchange.

Edison by his wonderful inventions, not the least among which was the telephone, has made the world his debtor forever, and yet it is to the Crookston Telephone Company, which E. M. Walsh is manager, that the citizens of this city owe thanks for the splendid telephone exchange which has been established here. The city is well wired and almost all the business places and business offices and many of the private residences are supplied with phones. These have ceased to be a luxury, owing to the price and have become a convenience that is next to indispensable everywhere. Time and energy saved is money saved, which is the same thing as saying that the telephone saves money. Once put a phone in your office or home and you will never be without it. Try it and you will see.

But in addition to the local exchange the Northwestern Telephone Company has put in the long distance phone and thus Crookston can talk with towns that are from three hundred to five hundred miles away. During the past year lines have been run from this city to Fisher and then from Tilden north to Thief River Falls, east to Fosston and south to Winalpeg Junction and within a short time towns along the St. Vincent line will be within speaking distances of the county seat.

E. M. WALSH.

But this is not all. Not only have these systems been put in but most excellent service is given. The rinp of your bell is promptly answered by the hello girl at the central office. There is no unnecessary delay in getting the number you wish and in this particular as in others the company is to be congratulated.

Besides his work in connection with the telephone Mr. Walsh manages an extensive business in real estate, loans and insurance.

S. C Johnson.

The supplying of the local demand in flour, grain and feed is an industry of no mean proportions in Crookston, and the city has several institutions that devote their time to this particular branch. Of those in this trade the subject of this sketch is especially prominent and successful. He has his office and ware rooms located on the corner of Main and Fletcher streets, where he carries a large stock of everything in the line of feed and shelled corn. His business is not entirely confined to supplying the requirements of his local customers, but spreads out into quite a comfortable wholesale trade, in all kinds of milistuffs, feed and hay. He responds promptly to the demands of dealers, and is always prepared to fill orders on the shortest notice and on the lowest quotations. Mr. Johnson is a man of energy and enterprise and builds a prominent position among Crookston's go ahead business men. He is one who believes in the system of advertising and considers the newspapers as the only legitimate medium through which to make his wares known to the public, and no local newspaper complete without his "ad" is a prominent place.

Dr. J. S. Chapin

Was born in Sheboygan county, Wisconsin, Jan. 13, 1856. While still a mere boy he left the farm and went to Fond du Lac where he remained till he was twenty years old, when he took up his residence at Cold Water, Michigan. While his home was at Cold Water he studied medicine at Bennett college, Chicago. Shortly after he received his M. D. degree he took up the practice of medicine at Euclid where he has lived for the last 18 years. Through his still as a physician he has established for himself a large practice, which indeed became so large that he was forced to give up part of it, confining himself now strictly to office work.

DR. J. S. CHAPIN.

Dr. Chapin has always been an active republican. He has also been a member of the board of education, and postmaster for the last ten years. He is a social favorite at Euclid and does even more than his share in furnishing entertainment and pleasure to the residents of that burg.

Children's Column.

How we children will watch the chimney
Till our eyes shall close in sleep.
How we'll wait and watch the coming.
But we'll never get a peep.
How we'll shout in early morning,
Merry Christmas one and all!
And then rush to see the stockings
Filled by Santa Claus last call.

"Ye are better than all the ballads
That ever were sung or said;
For ye are living pictures
And all the rest are dead."

Boys and girls of Crookston—the happy Christmas time is almost here—here's for good times, piles of fun and a nice present from Santa Claus. I wish you a Merry Christmas and happy New Year.

ANNIE HAYES.

A Happy Christmas Suprise.

It was Christmas eve, a cold night, when two little children walked down the crowded streets. They were very poorly clad but had bright faces and they seemed to be discussing something which was very pleasant to them They were talking about their little sister at home who was a cripple, and they were planning for her Christmas. The little boy was working at a store and stood boy. He had got his pay that morning and now they were going to buy some presents for their sister. They were going to buy a Christmas tree and decorate it with candles and popcorn. After they had gone into the store and bought all they wanted they returned home. When they reached their poor little home what was their surprise to see the door open and the house empty. They went into the house and went up the narrow dirty stairs but no one was up there. Lucy, for that was the oldest girl's name, sat down on a box and cried. But George, her brother, went on looking under the beds and table. After a while a man came into the house and told them they were wanted across the street and he showed them the house. It was a pretty, little, white cottage with a white fence around it enclosing a large yard. They went in through the front door into a pretty little parlor. Their little sister was lying on a small sofa and their mother was sitting by her side. Their mother told them that Mr. Lincoln came over to see her and Bessie and had given them a tree for their Christmas present. That night they put the Christmas tree in the parlor and strung popcorn and berries among its branches. While they were in the dining room eating their supper somebody came into the parlor and hung pretty presents on the tree. After they ate their supper they went into the parlor and danced for joy all except Bessie who lay on the sofa and smiled for she could not dance. Then Santa Claus came in and distributed the presents among the happy children. There was a large doll for Bessie, books for Lucy and a sled and pair of skates for George. They all got one or two books and lots of candy and nuts. After that they went to bed. It was years after that they spent many Merry Christmases.

ALICE MCCABE

6th Grade.

In charge of Miss Bill.

What Santa Braught Ter Kitty.

There was once a girl named Kitty, sometimes she was very naughty, and one day Kitty was very naughty. She began before she was out of bed in the morning and grew worse and worse. It seemed that it was the day before Christmas just when everyone should be good. The concern over wondering what Santa would bring them When Kitty asked her mother what she was going to get and her mother told her to wait and see. Then day at Kitty grew naughtier every minute her mother told her that she was afraid Santa would bring nothing to such a naughty child, so when her mother was not looking she cut the longest curl of her baby brother's head. This was too much, she was sent to bed at once. The next morning when she children awoke there the stockings hung stiffed from top to toe. Kitty's stocking was full too, but it is too dreadful to tell. It was filled with sweet candy and laid at the top was stickine out a long whip. These gifts showed plainly what Santa thought about it. Kitty went to bed and lay there until it was time to be dressed. All day Kitty was very good and when she was going to bed her mother told her to tune her prayers and that Santa might leave something left for her. Kitty was afraid, but her mother tune it up with a smile. The next morning she did what everything she wanted most. Kitty grew very good all at once, but never after was she so naughty as that day before Christmas.

ANNA EKHUFF.

6 th Grade.

In charge of Miss Louin.

A Christmas Story.

One Christmas eve a little boy was all set with bright things and the stockings were hung by the fireplace. The family was sleeping and dreaming of the good time they were going to have the next day. But I was not asleep, I was still awake at home. At last I fell asleep. I woke up just as it was striking twelve. I knew that Santa Claus would soon come, so I crept softly out of bed so that no one could hear. I peeped out of the window so nobody could see me. I saw Santa Claus in his sleigh and he jumped out and took out a load and a little ladder. He put the ladder up to the house then he climbed up the ladder, got on the house, walked on the roof and went to the chimney. I heard his toys rattle and I crept to my room and stood by the side of the door. In a few minutes he came in and stood by the fire and counted the stockings. He said some words that I did not hear. Then he took from his back a bag and filled the stockings with all kinds of toys. Then he went and looked at the tree and said "ah! that's a fine tree." But it was a good thing he didn't look to see if everything was always before he filled the stockings. Then he picked up his bag and went up the chimney and up, down the ladder. I was very softly to the window and looked out. Then he put his ladder in his sleigh with his bag and then he jumped in. I crept quickly into bed. Just then Snap went the whip and Santa Claus piloted off on the deep white snow. But I can tell you I never forgot the time when Santa was filling the stockings.

ALICE GREENLAUGH.

8th Grade.

In charge of Miss Brown.

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

[Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.]

Felicia colored slightly, but would not answer. Rose pawned again and then hummed a fragment of a popular song. Then she exclaimed abruptly:

"I'm sick of almost everything. I hope the 'Shadows of London' will be exciting tonight."

"The Shadows of Chicago!" murmured Felicia.

"The Shadows of Chicago! 'The Shadows of London,' the play, the great drama with its wonderful scenery, the sensation of New York for two months! You know we have a box with the Delanos tonight."

Felicia turned her face toward her sister. Her great brown eyes were very expressive and not altogether free from a sparkle of luminous heat.

"And yet we never weep over the real thing on the actual stage of life. What are the shadows of London on the stage to the shadows of London or Chicago as they really exist? Why don't we get excited over the facts as they are?"

"Because the actual people are dirty and disagreeable and it's too much bother, I suppose," replied Rose carelessly. "Felicia, you never can reform the world. What's the use? We're not to blame for the poverty and misery. There have always been rich and poor, and there always will be. We ought to be thankful we're rich."

"Suppose Christ had gone on that principle," replied Felicia, with unusual persistence. "Do you remember Dr. Bruce's sermon on that verse a few Sundays ago? How can we know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might become rich?"

"I remember it well enough," said Rose; "with some petulance. "And didn't Dr. Bruce go on to say that there was no blame attached to people who had wealth if they are kind and give to the needs of the poor? And I am sure the doctor himself is pretty comfortably settled. He never gives up the luxuries just because some people in the city go hungry. What good would it do if he did? I tell you Felicia, there will always be poor and rich in spite of all we can do. Ever since Rachel has written about the queer doings in Raymond you have upset the whole family. People can't live at that concert pitch all the time. You see if Rachel doesn't give it up soon. It's a great pity she doesn't come to Chicago and sing in the Auditorium concerts. I heard today she had received an offer. I'm going to write and urge her to come. I'm just dying to hear her sing."

Felicia looked out of the window and was silent. The carriage rolled on past two blocks of magnificent private residences and turned into a wide driveway under a covered passage, and the sisters hurried into the house. It was an elegant mansion of graystone, furnished like a palace, every corner of it warm with the luxury of paintings, sculpture, art and refinement.

The owner of it all, Mr. Charles R. Sterling, stood before an open grate fire smoking a cigar. He had made his money in grain speculation and railroad ventures and was reputed to be worth anything over two millions. His wife was a sister of Mrs. Winslow of Raymond. She had been an invalid for several years. The two girls, Rose and Felicia, were the only children. Rose was 21 years old, fair, vivacious, educated in a fashionable college, just entering society and already somewhat cynical and indifferent, a very handsome lady indeed, her father said sometimes playfully, sometimes seriously. Felicia was 19, with a tropical beauty somewhat like her cousin. Rachel Winslow, with warm, generous impulses that were making the Christian feeling capable of all sorts of expression, a puzzle to her father, a source of irritation to her mother and with a great, unused reserved territory of thought and action in herself of which she was more than dimly conscious. These were the two Felicias that would easily endure any condition in life if only the liberty to act fully on her conscientious convictions were granted her.

"Here's a letter for you, Felicia," said Mr. Sterling, taking it out of his pocket.

Felicia sat down and instantly opened the letter, saying as she did so, "It's from Rachel."

"Well, what's the latest news from Raymond?" asked Mr. Sterling, lighting his cigar out of his month and looking at Felicia, as he often did, with half shut eyes, as if he were studying her.

"Rachel says Dr. Bruce has been studying in Raymond for two Sundays and has seemed very much interested in Mr. Maxwell's pledge in the First church."

"What does Rachel say about herself?" asked Rose, who was lying on a couch almost buried under half a dozen elegant cushions.

"She is still singing at the Rectangle. Since the singing school she has moved in an old hall until the new buildings her friend Virginia Page is putting up are completed."

"I must write Rachel to come to Chicago and visit us. She ought not to throw away her voice in that railroad town upon all those people who don't appreciate her."

Mr. Sterling lighted a new cigar, and Rose exclaimed

"Rachel is awfully queer. I think. She might set Chicago wild with her voice if she sang in the Auditorium, and there she goes on, throwing her voice away on people who don't know what they are hearing."

"Rachel won't come here unless she can do it and keep her pledge at the same time." said Felicia after a pause.

"What pledge?" Mr. Sterling asked the question and then added hastily: "Oh, I know! Yes; a very peculiar thing that. Powers used to be a friend of mine. We learned telegraphy in the same office; made a great sensation when he resigned and handed over that evidence to the interstate commerce commission, and he's back at his telegraphy again. There have been queer doings in Raymond during the past year. I wonder what Dr. Bruce thinks of it. On the whole, I must have a talk with him about it."

"He preaches tomorrow," said Felicia. "Perhaps he will tell us something about it."

There was silence for a minute. Then Felicia said abruptly, as if she had gone on with a spoken thought to some invisible hearer, "And what if he should propose this same pledge to the Nazareth Avenue church?"

"Why! What are you talking about?" asked her father, a little sharply.

"About Dr. Bruce. I say what if he should propose to our church what Mr. Maxwell proposed to his and ask for volunteers who would pledge themselves to do everything after asking the question, 'What would Jesus do?'"

"There's no danger of it," said Rose, rising suddenly from the couch as the tea bell rang.

"It's a very impracticable movement to my mind," said Mr. Sterling sharply.

"I understand from Rachel's letter that the object of it in Raymond is going to make an attempt to extend the idea of the pledge to the other churches. If they succeed, they will certainly make great changes in the churches and in people's lives," said Felicia.

"Oh, well, let's have some tea first," said Rose, walking into the dining room. Her father and Felicia followed. They entered and seated themselves. Mr. Sterling had her meals served in her room. Mr. Sterling was preoccupied. He ate very little and seemed himself early, and, although it was Saturday night, he remarked as he went out that he would be down town late on some special business.

"Don't you think father looks very much disturbed lately?" asked Felicia a little while after he had gone out.

"No. I don't suppose I have noticed anything unusual," replied Rose. After a silence she said "Are you going to the play tonight, Felicia? Mrs. Delano will be here at half past 7. I think you ought to go. She will feel hurt if you refuse."

"I'll go. I don't care about it. I can be shabby enough without going to the play."

"That's a delicately remark for a girl 19 years old to make," replied Rose, "but then you're queer in your ideas anyhow, Felicia. If you're going up to dress make haste, for I'll run in after the play if she is still awake."

Felicia went up to see her mother and Fenton with her mind after the Delano carriage came. Mrs. Sterling was worried about her husband. She talked incessantly and was irritated by every remark Felicia made. She would not listen to Felicia's attempts to read even part of Rachel's letter, and when Felicia offered to stay with her for the evening she refused the offer with a good deal of positive emphasis.

So Felicia started off to the play not very happy, but she was familiar with that feeling, only sometimes she was more unhappy than at other times. Her feeling expressed itself tonight by a withdrawal into herself. When the company was seated in the box and the curtain was up, Felicia was back of the others and unseen. The two girls, Rose and Felicia, were the only children. Rose was 21 years old, fair, vivacious, educated in a fashionable college, just entering society and already somewhat cynical and indifferent, a very handsome lady indeed, her father said sometimes playfully, sometimes seriously. Felicia was 19, with a tropical beauty somewhat like her cousin. Rachel Winslow, with warm, generous impulses that were making the Christian feeling capable of all sorts of expression, a puzzle to her father, a source of irritation to her mother and with a great, unused reserved territory of thought and action in herself of which she was more than dimly conscious. These were the two Felicias that would easily endure any condition in life if only the liberty to act fully on her conscientious convictions were granted her.

"There's a letter for you, Felicia," said Mr. Sterling, taking it out of his pocket.

Felicia sat down and instantly opened the letter, saying as she did so, "It's from Rachel."

"Well, what's the latest news from Raymond?" asked Mr. Sterling, lighting his cigar out of his month and looking at Felicia, as he often did, with half shut eyes, as if he were studying her.

"Rachel says Dr. Bruce has been studying in Raymond for two Sundays and has seemed very much interested in Mr. Maxwell's pledge in the First church."

"What does Rachel say about herself?" asked Rose, who was lying on a couch almost buried under half a dozen elegant cushions.

"She is still singing at the Rectangle. Since the singing school she has moved in an old hall until the new buildings her friend Virginia Page is putting up are completed."

"I must write Rachel to come to Chicago and visit us. She ought not to throw away her voice in that railroad town upon all those people who don't appreciate her."

Mr. Sterling lighted a new cigar, and Rose exclaimed

"Rachel is awfully queer. I think. She might set Chicago wild with her voice if she sang in the Auditorium, and there she goes on, throwing her voice away on people who don't know what they are hearing."

skillfully shown in this scene that more than one elegant woman in the theater, seated, like Rose Sterling, in a sumptuous box, surrounded with silk hangings and velvet covered railing, caught herself shrinking back a little, as if contamination were possible from the nearness of the piece of painted canvas. It was almost too realistic, and yet it had a horrible fascination for Felicia as she sat there alone, buried back in a cushioned seat from the interested gaze of those far beyond the dialogue on the stage.

From the tenement scene the play shifted to the interior of a nobleman's palace, and almost a sigh of relief went up all over the house at the sight of the accustomed luxury of the upper classes. The contrast was startling. It was brought about by a clever piece of staging that allowed only a few minutes to elapse between the slum and the palace scenes. The dialogue continued, the actors came and went in their various roles, but upon Felicia the play had not one distinct impression. In reality the scenes on the bridge and in the slum were only incidents in the story of the play, but Felicia found herself living those scenes over and over. She had never philosophized about the causes of human misery. She was not old enough. She had not the temperament that philosophizes. But she felt intensely, and this was not the first time she had felt the contrast thrust into her feeling between the upper and the lower conditions of human life. It had been growing upon her until it had made her what Rosecalled "queer" and the other people in her circle of wealthy acquaintances called "very unusual." It was simply the human problem in its extreme of riches and poverty, its refinements and its vileness, which was, in spite of her unconscious attempts to struggle against the facts, burning into her life the impression that would in the end transform her into either a woman of rare love and self sacrifice for the world or a miserable enigma to herself and all who knew her.

"Come, Felicia! Aren't you going home?" said Rose. The play was over. The curtain down, and people were going noisily out, laughing and chatting as if "The Shadows of London" was simply good diversion, as it was put on the stage so effectively.

Felicia rose and went out with the rest quietly and with the absorbed feeling that had actually left her in her seat oblivious of the play's ending. She had never apprehended, but often thought herself into a condition that left her alone in the midst of a crowd.

"Well, what did you think of it?" asked Rose when the sisters had reached home and were in the drawing room Rose really had considerable interest for Felicia's judgment of a play

"I thought it was a pretty picture of real life"

"I mean the acting." said Rose, annoyed

"The bridge scene was well acted especially the woman's part. I thought the man overdid the sentiment a little."

"Did you? I enjoyed that. And wasn't the scene between the two comedians funny when they first learned that they were related? But the whole play was horrible. I think they ought not to show such things in a play They are too painful."

"They must be painful in real life too," replied Felicia.

"Yes, but we don't have to look at the real thing It's bad enough at the theater, where we pay for it."

Rose went into the drawing room and began so eat from a plate of fruit and cakes on the sideboard.

"Are you going up to see mother?" asked Felicia after awhile. She had remained in front of the drawing room fire.

"No," replied Rose from the other room: "I won't trouble her tonight. If you go in, tell her I am too tired to be agreeable."

So Felicia turned into her mother's room. As she went up the great staircase and down the upper hall the light was burning there, and the servants were always waited on Mrs. Sterling was becoming Felicia to come in.

"Tell Clara to go out," exclaimed Mrs. Sterling as Felicia came up to the bed and kissed her.

Felicia was surprised, but she did as her mother bade her and then inquired how she was feeling.

"Felicia," said her mother. "can you pray?"

The question was so unlike any her mother had ever asked before that Felicia was startled, but she answered:

"Why, yes, mother. What makes you ask such a question?"

"Felicia, I am frightened. Your father—I have had such strange fears about him all day. Something is wrong with him. I want you to pray."

"Now? Here, mother?"

"Yes. Pray, Felicia."

Felicia reached out her hand and took her mother's. It was trembling. Mrs. Sterling had never shown much tenderness for her younger daughter, and her strange demand now was to her a direct sign of any confidence in Felicia's character

The girl still kneeled, holding her mother's trembling hand, and prayed. It was doubtful if she had ever prayed aloud before. She must have sold in her prayer the words that her mother needed, for when it was silent in the room the invalid was weeping softly and her nervous tension was over.

Felicia staid some time. When she was assured that her mother would not need her any longer she rose to go.

"Good night, mother. You must let Clara call me if you feel bad in the night."

"I feel better now." Then as Felicia was moving away Mrs. Sterling said, "Won't you kiss me, Felicia?"

Felicia went back and bent over her mother. The kiss was almost as strange to her as the prayer had been. When Felicia went out of the room, her cheeks were wet with tears. She had not cried since she was a little girl.

Sunday morning at the Sterling mansion was generally very quiet. The girls usually went to church at 11 o'clock service. Mr. Sterling was not a member, but a heavy contributor, and he generally went to church in the morning. This time he did not come down to breakfast and Felicia sent word by a servant that he did not feel well enough to go out. So Rose and Felicia drove up to the door of the Nazareth Avenue church and entered the family pew alone.

When Dr. Bruce walked out of the room at the rear of the platform and came up to the pulpit to open the Bible, a slight stir during the hymn showed that he had arrived. He was a popular preacher. He would a minister be likely to pray who had come out of a church in Christian feeling that had completely changed his definition of what was meant by following Jesus? Dr. Bruce in Nazareth Avenue church had not any idea that the Rev. Calvin Bruce, D. D., the dignified, cultured, refined doctor of divinity, had spent a few days been crying like a little child, on his knees, asking for strength and courage and Christlikeness to speak in his day message, and yet the prayer was an unconscious, involuntary disclosure of the soul's experience such as Nazareth Avenue people seldom heard and never before from that pulpit.

In the hush that succeeded the prayer a distinct wave of spiritual power moved over the congregation. The most careless persons in the church felt it. Felicia, whose sensitive religious nature responded swiftly to every touch of emotion, quivered under the passing of that unseen, mysterious power, and when she lifted her head and looked at the minister there was a look in her eyes that announced her intense, eager anticipation of the scene that was to follow.

And she was not alone in her attitude There was something in the prayer and the result of it that stirred many more than Felicia in Nazareth Avenue church. All over the house men and women leaned forward, and when Dr. Bruce announced the text of his visit to Raymond in the opening sentences of his address, which the morning press had both misrepresented and overcolored, response in the church that came back to him as he spoke and thrilled him with the hope of a spiritual harvest such as he had never during all his ministerial experience known.

"I am just back from a visit to Raymond," Dr. Bruce began, "and I want to tell you about something of my impressions of the movement there."

He paused, and his look went over his people with yearning for them and at the same time with a great unCertainty at his heart. How many of his rich, fashionable, refined, luxury loving members would understand the nature of the appeal he was soon to make to them? He was altogether in the dark as to that. Nevertheless he had been studying his own heart and come out of it ready to suffer. He went on now and told the story of Raymond, of the church in general and of Henry Maxwell in particular. He showed how Maxwell's pledge to live as Jesus would live had transformed the business, selling for strength and courage and Christlikeness to speak in his day message, and yet the prayer was an unconscious, involuntary disclosure of the soul's experience such as Nazareth Avenue people seldom heard and never before from that pulpit.

In the hush that succeeded the prayer a distinct wave of spiritual power moved over the congregation. The most careless persons in the church felt it. Felicia, whose sensitive religious nature responded swiftly to every touch of emotion, quivered under the passing of that unseen, mysterious power, and when she lifted her head and looked at the minister there was a look in her eyes that announced her intense, eager anticipation of the scene that was to follow.

And she was not alone in her attitude There was something in the prayer and the result of it that stirred many more than Felicia in Nazareth Avenue church. All over the house men and women leaned forward, and when Dr. Bruce announced the text of his visit to Raymond in the opening sentences of his address, which the morning press had both misrepresented and overcolored, response in the church that came back to him as he spoke and thrilled him with the hope of a spiritual harvest such as he had never during all his ministerial experience known.

"I am just back from a visit to Raymond," Dr. Bruce began, "and I want to tell you about something of my impressions of the movement there."

He paused, and his look went over his people with yearning for them and at the same time with a great uncertainty at his heart. How many of his rich, fashionable, refined, luxury loving members would understand the nature of the appeal he was soon to make to them? He was altogether in the dark as to that. Nevertheless he had been studying his own heart and come out of it ready to suffer. He went on now and told the story of Raymond, of the church in general and of Henry Maxwell in particular. He showed how Maxwell's pledge to live as Jesus would live had transformed the business, the social life, the politics, the church in general and the life of Maxwell himself. He showed how the reality of discipleship in Raymond had proved to be valuable in its results that Henry Maxwell had established the church in general to share with the disciples in Raymond. Already there had begun a volunteer movement in many of the other churches throughout the country, acting on their own desire to walk closer to the steps of Jesus. The Christian Endeavor societies had with enthusiasm in many churches taken the pledge to live as Jesus would live when they became members.

Then Dr. Bruce told his people simply and with a perspective of events evidently led the way to his announcement which now followed. Felicia had listened to every word with strained attention. She sat there by the side of Rose, conscious of her beside her, although even Rose was alert and excited as she could be.

"And now," he said, and for the first time since his prayer the emotion of the occasion was revealed in his voice and manner, "I am going to ask that Nazareth Avenue church take the same pledge that Raymond church has taken. I know what this will mean to you and me. It will mean the complete change of very many habits. It will mean followership of Jesus such as very probably in many cases loss of money. It will mean suffering. It will mean what followership meant in the first century, and then it meant persecution, loss, hardship, separation from every thing we Christians call dear. What does following Jesus mean? The test of discipleship is the same now as then. Those of you who volunteer in the Nazareth Avenue church to do as Jesus would do to do as Jesus would do in his steps, as he gave no commandment."

Again Rev. Calvin Bruce, pastor of Nazareth Avenue church, paused, and now the result of his announcement was plainly visible in the stir that went over the congregation. He added in a quiet voice that all who volunteered to make the pledge to do as Jesus would do were asked to remain after the morning service.

Instantly he proceeded with his sermon. His text was from Matthew viii, 19, "Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest."

It was a sermon that touched the deep springs of conduct. It was a revelation to the people of the definition their pastor had been learning. It took them back to the first century of Christianity. Above all, it stirred them below the conventional thought of years to the meaning and purpose of church membership. It was such a sermon as a man can preach once in a lifetime and with strength in it for people to live on all through a lifetime.

The service closed in a hush that was slowly broken. People rose here and there a few at a time. There was a reluctance in the movements of the people that was very striking.

Rose, however, walked straight out the pew, and as she reached the aisle she turned her head and beckoned to Felicia. By that time the congregation was rising all over the church.

Felicia instantly answered her sister's look.

"I'm going to stay," she said, and Rose had heard her speak in the same manner on other occasions and knew that Felicia's resolve could not be changed. Nevertheless she went back into the pew two or three steps and said:

"Felicia," she whispered, and there was a flash of anger on her cheeks, "this is folly. What can you do? You will bring disgrace upon the family. I will not permit you to come."

Felicia looked at her, but did not answer at once. Her lips were moving in a petition for help, for even a depth of feeling that measured a new life for her. She shook her head.

"No; I am going to stay. I shall take the pledge. I am ready to obey it. You do not know why I am doing this."

Rose gave her one look and then turned and went out of the pew and down the aisle. She did not even stop to talk with her acquaintances. Mrs. Delano was going out of the church just as Rose stepped into the vestibule.

"So you are not going to join the doctor's volunteer company?" Mrs. Delano asked in a queer tone that made Rose redden.

"Yes. Are you? It is simply absurd! I have always regarded the Raymond movement as fanatical. You know Cousin Rachel keeps us posted about it."

"Yes; I understand it is resulting in a great deal of hardship in many cases. For my part, I believe Dr. Bruce has simply provoked a disturbance here. It will result in splitting Nazareth Avenue church. You see if that isn't so. There are scores of people in the church who are so situated that they can't take such a pledge and keep it. I am one of them," added Mrs. Delano as she went on to Rose.

When Rose reached home, her father was standing in his usual attitude before the open fireplace, smoking a cigar.

"Where is Felicia?" he asked as Rose came in alone.

She said to an after meeting.' replied Rose shortly. She threw off her wraps and was going up stairs when Mr. Sterling called after her:

"An after meeting? What do you mean?"

"Dr. Bruce asked the church to take the Raymond pledge."

Mr. Sterling took his cigar out of his mouth and twirled it nervously between his fingers.

"I didn't expect that of Dr. Bruce Did any of the members stay?"

"I don't know. I didn't," replied Rose, and she went up stairs, leaving her father standing in the drawing room.

After a few minutes he went to the window and stood there looking out at the people driving on the boulevard. His cigar had gone out, but he still lingered. The servants passed to and fro from the window and walked up and down the room. A servant stepped across the hall and announced dinner, and he told her to wait for Felicia. Rose came down the stairs and went into the library, and still Mr. Sterling paced the drawing room restlessly.

Finally he reappeared at the walking apparently and, throwing himself into a chair, was brooding over something deeply when Felicia came in.

He rose and faced her. Felicia was evidently very much moved by the pressed excitement which she had just come from the library.

"How many staid?" she asked. Rose was curious. At the same time she was skeptical of the whole movement in Raymond.

"About a hundred," replied Felicia gravely. Mr. Sterling looked surprised. "Felicia was going out of the room. He called to her.

"Do you really mean to keep the pledge?" he asked.

Felicia colored. Over her face and neck the warm blood flowed as she answered, "Yes, father." Then she added in a question, father, if you had been present at the meeting." She lingered a moment and then went out of the room to ascend from dinner for awhile and went up to see her mother.

No one ever knew what that interview between Felicia and her mother was. It is certain that she must have told her mother something of the spiritual power that had awed every person present in the company of disciples from Nazareth Avenue church who faced Dr. Bruce in that meeting after the morning service. It is also certain that Felicia had never known such an experience and never would have thought of sharing it with her mother if it had not been for the prayer the evening before. Another fact is also known of Felicia's experience at this time. When she finally joined her father and Rose at the table, she seemed unable to tell them much about the meeting. There was a reluctance to speak of it, as one might hesitate to attempt a description of a wonderful sunset to a person who never talked about anything but the weather. When that Sunday in the Sterling mansion was drawing to a close and the soft, warm lights throughout the dwelling were glowing through the great windows, in a corner of her room where the light was obscure Felicia kneeled and when she raised her face and turned it toward the light it was the face of a woman who had already defined for herself the greatest issues of earthly life.

That same evening, after the Sunday evening service, the Rev. Calvin Bruce, D. D., of Nazareth Avenue church, was talking over the events of the day with his wife. They were of one heart and mind in the matter and faced their new future with all the faith and courage of new disciples. Neither was deceived as to the probable results of the pledge to themselves or to their church.

They had been talking but a little while when the bell rang, and Dr. Bruce, going to the door, exclaimed as he opened it: "It is you, Edward! Come in!"

There came into the hall a commanding figure. The bishop was of extraordinary height and breadth of shoulder, but of such good proportion that there was no thought of ungainly or even of unusual size. The impression the bishop made on strangers was first that of great health and then of great affection. He came into the parlor and greeted Mrs. Bruce, who after a few moments was called out of the room, leaving the two men together.

The bishop sat in a deep easy chair before the open fire. There was just enough dampness in the early spring of the year to make an open fire pleasant.

"Calvin, you have taken a very serious step today," he finally said, lifting his large dark eyes to his old college classmate's face. "I heard of it this afternoon. I could not resist the desire to see you about it tonight."

"I'm glad you came." Dr. Bruce sat near the bishop and laid a hand on his shoulder. "You understand what this means, Edward?"

"I think I do—yes: I am sure." The bishop spoke very slowly and thoughtfully. He sat with his hands clasped together. Over his face, marked with lines of consecration and service and the love of men, a shadow crept, a shadow not caused by the firelight. Again he lifted his eyes toward his old friend.

"Calvin, we have always understood each other. For three years we have had as in different ways in church life we have walked together in Christian fellowship."

"It is true," replied Dr. Bruce, with an emotion he made no attempt to conceal or subdue. "Thank God for it. I prize your fellowship more than any man's. I have always known what it meant, though it has always been more than I deserve."

The bishop looked offen intently at his friend, but the shadow still rested on his face After a pause he spoke again.

"The new discipleship means a crisis for you in your work. If you keep this pledge to do all things as Jesus would do, as I know you will, it requires no prophet to predict some remarkable changes in your church." The bishop looked wistfully at Bruce and then continued "In fact, I do not see how a church calling itself a Christian can now know it can be prevented if the ministry and churches generally take the Raymond pledge and live by it. He paused as if he were waiting for his friend to say something, to ask some question, but Bruce did not speak, and the fire that was burning in the bishop's face revealed a passion that Maxwell and himself had fought out.

"Now, in my church, for instance," continued the bishop, would be rather a difficult matter, I fear, to find very many people who would take a pledge like that and live up to it. Materialism is a lost art with us. Our Christianity loves its ease and comfort too well to take up anything that is not heavy as a cross, and yet what does following Jesus mean? What is it to walk in his steps?"

The bishop was soliloquizing now, and he is doubtful if he thought for the moment of his friend's presence. For the first time there flashed into Bruce's mind a suspicion of the truth. That if the bishop should throw the weight of his great influence on the side of the Raymond movement there would be a lowing of the most aristocratic, wealthy, fashionable people not only in Chicago, but in several large cities. What if the bishop should join this new discipleship?

The thought was about to be followed by the word. Dr. Bruce had reached out his hand and, with the familiarity of old friendship, had placed it on the bishop's shoulder and was about to ask him a very important question when there was heard a knock at the door, and the violent ringing of the bell. Mrs. Bruce had gone to the door and was talking with some one in the hall. There was a loud exclamation, and then, as the bishop rose and Dr. Bruce was stepping toward the curtain which shut off before the entrance to the parlor, Mrs. Bruce pushed it aside. Her face was white, and she was trembling.

"Oh, Calvin! Such terrible news! Mrs. Sterling—Rose—I cannot tell it! What a fearful blow to those girls!"

"What is it?" Dr. Bruce advanced with his wife's hand and both met over with the news, as the doctor lived nearest of any friends of the family.

"Mr. Sterling killed himself, sir, a few minutes ago! He killed himself in his bedroom! Mrs. Sterling"—

"I will go right over. Edward"—Dr. Bruce turned to the bishop—"will you go with me? The Sterlings are old friends of yours."

The bishop was very pale, but calm, as always. He looked his friend in the face and answered: "Aye, Calvin. I will go with you, not only to this house of death, but also the whole way of human sin and sorrow, please God."

And even in that moment of horror at the unexpected news Calvin Bruce understood what the bishop had promised to do.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

DEFECTIVE PAGE

FIELD MANAGEMENT

Prof. W. M. Hayes Tells How Farmers by Systematic Planning of Crops May Increase the Yield of Grain Per Acre.

CROP ROTATION IN THE VALLEY

Fences Must be Built, Stock Raised and Careful Records Kept—Land thus Enriched and More Pride Taken in Farms.

Changes in methods of farming, in methods of transportation and in the markets of farm produce have been rapid and profound since the plow first entered the fertile prairie sod of the Red River Valley. The bright people who are making these rich soils pay tribute to man's wants are compelled to continue alive to changed conditions. Methods which resulted in good profits for the first settlers will not answer now. The broad, "four-in-hand" bonanza "wheat belt" farming must give way to a system of real agricultural practice. Practical experience and formal experiments of a practical kind must unite in the development of a permanent philosophy of farm and field management in the Red River Valley.

PROF. W. M. HAYES.

WHAT CHANGES ARE READY FOR THE FARMER.

Most of our farmers, and especially the farmers of the Red River Valley, have before them some important propositions. To make more money, and to the buildings, fences, drainage, ronals, fertility, and cleanliness from weeds of their fields, and other permanent improvements, and to better equip the farms for their sons and daughters, they must spread out less and develop more business per acre. Those large farmers who say: "With the present condition of prices for labor and products, we cannot abandon wheat and go into general and live stock farming," must eventually sell their lands or really farm them under a general plan of rotation and live stock. Our large farmers are generally land speculators. They could not make money, and they would sell their lands at present prices if they did not realize that there is profit in the prospective increased prices for their large holdings. The future will doubtless show that the large farmer will have divided up his holdings into small farms, each managed by a family furnishing most of its own labor, not depending on the "men from the pines" for more than a small part of the farm work. The small farmers, can, and in many cases do, find that live stock and the crops they require in rotation with wheat make a better business than all wheat, and the smaller farmer who has a quarter section, more or less, is doing much to solve the situation. The experience of the occasional successful real farmer, supplemented by the experimental data the experiment stations at Crookston, Fargo, St. Anthony Park, and other places are gathering, is going to be a bulwark against which the ideas of the large farmers will not prevail on this matter of managing the farm under rotation with live stock to consume the waste of crops as compared with managing it on a large scale in wheat.

England, Northern France, and Western Germany have very large acreages of wheat, and their yearly averages are 30 to 35 bushels of winter wheat per acre on lands which have been farmed for hundreds of years. These lands are in a better wheat climate than ours, but their land is not nearly so good. They obtain these results largely by the use of commercial fertilizers, but their experiment stations have conclusively shown that if they had used barn manure instead their yields would have averaged over 40 bushels per acre. Our average yield should be at least 25 bushels of spring wheat per acre.

The experiment station at Fargo has proven that rotation adds several bushels per acre to the yields of wheat on Red River Valley land. The Minnesota station has made new varieties of wheat which promise to increase yields one or more bushels per acre, and it has devised and has under way extensive experiments at St. Anthony Park and its sub-stations, in which there is substantial hope that yields of wheat and other grains can be increased several bushels per acre by breeding. This result will be achieved but slowly, but it seems sure. If the farmers will improve their field and farm management so as to add seven bushels per acre, and the experiment stations can originate new varities which will add six more (an average increased yield already attained for a series of years at University Farm,) our average yields can be run up from 13 to 25 bushels of per acre. This is a high aim, both for the farmers and for the experiment station officials. Earnest, wise effort, long continued on the farms and at the stations should surely attain this grand object. Most people would have said that Dewey could not blow the Spanish fleet out of Manila Harbor in half a day, and most people will say that the above proposition is theory, and cannot be carried out. The former proposition seems more probable than did Dewey's. The farmers may look to Dewey who can direct their part of the movement.

I wish the experiment stations could enter a contract that for every bushel per acre the experiment stations can add to the yield of wheat and other grains by breeding, the farmers, by means of rotation and better culture, would agree to add another bushel per acre. I dare say that they would give the station a merry chase if they would. But will they? Rotation, live stock, and better field work are the necessities. I wish all the farmers of the Red River Valley could visit our seed laboratory in January and our field crop nursery in July, and stay long enough to see the technical detail carried out in planting, selecting, hybridizing, testing varieties in the field, mill, and bake-room, and in studying the pedigrees of individual wheat plants, in their efforts to originate better kinds of wheat. They would realize that the experiment stations are traveling a direct road for the six bushels of the purposed 25 bushels per acre for wheat in Minnesota. It so far as the breeding work is successful it will have an additional use in instilling faith in better farm and field methods. The experiment stations are not forgetting the breeding for the announcement of the crops which must be grown in rotation with the wheat, nor the live stock which must be used to consume and feed them into usable and marketable products.

If we are going to put half, or more, of our land into grass, fodder corn, etc., we must do that in a way to make use of them to prepare the wheat land for 25 bushel crops.

Prof. Shepperd, of Fargo, and Profs. Hevered, of Crookston, and Chapman, of Grand Rapids, are making variations of corn suited to grow for ears in that climate. At University Farm we have developed a variety of "Minnesota No. 13," which is useful in the Red River Valley for fodder and for silage. This variety has been greatly refurbished, and no doubt seed will be purchased in Central and Southern Minnesota at moderate prices. Corn is a crop the farmers can breed and by breeding, our varieties are being made which pro better to grow for grain in each of our northern counties. But the greater use of this crop in the Red River Valley is for fodder, and the seed of varieties like Minnesota No. 13, which are suitable for fodder, for ears, are best secured where they ripen a 100 miles further to the southward. Farmers often cling to wild buy when corn fodder would be better. Corn fodder grown thickly and well cured is good feed, and it prepares the soil for wheat. Timothy and clover cost very little per ton to grow them (even if a stand is gotten at only three seedings out of five, and the yield is not so large as "thick in Illinois") and they prepare the land for wheat better than does the summer fallow.

Every half the area in wheat, oats, barley and flax now devoted to these crops, and the other half farmed with clover and timothy grains or some other products not grain sold from the farm, would pay profits would be realized by the farmers than now. But a live stock can be made to pay if handled properly. The best profits of the grains and the less expense in cultivating only half the area devoted to wheat, flax, etc., would make nice profits per acre. The only practical loss a farmer sustains in selling a third of his land and using a portion of the proceeds in purchasing stock and erecting buildings for them is the loss of the prospective increased prices of the land sold. Conditions will gradually change. Prices of farms will approach the normal or real values of these lands. Since small holders will be able to pay more for the lands than bonanza farmers, the lands will gradually pass into the hands of men who combine their own brains, capital and muscle. Those farmers who have small or medium sized farms should gradually, but surely, develop a system of extensive cropping, and keep animals adapted to utilizing the crops grown alternately with the grain.

WHAT IS ROTATION?

The principles of rotation are not well understood by many of our western farmers. Rotation, like chess, cannot be learned from a written statement. The mental work of devising and managing restrative cropping is often as puzzling as the situation on a checker board, where two bright players are trying to work a coup on each other. The farmers must take into account many factors. Among these are the several crops and their relation to each other. The crops should be arranged in that order which will result in each crop following a crop which will prepare the soil for it. Thus, corn or grass will prepare the land for wheat. Wheat prepares the land for grass, and fairly well for corn. The amount of foods required by the live stock, and the needs of crops to help clean the land of weeds must be considered. The available labor and its constant profitable utilization at all seasons of the year, as well as the relative profits of each line of crop or live stock production, as temporarily influenced by market fluctuations, must also be kept in view. The general business problem is more complicated than that confronting the merchant at his annual season for stocking up with new goods. The farmers' greatest business responsibility being to arrange these general questions of farm management right, he must look the matter squarely in the face, and, seeking information and advice from all

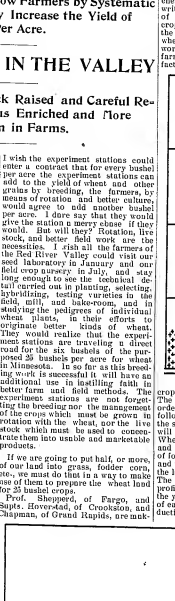

FIG. 2.

A TYPICAL RED RIVER VALLEY ROTATION.

In no section are the fields more easily arranged for the systematic rotation of crops than in the level tract known as the Red River Valley; but there are difficulties of other kinds. The number of profitable crops which the live stock are very limited, and even with live stock the farmer is not large.

Cattle fences now cost only about 20 cents per rod, if made of three barbed wires with posts 24 or 32 feet apart. Every careful farmer should fence his fields and have live stock with which to secure the advantages of live stock in the rotation. Sheep fences can be made for 40 cents per rod, and combined cattle and hog fences for slightly more. Fencing cannot all be done at once; but a general plan of the land should be made and the fences added as they can be afforded, and as the increased herds and other conditions require.

Thinking a concrete example will make the theory of rotation seem practical, I will discuss a Red River Valley farm belonging to Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith's farm happens to be a section, but by dividing the figures by four the drawings and numbers have been made to apply to a quarter-section.

Fig. 1. Quarter section of land poorly arranged, as for all grain farming. Fifteen acres are permanent pasture and remainder of farm permanently in grain. Farmstead too small and in one corner, instead of at middle of one side.

This quarter section of land is planted to wheat or other grains continuously, the fields being occasionally summer fallowed. The farmstead is a cramped area in the southwest corner, with the groups of the buildings without nearly on the road, giving little room for paddocks or small fields in the center of the grove surrounding the farmstead. North of the farmstead a permanent pasture of timothy has been long maintained, the owner not believing in spending money on fence wire, nor even labor to move the fence so as to get fine wheat on the timothy and wild with the pasture on another field, prepare that for good crops of grain also. "The way to resume is to resume," and the way to rotate is to devise the plan and commence.

The following sketch shows how this farm can be divided up into several fields, each of which is to be farmed as a unit and eventually fenced and connected by a lane with the farmstead for residences, gardens, etc. This looks like a great deal of fencing. But the building of most of it can be deferred for some years, and by occasionally moving fences half the amount represented by the fence lines can be made to answer quite well. It will be observed that there are three diverse fields, three of ten 10 acres; and one of six acres, and that all these are reached from the farmstead by a lane requiring only about 140 rods of extra fence—one side of the lane. Often each 40 acres will be in a single kind of crop, and may be bounded as one field. At other times each 20-acre field will be in a diamed crop, and some years it will be desirable to plant on portions of each field two or more similar crops, as barley and oats. It is important that each field be handled systematically, and drawings can easily be made yearly, in which may be written a history showing the kind of crop grown and its yield; also the manure applied and other useful records. A separate drawing or sketch for each year, to which the manured areas are shown I have found a convenient form for the record of manuring. One of these drawings made, say eight inches in diameter for each year, will give a useful farm history in faure years. The following six-course rotation would work well on the six twenty-acre fields, giving grain on half the land.

First year, wheat.

Second and third years, timothy and clover.

Fourth year, wheat, flax, oats or barley.

Fifth year, wheat, flax, oats or barley.

Sixth year, corn, potatoes, etc.

A few years will be required to introduce sysoem in the fields so that each will have its proper crop in the rotation, and an occasional bad year might disturn the course of cropping.

Fig. 3. Yearly "farm drawing" showing the rotation crops grown in 1902.

The six 20-acre fields are named A to F inclusive, the three ten-acre fields are named G, H and I and the six-acre field is named K.

If a similar drawing were made of the farm as planted in 1903, the second year of the rotation, each field would be shown a year further along in the rotation. To manage the planning and the making of drawings, one has a problem somewhat like the learning to play checkers, and it is very useful for two to work together, or at least for the owner to submit his plans to someone else, who will revise and improve the plans. Making the drawings over until they are satisfactory is a very useful exercise in working out a practical plan of handling the farm, and the perfected drawings and notes should be preserved as a record to use in planning the crops.

A good rotation for the three ten acre fields is as follows:

First year, wheat.

Second year, annual pasture.

Third year, flax.

These six acre field, seed grain for the next year's seed might be grown on three acres, and on the other three acres roots, potatoes, etc., thus interrupting the seed grain crops with the cultivated crops. As the years go by the grain crops might be reduced from three to two years and six of the larger fields, in which case the grass might lay a third year. In case the year was moist and the rainfall sufficient, so that the twenty acre pasture field does not give quite supplied the stock with pasturage, all or part of the unmown pasture grass grown on one of the three ten acre fields may be cured for hay.

Another "farm drawing" should be made at the beginning of each year on which is laid out the proposed plan of cropping, manuring, etc. The plan drawn at the end of the year should also be made something as follows:

Fig. 4. Records of yields, etc., on "farm history," plan made at the end of the year.

These figures are not given as averages, but to show the method of planning for two or more years.

The four Minnesota stations and the Dakota station have over 200 plots devoted to variation experimenting, or soon to be devoted to that purpose, and in a few years the data from these will begin to give more light upon the best means of rotating our crops. But now, while farms are being laid out and plans made for the future, the fields should be arranged so as to make rotation and stock raising easy. Rotation and stock will increase your yields, will enrich rather than impoverish your fields; and we will make more money, and have more pride in our farms and our work, and we will leave to our children better land and a business worked out on a better business basis.

WILLET M. HAYS,
Prof. of Agriculture, State Agr. School.

—The best toned instruments made. The Farstone Mandolins and Guitars. C. R. Stone, maker. Sold by Stone's Mammoth Music House, Fargo, N. D.

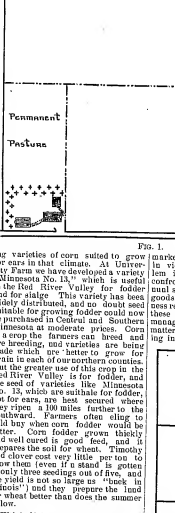

FIG. 1.

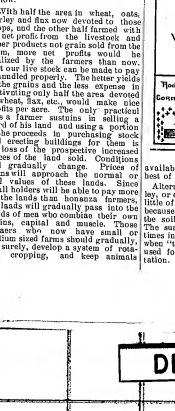

FIG 3.

available sources, settle them to the best of his ability.

Alternating wheat with oats or barley, or even with flax, bas in it very little of the effect of true rotation, because none of these crops prepare the soil especially for the others. The summer fallow is useful sometimes in a series of droughty years, when "two years' rainfall must be used for one crop "but it is not rotation. A serious mistake made on stead that any rotation pastures, "annual pastures," or "chiffs pastures" grown on it may be advantageously fed off by live stock.

Fig. 2. Six fields of 20 acres each; three fields of 10 acres each; one field of six acres.

Field K might properly be brought under the farmstead by planting belts of trees on its west and north sides. This area could then housed for stock, barns and yards, and the present farmstead be reserved for residences, gardens, etc.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.

Much Interest in Experiments Being Taken by Minnesota Farmers.

This is an age of science and no business whatever, most of all farming, can be successfully conducted save on scientific principles. Now, while the individual farmer may conduct some experiments these must be on a very limited scale as his time for such work is limited. He must, therefore, depend to a large extent upon the experiments made at the State Agricultural School and sub-stations, the results of which are published in bulletins and distributed gratuitously to the citizens of this state who apply for them. The professors and experimenters at these farm schools are men of scholarly attainments and they are making a life's study of agriculture. They have all, or at least many, of the aids to experiments, they know how to experiment and what to experiment upon, hence the results of their scientific investigations cannot but greatly aid the farmers, every one of whom ought to have a copy of every bulletin published by the agricultural school.

Col. Wm. M. Liggett, director of the station at St. Anthony Park, in his annual report to the board of regents of the State University, says:

"The record of this year of the experiment station closes with more satisfactory results than any that have preceded, and the outlook for the future is more encouraging each year. We find the interest taken by the Minnesota farmers as well as the business men of the towns and cities of the state, increasing, which is not only encouraging to the station workers that their efforts are appreciated, but is a stimulus to do even better work. Five bulletins have been published during the year, 30,000 copies of each issue, excepting bulletin 61, making 230,000 pages of the results of the investigations made by the station staff.

To give a specific illustration of what is being done at the agricultural school, another quotation is made from Mr. Liggett's report:

"During the past six years a most complete and comprehensive record has been kept of all feeding operations, showing the amount and kind of food given to each animal each day, the chemical composition of the same, the amount and kind of product returned, and the cost of production. This data will be exceedingly valuable to farmers in showing the cost of dairy products and growing young animals on the farm. By the close of another year sufficient data will have been obtained to publish a bulletin showing the cost of rearing dairy calves from time of birth to period of profit. The results obtained are based upon experiments conducted with over 100 cattle. The experiment to ascertain the amount and kind of nutritive substances available for dairy cows in corn, sorghum and various other forage plants at different stages of growth and different times studied before planning is still in progress, and the result of bulletin on this work will be ready for publication, it is hoped, before planning operations begin again next spring. The work has required much time, since it necessitates a large number of digestion experiments. It is believed, however, that the result will be of great value in showing by actual demonstration the comparative feeding value per acre and ton, of these food stuffs.

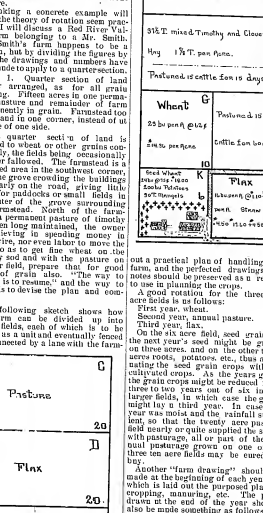

FIG. 4.

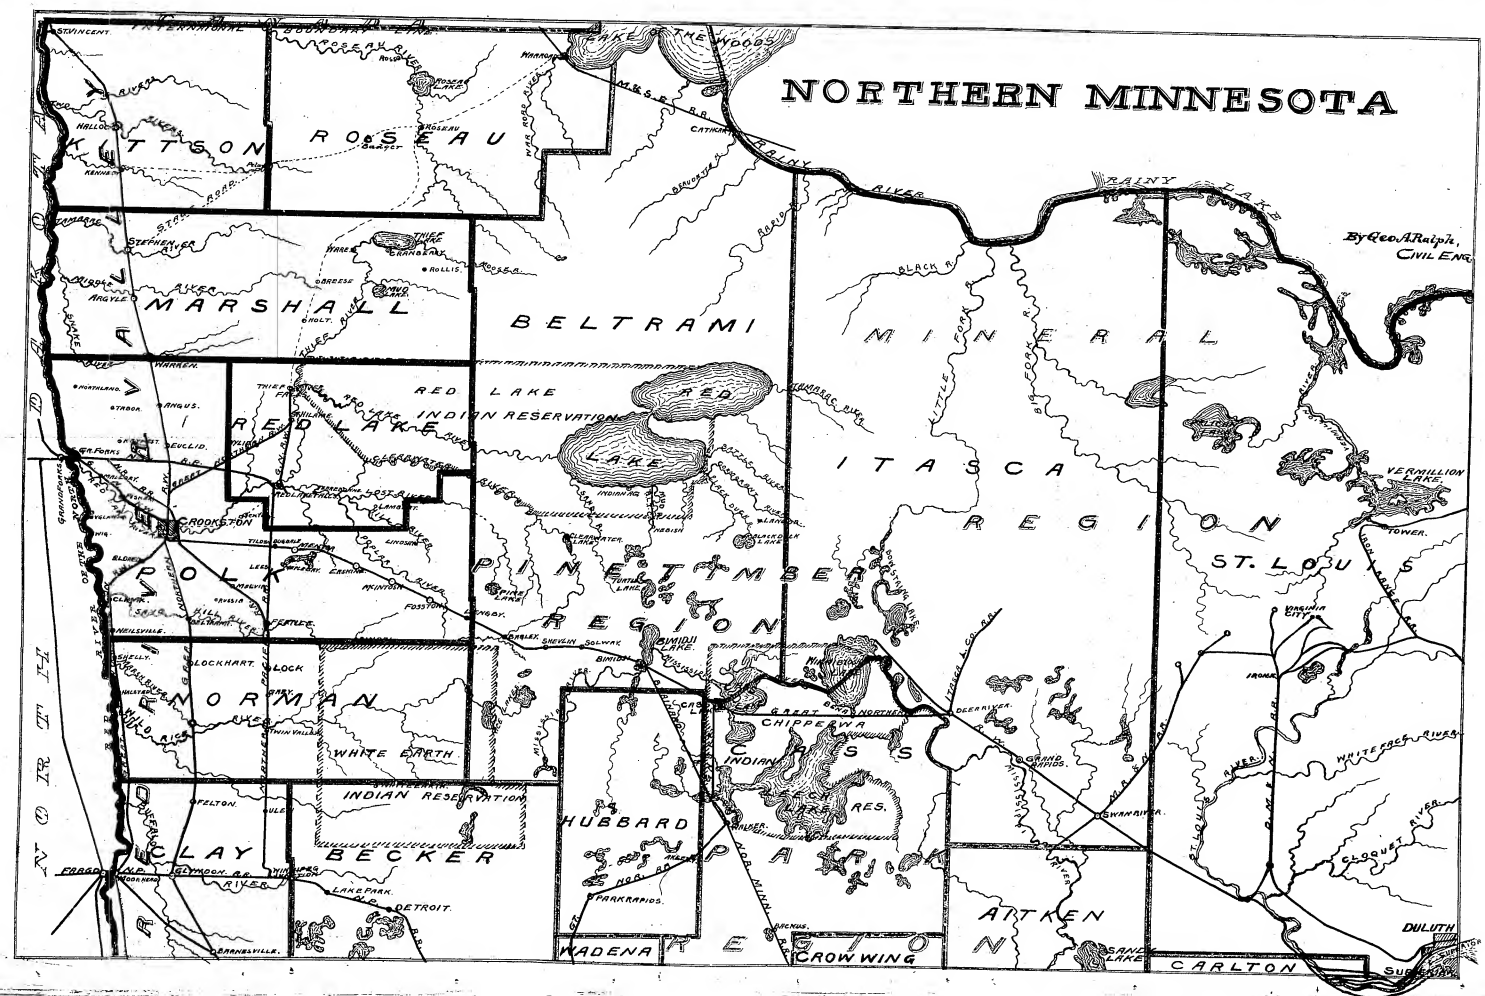
Many of our stock growers are doubtless being fed simply because of custom, regardless of their money value in supplying the particular nutrient required for animal production, knowledge of which would avoid the waste consequent upon giving an animal more of a certain kind of nutrient than it has use for."

John Carlson.

John Carlson, is one of the old timers in Fosston, having lived here for such a number of years as to entitle him to a membership in the old settlers' society. During his residence here he has always been actively engaged in business, and has been very successful. He has not been partial to any particular line but never has let an opportunity pass if he thought he saw a chance to better his financial condition. He is now giving his attention to a flourishing grocery business on the corner of Main and Fisher streets. He is a good business man and of untiring energy and when he undertakes anything gives it his undivided attention, and pushes it ahead to success. His stock includes a full line of staple and fancy groceries, provisions, etc., in fact everything usually found in a first class establishment of this kind. He gives his personal attention to the details of his business, and his store is always the scene of busy activity, and his delivery wagon is a familiar object in all parts of the city.

—If you contemplate purchasing a piano, organ, or any other musical instrument, write Stone's Music House Fargo, N. D., for prices before buying. tf

DEFECTIVE PAGE



DEFECTIVE PAGE

COLORED INK

Polk County Journal.

Historical Society

VOL. XXIII CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1899 No. 38

FORFEITED LAND SALE

New Law Provides for Sale of Lands Forfeited to State Prior to 1896.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE VERY BUSY

Preparing Descriptions of Land that Will Be Sold at Auction May 7, 1900.

County Auditor Gleason and an unusually large force of clerks have been at work for some time preparing to carry out the provisions of a law passed at the last state legislature. The law provides that "at the time of making the list of delinquent taxes for the year 1898, the auditor of each county shall make out and append to such delinquent list a list of all taxes upon real estate in the county which appear to have become delinquent in 1897, or any prior year or years and have not been satisfied by payment, redemption, or sale of the real estate to actual purchasers." The law contemplates a clearing up of the records, and as the list ordered to be prepared must contain a description of each piece or parcel of land it will be seen that much work is required, particularly when it is considered that from 8,000 to 9,000 descriptions will have to be made by Polk county officials. Two-thirds of the land in Red Lake county which before 1896 was a part of Polk county. Indeed close to 3,000 of these descriptions are town lots in Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls.

Every May real property upon which the taxes have not been paid for two years is put up at auction and what is not bought is supposed to be bought in by the state but in reality the taxes still remain as part of the records. Next May there will be the usual delinquent tax sale and in addition the sale of all land forfeited to the state before and inclusive of 1896. At least 60 days prior to the sale the county auditor shall make out and mail to each person named as owner in such forfeited list, a notice of such tax sale, giving the description of his land, the amount for which the same is liable to be sold, the date of sale and that the sale will be final and absolute.

In making up the list all penalties and costs of former sales will be disregarded, the amount of the original tax, yearly, will be taken and to that amount will be added interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum from the date when the tax of each year became delinquent, to the first day of the sale, May 7, 1900. Parties wishing to redeem under this act may do so only after the list is prepared in January, and by paying ten per cent per annum upon the original tax from date when it became delinquent to date of redemption, and the costs incurred under this sale.

In an opinion on the law the attorney general of the state says: "If judgment has been entered against any piece of land for taxes, but the land has for some reason neither been sold to actual purchasers nor struck off to the state, and if that judgment is ten years old, or older, it is outlawed and the land against which for ten years it stood as a lien cannot be sold in this forfeiture sale for taxes which entered into and formed the basis of such outlawed judgment."

High School Notes.

Alice LaDue is spending her vacation at her home at Fertile.

Grace and Emma Cronkhite left Friday morning for their home near Argyle to spend their vacation.

The school elected their music committee for January, last Thursday. Ralph Childs will act as chairman the coming month.

The high school has a male quartette now, composed of Louis Burg, Albert Johnson, Frank Davies and Amur Matteson.

The city schools all closed on Friday last for the Christmas vacation. A large number of the teachers living outside of the city left for their respective homes Friday evening. The others left Saturday morning.

With the departure pf Miss Trixie Pitkin the "Sophs" lose one of their favorite members. She left last Friday night for her future home at Mankato. Mr. Newberry will spend part of his vacation at Chicago, Illinois.

The Senior class held a meeting last week, at which they elected the following officers: Ralph Childs, president; Julia Lewis, vice-president; Annis Miller, secretary. The class colors are crimson and white, the flowers red and white carnations. Class motto, "Vincit qui se Vincit."

Notes From Exchanges

Alexandria Post News: When that Minneapolis preacher prayed that our soldiers might not have success but might be brought home safe, he proved himself a worthy anti. It is a brilliant example of their logic. When to armies are fighting, the one that does not succeed is usually brought home "safe."

Warren Register: Chief Inspector Reishus is of the opinion that any man with horse sense will make a good grain inspector in a couple of months and that experts are not needed. This is a left-handed way of saying that he himself has mastered all the details and overcome all the difficulties incident to the management of his department in a few short weeks.

Owatonna Journal: An attempt was made at the Dairymen's convention at LeSueur by Major Bowller and the officials of the Food and Dairy Commission to make this association an adjunct of the populist party by electing as its officials well known political henchmen. Fortunately for the usefulness of the organization their efforts were unavailing and the political dairymen were quite emphatically turned down. The major purpose to have their association transformed into the political machine he hoped to make it.

Concert in Opera House.

The young ladies of St. Mary's church will give an entertainment in the opera house tomorrow evening. The program will consist of readings, songs, a Japanese drill by a company of young ladies, etc., etc. Miss Tillie Portier, who has been studying for a year in Chicago will make her first appearance, since her return, at this time.

BOERS STILL GOOD SHOTS.

Timely Information About the Afrikanders and Their Country.

W. H. Forbes-Townsend of Liverpool, who is traveling with Mr. Keith, from his own accounts seems to be the English globe trotter of whom so much has been written, for, judging from his talk, he has been in all countries. He spoke most interestingly of the Transvaal recently to a New York Tribune reporter, saying: "I spent eight months there just prior to Jameson's unfortunate raid and became thoroughly familiar with the country and its inhabitants. Although I cannot say I ever became intimate with any of them, as the Boers are somewhat of the most unsociable people I have ever seen, I spent a large part of my time there in prospecting, which is a typical mining town, although it has been largely built up and has some very handsome buildings to show.

"The Boers themselves are very dull mentally, unprogressive and phlegmatic. This last, however, tells in their favor, as they do not become in the least excited when under fire. It is a mistake to think that they have lost their ability as shots, for they practice marksmanship continually and are the most expert shots I have ever seen. I myself constantly saw the small Boer boys practicing shooting on the veldt, and some of them couldn't have been over 6 years old.

"I also noticed pronounced tendency up to the Limpopo river, which is the boundary line between the Transvaal and Matabeleland, for the shooting, which is the finest for both bird and beast I have ever had. I got a pretty good idea of the lay of the country, and it has the most perfect natural defenses in the world. On the Natal border the few passes there are so narrow and of such character that ten men can with ease hold themselves against 1,000, and the same is true of all their other frontiers. Then the country, from its nature, affords natural second lines of defense, for it is made up of successive ranges of mountains, with level plains or veldts between, and all the mountains can only be crossed by passes of so difficult a nature as to render it possible for a few men to stand off a large number.

"It is also a mistake to think that the Boers are unable to handle artillery. Young Boers are sent abroad for their education and large numbers of them have studied in the military schools of France, Germany and even England itself. In the past, in such company of Boer soldiery a number of sharpshooters are told off whose sole duty it will be to pick off the officers of the enemy. These companies number about 100 men each. When we were in San Francisco, we met a number of prominent mining men there who have been in the Transvaal and were thoroughly acquainted with the country and the Boers and their characteristics, and while we all knew that in the end Great Britain would undoubtedly conquer, we all agreed that it would nevertheless take her a long time to do it and that the nut she has set herself to crack is likely to prove far more difficult than most people at present realize."

THE FARGO COLLEGE

Sustained a Great Loss in the Death of Pres. Simmons—some of his Personal Characteristics.

ENDOWMENT FUND OF $200,000

Is Being Raised—The College Stands for High Ideals in Education —a Scholarly Faculty.

In the death of President H. C. Simmons, Fargo College and the North West have lost a great man and faithful benefactor. Without his efforts, the college would not have been incorporated when it was, nor would it have been located at Fargo. Mr. Simmons came to Dakota in '83 as superintendent of Congregations' home Missions. After more than ten years of service in that capacity, he was elected president of the college, and for several years served the college and continued in Home Missionary work. For upwards of two years his entire services have been devoted to the college.

President Simmons was a man of great kindliness of heart. In him the young people of Dakota and northern Minnesota had a true friend. He had great faith in them and coveted for them the best education that his age affords. To the college he gave his time, his money and himself. In soliciting money he had a happy way of asking what was reasonable. Often his suggestion was an equitable criterion of a benefactor's ability and privilege.

FARGO COLLEGE.

The prospect of soon realizing the results of his efforts in raising the endowment fund, the growing success of the college, the esteem of the many young people whom his efforts had benefited, as well as the love of a devoted wife and interesting family—all these best things of life seemed within his grasp when, without a moment's warning he is called to the better world. He has left the precious legacy of a devoted christian life.

The Fargo College has developed here in the Red River Valley and like all other growths of this region is coming to be a strong representative of the business energy and culture of this region. It has been in existence about ten years and during that time has had phenomenal growth. The benefactions of Mr. James P. Gould and his sister gave to the college its fine building and from his will nearly $80,000 of endowment has been made possible to the college.

The college like all similar institutions has had to pass through a time of severe financial strain but during the past two years has been able to emerge successfully from this burden of debt. The payment of more than $17,000 of floating indebtedness besides providing for the full payment of $20,000 of bonded indebtedness places the college in a splendid financial position. Efforts are now being made to complete at an early day the first $100,000 of the Pearsons endowment made possible by Dr. D. K. Pearsons, of Chicago giving $50,000 toward a $200,000 endowment the college being obliged to raise $150,000 to fulfill Dr. Pearsons acceptance. He gives $20,000 when $75,000 are raised. With $40,000 on hand in real estate, which Dr. Pearsons accepts, and the raising the $10,000 which is now going on and more than half completed, the college expects to be able to secure before the end of January the remaining $30,000 thus securing the first $100,000 of endowment. This will place the college upon a living basis so that givers in the future will not run any risk of having their benefactions lost by the financial failure of the institution.

Already as an educational institution Fargo College has attained a worthy place among the institutions of this valley. Its faculty are trained experts in their work, all of them having had postgraduate work, three of them in European Universities, and every one a successful teacher. The students are an especially choice company from the homes of the Red River Valley. Quite a percentage are from families of foreign extraction but prove to be among the very best students in the institution.

The college is doing a splendid work for the upbuilding of a christian civilization in this northwest. It stands for high ideals in education and recognizes that a sound christian character is the highest ideal in citizenship. Such an institution growing up in the Red River Valley deserves and will get the sympathy and help of our business men. The late President Simmons spent Sunday, December 10, in Crookston speaking in the Congregational church in the morning and the Presbyterian church in the evening. He also secured some excellent subscriptions to the endowment and at Ada secured other subscriptions which will aggregate from $1,000 to $1,200. Two of our townsmen, Herman P. Fisher and A. A. Miller, Esq., are on the board of trustees.

The next college commencement in June, if the college is able to secure the endowment for which it is working, will be memorable not only in the history of the college but will complete the endowment of an institution of which this region has just reason to be proud. The officers and trustees of the college deserves to receive, from what has already been accomplished the hearty co-operation and help of all the citizens of the Red River Valley. Such an institution should be placed upon a permanent foundation and when that foundation is secured it will be in a position for rapid growth. Such has been the history of other institutions of this kind and such we believe will be the history of Fargo College.

Dame Rumor Says.

That some men are like liquids—the lightest come to the top.

That the eastern sky these mornings is robed in purple and azure.

That it is always safe to watch the man who blatantly shouts "stop thief."

That if the people engaged more in out-door sports during the winter their health would be better.

That Crookston is large enough and rich enough to support a public library which is greatly needed here.

That Bemidji has been talked about all over the country because that lively town sent a bear named "Billy" to Admiral Dewey.

That Alderman Childs suffered a severe fall at the council meeting Tuesday—he fell from the good graces of Alderman O'Brien.

That the county commissioners would be a lasting good to Polk county if they made provision for the erection of a new court house.

That Captain Van Santwil not long be, as he is now, the only openly avowed candidate for the republican nomination for governor.

Annual Church Meeting.

The Congregationalists held their annual reunion business meeting Wednesday evening. Encouraging reports of the work of last year were given, and officers were elected for next year. The ladies served refreshments and planned for a pleasant social entertainment during the closing hour of the evening.

The following are among the officers elected to serve next year: Trustees, A. A. Miller, Esq., Franklin Bivins, Fred Hall, Nathan P. Stone and Jas. Cadwell; deaconesses, Mrs. Ada L. Stone and Mrs. Sarah VanArman; clerk and superintendent, William L. Vannet; treasurer, W. E. Slocum.

The Ladies' Aid Society met on Thursday for election of officers and making general plans of work for this year.

PAVING CONSIDERED

Again and Three Aldermen Appointed to Assist City Attorney with Contract.

ENORMOUS TRAFFIC ON LAKES.

Flour, Wheat, Lumber, Iron Ore, Coal and other Commodities Sent Through "Soo".

At the meeting of the city council last Thursday evening, aside from the appointment of G. W. Banks as alderman from the fifth ward to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. McGregor's change of residence to Jerome's addition, and the naming of a committee to look after the matter of remedying the defects of the fire hall, the question of paving was the absorbing subject of discussion.

The motion to place the city under the 1895 law, which motion was laid on the table at a previous meeting, was taken from the table and passed. A resolution, offered by Alderman Childs and calling for the appointment by the president of a committee of three to cooperative with the city engineer in drawing the paving contract between J. H. Kilmar and the city, was passed and Alderman Childs, Davis and Brown were appointed. Alderman Childs offered another resolution providing that it is the sense of this council that the time for the completion of the paving contract between the city and J. H. Kilmar should be extended to include the summer season of 1901, to the end that all needful sewer, water and heating conuections may be made and new and strong water pipes laid during the season of 1900 in the district to be paved. The resolution was passed.

A motion to re-cind all former action of the council anent paving was laid on the table.

FREIGHT THROUGH THE SOO

Increased 15 Per Cent This Year—50,000 Passengers.

Figures for the Sault ship canal, through which passes the traffic of the Lake Superior region, have been computed to the close of November, leaving only about 250,000 tons to finish the greatest year ever known. To December the total tonnage of the canal was 24,630,553 tons of freight, which is to be compared with a total for the entire year of 1898 of 21,400,000 tons less. This is an increase of 15 per cent. The increase of 1898 was 12 per cent.

Food enough to keep a nation from starvation was carried to the east and to Europe throughthis canal this year, amounting to 54,270 bushels of wheat, 27,680,000 bushels of other grains and 6,804,000 barrels of flour. Of this flour about 35 per cent was for direct exports, and nearly as great a proportion of the wheat.

The great bulk of the lake commerce of the year has been iron ore, which has so far amounted to 13,420,000 gross tons, an increase from 10,000,000 tons last year. There will be a further increase of 200,000 tons in December.

Vast shipments of lumber have been made, in all 1,032,000,000 feet, for the markets of New York and New England. Coal to the extent of 824,381 tons of anthracite and 3,000,000 of bituminous have been received. This is an increase of almost 300,000 tons. In hard coal, despite which there has been a fear of famine the coming winter, which only the unprecedented weather of the past few weeks has dispelled. That this 60 per cent increase in coal receipts should not avail for the expected consumption for the winter is an eloquent indication of the improvement in the West and the increased buying power of the people, though a dear shortage in the spring is responsible for part of the advance.

Another proof of the same sort is found in the figures of passengers carried up and down the lakes, which have increased to almost 50,000 in number, a 20 per cent improvement.

Next year's total will come very near to 30,000,000 tons and may exceed that extraordinary figure. There will be ships in commission to carry from Lake Superior such a tonnage, and they will all be busy. Which to these figures are added those of the commerce passing to and from Chicago and other Lake Michigan ports, and from Lake Huron, the business of the great lakes can be slightly understood.

Births.

MILLER.

To Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Miller on Christmas night, a girl.

Literary Notes.

POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY FOR JANUARY.

In order to adapt it more closely to the wants of the general public, and to make it more than ever before the medium of readable and trustworthy information on scientific subjects, the publishers of Appleton's Popular Science Monthly announce that with the January number several marked changes in the magazine which will commend themselves to all classes of readers.

In the first place, the price is lowered to twenty-five cents. In the next place, the topics discussed are to be given a broader range and a third feature of the new departure will be the employment of distinguished specialists as writers on their respective subjects, who are able to present their ideas in a form suited to the general reader, and whose names give what they have to say the stamp of accuracy and authority.

These and some minor changes of form are introduced in the present number. To mention but a few of the articles, Sir Robert Ball, President of the Royal Astronomical Society, writes of the Advance of Astronomy in the Nineteenth Century; Prof. Charles E. Munro treats of the Applications of Explosives, which in a variety of forms are now doing their deadly work in war; a Pseudoxical Anarchist is described and studied by Cesare Lombroso, the eminent Italian criminologist; What Makes the Trolley Car Go is explained and illustrated by William E. Baxter, C. E.; and there is also a timely article on the Destructive Effects of Vagrant Electricity, by Hubert S. Wyckoop, electrician to the Department of Municipal Lighting in Brooklyn. President Jordan, of Stanford University, Miss Mary M. Patrick, President of the Woman's College in Constantinople, and Herbert Spencer, also have articles in the number.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

All the Boers, of both republics—men, women and children combined—hardly begin to equal in number the population of the obscure suburban town of West Ham, near London. Yet the very same London papers which a few days ago thought the Boers could not and would not fight, and that a few British regiments could go to Pretoria without firing a shot, had now gone to the opposite extreme of regarding the Boer armies as the most formidable ones known in the history of warfare, and were begging their readers to consider that the British empire was engaged in a life-and-death struggle. This has not merely invited the contempt of the world, while it also provoked the freer expression of enthusiastic admiration for the magnificent stand of the Dutch farmers against such overwhelming odds. A race that can show such qualities as the Boers have exhibited in the last three months ought not to be exterminated. Its hardy stock is needed in the work of developing the Dark Continent. We all know well that the English in the course of a few more weeks or months can hammer and blunder their way through to Pretoria, for the simple reason that they have money, ships, and guns without limit. They can, if need be, transport a million fighting men to Natal and Cape Colony, while the whole Boer nation is already in the field, so far as the two republics are concerned, and the prospect of assistance from any outside quarter is too remote to be seriously considered. The war against the American colonies was a shameful thing for England, and about the only Englishmen who have come out of it decently on the page of history are the Chathams, Foxes and Burkes, who saw the truth and spoke it with courage. England lost in that war, and the Sergoynes, Howes and Cornwallises won no glory for themselves or their country. England will win in the present war, but it will be Commander-in-Chief Kitchener, Cronje, and the other Boer leaders who will come out with military renown, rather than the Bullers, Methuens, Gatacres, or Whites. And there are Boer statesmen, too—from "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for January.

THE FORUM.

Among the thirteen strong articles in the January Forum are found the following: "The Tariff a Live Issue," by Congressman Charles N. Fowler; "German Art of Today," by Ford Arenpiuer; "New Crimes and New Penalties," by Hon. Samuel J. Barrows, United States Commissioner of the International Prison Commission; "A Living Profit and A Living Wage," by Edward J. Smith: "Some Defects of the Kindergarten in America," by G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark University; "Does Colonization Pay?" by O. P. Austin, Chief of the U. S. Bureau of Statistics, and "Wagner's Personality," by Gustav Kobbe.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

TOUGH M'CARTY.

BY CHARLES BATTELL LOOMIS.

COPYRIGHT, 1899, BY C. B. LOOMIS

I hesitate about telling the following incident because I should have considered it unworthy of credence if I had not been an observer of it myself. I don't pretend to explain it. I am not a student of psychology. It simply happened, and I am willing to run the risk of being called a spinner of yarns because I don't think that it can be matched outside of the realm of pure fiction. There is no attempt at composition in my narrative. Events in our lives seldom afford good specimens of composition; the trivial will take the center of the stage to the exclusion of the tragic.

I have given all of the characters fictitious names. In other respects I have set down the things as they occurred.

One cold, stormy evening in the early part of the winter I was on my way to the studio of Fred Blankley, the marine painter. He had invited me and several other men and women to meet a famous French pianist. I was a little late, and when I drew near to the house, which stands in a quiet street, I heard the sound of the piano. I walked up the steps, and a man followed me from the other side of the street. He was about 30, poorly clad and shivering with the cold. There was something of refinement in the cast of his face, but when he spoke his language was strongly tinctured with toughness.

"HE MUTTERED, 'GRACE IS DEAD, DEAD!'"

"Say, boss, if you're go'n inside, I wish you'd take me wit' you. It's blamed col' out here, an' I kin amuse de gues' from de wold go."

It was a cheeky request, but I knew my host well and felt sure that at least the fellow would receive warmth and some supper; so I took him in. The elevator man looked askance at him, but I explained that he was with me and that it was all right.

"How can you amuse us?"

"Song, dance, tricks, imertations, anything at all," he said.

I held a hasty conference with Blankley, and he said: "Why, of course. Give the clown a chance to show what he can do. But first I'll have Sam give him something hot. He looks purple with the cold."

A few minutes later the ragged fellow, for whom McCarty will be a good name, walked into the room where the guests, some 20 in number, were seated. He went up to the great pianist, who was sitting on the piano stool, and said: "Say! I'll have t' ask youse t' gi' me a lift on a coon song. I'll gi' you de nit as I guess you kin t'rump it out all right if you're de same blokie I heerd before I kem in."

Fancy asking a man whose terms at a recital affair are $500 an evening ... "t'rump" an air for you! But the big man, with the simplicity of a true artist, smiled and said, "Wis plaisir," and after he had heard the air once he played it with such harmonies as its composer had not been able to give it.

McCarty was not clever; he was a genius. The coon song was sung with such character and tunefulness and the dialect was so perfect that when he had finished every one was asking every one else who this man was. The act of "emmindercle" on the part of—I had almost said the Parisian's name—also served to mellow the whole company, so that they were in just the mood for the remarkable exhibition that followed.

The ragged fellow with the refined face and the unutterably tough accent paused three pregnant seconds, for at least three-quarters of an hour with a programme as varied as if it had been interpreted by half a dozen clever people. His imitation of Ditzy Imitating Irving was followed by his own imitation of Irving, and the latter was the tragedian himself.

"Say, mister, if youse'll gi' me de drums on de bass notes till I gi' you a sign an den break into any ole march I'll give a inertation of an ole darky in Louisville de day of de parade. Like dis—dum-cum-dum, dum, dum."

P. the eminent pianist, beat the drum on "de bass notes," while McCarty impersonated an old darky who comes to Louisville to spend the day, and, on hearing a band of music approaching, is rejuvenated, and from being a decrepit, rheumatic old man leaning on his cane becomes a jaunty drum major, as he had been in his youth. But no drum major in New York ever twirled his baton with the abandon and precision of this one. It was virtuosity. A big mirror stood directly in front of McCarty, and fragile ornaments were upon every side, but no one felt alarmed for their integrity. He inspired confidence. Those mobile fingers were magnets that would not lose their potency over the heavy cane, and when at last the band passed out of hearing and McCarty dropped into a chair P. the Parisian, left his stool and shook hands with him, laughing heartily the while, and the audience broke into salvos of applause for both.

In the simulation of a quarrel between a Corkonian and a darky, where the epithets fell like rain and the interruptions were constant and spasmodic, he preserved each dialect in a marvelous manner. His neatness of utterance reminded me of Henry Kellett, but it was strongly individual. Who was this fellow who had the mimetic ability of a Nat Goodwin and a Mansfield combined and yet who seemed to be and undoubtedly was an ignorant outcast?

His imitation of Paderewski was startling. Although he could not play at all, he had devised a plan of movement for his fingers that produced a tuneless, horrible cacophonic form and which compassed the whole keyboard, and the toss of his head and shoulders and the action of his back and arms were to the life.

Among the invited guests who up to this point had not come was Mrs. Melville, the most talented landscape paiut er on the Pacific coast. Hers had been a romantic story, and doubtless it will be remembered by those interested in artists. Happily married, she was one day shocked almost into insanity by the sudden disappearance of her husband, genial Harry Melville. He was a stockbroker, with no artistic gifts except a somewhat unusual talent for impersonation. He was wound up in his wife and her work, and no reason could be imagined for his disappearance. She had barely kept up her painting, but she was a changed woman. Five years had passed away, and she had come east to spend the winter with her brother.

McCarty was giving an imitation of May Irwin singing "Ah Want Yer, Mah Honey," when the door opened, and Mrs. Melville entered accompanied by her brother.

As soon as her eyes fell on McCarty she uttered a shriek and said, "Harry!"

McCarty looked at her casually, then anxiously. Then he stopped singing and put his hand to his eyes and rubbed them. He seemed struggling to recollect something.

"Harry, don't you know me? It's Grace," said Mrs. Melville, going up to him and taking both hands in hers.

The guests looked amazed, as well they might, for Mrs. Melville was queenly looking and dressed with admirable taste, and the contrast between her and the emaciated tramp was striking.

It was pitiable to watch McCarty now. Tears were streaming down his cheeks, and he muttered, half to himself, "Grace is dead, dead!" But he clutched the hand of this woman who was talking so kindly to him as if he were loath to part with her. Suddenly he sobbed out: "You are Grace! You are my wife! Take me home! I have been out a long time! It was bitter cold, and you were dead!"

* * * * *

It was Harry Melville. Most of his life from the time he left San Francisco until the tones of his wife's voice at first strange, chance meeting recalled him to himself will always remain a sealed book. He had evidently succeeded all over the country and had obtained a scanty subsistence by the exercise of that mimetic which his mental trouble had not weakened, but had intensified. It is easy to explain his gradual lapse into a tough manner of speech, and but for my fortunate meeting of him that stormy night he would probably have lived and died as McCarty.

As the weeks went on his memory of his early life strengthened and that of his nomadic life faded. Those who had known him in San Francisco say that he is the same Harry Melville as of old, save for a pedantic precision of speech and a dislike for mimicry.

When I told this to the black bearded French pianist the other day, he whimsically expressed himself as being intensely disappointed at the outcome of the affair. As he said, Mrs. Melville had become accustomed to the loss of her husband, but the world had not so many artists that it could afford to lose one so preternaturally gifted as McCarty.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville gave a little supper at her studio only last month, and she had some very entertaining people there, but never a man among them with a tithe of the talent of "Tough McCarty."

Rings Always the Same.

Although many jewelers advertise "some thing new in rings," the fact remains that they are but slight variations of the style in vogue at the time. Moses piloted the children of Israel out of the bondage of Egypt. Rings are alluded to in the Bible, in the books of Genesis and Exodus. They have been found among the relics of prehistoric races, the stone age, the bronze age and the age of the mound builders. Herodotus mentions that the Babylonians wore them, and from Asia they probably were introduced into Greece.

The rings worn in early times were not purely ornamental, but had their significance as signet rings. A king's messenger delivering a message and exhibiting the king's signet as authority was obeyed implicitly. The Romans had a marriage ring of iron with a jewel of adamant, signifying eternity and constancy. History mentions a magic ring possessed by King Solomon of which the Jews and Mohammedans have abundant traditions. It was by means of this ring as a talisman of wisdom and power that Solomon was enabled to perform those wonderful acts and accomplish those vast enterprises that have made his name so celebrated as the wisest monarch of the earth. The later Romans wore a profusion of rings, and the more effeminate had rings for summer and winter.—Chicago Chronicle.

MILK IN AUTUMN.

Cow of Cows, Which Tends to Keep Up the Supply.

At this season of the year it is too cool for cows to be out in open pasture at night and not cold enough perhaps to warrant housing them in the warmer stable, writes George E. Newell. An intermediary place should be provided that will afford sufficient shelter to keep the milk cattle from getting chilled.

A shed tightly boarded and open on the least exposed side will answer this purpose admirably and add many more pounds of milk to the full yield of cows. It is best situated near the exit gate of the pasture, so that the cattle may be readily found and driven up in the morning.

Such a shed need not be erected for the purpose alone of protecting cows on cool autumn nights, for it will serve as a winter against cold rains and hot sun alike. In my opinion, no pasture should be without one.

By leaving it open on one side and of sufficient capacity to constitute house all the milk stock on floor or can be provided. The ground under it should be elevated and well drained, however, and kept covered with dry litter for comfortable bedding.

Where, on the majority of dairy farms, cows receive no shelter at all in autumn until they go into the winter stable at "freezing up time" this will keep them from suffering and from physical and lacteal decadence.

To get them accustomed to the new shelter drive them into it at dusk a few times, and they will find it themselves thereafter. A few salt boxes attached to the wall will also bait them to the place more surely.

One has got to be but half way observant to notice how rapidly cows that are not sheltered shrink in milk yield following cold nights. It has seemed strange to the writer many times that this fact was not more generally appreciated and remedied by dairymen at large.

I can only explain it by the hypothesis that most dairymen consider the fall shrinkage of milk inevitable, which, I contend, is a mistake, at least to the extent now prevailing.

Besides attending to the bodily comfort of cows as cool weather advances, their food supply should be kept at its maximum instead of allowing the vagaries of the season to regulate it.

At no season of the year is milk more profitable for butter and cheese making than during the autumn months, but a limited yield means only a limited amount of profit.

A Pastor's Idea.

When asked, "What's a layman?" a pastor replied, "One who lays things upon his pastor which he himself ought to do."—Richmond Religious Herald.

Dizziness

Is a very common consequence of indigestion and torpid liver. Sometimes there are spots before the eyes and hot flashes. At other times a sensation as of vertigo occurs, at once suffocating and blinding. It is a waste of time to attempt to cure this condition by ordinary means or medicines. The stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition must be restored to healthy activity, the blood must be purified, the liver cleansed and strengthened, before a cure can be hoped for. This is the work done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a medicine specially beneficial in diseases of the stomach, blood and liver. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, cleanses the clogged liver, and promotes the health of every organ of the body.

"I was very much troubled with indigestion, torpid liver and dizziness, and also irregular periods," writes Mr. W. A. Ayer, of Shiloh, Cumberland Co., Miss. "I tried many different remedies, but none of them gave perfect relief until we were induced by a lady to try your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines did more good than all the doctors ever tried for these complaints. We have used several bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' one bottle of 'Favorite Prescription,' and two vials of your 'Pellets.' These medicines have done the work we desired, and I do heartily recommend them to all afflicted sufferers."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of the "Discovery."

Burlington Route

Finest Trrin on Earth

—FROM—

ST. PAUL

—AND—

Minneapolis

—TO—

CHICAGO

Electric Lighted and Steam Heated

Eureka Harness Oil is the best preservative of new leather and the best renovator of old leather. It oils, softens, toughens and preserves. Sold by dealers in oils.

Eureka Harness Oil

on your best harness, your old harness, and your carriage, and they will not only look better but wear longer. Nothing gives such a nice gloss to buggy tops or live coltons. Sold by dealers in oils.

Anderson Block, Robert Street

Saw Mill Machinery For Sale Cheap.

One 3-Saw Lath Bolter,
One 3-Saw Lath Mill,

The above machines are in good repair and capable of making 40,000 lath in ten hours.

On Perkins Hand Shingle Machine

With drop tilt attachment—in good repair.

A complete outfit of Saws and Collars goes with above machinery.

Write for Prices.

CROOKSTON LUMBER CO.,
Crookston, Minn

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Subscribe Now

And get the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL from now till January 1st, 1901, for $1 50.

This offer includes the handsome Christmas Editions for the two years. The JOURNAL is the best paper in this Congressional district and is improving with each issue.

THE JOURNAL
CROOKSTON, MINN.

TO PROSPECTIVE

INVESTORS

In New Buildings

When laying out plans for New Buildings do not neglect to have the architect include electric wiring in his specifications

Call us up

Before letting your Contract. We shall be pleased to give you the benefit of our experience in laying out wiring plans, it will cost you nothing to use us as consulting engineers in that respect.

Should you want us

To figure on your wiring, we are prepared to do so. We do nothing but first-class concealed work, using the very best material to be had in the market. Don't wait to consult us until it is too late.

Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co.

A. G. ANDERSON....

Druggist and Pharmacist.

Prescription a Specialty. Stamps taken in Payment.

Dealer in Drugs, Druggists Sundries, Stationery Paints, Oils and Glass.

CROOKSTON, MINN

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,

OF CROOKSTON, MINN.

GEORGE Q. ERSKINE, President. WM. ANGLIN, Vice-President
J. W. WHEELER, Cashier H. ROBERTSON, Asst. Cashier.

Capital Stock $75,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $25,000

Money to Loan on Farms. Interest paid on Time Deposits.
Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

George B. Erskine, A. A. Miller, Wm. Anglin, J. R. Robinson, E. M. Walsh, L. Postales
J. P. Stone, W. H. Crosby, J. W. Wheeler.

Prompt and Intelligent Attention given to all the Interests of our Customers

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IS MORE DIFFICULT

RISE IN THE TUGELA MAY FUR-THER DELAY THE BRITISH.

Buller Destroys the Colenso Foot Bridge in Order to Keep the Boers at Bay. Graphic Story of the Battle at That Point Told in the Official Report of the Boer Commander.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Up to this hour nothing has arrived from South Africa that would indicate any change in the military situation there. The war offices is issuing lists of further deaths and wounded, as well as accounts of sickness. The most serious report of the last class is that bonce sickness has broken out in both British and Boer camps in Natal.

Four hundred British cavalry horses, it is said, have already been shot owing to the occurrence of glanders. The disease is likely to spread with much greater rapidity among the British horses than among the hardened Boer ponies and this may mean a considerable prolongation of the campaign.

To Keep the Boers at Bay.

A dispatch from Chieveley dated Tuesday, Dec. 19, says:

"The British naval guns have destroyed the Colenso foot bridge, thus preventing the Boers holding any position south of the Tugela river. The enemy are taking fresh positions on the eastern side. The Boer position at Frere is being strengthened. The Tugela river is rising and there is a prospect of heavy rains.

"A 5-hour bombardment of Ladysmith has been heard from here. According to reliable native reports the Boers had 200 killed in the fight at Colenso."

The news that the Colenso foot bridge had been destroyed is taken to show that General Buller is more anxious to keep the enemy at bay than to attempt a further advance.

AS TOLD BY THE BOERS.

Schalkberger's Graphic Account of the Tugela River Battle.

PRETORIA, Sunday, Dec. 24.—Over 600 British prisoners captured at the battle of Stormberg arrived here today. They have been taken to Waterfall to join the other prisoners.

An official account of the Boer casualties at the battle of Tugela river says 30 men were killed or wounded.

General Schalkberger's report of the battle, dispatched from the head laager Dec. 16, says:

"Friday at dawn, the day long expected, arrived. The Pretoria detachment of artillery gave the alarm. General Buller's Ladysmith relief column was in battle array, advancing on the Boer position, close to the Tugela and Colenso. The center consisted of an immense crowd of infantry, flanked on each side by two batteries, with strong bodies of cavalry supporting. The Boer artillery preserved absolute silence, not disclosing its position. Two batteries came within rifle distance of our foremost position, and the Boers then opened fire with fearful effect. Our artillery also commenced and apparently absolutely confused the enemy who were allowed to think the bridge was open for them to cross. Their right flank, in the meantime, attacked the Boers south the most position, but the Mauser rifle fire was so tremendous that they were leaving ridges and ridges of dead and dying humanity behind. Again the British advanced to the attack, but again fell back, swelling the heaps of dead. The cavalry charged to the river, where the Ermole commando delivered such a murderous fire that two batteries of cannon had to be abandoned, which the Boers are going to bring here. Twice the British essayed to bring horses to remove them. The first time they succeeded in hitching onto one cannon and on the second trial the horses and men fell in a heap.

Rolled Back Like a Spent Wave,

"Then the British were in full retreat to their camp, whence they sent a heavy shrapnel fire on Bulwer bridge, across the Tugela, to prevent the burghers from recovering the cannon.

"The French attache, Villebois, and the German attache, Braun, say the fight could not have been improved upon by the armies of Europe.

"Generals Botha and Trichart were always at the most dangerous points of the fighting.

"Such a tremendous cannonade has seldom been heard. The veldt for miles was covered with dead and wounded.

"It was a most crushing British defeat. Nine of the cannon have since been brought across the river.

"The British asked for and were granted a 24 hours armistice.

HELD AS A RESERVE.

Eight Thousand European Troops Now at Pretoria.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The Cape Town correspondent of The Daily News, telegraphing Wednesday, Dec. 20, says:

"Lord Methuen, I understand, intends to remain at Modder River about three weeks longer.

"From Boer sources, hitherto singularly well informed, I learn that there are 8,000 European officers and men skilled in modern military tactics, particularly artillery, now in Pretoria, as a reserve.

"Our administrative official in the Cape service, who has just returned from official relieving duty in the Dutch district, says the news of the British reverses has been received with great joy even in localities where there is no open revolt."

Dual Likely to Result.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—Oscar Wilde, who has for some time been living in Paris, may have to fight a duel. According to The Echo de Paris he became involved in an altercation in a restaurant with M. Richet, the explorer, and as a result cards were exchanged.

HELPS THE SILVER CAUSE.

Senator Dubois Comments on the War in South Africa.

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—"If the war in the Transvaal continues for two or three months longer the cause of silver will have been won," said former United States Senator Dubois of Idaho, one of the Silver Republican leaders.

"The short time it has been in progress," continued Mr. Dubois, "has furnished proof to the contentions of the friends of silver that there is not enough gold in the world to form the basis of the world's money, and if the war continues the length of time I have indicated the truth of this will have become too apparent for successful contravention.

"I believe the Transvaal war will be a mighty influence in the campaign of next year in this country and that the object lesson will convince the people of this country that it is not safe to place our gold beyond the control of the monetary volume of the world.

"It may be interesting to observe that the people in New York are simultaneous with the passage of the house gold standard bill. Now, if a panic had followed the passage of a silver free coinage bill the wise men and the press of the land would have attributed it to the passage of the bill."

THREE LEADING QUESTIONS

Mr. Bryan Has No Intention of Abandoning Any of Them.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 27.—W. J. Bryan's attention was called to a dispatch from Washington stating that he had written Congressman Daly of New Jersey that he would make several speeches in the East, discussing trusts and imperialism, and he was asked as to whether the report indicated an intention of abandoning the silver question. He replied:

"Congressman Daly has probably been misquoted. I expect to make several speeches in the East, but I expect to discuss the money question along with other questions. There are three questions now prominently before the people. The money question, the trust question and the Philippine question. Whenever I make a political speech I discuss all three questions."

TO ENTERTAIN DEMOCRATS

Big Fight on for the National Convention Next Year.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—There promises to be a lively contest between New York, Kansas City, Chicago and St. Louis for the next Democratic national convention. Committees on ways and means have been appointed in the cities mentioned and already the members of the Democratic national committee have been flooded with literature calling attention to the special claims of each. New York has thus far put up the most tempting bid and New Yorkers are confident that enough votes are pledged to give them the convention. Their principal argument, besides their ability and hotel accommodations, is that New York is a pivotal state and that the holding of the national convention there would help the Democratic ticket.

RIGHTS OF STRIKERS.

Ohio Judge Renders an Unusual Decision at Toledo.

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 27.—Judge Morris, in common pleas court, rendered an unusual decision as to the rights of striking workmen. The members of the Bicycle Workers' union struck at the Standard and Forkside works. A temporary injunction was granted restraining strikers from patrolling the works and accosting and intimidating employes who took their places. This injunction Judge Morris dissolved, holding that the strikers had a perfect right to keep pickets about the works and to talk to workmen and urge them to come out.

ABANDONS THE IDEA.

Germany Will Not Try to Acquire the Danish West Indies.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—The German government has abandoned all idea of acquiring the Danish West Indies, either by purchase from Denmark or otherwise. The correspondent of the Associated Press received this information from an authoritative source. The German embassy in Washington has had no doubt that any such attempt would be looked upon by the Americans as an unfriendly act and a serious infringement of the Monroe doctrine.

According to the same authority the reports representing that Denmark is negotiating to sell the Islands to the United States are entirely premature or without foundation.

OPPOSED TO BOUNTIES.

Pingree Wants the Michigan Beet Sugar Bounty Killed.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 27.—It is stated that Governor Pingree will ask the legislature to enact a law at the present special session repealing the beet sugar bounty law of 1897, which promised a bounty of 1 cent per pound for seven years. Attorney General Oren and other lawyers have advised the governor that the law is unconstitutional, but the sugar manufacturers are filing their claims for bounties from month to month and at the close of the season propose to sue for the aggregate amount claimed and thus test the validity of the law. It is estimated that the total bounty claimed this year will not be less than $700,000.

Seven Indians Drowned.

ASHCROFT, B. C., Dec. 27.—Seven Indians, including two women, were drowned a short distance west of this place by the upsetting of a canoe in which they were attempting to cross the Thompson river.

Six Wounded in a Fight.

REIDSVILLE, Ga., Dec. 27.—Four negroes and two white men were wounded in a fight at Collins, near here. The row was precipitated by a group of negroes on the street abusing white people generally.

TO OPEN THE PORTS

BLOCKADE OF NORTHERN LUZON TO BE RAISED.

General Otis Delivers the American Army in Full Control and Is Garrisoning the Principal Towns to That Section—Will Then Turn His Attention to the Southern End of the Island.

MANILA, Dec. 26.—General Young has been appointed military governor of the provinces of Northwestern Luzon, with headquarters at Vigan. His command includes the Lusbec R. Ham and the Third cavalry. He will establish permanent stations at San Fernando and Laoag, with outposts where ever needed.

The Sixteenth infantry will proceed to Aparri, garrisoning such towns as may be deemed necessary in the provinces of Cayagan, Isabella and Nueva Vizcaya, of which Colonel Hood has been appointed military governor.

General Young and Colonel Hood are establishing civil municipal governments and the ports in Northern Luzon will be opened for trade about Jan. 1.

MAY OPEN THE PORTS.

Otis Said to Favor That Course in Northern Luzon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—General Otis is said to consider it feasible to open the ports of Northern Luzon to commerce, regarding that portion of the island as practically in the hands of Americans and certainly under their control.

In the same connection it is said he will turn his attention to the southern part of the island. It was in a move in this direction that Lawton fell.

The opening of the northern ports, if it occurs, will destroy the corner on hemp.

ATTACK ON SUBIG.

American Garrison Surprised by Filipinos Under General Nasca Asa.

MANILA, Dec. 27.—General Santa Ana, with a force of regulars estimated at 500, attacked the garrison at Subig. A body of marines were sent from Olongapo to reinforce the garrison and the Filipinos were driven off with several being killed. There were no casualties on the American side.

A company of the Forty-sixth volunteer infantry, together with a contingent of marines, have been sent from Manila to reinforce the Subig garrison still farther.

The attack was wholly unexpected, as it had been thought that there were no Filipino troops in the vicinity of Subig. Extraordinary precautions will be taken to prevent a recurrence of the surprise.

ONLY ONE DAY AHEAD.

Aguinaldo Still Closely Pressed by American Troops.

MANILA, Dec. 25.—Colonel Wilder has telegraphed to Vigan from Bayombong that Aguinaldo has crossed the mountains near Bayombong, going southward. His wife died in a village in that vicinity.

The report of the Charleston court of inquiry, just received, is favorable to the officers of the stranded warship. It shows that dire vigilance was exercised in the embarkation of the crew on the boats, which were well handled.

A report has reached General Young that Colonels Hare and Howze have released 23 American prisoners, including Lieutenants Gilmore, in the hands of the provinces of North Ilocos. Another report says General Tino has been captured at Lavag.

Colonel Hare reports having had two encounters with General Tino in which 100 Filipinos were killed or wounded, and about 200 rifles were captured, without casualties to the American.

ON AMERICAN SOIL.

Remains of Maine Victims Transferred From the Texas.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Dec. 26.—The battleship Texas, in command of Captain Sigsbee, arrived here shortly before noon with the remains of the men who lost their lives by the destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor. The bodies of the Maine heroes who were brought up on the Texas were at once transferred to a Chesapeake and Ohio train and will be taken to Washington for interment in Arlington cemetery next Thursday.

The Rev. Father Chidwick, who was chaplain of the Maine, is in charge of the remains of the dead heroes and will accompany them to Washington. Not more than a score of the bodies on the Texas were identified.

IMPROVE THE HIGHWAYS.

General Wood Intends to Begin the Work Immediately.

HAVANA, Dec. 26.—General Wood says he intends to begin work at once on the highways which are greatly in need of repairs. This will also serve to give employment to a large number of men.

The school system will also be immediately reorganized. Alexis Perez, superintendent of Cuban schools, will be reinforced with two or three assistant commissioners.

The judiciary will form the subject of early attention, particularly the jails and existing systems of trying prisoners for months without trial. An order will issue directing the immediate trial of prisoners held for trial or furnished monthly.

IS OFFICIALLY DENIED.

Dr. Leyds Has Not Asked For Mediation Through France.

PARIS, Dec. 25.—The French foreign office denies the statement of the Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail of London that Dr. Leyds, the European representative of the Boers, has asked the services of M. Delcasse, the minister of foreign affairs, in the cause of peace.

END CAME PEACEFULLY.

Death of Evangelist Moody at East Northfield, Mass.

EAST NORTHFIELD, Mass., Dec. 25.—Dwight L. Moody, the famous evangelist, died at noon.

It was not expected until Thursday by the members of Mr. Moody's family and immediate circle of friends that death would be the result of his illness. The cause of death was a general breaking down due to overwork. Mr. Moody's heart had been weak for a long time and exertions put forth in connection with meetings in the West last month brought on a collapse from which he failed to rally.

The evangelist broke down in Kansas City, Mo., where he was holding services about a month ago, and the seriousness of his condition was so apparent to the physicians who were called to attend him that they forced him to abandon his tour and return to his home with all possible speed. After he reached Northfield eminent physicians were consulted and everything was done to prolong life. A bulletin issued last week communicated the tidings to the public that Mr. Moody was very ill, but that a little improvement was noticed. This week the patient showed a steady improvement until Thursday, when he showed symptoms of nervousness, accompanied by weakness which caused the family much anxiety. The weakness continued and at 8 a. m. Mr. Moody called his wife and children, telling them that the end was not far off. The family remained close by the bedside all the forenoon.

Just before noon the watchers saw the end was approaching, and at exactly noon the great preacher passed away.

MANY AFTER PENSIONS.

Twenty-five Thousand Applications Recent From Recent War.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Already 25,000 applications for pensions growing out of the Spanish-American and Philippine wars have been filed with the pension bureau. From the Ninth Massachusetts regiment alone 650 applications have been filed. In seven cases out of ten the application for a pension is prepared by the soldier himself, but by some pension attorney. The amount of fees getting pensions has grown to be a great business with attorneys, and those who are engaged in it have a perfect system.

THE LAWTON FUND.

Thirty Thousand Dollars Pledged and Twenty Thousand More Wanted.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—A dispatch to The Herald from Washington says Adjutant General Corbin estimates that the Lawton fund, including subscriptions received and pledged, amounts to $30,000. It has been decided by the committee having the fund in charge to have the fair proceed as planned.

LATE MARKET REPORT.

Duluth Grain.

DULUTH, Dec. 27.

WHEAT—Cash, No 1 hard, 70c; No. 1 Northern, 66c; No 2 Northern, 64½c; No. 3, 59c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 64½c; No 1 Northern, 64½c; December, 64½c; May, 69c; July, 69¾c.

FLAX—To arrive, 71.03½; December, 71.02; May, $1.03½.

Minneapolis Wheat.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 27.

WHEAT—In Store No 1 Northern, December, 69½c; May, 69½c; July, 67¾ @68c. On Track—No 1 hard, 67c; No 2 Northern, 66½c; No 3 Northern, 62½c.

Sioux City Live Stock.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Dec. 27.

CATTLE—Market steady.

Sales ranged at 4.00@5.00 for heavy, $3.00@3.50 for cows, bulls and mixed; $4.00@4.40 for stockers and feeders; $3.50 @4.00 for calves and yearlings.

HOGS—Market strong to 5@10c higher. Range of prices, 4.05@4.10.

St. Paul Union Stock Yards.

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Dec. 27.

HOGS—Market 5c higher. Range of prices 4.02½@4.05.

CATTLE—Market steady with last week.

Sales ranged at $3.00@5.85 for cows; $3.40@5.00 for mixed, $4.00@5.85 for bulls; $4.80@5.10 for stockers $3.05@5.05 for heifers.

SHEEP—Market for sheep and lambs steady with last week.

Range of prices 4.00@5.55 for bucks, $4.60@5.00 for sheep.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.

CATTLE—Market steady. 10c lower. Sales ranged at 4.20 @ 6.40 for beeves; $3.10@4.75 for cows and heifers; 3.00@ 4.80 for stockers and feeders; $4.25@5.05 for Texas fed beeves.

HOGS—Market steady to slow.

Sales ranged at $4.05@4.30 for mixed and butchers, $4.15@4.30 for good to choice heavy, 4.00@4.10 for rough heavy and $4.20@4.30 for light. Bulk of sales 4.12½ @4.20.

SHEEP—Steady.

Sales ranged at $4.00@4.90 for sheep; $4.00@5.90 for lambs.

Range of prices 4.00@5.35 for bucks, $4.60@5.00 for sheep.

Chicago Union Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.

CATTLE—Market steady. 10c lower. Sales ranged at 4.20 @ 6.40 for beeves; $3.10@4.75 for cows and heifers; 3.00@ 4.80 for stockers and feeders; $4.25@5.05 for Texas fed beeves.

HOGS—Market steady to slow.

Sales ranged at $4.05@4.30 for mixed and butchers, $4.15@4.30 for good to choice heavy, 4.00@4.10 for rough heavy and $4.20@4.30 for light. Bulk of sales 4.12½ @4.20.

SHEEP—Steady.

Sales ranged at $4.00@4.90 for sheep; $4.00@5.90 for lambs.

Range of prices 4.00@5.35 for bucks, $4.60@5.00 for sheep.

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.

WHEAT—December 64¾c; May, 69¼c; July, 67¾c.

CORN—December, 30¼c; January, 30½@30⅝c; May, 33c.

OATS—December, 28½c; May, 29¾c.

PORK—December, $8 85; January, $8 92½; May, $9.05@9.07½.

FLAX—Cash Northwestern, $1.03½; Southwestern, $1.01½; December, $1.03¼; May, $1.04¾.

POULTRY — Dressed, turkeys, 9c; chickens, 6½@7.

BUTTER—Creameries, 16@23c; dairy, 16@23c.

EGGS—Fresh, 20c.

NEWS CONDENSATIONS.

Thursday, Dec. 21.

Kahn, Loeb & Co. have shipped $500,000 gold to Europe. The gold is in double eagles.

The Franco-American commercial treaty has been presented to the chamber of deputies.

The official call for the Republican national convention to meet in Philadelphia June 19 next has been issued.

M. G. Meagher, an elephant trainer, better known as Peter Forepaugh, was instantly killed by an elephant at S. Isabelle, O.

The Japanese envoy to The Hague, on behalf of the mikado, has signed all the conventions of the international peace conference.

The American Bell Telephone company has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent, and an extra dividend of 1¾ per cent.

Friday, Dec. 22.

A temporary receiver has been appointed for the Globe National bank of Boston.

General Wood has accepted the resignation of General Brooke's advisory cabinet.

Samuel Goldberger, the saloonkeeper and Tammany election district captain, who was convicted of colonizing in the recent New York election, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment at Sing Sing.

The central agricultural bureau at St. Petersburg has published a report showing an increase of 20 per cent in winter cereals over 1898 and an increase of 7 per cent upon the average of the last five years.

Congressman C. A. Boutelle of Maine, who is at Chenga hotel, Washington, has been taken seriously ill. A bulletin issued at 10 o'clock tonight is reassuring, stating that the congressman is suffering from congestion of the brain, induced by a severe attack of indigestion.

Saturday, Dec. 23.

A general order has been issued by the war department announcing the death of General Lawton.

The New South Wales assembly has passed a bill authorizing the issue of treasury bills to the amount of £4,000,000.

Ex-United States Senator James W. Bradbury of Maine is dangerously ill. He is in his 93th year and is not expected to recover.

The Rand & Loftin powder mills at Pleasant Prairie, near Kenosha, Wis., have started up. The plant is one of the largest in the United States. It consists of 63 buildings, covering several hundred acres of land.

General Otis has notified the war department that the transports Senator and Ben Mohr have arrived at Manila with the Forty-fifth infantry and two batteries of the Sixth artillery. No casualties were reported.

Monday, Dec. 25.

Daniel S. Ford, owner of the Youth's Companion, is dead at Boston, aged 75 years.

The British steamer Ariosto was wrecked off Cape Hatteras, 21 lives being lost.

Chicago men have started a national combination of shippers to combat the advance in freight rates.

British General Gatacre has issued a modified reconcentrado order for the benefit of the rebellious Dutch in Cape Colony.

A Missouri farmer, because of financial reverses, killed his three children and himself, his wife having previously completed suicide.

Under the new census, which will cause a reapportionment of members of congress, it is stated, electoral conditions in the South will be impaired inc.

Tuesday, Dec. 26.

Carlisle Indians defeated the University of California football team by a score of 2 to 0.

It is reported that the bubonic plague has made its appearance at Nomme, Cape of the French penal colony of New Caledonia.

Roland Reed, the actor, is seriously ill at New York. He is suffering from appendicitis and his road engagements for the holiday week have been cancelled.

Southern California was visited Monday by a severe earthquake shock lasting 15 seconds. At San Jacinto and Hermit the damage is estimated at $60,000.

Adjutant General Corbin estimates that the Lawton fund, including subscriptions received and pledged, amounts to $30,000. It has been decided by the committee having the fund in charge to have the fund reach $50,000.

Wednesday, Dec. 27.

Germans want better tariff rates for their sugar.

A new treaty between China and Mexico has been signed in Washington.

Undesirable immigration has become a serious problem for Washington treasury officials.

Mayor Tubbs of Alcester, S. D., has been sentenced to two years in prison for sending obscene literature through the mails.

A great financial institution, with Secretary Gage, when his term of office expires, at the head, is planned in New York.

The Lovell Arms company of Boston has made an assignment. It is one of the largest sporting goods firms in the country.

Former Governor Robert W. Furnas of Nebraska, now in his 70th year, and Mrs. S. E. Jamison were married at Brownville, Neb.

The directors of the Great Northern Railway company have awarded the contract for the construction of a million bushel elevator, of $50,000.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

The creamery at Mabel has been destroyed by fire.

The state teachers association is in session at St. Paul this week.

An order has been issued establishing a postoffice at Fernando, McLeod county.

The Leech Lake army post has been suggested as a place to bring soldiers from the tropics to recuperate.

Secretary of State Hay has promised a Minneapolis settler to feel most vigorously with Turkey should any more Minneapolis flour be rejected in that country.

Frederick Driscoll, since his retirement from the St. Paul Pioneer Press, is mentioned as a candidate for postmaster upon the expiration of the term of Robert A. Smith.

The transfer office of the United States Express company at St. Paul, filled with Christmas presents, burned Sunday evening. Probably 3,000 packages were destroyed.

The total lumber cut by Minneapolis mills during the past season is 594,378,000 feet. This is by far the largest cut in the history of the city and 124,672,000 feet ahead of last year.

Complaint has been made by residents at Minnesota City of illegal fishing in the sloughs near that village. Nets are being used freely to take the fish. Notice has been sent to the state game and fish commission.

The police of St. Paul raided 926 East Seventh street and arrested four men and two women believed to be responsible for a large part of the sneak thieving that has been in progress in different parts of St. Paul lately.

Fire at Hastings on Christmas eve did about $200,000 damage. The fire started in R. C. Libbey & Co.'s saw mill and is believed to have been incendiary. St. Paul sent two engines to assist in subduing the flames.

Northern Minnesota pine land sales amounting to millions of dollars have been closed within a few weeks and options representing as much more are now held pending examination. There is no class of men here making greater profits than the pine land brokers.

The trial balance of the state school fund has been completed by the state auditor. It shows the total amount outstanding on land contracts to the credit of the general school fund to be $8,070,873.84. Since the close of the fiscal year of 1898, $210,000 has been paid on these contracts.

The dock property on which the old Duluth roller mill stands has been sold to R. A. Eva, general agent of the Northern Pacific at Duluth. The property has a dock face of 173 feet, with 100 feet on the Omaha strip. The consideration is $20,000 and the property was doubtless purchased for the Northern Pacific, as it adjoins the company's big dock and warehouse.

The annual report of the railroad commission is now in the hands of the printer, and will be ready for distribution some time in January. This report has been in course of the most extensive volume that has been issued for three years, the commission having a larger fund for the purpose now than it has had for some time.

Returns from 178 state banks of Minnesota, received by the commissioner at the close of business on Dec. 2 have been compiled by Bank Examiner Pope. These show that the banks have since organized since the call issued in July, the total resources increased over $2,000,000 and over $1,000,000 in four months. Since July 31 the loans and discounts have increased over $1,000,000, while the capital stock, including 32 new banks, increased about $600,000.

STATE DAIRY DEPARTMENT

Commissioner Hoyer's Annual Report and What It Shows.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 26.—State Dairy Commissioner Hoyer has completed his annual report. It covers the work of his department since assuming office early this year. An important item here made of every creamery in the state except about 20 in the northern part.

With few exceptions the creameries organized on the co-operative plan have been successful in Minnesota and the farmers interested gained a profit they would not have realized were it not for so ready a market for their cream.

The department has been very successful in its prosecutions of violations of the pure food law. The total amount of fines collected during the period covered is $3,320.

In the Twin Cities, Duluth and elsewhere the commission secured 1,325 samples of milk and sent them out in the chemical laboratory. Only 18 convictions were secured, which indicates that milk adulteration is being reduced to a minimum, as nearly every case where an adulteration is discovered represents a conviction.

The department during the year analyzed 1,828 samples of various food products as follows: Eight hundred and forty samples of vinegar, 329 of lard, 117 of baking powder, 833 of spices, 13 of honey, 3 of Jelly, 4 of candy, 30 of cheese, 390 of butter and 31 of linseed oil.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Polk County Journal,
BY N. S. GORDON.

☞ Subscription $1.50 per year in advance

Entered at the postoffice at Crookston, Minnesota, as second-class matter.

TOWARD FREEDOM.

Freedom is the ultimate goal toward which the ages are moving. Man is hemmed in by boundaries, is confined by limits, and his life is a constant struggle to get rid of those limits, such as cold, hunger, ignorance, evil, space, time, etc. When he shall have thrown off these shackles or rather when he shall by means of them have realized his true self, then has he attained freedom.

The world is continuously moving forward, even the reactionary periods being periods when progression is being made for a greater advance. There is that in man which prevents him from ultimately being satisfied with anything less than perfection and there is evidence in the history of the year 1899 which goes to show that man is progressing.

Russia, the home of autocratic government and consequently of nihilism where the people have been and are down trodden and oppressed, is fast coming to realize that a nation's smallness or greatness lies in its people, and that if a state is to be permanently great the people must be uplifted. Every year less is heard of nihilism and Siberian exiles, and the Russian government has a great railroad running through Siberia and is offering great inducements for people to go there and make their homes. This is a tribute to the people that Russia is not in the habit of giving and though perhaps small, marks an advance. A penal colony is to be turned into a community where free labor will engage in agriculture, manufacturing, etc. Spain, too, has been annihilated not merely by the Siberian railway, but by the canal being built to connect the Baltic sea with the Black sea.

It was the Czar, too, who called the Peace Conference at the Hague last May, where representatives from 26 countries met to take steps whereby the world might be brought nearer the state expressed in the words, "Peace on earth, good will to men," and though wars are still going on and military establishments have not been cut down, some of the customs and laws of war were ameliorated and among other things provision was made for a permanent international arbitration board "before which disputed causes might be brought for settlement by the mutual consent of the litigants in each separate case."

The Venezuelan boundary dispute which has existed during a greater part of the nineteenth century was finally settled at Paris by arbitration a few months ago and both parties are satisfied with the award. Thus has been peaceably settled a controversy that at one time seemed to threaten a war between the United States and Great Britain.

The breaking up of the Chinese Empire is going on slowly but surely. This is inevitable, for though China has many admirable characteristics her insistent isolation has deprived her of the fruits of progress. The onward march of civilization will not crush the Chinese people, but will infuse new life into them and though the nation as such may cease to exist the people are being benefited.

But nothing that has happened during the year has rid man of the limits of space and even those of time as much as has the perfection to which wireless telegraphy has been brought by its inventor, Marconi.

The Dreyfus incident in France demonstrated clearly the nearness of man to man. For weeks the eyes of the world were riveted on Rennes, France, where the brave artillery officer was fighting gallantly for what was dearer than life and though he was sacrificed to militarism the judgment of his fellowmen pronounced him guiltless. Here indeed was a signal illustration of the brotherhood of man.

But France more than Dreyfus was on trial and the world's verdict went against her. She learned the lesson that no nation liveth unto itself, when condemnation was heaped upon her head by all men.

But two of the greatest events of the year have to do with the United States and the Cubans and Filipinos, and with Great Britan and the Dutch in South Africa. The two most enlightened nations are engaged in waging war and the question is, is a progressive spirit being shown here?

In the Philippines an insurrection against our flag is almost subdued. Peace and order will soon be established. Self-governments have been formed as far as practicable, public schools and churches built, and justice dealt out. Assuredly progress is evident here and the same things are being done in Cuba.

At home, time would fail us to point out the signs of advance. Two events must suffice: Dewey's magnificent reception on his home coming from Manila shows that our admiration for greatness and our hero worship is increasing and the nation's protest against the sending Mr. Roberts to congress evidences the people's love for purity in the home.

The precipitating cause of the war in South Africa had to do with the granting of citizens' privileges to foreign residents in the Transvaal but the principal cause lay much deeper. The Dutch and the English are really contending for supremacy in South Africa. Two civilizations have clashed, and while one's sympathies are naturally with the weaker side, the Boers, who, though aggressive, are a simple, God fearing people fighting for their homes, one cannot help but think that the British represent a higher civilization. Each side is fighting for what it considers a principle. It is the story, old as the hills, of two apparent rights opposing one another and the outcome of such a contest has always ultimately been a higher right.

THE YOUTH'S Companion is one of the most interesting and helpful papers for the young folks that is published in America. No home can afford to be without it.

We do not think that J. Adam Bede has strengthened his candidacy for congressman by making light of the central thought in the book "In His Steps," as he does in a reputed conversation of Judge Page Morris which is published in the last Budget.

MINNESOTA congressmen this session got better committee assignments than ever before which, aside from their ability to fill the places, is due to the fact that they have all of them been in congress several terms. We say, therefore, let the state not keep changing its representatives at Washington, but retain those who are there, and thus Minnesota will attain more and more prominence in national affairs.

CAPTAIN VAN SANT is now the only openly avowed candidate for the republican nomination for governor next year and he has a strong following. The captain has been after this place for many years, but he is nearer now to plucking it than ever before. It is hardly possible, however, that he will have no opposition, but this will not daunt the Old Whoa man. He has determined to be governor and this is the kind of men that wins.

WHEN one enters into an open contest and is outgeneraled and defeated it is a poor sort of fellow who then cries "boodle" in the face of an utter absence of all evidence in support of such a charge. There are few, if any, questions where all are on the same side and because number one differs from number two is no sign that number one is not sincere. Victory may be snatched even out of the very jaws of defeat, but the way to do that is not by imputing false motives.

FOR the first time in forty years the governor of Minnesota, during this past year, has not been a representative of the republican party. Fortunately the legislature was republican and all other state offices were held by republicans so that the extent to which damage could be done by the demo-pops was limited. During his year of incumbency, (perhaps it were more accurate to say his and Mr. Rosing's,) Mr. Lind has tried to pay up political debts and build up such a political machine as would insure his re-election. We desire to be fair, but from the facts of his administration's history we can draw no other conclusion. The welfare of the state has taken a secondary place to the welfare of John Lind. He has shown himself a politician, but what the people want is a statesman, a man who will always do honor to the commonwealth, and such a man they will elect next November and he will come from the ranks of the republican party.

Companion Stories for 1900.

The stories published in The Youth's Companion portray the manly and womanly virtues with no sacrifice of interest or vitality, and they appeal to the sympathies of old and young alike. During 1900 The Companion will offer special series of stories—among them being stories of Former Political Campaigns and Adventures of Linemen.

Besides these there will be a score of stories for girls by such writers as Sarah Orne Jewett, Mary E. Wilkins, Margaret Deland, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Edith Wharton, Kate Chopin and Margaret Sangster. There will be four serial stories—"A Prairie Infanta," by Eva Wilder Brodhead; "Running a Merry-Go-Round," by Charles Adams; "The Schoolhouse Farthest West," by C. A. Stephens; and "Cushing Brothers," by Ray Stannard Baker. In addition there will be two hundred other short stories by the most gifted of American writers of fiction.

All new subscribers will receive The Companion's new Calendar for 1900, suitable as an ornament for the prettiest room in the house.

Illustrated Announcement Number, containing a full prospectus of the volume for 1900, will be sent free to any address.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
203 Columbus Ave. Boston, Mass.

Woman's Column.

THE JOURNAL purposes to maintain a column during the coming year devoted to the interests of women and the home. The hearty co-operation of the contributors to the Women's Page in the Christmas edition assures us that such an effort will be appreciated. Any social announcements will be printed here and contributions to the column whether original or from reading will be gladly received and much appreciated. This week we publish the three best stories written by the boys of the 4th and 6th grades.

It has been stated that Queen Victoria has accumulated a fortune of over $100,000,000, but such is not the case, for Labouchere says that though under pledge of secrecy to the amount of her investments "I do not think I am breaking faith in saying that the amount is surprisingly small."

Miss Reel, general superintendent of Indian schools, in her annual report favors the idea of industrial education taking the lead rather than literary attainments among the Indians. Her suggestions are the result of her personal study of their needs at this stage of their civilization.

When Dr. Smith of the Peoples' church, St. Paul, made the assertion recently, "The world would be better if all women in the world were turned out of their jobs tomorrow" he evidently did not expect that the irate women wage earners of the whole country would rise up against him. The day and age has passed when women can be tramped on and act raise a voice against the offender.

In Pendleton, Cal., two years ago, the leading women organized an improvement Club to better the general appearance of their city. They have succeeded and now their parks, streets, etc, are among the most attractive of the state.

Dick's Christmas.

Once there was a little boy named Dick whose mother and father had long been dead. He was left an orphan when very young and had only one relative which was his aunt. She was very poor and could not afford to buy any presents for him for Christmas. When it came Christmas eve Dick went to bed thinking that he would not have any presents on Christmas morning, but he was mistaken for his aunty had left a note to Santa Claus asking him to please leave some presents for Dick. When Dick awoke in the morning he could hardly believe his eyes. He was so astonished that he went and asked his aunt who had been there last night and she told him so many presents. Then his aunty told him that it was Santa Claus who brought him the presents, and Dick was very happy and said that he wished he could see Santa Claus to thank him. His aunty then told him about the Christ-child and how he was born in the manger at Bethlehem, how he died because he loved us and wished to save us from sin. His aunty also told him that Christmas was the anniversary of Christ's birth, and as Christ did so much for us, we should help him by feeding his poor.

ERSKINE VANCE.

B. 6th Grade.

In charge of Miss Still.

My Favorite Time.

December is the last month in the year and it is also the happiest. Whenever I hear about Christmas I always think of what a nice time I will have. We call it Christmas because Christ was born in Bethlehem. The three wise men saw a big star and followed it, and it stopped above the barn where Jesus Christ was born. The three wise men gave this little baby presents and this is the reason we get presents every Christmas. There is an old fellow that we call Santa Claus and he makes nice toys for good girls and boys and he makes nasty toys for bad children. He has reindeer to pull his sleigh through the snow. Santa Claus is a funny old man. He has a long white beard, as white as the snow itself, and he has a long chain of bells that jingle very nicely as he flies over the snow as fast as ever he can. When he comes to a house he listens to hear if there is any noise and if there is any noise and if there is a noise he will go away as fast as he can, but if there is not any noise he will very softly crawl up the wall and plunge into the small chimney with his big toy bag on his back. But Santa Claus is a man that can make himself as small as a mouse and if the chimney is small he can very easily get into it. There were once three children, one boy and two girls. It was Christmas and all three of the children were eager to hang their stockings up and Santa Claus, as you see is a smart fellow too, instead of putting nice toys into the boy's stocking he put some frozen dirt into it and it was very hot where the stocking was hung up, so after a while the frozen dirt melted and the stocking got all dirty. Santa Claus did this because the boy had been a little bad in Christmas eve. The mother gave him nearly twice as much candy and nuts as the other children because of the loss of his stocking. Santa Claus has a sleigh and he can't ride on the ground. The children in Florida and Texas don't get any presents for Christmas because Santa Claus can't go down there with his sleigh and what will the children do without presents? I suppose he ties his reindeer and walks from house to house with the children's presents. I and everybody else get presents for Christmas from that jolly old Santa Claus. Christmas is my favorite time because the ice on the river is very thick and there is much fun skating and coasting at Christmas time.

ADOLF OLSON,

B 5th Grade.

In charge of Miss Brown.

The Newsboy's Christmas.

On Christmas eve little James, the youngest newsboy of the great New York Journal, was running up and down the long avenue asking every one he met to buy one of his papers for to get something for his mother and little sister to eat on Christmas day. Some of the busy throng of loving fathers and mothers who were out to buy some presents for the dear ones at home stopped and put money into his little hand, thinking at the same time of their little ones at home who were hoping with great joy for the visit of Santa Claus. Late that night he went to his home which was in a very poor court in one of the crowded parts of the city. Coming to a large broken down house he went through the open door and down a long dark hall, then he went upstairs until he came to a room on the fourth floor. After giving his mother the money he had earned he was asked by his sister what he was going to give her. "Nevermind, sister, Santa will come tonight and bring you something," he said. Poor little James he went to sleep asking "Oh, if Santa would come but he won't for he always forgets poor people."

Early in the morning he was awakened by his mother's glad cry. Jumping out of bed he ran into the other room and there behold Santa had made them a visit during the night. That the newsboy's home was one of the happiest in New York City can not be doubted.

RAYMOND KELLY.

B 4th Grade.

In charge of Miss Lusiau.

A Great 57 Cents Worth.

This is frequently called "woman's century," and the appellation becomes significant when one considers the difference in woman's position today from what it was a hundred years ago. She is rapidly becoming a force in the business world as well as in the world of art and letters, yet her home interests have not seemed to suffer in consequence, as may be proven by the increase in publications for the homemaker during the past few years. The Housekeeper, established in 1877, was one of the first journals to recognize woman's demand for a periodical devoted to progressive methods in housekeeping. "Helpful, Instructive and Progressive" has always been its motto. It is a thirty-six page monthly, beautifully illustrated with half-tone plates, and full of good things from cover to cover. It tells the homemaker how to cook, how to dress, how to care for her babies, how to raise flowers and chickens, and how to do many other things, and it also keeps her fairly well informed concerning current events, besides giving a large amount of good fiction and special articles on timely topics. Upwards of 140,000 subscribers pronounce it to be the best of the "domestic" magazines. It is certainly a wonderful 50 cents' worth.

A COOK BOOK FREE.

The Housekeeper also publishes the famous "Buckeye Cookery," which has proven a boon to thousands of housewives. It is a standard up-to-date illustrated work of 544 large pages. More than 750,000 copies have been sold by subscription at $1.75 per copy. The publishers will give a copy of this book, bound in strong leather paper covers, to all who subscribe for the magazine, provided they will pay the cost of mailing, which is seven cents. Send 57 cents for The Housekeeper and "Buckeye Cookery." Address is Minneapolis, Minn.

Travels With a Musketeap.

"Prepared for an emergency" is the phrase that seems to fit the elderly man who was going to the Virginia mountains and had the drawing room of a sleeping car.

The porter was helping her to stow away her belongings. "Put that mousetrap under the berth," she commanded, and her voice had the ring of one accustomed to command.

"You 'specting to catch anything?" grinned the porter.

"Expecting!" she snapped. "I've already caught two mice in sleeping cars in the last eight years. I don't propose to be mutilated by the creatures while I sleep. Put that trap where I tell you, and mind your own business!"

Think of a defenseless woman daring enough to say, "Mind your own business" to a sleeping car porter and yet afraid of a mouse!—Washington Post.

COAL AND WOOD
AND VANCE STONE

LONGVIEW STOCK FARM
SECTION 15, LOWELL.
Short Hors Cattle and Poland China Hogs
FOR SALE.
Herd headed by Imp. Bonnie Scotland 135,225
R. A. WILKINSON, Prop., Crookston, Minn.

D. M. ROBBINS E. C. WARNER
SHIP YOUR GRIAN TO
ROBBINS & WARNER
GRAIN COMMISSION
Consignments solicited. Sell by sample, "to arrive" and make quick returns. Liberal advances made to customers. Orders for future delivery delivery executed in any market. Send samples of Grain. Write us for information.
A. H. SMITH, Mgr. Duluth Office. Duluth and Minneapolis.

STONE'S Mammoth Music House.
The only exclusive Music House in the West.
Manufacturers and Importers of Musical Merchandise.
Most complete stock of Pianos, Organs, Brass and String Instruments, Trimmings, Music and Music Books west of Chicago. Violins, Mandolins, Guitars and Banjos from $2.25 to $125. Sheet Music at 50 per cent off regular price. Pianos from $150 to $1000. Organs from $20 to $650. Cash or easy payments. Old instruments taken as part payment.
SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.
STONE'S MAMMOTH MUSIC HOUSE,
110-112 Broadway. FARGO, N. D.

The Riverside Dairy
Offers to the people of Crookston the purest milk, the richest cream, and the best butter to be had in all Minnesota at the lowest prices compatible with conservative business management. Our milk routes lies right past your door, delivering twice each day. Call on our driver, or through telephone No. 12 for anything in this line. Don't eat your bread without butter so long as you can get Riverside at present prices.
E. D. CHILDS CO., Crookston.

ED. ERICKSON,
DEALER IN
All Kinds of Fresh ...and Salt... MEAT Fish and Game in ...Season...
Highest market price paid for all kinds of Neat and Hides. Stall fed Beef..... .....a Specialty
SOUTH MAIN STREET, CROOKSTON, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

RAILWAY TIME CARD

CROOKSTON, MINN.

NORTHERN PACIFIC

SOUTH BOUND.	Arr.	Dep't
No. 8 to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and East.	8:27 pm	8:32 pm
NORTH BOUND.
No. 7 to Grand Forks, Grafton and Winnipeg.	8:20 am	8:30 am

C. A. SHARKEY, Agt. CHAS. S. FEE, G. P. A.
Crookston, Minn. St. Paul, Minn

GREAT NORTHERN

ARRIVE	DEPART
6.05 am* Grand Forks, Noth and West	7.00 am
9.40 am Minneapolis, St Paul and points east	9.05 am
4.30 pm* St. Thomas, Grand Forks and points North and West	4.50 pm
4.55 pm* Superior, Duluth and Superior	9.30 am
6.45 pm St. Vincent to Fargo	7.15 pm
8.25 am Fargo to St. Vincent	8.10 am

*Daily (except Sunday.) | LEAVE

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

PHYSICIANS

A. A. Just M. D.
HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Office in McGinnis Block, Crookston, Minn

Jules Gendron.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Rooms 2, 3, 4 and 5, over Fontaine & Anglim's
Office hours—9 to 12 a. m; 1 to 5 p. m; 7 to 8 p.m

Dr. C. E. Dampier,
Surgeon Great Northern Railroad.
Surgeon Northern Pacific Railroad.
Secretary Board Pension Examiners.
Office, Fournier Block. Crookston, Minn.

ATTORNEYS

H. Steenerson,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
Office in Opera Block Crookston, Minn

Miller & Foote,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Offices, corner Broadway and Robert streets
Crookston, Minn.

Marin & Webster,
LAW, COLLECTIONS AND LOANS. AGENTS FOR RELIABLE FIRE, TORNADO AND HAIL INSURANCE.
Office next to Postoffice, Crookston, Minn.

Christ's Church, Episcopal.
CROOKSTON, MINN.
Services every Sunday, Morning, 11:00; evening, 8:00. Holy Communion 1st Sunday of every Month. Sunday School 10:00 a.m.
REV. E. M. GREEN, D. D.
Rector

CITY AND VICINITY.

—Miss Winifred Pinch is visiting at her home at Ojnto, N. D.

—G. J. Rolfstad who has been on the sick list is now improving.

—J. Shefstad will play the violin at the concert tomorrow night.

—C. C. Bowen visited at Grand Forks the fore part of the week.

—C. E. Sawyer, of West Superior, Wis., was in the city a day or two last week.

—Mrs. W. H. Collins has returned from a two weeks visit at Emerson, Manitoba.

—Extra copies of the Christmas edition of the JOURNAL are on sale at this office.

—Rev. C. R. G. Poole is entertaining the Rev. Samuel Baehelor of Sauk Centre.

—The annual meeting and roll call of the Baptist church will take place next Monday night.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charley March came in from the west last evening and spent the night in the city.

—Copies of the Christmas edition of the JOURNAL will be sent to any address on receipt of ten cents.

—Miss Rose McGuire left last Friday evening for her home near Fertile where she will spend a month.

—J. Rosenberg, of Minneapolis, reached here this morning for a visit with his brother, Ben Rosenberg.

—Mrs. A. M. Freeman, who was visiting with her sister Mrs. G. C. Town at Morris, returned home Friday.

—John Carlson, the grocer, presented each one of his numerous customers with a handsome Christmas gift.

—L. W. Clark, who is employed in the new saw mill at Cass Lake, spent Sunday and Monday at his home in this city.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Holston returned from Minneapolis this morning, where they had been visiting relatives of Mrs. Holston.

—Charley Lohn, the court reporter, spent part of the holiday season in the Twin Cities, returning to Crookston this morning.

—M. R. Rosenberg, of St. Hilaire, spent several days of the week visiting with his brother, Ben, of the Great Western clothing house.

—Elias Steenerson has been appointed general agent of the Hartford Insurance company for Northern Minnesota and North Dakota.

—The entertainment given by the Cosgrove Company last Monday evening under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias was well attended and those present greatly enjoyed themselves.

—The W. C. T. U. will hold a program meeting at the home of Mrs. E. Walker next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

—The Misses Clo and Ada Teeter, of Austin, who have taught in the Grafton public schools for several years, will visit the home Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Gordon the last of the week.

—F. R. Hamel and J. Sundet, of the Northwestern Marble Works expect to go to Vermont next week to purchase a stock of marble and granite for their use in the building of monuments.

—Will Olds, of the Crookston bicycle works went to Minneapolis last night, and while in the cities he will purchase a supply of material with which to build those popular Victor bicycles next year.

—Chas. Westerberg and family had most interesting Christmas tree festivities at the hotel Sunday night. The program of songs and recitations was arranged by Miss Mamie Westerberg. Quite a number of friends were present.

—E. Roberts, one of the oldest residents in the town of Andover was a pleasant caller at the JOURNAL office Tuesday. Mr. Roberts has been interested in tree culture for a number of years, and has been very successful with his experiments.

—Last Sunday evening the Congregational church a service for praise and prayer will be held. The intent of the service is that of thankfulness for the blessings of the past, and prayer for God's goodness in the future. This service will be the first of a series which will be held each evening during the week at 7:30 o'clock.

Married.

DAGGETT–MAGEAU.

Chas. E. Daggett and Miss Clara Mageau were married in this city last evening at the home of Frank Mageau, a brother of the bride. Rev. Father Grandchamp performed the ceremony. The bridal couple have gone on a wedding tour to Chicago.

Dairy Hints.

The appearance of the butter has a good deal to do with the sale of it. If the tubs are clean and bright, the tins evenly spaced and properly nailed on, the stenciling neatly done and every tub just alike on the outside, and if, when the buyer opens a tub, he finds the packing neatly done and the right quantity of salt evenly sprinkled over the circle, he is more apt to make a purchase, even if the flavor is not quite as quick as another lot that has a slovenly appearance.

The question is often asked, "What is close skimming for a separator?" Until we had the Ohlson test bottle, writes G. B. Lawson in The Creamery Journal, testing the skimmilk was something like telling the temperature of the cream by sticking the finger into it to find out if the cream was cold enough for churning, as our grandmothers used to do. I remember the time when we used to churn and never thought about using a thermometer, but then came the little dash churn on the farm, when we only made butter for home use. Now, with the modern appliances, we can test to a fraction of a hair breadth how much butter fat we waste in the skimmilk and also in the cream. When the separators first came into general use, it used to be considered close skimming if only two-cents were left in the skimmilk, and that was a great saving in butter fat from the old style of deep setting by the gravity system, unless you had plenty of ice to use in the water. But after the dairy school was started the professors found out that with a loss of two-cents per cent of butter fat in the skimmilk when a creamery received 10,000 pounds of milk a day the annual loss would be more than the price of the best separator on the market, and that was too much for the patrons of the creamery to lose. Now, with the improved separators, the butter maker who cannot run them and leave no more than a trace of butter fat in the neck of the Ohlson test bottle is not running the separators as they should be run and as they can be if they are properly operated. In doing close skimming there are three things that must be taken into consideration—feed, speed and temperature. As it is centrifugal motion that does the skimming, the higher the speed the better the skimming will be up to the rated speed of the separator. Of course they can be speeded too high, but I find it is a good plan to run them up to the full speed of the manufacturer's guarantee and keep them at that speed all the time the milk is running through them.

Most makes of separators will do the best work if the milk is at about 90 degrees, and at this time of the year when you have the most strippers' milk, it is better to be higher than lower. If you want to do close work, it is better not to feed too fast. Not many separators will skim clean up to their rated capacity. It is better to keep under than to go over their rated capacity. I say close skimmilk, because lately that only showed one-third of a gauge on the Ohlson test bottle. At each gauge on the test bottle represents one-twentieth of 1 per cent. that is skimming about as close as can be done with almost any kind of separator. The speed of the separator at the time was 5,000 pounds per minute, temperature of milk 80 degrees, and it was run through at the rate of 2,000 pounds per hour.

MILK AND BEEF.

Possibilities of the General Purpose Cow—Do Not Confound Her With the Scrub.

A. G. Judd of Warren, O., is an enthusiastic advocate of the general purpose cow. In a recent letter to Hoard's Dairyman he says:

"I decided that the general purpose cow should be my sheet anchor and mainsail. I rented 150 acres of land adjoining mine and a dairy of 43 general purpose cows, with an established milk route in the city of Dixon. Now, Mr. Editor, if you could see and realize what the general purpose cow has done for me and others as plainly as I see it, you would have a standing reward of

AN OHIO GENERAL PURPOSE COW.

$1,000 printed in great primer type on the front page of your paper for the conviction of any person guilty of defaming the general purpose cow.

"Why do I make that bold statement? Because she has lifted out of debt more farmers, by 25 to 1, than the special purpose cows. She has done it in the past ages and will do it for many more to come. First, she is vastly more numerous and will be for generations to come; second, her dual qualities are being improved. Do her critics ever stop to think how much easier it is to raise a general purpose herd, from 4,000 pound producers to 6,000 pound producers, than it is to raise a herd of specials a like amount?

"I did not realize it until I tried it. Now, if there are 50 general purpose cows to one special purpose cow and only 25 of the 50 belong to the progressive farmers and are being improved, you must admit she is adding to our wealth vastly more each year than the other class.

"Now, after years of such breeding and weeding and the building up of such a herd free from kickers, stoppers or hard milkers, with the milk yield doubled, the testing of each individual satisfactory, absolutely healthy, raised on and weaned to the farm, gentle as kittens and handsome in form and color and such profit producers that the debt on the farm has long since disappeared and peace and plenty make life worth the living—I say under such circumstances is it any wonder it makes me sick to think of having to sell them to appease the distaste of a corporation that sees fit to condemn a whole class of individuals because some few members of that great class have not tested up to their idea of a proper standard?

"Now, in conclusion, do you wonder that I love and praise the general purpose cow when I have had such a profitable experience with her? Then, when I see her lifting others' mortgages all around me into homes on beautiful farms, costing $100 per acre, and paying for mother and surveying into the families dressing and living in style equal to the aristocracy of the cities, I am doubly convinced.

"As I got able I experimented along special lines and convinced myself that the improvement is so slow and fullness so much more common in the thoroughbred families, on account of the high tension to which they are already pitched, that nine times out of ten the young farmer will make a failure instead of a success.

"I will save you lots of printing and manuscript reading by warning those that have made up their mind to reply to me that I have not used sour milk or scrub cow. I understand a general purpose cow to be one that gives milk enough to pay a profit and can be disposed of at any time by a little extra feeding for beef, and that at a profit; that a special purpose cow is one bred so strongly in certain lines that it practically eliminates all other characteristics and can produce only milk or only beef at a profit; that a scrub is one that has no predominating tendency and is a failure for both milk and beef."

Good Business Cows.

This is the way Professor Robertson, the commissioner of agriculture for Canada, describes what he calls a "good business cow:" "Her power of service will be indicated by certain external points. She should have a large, long udder, of elastic, fine quality; a mellow, movable skin, covered with soft, silky hair; a long, large barrel, hooped with flat ribs, broad and wide apart; a broad loin, spreading out into broad, long hind quarters; an open twist, with rather thin hips, and a lean neck of symmetrical length, carrying a clean cut, fine face, with prominent eyes. A cow with these points has ability to serve a man well if she gets a fair chance. That her calves may have powers equal to or rather better than her own care should be exercised in their breeding. The best blood of the breed adapted to the farmer's purpose should be used to enlarge and to lessen the working capacity to be transmitted to her calves."

Cow and Milker.

If the cow does not like a milker, there's one of two things that should be done—get rid of the milker or the cow.—Creamery Journal.

THE C.O.D.

The Best Establishment ....In the Northwest.

Many thanks for your liberal patronage during the Christmas season.

The Legitimate Clothing House.

THE C.O.D.

She Snubbed a Lord.

The New York "snagger" set received a breezy sensation recently when one of the handsomest young heiresses has become married an American, who earns his own living; while on the same date went sailing homeward a distinguished little princeling, whose sword-long title register said had been placed entirely at her disposal. "Bless me" exclaimed herself-made father

"THEY PELT HER DISTRACTFULLY."

facetiously, "if this sort of thing keeps on we'll all be Americanized!"

There is something about the air of this country which inclines our women to act independently. A girl may be wrapping her womanly instincts beneath a cloak of fashionable vanity, but the little love nods find out the weak spots in her armor and get her unmercifully. If she is a true American the chances are after all that nine times in ten she will marry the man she cares for. The vast majority of our young women seek no greater blessing than to be well-loved wives of strong-hearted men; and mothers of healthy, happy children.

The world burdens of wifehood and motherhood have been amazingly lightened in the last thirty years. Advanced science has found a way to overcome the physical weakness of women and make them strong and capable of performing their wifely and motherly duties.

THE MODERN WOMAN'S OPPORTUNITY.

At the present day there is no need for any woman in this country to be weighed down and overburdened with physical weakness or disease. A woman suffering from any delicate ailment peculiar to her sex no matter what the circumstances may be, may obtain such eminent professional help and assistance as a mere query could hardly command a generation ago. She can have all the advantages of the wonderful American Institution, the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., with its staff of nearly twenty eminent specialists in the different branches of medical practice. At their head as chief consulting physician is Dr. R. V. Pierce, one of the most widely experienced physicians living. Any woman consulting him by mail and giving a careful statement of her case will receive sound professional advice and suggestion for home-treatment free of charge.

It is impossible to estimate the immense amount of suffering that weak and ailing women have been saved by Dr. Pierce's suggestions for home-treatment and the use of his matchless prescriptions. His "Favorite Prescription" has been more to promote the health and strength of women than all other remedies combined. It is recognized throughout the world as the greatest appetizer, tonic and special strengthener that has ever been devised for women.

It gives healing and power and endurance to the delicate special organism of women; imparts natural vitality and vigor to their entire nervous system. It banishes abnormal and irregular conditions; stops weakening drains; creates healthful capacity and stamina.

It prepares women for motherhood, carries them safely and comfortably through the ordeal; takes away its dangers and nearly all its pain; promotes abundant, natural nourishment for the child and, through the favorable influence upon the mother, gives to the little one's natural strength and hardihood.

Mrs. Peter M. White, of Concord, Warren Co., N. Y., in a letter to Dr. Pierce says: "My Favorite Prescription has been more to me than all the doctors could do for me in a year. My son's wife had been for years a great sufferer; all doctors down and very weak and nervous. She was troubled with all the pains that any one so slender could endure. She took seven bottles of your medicine and got help, but the eighth bottle of your Favorite Prescription and 4 of your pellets cured her. The doctors said she could not live to have another child as she came near dying so many times. This spring she had a nice boy weighing eleven pounds; she got through before my wife. Every one knows of what I have said, for I am very glad to say that she has got along well. May God bless you for the good you have done."

FRANK BROWN....

Is back at the Valley Roller Mills and is desirous of meeting his old customers. He is giving

A Liberal Exchange of Flour for Wheat

Every pound of Flour given in exchange, or otherwise, is guaranteed to be the best

THE VALLEY ROLLER MILLS,
CROOKSTON, MINN.

STORM SASH
STORM SASH

Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Building Paper, Lime, Cement, Hair, Plaster and Builders' Hardware.

...Red River Valley Lumber Co...
A. M. SIVERTSON, Manager.

CARY SAFE CO..
BUFFALO, N. Y., U. S. A.
....Manufacturers of ....
Fire and Burglar Proof Safes
Vaults, Locks, Etc.
CONTRACTORS TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

SCANDIA-AMRERICAN BANK,
OF CROOKSTON, MINN.
Capital Stock $50,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits $13,000.
TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.
Special Attention to Collections. County, Town and School orders bought
INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.
C. HENDRICKSON.....PRE H. STEENERSON.....VICE-PRESIDENT
N. S. GERVAIS.....2D VICE-PRESIDENT. L. ELLINGTON.....CASHIER
A. P. HANSON, ASST. CASHIER.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IN HIS STEPS.

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By CHARLES M. SHELDON.

[Copyrighted and published in book form by the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago.]

CHAPTER X.

These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth.

When Dr. Bruce and the bishop entered the Sterling mansion, everything in the usually well appointed household was in the greatest confusion and terror. The great rooms down stairs were empty, but overhead were hurried footsteps and confused noises. One of the servants ran down the grand staircase with a look of horror on her face just as the bishop and Dr. Bruce were starting to go up.

"Miss Felicia is with Mrs. Sterling," the servant stammered in answer to a question and then burst into a hysterical cry and ran through the drawing room and out of doors.

At the top of the staircase the two men were met by Felicia.

She walked up to Dr. Bruce at once and put both hands in his. The bishop laid his hand on her head, and the three stood there a moment in perfect silence.

The bishop had known Felicia since she was a child. He was the first to break silence.

"The God of all mercy be with you, Felicia, in this dark hour. Your mother"—

The bishop hesitated. Out of the buried past he had during his hurried passage from his friend's house to this house of death irresistibly drawn the one tender romance of his young manhood. Not even Bruce knew that. But there had been a time when the bishop had offered the incense of a singularly undivided affection upon the altar of his youth to the beautiful Camilla Rolfe, and she had chosen between him and the millionaire. The bishop carried no bitterness with his memory, but it was still a memory.

For answer to the bishop's unfinished query Felicia turned and went back into her mother's room. She had not said a word yet, but both men were struck with her wonderful calm. She returned to the hall door and beckoned to them, and the two ministers, with a feeling that they were about to behold something very unusual, entered.

Rose lay with her arms outstretched on the bed; Clara, the nurse, sat with her head covered, sobbing in spasms of terror, and Mrs. Sterling, with "the light that never was on sea or land" luminous on her face, lay there so still that even the bishop was deceived at first. Then as the great truth broke upon him and Dr. Bruce he staggered, and the sharp agony of the old wound shot through him. It passed and left him standing there in that chamber of death with the eternal calmness and strength that the children of God have a right to possess, and right well he used that calmness and strength in the days that followed.

The next moment the house below was in a tumult. Almost at the same time the doctor, who had been sent for at once, but lived some distance away, came in, together with police officers who had been summoned by the frightened servants. With them were four or five newspaper correspondents and several neighbors. Dr. Bruce and the bishop met this miscellaneous crowd at the head of the stairs and succeeded in excluding all except those whose presence was necessary. With these the two friends learned all the facts ever known about "the Sterling tragedy," as the papers in their sensational accounts next day called it.

Mr. Sterling had gone into his room that evening about 9 o'clock, and that was the last seen of him until in half an hour a shot was heard and a servant who was in the hall ran into the room and found the owner of the house dead on the floor, killed by his own hand. Felicia at the time was sitting by her mother. Rose was reading in the library. She ran up stairs, saw her father as he was being lifted upon the couch by the servants and then ran screaming into her mother's room, where she flung herself down on the foot of the bed in a swoon. Mrs. Sterling had at first fainted at the shock, then rallied with wonderful swiftness and sent a messenger to call Dr. Bruce. She had then insisted on seeing her husband. In spite of Felicia, she had compelled Clara and the housemaid, terrified and trembling, to support her while she crossed the hall and entered the room where her husband lay. She had looked upon him with a tearless face, had gone back into her own room, was laid on the bed, and as Dr. Bruce and the bishop entered the house she, with a prayer of forgiveness for herself and her husband on her quivering lips, had died, with Felicia bending over her and Rose still lying senseless at her feet.

So great and swift had been the entrance of grim death into that palace of luxury that Sunday night, but the full cause of his coming was not known until the facts in regard to Mr. Sterling's business affairs were finally disclosed.

Then it was learned that for some time he had been facing financial ruin owing to certain speculations that had in a month's time swept his supposed wealth into complete destruction. With the cunning and desperation of a man who battles for his very life, when he saw his money, which was all the life he ever valued, slipping from him he had put off the evil day to the last moment. Sunday afternoon, however, he had received news that proved to him beyond a doubt the fact of his utter ruin. The very house that he called his, the chairs in which he sat, his carriage, the dishes from which he ate, had all been bought by money for which he himself had never really done an honest stroke of pure labor.

It had all rested on a tissue of deceit and speculation that had no foundation in real values. He knew the fact better than any one else, but he had hoped, with the hope that such men always have, that the same methods that brought him the money would also prevent its loss. He had been deceived in this, as many others have been. As soon as the truth that he was practically a beggar had dawned upon him he saw no escape from suicide. It was the irresistible result of such a life as he had lived. He had made money his god. As soon as that god had gone out of his little world there was nothing more to worship, and when a man's object of worship is gone he has no more to live for. Thus died the great millionaire, Charles R. Sterling, and, verily, he died as the fool dieth, for what is the gain or the loss of money compared with the unsearchable riches of eternal life, which are far beyond the reach of worldly speculation, loss or change?

Mrs. Sterling's death was the result of shock. She had not been taken into her husband's confidence for years, but she knew that the source of his wealth was precarious. Her life for several years had been a death in life. The Rolfes always gave the impression that they could endure more disaster unmoved than any one else. Mrs. Sterling illustrated the old family tradition when she was carried into the room where her husband lay, but the feeble tenement could not hold the spirit, and it gave up the ghost, torn and weakened by long years of suffering and disappointment.

The effect of this triple blow, the death of father and mother and the loss of property, was instantly apparent in the sisters. The horror of events stupefied Rose for weeks. She lay unmoved by sympathy or any effort to rally. She did not seem yet to realize that the money which had been so large a part of her very existence was gone. Even when she was told that she and Felicia must leave the house and be dependent upon relatives and friends she did not seem to understand what it meant.

Felicia, however, was fully conscious of the facts. She knew just what had happened and why. She was talking over her future plans with her cousin Rachel a few days after the funerals. Mrs. Winslow and Rachel had left Raymond and come to Chicago at once as soon as the terrible news had reached them, and with other friends of the family they were planning for the future of Rose and Felicia.

"Felicia, you and Rose must come to Raymond with us. That is settled. Mother will not hear of any other plan at present," Rachel had said, while her beautiful face glowed with love for her cousin, a love that had deepened day by day and was intensified by the knowledge that they both belonged to the new discipleship.

"Unless I could find something to do here," answered Felicia. She looked wistfully at Rachel, and Rachel said gently:

"What could you do, dear?"

"Nothing. I was never taught to do anything except a little music, and I do not know enough about it to teach it or earn my living at it. I have learned to cook a little," Felicia answered, with a slight smile.

"Then you can cook for us. Mother is always having trouble with her kitchen," said Rachel, understanding well enough that Felicia was thinking of the fact that she was now dependent for her very food and shelter upon the kindness of family friends.

It is true, the girls received a little something out of the wreck of their father's fortune, but with a speculator's mad folly he had managed to involve both his wife's and his children's portions in the common ruin.

"Can I? Can I?" Felicia replied to Rachel's proposition, as if it were to be considered seriously. "I am ready to do anything honorable to make my living and that of Rose. Poor Rose! She will never be able to get over the shock of our trouble."

"We will arrange the details when we get to Raymond," Rachel said, smiling through her tears at Felicia's eager willingness to care for herself.

So in a few weeks Rose and Felicia found themselves a part of the Winslow family in Raymond. It was a bitter experience for Rose, but there was nothing else for her to do, and she accepted the inevitable, brooding over the great change in her life and in many ways adding to the burden of Felicia and her cousin Rachel.

Felicia at once found herself in an atmosphere of discipleship that was like heaven to her in its revelation of companionship. It is true that Mrs. Winslow was not in sympathy with the course that Rachel was taking, but the remarkable events since the pledge had been taken were too powerful in their results not to impress even such a woman as Mrs. Winslow. With Rachel Felicia found a perfect fellowship. She at once found a part to take in the new work at the Rectangle. In the spirit of her new life she insisted upon helping in the housework at her aunt's and in a short time demonstrated her ability as a cook so clearly that Virginia suggested that she take charge of the cooking class at the Rectangle.

Felicia entered upon this work with the keenest pleasure. For the first time in her life she had the delight of doing something of value for the happiness of others. Her resolve to do everything after asking, "What would Jesus do?" touched her deepest nature. She began to develop and strengthen wonderfully.

Even Mrs. Winslow was obliged to acknowledge the great usefulness and beauty of Felicia's character. The aunt looked with astonishment upon her niece, this city bred girl, reared in the greatest luxury, the daughter of a millionaire, now walking around in her kitchen, her arms covered with flour and occasionally a streak of it on her nose—for Felicia at first had a habit of rubbing her nose forgetfully when she was trying to remember some recipe—mixing various dishes, with the greatest interest in their results, washing up pans and kettles and doing the ordinary work of a servant in the Winslow kitchen and at the rooms of the Rectangle settlement. At first Mrs. Winslow remonstrated.

"Felicia, it is not your place to be out here doing this common work. I cannot allow it."

"Why, aunt? Don't you like the muffins I made this morning?" Felicia would ask meekly, but with a hidden smile, knowing her aunt's weakness for that kind of muffin.

"They were beautiful, Felicia, but it does not seem right for you to be doing such work for us."

"Why not? What else can I do?"

Her aunt looked at her thoughtfully, noting her remarkable beauty of face and expression.

"You do not always intend to do this kind of work, Felicia?"

"Maybe I shall. I have had a dream of opening an ideal cookshop in Chicago or some large city and going around to the poor families in some slum district like the Rectangle, teaching the mothers how to prepare food properly. I remember hearing Dr. Bruce say once that he believed one of the great miseries of comparative poverty consisted in poor food. He even went so far as to say that he thought some kinds of crime could be traced to soggy biscuits and tough beefsteak. I'm confident I would be able to make a living for Rose and myself and at the same time to help others."

Felicia brooded over this dream until it became a reality. Meanwhile she grew into the affections of the Raymond people and the Rectangle folks, among whom she was known as "the angel cook." Underneath the structure of the beautiful character she was growing always rested her promise made in Nazareth Avenue church.

"What would Jesus do?" She prayed and hoped and worked and planned her life by the answer to that question.

It was the inspiration of her conduct and the answer to all her ambition.

Three months had gone by since the Sunday morning when Dr. Bruce came into his pulpit with the message of the new discipleship. Never before had the Rev Calvin Bruce realized how deep the feelings of his members flowed. He humbly confessed that the appeal he had made met with an unexpected response from men and women who, like Felicia, were hungry for something in their lives that the conventional type of church membership and fellowship had failed to give them.

But Dr. Bruce was not yet satisfied for himself. We cannot tell what his feeling was or what led to the movement he finally made, to the great astonishment of all who knew him, better than by relating a conversation between him and the bishop at this time in the history of the pledge in Nazareth Avenue church. The two friends were, as before, in Dr. Bruce's house, seated in his study.

"You know what I have come in this evening for?" the bishop was saying after the friends had been talking some time about the results of the pledge with Nazareth Avenue people.

Dr Bruce looked over at the bishop and shook his head.

"I have come to confess," went on the bishop, "that I have not yet kept my promise to walk in his steps in the way that I believe I shall be obliged to if I satisfy my thought of what it means to walk in his steps."

Dr Bruce had risen and was pacing his study. The bishop remained in the deep easy chair, with his hands clasped, but his eye burned with the glow that always belonged to him before he made some great resolve.

"Edward"—Dr. Bruce spoke abruptly—"I have not yet been able to satisfy myself, either, in obeying my promise, but I have at last decided on my course. In order to follow it, I shall be obliged to resign from Nazareth Avenue church."

"I knew you would," replied the bishop quietly, "and I came in this evening to say that I shall be obliged to do the same with my charge."

Dr. Bruce turned and walked up to his friend. They were both laboring under repressed excitement.

"Is it necessary in your case?" asked Bruce.

"Yes. Let me state my reasons. Probably they are the same as yours. In fact, I am sure they are." The bishop paused a moment, then went on with increasing feeling:

"Calvin, you know how many years I have been doing the work of my position, and you know something of the responsibility and the care of it. I do not mean to say that my life has been free from burden bearing or sorrow, but I have certainly led what the poor and desperate of this sinful city would call a very comfortable—yes, a very luxurious—life. I have a beautiful house to live in, the most expensive food, clothing and physical pleasures. I have been able to go abroad at least a dozen times and have enjoyed for years the beautiful companionship of art and letters and music and all the rest of the very best. I have never known what it meant to be without money or its equivalent, and I have been unable to silence the question of late, 'What have I suffered for the sake of Christ?' Paul was told what great things he must suffer for the sake of his Lord. Maxwell's position at Raymond is well taken when he insists that to walk in the steps of Christ means to suffer. Where has my suffering come in? The petty trials and annoyances of my clerical life are not worth mentioning as sorrows or suffering. Compared with Paul or any of the Christian martyrs or early disciples, I have lived a luxurious, sinful life, full of ease and pleasure. I cannot endure this any longer. I have that within me which of late rises in overwhelming condemnation of such a following of Jesus. I have not been walking in his steps. Under the present system of church and social life I see no escape from this condemnation except to give the rest of my life personally to the actual physical and soul needs of the wretched people in the worst part of this city."

The bishop had risen now and walked over to the window. The street in front of the house was as light as day, and he looked out at the crowds passing, then turned, and, with a passionate utterance that showed how deep the volcanic fire in him burned, he exclaimed:

"Calvin, this is a terrible city in which we live. Its misery, its sin, its selfishness, appall my heart, and I have struggled for years with the sickening dread of the time when I should be forced to leave the pleasant luxury of my official position to put my life into contact with the modern paganism of this century. The awful condition of the girls in the great department stores, the brutal selfishness of the insolent society, fashion and wealth that ignores all the sorrows of the city, the fearful curse of the drink and gambling hell, the wail of the unemployed, the hatred of the church by countless men who see in the church only great piles of costly stone and upholstered furniture and the minister as a luxurious idler, all the vast tumult of this vast torrent of humanity with its false and its true ideas, its exaggeration of evils in the church and its bitterness and shame that are the result of many complex causes—all this as a total fact, in its contrast with the easy, comfortable life I have lived, fills me more and more with a sense of mingled terror and self accusation. I have heard the words of Jesus many times lately, 'Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, my brethren, ye did it not to me.' And when have I personally visited the prisoner or the desperate or the sinful in any way that has actually caused me suffering? Rather I have followed the conventional, soft habits of my position and have lived in the society of the rich, refined, aristocratic members of my congregations. Where has the suffering come in? What have I suffered for Jesus' sake? Do you know, Calvin"—the bishop turned abruptly toward his friend—"I have been tempted of late to lash myself with a scourge. If I had lived in Martin Luther's time, I would have bared my back to a self inflicted torture."

Dr. Bruce was very pale. Never had he seen the bishop or heard him when under the influence of such a passion. There was a sudden silence in the room. The bishop had sat down again and bowed his head. Dr. Bruce spoke at last:

"Edward, I do not need to say that you have expressed my feelings also. I have been in a similar position for years. My life has been one of comparative luxury. I do not, of course, mean to say that I have not had trials and discouragements and burdens in my church ministry, but I cannot say that I have suffered any for Jesus. That verse in Peter haunts me, 'Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example that ye should follow his steps.' I have lived in luxury. I do not know what it means to want. I also have had my leisure for travel and beautiful companionship. I have been surrounded by soft, easy comforts of civilization. The sin and misery of this great city have beat like waves against the stone walls of my church and of this house in which I live, and I have hardly heeded them, the walls have been so thick. I have reached a point where I cannot endure this any longer. I am not condemning the church. I love her. I am not forsaking the church. I believe in her mission and have no desire to destroy. Least of all, in the step I am about to take, do I desire to be charged with abandoning the Christian fellowship, but I feel I must resign my place as pastor of Nazareth Avenue church in order to satisfy myself that I am walking as I ought to walk in his steps. In this action I judge no other ministers and pass no criticism on others' discipleship, but I feel as you do. Into a closer contact with the sin and shame and degradation of this great city I must come personally, and I know that to do that I must sever my immediate connection with Nazareth Avenue church. I do not see any other way for myself to suffer for his sake as I feel that I ought to suffer."

Again that sudden silence fell over these two men. It was no ordinary action they were deciding. They had both reached the same conclusion by the same reasoning, and they were too thoughtful, too well accustomed to the measuring of conduct, to underestimate the seriousness of their position.

"What is your plan?" The bishop at last spoke gently, looking up with his smile that always beautified his face. The bishop's face grew in glory now every day.

"My plan," replied Dr. Bruce slowly, "is, in brief, the putting of myself into the center of the greatest human need I can find in this city and living there. My wife is fully in accord with me. We have already decided to find a residence in that part of the city where we can make our personal lives count for the most."

"Let me suggest a place." The bishop was on fire now. His fine face actually glowed with the enthusiasm of the movement in which he and his friend were inevitably embarked. He went on and unfolded a plan of such farreaching power and possibility that Dr. Bruce, capable and experienced as he was, felt amazed at the vision of a greater soul than his own.

They sat up late and were as eager and even glad as if they were planning for a trip together to some rare land of unexplored travel. Indeed the bishop said many times afterward that the moment his decision was reached to live the life of personal sacrifice he had chosen he suddenly felt an uplifting, as if a great burden was taken from him. He was exultant. So was Dr. Bruce from the same cause.

Their plan as it finally grew into a workable fact was in reality nothing more than the renting of a large building formerly used as a warehouse for a brewery, reconstructing it and living in it themselves in the very heart of a territory where the saloon ruled with power, where the tenement was its filthiest, where vice and ignorance and shame and poverty were congested into hideous forms. It was not a new idea. It was an idea started by Jesus Christ when he left his Father's house and forsook the riches that were his in order to get nearer humanity and, by becoming a part of its sin, help to draw humanity apart from its sin. The university settlement idea is not modern. It is as old as Bethlehem and Nazareth, and in this particular case it was the nearest approach to anything that would satisfy the hunger of these two men to suffer for Christ. There had sprung up in them at the same time a longing that amounted to a passion to get nearer the great physical poverty and spiritual destitution of the mighty city that throbbed around them. How could they do this except as they became a part of it, as nearly as one man can become a part of another's misery? Where was the suffering to come in unless there was an actual self denial of some sort? And what was to make that self denial apparent to themselves or any one else unless it took this concrete, actual, personal form of trying to share the deepest suffering and sin of the city?

So they reasoned for themselves, not judging others. They were simply keeping their own pledge to do as Jesus would do, as they honestly judged he would do. That was what they had promised. How could they quarrel with the result? They were irresistibly compelled to do what they were planning to do.

The bishop had money of his own. Every one in Chicago knew that the bishop had a handsome fortune. Dr. Bruce had acquired and saved by literary work carried on in connection with his parish duties more than a comfortable competence. This money, a large part of it, the two friends agreed to put at once into the work, most of it into the furnishing of a settlement house.

Meanwhile Nazareth Avenue church was experiencing something never known before in all its history. The simple appeal on the part of its pastor to his members to do as Jesus would do had created a sensation that still continued. The result of that appeal was very much the same as in Henry Maxwell's church in Raymond, only Nazareth Avenue church was far more aristocratic, wealthy and conventional. Nevertheless when one Sunday morning in early summer Dr. Bruce came into his pulpit and announced his resignation the sensation deepened all over the city, although Dr. Bruce had advised with his board of trustees, and the movement he intended was not a matter of surprise to them.

But when it became publicly known that the bishop also had announced his retirement from the position he had held so long in order to go and live himself in the center of the worst part of Chicago the public astonishment reached its height.

"But why," the bishop replied to one valued friend who had almost with tears tried to dissuade him from his purpose—"why should what Dr. Bruce and I propose to do seem so remarkable a thing, as if it were unheard of that a doctor of divinity and a bishop should want to save souls in this particular manner. If we were to resign our charges for the purpose of going to Bombay or Hongkong or any place in Africa, the churches and the people would exclaim at the heroism of missions. Why should it seem so great a thing if we have been led to give our lives to help rescue the heathen and the lost of our own city in the way we are going to try? Is it, then, such a tremendous event that two Christian ministers should be not only willing but eager to live close to the misery of the world in order to know it and realize it? Is it such a rare thing that love of humanity should find this particular form of expression in the rescue of souls?"

However the bishop may have satisfied himself that there ought to be nothing so remarkable about it all, the public continued to talk and the churches to record their astonishment that two such men, so prominent in the ministry, should leave their comfortable homes, voluntarily resign their pleasant social positions and enter upon a life of hardship, of self denial and actual suffering. Christian America! Is it a reproach upon the form of our discipleship that the exhibition of actual suffering for Jesus on the part of those who walk in his steps always provokes astonishment, as at the sight of something very unusual?

Nazareth Avenue church parted from its pastor with regret for the most part, although the regret was modified by some relief on the part of those who had refused to take the pledge. Dr. Bruce carried with him the respect of men who, entangled in business in such a way that obedience to the pledge would have ruined them, still held in their deeper, better natures a genuine admiration for courage and consistency. They had known Dr. Bruce many years as a kindly, safe man, but the thought of him in the light of sacrifice of this sort was not familiar to them. As fast as they understood it they gave their pastor the credit of being absolutely true to his recent convictions as to what following Jesus meant. Nazareth Avenue church has never lost the impulse of that movement started by Dr Bruce. Those who went with him in making the promise breathed into the church the very breath of divine life and are continuing that life giving work at the present time.

It was fall again, and the city faced another hard winter. The bishop one afternoon came out of the settlement and walked around the block, intending to go on a visit to one of his new friends in the district. He had walked about four blocks when he was attracted by a shop that looked different from the others. The neighborhood was still quite new to the bishop, and every day he discovered some strange spot or stumbled upon some unexpected humanity.

The place that attracted his notice was a small house close by a Chinese laundry. There were two windows in the front, very clean, and that was remarkable, to begin with. Then inside the window was a tempting display of cookery, with prices attached to the various articles, that made the bishop wonder somewhat, for he was familiar by this time with many facts in the life of the people once unknown to him.

As he stood looking at the windows the door between them opened, and Felicia Sterling came out.

"Felicia!" said the bishop. "When did you move into my parish without my knowledge?"

"How did you find me so soon?" asked Felicia.

"Why, don't you know? These are the only clean windows in the block."

"I believe they are," replied Felicia, with a laugh that did the bishop good to hear.

"But why have you dared to come to Chicago without telling me, and how have you entered my diocese without my knowledge?" asked the bishop, and Felicia looked so like that beautiful, clean, educated, refined world he once knew that he might be pardoned for seeing in her something of the old paradise, although, to speak truth for the bishop, he had no desire to go back to it again.

"Well, dear bishop," said Felicia, who had always called him so whenever they had met, "I know how overwhelmed you were with your work. I did not want to burden you with my plans, and, besides, I am going to offer you my services. Indeed I was just on my way to see you and ask your advice. I am settled here for the present with Mrs. Bascom, a saleswoman who rents our three rooms, and with one of Rachel's music pupils, who is being helped to a course in violin by Virginia Page. She is from the people," continued Felicia, using the words "from the people" so gravely and unconsciously that the bishop smiled, "and I am keeping house for her and at the same time beginning an experiment in pure food for the masses. I am an expert, and I have a plan I want you to admire and develop. Will you, dear bishop?"

"Indeed I will," replied the bishop. The sight of Felicia and her remarkable vitality, enthusiasm and evident purpose almost bewildered him.

"Martha can help at the settlement with her violin, and I will help with my messes. You see, I thought I would get settled first and work out something and then come with some real thing to offer. I'm able to earn my own living now."

"You are?" The bishop said it a little incredulously. "How? Making those things?"

" 'Those things!' " said Felicia, with a show of indignation. "I would have you know, sir, that 'those things' are the best cooked, purest food products in this whole city."

"I don't doubt it," said the bishop hastily, while his eyes twinkled. "Still, the 'proof of the pudding'— You know the rest."

"Come in and try some," exclaimed Felicia. "You poor bishop! You look as if you hadn't had a good meal for a month."

She insisted on the bishop's entering the little front room where Martha, a wide awake girl with short curly hair and an unmistakable air of music about her, was busy with practice.

"Go right on, Martha. This is the bishop. You have heard me speak of him so often. Sit down here and let me give you a taste of the fleshpots of Egypt, for I believe you have been actually fasting."

So Felicia and the bishop had an improvised lunch, and the bishop, who, to tell the truth, had not taken time for weeks to enjoy his meals, feasted on the delight of his unexpected discovery and was able to express his astonishment and gratification at the quality of the cookery.

"I thought you would at least say it was as good as the meals you used to get at the Auditorium at the big banquets," said Felicia slyly.

" 'As good as!' The Auditorium banquets were simply husks compared to this one, Felicia. But you must come to the settlement. I want you to see what we are doing. And I am simply astonished to find you here earning your living this way. I begin to see what your plan is. You can be of infinite help to us. You don't really mean that you will live here and help these people to know the value of good food?"

"Indeed I do," Felicia answered gravely. "That is my gospel. Shall I not follow it?"

"Aye, aye! You're right. Bless God for sense like yours. When I left the world"—the bishop smiled at the phrase—"they were talking a good deal about the 'new woman.' If you are one of them, I am a convert right now and here."

"Flattery still! Is there no escape from it even in the slums of Chicago?" Felicia laughed again, and the bishop's heart, heavy though it had grown during several months of vast sin bearing, rejoiced to hear it. It sounded good. It was good. It belonged to God.

Felicia wanted to visit the settlement and went back with the bishop. She was amazed at the results of what considerable money and a good deal of consecrated brains had done. As they walked through the building they talked incessantly. Felicia was the incarnation of vital enthusiasm. Even the bishop wondered at the exhibition of it as it bubbled up and sparkled over.

They went down into the basement, and the bishop pushed open the door, from behind which came the sound of a carpenter's plane. It was a small but well equipped carpenter's shop. A young man with a paper cap on his head and clad in blouse and overalls was whistling and driving the plane as he whistled. He looked up as the bishop and Felicia entered and took off his cap. As he did so his little finger carried a small curling shaving up to his hair, and it caught there.

"Miss Sterling, Mr. Stephen Clyde," said the bishop. "Clyde is one of our helpers here two afternoons in the week."

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Just then the bishop was called up stairs, and he excused himself for a moment, leaving Felicia and the young carpenter together.

"We have met before," said Felicia, looking at Clyde frankly.

"Yes, back in the world,' as the bishop says." replied the young man, and his fingers trembled a little as they lay on the board he had been planing.

"Yes." Felicia hesitated. "I am very glad to see you."

"Are you?" The flush of pleasure mounted to the young carpenter's forehead. "You have had a great deal of trouble since—then?" he said, and then he was afraid he had wounded her or called up painful memories, but Felicia had lived over all that.

"Yes, and you also. How is it you are working here?"

"It is a long story, Miss Sterling. My father lost his money, and I was obliged to go to work, a very good thing for me. The bishop says I ought to be grateful. I am. I am very happy now. I learned the trade boping some time to be of use. I am night clerk at one of the hotels. That Sunday morning when you took the pledge at Nazareth Avenue church I took it with the others."

"Did you?" said Felicia slowly. "I am glad."

Just then the bishop came back, and very soon he and Felicia went away, leaving the young carpenter at his work. Some one noticed that he whistled louder than ever as he planned.

"Felicia," said the bishop, "did you know Stephen Clyde before?"

"Yes, 'back in the world,' dear bishop. He was one of my acquaintances in Nazareth Avenue church."

"Ah!" said the bishop.

"We were very good friends," added Felicia.

"But nothing more?" the bishop ventured to ask.

Felicia's face glowed for an instant. Then she looked the bishop in the eyes frankly and answered:

"Truly and truly, nothing more."

"It would be just the way of the world for those two people to come to like each other, though," thought the bishop to himself, and somehow the thought made him grave. It was almost like the old gang over Camilla, but it passed, leaving him afterward, when Felicia had gone back, with tears in his eyes and a feeling that was almost hope that Felicia and Stephen would like each other. "After all," said the bishop, like the sensible, good man that he was, "is not romance a part of humanity? Love is older than I am answer."

The week following the bishop had an experience that belongs to this part of the settlement's history.

He was coming back to the settlement very late from some gathering of the striking tailors and was walking along, with his hands behind him, when two men jumped out from behind an old fence that shut off an abandoned factory from the street and faced him. One of the men thrust a pistol into the bishop's face, and the other threatened him with a ragged stake that had evidently been torn from the fence.

"Hold up your hands, and be quick about it!" said the man with the pistol.

The place was solitary, and the bishop had no thought of resistance. He did as he was commanded, and the man with the stake began to go through his pockets. The bishop was calm. His nerves did not quiver. As he stood there with his arms uplifted an ignorant spectator might have thought that he was praying for the souls of those two men. And he was, and his prayer was singularly answered that very night.

[CONTINUED.]

Danish Butter.

Professor Marshall of the Michigan Agricultural college has just returned from a three months' visit to Denmark. He says, after alluding to the high reputation which Danish butter has in England, "The high quality of Denmark's butter is dependent upon (1) cleanliness in milking and in all butter making operations; (2) pasteurization of the cream, which is at the present time practically universal; (3) the rational use of starters; (4) careful supervision of feeds for milk cows; (5) the adoption of scientific methods in the creameries; (6) the stimulus offered by their butter shows; (7) the favorable location of the country; (8) the absolute control of export trade." That last item, we think, is of no small importance, and if the butter and cheese sent from this country had all been inspected and the imitations and indifferent packed butter and filled cheese had been prohibited from exportation and only the best grades sent out our dairy product would now have had a good reputation fairly won on its merits.

What a Creamery Does.

There are four creameries contiguous to Ackley, Ia., and The World of that place says of the benefit to a community of a creamery: "The operation of a well conducted creamery in a community where it was before unknown works a revolution in all directions on the farm. It lightens the labors of the wife and daughters; it secures a month's certain cash income; it restores impoverished acres; it means more and better pigs, more and better calves, a more equal distribution of farm work all the year round. It will do more for a community than a new railroad and will without fail lift a chattel mortgage and down at the heel grain raiser into a plane of independence and comfort, while it and what naturally grows out of such a system of agriculture will vitalize the depleted soil and in a few years double its productive capacity. This is neither theorizing nor fanciful speculation, but a plain statement of cause and effect. It has been done and is being done all over the west.

Systematic Tooling.

Some of the Minlue creameries have formed an organization which employs manpower to test the milk at a central station.

FOR THE FARMER

Every now and then some one asks us to explain the difference between nitrogen and nitrogen as printed on fertilizer tags, says Rural New Yorker. Nitrogen is one of the elementary substances. Ammonia is nitrogen mixed with another gas called hydrogen. Hydrogen has no value as a fertilizer. Nitrogen in 14 times its bulk or heavy as hydrogen. Ammonia is a mixture of one part of nitrogen and three parts of hydrogen. A pound of nitrogen will therefore, contains only 13 1-5 ounces of available nitrogen. You will see that if a fertilizer contains 2 per cent of nitrogen it would naturally contain nearly 2½ per cent of ammonia, because all the nitrogen would be combined with a certain amount of hydrogen, and thus give more weight. Perhaps we can make a practical illustration by comparing wheat flour and bread. Every body knows that, so far as food value is concerned, we would rather have a pound of flour than a pound of bread, because the bread contains not only the flour, but water, salt and other things which are not true food. Let us say that a pound of flour would make 1½ pounds of bread. A baker might say, "Here is a barrel of flour, weighing 196 pounds, which we have turned into 294 pounds of bread." No man would say that 196 pounds of bread contain as much food as the barrel of flour. The difference, therefore, between nitrogen and ammonia is that a pound of nitrogen is all useful as plant food, whereas only 13½ ounces of ammonia are worth anything to the plant.

High Price of Meat.

The predictions made last spring and summer that there would soon be a dearth of cattle and swine in this country seems to be realized if the advancing prices of meats are any indication, writes E. P. Smith in the Boston Cultivator. It is not always that advances in the retail prices of meats benefit the cattlemen and farmers, but they should if matters are rightly regulated. The producers of cattle should refuse to sell if they cannot share in the advance in prices, especially in a year like this, when there is none too many in the country. In cattle raising for market breeders should keep in mind the fact that they practically control prices if they but co-operate. The small breeders are of course at the mercy of the large ones and must let their cattle go for the prices that the large ones sell at. The breeder who owns a thousand head of cattle can on good cral principles sell his cattle at less per pound and make a profit than the farmer who raises a dozen. If one understands his business, it is easier to conduct a large cattle enterprise than a small one, and profits are correspondingly more satisfactory. Quick profits and many of them should be the motto of the breeders today. Good times may not last long, but while they do we should make the most of them. Bred animals rapidly and fatten them for the market in the very shortest time possible. Then, when the trade barometer indicates a falling off in demand, and the supply in the country is large, sell quickly, even at a little less than you anticipated. Do not find yourself in possession of large herds when the market is falling off.

Save Surplus Fruit.

Millions of dollars' worth of fruit annually goes to waste because in its marketable state, when grown, the market is glutted, says The Agricultural Epitomist. Evaporation would save much of this loss. Even drying in the sun is better than to permit the fruit to rot. The only trouble is that fruit honestly evaporated on the farm is compelled to compete with sulphured evaporated fruit. Not that, though it may be inferior in quality, sells at the highest price because it is of brighter color. Some of the finest appearing evaporated fruit will likely be found to have been treated either before or after evaporation with the fumes of sulphur; and it is probable that sulphur will be used as long as the eye of the consumer demands first to be satisfied. But with evaporators as cheap as they now are, and with a good market for such fruits during a large portion of the year, there can be no excuse for sacrificing any portion of the fruit crop.

What the Best Breeders Do.

Breeders generally would make money by observing the practice of those who command the highest prices for their cattle, says the Tennessee farmer. In the first place, they do everything in their power to keep up the standard of their herds. In the next place, they never cheapen their cattle by offering cheap bargains. As a rule, with very rare exceptions, the very best bargain offered in any sale is the highest priced animal. There are numbers of herds in the United States from which, in order to buy a choice calf, bulls are bought, one has to engage it before it is dropped. These are the herds whose practice it behooves the beginner to avoid.

Good For the Scrub Cow.

The best cow owned by the Kansas Agricultural college gave last year 9,116 pounds of milk and 384.7 pounds of butter fat. The value of the product for the year was $78.17. For the best month last year she gave 977 pounds of milk and 37.12 pounds of butter fat. For the first month of this year her milk yield was 1,260.1 pounds, which made 44.89 pounds of butter fat. This is an improvement over her best month last year of 273 pounds of milk and 7.77 pounds of butter fat, or 21 per cent.

The south and west have too much corn, too many hogs and too few sheep," according to a contemporary.

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate Under Judgment of Foreclosure.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss. District Court.

C. G. Sayre, plaintiff, vs. Edith M. Roberts, Ida M. Roberts, Charles Sheldon Wm. Yancey and W. S. Ives, defendants.

Notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of a Judgment and Decree entered in the above entitled action on the 14th day of December, 1899, a certified transcript of which has been delivered to me, I, the undersigned, Sheriff of said County of Polk, in pursuance thereto, to the hereof, will on Friday the 2nd day of February, 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the court house in the City of Crookston in said county, in one parcel, the premises in said Judgment described, and in said Judgment and Decree, to-wit: All that land and tenement of land situ and being in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit:

Lots twenty-four (24) and twenty-five (25) in Block one (1) of Crouse's addition to Crookston, which plat is hereby made to be the recorded plat thereof in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said county.

Dated Dec. 14, 1899.

THOMAS LAWRENCE,
Sheriff of Polk County.

A. A. MILLER,
Plaintiff's Attorney. 37-43

Order For Hearing Application For Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term Dec. 8, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Ole Grafer, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Annie M. Grafer, of the county of Allegheny, and state of Pennsylvania, representing among other things, that Michael Grafer, late of the county of Allegheny, on the 23rd day of May, 1899, died intestate, a resident of Allegheny, and leaving estate in this county, to-wit: the state of Minnesota, and that said petitioner is the widow of said deceased, and praying for letters of administration of said estate be to J. B. Foote, granted:

It is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said court on Friday the

Friday, the 5th day of January, 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the Probate Office in the city of Crookston, in said County.

It is further ordered, That notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minnesota, the 7th day of December, 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

36-39

—FOR SALE, two quarter section farms near Mentor, on easy terms. M. R. Waters 862 Guaranty Loan Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

Order For Hearing on Claims, etc.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Nov. 24, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Bertil C. Jorgenson, deceased.

It appearing that six months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date hereof for all persons all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the office of the said county, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is further ordered, That the

28th day of May, 1900

at ten o'clock a. m., at a special term of said Probate Court, to be held at the Probate Office in Crookston in said County, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said Probate Court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it is further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested, in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston.

Dated at Crookston this 28th day of November A. D. 1899.

OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

[34-37]

Order for Hearing Application for Appointment of Administrator.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 5, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Mary Strand, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Martin Strand of the County of Polk, representing, among other things, that Mary Strand late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the eighth day of November, A. D. 1899, died intestate, a resident of and being an inhabitant of this County of Polk, and leaving estate in this County, and that said petitioner is the husband of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to John Stegan granted,

It is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said court, on Friday the

29th day of December, A. D. 1899,

at ten o'clock a. m. at the Probate office, in the City of Crookston in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice thereof be given to said petitioner and to all other persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston, Minn. the 7th day of December A. D. 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

A. A. MILLER,
Attorney for Estate. 36-39

Order to Show Cause on Filing Petition to Sell Land.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Attle, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Nathan P. Stone, administrator of said estate, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, that the same is insufficient to pay the debts and charges of said deceased against said estate, and praying for a license to sell the real estate of said deceased, as far as necessary for the purpose aforesaid; and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead, of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions, as to them, of the widow and heirs, interested in said estate, with their residences, praying that license be to him granted to sell and convey the whole thereof at private sale, representing that said estate is insufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, and expenses of administration, and that it is necessary for the payment of said debts, and expenses to sell parts of said real estate:

It is Therefore Ordered, That all persons interested in said estate appear before this Court, on

Friday the 5th day of January 1900,

at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in Crookston in said County, then and there to show cause if any why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted, and license to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay said debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further Ordered, That this order be published three times each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said County.

Dated at Crookston the 7th day of December A. D. 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

In Bankruptcy.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Minnesota.

In the matter of Marvin T. Wold, bankrupt.

To the creditors of Marvin T. Wold, of East Grand Forks, in the County of Polk, and district aforesaid, bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 9th day of December, A. D. 1899, the said Marvin T. Wold was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned, referee in bankruptcy, in the City of Crookston in the County of Polk in said district, on the

30th day of December, A. D. 1899,

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Dated Dec. 19 1899. OLE J. VAULE,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

McDERMOTT & MEYER,
Attorney for Bankrupt.
Grand Forks, N. D.

Order to Hearing Proof of Foreign Will.

State of Minnesota, County of Polk—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Dec. 7, 1899.

In the matter of the estate of Ole Graver, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Annie M. Graver, praying that the last Will and Testament of Ole Graver late of Allegheny County, Penn., deceased, and the probate thereof in the office of the Register of Wills, of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, have been delivered to this County, and that the same, Josephine M. Graver has filed there with her petition, representing among other things that said deceased was at the time of his decease a resident of and had his domicile in the County of Allegheny, State of Pennsylvania, and that said petitioner is widow of said deceased and executrix named in said will, and praying that said instrument may be admitted to probate in this court and that letters of administration with said will annexed be to J. P. Foote issued thereon.

It is ordered That the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this Court, at the Probate Office in said Crookston on Friday, the at ten o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument.

5th day of January, A. D., 1900,

And it is further ordered, That notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., the 7th day of Dec. 1899.

By the Court,
OLE E. HAGEN,
Judge of Probate.

36-39

Final Proof.

Land Office at Crookston, Minn., November 4, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn., on

December 15, 1899,

viz: Andrew W. Anderson, H. E. 8281 for the ne quarter of section 30 Township 146, Range 49.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole Peterson, Charles Thygeson, Ole Simonson, all of Crookston and Thor Thompson, of Erdred.

SYLVESTER PETERSON,
Register.

[38-7]

PATENTS TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS OBTAINED

ADVICE AS TO PATENTABILITY FREE
Notice in "Inventive Age" FREE
Book "How to obtain Patents" FREE

Charges moderate. No fee till patent is secured. Letters strictly confidential. Address,
E. G. SIGGERS, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C.

LION COFFEE

Used in Millions of Homes!

Accept no substitute! Insist on LION COFFEE, in 1 lb. pkgs.

These articles mailed FREE in exchange for lion heads cut from front of 1 lb. LION COFFEE pkgs.

Best Coffee for the Money!

Try LION COFFEE and you will never use any other. It is absolutely Pure Coffee and nothing but Coffee.

Silk Umbrella (either Lady's or Gents).

Sent by express (charges prepaid) for 170 lion heads and 2-cent stamp.

A very fine umbrella, made of union silk-taffeta; 26-inch frame with seven ribs; steel rod and silver Congo handle. Would cost $3.00 as the store.

STRENGTH, PURITY AND FLAVOR

Fancy Gold Ring.

Given for 18 lion heads and 2-cent stamp.

Genuine Ruby Setting Gold Ring.

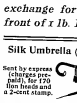
For 28 lion heads and 2-cent stamp.

These rings are genuine rolled-gold plate, having the exact appearance of solid gold, and guaranteed by the makers to last two years with ordinary usage. Give size of finger.

To Determine the Size.

Cut a strip of thick paper so that the ends will exactly meet when drawn fairly around second joint of the finger. Lay one end on the line of 1st size, and notice the number the other end indicates.

Dress-Pin Set.



Mailed free for 15 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. This pin is three times larger than illustration, and of fine rolled gold, with handsome raised pearl and setting. Suitable for waist, scarf pins, or as a present.

"Knickerbocker" Watch.

Given for 170 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Solid nickel, handsome and excellent time-keeper. Size 1¾ inches in diameter case, with heavy nickel-plated ring. Has second hand. Is a correct time-keeper. Is fully guaranteed. Engraved with "Knickerbocker" watch.

Pair of Lace Handkerchiefs.

Two extra fine quality linen handkerchiefs, with pretty lace border. So fine and beautiful that no lady can refuse them. Half-inch hem, machine hemstitched; each one with a pair of these beautiful laces given for 18 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2c. stamp.

Art Picture, "Easter Greeting"

Given for 8 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp.

A beautiful artistic picture, of the finest grade, the finest draw-ing. The background of the picture is a forest, the foreground a rich bank of flowers, in the midst of the little girl and her white Easter Bible. Size, 12x18 inches.

For 18 lion heads and 2 cents we will send it insured safely for framing.

Flower Picture.

Sash-Belt and Buckle.

Mention your waist measure when sending.

Mailed free for 18 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp. Latest style of fancy belt, with handsome nickel-plated buckle. Imitation oxidized silver buckle; neat, and fashionable.

Ladies' Watch Chain.

A double strand of best silk cord, united at intervals with colored beads; rest and fruits during a large portion of the year, there can be no excuse for sacrificing any portion of the fruit crop.

Mailed free for 90 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. The "Knickerbocker" watch; stem-wind and stem-set; durable nickel-plated case; each watch accompanied by a guarantee of the maker. A reliable time-keeper.

Gent's Watch.

Mailed free for 90 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. The "Knickerbocker" watch; stem-wind and stem-set; durable nickel-plated case; each watch accompanied by a guarantee of the maker. A reliable time-keeper.

Children's Picture Book.

Given for 10 lion heads and a 1-cent stamp. Sixteen large pages of Mother Goose Melodies and Nursery Rhymes, beautifully lithographed in colors. The finest book we have ever seen. You can get an assortment.

Silver Napkin-Ring.

For 18 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Solid nickel, triple-plated. Name put on solid metal, handsomely plated. Two different patterns.

Ladies' Pocket-Book.

Large size and handsomely made of soft grain leather, with fine calf lining, and containing a pocket-book with two solid nickel-plated coin-purses.

Given for 25 lion heads from Lion Coffee wrappers and 5 c. stamp.

Century Cook-Book.

For 8 lion heads and a 2c. stamp. Contains 300 pages of valuable recipes, also treating of the Value of Food, Diet in Health and Sickness, etc.

Coin-Purse.

For 18 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp. Color, blue. Size, 3½ inches long. Has leather chain-guard, and nickel-plated frame, with closing snap-fastening.

"The Dancing Lesson."

The finest rose and tinsel trees, the finest brown kittens and the gayest snow-white dress you ever saw. Delicious crystal sugar. Size, 9x8-21 inches. Mailed free for 5 lion heads and a 2-cent stamp.

Table Cover.

Durable, dark-colored covering material (not oil cloth) for stand or table. Size, 30 inches square. Mailed free for 25 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

Ladies' Pen-Knife.

For 18 lion heads cut from Lion Coffee wrappers and a 2-cent stamp. Fine quality; good material; handsomely decorated and inserted colors.

Boys' Pocket-Knife.

The "Eagle." Strong, sharp steel blade.

For 12 lion heads and a 2c. stamp.

THE ABOVE ARE ONLY A FEW OF THE LION COFFEE PREMIUMS. Another list will shortly appear in this paper! Don't miss it! The grandest list of premiums ever offered!

You always know LION COFFEE by the wrapper. It is a sealed package, with the lion's head in front. It is absolutely pure if the package is unbroken. LION COFFEE is roasted the day it leaves the factory.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

When writing for premiums send your letter in the same envelope or package with which you buy your coffee. If more than 15 lion heads are sent, save postage by trimming down the margins. Ask your grocer for large illustrated premium list, or address letters to the

WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Around the Country.

Weekly Reports from the Journal's Corps of News Gatherers.

NEILSVILLE.

Happy New Year to you all!

C. C. Melsness started for Erskine Wednesday morning this week to visit his folks near that place.

By haste we overlooked the confectionary store of S. G. Roe last week in the description of Neilsville.

Misses Lucy Kolden and Annie Spokklie returned from Crookston last Saturday evening to spend Christmas at home.

Miss Bird Wardwell, of Pembina, N. D., left for her home Saturday morning having taught a fall term of school in district 17.

Mrs. Johnson, of Crookston, returned home Saturday morning from a visit with her daughter Mrs. O. A. Paulsrud of this village.

Miss Aasse Hanson returned for Christmas vacation at home last Saturday morning from Moorhead where she is attending Concordia college.

Miss Mary Walstad, the wielder of the birch rule in the primary department of our school, went to Crookston last Saturday morning to spend her vacation with her folks.

The Christmas tree last Friday evening gotten up by our teachers Miss Mary Walstad and H. A. Howe was a decided success. Besides the program rendered by the children refreshments were served and the band played a couple of pieces.

The Christmas tree at church Tuesday evening this week was well attended, the church being filled to its uttermost capacity. A good program was rendered consisting of speeches by Rev. Brodland and others, speaking by the children, and singing by the Neilsville choir, the guitar band and the children respectively under the leadership of O. Berg. Refreshments were also served in the form of apples, nuts and candy, both to the children and grown up people. Many presents were also distributed.

WARREN.

G. F. Carlton returned from the Forks Thursday last.

N. P. Stone and family of Crookston were the guests of W. F. Powell and family during Christmas.

Miss Loela Easton is visiting her parents during her vacation. She has been attending school in Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Nichols of St. Paul are spending the holidays with Rev. Loomis and family. Mrs. Nichols is a daughter of Rev. Loomis and only recently married.

Miss Villa Wallace, who is attending the St. Cloud Normal, is spending her holiday vacation with her mother, Mrs. A. Wallace and sisters, Mrs. W. H. Hunter and Mrs. Charles Stevens.

Several cases of glanders have been discovered among horses in the township of McCrea. Dr. E. T. Frank, veterinary, has killed several horses in the advanced stages of the disease.

LENGBY.

Business is booming in Lengby.

A delightful Christmas was had here.

The Lengby debating society meets next Thursday.

O. Lommen lost a nice one-year-old colt on Saturday evening.

Stone Skualeho came home on Friday from a year's work at Halen, N. D.

Miss Julia Lillo went to Crookston on Tuesday to visit at the home of Louis Fontaine.

Miss Dartin Lillo came up from Fosston on Sunday to spend a week's vacation at home.

Henry Welte came up from Crookston on Sunday to spend Christmas with his parents north of town.

Joe Welte is sick in bed of rheumatism, but is improving fast under the care of Dr. MacKinnon, of Fosston.

A Christmas tree was had in the Swedish Lutheran church Tuesday night and one in the Lengby school house on Christmas eve. A nice time is reported being had at both places.

KITTSON.

Will Lemon left Tuesday night for Illinois.

Mr. DeMars spent Christmas with Mr. Price and family.

John Greenwall took the south bound train Friday night for his home in Wisconsin.

Mr. Robert Rose moved his family into Crookston last Wednesday for the rest of the winter.

Frank Smith and R. E. Smith and family ate dinner with A. J. Price and family on Christmas.

Fred Lafevor went to Crookston last week to make out papers preparatory to taking a section at Downer, but Fred came to the conclusion before he got through that he would rather-work under a boss than be a boss.

FOSSTON.

Robt. Gaynee is visiting friends at Grand Forks.

Dr. M. McKinnon was called to Dugdale Monday.

Prof. Yeager went to St. Paul to spend the vacation.

Miss Stadbeim went to Crookston Tuesday to visit friends.

Miss Crosby went to St. Cloud Friday to spend Christmas.

The POLK COUNTY JOURNAL'S Christmas number was admired by all.

The Christmas tree given in the Congregational church was a grand success.

W. E. Black went to Finley, N. D. Monday on business connected with his collection agency.

Mine host Al Leimbacher set up a sumptuous repast on Christmas day to his guests. His patrons can well say Merry Christmas.

The Fosston Woolen mills' employes have been quite busy during the past week sending appropriate winter Christmas presents for its patrons.

Claude Neilson was pleasantly surprised last Friday evening. Every employee and stockholder of the Fosston Woolen Mill, numbering about 35, went to his residence and presented him and his wife with costly presents.

Mrs. Babcock entertained her pupils in her room on Friday night with a literary programme, a Christmas tree and presents for all. This extra labor on her part was abundantly repaid by the appreciation of pupils and parents.

FERTILE

Christmas passed off quietly this year.

We understand Woodside is to have a daily mail.

All the merchants are busy taking invoice this week.

Roy Nichols visited at Crookston Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Gerty Johnson is spending the holidays with her Fertile friends.

Mr. Barr went to Grafton Sunday to spend Christmas with his brother.

It is reported that Rev. Gjeore is going to preach in English Sunday evenings.

Several of our school ma'ams went to Fergus Falls last week to spend the holidays.

Miss Blanch Laymon is over from Caledonia, N. D., visiting relatives and friends.

The Odd Fellows are going to have a sociable time at their hall next Monday evening.

Haus Haukoss returned to his home in Washington last week. Knut Bolli went back with him.

Joseph Smith of Crookston was in town Tuesday in the interest of his insurance business.

Dr. Anderson went to Minneapolis Saturday evening to spend the holidays with his mother.

Nels Christianson went to see the Christmas tree at the Gullickson school house Monday evening.

Sheriff Lawrence came down from Crookston Monday evening and made a trip out into the country.

The Christmas entertainment at the hall was well attended, and the program very much appreciated.

Several of our young people spent a sociable evening at the home of Clark Goodale, in Liberty, Christmas evening.

The Young Ladies Society will meet at the hall Thursday evening. They expect this to be the largest meeting of the year.

Otto and Gustav Kankel, Samuel La Due and Fay Ward returned home from school last week to spend the holidays.

Ed Bonds came down from Drayton Saturday to spend Christmas with friends in Liberty. He returned Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kankel, Mr. and Mrs. F. Cooke and Mrs. Popp came up from Ulen Saturday to spend the holidays with relatives and friends.

Claude Hause expects to be down New Year's to spend a few days. His friends will be glad to see him, and will endeavor to make his visit a pleasant one.

The Misses Schultz and Gedosch have returned to their home in Paynesville. They returned home sooner than they expected on account of the illness of Miss Gedosch's mother.

Roy Ward had a lively ride Tuesday evening. He hitched up a horse that wasn't used to being driven single. When he got near town the horse got frightened and started to run. Roy could not pull him up as the buggy would run on to the horse's heels, so he had to let him run. The horse ran four or five miles before he thought he had enough.

ANGUS.

A. Christofferson was in Warren on Friday.

S. Clover was in Crookston on Wednesday.

Leif Tausan spent Saturday in Warren.

Mrs. H. C. Clark was in Warren on Saturday.

Frank Taus was in Warren on Saturday.

Miss Alice King came home from Warren Sunday.

G. Evans was in Warren on Thursday doing business.

Frank Horton of Sherack spent Monday evening in town.

A. E. Brush took the train Saturday evening for St. Paul.

Nels Moe went to Halstad on Saturday to visit his family.

T. T. Brush and wife left on Saturday evening for St. Paul.

Cal. M. Palmer and daughters drove to Grand Forks Wednesday.

Mrs. J. L. Cowden and Mrs. King drove to Warren on Wednesday.

Harry Miller came home from St. Paul last Monday for the holidays.

Several of the Angus boys took in the Shadow social Thursday night at Key West.

P. McLennen, J. F. Montgomery and A. T. Campion were in Crookston Tuesday night.

Mrs. D. H. Miller and daughter Jessie and son Harry were in Grand Forks on Wednesday.

George Briggs left Friday night for Minneapolis. He was accompanied as far as Crookston by J. F. Montgomery and wife.

LOCKHART.

I wish you a happy New Year!

J. D. McPhee was in Ada last week.

Mrs. J. D. McPhee was visiting Mrs. Manss.

R. W. LeGear and his wife drove to Beltrami Saturday.

S. B. Palmer was in Ada Friday attending to business.

Christmas passed off very quietly in this part of the country.

Mrs. Charles Wilson ate Christmas dinner with Mrs. S. B. Palmer.

We have real winter weather now, but nearly all the snow is blown away.

Miss Tracy Milkoeski drove to Ada Saturday and returned Saturday evening.

Mrs. Manss and son Carl were in Ada Saturday doing their Christmas shopping.

Miss Eva Clark, who went to the southern part of the state to regain her health, has returned much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Casselman and his mother were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harry Legear Christmas.

Carl Ubert, who has been working for Mr. Palmer for eight months, has returned to his home in Crookston, where he will spend the rest of the winter.

BELTRAMI.

P. J. and J. J. Cary drove to Crookston Saturday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Welte, of Crookston, are in town attending Christmas greetings to their friends.

Beltrami boys had an old fashioned country dance at P. McKinnon's on Friday evening and had a good time until the small hours of the next day.

Saturday was the liveliest day in town for some time. Auctions for the sale of Christmas presents were held and many dollars' worth were disposed of by our merchants.

Thofield Nesen, of the town of Russia, was in town Saturday with his wife, daughter and two sons all day. A big day's shopping judging from the looks of their pile on the merchant's counter.

The public school here will be divided into two rooms with James Ball principal and Miss Emma Regedal for the primary class. A move in the right direction, the school being too large for one teacher.

Those who were acquainted with J. C. Wells, of Fon du Lac, Wis., one of the large land owners of Beltrami, regret to hear of his death. He was well spoken of by all who knew him, always having a kind greeting for every one.

Miss Nettie Gleason, of Crookston, closed her school term last week, about two and one-half miles west of town, and gave a fine treat to her pupils and friends having a Christmas tree with loads of pretty and useful presents.

The Christmas number of the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL was a suprise to us Beltramites and was eagerly sought after. It was one of the newest and best county papers ever sent to this town. All wish the JOURNAL a very Happy New Year and hope that many such editions will be published.

The Union Sunday school entertainment and Christmas tree was a grand success—a crowded house and hearty laugther by the audience. All seemed to enjoy the funny jokes and tricks of old Santa who made his appearance at 9:30. All went away well pleased and many a Merry Christmas was wished.

SOUTH CROOKSTON.

Christmas day was a very quiet day in the Fifth ward. A number of railroad men went to St. Paul to spend Christmas.

On Wednesday, Dec. 20, occurred the death of Mrs. T. C. Stewart, after a lingering illness of six months. Mrs. Stewart was a lady who was highly thought of by all. The neighbors all sympathize deeply with Mr. Stewart in his sorrow. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock on Friday last and there was a large turnout, showing she had a large number of friends in this vicinity.

Mr. Smith, proprietor of the Columbia Restaurant, got up an elegant Christmas dinner in which Mr. Phillips and family, Mrs. McLaren and family and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Myers participated. All had a royal good time. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are fine entertainers and a good meal can be had at any time at Smith's.

GLYNDON.

J. H. Reid spent Sunday and Monday in town visiting the Osborn's.

Miss Carpenter is spending Christmas holidays at her home in Cannon Falls.

Fred Tracy came up from Minneapolis Saturday morning to spend the holidays with his parents.

The usual Christmas services at the Lutheran church were held Wednesday forenoon Pastor Kildahl officiating.

Ernest Gans left last Friday morning for a visit of a couple of months or so with relatives in Buffalo, New York.

The famine in hale tics was relieved somewhat, Wednesday, Tracy & Co. receiving quite a number of bundles at that time.

Miss Francis Kitteidge, who has been staying with relatives in Massachusetts the past two years, returned home Saturday morning.

A party of young people were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Friday Monday evening. The time was pleasantly spent in playing games of various kinds.

Miss Fannie Anderson, formerly of this place but now occupying a position as teacher in the public schools at Riverdale Minn., is spending part of her Christmas vacation with friends in the village.

The local lodges of Woodmen and Brotherhood people have signed contracts with P. J. Shea for the use of rooms over store for lodge purposes. The building will be put in shape at once and is expected to be ready for occupancy about Jan. 1.

A large number of "lumber jacks" are leaving us this week for the pineries, most of them being employed by the Commonwealth Lumber Co. of Frazee, Minn. Among the number are Eugene Grant, Hale Minnford, F. A. Woodward, John H. Anderson, also the Cowan and E. F. Hutchinson from Stockwood.

At the meeting of Glyndon Lodge No. 406 M. B. A. held Tuesday evening the following named officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, J. B. Shanks: Vice-president W. S. Brophy: Clerk H. H. Potter; Treasurer R. B. Webb: Secretary Aleck Johnstone: Watchman P. J. Shea: Chaplain J. D. Buckingham: Conductor, F. L. McNaughton: Managers for one year, J. C. Pearson, E. F. Hutchinson, E. G. Grover: delegate to Supreme Lodge, J. D. Buckingham.

McINTOSH.

Alfred Hoel has obtained a position as clerk with the Rosholt-Berg Co.

Minnie Mattson came down from Maple Bay to spend the holidays at home.

Mrs. H. Charleston left last week for Colorado, where she will nurse her sick husband who went there last year for his health.

Noah Narveson has resigned from his position with Everett Southwick, and went Tuesday to Erskine where he will do collecting.

There is a rumor going the rounds that says a big delegation of our citizens intend making a trip to Norway on an excursion after New Years.

A. H. Smithers went to Crookston last week and returned last Tuesday. From here he goes to Lambert where he is collecting for Champeau & Swanson.

Readers of the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL here are very enthusiastic over its elegant Christmas edition and are wishing the JOURNAL all kinds of success. It deserves it.

Christmas in McIntosh was observed in the usual style. The Christmas tree at the Synod church drew more people than the large, new church could hold, and other Christmas trees were also very well attended.

The McIntosh Tribune has changed hands, the former editor, A. D. McRae, going to Sleepy Eye where he will hereafter edit a newspaper of that place. H. P. King, of McIntosh, will now take the editorial chair of the Tribune.

GRAND FORKS.

F. D. McClorg came in from Minot Monday night.

J. L. Pool, of Larimore, came in Monday evening.

J. N. Lanoyer, of Melrose, is a guest at the Decotah.

A. E. Cogger, of Bathgate, spent Monday night in the city.

City Clerk W. E. Black, of Fosston, spent Monday in the city.

Supt. Spoonbeim spent Christmas with the home folks at McCrea.

T. S. Edison, of Larimore, came in last evening on pleasure solely.

Maurice Kaufman, of Mayville, ate turkey at the Decotah Monday.

D. E. Sisson, of Fargo, was a business visitor Friday and Saturday.

G. W. Strawbridge, one of Crookston's merchants, spent Monday in the city, the guest of friends.

E. D. Litton, the Larimore druggist came in Monday and was wishing every one a "Merry Christmas."

E. C. Elwood held services at Minto Sunday during the absence of the Pastor Rev. S. Currie, of Euclid.

Francis N. Wiego, agent of the Avery Manufacturing Co., returned Monday from a business trip in Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tessler were the "Christmas" guests of Deputy Sheriff Losey and wife of Crookston, returning last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Allen, of Mandan, gave a party last Wednesday evening in honor of their friend, Miss Edna O'Keefe, of this city, who has been visiting there for the past three months. Miss O'Keefe returned to this city Saturday last.

The Bees Took Back Their Honey.

A correspondent writes from Hampshire to relate a curious incident in the bee world. A cottager took two large bars of honey and a square section from one of his hives. This honey he put into a large pan and covered it with a cloth, placing it in an up stairs room of his cottage. During the day the bees got scent of the honey through the open window, and the whole hive entered the room, crept under the cloth cover and took away all the honey in an incredibly short time and stored it in their hive again. The quantity was about ten pounds in weight.—London Echo.

S. L. Collins,

LIVERY AND FEED STABLES

Horses bought and sold on commission. Everything neat and nobby. Feeding a specialty.

Main and Fourth streets.

CROOKSTON — — MINNESOTA.

A Jewel

Yes that's just what N. K. Olson is, and he keeps all kinds of silver plated flat ware. Also all kinds of holiday ware, watches, jewelry, clocks, diamonds etc., etc. Give him a call.

N. K. OLSON.

120 Robert St. W.

Watch Bratrud

AND

He'll "WATCH" You

He has everything which a first class watchmaker and jeweler keeps in stock. Watches and clocks repaired and cleaned.

Low Prices and First Class Work

Repairing Guaranteed.

M. A. BRATRUD

Anderson & Olson Block.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING

The Household Magazine,

an authority on all topics connected with home-making and home keeping—articles embodying the best methods of preparing, cooking and serving food. Departments devoted to Mothers and Children, Education, The Flower Garden, Entertainments, etc.

Note the reduction in price—from $2.40 per year.

Sample copy on receipt of postal if you mention the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL.

A Family Magazine

Conducted in the interests of the Higher Life of the Household. Published Monthly by George D. Chamberlain, Springfield, Mass.

AGENTS WANTED.

M. MAGNUSSEN:::

New and Second Hand

Furniture

AND

Hardware

Everything you need to furnish a house... CROOKSTON, MINN

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE & ATLANTIC RY.

THE SHORTEST AND QUICKEST LINE BETWEEN THE GREAT NORTHWEST AND THE EAST.

SOUTH SHORE No. 25

DIRECT CONNECTIONS IN DULUTH AND WEST SUPERIOR UNION STATIONS WITH ALL TRAINS FROM THE WEST.

Aug. Miller & Co.,

Tanners. Fur Dressers and Hide Dealers.....

We make a specialty of Tanning Harness and Shoe Leather, Dressing Beef and Horse Hides for Coats and Robes, also Sheep Pelts and all kinds of Furs for Customers. First class work Guaranteed.

All kinds of Hides and Skins Purchased.

Crookston, Minn.

THOMPSON & BUSTERUD

Are headquarters for good Heaters for the coming cold weather. There is nothing that goes to make life worth living like having a cosy room in which to spend your winter evenings, and the way to have a cosy room is to have a good stove in it. We handle the "Radiant Home," "Cole's Airtight," "Monitor Parlor Base Burner," Etc. A full line Scandinavian specialties such as Goro Irons, Tosette Irons, etc.

ADAMS BLOCK, ROBERT STREET.

Crookston, Minnesota.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY

FINISH

CROOKSTON
POLK COUNTY

JOURNAL

JAN 5 THRU DEC 28 1899 1899

Title: (Crookston) POLK COUNTY JOURNAL

22:39 - 23:38

Inclusive Dates: Jan 5 1899 — Dec 28 1899

96-4 - 1978

Originals held by: MHS X Other ___

Prepared by: Lynn Trantow LT	Date: 4/10/1978	Format: 1A X 2B
Filmed by: J. Wiz J.T.W. JE.	Date: April 13, 78	Camera No. Yellow
Reduction Ratio: 13	Voltmeter 24 / 72	No. Expos. 446
Prelim. Inspection by:	Date:	Density:
Target Resolution: ____/mm	O.K. ____ Reject ___	Length: